6. ependutes (ἐπενδύτης, 1903) denotes “an upper garment” (epi, “upon,” enduo, “to clothe”). The word is found in John 21:7, where it apparently denotes a kind of linen frock, which fishermen wore when at their work. See No. 3.¶

7. esthes (ἑσθής, 2066), “clothing,” Acts 10:30; see APPAREL, No. 1.

8. stole (στολή, 4749), (Eng., “stole”), denotes any “stately robe,” a long garment reaching to the feet or with a train behind. It is used of the long clothing in which the scribes walked, making themselves conspicuous in the eyes of men, Mark 12:38; Luke 20:46; of the robe worn by the young man in the Lord’s tomb, Mark 16:5; of the best or, rather, the chief robe, which was brought out for the returned prodigal, Luke 15:22; five times in the Apocalypse, as to glorified saints, 6:11; 7:9, 13-14; 22:14.¶ In the Sept. it is used of the holy garments of the priests, e.g., Exod. 28:2; 29:21; 31:10.

Notes: (1) Peribolaion, from periballo, “to throw around,” lit., “that which is thrown around,” was a wrap or mantle. It is used in 1 Cor. 11:15, of the hair of a woman which is given to her as a veil; in Heb. 1:12, of the earth and the heavens, which the Lord will roll up “as a mantle,” RV, for KJV, “vesture.” The other word in that verse rendered “garment,” RV, is himation.¶

(2) Endusis, is “a putting on (of apparel),” 1 Pet. 3:3. Cf. No. 5.¶

(3) Esthesis. See APPAREL, No. 1.

(4) The chlamus was a short “cloak” or robe, worn over the chiton (No. 3), by emperors, kings, magistrates, military officers, etc. It is used of the scarlet robe with which Christ was arrayed in mockery by the soldiers in Pilate’s Judgment Hall, Matt. 27:28, 31.

What was known as purple was a somewhat indefinite color. There is nothing contradictory about its being described by Mark and John as “purple,” though Matthew speaks of it as “scarlet.” The soldiers put it on the Lord in mockery of His Kingship.¶

(5) The poderes was another sort of outer garment, reaching to the feet (from pous, “the foot,” and aro, “to fasten”). It was one of the garments of the high priests, a robe (Hebrew, chetoneth), mentioned after the ephod in Exod. 28:4, etc. It is used in Ezek. 9:2, where instead of “linen” the Sept. reads “a long robe”; and in Zech. 3:4, “clothe ye him with a long robe”; in the NT in Rev. 1:13, of the long garment in which the Lord is seen in vision amongst the seven golden lampstands. There, poderes is described as “a garment down to the feet,” indicative of His High Priestly character and acts.¶

CLOUD

1. nephos (νέφος, 3509) denotes “a cloudy, shapeless mass covering the heavens.” Hence, metaphorically, of “a dense multitude, a throng,” Heb. 12:1.¶

2. nephele (νεφέλη, 3507), “a definitely shaped cloud, or masses of clouds possessing definite form,” is used, besides the physical element, (a) of the “cloud” on the mount of transfiguration, Matt. 17:5; (b) of the “cloud” which covered Israel in the Red Sea, 1 Cor. 10:1-2; (c), of “clouds” seen in the Apocalyptic visions, Rev. 1:7; 10:1; 11:12; 14:14-16; (d) metaphorically in 2 Pet. 2:17, of the evil workers there mentioned; but RV, “and mists” (homichle), according to the most authentic mss.

In 1 Thess. 4:17, the “clouds” referred to in connection with the rapture of the saints are probably the natural ones, as also in the case of those in connection with Christ’s second advent to the earth. See Matt. 24:30; 26:64, and parallel passages. So at the Ascension, Acts 1:9.

CLOVEN

diamerizo (διαμερίζω, 1266), “to part asunder” (dia, “asunder,” meros, “a part”), is translated “cloven” in the KJV of Acts 2:3, RV, “parting asunder.” See DIVIDE, PART.

CLUSTER

botrus (βότρυς, 1009), “a cluster, or bunch, bunch of grapes,” is found in Rev. 14:18.¶

Note: Cf. staphule, “a bunch of grapes, the ripe cluster,” stressing the grapes themselves, Matt. 7:16; Luke 6:44; Rev. 14:18.¶

COALS

1. anthrax (ἄνθραξ, 440), “a burning coal” (cf. Eng., “anthracite,”) is used in the plural in Rom. 12:20, metaphorically in a proverbial expression, “thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head” (from Prov. 25:22), signifying retribution by kindness, i.e., that, by conferring a favor on your enemy, you recall the wrong he has done to you, so that he repents, with pain of heart.¶

2. anthrakia (ἀνθρακιά, 439), akin to No. 1, is “a heap of burning coals, or a charcoal fire,” John 18:18; 21:9.¶

COAST, COASTING

A. Noun.

horion (ὄριον, 3725), “a bound, boundary, limit, frontier” (akin to horizo, “to bound, limit”), is rendered “coasts” ten times in the KJV, but “borders” in Matt. 4:13, and is always translated “borders” in the RV. See BORDER.

B. Adjective.

paralios (παράλιος, 3882), “by the sea” (para, “by,” hals, “salt”), hence denotes “a sea coast,” Luke 6:17.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:13; Deut. 1:7; 33:19; Josh. 9:1; 11:3 (twice); Job 6:3; Isa. 9:1.

C. Verb.

paralego (παραλέγομαι, 3881) is used, in the middle voice, as a nautical term, “to sail past,” Acts 27:8, “coasting along”; v. 13, “sailed by.”¶

Notes: (1) Methorion (meta, “with,” and A), in Mark 7:24, is translated “borders.” (2) The phrase “upon the sea coast,” Matt. 4:13, KJV, translates parathalassios (para, “by,” thalassa, “the sea”), RV, “by the sea.”¶ (3) Meros, “a part,” is translated “coasts” in Matt. 15:21; 16:13, KJV (RV, “parts,”); “country,” RV, in Acts 19:1, KJV “coasts”; this refers to the high land in the interior of Asia Minor. See BEHALF, CRAFT, PART, PARTICULAR, PIECE, PORTION, RESPECT, SOMEWHAT, SORT. (4) Chora, “a country,” rendered “coasts” in Acts 26:20, KJV, is corrected in the RV to “country.” See COUNTRY, FIELD, GROUND, LAND, REGION. (5) In Acts 27:2 the phrase in the RV, “on the coast of,” translates the preposition kata, “along,” and the complete clause, “unto the places on the coast of Asia,” RV, is curiously condensed in the KJV to “by the coasts of Asia.”

For COAT (ependeutes) see CLOTHING

COCK, COCK-CROWING

1. alektor (ἀλέκτωρ, 220), “a cock,” perhaps connected with a Hebrew phrase for the oncoming of the light, is found in the passages concerning Peter’s denial of the Lord, Matt. 26:34, 74-75; Mark 14:30, 68, 72; Luke 22:34, 60-61; John 13:38; 18:27.¶

2. alektorophonia (ἀλεκτοροφωνία, 219) denotes “cock-crowing” (alektor, and phone, “a sound”), Mark 13:35. There were two “cockcrowings,” one after midnight, the other before dawn. In these watches the Jews followed the Roman method of dividing the night. The first “cock-crowing” was at the third watch of the night. That is the one mentioned in Mark 13:35. Mark mentions both; see 14:30. The latter, the second, is that referred to in the other Gospels and is mentioned especially as “the cock-crowing.”¶

COLD

psuchos (ψύχος, 5592), “coldness, cold,” appears in John 18:18; Acts 28:2; 2 Cor. 11:27.¶

B. Adjective.

psuchros (ψυχρός, 5593), “cool, fresh, cold, chilly” (fuller in expression than psuchos), is used in the natural sense in Matt. 10:42, “cold water”; metaphorically in Rev. 3:15-16.¶

psucho (ψύχω, 5594), “to breathe, blow, cool by blowing,” passive voice, “grow cool,” is used metaphorically in Matt. 24:12, in the sense of waning zeal or love.¶

COLLECTION

logia (λογία, 3048), akin to lego, “to collect,” is used in 1 Cor. 16:1, 2; in the latter verse, KJV “gatherings,” RV, “collections,” as in v. 1. See GATHERING.¶

COLONY

kolonia (κολωνία, 2862) transliterates the Latin colonia. Roman colonies belonged to three periods and classes, (a) those of the earlier republic before 100 B.C., which were simply centers of Roman influence in conquered territory; (b) agrarian “colonies,” planted as places for the overflowing population of Rome; (c) military “colonies” during the time of the Civil wars and the Empire, for the settlement of disbanded soldiers. This third class was established by the imperator, who appointed a legate to exercise his authority. To this class Philippi belonged as mentioned in Acts 16:12, RV, “a Roman colony.” They were watch towers of the Roman state and formed on the model of Rome itself. The full organization of Philippi as such was the work of Augustus, who, after the battle of Actium, 31 B.C., gave his soldiers lands in Italy and transferred most of the inhabitants there to other quarters including Philippi. These communities possessed the right of Roman freedom, and of holding the soil under Roman law, as well as exemption from poll-tax and tribute. Most Roman “colonies” were established on the coast.¶

COLT

polos (πῶλος, 4454), “a foal,” whether “colt or filly,” had the general significance of “a young creature”; in Matt. 21:2, and parallel passages, “an ass’s colt.”

COME, CAME (see also COMING)

1. erchomai (ἔρχομαι, 2064), the most frequent verb, denoting either “to come, or to go,” signifies the act, in contrast with heko (see No. 22, below), which stresses the arrival, as, e.g., “I am come and am here,” John 8:42 and Heb. 10:9. See BRING, B, Note (1), FALL, GO, GROW, LIGHT, PASS, RESORT.

Compounds of this with prepositions are as follows (2 to 11):

2. eiserchomai (εἰσέρχομαι, 1525), “to come into, or to go into” (eis, “into”), e.g., Luke 17:7. See ENTER.

3. exerchomai (ἐξέρχομαι, 1831), “to come out, or go out or forth” (ek, “out”), e.g., Matt. 2:6. See DEPART, ESCAPE, GET, (b), No. 3, GO, Note (1), PROCEED, SPREAD.

4. epanerchomai (ἐπανέρχομαι, 1880), “to come back again, return” (epi, “on,” ana, “again”), Luke 10:35; 19:15.¶

5. dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), “to come or go through” (dia, “through”), e.g., Acts 9:38. See DEPART, GO, PASS, PIERCE, TRAVEL, WALK.

6. eperchomai (ἐπέρχομαι, 1904), “to come or go upon” (epi, “upon”), e.g., Luke 1:35; in Luke 21:26, used of “coming” events, suggesting their certainty; in Eph. 2:7, said of the “oncoming” of the ages; in Acts 14:19, of Jews coming to (lit., “upon”) a place.

7. katerchomai (κατέρχομαι, 2718), “to come down” (kata, “down”), e.g., Luke 9:37. See DEPART, DESCEND, GO, Note (1), LAND.

8. pareiserchomai (παρεισέρχομαι, 3922), lit., “to come in” (eis) “beside or from the side” (para) so as to be present with, is used (a) in the literal sense, of the “coming” in of the Law in addition to sin, Rom. 5:20; (b) in Gal. 2:4, of false brethren, suggesting their “coming” in by stealth. See ENTER.¶

9. parerchomai (παρέρχομαι, 3928), para, “by or away”), signifies (a) “to come or go forth, or arrive,” e.g., Luke 12:37; 17:7 (last part); Acts 24:7; (b) “to pass by,” e.g., Luke 18:37; (c) “to neglect,” e.g., Luke 11:42. See GO, PASS, TRANSGRESS.

10. proserchomai (προσέρχομαι, 4334) denotes “to come or go near to” (pros, “near to”), e.g., Matt. 4:3; Heb. 10:1, KJV, “comers,” RV, them that draw nigh. See CONSENT, DRAW, GO, Note (1).

11. sunerchomai (συνέρχομαι, 4905), “to come together” (sun “with”), e.g., John 18:20, is often translated by the verb “to assemble”; see the RV of 1 Cor. 11:20; 14:23. See ACCOMPANY, ASSEMBLE, COMPANY, GO WITH, RESORT.

Note: Aperchomai, “to come away or from,” is differently translated in the RV; see, e.g., Mark 3:13 where it signifies that they went from the company or place where they were to Him; it usually denotes “to go away.”

12. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” signifies a change of condition, state or place, e.g., Mark 4:35. In Acts 27:33, the verb is used with mello, “to be about to,” to signify the coming on of day.

13. paraginomai (παράγίνομαι, 3854), para, “near or by,” denotes to “arrive, to be present,” e.g., Matt. 2:1. See GO, PRESENT.

14. sumparaginomai (συνπαράγίνομαι, 4836), (sun, “with,” para, “near”), “to come together,” is used in Luke 23:48; 2 Tim. 4:16, lit., “stood at my side with me.” See STAND.¶

Compounds of the verb baino, “to go,” are as follows (15 to 21):

15. anabaino (ἀναβαίνω, 305), “to come upon, to arrive in a place” (ana, “up or upon”), is translated “come into” in Acts 25:1. See ARISE, ASCEND, ENTER, GO, CLIMB, GROW, RISE, SPRING.

16. epibaino (ἐπιβαίνω, 1910), “to come to or into, or go upon,” is rendered, in Acts 20:18, RV, set foot in. See ENTER, GO, TAKE, Note (16).

17. ekbaino (ἐκατοντάρχης, 1543a), “to come or go out,” appears in the best mss. in Heb. 11:15; KJV, “came out,” RV, “went out.”¶

18. diabaino (διαβαίνω, 1224), “to pass through,” is translated “come over” in Acts 16:9; “pass” in Luke 16:26; “pass through” in Heb. 11:29. See PASS.¶

19. katabaino (καταβαίνω, 2597) signifies “to come down,” e.g., Matt. 8:1. See DESCEND, FALL, GET, GO, STEP (down).

20. sunanabaino (συναναβαίνω, 4872), “to come up with” (sun, “with,” ana, “up”), is used in Mark 15:41; Acts 13:31.¶

21. embaino (ἐμβαίνω, 1684), “to go into,” is rendered, in Mark 5:18, KJV, “was come into, RV, was entering. See ENTER, GET, GO, STEP.

Note: Apobaino, “to go away,” is rendered, in the KJV of John 21:9, “were come to”; RV, “got out upon.”

22. heko (ἦκω, 2240) means (a) “to come, to be present” (see above, on No. 1); (b) “to come upon, of time and events,” Matt. 24:14; John 2:4; 2 Pet. 3:10; Rev. 18:8; (c) metaphorically, “to come upon one, of calamitous times, and evils,” Matt. 23:36; Luke 19:43.

23. aphikneomai (ἀφικνέομαι, 864), “to arrive at a place,” is used in Rom. 16:19, “come abroad” (of the obedience of the saints).¶

24. choreo (χωρέω, 5562), lit., “to make room (chora, “a place”) for another, and so to have place, receive,” is rendered “come” (followed by “to repentance”) in 2 Pet. 3:9; the meaning strictly is “have room (i.e., space of time) for repentance.” See CONTAIN, GO, PLACE, ROOM, RECEIVE.

25. eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” is, in the infinitive mood, rendered “come,” in John 1:46 and in the future indicative “will come,” in 2 Tim. 4:3.

26. enistemi (ἐνίστημι, 1764), lit., “to stand in, or set in” (en, “in,” histemi, “to stand”), hence “to be present or to be imminent,” is rendered “shall come” in 2 Tim. 3:1; it here expresses permanence, “shall settle in (upon you). See AT HAND, PRESENT.

27. ephistemi (ἐφίστημι, 2186) signifies “to stand by or over” (epi, “upon”), Luke 2:9, RV; Acts 12:7 “before,” Acts 11:11; to come upon, Luke 20:1 (here with the idea of suddenness); Acts 4:1; 6:12; 23:27; 1 Thess. 5:3; “coming up,” of the arrival of Anna at the Temple, Luke 2:38; “came up to (Him),” of Martha, Luke 10:40; “is come,” 2 Tim. 4:6 (probably with the same idea as in Luke 20:1). The RV is significant in all these places. See ASSAULT, AT HAND, PRESENT, STAND.

28. katantao (καταντάω, 2658) denotes (a) “to come to, or over against, a place, arrive,” Acts 16:1; 18:19, 24; 20:15 (in 21:7 and 25:13, RV, “arrived”; in 27:12, “reach,” for KJV, “attain to”); 28:13; (b) of things or events, “to arrive at a certain time, or come upon certain persons in the period of their lifetime,” 1 Cor. 10:11; or “to come to persons” so that they partake of, as of the gospel, 1 Cor. 14:36. For the remaining instances, Acts 26:7; Eph. 4:13; Phil. 3:11, see ATTAIN.¶

29. mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about (to do something),” often implying the necessity and therefore the certainty of what is to take place, is frequently rendered “to come,” e.g., Matt. 3:7; 11:14; Eph. 1:21; 1 Tim. 4:8; 6:19; Heb. 2:5. See ALMOST, BEGIN, MEAN, MIND, SHALL, TARRY, WILL.

30. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936), “to stand by or near, to be at hand” (para, “near”), is translated “is come,” of the arrival of harvest, Mark 4:29. See BRING, COMMEND, GIVE, PRESENT, PROVE, PROVIDE, SHOW, STAND, YIELD.

31. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear, carry,” is rendered “came,” in the sense of being borne from a place, in 2 Pet. 1:17-18, 21. See BEAR, CARRY.

32. phthano (φθάνω, 5348) denotes “to anticipate, to come sooner than expected,” 1 Thess. 2:16, “is come upon,” of divine wrath; cf. Rom. 9:31, “did not arrive at”; or to “come” in a different manner from what was expected, Matt. 12:28, “come upon”; Luke 11:20, of the kingdom of God; so of coming to a place, 2 Cor. 10:14. See ATTAIN, PRECEDE, PREVENT.¶

Two of the compounds of the verb poreuomai □to go, proceed, are translated come, with a preposition or adverb:

33. ekporeuo (ἐκπορεύομαι, 1607), in the middle voice, “to come forth” (ek, “out of”), Mark 7:15, 20; John 5:29. See DEPART, GO, ISSUE, PROCEED.

34. prosporeuomai (προσπορεύομαι, 4365), in Mark 10:35, is translated “come near unto.”¶

Notes: (1) No. 33 is rendered “proceed” in the RV of Mark 7:15, 20, 23 (KJV, “come”). (2) For epiporeuomai, in Luke 8:4, see RESORT.¶

35. prosengizo (προσεγγίζω, 4331) denotes “to come near” (pros, “to,” engizo, “to be near, to approach”), Mark 2:4, used of those who tried to bring a palsied man to Christ.¶

36. sumpleroo (συνπληρόω, 4845), “to fill completely” (sun, “with,” intensive), is used, in the passive voice, of time to be fulfilled or completed, Luke 9:51, “the days were well-nigh come”; Acts 2:1, “the day ... was now come” (KJV “was fully come”). In Luke 8:23, it is used in the active voice, of the filling of a boat in a storm. See FILL.¶

37. suntunchano (συντυγχάνω, 4940), “to meet with” (sun, “with,” and tunchano, “to reach”), is rendered “to come at” in Luke 8:19, (of the efforts of Christ’s mother and brethren to get at Him through a crowd).¶

38. kukloo (κυκλόω, 2944), “to compass” (Eng., “cycle”), is translated “came round about,” in John 10:24. See COMPASS, ROUND, STAND.

39. hustereo (ὑστερέω, 5302), “to be behind,” is translated “to have come short,” in Heb. 4:1. See BEHIND, B, No. 1.

Notes: (1) Deuro, “hither, here,” is used (sometimes with verbs of motion) in the singular number, in calling a person to come, Matt. 19:21; Mark 10:21; Luke 18:22; John 11:43; Acts 7:3, 34; Rev. 17:1; 21:9. For its other meaning, “hitherto,” Rom. 1:13, see HITHERTO.¶ It has a plural, deute, frequent in the gospels; elsewhere in Rev. 19:17. In the following the RV has a different rendering: (2) In Mark 14:8, prolambano, “to anticipate, to be beforehand,” KJV, “hath come aforehand to anoint My body,” RV, “hath anointed My body aforehand.” (3) In Acts 7:45, diadechomai, “to succeed one, to take the place of,” KJV, “who came after,” RV, “in their turn.”¶ (4) In Luke 8:55, epistrepho, “to return to,” KJV, “came again,” RV, “returned.” (5) In Acts 24:27, lambano, with diadochos, “a successor,” KJV, “came into the room of,” RV, “was succeeded by.” (6) In Mark 9:23, for episuntrecho, “to come running together,” see under RUN.¶ (7) In Acts 5:38, kataluo, “to destroy,” KJV, “will come to nought,” RV, “will be overthrown.” (8) In John 12:35, katalambano, “to seize,” KJV, “come upon,” RV, “overtake.” (9) In 2 Cor. 11:28, epistasis (in some mss. episustasis), lit., “a standing together upon,” hence, “a pressing upon,” as of cares, KJV, “cometh upon,” RV, “presseth upon.” (10) In Acts 19:27, erchomai, “with” eis apelegmon, RV, “come into disrepute,” KJV, “be set at nought.” (11), For pareimi, John 7:6, see PRESENT, No. 1. (12), Sunago, “to gather together,” is always so rendered in RV, e.g., Matt. 27:62; Mark 7:1; Luke 22:66; Acts 13:44; 15:6; 20:7. See GATHER, No. 1. (13), For come to nought see NOUGHT. (14), For eisporeuomai see ENTER, No. 4. (15), For “was come again,” Acts 22:17, KJV, see RETURN, No. 4. (16), For engizol, to come near, see APPROACH, NIGH.

For COME BEHIND see BEHIND

COMELINESS, COMELY

A. Noun.

euschemosune (εὐσχημοσύνη, 2157), “elegance of figure, gracefulness, comeliness” (eu, “well,” schema, “a form”), is found in this sense in 1 Cor. 12:23.

B. Adjective.

euschemon (εὐσχήμων, 2158), akin to A, “elegant in figure, well formed, graceful,” is used in 1 Cor. 12:24, of parts of the body (see above); in 1 Cor. 7:35 RV, “(that which is) seemly,” KJV, “comely”; “honourable,” Mark 15:43; Acts 13:50; 17:12. See HONORABLE.¶

COMFORT, COMFORTER, COMFORTLESS

A. Nouns.

1. paraklesis (παράκλησις, 3874), means “a calling to one’s side” (para, “beside,” kaleo, “to call”); hence, either “an exhortation, or consolation, comfort,” e.g., Luke 2:25 (here “looking for the consolation of Israel” is equivalent to waiting for the coming of the Messiah); 6:24; Acts 9:31; Rom. 15:4-5; 1 Cor. 14:3, “exhortation”; 2 Cor. 1:3, 4-7; 7:4, 7, 13; 2 Thess. 2:16; Philem. 7. In 2 Thess. 2:16 it combines encouragement with alleviation of grief. The RV changes “consolation” into “comfort,” except in Luke 2:25; 6:24; Acts 15:31; in Heb. 6:18, “encouragement”; in Acts 4:36, “exhortation.” RV (KJV, consolation”). See CONSOLATION, ENCOURAGEMENT, EXHORTATION, INTREATY.

2. paramuthia (παραμυθία, 3889), primarily “a speaking closely to anyone” (para, “near,” muthos, “speech”), hence denotes “consolation, comfort,” with a greater degree of tenderness than No. 1, 1 Cor. 14:3.¶

3. paramuthion (παραμύθιον, 3890) has the same meaning as No. 2, the difference being that paramuthia stresses the process or progress of the act, paramuthion the instrument as used by the agent, Phil. 2:1.¶

4. paregoria (παρηγορία, 3931), primarily “an addressing, address,” hence denotes “a soothing, solace,” Col. 4:11.¶ A verbal form of the word signifies medicines which allay irritation (Eng., “paregoric”).

5. parakletos (παράκλητος, 3875), lit., “called to one’s side,” i.e., to one’s aid, is primarily a verbal adjective, and suggests the capability or adaptability for giving aid. It was used in a court of justice to denote a legal assistant, counsel for the defense, an advocate; then, generally, one who pleads another’s cause, an intercessor, advocate, as in 1 John 2:1, of the Lord Jesus. In the widest sense, it signifies a “succorer, comforter.” Christ was this to His disciples, by the implication of His word “another (allos, “another of the same sort,” not heteros, “different”) Comforter,” when speaking of the Holy Spirit, John 14:16. In 14:26; 15:26; 16:7 He calls Him “the Comforter.”¶ “Comforter” or “Consoler” corresponds to the name “Menahem,” given by the Hebrews to the Messiah.

B. Verbs.

1. parakaleo (παρακαλέω, 3870) has the same variety of meanings as Noun, No. 1, above, e.g., Matt. 2:18; 1 Thess. 3:2, 7; 4:18. In 2 Cor. 13:11, it signifies “to be comforted” (so the RV). See BESEECH.

2. sumparakaleo (συνπαρακαλέω, 4837), sun, “with,” and No. 1, signifies “to comfort together,” Rom. 1:12.¶

3. paramutheomai (παραμυθέομαι, 3888), akin to Noun No. 2, “to soothe, console, encourage,” is translated, in John 11:31, “comforted,” in v. 19, RV, “console.” In 1 Thess. 2:11 and 5:14, RV, “encourage,” as the sense there is that of stimulating to the earnest discharge of duties. See CONSOLE, ENCOURAGE.¶

4. eupsucho (εὐψυχέω, 2174) signifies “to be of good comfort” (eu, “well,” psuche, “the soul”), Phil. 2:19.¶

COMING (Noun)

1. eisodos (εἴσοδος, 1529), “an entrance” (eis, “in,” hodos, “a way”), “an entering in,” is once translated “coming,” Acts 13:24, of the coming of Christ into the nation of Israel. For its meaning “entrance” see 1 Thess. 1:9; 2:1; Heb. 10:19; 2 Pet. 1:11. See ENTER, ENTRANCE.¶

2. eleusis (ἐλευσις, 1660), “a coming” (from erchomai, “to come”), is found in Acts 7:52.¶

3. parousia (παρουσία, 3952), lit., “a presence,” para, “with,” and ousia, “being” (from eimi, “to be”), denotes both an “arrival” and a consequent “presence with.” For instance, in a papyrus letter a lady speaks of the necessity of her parousia in a place in order to attend to matters relating to her property there. Paul speaks of his parousia in Philippi, Phil. 2:12 (in contrast to his apousia, “his absence”; see ABSENCE). Other words denote “the arrival” (see eisodos and eleusis, above). Parousia is used to describe the presence of Christ with His disciples on the Mount of Transfiguration, 2 Pet. 1:16. When used of the return of Christ, at the rapture of the church, it signifies, not merely His momentary “coming” for His saints, but His presence with them from that moment until His revelation and manifestation to the world. In some passages the word gives prominence to the beginning of that period, the course of the period being implied, 1 Cor. 15:23; 1 Thess. 4:15; 5:23; 2 Thess. 2:1; Jas. 5:7-8; 2 Pet. 3:4. In some, the course is prominent, Matt. 24:3, 37; 1 Thess. 3:13; 1 John 2:28; in others the conclusion of the period, Matt. 24:27; 2 Thess. 2:8.

The word is also used of the Lawless One, the Man of Sin, his access to power and his doings in the world during his parousia, 2 Thess. 2:9. In addition to Phil. 2:12 (above), it is used in the same way of the apostle, or his companions, in 1 Cor. 16:17; 2 Cor. 7:6-7; 10:10; Phil. 1:26; of the Day of God, 2 Pet. 3:12. See PRESENCE.

Note: The word apokalupsis, rendered “coming” in 1 Cor. 1:7, KJV, denotes a “revelation” (RV). For a fuller treatment of Parousia, see Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 87-88.

COMMAND (Verbs)

1. diatasso (διατάσσω, 1299) signifies “to set in order, appoint, command,” Matt. 11:1; Luke 8:55; 17:9-10; Acts 18:2; 23:31; “gave order,” 1 Cor. 16:1, RV. So in Acts 24:23, where it is in the middle voice. See APPOINT, No. 6.

2. epo (ἐπω, 2036) denotes “to speak” (connected with eipon, “to say”); hence, among various renderings, “to bid, command,” Matt. 4:3; Mark 5:43; 8:7; Luke 4:3; 19:15. See BID.

Note: In 2 Cor. 4:6, the RV rightly has “said,” followed by the quotation “Light shall shine out of darkness.”

3. entello (ἐντέλλομαι, 1781) signifies “to enjoin upon, to charge with”; it is used in the Middle Voice in the sense of commanding, Matt. 19:7; 28:20; Mark 10:3; 13:34; John 8:5; 15:14, 17; Acts 13:47; Heb. 9:20; 11:22, “gave commandment.” See CHARGE, ENJOIN.

4. epitasso (ἐπιτάσσω, 2004) signifies to appoint over, put in charge (epi, “over,” tasso, “to appoint”); then, “to put upon one as a duty, to enjoin,” Mark 1:27; 6:27, 39; 9:25; Luke 4:36; 8:25, 31; 14:22; Acts 23:2; Philem. 8. See CHARGE, ENJOIN.¶

5. keleuo (κελεύω, 2753), “to urge, incite, order,” suggests a stronger injunction than No. 6, Matt. 14:9, 19; 15:35; 18:25; 27:58, 64; Luke 18:40; Acts 4:15 (frequently in Acts, not subsequently in the NT). See BID.

6. parangello (παράγγελλω, 3853), “to announce beside” (para, “beside,” angello, “to announce”), “to pass on an announcement,” hence denotes “to give the word, order, give a charge, command”, e.g., Mark 6:8; Luke 8:29; 9:21; Acts 5:28; 2 Thess. 3:4, 6, 10, 12. See CHARGE, B, No. 8.

7. prostasso (προστάσσω, 4367) denotes “to arrange or set in order towards” (pros, “towards,” tasso, “to arrange”); hence “to prescribe, give command,” Matt. 1:24; 8:4; Mark 1:44; Luke 5:14; Acts 10:33, 48. For Matt. 21:6 see Note (3) below. See BID.¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 9:4, rheo, “to speak,” is translated “said” in the RV (KJV, “commanded”). (2) in Heb. 12:20 diastellomai, “to charge, enjoin” (so in the RV), is rendered “commanded” in the KJV. (3) in Matt. 21:6, the RV, translating suntasso, as in the best mss., has “appointed,” KJV, “commanded.”

COMMANDMENT

1. diatagma (διάταγμα, 1297) signifies “that which is imposed by decree or law,” Heb. 11:23. It stresses the concrete character of the “commandment” more than epitage (No. 4). Cf. COMMAND, No. 1. For the verb in v. 22 see No. 3 under COMMAND.¶

2. entole (ἐντολή, 1785), akin to No. 3, above, denotes, in general, “an injunction, charge, precept, commandment.” It is the most frequent term, and is used of moral and religious precepts, e.g., Matt. 5:19; it is frequent in the Gospels, especially that of John, and in his Epistles. See also, e.g., Acts 17:15; Rom. 7:8-13; 13:9; 1 Cor. 7:19; Eph. 2:15; Col. 4:10. See PRECEPT.

3. entalma (ἐνταλμα, 1778), akin to No. 2, marks more especially “the thing commanded, a commission”; in Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7; Col. 2:22, RV, “precepts,” KJV, “commandments.” See PRECEPT.¶

4. epitage (ἐπιταγή, 2003), akin to No. 4, above, stresses “the authoritativeness of the command”; it is used in Rom. 16:26; 1 Cor. 7:6, 25; 2 Cor. 8:8; 1 Tim. 1:1; Tit. 1:3; 2:15. See AUTHORITY.¶

COMMEND, COMMENDATION

A. Verbs.

1. epaineo (ἐπαινέω, 1867), “to praise,” is an intensive form of aineo, Luke 16:8. It is elsewhere translated by the verb “to praise,” in the RV, Rom. 15:11; 1 Cor. 11:2, 17, 22. See LAUD, PRAISE.¶

2. paradidomi (παράδίδωμι, 3860), lit., to give or deliver over” (para, “over” didomi, “to give”), is said of “commending,” or “committing,” servants of God to Him (KJV, “recommend), Acts 14:26; 15:40. See BETRAY, BRING, B, Note (4), CAST, COMMIT, DELIVER, GIVE, HAZARD, PUT (in prison), RECOMMEND.

3. paratithemi (παρατίθημι, 3908), lit., “to put near” (para, “near”), in the Middle Voice, denotes “to place with someone, entrust, commit.” In the sense of commending, it is said (a) of the Lord Jesus in “commending” His spirit into the Father’s hands, Luke 23:46; (b) of “commending” disciples to God, Acts 14:23; (c) of “commending” elders to God, Acts 20:32. See ALLEGE, COMMIT, PUT, No. 3, SET, No. 4. Cf. No.2.

4. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936), lit., “to place near, set before,” (para, “near,” histemi, “to set”), is used of “self-commendation,” 1 Cor. 8:8. See ASSIST, BRING, COME, GIVE, PRESENT, PROVE, PROVIDE, SHOW, STAND, YIELD.

5. sunistemi (συνιστάω, 4921), or sunistano (συνιστάω, 4921), lit., “to place together,” denotes “to introduce one person to another, represent as worthy,” e.g., Rom. 3:5; 5:8; 16:1; 2 Cor. 4:2; 6:4; 10:18; 12:11. In 2 Cor. 3:1; 5:12 and 10:12, the verb sunistano is used. See APPROVE, CONSIST, MAKE, STAND.

B. Adjective.

sustatikos (συστατικός, 4956), akin to A, No. 5, lit., “placing together,” hence, “commendatory,” is used of letters of “commendation,” 2 Cor. 3:1, lit., “commendatory letters.”¶

COMMIT, COMMISSION

A. Verbs.

(I) In the sense of “doing or practicing.”

1. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038), to work, is translated by the verb “to commit” (of committing sin), in Jas. 2:9. This is a stronger expression than poieo, “to do,” or prasso, “to practice” (Nos. 2 and 3). See DO, LABOR, MINISTER, TRADE, WORK.

2. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do, cause, etc.,” sometimes signifies “to commit, of any act, as of murder,” Mark 15:7; sin, John 8:34; 2 Cor. 11:7; Jas. 5:15. See DO.

Note: In 1 John 3:4, 8, 9, the KJV wrongly has “commit” (an impossible meaning in v. 8); the RV rightly has “doeth,” i.e., of a continuous habit, equivalent to prasso, “to practice.” The committal of an act is not in view in that passage.

3. prasso (πράσσω, 4238), “to do, work, practice,” is said of continuous action, or action not yet completed, Acts 25:11, 25; it is rendered “practice” in the RV, for the incorrect KJV “commit,” in Rom. 1:32; 2:2. See DO EXACT, KEEP, REQUIRE, USE.

(II) In the sense of delivering or entrusting something to a person.

1. paradidomi (παράδιδωμι, 3860), “to give over,” is often rendered by the verb “to commit,” e.g., to prison, Acts 8:3; to the grace of God, Acts 14:26; to God, 1 Pet. 2:23; by God to pits of darkness, 2 Pet. 2:4. See COMMEND, No. 2.

2. pisteuo (πιστεύω, 4100) signifies “to entrust, commit to,” Luke 16:11; 1 Tim. 1:11, “committed to (my) trust.” See BELIEVE.

3. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put, place,” signifies, in the middle voice, “to put for oneself, assign, place in,” 2 Cor. 5:19, “having committed (unto us).”

4. paratithemi (παράτιθημι, 3908), see COMMEND, No. 3, signifies “to entrust, commit to one’s charge,” e.g., in Luke 12:48; 1 Tim. 1:18; 2 Tim. 2:2; 1 Pet. 4:19 (KJV, “commit the keeping”).

Notes: (1) Didomi, “to give,” is rendered “committed” in the KJV of John 5:22 (RV, “given”). (2) For porneuo (“to commit fornication”) see FORNICATION. (3) In Rom. 2:22, hierosuleo, “to rob temples,” is so rendered in the RV, for KJV, “commit sacrilege.” (4) In Acts 27:40, eao, “to let, leave,” is rendered in the RV, “left (the anchors) in,” for KJV, “committed themselves to.”

B. Nouns.

1. paratheke (παράθήκη, 3866), “a putting with, a deposit” (para, “with,” tithemi, “to put”), and its longer form, parakatatheke, are found, the former in 2 Tim. 1:12, “that which He hath committed unto me,” RV, marg., lit., “my deposit” (perhaps, “my deposit with Him”), the latter in 1 Tim. 6:20, where “guard that which is committed unto thee” is, lit., “guard the deposit,” and 2 Tim. 1:14, “that good thing which was committed unto thee,” i.e., the good deposit; RV, marg., “the good deposit.”¶

2. epitrope (ἐπιτροπή, 2011) denotes “a turning over (to another), a referring of a thing to another” (epi “over,” trepo, “to turn”), and so a committal of full powers, “a commission,” Acts 26:12.¶

aneuthetos (ἀνεύθετος, 428), “not commodious,” lit., “not-well-placed” (from a, “not,” n, euphonic, eu, “well,” thetos, “from” tithemi “to put, place”), is found in Acts 27:12, where it is said of the haven at the place called Fair Havens.¶

COMMON, COMMONLY

koinos (Κνίδος, 2834) denotes (a) “common, belonging to several” (Lat., communis), said of things had in common, Acts 2:44; 4:32; of faith, Titus 1:4; of salvation, Jude 3; it stands in contrast to idios, “one’s own”; (b) “ordinary, belonging to the generality, as distinct from what is peculiar to the few,” hence the application to religious practices of Gentiles in contrast with those of Jews; or of the ordinary people in contrast with those of the Pharisees; hence the meaning “unhallowed, profane,” Levitically unclean (Lat., profanus), said of hands, Mark 7:2 (KJV, “defiled,”) RV marg., “common”; of animals, ceremonially unclean, Acts 10:14; 11:8; of a man, 10:28; of meats, Rom. 14:14,

“unclean”; of the blood of the covenant, as viewed by an apostate, Heb. 10:29, “unholy” (RV, marg., “common”); of everything unfit for the holy city, Rev. 21:27, RV, “unclean” (marg., “common”). Some mss. have the verb here. See DEFILED, UNCLEAN UNHOLY.¶

koinoo (κοινῶω, 2840), “to make, or count, common,” has this meaning in Acts 10:15; 11:9. See DEFILE, POLLUTE, UNCLEAN.

Notes: (1) Polus, used of number, signifies “many, numerous”; used of space, it signifies “wide, far reaching”; hence, with the article it is said of a multitude as being numerous; it is translated “common” (people) in Mark 12:37 (see the RV, marg.). It does not, however, mean the ordinary folk, but the many folk. See ABUNDANT, GREAT, LONG, MANY, MUCH, PLENTY.

(2) Ochlos denotes “a crowd, a great multitude”; with the article it is translated “the common people,” in John 12:9, 12 (RV, marg.). See COMPANY, CROWD, MULTITUDE, NUMBER, PEOPLE, PRESS.

(3) Tunchano, “to happen,” is used as an adjective in Acts 28:2, of the kindness shown by the people of Melita to the shipwrecked company; KJV, “(no) little”; RV, “(no) common”; the idea suggested by the verb is that which might happen anywhere or at all times; hence, “little, ordinary, or casual.” See CHANCE, ENJOY, OBTAIN.

(4) In Matt. 27:27, what the KJV describes as “the common hall,” is the praetorium, RV, “palace,” the official residence of the Governor of a Province (marg., “praetorium”).

(5) In Acts 5:18, demosios (KJV, “common,” with reference to the prison) signifies “public,” belonging to the people, demos, (RV, “public”).

(6) In 1 Cor. 5:1, holos, “altogether” (KJV, “commonly”) means “actually” (RV).

(7) In Matt. 28:15, diaphemizo, “to spread abroad” (as in the RV), is rendered in the KJV, “is commonly reported. See SPREAD, Note (5).

COMMONWEALTH

1. politeia (πολιτεία, 4174): see CITIZENSHIP, No. 3.

2. politeuma (πολίτευμα, 4175): see CITIZENSHIP, No. 4.

COMMUNE

1. dialaleo (διαλαλέω, 1255) signifies “to speak with anyone” (dia, “by turns,” laleo, “to speak”), Luke 6:11; in 1:65, “to talk over, to noise abroad.” The idea that laleo and its compounds bear no reference to the word spoken or the sentiment, is unfounded. See NOISE.¶

2. homileo (ὁμιλέω, 3656), from homos, “together,” signifies “to be in company, to associate with any one”; hence, “to have intercourse with,” Luke 24:14 (RV, “communed”; KJV, “talked”), 15; Acts 24:26; in 20:11, “talked with. See TALK.¶

3. sullaleo (συλλαλέω, 4814), “to talk together,” is translated “communed” in Luke 22:4, of the conspiracy of Judas with the chief priests. See CONFER, SPEAK, TALK.

Note: Laleo and its compounds, and the noun lalia, “speech,” have a more dignified meaning in the Hellenistic Greek than “to chatter,” its frequent meaning in earlier times.

COMMUNICATE, COMMUNICATION

A. Verbs.

1. koinoneo (κοινωνέω, 2841) is used in two senses, (a) “to have a share in,” Rom. 15:27; 1 Tim. 5:22; Heb. 2:14; 1 Pet. 4:13; 2 John 11; (b) “to give a share to, go shares with,” Rom. 12:13, RV, “communicating,” for KJV, “distributing”; Gal. 6:6, “communicate”; Phil. 4:15, KJV, “did communicate,” RV, “had fellowship with.” See DISTRIBUTE, FELLOWSHIP, PARTAKE.¶

2. sunkoinoneo (συγκοινωνέω, 4790), “to share together with” (sun “and” No. 1), is translated “communicated with” in Phil. 4:14; “have fellowship with,” Eph. 5:11; “be ... partakers of,” Rev. 18:4 (RV, “have fellowship”). The thought is that of sharing with others what one has, in order to meet their needs. See FELLOWSHIP, B, No. 2, PARTAKE, B, No. 2.¶

Note: Anatithemi, “to set forth,” is rendered “laid before” in Gal. 2:2, RV, for KJV, “communicated unto”; in Acts 25:14, RV, “laid before,” for KJV, “declared.”¶

B. Nouns.

1. koinonia (κοινωνία, 2842), akin to A (which see), is translated in Heb. 13:16 “to communicate,” lit., “be not forgetful of good deed and of fellowship”; “fellowship” (KJV, “communication”) in Philem. 6, RV. See COMMUNION.

2. logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word, that which is spoken” (lego, “to speak”), is used in the plural with reference to a conversation; “communication,” Luke 24:17. Elsewhere with this significance the RV renders it “speech,” Matt. 5:37; Eph. 4:29. See ACCOUNT.

Note: In Col. 3:8, where the KJV translates aischrologia by “filthy communication,” the RV renders it “shameful speaking” (aischros, “base,” lego, “to speak”).

C. Adjective.

koinonikos (κοινωνικός, 2843), akin to A, No. 1 and B, No. 1, means “apt, or ready, to communicate,” 1 Tim. 6:18.¶

Note: Homilia, “a company, association, or intercourse with” (see COMMUNE, No. 2), is translated “company” in 1 Cor. 15:33, RV (KJV, “communications”); the word is in the plural, “evil companies,” i.e., associations. See COMPANY, No. 6.¶

COMMUNION

A. Noun.

koinonia (κοινωνία, 2842), “a having in common (koinos), partnership, fellowship” (see COMMUNICATE), denotes (a) the share which one has in anything, a participation,

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

fellowship recognized and enjoyed; thus it is used of the common experiences and interests of Christian men, Acts 2:42; Gal. 2:9; of participation in the knowledge of the Son of God, 1 Cor. 1:9; of sharing in the realization of the effects of the blood (i.e., the death) of Christ and the body of Christ, as set forth by the emblems in the Lord's Supper, 1 Cor. 10:16; of participation in what is derived from the Holy Spirit, 2 Cor. 13:14 (RV, "communion"); Phil. 2:1; of participation in the sufferings of Christ, Phil. 3:10; of sharing in the resurrection life possessed in Christ, and so of fellowship with the Father and the Son, 1 John 1:3, 6-7; negatively, of the impossibility of "communion" between light and darkness, 2 Cor. 6:14; (b) fellowship manifested in acts, the practical effects of fellowship with God, wrought by the Holy Spirit in the lives of believers as the outcome of faith, Philem. 6, and finding expression in joint ministrations to the needy, Rom. 15:26; 2 Cor. 8:4; 9:13; Heb. 13:16, and in the furtherance of the Gospel by gifts, Phil. 1:5. See COMMUNICATION, CONTRIBUTION, DISTRIBUTION, FELLOWSHIP.¶

B. Adjective.

koinonos (κοινωνός, 2844), "having in common," is rendered "have communion with (the altar),"—the altar standing by metonymy for that which is associated with it—in 1 Cor. 10:18, RV (for KJV, "are partakers of"), and in v. 20, for KJV, "have fellowship with (demons)." See COMPANION.

COMPACTED

1. sunistemi (συνιστάω, 4921), and transitively sunistao, "to stand together" (sun, "with," histemi, "to stand"), is rendered "compacted," in 2 Pet. 3:5, of the earth as formerly arranged by God in relation to the waters. See APPROVE, COMMEND, CONSIST, MAKE, STAND.

2. sumbibazo (συμβιβάζω, 4822), "to unite, to knit," is translated "compacted" in the KJV of Eph. 4:16 (RV, "knit together"), concerning the church as the body of Christ. See CONCLUDE, GATHER, INSTRUCT, KNIT, PROVE.

COMPANION

1. sunekdemos (συνέκδημος, 4898), "a fellow-traveler" (sun, "with," ek, "from," demos, "people"; i.e., "away from one's people"), is used in Acts 19:29, of Paul's companions in travel, in 2 Cor. 8:19, "travel with"; a closer rendering would be "(as) our fellow-traveler." See TRAVEL.¶

2. koinonos (κοινωνός, 2844) is rendered "companions" in the KJV of Heb. 10:33 (RV "partakers"). So sun-koinonos in Rev. 1:9, KJV, "companion"; RV, "partaker with you." See B, above, PARTAKER, PARTNER. Cf. COMMUNICATE.

3. sunergos (συνεργός, 4904), "a fellowworker" (sun, "with," ergon, "work"), is translated in Phil. 2:25 "companion in labor," KJV (RV, fellow-worker). See HELPER, LABORER, WORKER.

COMPANY (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns and Phrases.

1. ochlos (ὄχλος, 3793), "a throng of people, an irregular crowd," most usually "a disorganized throng"; in Acts 6:7, however, it is said of a company of the priests who believed; the word here indicates that they had not combined to bring this about. The RV usually translates this word “company” or “multitude.” Cf. B, Note 3. See COMMON, CROWD, MULTITUDE, and Trench, Syn. Sec.xcviii.

2. sunodia (συννοδία, 4923), lit., “a way or journey together” (sun, “with,” hodos, “a way”), denotes, by metonymy, “a company of travelers”; in Luke 2:44, of the company from which Christ was missed by Joseph and Mary. (Eng., synod).¶

3. sumposion (συνπόσιον, 4849), lit. “denotes a drinking together (sun, “with,” pino, “to drink”), a drinking-party”; hence, by metonymy, “any table party or any company arranged as a party.” In Mark 6:39 the noun is repeated, in the plural, by way of an adverbial and distributive phrase, sumposia sumposia, lit., “companies-companies” (i.e., by companies).¶

4. klisia (κλισία, 2828), akin to klino, to recline,” primarily means “a place for lying down in, and hence a reclining company,” for the same purpose as No. 3. It is found in the plural in Luke 9:14, corresponding to Mark’s word sumposia (No. 3, above), signifying “companies reclining at a meal.”¶

5. plethos (πλῆθος, 4128), lit., “a fullness,” hence denotes “a multitude, a large or full company,” Luke 23:1; “a multitude,” v. 27 (KJV, “a great company”). See BUNDLE, MULTITUDE.

6. homilia (ὁμιλία, 3657), “an association of people, those who are of the same company” (homos, “same”), is used in 1 Cor. 15:33, KJV, “(evil) communications”; RV, “(evil) company.”¶

7. homilos (ὁμιλος, 3658), akin to No. 6, “a throng or crowd,” is found, in some mss., in Rev. 18:17, “all the company in ships,” KJV. Homilos denotes the concrete; homilia is chiefly an abstract noun.¶

8. idios (ἴδιος, 2398), “one’s own,” is used in the plural with the article in Acts 4:23, to signify “their own (company).” See BUSINESS, B.

Notes: (1) The preposition ex (i.e., ek), “of,” with the first personal pronoun in the genitive plural (hemon, “us”); signifies “of our company,” lit., “of us,” in Luke 24:22; so ex auton, in Acts 15:22, “men out of their company,” lit., “men out of them.” (2) The phrase in Acts 13:13, hoi peri Paulon, lit., “the (ones) about Paul,” signifies “Paul and his company.” (3) Murias, a noun connected with the adjective murios (“numberless, infinite”), signifies “a myriad” (whence the English word), and is used hyperbolically, of vast numbers, e.g., Heb. 12:22, KJV, “an innumerable company”; RV, “innumerable hosts.” (Contrast murioi, 10,000, Matt. 18:24). (4) In Acts 21:8, the phrase translated “that were of Paul’s company” is absent from the best texts.

B. Verbs.

1. sunanamignumi (συναναμίγνυμι, 4874), lit., “to mix up with” (sun, “with,” ana, “up,” mignumi, “to mix, mingle”), signifies “to have, or keep, company with,” 1 Cor. 5:9, 11; 2 Thess. 3:14.¶

2. sunerchomai (συνέρχομαι, 4905), “to come, or go, with,” is rendered “have companied” in Acts 1:21. See COME, No. 11.

Notes: (1) Aphorizo, “to separate,” is translated “separate (you) from (their) company,” in Luke 6:22, the latter part being added in italics to supply the meaning of excommunication. See DIVIDE.

(2) Kollao, “to join,” is rendered “keep company,” in Acts 10:28, KJV; RV, “join himself.” See CLEAVE, JOIN.

(3) Ochlopoieo, lit., “to make a crowd” (ochlos, “a crowd,” poieo, “to make”), is translated “gathered a company,” in Acts 17:5, KJV; the RV corrects this to “gathering a crowd.” See CROWD.¶

COMPARE, COMPARISON

1. sunkrino (συγκρίνω, 4793) denotes (a) “to join fitly, to combine,” 1 Cor. 2:13, either in the sense of combining spiritual things with spiritual, adapting the discourse to the subject, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, or communicating spiritual things by spiritual things or words, or in the sense of interpreting spiritual things to spiritual men, RV and KJV, “comparing” (cf. the Sept. use, of interpreting dreams, etc. Gen. 40:8, 16, 22; 41:12, 15; Dan. 5:12); (b) “to place together; hence, judge or discriminate by comparison, compare, with or among,” 2 Cor. 10:12 (thrice).¶

2. paraballo (παράβάλλω, 3846), “to place side by side, to set forth,” and the noun parabole (Eng., “parable”), occur in Mark 4:30, RV, “In what parable shall we set it forth?,” KJV, “with what comparison shall we compare it?” See ARRIVE.

Note: The preposition pros, “towards,” is sometimes used of mental direction, in the way of estimation, or comparison, as in the phrase “(worthy) to be compared,” or “(worthy) in comparison with,” Rom. 8:18.

COMPASS

1. kukleuo (κυκλόω, 2944v) denotes “to encircle, surround,” and is found in the best texts in John 10:24, “came round about,” and Rev. 20:9, of a camp surrounded by foes; some mss. have No. 2 in each place.¶

2. kukloo (κυκλόω, 2944), (cf. Eng., cycle”), signifies “to move in a circle, to compass about,” as of a city “encompassed” by armies, Luke 21:20; Heb. 11:30; in Acts 14:20, “stood round about. See COME, No. 38, STAND.¶

3. perikukloo (περικυκλόω, 4033), peri, “about,” with No. 2, is used in Luke 19:43, “shall compass ... round.¶

4. periago (περιάγω, 4013), “to lead about,” 1 Cor. 9:5, or, intransitively, “to go about, to go up and down,” is so used in Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Mark 6:6; Acts 13:11; “to compass regions,” Matt. 23:15. See GO, LEAD.¶

5. perikeimai (περίκειμαι, 4029), “to be encompassed”: see BOUND (b), HANG.

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

6. perierchomai (περιέρχομαι, 4022), lit., “to go, or come, about” (peri, “about,” erchomai, “to come”), is translated in Acts 28:13, KJV, “fetched a compass.” See CIRCUIT.

COMPASSION, COMPASSIONATE

A. Verbs.

1. oikteiro (οἰκτεῖρω, 3627), “to have pity, a feeling of distress through the ills of others,” is used of God’s compassion, Rom. 9:15.¶

2. splanchnizomai (σπλαγχνίζομαι, 4697), “to be moved as to one’s inwards (splanchna), to be moved with compassion, to yearn with compassion,” is frequently recorded of Christ towards the multitude and towards individual sufferers, Matt. 9:36; 14:14; 15:32; 18:27; 20:34; Mark 1:41; 6:34; 8:2; 9:22 (of the appeal of a father for a demon-possessed son); Luke 7:13; 10:33; of the father in the parable of the Prodigal Son, 15:20. (Moulton and Milligan consider the verb to have been coined in the Jewish dispersion).¶

3. sumpatheo (συμπαθέω, 4834), “to suffer with another (sun, ‘with,’ pascho, ‘to suffer’), to be affected similarly” (Eng., “sympathy”), to have “compassion” upon, Heb. 10:34, of “compassionating” those in prison, is translated “be touched with” in Heb. 4:15, of Christ as the High Priest. See TOUCH.¶

4. eleeo (ἐλεέω, 1653), “to have mercy (eleos, “mercy”), to show kindness, by beneficence, or assistance,” is translated “have compassion” in Matt. 18:33 (KJV); Mark 5:19 and Jude 22. See MERCY.

5. metriopatheo (μετριοπαθέω, 3356) is rendered “have compassion,” in Heb. 5:2, KJV. See BEAR, No. 13.¶

B. Nouns.

1. oiktirmos (οἰκτιρμός, 3628), akin to A, No. 1, is used with splanchna (see below), “the viscera, the inward parts,” as the seat of emotion, the “heart,” Phil. 2:1; Col. 3:12, “a heart of compassion” (KJV, “bowels of mercies”). In Heb. 10:28 it is used with choris, “without,” (lit., “without compassions”). It is translated “mercies” in Rom. 12:1 and 2 Cor. 1:3. See MERCY.¶

2. splanchnon (σπλάγχνον, 4698), always used in the plural, is suitably rendered “compassion” in the RV of Col. 3:12 and 1 John 3:17; “compassions” in Phil. 2:1, Cf. A, No. 2. See BOWELS.

C. Adjective.

sumpathes (συμπαθής, 4835) denotes suffering with, “compassionate,” 1 Pet. 3:8, RV (KJV, “having compassion”). See A, No. 3.¶

COMPEL

1. anankazo (ἀναγκάζω, 315) denotes “to put constraint upon (from ananke, ‘necessity’), to constrain, whether by threat, entreaty, force or persuasion”; Christ “constrained” the disciples to get into a boat, Matt. 14:22; Mark 6:45; the servants of the man who made a great supper were to constrain people to come in, Luke 14:23 (RV, “constrain”); Saul of Tarsus “strove” to make saints blaspheme, Acts 26:11, RV (KJV, “compelled”); Titus, though a Greek, was not “compelled” to be circumcised, Gal. 2:3, as

Galatian converts were, 6:12, RV; Peter was “compelling” Gentiles to live as Jews, Gal. 2:14; Paul was “constrained” to appeal to Caesar, Acts 28:19, and was “compelled” by the church at Corinth to become foolish in speaking of himself, 2 Cor. 12:11. See CONSTRAIN.¶

2. angareuo (ἀγγαρεύω, 29), “to dispatch as an angaros” (a Persian courier kept at regular stages with power of impressing men into service), and hence, in general, “to impress into service,” is used of “compelling” a person to go a mile, Matt. 5:41; of the impressing of Simon to bear Christ’s cross, Matt. 27:32; Mark 15:21.¶

COMPLAINER, COMPLAINT

1. mempsimoiros (μεμψίμοιρος, 3202) denotes “one who complains,” lit., “complaining of one’s lot” (memphomai, “to blame,” moira, “a fate, lot”); hence, “discontented, querulous, repining”; it is rendered “complainers” in Jude 16.¶

2. momphe (μομφή, 3437), denotes “blame” (akin to memphomai see No. 1), “an occasion of complaint,” Col. 3:13 (KJV, “quarrel”). See QUARREL.¶

3. aitioma (αἰτίαμα, 157v), “a charge,” is translated “complaints” in Acts 25:7, KJV. See CHARGE.¶

COMPLETE, COMPLETION, COMPLETELY

A. Verbs.

1. epiteleo (ἐπιτελέω, 2005), “to complete”: see ACCOMPLISH, No. 4.

2. exartizo (ἐξαρτίζω, 1822), “to fit out” (ek, “out,” intensive, artos, “a joint”; or from artios, perfect, lit., “exactly right”), is said of the equipment of the man of God, 2 Tim. 3:17, “furnished completely” (KJV, “thoroughly furnished”); elsewhere in Acts 21:5, “accomplished.” Cf. B. See FURNISH.¶

3. sunteleo (συντελέω, 4931), “to end together, bring quite to an end” (sun, “together,” intensive, telos, “an end”), is said (a) of the “completion” of a period of days, Luke 4:2; Acts 21:27; (b) of “completing” something; some mss. have it in Matt. 7:28, of the Lord, in ending His discourse (the best mss. have teleo, “to finish”); of God, in finishing a work, Rom. 9:28, in making a new covenant, Heb. 8:8, marg., “accomplish”; of the fulfillment of things foretold, Mark 13:4; of the Devil’s temptation of the Lord, Luke 4:13. See END, FINISH, FULFILL, MAKE.¶

4. pleroo (πληρόω, 4137), “to fill” (in the passive voice, “to be made full”), is translated “complete” in the KJV of Col. 2:10 (RV, “made full”; cf. v. 9). See ACCOMPLISH.

5. plerophoreo (πληροφορέω, 4135), “to be fully assured,” is translated “complete” in Col. 4:12. See ASSURED, B, No. 2.

artios (ἄρτιος, 739), “fitted, complete” (from artos, “a limb, joint”), is used in 2 Tim. 3:17, RV, “complete,” KJV, “perfect.” See PERFECT.¶

apartismos (ἀπαρτισμός, 535) is rendered “complete” in Luke 14:28, RV.¶

For COMPREHEND see APPREHEND, John 1:5, KJV, and SUM UP

parakalupto (παρακαλύπτω, 3871), “to conceal thoroughly” (para, “beside,” intensive, kalupto, “to hide”), is found in Luke 9:45, of “concealing” from the disciples the fact of the delivering up of Christ.

CONCEITS

1. en heautois, lit., “in yourselves,” is used with phronimos, “wise,” in Rom. 11:25, “(wise) in your own conceits (i.e., opinions).”

2. par heautois, (para, “with, in the estimation of”), in Rom. 12:16 has the same rendering as No. 1.

CONCEIVE

1. gennao (γεννάω, 1080), “to conceive, beget”: see BEGET, A, No. 1.

2. sullambano (συλλαμβάνω, 4815), lit., “to take together” (sun, “with,” lambano, “to take or receive”), is used (a) of a woman, to “conceive,” Luke 1:24, 31, 36; in the passive voice. Luke 2:21; (b) metaphorically, of the impulse of lust in the human heart, enticing to sin, Jas. 1:15. For its other meanings see CATCH, No. 8.

3. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), to put, set, is used in Acts 5:4, of the sin of Ananias, in “conceiving” a lie in his heart.

Notes: (1) The phrase echo, “to have,” with koite, “a lying down, a bed,” especially the marriage bed, denotes “to conceive,” Rom. 9:10.¶

(2) The phrase eis katabolen, lit., “for a casting down, or in,” is used of conception in Heb. 11:11.¶

CONCERN (-ETH)

1. The neuter plural of the article (“the things”), with the genitive case of a noun, is used in 2 Cor. 11:30 of Paul’s infirmity, “the things that concern my infirmity,” lit., “the (things) of my infirmity.”

2. The neuter singular of the article, with the preposition peri, “concerning,” is used by the Lord in Luke 22:37, “that which concerneth,” lit., “the (thing) concerning (Me).” The same construction is found in Luke 24:27; Acts 19:8; 28:31.

katatome (κατατομή, 2699), lit., “a cutting off” (kata, “down,” temno, “to cut”), “a mutilation,” is a term found in Phil. 3:2, there used by the apostle, by a paranomasia, contemptuously, for the Jewish circumcision with its Judaistic influence, in contrast to the true spiritual circumcision.¶

CONCLUDE

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

sumbibazo (συμβιβάζω, 4822), lit., “to make to come together,” is translated “concluding” in Acts 16:10, RV, for the KJV, “assuredly gathering.” See COMPACTED, INSTRUCT, KNIT, PROVE.

Notes: (1) For krino, “to judge, give judgment,” rendered “concluded” in the KJV of Acts 21:25, RV, giving judgment, see JUDGMENT.

(2) For logizomai, “to reckon,” translated “conclude” in Rom. 3:28, KJV, RV, “reckon,” see RECKON.

(3) For sunkleio, “to shut up with,” translated “concluded” in Rom. 11:32; Gal. 3:22, KJV, RV, shut up, see INCLOSE, SHUT.

CONCORD

sumphonesis (συμφώνησις, 4857), lit., “a sounding together” (sun, “with,” phone, “a sound”; Eng., “symphony”), is found in 2 Cor. 6:15, in the rhetorical question “what concord hath Christ with Belial?” See AGREE, A, No. 1.¶

CONCOURSE

suntrophe (συστροφή, 4963), “a turning together” (sun, “with,” trepo, “to turn”), signifies (a) that which is rolled together; hence (b) a dense mass of people, concourse, Acts 19:40.¶ See BANDED.

For CONCUPISCENCE (KJV of Rom. 7:8; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:5) see COVET, DESIRE, LUST

CONDEMN, CONDEMNATION

A. Verbs.

1. kataginosko (καταγινώσκω, 2607), “to know something against” (kata, “against,” ginosko, “to know by experience”), hence, “to think ill of, to condemn,” is said, in Gal. 2:11, of Peter’s conduct (RV, “stood condemned”), he being “self-condemned” as the result of an exercised and enlightened conscience, and “condemned” in the sight of others; so of “self-condemnation” due to an exercise of heart, 1 John 3:20-21. See BLAME.¶

2. katadikazo (καταδικάζω, 2613) signifies “to exercise right or law against anyone”; hence, “to pronounce judgment, to condemn” (kata, “down, or against,” dike, “justice”), Matt. 12:7, 37; Luke 6:37; Jas. 5:6.¶

3. krino (κρίνω, 2919), “to distinguish, choose, give an opinion upon, judge,” sometimes denotes “to condemn,” e.g., Acts 13:27; Rom. 2:27; Jas. 5:9 (in the best mss.). Cf. No. 1, below. See CALL (No. 13), CONCLUDE, DECREE, DETERMINE, ESTEEM, JUDGE, LAW (go to), ORDAIN, SUE, THINK.

4. katakno (κατακρίνω, 2632), a strengthened form of No. 3, signifies “to give judgment against, pass sentence upon”; hence, “to condemn,” implying (a) the fact of a crime, e.g., Rom. 2:1; 14:23; 2 Pet. 2:6; some mss. have it in Jas. 5:9; (b) the imputation of a crime, as in the “condemnation” of Christ by the Jews, Matt. 20:18; Mark 14:64. It is used metaphorically of “condemning” by a good example, Matt. 12:41-42; Luke 11:31-32; Heb. 11:7.

In Rom. 8:3, God's "condemnation" of sin is set forth in that Christ, His own Son, sent by Him to partake of human nature (sin apart) and to become an offering for sin, died under the judgment due to our sin.

B. Nouns.

1. krima (κρίμα, 2917) denotes (a) "the sentence pronounced, a verdict, a condemnation, the decision resulting from an investigation," e.g., Mark 12:40; Luke 23:40; 1 Tim. 3:6; Jude 4; (b) "the process of judgment leading to a decision," 1 Pet. 4:17 ("judgment"), where krisis (see No. 3, below) might be expected. In Luke 24:20, "to be condemned" translates the phrase eis krima, "unto condemnation" (i.e., unto the pronouncement of the sentence of "condemnation"). For the rendering "judgment," see, e.g., Rom. 11:33; 1 Cor. 11:34; Gal. 5:10; Jas. 3:1. In these (a) the process leading to a decision and (b) the pronouncement of the decision, the verdict, are to be distinguished. In 1 Cor. 6:7 the word means a matter for judgment, a lawsuit. See JUDGMENT.

2. katakrima (κατάκριμα, 2631), cf. No. 4, above, is "the sentence pronounced, the condemnation" with a suggestion of the punishment following; it is found in Rom. 5:16, 18; 8:1.¶

3. krisis (κρίσις, 2920) (a) denotes "the process of investigation, the act of distinguishing and separating" (as distinct from krima, see No. 1 above); hence "a judging, a passing of judgment upon a person or thing"; it has a variety of meanings, such as judicial authority, John 5:22, 27; justice, Acts 8:33; Jas. 2:13; a tribunal, Matt. 5:21-22; a trial, John 5:24; 2 Pet. 2:4; a judgment, 2 Pet. 2:11; Jude 9; by metonymy, the standard of judgment, just dealing, Matt. 12:18, 20; 23:23; Luke 11:42; divine judgment executed, 2 Thess. 1:5; Rev. 16:7; (b) sometimes it has the meaning "condemnation," and is virtually equivalent to krima (a); see Matt. 23:33; John 3:19; Jas. 5:12, hupo krisin, "under judgment." See ACCUSATION, A (Note), DAMNATION, JUDGMENT.

Note: In John 9:39, "For judgment (krima) came I into this world," the meaning would appear to be, "for being judged" (as a touchstone for proving men's thoughts and characters), in contrast to 5:22, "hath given all judging (krisis) to the Son"; in Luke 24:20, "delivered Him up to be condemned to death," the latter phrase is, lit., "to a verdict (krima) of death" (which they themselves could not carry out); in Mark 12:40, "these shall receive greater condemnation" (krima), the phrase signifies a heavier verdict (against themselves).

4. katakrisis (κατάκρισις, 2633), a strengthened form of No. 3, denotes "a judgment against, condemnation," with the suggestion of the process leading to it, as of "the ministration of condemnation," 2 Cor. 3:9; in 7:3, "to condemn," more lit., "with a view to condemnation."¶

C. Adjectives.

1. autokatakritos (αὐτοκατάκριτος, 843), "self-condemned" (auto, "self," katakrino, "to condemn"), i.e., on account of doing himself what he condemns in others, is used in Titus 3:11.¶

2. akatagnostos (ἀκατάγνωστος, 176), akin to A, No. 1, with negative prefix, a, “not to be condemned,” is said of sound speech, in Titus 2:8.¶

CONDESCEND

sunapago (συναπάγω, 4879): see CARRY, No. 7.

CONDITIONS

Note: This translates the phrase ta pros in Luke 14:32, lit., “the (things) towards,” i.e., the things relating to, or conditions of, (peace).

CONDUCT

A. Noun.

agoge (ἀγωγή, 72), from ago, “to lead,” properly denotes “a teaching”; then, figuratively, “a training, discipline,” and so, the life led, a way or course of life, conduct, 2 Tim.3:10, RV, “conduct”; KJV, “manner of life.” See LIFE.¶

B. Verbs.

1. kathistemi (καθίστημι, 2525), lit., “to stand down or set down” (kata, “down,” histemi, “to stand”), has, among its various meanings, “the significance of bringing to a certain place, conducting,” Acts 17:15 (so the Sept. in Josh. 6:23; 1 Sam. 5:3; 2 Chron. 28:15). See APPOINT.

2. propempo (προπέμπω, 4311) signifies “to set forward, conduct”: see ACCOMPANY, No. 4.

CONFER, CONFERENCE

1. prosanatithemi (προσανατίθηναι, 4323), lit., “to put before” (pros, “towards,” ana, “up,” and tithemi, “to put”), i.e., “to lay a matter before others so as to obtain counsel or instruction,” is used of Paul’s refraining from consulting human beings, Gal. 1:16 (translated “imparted” in 2:6; KJV, “added ... in conference”). Cf. the shorter form anatithemi, in 2:2, “laid before,” the less intensive word being used there simply to signify the imparting of information, rather than conferring with others to seek advice. See ADD, IMPART.¶

2. sullaleo (συνλαλέω, 4814), “to speak together with” (sun, “with,” laleo, “to speak”), is translated “conferred” in Acts 25:12; elsewhere of talking with Matt. 17:3; Mark 9:4; Luke 4:36; 9:30; “communed” in Luke 22:4. See COMMUNE, SPEAK, TALK.¶

3. sumballo (συνβάλλω, 4820), lit., “to throw together” (sun, “with,” ballo, “to throw”), is used of “conversation, to discourse or consult together, confer,” Acts 4:15. See ENCOUNTER, HELP, MEET WITH, PONDER.

CONFESS, CONFESSION

A. Verbs.

1. homologeō (ὁμολογέω, 3670), lit., “to speak the same thing” (homos, “same,” legō, “to speak”), “to assent, accord, agree with,” denotes, (a) “to confess, declare, admit,” John 1:20; e.g., Acts 24:14; Heb. 11:13; (b) “to confess by way of admitting oneself guilty of what one is accused of, the result of inward conviction,” 1 John 1:9; (c) “to declare openly by way of speaking out freely, such confession being the effect of deep conviction of facts,” Matt. 7:23; 10:32 (twice) and Luke 12:8 (see next par.); John 9:22; 12:42; Acts 23:8; Rom. 10:9-10 (“confession is made”); 1 Tim. 6:12 (RV); Titus 1:16; 1 John 2:23; 4:2, 15; 2 John 7 (in John’s epistle it is the necessary antithesis to Gnostic doceticism); Rev. 3:5, in the best mss. (some have No. 2 here); (d) “to confess by way of celebrating with praise,” Heb. 13:15; (e) “to promise,” Matt. 14:7.

In Matt. 10:32 and Luke 12:8 the construction of this verb with en, “in,” followed by the dative case of the personal pronoun, has a special significance, namely, to “confess” in a person’s name, the nature of the “confession” being determined by the context, the suggestion being to make a public “confession.” Thus the statement, “every one ... who shall confess Me (lit. “in Me,” i.e., in My case) before men, him (lit., “in him,” i.e., in his case) will I also confess before My Father ...,” conveys the thought of “confessing” allegiance to Christ as one’s Master and Lord, and, on the other hand, of acknowledgment, on His part, of the faithful one as being His worshipper and servant, His loyal follower; this is appropriate to the original idea in homologeō of being identified in thought or language. See PROFESS, PROMISE, THANK.¶

2. exomologeō (ἐξομολογέω, 1843), ek, “out,” intensive, and No. 1, and accordingly stronger than No. 1, “to confess forth,” i.e., “freely, openly,” is used (a) “of a public acknowledgment or confession of sins,” Matt. 3:6; Mark 1:5; Acts 19:18; Jas. 5:16; (b) “to profess or acknowledge openly,” Matt. 11:25 (translated “thank,” but indicating the fuller idea); Phil. 2:11 (some mss. have it in Rev. 3:5: see No. 1); (c) “to confess by way of celebrating, giving praise,” Rom. 14:11; 15:9. In Luke 10:21, it is translated “I thank,” the true meaning being “I gladly acknowledge.” In Luke 22:6 it signifies to consent (RV), for KJV, “promised.” See CONSENT, PROMISE, THANK.¶

homologia (ὁμολογία, 3671), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “confession, by acknowledgment of the truth,” 2 Cor. 9:13; 1 Tim. 6:12-13; Heb. 3:1; 4:14; 10:23 (KJV, incorrectly, “profession,” except in 1 Tim. 6:13).¶

Note: For the adverb homologoumenos, confessedly, see CONTROVERSY.

CONFIDENCE (Noun, or Verb with “have”), CONFIDENT (-LY)

A. Nouns.

1. pepoithesis (πεποίθησις, 4006), akin to peitho, B, No. 1 below, denotes “persuasion, assurance, confidence,” 2 Cor. 1:15; 3:4, KJV, “trust”; 8:22; 10:2; Eph. 3:12; Phil. 3:4. See TRUST.¶

2. hupostasis (ὑπόστασις, 5287), lit., “a standing under” (hupo, “under,” stasis, “a standing”), “that which stands, or is set, under, a foundation, beginning”; hence, the quality of confidence which leads one to stand under, endure, or undertake anything, 2 Cor. 9:4; 11:17; Heb. 3:14. Twice in Heb. it signifies “substance,” 1:3 (KJV, “Person”) and 11:1. See SUBSTANCE.¶

3. parrhesia (παρρησία, 3954), often rendered “confidence” in the KJV, is in all such instances rendered “boldness” in the RV, Acts 28:31; Heb. 3:6; 1 John 2:28; 3:21; 5:14. See BOLDNESS, OPENLY, PLAINNESS.

B. Verbs.

1. peitho (πείθω, 3982), “to persuade,” or, intransitively, “to have confidence, to be confident” (cf. A, No. 1), has this meaning in the following, Rom. 2:19; 2 Cor. 2:3; Gal. 5:10; Phil. 1:6, 14 (RV, “being confident,” for KJV, “waxing confident”), 25; 3:3-4; 2 Thess. 3:4; Philem. 21. See AGREE, ASSURE, BELIEVE, OBEY, PERSUADE, TRUST, YIELD.

2. tharreo (θαρρέω, 2292), “to be of good courage,” is so translated in the RV of 2 Cor. 5:6; 7:16 (KJV, “to have confidence, or be confident”). See COURAGE.

Note: The adverb “confidently” is combined with the verb “affirm” to represent the verbs diischurzomai, Luke 22:59 and Acts 12:15, RV (KJV, “constantly affirmed”), ¶, and diabebaioomai, 1 Tim. 1:7, KJV, “affirm,” and Titus 3:8, KJV, “affirm constantly.” See AFFIRM. ¶

CONFIRM, CONFIRMATION

A. Verbs.

1. bebaioo (βεβαιόω, 950), “to make firm, establish, make secure” (the connected adjective bebaios signifies “stable, fast, firm”), is used of “confirming” a word, Mark 16:20; promises, Rom. 15:8; the testimony of Christ, 1 Cor. 1:6; the saints by the Lord Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. 1:8; the saints by God, 2 Cor. 1:21 (“stablisheth”); in faith, Col. 2:7; the salvation spoken through the Lord and “confirmed” by the apostles, Heb. 2:3; the heart by grace, Heb. 13:9 (“stablished”). ¶

2. episterizo (ἐπιστηρίζω, 1991), “to make to lean upon, strengthen” (epi, “upon,” sterix, “a prop, support”), is used of “confirming” souls Acts 14:22, brethren, 15:32; churches, 15:41; disciples, 18:23, in some mss. (“stablishing,” RV, “strengthening,” KJV); the most authentic mss. have sterizo in 18:23. See STRENGTHEN. ¶

3. kuroo (κυρόω, 2964), “to make valid, ratify, impart authority or influence” (from kuros, “might,” kurios, “mighty, a head, as supreme in authority”), is used of spiritual love, 2 Cor. 2:8; a human covenant, Gal. 3:15. ¶ In the Sept., see Gen. 23:20, e.g.

4. prokuroo (προκυρόω, 4300), pro, “before,” and No. 3, “to confirm or ratify before,” is said of the divine confirmation of a promise given originally to Abraham, Gen. 12, and “confirmed” by the vision of the furnace and torch, Gen. 15, by the birth of Isaac, Gen. 21, and by the oath of God, Gen. 22, all before the giving of the Law, Gal. 3:17. ¶

5. mesiteuo (μεσιτεύω, 3315), “to act as a mediator, to interpose,” is rendered “confirmed,” in the KJV of Heb. 6:17 (marg., and RV, “interposed”). See INTERPOSED. ¶ bebaiosis (βεβαίωσις, 951), akin to A, No. 1, is used in two senses (a) “of firmness, establishment,” said of the “confirmation” of the gospel, Phil. 1:7; (b) “of authoritative validity imparted,” said of the settlement of a dispute by an oath to produce confidence, Heb. 6:16. The word is found frequently in the papyri of the settlement of a business transaction. ¶

CONFLICT (Noun)

1. agon (ἀγών, 73), from ago, “to lead,” signifies (a) “a place of assembly,” especially the place where the Greeks assembled for the Olympic and Pythian games; (b) “a contest of athletes,” metaphorically, 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 4:7, “fight”; Heb. 12:1, “race”; hence, (c) “the inward conflict of the soul”; inward “conflict” is often the result, or the accompaniment, of outward “conflict,” Phil. 1:30; 1 Thess. 2:2, implying a contest against spiritual foes, as well as human adversaries; so Col. 2:1, “conflict,” KJV; RV, “(how greatly) I strive,” lit., “how great a conflict I have.” See CONTENTION, FIGHT, RACE.¶ Cf. agonizomai (Eng., “agonize”), 1 Cor. 9:25 etc.

2. athlesis (ἄθλησις, 119) denotes “a combat, contest of athletes”; hence, “a struggle, fight,” Heb. 10:32, with reference to affliction. See FIGHT.¶ Cf. athleo, “to strive,” 2 Tim. 2:5 (twice).¶

CONFORMED, CONFORMABLE

summorphizo (συνμορφόω, 4833v), “to make of like form with another person or thing, to render like” (sun, “with,” morphe, “a form”), is found in Phil. 3:10 (in the passive participle of the verb), “becoming conformed” (or “growing into conformity”) to the death of Christ, indicating the practical apprehension of the death of the carnal self, and fulfilling his share of the sufferings following upon the sufferings of Christ. Some texts have the alternative verb summorphoo, which has practically the same meaning.

B. Adjectives.

1. summorphos (συνμορφός, 4832), akin to A, signifies “having the same form as another, conformed to”; (a) of the “conformity” of children of God “to the image of His Son,” Rom. 8:29; (b), of their future physical “conformity” to His body of glory, Phil. 3:21. See FASHION.¶

2. suschematizo (συσχηματίζω, 4964), “to fashion or shape one thing like another,” is translated “conformed” in Rom. 12:2, KJV; RV, “fashioned”; “fashioning” in 1 Pet. 1:14. This verb has more especial reference to that which is transitory, changeable, unstable; summorphizo, to that which is essential in character and thus complete or durable, not merely a form or outline. Suschematizo could not be used of inward transformation. See FASHION (schema) and FORM (morphe).¶

CONFOUND, CONFUSE, CONFUSION

A. Nouns.

1. akatastasia (ἀκαταστασία, 181), “instability,” (a, negative, kata, “down,” stasis, “a standing”), denotes “a state of disorder, disturbance, confusion, tumult,” 1 Cor. 14:33; Jas. 3:16, “revolution or anarchy”; translated “tumults” in Luke 21:9 (KJV, “commotions”); 2 Cor. 6:5; 12:20. See TUMULT.¶

2. sunchusis (σύγχυσις, 4799), “a pouring or mixing together” (sun, “with,” cheo, “to pour”); hence “a disturbance, confusion, a tumultuous disorder, as of riotous persons,” is found in Acts 19:29.¶

B. Verbs.

1. suncheo (συγχέω, 4797), or sunchunno or sunchuno (the verb form of A., No. 2), lit., “to pour together, commingle,” hence (said of persons), means “to trouble or confuse, to stir up,” Acts 19:32 (said of the mind); “to be in confusion,” 21:31, RV (KJV, “was in an uproar”); 21:27, “stirred up”; Acts 2:6; 9:22, “confounded. See STIR, UPROAR.¶

2. kataischuno (καταισχύνω, 2617), “to put to shame,” is translated “confound” in 1 Cor. 1:27, and 1 Pet. 2:6, KJV (RV, “put to shame”). See ASHAMED, DISHONOR, SHAME.

diakateleunchomai (διακατελέγχομαι, 1246), “to confute powerfully,” is an intensive form of elencho, “to convict” (dia, “through,” kata, “down,” both intensive), Acts 18:28, implying that “he met the opposing arguments in turn (dia), and brought them down to the ground (kata).” It carries also the thought that he brought home moral blame to them.

CONGREGATION

1. ekklesia (ἐκκλησία, 1577) is translated “congregation” in Heb. 2:12, RV, instead of the usual rendering “church.” See ASSEMBLY.

2. sunagoge (συναγωγή, 4864) is translated “congregation” in Acts 13:43, KJV (RV, “synagogue). See SYNAGOGUE.

CONQUER, CONQUEROR

1. nikao (νικάω, 3528), “to overcome” (its usual meaning), is translated “conquering” and “to conquer” in Rev. 6:2. See OVERCOME, PREVAIL, VICTORY.

2. hupernikao (ὑπερνικάω, 5245), “to be more than conqueror” (hyper, “over,” and No. 1), “to gain a surpassing victory,” is found in Rom. 8:37, lit., “we are hyper-conquerors,” i.e., we are pre-eminently victorious.¶

suneidesis (συνείδησις, 4893), lit., “a knowing with” (sun, “with,” oida, “to know”), i.e., “a co-knowledge (with oneself), the witness borne to one’s conduct by conscience, that faculty by which we apprehend the will of God, as that which is designed to govern our lives”; hence (a) the sense of guiltiness before God; Heb. 10:2; (b) that process of thought which distinguishes what it considers morally good or bad, commending the good, condemning the bad, and so prompting to do the former, and avoid the latter; Rom. 2:15 (bearing witness with God’s law); 9:1; 2 Cor. 1:12; acting in a certain way because “conscience” requires it, Rom. 13:5; so as not to cause scruples of “conscience” in another, 1 Cor. 10:28-29; not calling a thing in question unnecessarily, as if conscience demanded it, 1 Cor. 10:25, 27; “commending oneself to every man’s conscience,” 2 Cor. 4:2; cf. 5:11. There may be a “conscience” not strong enough to distinguish clearly between the lawful and the unlawful, 1 Cor. 8:7, 10, 12 (some regard consciousness as the meaning here). The phrase “conscience toward God,” in 1 Pet. 2:19, signifies a “conscience” (or perhaps here, a consciousness) so controlled by the apprehension of God’s presence, that the person realizes that griefs are to be borne in accordance with His will. Heb. 9:9 teaches that sacrifices under the Law could not so perfect a person that he could regard himself as free from guilt.

For various descriptions of “conscience” see Acts 23:1; 24:16; 1 Cor. 8:7; 1 Tim. 1:5, 19; 3:9; 4:2; 2 Tim. 1:3; Titus 1:15; Heb. 9:14; 10:22; 13:18; 1 Pet. 3:16, 21.¶

CONSECRATE

Note: In Heb. 7:28 the verb teleioo is translated “perfected” in the RV, for KJV, “consecrated”; so in 9:18 and 10:20, enkainizo, RV, dedicated. See DEDICATE, PERFECT.

CONSENT

A. Verbs.

1. exomologeō (ἐξομολογέω, 1843), “to agree openly, to acknowledge outwardly, or fully” (ex, “for,” ek, “out,” intensive), is translated “consented” in the RV of Luke 22:6 (KJV, promised). See CONFESS, THANK.

2. epineuo (ἐπινεύω, 1962), lit. “signifies to nod to” (epi, “upon or to,” neuo, “to nod”); hence, “to nod assent, to express approval, consent,” Acts 18:20.

3. proserchomai (προσέρχομαι, 4334), “to come to,” signifies “to consent,” implying a coming to agreement with, in 1 Tim. 6:3. See COME, No. 10.

4. sunkatatithemi (συγκατατίθεμαι, 4784), lit., “to put or lay down together with” (sun, “with,” kata, “down,” tithemi, “to put”), was used of depositing one’s vote in an urn; hence, “to vote for, agree with, consent to.” It is said negatively of Joseph of Arimathea, who had not “consented” to the counsel and deed of the Jews, Luke 23:51 (middle voice).¶

5. sumphemi (σύμφημι, 4852), lit., “to speak with” (sun, “with,” phemi, “to speak”), hence, “to express agreement with,” is used of “consenting” to the Law, agreeing that it is good, Rom. 7:16.¶

6. suneudokeo (συνευδοκέω, 4909), lit., “to think well with” (sun, “with,” eu, “well,” dokeo, “to think”), to take pleasure with others in anything, to approve of, to assent, is used in Luke 11:48, of “consenting” to the evil deeds of predecessors (KJV, “allow”); in Rom. 1:32, of “consenting” in doing evil; in Acts 8:1; 22:20, of “consenting” to the death of another. All these are cases of “consenting” to evil things. In 1 Cor. 7:12-13, it is used of an unbelieving wife’s “consent” to dwell with her converted husband, and of an unbelieving husband’s “consent” to dwell with a believing wife (KJV, “be pleased”; RV, “be content”). See ALLOW, CONTENT, PLEASE.¶

B. Phrases.

1. apo mias, lit., “from one,” is found in Luke 14:18, some word like “consent” being implied; e.g., “with one consent.”¶

2. ek sumphonou, lit., “from (or by) agreement” (sun, “with,” phone, “a sound”), i.e., “by consent,” is found in 1 Cor. 7:5. Cf. AGREE.¶

CONSIDER

1. eidon (Aor. of ὁράω, 3708), used as the aorist tense of horao, “to see,” is translated “to consider” in Acts 15:6, of the gathering of the apostles and elders regarding the question of circumcision in relation to the gospel.

2. suneidon (συνεῖδω, 4894), sun, with, and No. 1, used as the aorist tense of sunorao, to see with one view, to be aware, conscious, as the result of mental perception, is translated “considered” in Acts 12:12, of Peter’s consideration of the circumstances of his deliverance from. See KNOW, PRIVY.

4. noeo (νοιέω, 3539), “to perceive with the mind” (nous), “think about, ponder,” is translated “consider,” only in Paul’s exhortation to Timothy in 2 Tim. 2:7. See PERCEIVE, THINK, UNDERSTAND.

5. katanoeo (κατανοέω, 2657), “to perceive clearly” (kata, intensive, and No. 4), “to understand fully, consider closely,” is used of not “considering” thoroughly the beam in one’s own eye, Matt. 7:3 and Luke 6:41 (KJV, “perceivest”); of carefully “considering” the ravens, Luke 12:24; the lilies, v. 27; of Peter’s full “consideration” of his vision, Acts 11:6; of Abraham’s careful “consideration” of his own body, and Sarah’s womb, as dead, and yet accepting by faith God’s promise, Rom. 4:19 (RV); of “considering” fully the Apostle and High Priest of our confession, Heb. 3:1; of thoughtfully “considering” one another to provoke unto love and good works, Heb. 10:24. It is translated by the verbs “behold,” Acts 7:31-32; Jas. 1:23-24; “perceive,” Luke 20:23; “discover,” Acts 27:39. See BEHOLD, DISCOVER, PERCEIVE.¶

6. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049) signifies “to take account of,” 2 Cor. 10:7 (RV, “consider,” KJV, “think”), the only place where the RV translates it “consider.” See ACCOUNT.

7. theoreo (θεωρέω, 2334): see BEHOLD, No. 6.

8. anatheoreo (ἀναθεωρέω, 333), “to consider carefully”: see BEHOLD, No. 7.

9. analogizomai (ἀναλογίζομαι, 357), “to consider,” occurs in Heb. 12:3.¶

CONSIST

1. eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” is rendered “consist” (lit., “is”) in Luke 12:15.

2. sunistemi (συνιστάω, 4921), sun, “with,” histemi, “to stand,” denotes, in its intransitive sense, “to stand with or fall together, to be constituted, to be compact”; it is said of the universe as upheld by the Lord, Col. 1:17, lit., “by Him all things stand together,” i.e., “consist” (the Latin consisto, “to stand together,” is the exact equivalent of sunistemi). See APPROVE, COMMEND, MAKE, STAND.

CONSOLATION, CONSOLE

A. Nouns.

1. paraklesis (παράκλησις, 3874) is translated “consolation,” in both KJV and RV, in Luke 2:25; 6:24; Acts 15:31; in 1 Cor. 14:3, KJV, “exhortation,” RV, “comfort”; in the following the KJV has “consolation,” the RV, “comfort,” Rom. 15:5; 2 Cor. 1:6-7; 7:7; Phil. 2:1; 2 Thess. 2:16; Philem. 7; in Acts 4:36, RV, “exhortation”; in Heb. 6:18, RV, “encouragement.” See COMFORT.

2. paramuthia (παραμυθία, 3889), “a comfort, consolation”: see COMFORT, A, No. 2.

3. paramuthion (παραμύθιον, 3890), “an encouragement, consolation,” Phil. 2:1, RV, in the phrase “consolation of love.” See COMFORT, A, No. 3.

B. Verb.

paramutheomai (παραμυθέομαι, 3888), “to speak soothingly to,” is translated “console,” John 11:19, RV; in v. 31 “were comforting”; in 1 Thess. 2:11 and 5:14, KJV, “comforted” and “comfort,” RV, “encouraged” and “encourage.”

CONSORT (with)

proskleroo (προσκληρώω, 4345), lit., “to assign by lot” (pros, “to,” kleros, “a lot”), “to allot,” is found in Acts 17:4, “consorted with,” imparting to the passive voice (the form of the verb there) a middle voice significance, i.e., “they joined themselves to,” or “threw in their lot with.” The passive voice significance can be retained by translating (in the stricter sense of the word), “they were allotted” (i.e., by God) to Paul and Silas, as followers or disciples.¶

CONSPIRACY

sunomosia (συνωμοσία, 4945) denotes, lit., “a swearing together” (sun, “with,” omnumi, “to swear”), a “being leagued by oath, and so a conspiracy,” Acts 23:13.¶

For CONSTANTLY see AFFIRM

CONSTRAIN, CONSTRAINT

A. Verbs.

1. anankazo (ἀναγκάζω, 315): see COMPEL, No. 1.

2. parabiazomai (παραβιάζομαι, 3849) primarily denotes “to employ force contrary to nature and right, to compel by using force” (para, “alongside,” intensive, biazo, “to force”), and is used only of “constraining” by intreaty, as the two going to Emmaus did to Christ, Luke 24:29; as Lydia did to Paul and his companions, Acts 16:15.¶

3. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912), “to hold together, confine, secure, to hold fast” (echo, “to have or hold”), “to constrain,” is said (a) of the effect of the word of the Lord upon Paul, Acts 18:5 (KJV, “was pressed in spirit,” RV, “was constrained by the word”); of the effect of the love of Christ, 2 Cor. 5:14; (b) of being taken with a disease, Matt. 4:24; Luke 4:38; Acts 28:8; with fear, Luke 8:37; (c) of thronging or holding in a person, Luke 8:45; being straitened, Luke 12:50; being in a strait betwixt two, Phil. 1:23; keeping a city in on every side, Luke 19:43; keeping a tight hold on a person, as the men who seized the Lord Jesus did, after bringing Him into the High Priest’s house, Luke 22:63; (d) of stopping the ears in refusal to listen, Acts 7:57. Luke uses the word nine times out of its twelve occurrences in the NT See HOLD, KEEP, No. (1), PRESS, SICK (lie), STOP, STRAIT (BE IN A), TAKEN (be), THROG.¶

Note: The verb echo, “to have,” with ananke, “a necessity,” is translated “I was constrained,” in Jude 3, RV (KJV, “it was needful”).

B. Adverb.

anankastos (ἀναγκαστῶς, 317), akin to A, No. 1, “by force, unwillingly, by constraint,” is used in 1 Pet. 5:2.¶

Note: Dapanao, “to expend, be at an expense,” is translated “consume” in the KJV of Jas. 4:3 (RV, “spend”). See SPEND.

CONTAIN

1. choreo (χωρέω, 5562) signifies (a), lit., “to give space, make room” (chora, “a place”); hence, transitively, “to have space or room for a thing, to contain,” said of the waterpots as “containing” a certain quantity, John 2:6; of a space large enough to hold a number of people, Mark 2:2; of the world as not possible of “containing” certain books, John 21:25; (b) “to go,” Matt. 15:17; “to have place,” John 8:37; “to come,” 2 Pet. 3:9; (c) metaphorically, “of receiving with the mind,” Matt. 19:11, 12; or “into the heart,” 2 Cor. 7:2. See COME (No. 24), GO, PLACE, RECEIVE, ROOM.¶

2. periecho (περιέχω, 4023), lit., “to have round” (peri, “around,” echo, “to have”), means “to encompass, enclose, contain,” as a writing contains details, 1 Pet. 2:6. Some mss. have it in Acts 23:25, lit., “having this form” (the most authentic have echo, “to have”). For the secondary meaning, “amazed” (KJV, “astonished”), Luke 5:9 (lit., “amazement encompassed,” i.e., seized, him).¶

Notes: (1) The verb allegoreo in Gal. 4:24, RV, is translated “contain an allegory” (KJV, “are an allegory”), i.e., they apply the facts of the narrative to illustrate principles. (2) In Eph. 2:15 “the law of commandments contained in ordinances” is, lit., “the law of commandments in ordinances.” (3) In Rom. 2:14, the RV, translating literally, has “the things of the Law”; the KJV inserts the words “contained in.” (4) In 1 Cor. 7:9, for the KJV, “if they cannot contain,” see CONTINENCY.

For CONTEMPTIBLE see ACCOUNT No. 6

CONTEND (-ING)

1. athleo (ἀθλέω, 118), “to engage in a contest” (cf. Eng., “athlete”), “to contend in public games,” is used in 2 Tim. 2:5, RV, “contend in the games,” for the KJV, “strive for the masteries.” See STRIVE.¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 9:25, the verb agonizomai, “to strive,” is used in the same connection, RV, “striveth in the games.” Cf. No. 3.

2. diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252), lit., “to separate throughout or wholly” (dia, “asunder,” krino, “to judge,” from a root kri, meaning “separation”), then, to distinguish, decide, signifies, in the middle voice, “to separate oneself from, or to contend with,” as did the circumcisionists with Peter, Acts 11:2; as did Michael with Satan, Jude 9. See RV marg. of v. 22, where the thought may be that of differing in opinion. See DIFFER, DISCERN, DOUBT, JUDGE, PARTIAL, STAGGER, WAVER.

3. epagonizomai (ἐπαγωνίζομαι, 1864) signifies “to contend about a thing, as a combatant” (epi, “upon or about,” intensive, agon, “a contest”), “to contend earnestly,” Jude 3. The word “earnestly” is added to convey the intensive force of the preposition.¶

CONTENT (to be), CONTENTMENT

A. Verb.

1. arkeo (ἀκάνθινος, 174) primarily signifies “to be sufficient, to be possessed of sufficient strength, to be strong, to be enough for a thing”; hence, “to defend, ward off”; in the middle voice, “to be satisfied, contented with,” Luke 3:14, with wages; 1 Tim. 6:8, with food and raiment; Heb. 13:5, with “such things as ye have”; negatively of Diotrophes, in 3 John 10, “not content therewith.” See ENOUGH, SUFFICE, SUFFICIENT.

2. suneudokeo (συνευδοκέω, 4909), in 1 Cor. 7:12-13, RV, signifies “to be content”: see CONSENT, No. 6.

B. Adjectives.

1. autarkes (αὐτάρκης, 842), as found in the papyri writings, means “sufficient in oneself” (autos, “self,” arkeo, “see” A), “self-sufficient, adequate, needing no assistance”; hence, “content,” Phil. 4:11.¶

2. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “sufficient,” used with poieo, “to do,” in Mark 15:15, is translated “to content (the multitude),” i.e., to do sufficient to satisfy them. See ABLE.

C. Noun.

autarkeia (αὐτάρκεια, 841), “contentment, satisfaction with what one has,” is found in 1 Tim. 6:6. For its other meaning “sufficiency,” in 2 Cor. 9:8, see SUFFICIENCY.¶

CONTENTION, CONTENTIOUS

A. Nouns.

1. eris (ἔρις, 2054), “strife, quarrel, especially rivalry, contention, wrangling,” as in the church in Corinth, 1 Cor. 1:11, is translated “contentions in Titus 3:9, KJV. See DEBATE, STRIFE, VARIANCE.

2. paroxusmos (παροξυσμός, 3948), (Eng., “paroxysm”), lit., “a sharpening,” hence “a sharpening of the feeling, or action” (para, “beside,” intensive, oxus, “sharp”), denotes an incitement, a sharp contention, Acts 15:39, the effect of irritation; elsewhere in Heb. 10:24, “provoke,” unto love. See PROVOKE.¶

3. philoneikia (φιλονεικία, 5379), lit., “love of strife” (phileo, “to love,” neikos, “strife”), signifies “eagerness to contend”; hence, a “contention,” said of the disciples, Luke 22:24. Cf. B, 2.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. amachos (ἄμαχος, 269), lit., “not fighting” (a, negative, mache, “a fight, combat, quarrel”), primarily signifying “invincible,” came to mean “not contentious,” 1 Tim. 3:3, RV; Titus 3:2 (KJV, “not a brawler,” “no brawlers”).¶

2. philoneikos (φιλόνηκος, 5380), akin to A, No. 3, is used in 1 Cor. 11:16.¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 3:7, “stubborn.”¶

Notes: (1) Eritheia, “contention,” KJV, in Phil. 1:17, is translated “faction,” in the RV. The phrase hoi ex eritheias, Rom. 2:8, lit., “those of strife,” is rendered “contentious,” in the KJV; RV, factious. See FACTIOUS, STRIFE.

(2) For agon, “a contest,” “contention,” 1 Thess. 2:2, KJV; conflict, RV, see CONFLICT.

CONTINENCY

enkrateuomai (ἐγκρατεύομαι, 1467), en, “in,” kratos, “power, strength,” lit., “to have power over oneself,” is rendered “(if) they have (not) continency” (i.e., are lacking in self-control), in 1 Cor. 7:9, RV; KJV, “can (not) contain”; in 9:25, “is temperate.” See TEMPERATE.¶

CONTINUAL, CONTINUALLY (see also CONTINUE)

A. Adverbial Phrases.

1. eis telos, lit., “unto (the) end,” signifies “continual,” in Luke 18:5, of the importunate widow’s applications to the unrighteous judge; see also Matt. 10:22; 24:13; Mark 13:13; John 13:1; 1 Thess. 2:16. Cf. heos telous, lit., “until the end,” 1 Cor. 1:8; 2 Cor. 1:13;¶ mechri telous, ditto, Heb. 3:6, 14;¶ achri telous, Heb. 6:11; Rev. 2:26.¶

2. dia pantos is used of a “period throughout or during which anything is done”; it is said of the disciples’ “continuance” in the Temple after the ascension of Christ, Luke 24:53; of the regular entrance of the priests into the first tabernacle, Heb. 9:6, RV (KJV “always”); of the constant sacrifice of praise enjoined upon believers, Heb. 13:15. See also Matt. 18:10; Mark 5:5; Acts 10:2; 24:16; Rom. 11:10; 2 Thess. 3:16, “at all times.” (See ALWAYS, No. 3, and Note under No. 3 below).¶

3. eis to dienekes, lit., “unto the carried-through” (dia, “through,” enenka, “to carry”), i.e., unto (the) unbroken “continuance,” is used of the continuous priesthood of Christ, Heb. 7:3, and of the “continual” offering of sacrifices under the Law, Heb. 10:1. It is translated “for ever,” in Heb. 10:12, of the everlasting session of Christ at the right hand of God; and in 10:14, of the everlasting effects of His sacrifice upon “them that are sanctified.” See EVER.¶

Note: No. 2 indicates that a certain thing is done frequently throughout a period; No. 3 stresses the unbroken continuity of what is mentioned.

B. Adjective.

adialeiptos (ἀδιάλειπτος, 88), “continual, unceasing”: see CEASE, B.

CONTINUE, CONTINUANCE

1. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096) signifies (a) “to begin to be” (suggesting origin); (b) “to become” (suggesting entrance on a new state); (c) “to come to pass” (suggesting effect); hence with the meaning (c) it is translated “continued” in Acts 19:10. See ARISE.

2. diateleo (διατελέω, 1300), “to bring through to an end” (dia, “through,” telos, “an end”), “to finish fully” or, when used of time, “continue right through,” is said of “continuing” fasting up to the time mentioned, Acts 27:33.¶

3. meno (μένω, 3306): see ABIDE.

Compounds of meno with this meaning, are as follows:

4. diameno (διαμένω, 1265), “to continue throughout,” i.e., without interruption (No. 3 with dia, “through”), is said of the dumbness of Zacharias, Luke 1:22, KJV, “remained”; of the “continuance” of the disciples with Christ, Luke 22:28; of the permanency of the truth of the gospel with churches, Gal. 2:5; of the unchanged course of things, 2 Pet. 3:4; of the eternal permanency of Christ, Heb. 1:11. See REMAIN.¶

5. emmeno (ἐμμένω, 1696), “to remain in” (en, “in”), is used of “abiding in a house,” Acts 28:30 (in the best mss.); of “continuing” in the faith, Acts 14:22; in the Law, Gal. 3:10; in God’s covenant, Heb. 8:9.¶

6. epimeno (ἐπιμένω, 1961), lit., “to remain on,” i.e., in addition to (epi, “upon,” and No. 3), “to continue long, still to abide,” is used of “continuing” to ask, John 8:7; to knock, Acts 12:16; in the grace of God, 13:43; in sin, Rom. 6:1; in God’s goodness, 11:22; in unbelief, 11:23 (KJV, “abide”); in the flesh, Phil. 1:24; in the faith, Col. 1:23; in doctrine, 1 Tim. 4:16; elsewhere of abiding in a place. See ABIDE, TARRY.

7. parameno (παραμένω, 3887), “to remain by or near” (para, “beside,” and No. 3), hence, “to continue or persevere in anything,” is used of the inability of Levitical priests to “continue,” Heb. 7:23; of persevering in the law of liberty, Jas. 1:25; it is translated “abide” in Phil. 1:25 (2nd clause, in the best mss.), RV [see Note (1)], and in 1 Cor. 16:6 See ABIDE.¶

8. prosmeno (προσμένω, 4357), “to remain with” (pros, “with,” and No. 3), “to continue with a person,” is said of the people with Christ, Matt. 15:32; Mark 8:2 (KJV,

9. proskartereo (προσκαρτερέω, 4342), lit., “to be strong towards” (pros, “towards,” used intensively, and kartereo, “to be strong”), “to endure in, or persevere in, to be continually steadfast with a person or thing,” is used of “continuing” in prayer with others, Acts 1:14; Rom. 12:12; Col. 4:2; in the apostles’ teaching, Acts 2:42; in the Temple, 2:46 (“continuing steadfastly,” RV), the adverb representing the intensive preposition; in prayer and the ministry, 6:4 (RV, “will continue steadfastly”); of Simon Magus with Philip, 8:13. In Mark 3:9 and Acts 10:7, it signifies “to wait on”; in Rom. 13:6, to attend “continually” upon. See ATTEND, INSTANT, WAIT.¶

10. dianuktereuo (διανυκτερεύω, 1273), “to pass the night through” (dia, “through,” nux, “a night”), “to continue all night,” is found in Luke 6:12, of the Lord in spending all night in prayer.¶

Notes: (1) The following are translated by the verb “to continue,” in the KJV, in the places mentioned: diatribo, “to tarry,” (according to inferior mss.) John 11:54; Acts 15:35 (RV, “tarried”); histemi, “to stand,” Acts 26:22 (RV, “stand”); kathizo, “to sit down,” Acts 18:11 (RV, “dwelt”); parateino, “to extend, stretch,” Acts 20:7 (RV, “prolonged”); parameno, “to abide together with,” Phil. 1:25, RV, “abide with”; the KJV, “continue,” translating sumparameno (in some mss.), marks the difference from the preceding meno. See ABIDE, No. 4.

(2) In Rom. 2:7, for KJV, “patient continuance,” the RV has “patience” (lit., “according to patience”).

(3) In Rev. 13:5 poieo, “to do,” is rendered “to continue.”

CONTRADICT, CONTRADICTION

A. Verb.

antilego (ἀντίλεγω, 483), lit., “to speak against” (anti, “against,” lego, “to speak”), is translated “contradict” in Acts 13:45. See ANSWER, GAINSAY, SPEAK (against).

B. Noun.

antilogia (ἀντιλογία, 485), akin to A, is translated “contradiction” in the KJV of Heb. 7:7; 12:3, “dispute,” and “gainsaying.” See DISPUTE, GAINSAY, STRIFE.

CONTRARIWISE

enouantion (ἐναντίον, 5121), for to enantion, “the contrary, on the contrary or contrariwise,” is used in 2 Cor. 2:7; Gal. 2:7; 1 Pet. 3:9.¶

CONTRARY

A. Verb.

antikeimai (ἀντίκειμαι, 480), “to be contrary” (anti, “against,” keimai, “to lie”), Gal. 5:17; 1 Tim. 1:10. See ADVERSARY.

B. Prepositions.

1. para (παρά, 3844), “beside,” has the meaning “contrary to” in Acts 18:13; Rom. 11:24; 16:17; “other than” in Gal. 1:8.

2. apenanti (ἀπέναντι, 561), lit., “from over against, opposite to” (apo, “from,” enantios, “against”), is translated “contrary to” in Acts 17:7; “before” in Matt. 27:24; Rom. 3:18; “over against”; in Matt. 27:61; “in the presence of,” in Acts 3:16.¶

Note: The most authentic mss. have katenanti, “over against,” in Matt. 21:2.

C. Adjectives.

1. enantios (ἐναντίος, 1727), “over against” (en, “in,” antios, “against”), is used primarily of place, Mark 15:39; of an opposing wind, Matt. 14:24; Mark 6:48; Acts 27:4; metaphorically, opposed as an adversary, antagonistic, Acts 26:9; 1 Thess. 2:15; Titus 2:8; Acts 28:17, “against.”¶

2. hupenantios (ὑπεναντίος, 5227), hupo, “under,” and No. 1, opposite to, is used of “that which is contrary to persons,” Col. 2:14, and as a noun, “adversaries,” Heb. 10:27. See ADVERSARY.¶

koinonia (κοινωνία, 2842) is twice rendered “contribution,” Rom. 15:26, and 2 Cor. 9:13, RV, (KJV, “distribution”). See COMMUNION.

CONTROVERSY (without)

homologoumenos (ὁμολογουμένως, 3672), “confessedly, by common consent,” akin to homologeo, “to confess” (homos, “same,” lego, “to speak”), is rendered in 1 Tim. 3:16 “without controversy”; some translate it “confessedly.” See CONFESS, A, No. 1, and B.¶

CONVENIENT, CONVENIENTLY

A. Adjective.

eukairos (εὐκαιρος, 2121), lit., “well-timed” (eu, “well,” kairos, “a time, season”), hence signifies “timely, opportune, convenient”; it is said of a certain day, Mark 6:21; elsewhere, Heb. 4:16, “in time of need.” See NEED.¶ Cf. eukairia, “opportunity,” Matt. 26:16; Luke 22:6;¶ eukaireo, “to have opportunity,” Mark 6:31; Acts 17:21 (“they spent their time,” marg. “had leisure for nothing else”); 1 Cor. 16:12.

See OPPORTUNITY, NEED, C, Note.¶

B. Adverb.

eukairos (εὐκαίρως, 2122), “conveniently,” Mark 14:11, is used elsewhere in 2 Tim. 4:2, “in season.”¶ See SEASON, C.

C. Verbs.

1. aneko (ἀνήκω, 433) is rendered “befitting” in Eph. 5:4, for KJV, “convenient”; so in Philem. 8. See BEFIT.

2. katheko (καθήκω, 2520), “to be fitting,” is so translated in Rom. 1:28, RV; KJV, “(not) convenient”; in Acts 22:22, “it is (not) fit.” See FIT.¶

CONVERSATION

This word is not used in the RV, as it does not now express the meaning of the words so translated in the KJV. These are as follows:

A. Nouns.

1. anastrophe (ἀναστροφή, 391): see BEHAVIOR, B, No. 1.
2. tropos (τρόπος, 5158), “a turning, a manner,” is translated simply “be ye,” RV in Heb. 13:5, instead of “let your conversation be.” See MANNER, MEANS, WAY.
3. politeuma (πολίτευμα, 4175): see CITIZENSHIP, No. 4.

B. Verbs.

1. anastrepho (ἀναστρέφω, 390): see BEHAVE, A, No. 1.
2. politeuo (πολιτεύομαι, 4176): see CITIZENSHIP, No. 4, Note.

CONVERT, CONVERSION

A. Verbs.

1. strephe (στρέφω, 4762), “to turn,” is translated “be converted” in Matt. 18:3, KJV. See TURN.
2. epistrephe (ἐπιστρέφω, 1994), “to turn about, turn towards” (epi, “towards” and No. 1), is used transitively, and so rendered “convert” (of causing a person to turn) in Jas. 5:19-20. Elsewhere, where the KJV translates this verb, either in the middle voice and intransitive use, or the passive, the RV adheres to the middle voice significance, and translates by “turn again,” Matt. 13:15; Mark 4:12; Luke 22:32; Acts 3:19; 28:27. See COME (again), Note (4), GO (again), RETURN, TURN.

B. Noun.

epistrophe (ἐπιστροφή, 1995), akin to A, No. 2, “a turning about, or round, conversion,” is found in Acts 15:3. The word implies “a turning from and a turning to”; corresponding to these are repentance and faith; cf. “turned to God from idols” (1 Thess. 1:9). Divine grace is the efficient cause, human agency the responding effect.¶

ekneuo (ἐκνεύω, 1593), primarily, “to bend to one side, to turn aside”; then “to take oneself away, withdraw,” is found in John 5:13, of Christ’s “conveying” Himself away from one place to another. Some have regarded the verb as having the same meaning as ekneo, “to escape,” as from peril, “slip away secretly”; but the Lord did not leave the place where He had healed the paralytic in order to escape danger, but to avoid the applause of the throng.¶

CONVICT (including the KJV, “convince”)

1. elencho (ἐλέγχω, 1651) signifies (a) “to convict, confute, refute,” usually with the suggestion of putting the convicted person to shame; see Matt. 18:15, where more than telling the offender his fault is in view; it is used of “convicting” of sin, John 8:46; 16:8; gainsayers in regard to the faith, Titus 1:9; transgressors of the Law, Jas. 2:9; some texts have the verb in John 8:9; (b) “to reprove,” 1 Cor. 14:24, RV (for KJV, “convince”), for the unbeliever is there viewed as being reproved for, or “convicted” of, his sinful state; so in Luke 3:19; it is used of reproving works, John 3:20; Eph. 5:11, 13; 1 Tim. 5:20; 2 Tim.

4:2; Titus 1:13; 2:15; all these speak of reproof by word of mouth. In Heb. 12:5 and Rev. 3:19, the word is used of reproving by action. See FAULT, REBUKE, REPROVE.¶

2. exelencho (ἐξελέγχω, 1827), an intensive form of No. 1, “to convict thoroughly,” is used of the Lord’s future “conviction” of the ungodly, Jude 15.¶

Note: For diakatelencho, “to confute powerfully in disputation,” Acts 18:28 (KJV, “convinced”), see CONFUTE.¶

COOL

katapsucho (καταψύχω, 2711), Luke 16:24, denotes “to cool off, make cool” (kata, “down,” psucho, “to cool”).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 18:4.¶

For COPPERSMITH see under BRASS

COPY

hupodeigma (ὑπόδειγμα, 5262), from hupo, “under,” deiknumi, “to show,” properly denotes “what is shown below or privately”; it is translated “example,” Heb. 8:5, KJV (RV, “copy”). It signifies (a) a sign suggestive of anything, the delineation or representation of a thing, and so, a figure, “copy”; in Heb. 9:23 the RV has “copies,” for the KJV, “patterns”; (b) an example for imitation, John 13:15; Jas. 5:10; for warning, Heb. 4:11; 2 Pet. 2:6 (KJV “ensample”). See EXAMPLE, PATTERN.¶

Note: Cf. hupogrammos (hupo, “under,” grapho, “to write”), “an underwriting, a writing copy, an example,” is used in 1 Pet. 2:21.

korban (κορβάν, 2878) signifies (a) “an offering,” and was a Hebrew term for any sacrifice, whether by the shedding of blood or otherwise; (b) “a gift offered to God,” Mark 7:11.¶ Jews were much addicted to rash vows; a saying of the rabbis was, “It is hard for the parents, but the law is clear, vows must be kept.” The Sept. translates the word by doron, “a gift.” See korbanas, under TREASURY, Matt. 27:6.¶

CORD

schoinion (σχοινίον, 4979), “a cord or rope,” a diminutive of schoinos, “a rush, bulrush,” meant a “cord” made of rushes; it denotes (a) “a small cord,” John 2:15 (plural), (b) “a rope,” Acts 27:32 See ROPE.¶

CORN, CORNFIELD

1. sitos (σίτος, 4621), “wheat, corn”; in the plural, “grain,” is translated “corn” in Mark 4:28; “wheat,” Matt. 3:12; 13:25, 29-30; Luke 3:17; 12:18 (some mss. have genemata, “fruits,” here); 16:7; 22:31; John 12:24; Acts 27:38; 1 Cor. 15:37; Rev. 6:6; 18:13. See WHEAT.¶

2. sition (σίτος, 4621*), “corn, grain,” a diminutive of No. 1, is found in Acts 7:12.¶

3. sporimos (σπόριμος, 4702), lit., “sown, or fit for sowing” (speiro “to sow, scatter seed”), denotes, in the plural, “sown fields, fields of grain, cornfields,” Matt. 12:1, RV; Mark 2:23; Luke 6:1 (cf. spora, 1 Pet. 1:23,¶ and sporos, “seed”).¶

4. stachus (στάχυς, 4719) means “an ear of grain,” Matt. 12:1; Mark 2:23; 4:28; Luke 6:1. Cf. the name Stachys in Rom. 16:9.¶

Notes: (1) Aloao, “to thresh,” from alon, “a threshing-floor,” is translated “treadeth out (the) corn,” in 1 Cor. 9:9-10 and 1 Tim. 5:18. Cf. THRESH, TREAD.¶

(2) Kokkos, “a grain” (its regular meaning), is translated “corn” in the KJV of John 12:24 (RV, “grain”). See GRAIN.

CORNER, CORNERSTONE

1. gonia (γωνία, 1137), “an angle” (Eng., “coign”), signifies (a) “an external angle,” as of the “corner” of a street, Matt. 6:5; or of a building, 21:42; Mark 12:10; Luke 20:17; Acts 4:11; 1 Pet. 2:7, “the corner stone or head-stone of the corner” (see below); or the four extreme limits of the earth, Rev. 7:1; 20:8; (b) “an internal corner,” a secret place, Acts 26:26. See QUARTER.¶

2. arche (ἀρχή, 746), “a beginning” (its usual meaning), “first in time, order, or place,” is used to denote the extremities or “corners” of a sheet, Acts 10:11; 11:5. See BEGINNING.

Note: For the adjective akrogoniaios (from akros, “extreme, highest,” and No. 1), “a chief corner stone,” see CHIEF. They were laid so as to give strength to the two walls with which they were connected. So Christ unites Jew and Gentile, Eph. 2:20; again, as one may carelessly stumble over the “corner stone,” when turning the “corner,” so Christ proved a stumbling stone to Jews, 1 Pet. 2:6.

CORPSE

ptoma (πτῶμα, 4430): see BODY, No. 3.

CORRECT, CORRECTION, CORRECTOR, CORRECTING

A. Nouns.

1. diorthoma (διόρθωσις, 1357v) signifies “a reform, amendment, correction,” lit., “a making straight” (dia, “through,” orthoo, “to make straight”). In Acts 24:2, lit., “reformations come about (or take place, lit., ‘become’),” the RV has “evils are corrected,” KJV, “worthy deeds are done”; there is no word for “worthy” or for “deeds” in the original. Some texts have katorthoma, which has the same meaning.¶ See diorthosis, “reformation,” Heb. 9:10.¶

2. epanorthosis (ἐπανόρθωσις, 1882), lit., “a restoration to an upright or right state” (epi, “to,” ana, “up, or again,” and orthoo, see No. 1), hence, “correction,” is used of the Scripture in 2 Tim. 3:16, referring to improvement of life and character.¶

3. paideutes (παιδευτής, 3810) has two meanings, corresponding to the two meanings of the verb paideuo (see below) from which it is derived, (a) “a teacher, preceptor, corrector,” Rom. 2:20 (KJV, “instructor”), (b) “a chastiser,” Heb. 12:9, rendered “to chasten” (KJV, “which corrected”; lit., “chastisers”). See INSTRUCTOR.¶

paideuo (ἀνάπτω, 381), “to train up a child” (pais), is rendered “correcting in 2 Tim. 2:25, RV, KJV, “instructing.” See CHASTEN.

CORRUPT, verb and adjective. CORRUPTION, CORRUPTIBLE, INCORRUPTION, INCORRUPTIBLE

A. Verbs.

1. kapeleuo (καπηλεύω, 2585) primarily signifies “to be a retailer, to peddle, to hucksterize” (from kapelos, “an inn-keeper, a petty retailer, especially of wine, a huckster, peddler,” in contrast to emporos, “a merchant”); hence, “to get base gain by dealing in anything,” and so, more generally, “to do anything for sordid personal advantage.” It is found in 2 Cor. 2:17, with reference to the ministry of the gospel. The significance can be best ascertained by comparison and contrast with the verb doloo in 4:2 (likewise there only in the NT), “to handle deceitfully.” The meanings are not identical. While both involve the deceitful dealing of adulterating the word of truth, kapeleuo has the broader significance of doing so in order to make dishonest gain. Those to whom the apostle refers in 2:17 are such as make merchandise of souls through covetousness (cf. Titus 1:11; 2 Pet. 2:3, 14-15; Jude 11, 16; Ezek. 13:19); accordingly “hucksterizing” would be the most appropriate rendering in this passage, while “handling deceitfully” is the right meaning in 4:2. See Trench, Syn. Sec. lxii.¶ In Isa. 1:22, the Sept. has “thy wine-merchants” (kapeloi, “hucksterizer”).¶

2. phtheiro (φθείρω, 5351) signifies “to destroy by means of corrupting,” and so “bringing into a worse state”; (a) with this significance it is used of the effect of evil company upon the manners of believers, and so of the effect of association with those who deny the truth and hold false doctrine, 1 Cor. 15:33 (this was a saying of the pagan poet Menander, which became a well known proverb); in 2 Cor. 7:2, of the effects of dishonorable dealing by bringing people to want (a charge made against the apostle); in 11:3, of the effects upon the minds (or thoughts) of believers by “corrupting” them “from the simplicity and the purity that is toward Christ”; in Eph. 4:22, intransitively, of the old nature in waxing “corrupt,” “morally decaying, on the way to final ruin” (Moule), “after the lusts of deceit”; in Rev. 19:2, metaphorically, of the Babylonish harlot, in “corrupting” the inhabitants of the earth by her false religion.

3. diaphtheiro (διαφθείρω, 1311), dia, “through,” intensive, and No. 2, “to corrupt utterly, through and through,” is said of men “corrupted in mind,” whose wranglings result from the doctrines of false teachers, 1 Tim. 6:5 (the KJV wrongly renders it as an adjective, “corrupt”). It is translated “destroyeth” instead of “corrupteth,” in the RV of Luke 12:33, of the work of a moth, in Rev. 8:9, of the effect of divine judgments hereafter upon navigation; in 11:18, of the divine retribution of destruction upon those who have destroyed the earth; in 2 Cor. 4:16 it is translated “is decaying,” said of the human body. See DESTROY, PERISH.¶

4. kataphtheiro (καταφθείρω, 2704), kata, “down,” intensive, and No. 2, is said of men who are reprobate concerning the faith, “corrupted in mind” (KJV, “corrupt”), 2 Tim. 3:8. For 2 Pet. 2:12, RV, “shall be destroyed,” see No. 2.¶

5. sepo (σήπω, 4595) signifies “to make corrupt, to destroy”; in the passive voice with middle sense, “to become corrupt or rotten, to perish,” said of riches, Jas. 5:2, of the gold and silver of the luxurious rich who have ground down their laborers. The verb is derived from a root signifying “to rot off, drop to pieces.”¶

6. aphanizo (ἀφανίζω, 853): see CONSUME, No. 3.

B. Nouns.

1. phthora (φθορά, 5356), connected with phtheiro, No. 2, above, signifies “a bringing or being brought into an inferior or worse condition, a destruction or corruption.” It is used (a) physically, (1) of the condition of creation, as under bondage, Rom. 8:21; (2) of the effect of the withdrawal of life, and so of the condition of the human body in burial, 1 Cor. 15:42; (3) by metonymy, of anything which is liable to “corruption,” 1 Cor. 15:50; (4) of the physical effects of merely gratifying the natural desires and ministering to one’s own needs or lusts, Gal. 6:8, to the flesh in contrast to the Spirit, “corruption” being antithetic to “eternal life”; (5) of that which is naturally short-lived and transient, Col. 2:22, “perish”; (b) of the death and decay of beasts, 2 Pet. 2:12, RV, “destroyed” (first part of verse; lit., “unto ... destruction”); (c) ethically, with a moral significance, (1) of the effect of lusts, 2 Pet. 1:4; (2) of the effect upon themselves of the work of false and immoral teachers, 2 Pet. 2:12, RV, “destroying”; KJV, “corruption,” and verse 19. See DESTROY, PERISH.¶

Note: There is nothing in any of these words suggesting or involving annihilation.

2. diaphthora (διαφθορά, 1312), an intensified form of No. 1, “utter or thorough corruption,” referring in the NT to physical decomposition and decay, is used six times, five of which refer, negatively, to the body of God’s “Holy One,” after His death, which body, by reason of His absolute holiness, could not see “corruption,” Acts 2:27, 31; 13:34-35, 37; once it is used of a human body, that of David, which, by contrast, saw “corruption,” Acts 13:36.¶

3. aphtharsia (ἀφθαρσία, 861), “incorruption,” a, negative, with A, No. 2, is used (a) of the resurrection body, 1 Cor. 15:42, 50, 53-54; (b) of a condition associated with glory and honor and life, including perhaps a moral significance, Rom. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:10; this is wrongly translated “immortality” in the KJV; (c) of love to Christ, that which is sincere and undiminishing, Eph. 6:24 (translated “uncorruptness”). See IMMORTALITY, SINCERITY.¶

Note: For Titus 2:7 (where some texts have aphtharsia), see No. 4.

4. aphthoria (φθορά, 5356d), similar to No. 3, “uncorruptness, free from (moral) taint,” is said of doctrine, Titus 2:7 (some texts have adiaphthoria, the negative form of No. 2, above).¶

C. Adjectives.

1. phthartos (φθαρτός, 5349), “corruptible,” akin to A, No. 2, is used (a) of man as being mortal, liable to decay (in contrast to God), Rom. 1:23; (b) of man’s body as death-doomed, 1 Cor. 15:53-54; (c) of a crown of reward at the Greek games, 1 Cor. 9:25; (d) of silver and gold, as specimens or “corruptible” things, 1 Pet. 1:18; (e) of natural seed, 1 Pet. 1:23.¶

2. aphartos (ἄφθαρτος, 862), “not liable to corruption or decay, incorruptible” (a, negative, and A, No. 2), is used of (a) God, Rom. 1:23; 1 Tim. 1:17 (KJV, “immortal”); (b) the raised dead, 1 Cor. 15:52; (c) rewards given to the saints hereafter, metaphorically described as a “crown,” 1 Cor. 9:25; (d) the eternal inheritance of the saints, 1 Pet. 1:4; (e) the Word of God, as “incorruptible” seed, 1 Pet. 1:23; (f) a meek and quiet spirit, metaphorically spoken of as “incorruptible” apparel, 1 Pet. 3:4. See IMMORTAL.¶

3. sapros (σαπρός, 4550), “corrupt,” akin to sepo, A, No. S; see BAD, No. 3.

Note: (1) Trench, Syn. Sec.lxviii, contrasts this with amarantos, and amarantinos, “unwithering, not fading away,” 1 Pet. 1:4; 5:4. These are, however, distinct terms (see FADE) and are not strictly synonymous, though used in the same description of the heavenly inheritance.

COST, COSTLINESS, COSTLY

A. Nouns.

1. dapane (δαπάνη, 1160), “expense, cost” (from dapto, “to tear”; from a root dap□ meaning “to divide”), is found in Luke 14:28, in the Lord’s illustration of counting the “cost” of becoming His disciple. Cf. dapanao, “to spend,” and its compounds, under CHARGE, SPEND.¶

2. timiotēs (τιμιότης, 5094), “costliness” (from timios, “valued at great price, precious”; see No. 3, below), is connected with time, “honor, price,” and used in Rev. 18:19, in reference to Babylon.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. timios (τίμιος, 5093), akin to A, No. 2, is translated “costly” in 1 Cor. 3:12, of “costly” stones, in a metaphorical sense (KJV, “precious”). Cf. Rev. 17:4; 18:12, 16; 21:19. See DEAR, HONORABLE, PRECIOUS, REPUTATION.

2. poluteles (πολυτελής, 4185), primarily, “the very end or limit” (from polus, “much,” telos, “revenue”), with reference to price, of highest “cost,” very expensive, is said of spikenard, Mark 14:3; raiment, 1 Tim. 2:9; metaphorically, of a meek and quiet spirit, 1 Pet. 3:4, “of great price”; cf. No. 1 and A, No. 2, above. See PRECIOUS, PRICE.¶

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

3. polutimos (πολύτιμος, 4186), lit., “of great value” (see A, No. 2 and B, No. 1), is used of a pearl, Matt. 13:46; of spikenard, John 12:3 (RV, “very precious,” KJV “very costly”). See PRICE.¶ The comparative polutimo (v.l.io) teros, “much more precious,” is used in 1 Pet. 1:7.¶

COUCH

1. klinidion (κλινίδιον, 2826), “a small bed,” a diminutive form of kline, “a bed” (from klino, “to incline, recline”), is used in Luke 5:19, 24 of the “bed” (kline, in v. 18) on which the palsied man was brought. See BED.¶

2. krabbatos (κράββατος, 2895): see BED, No. 4.

COULD

1. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have,” is rendered “could” in Mark 14:8, “she hath done what she could,” lit., “she hath done what she had.” See HAVE.

2. ischuo (ἰσχύω, 2480), “to have strength,” is translated in Mark 14:37 “couldst thou not.” See ABLE.

Notes: (1) Emblepo in Acts 22:11, lit., “I was not seeing,” is translated “I could not see.” See BEHOLD.

(2) See CAN, when not used as part of another verb.

COUNCIL, COUNCILLOR

1. sumboulion (συμβούλιον, 4824), “a uniting in counsel” (sun, “together,” boule, “counsel, advice”), denotes (a) “counsel” which is given, taken and acted upon, e.g., Matt. 12:14, RV, “took counsel,” for KJV, “held a council”; 22:15; hence (b) “a council,” an assembly of counsellors or persons in consultation, Acts 25:12, of the “council” with which Festus conferred concerning Paul. The governors and procurators of provinces had a board of advisers or assessors, with whom they took “counsel,” before pronouncing judgment. See CONSULTATION.

2. sunedrion (συνέδριον, 4892), properly, “a settling together” (sun, “together,” hedra, “a seat”), hence, (a) “any assembly or session of persons deliberating or adjusting,” as in the Sept. of Ps. 26:4 (lit., “with a council of vanity”); Prov. 22:10; Jer. 15:17, etc.; in the NT, e.g., Matt. 10:17; Mark 13:9; John 11:47, in particular, it denoted (b) “the Sanhedrin,” the Great Council at Jerusalem, consisting of 71 members, namely, prominent members of the families of the high priest, elders and scribes. The Jews trace the origin of this to Num. 11:16. The more important causes came up before this tribunal. The Roman rulers of Judea permitted the Sanhedrin to try such cases, and even to pronounce sentence of death, with the condition that such a sentence should be valid only if confirmed by the Roman procurator. In John 11:47, it is used of a meeting of the Sanhedrin; in Acts 4:15, of the place of meeting.

3. bouleutes (βουλευτής, 1010): Joseph of Arimathaea is described as “a counsellor of honorable estate,” Mark 15:43, RV; cf. Luke 23:50 (not as KJV, “counsellor”).¶

COUNSEL

For COUNSELLOR see above.

A. Nouns.

1. boule (βουλή, 1012): see under ADVICE.
2. sumboulos (σύμβουλος, 4825), “a councillor with,” occurs in Rom. 11:34.¶

B. Verbs.

1. bouleuo (βουλεύω, 1011), “to take counsel, to resolve,” is used in the middle voice in the NT, “took counsel” in Acts 5:33, KJV (RV translates boulomai); both in 27:39; in Luke 14:31, RV “take counsel” (KJV, “consulteth”); in John 11:53, KJV and RV (so the best mss.); 12:10, RV, “took counsel,” for KJV, “consulted”; in 2 Cor. 1:17 (twice), “purpose.” See CONSULT, MINDED, PURPOSE.¶

2. sumbouleuo (συμβουλεύω, 4823), in the active voice, “to advise, to counsel,” John 18:14, “gave counsel”; in Rev. 3:18, “I counsel”; in the middle voice, “to take counsel, consult,” Matt. 26:4, RV, “took counsel together,” for KJV, “consulted”; Acts 9:23, “took counsel” (RV adds “together”); in some mss. John 11:53. See CONSULT.¶

COUNT

1. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have, to hold”; then, “to hold in the mind, to regard, to count,” has this significance in Matt. 14:5, “they counted Him as a prophet”; Philem. 17, “If then thou countest me a partner”; Mark 11:32, KJV, (RV, “hold”); Acts 20:24, KJV. See ABLE.

2. hegeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233), primarily, “to lead the way”; hence, “to lead before the mind, account,” is found with this meaning in Phil. 2:3, RV (KJV, “esteem”); 2:6, RV (KJV, “thought”); 2:25 (KJV, “supposed”); Phil. 3:7-8; 2 Thess. 3:15; 1 Tim. 1:12; 6:1; Heb. 10:29; Jas. 1:2; Heb. 11:11 (KJV, “judged”); 2 Pet. 2:13; 3:9. See ACCOUNT.

3. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049), “to reckon,” is rendered “count” in 2 Cor. 10:2, RV (KJV, “think”); “counted” in the KJV of Rom. 2:26; 4:3, 5; 9:8 (RV, “reckoned”).

4. psephizo (ψηφίζω, 5585), akin to psephos, “a stone,” used in voting, occurs in Luke 14:28; Rev. 13:18.¶

5. sumpsephizo (συμψηφίζω, 4860), “to count up,” occurs in Acts 19:19.¶

Note: In Jas. 5:11, makarizo, “to pronounce blessed,” is rendered “count ... happy,” KJV (RV, “call ...”). For kataxioo see ACCOUNT, No. 5. For “descent is counted” see GENEALOGY.

COUNTENANCE

1. opsis (ὄψις, 3799): only Rev. 1:16 has “countenance.” See APPEARANCE.

2. prosopon (πρόσωπον, 4383), is translated “countenance” in Luke 9:29; Acts 2:28, and in the KJV of 2 Cor. 3:7 (RV, “face”). See APPEARANCE.

3. eidea (ἰδέα, 2397), akin to eidon, “to see: see APPEARANCE.”

Notes: (1) In Acts 13:24 prosopon is translated “before” (lit., “before the presence of His coming”).

(2) Skuthropos, “of a sad countenance” (skuthros, “gloomy, sad,” ops, “an eye”), is used in Matt. 6:16 and Luke 24:17, “sad.”

(3) Stugnazo, “to be or become hateful, gloomy, in aspect,” is translated “his countenance fell,” Mark 10:22, RV (KJV, “he was sad”). It is used of the heaven or sky in Matt. 16:3, “lowring.” See LOWRING.¶

COUNTRY

A. Nouns.

1. agros (ἄγρός, 68) denotes “a field, especially a cultivated field”; hence, “the country” in contrast to the town (Eng., “agrarian, agriculture”), e.g., Mark 5:14, 6:36; 15:21; 16:12; Luke 8:34; 9:12 (plural, lit., “fields”); 23:26; a piece of ground, e.g., Mark 10:29; Acts 4:37. See FARM.

2. patris (πατρίς, 3968) primarily signifies “one’s fatherland, native country, of one’s own town,” Matt. 13:54, 57; Mark 6:1, 4; Luke 4: 23-24; John 4:44; Heb. 11:14.¶

3. chora (χώρα, 5561) properly denotes “the space lying between two limits or places”; accordingly it has a variety of meanings: “country,” Matt. 2:12; 8:28; Mark 1:5, RV (KJV, “land”); 5:1, 10; Luke 2:8; 8:26; 15:13-14, RV (KJV, land), 15; 19:12; 21:21; Acts 10:39, RV (KJV, “land”); 12:20; 26:20, RV (KJV, “coasts”); 27:27; in Mark 6:55 (in the best mss.) and Acts 18:23, RV, region. See COAST, FIELD, GROUND, LAND, REGION.

4. perichoros (περίχωρος, 4066), peri, “around,” and No. 3, signifies “country round about,” Luke 8:37; “country about,” Luke 3:3, KJV (RV, “region round about”); in Matt. 14:35 and Luke 4:37, KJV, “country round about” (RV, “region round about”); Matt. 3:5; Mark 1:28; Luke 4:14; 7:17; Acts 14:6. See REGION.¶

5. meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part,” is rendered “country” in Acts 19:1, RV.

Note: Some inferior mss. have No. 4 in Mark 6:55, for No. 3.

B. Adjectives.

1. anoterikos (ἄνωτερικός, 510), “upper,” is used in the plural in Acts 19:1, to denote “upper regions,” with KJV, “coast,” RV, “country,” i.e., the high central plateau, in contrast to the roundabout way by the river through the valley. See COAST.¶

2. oreinos (ὄρεινός, 3714), “hilly” (from oros, “a hill, mountain”), is translated “hill country” in Luke 1:39, 65.¶

C. Verb.

apodemeo (ἀποδημέω, 589) signifies “to go or travel into a far country,” lit., “to be away from one’s people” (apo, “from,” demos, “a people”), Matt. 21:33; 25:14; in v. 15 the verb is translated in the RV, “went on his journey” (KJV, “took his journey”); Mark 12:1; Luke 20:9, “went into another country,” RV. In Luke 15:13 both versions translate by “took his journey” (“into a far country” being separately expressed); see JOURNEY.¶

Cf. apodemosis, lit., “away from one’s own people, gone abroad,” Mark 13:34.¶

Notes: (1) Ge, “earth, land,” is translated “country” in the KJV of Matt. 9:31 and Acts 7:3; RV, land. See LAND.

(2) Genos, “a race,” is mistranslated “country” in the KJV of Acts 4:36 (RV, “by race”). See below.

COUNTRYMEN

1. genos (γένος, 1085) properly denotes “an offspring”; then, “a family”; then, “a race, nation; otherwise, a kind or species”; it is translated “countrymen,” in 2 Cor. 11:26, in Paul’s reference to his fellow-nationals; so in Gal. 1:14, RV, for KJV, “nation. See BEGET.

2. sumphuletes (συμφυλέτης, 4853), lit., “a fellow-tribesman” (sun, “with,” phule, “a tribe, race, nation, people”), hence, one who is of the same people, a fellow-countryman, is found in 1 Thess. 2:14.¶

COUPLED

Note: The word “coupled” is inserted in italics in 1 Pet. 3:2, the more adequately to express the original, which is, lit., “your chaste behavior in fear.”

COURAGE

tharsos (θάρος, 2294), akin to tharseo, “to be of good cheer,” is found in Acts 28:15.¶

B. Verb.

tharreo (θαρρέω, 2292) is translated by some form of the verb “to be of good courage,” in the RV in five of the six places where it is used: 2 Cor. 5:6, “being of good courage” (KJV, “we are ... confident”); 5:8, “we are of good courage” (KJV, “we are confident”); 7:16, “I am of good courage” (KJV, “I have confidence”); 10:1, “I am of good courage” (KJV, “I am bold”); 10:2, “show courage” (KJV, “be bold”); Heb. 13:6, “with good courage,” lit., “being of good courage” (KJV, “boldly”). See BOLD, CONFIDENCE.¶

Note: Tharreo is a later form of tharseo. Cf. tolmao, “to be bold.”

COURSE

A. Nouns.

1. aion (αἰών, 165), “an age” (see AGE), is sometimes wrongly spoken of as a “dispensation,” which does not mean a period of time, but a mode of dealing. It is translated “course” in Eph. 2:2, “the course of this world,” i.e., the cycle or present round of things. See AGE, ETERNAL, EVER, WORLD.

2. dromos (δρόμος, 1408), properly, “a running, a race” (from edramon, “to run”), hence, metaphorically, denotes “a career, course of occupation, or of life,” viewed in a special aspect, Acts 13:25; 20:24; 2 Tim. 4:7.¶

3. ephemeria (ἐφημερία, 2183), primarily, “daily service,” as, e.g., in the Sept. of 2 Chron. 13:11 (from epi, “upon, or by,” hemera, “a day,” Eng., “ephemeral”), hence denoted a “class,” or “course,” into which the priests were divided for the daily service in the Temple, each “class” serving for seven days (see 1 Chron. 9:25). In the NT it is used in Luke 1:5, 8.¶

Note: Cf. ephemeros, “daily (food),” Jas. 2:15.¶

4. trochos (τροχός, 5164), “a wheel,” is translated “wheel” in Jas. 3:6, RV, with metaphorical reference to the round of human activity (KJV, “course”), as a glowing axle would set on fire the whole wooden wheel.¶

B. Verb.

choreo (χωρέω, 5562), “to make room for, to go forward,” is rendered “hath not free course,” in John 8:37, RV (KJV, “hath no place”). See COME, No. 24.

Notes: (1) Connected with dromos, A, No. 2, is euthudromeo, “to make (or run) a straight course” (euthus, “straight”), Acts 16:11 and 21:1.¶ (2) In 2 Thess. 3:1, trecho, “to run” (RV), is translated “have free course” (KJV).¶ (3) In 1 Cor. 14:27, ana meros, “by turn,” “in turn” (RV), is rendered “by course” (KJV). (4) For ploos, “a sailing or voyage, course,” Acts 21:7, KJV (RV, voyage), see VOYAGE.

COURT

1. agoraios (ἀγοραίος, 60) is an adjective, “signifying pertaining to the agora, any place of public meeting, and especially where trials were held,” Acts 19:38; the RV translates the sentence “the courts are open”; a more literal rendering is “court days are kept.” In Acts 17:5 it is translated in the RV, “rabble”; KJV, “baser sort,” lit., “frequenter of the markets.” See BASER.¶

2. aule (αὐλή, 833), primarily, “an uncovered space around a house, enclosed by a wall, where the stables were,” hence was used to describe (a) “the courtyard of a house”; in the OT it is used of the “courts” of the tabernacle and Temple; in this sense it is found in the NT in Rev. 11:2; (b) “the courts in the dwellings of well-to-do folk,” which usually had two, one exterior, between the door and the street (called the proaulion, or “porch,” Mark 14:68.¶), the other, interior, surrounded by the buildings of the dwellings, as in Matt. 26:69 (in contrast to the room where the judges were sitting); Mark 14:66; Luke 22:55; KJV, “hall”; RV “court” gives the proper significance, Matt. 26:3, 58; Mark 14:54; 15:16 (RV, “Praetorium”); Luke 11:21; John 18:15. It is here to be distinguished from the Praetorium, translated “palace.” See HALL, PALACE. For the other meaning “sheepfold,” John 10:1, 16, see FOLD.¶

3. basileion (βασιλείον, 933), an adjective meaning “royal,” signifies, in the neuter plural, “a royal palace,” translated “kings’ courts” in Luke 7:25; in the singular, 1 Pet. 2:9, “royal.” See ROYAL.¶

COURTEOUS, COURTEOUSLY

A. Adjective.

tapeinophron, “lowlyminded,” is used in 1 Pet. 3:8, “be courteous,” KJV (RV, “humble-minded”).¶

B. Adverbs.

1. philophronos (φιλοφρόνως, 5390), lit., “friendly,” or, more fully, “with friendly thoughtfulness” (philos, “friend,” phren, “the mind”), is found in Acts 28:7, of the hospitality showed by Publius to Paul and his fellow-shipwrecked travelers.¶

Note: Some mss. have the corresponding adjective philophron, “courteous,” in 1 Pet. 3:8; the most authentic mss. have tapeinophron, “humble-minded.”

2. philanthropos (φιλανθρωπος, 5364) is translated “courteously” in Acts 27:3, KJV; RV, “kindly” (Eng., “philanthropically”). See KINDLY.¶

COUSIN

1. anepsios (ἀνέψιος, 431), in Col. 4:10 denotes a “cousin” rather than a nephew (KJV, “sister’s son”). “Cousin” is its meaning in various periods of Greek writers.¶ In this sense it is used in the Sept., in Num. 36:11.¶ In later writings it denotes a nephew; hence the KJV rendering. As Lightfoot says, there is no reason to suppose that the apostle would have used it in any other than its proper sense. We are to understand, therefore, that Mark was the cousin of Barnabas. See SISTER.

2. sungenis (συγγενής, 4773v), in Luke 1:36 (so in the most authentic mss.) and sungenes in v. 58 (plural), KJV, “cousin” and “cousins,” respectively signify “kinswoman” and “kinsfolk,” (RV); so the RV and KJV in 2:44 and 21:16. The word lit. signifies “born with,” i.e., of the same stock, or descent; hence “kinsman, kindred.” See KIN, KINSFOLK, KINSWOMAN.

COVENANT (Noun and Verb)

diatheke (διαθήκη, 1242) primarily signifies “a disposition of property by will or otherwise.” In its use in the Sept., it is the rendering of a Hebrew word meaning a “covenant” or agreement (from a verb signifying “to cut or divide,” in allusion to a sacrificial custom in connection with “covenant-making,” e.g., Gen. 15:10, “divided” Jer. 34:18-19). In contradistinction to the English word “covenant” (lit., “a coming together”), which signifies a mutual undertaking between two parties or more, each binding himself to fulfill obligations, it does not in itself contain the idea of joint obligation, it mostly signifies an obligation undertaken by a single person. For instance, in Gal. 3:17 it is used as an alternative to a “promise” (vv. 16-18). God enjoined upon Abraham the rite of circumcision, but His promise to Abraham, here called a “covenant,” was not conditional upon the observance of circumcision, though a penalty attached to its nonobservance.

“This covenant is called the ‘new,’ Heb. 9:15, the ‘second,’ 8:7, the ‘better,’ 7:22. In Heb. 9:16-17, the translation is much disputed. There does not seem to be any sufficient reason for departing in these verses from the word used everywhere else. The English word ‘Testament’ is taken from the titles prefixed to the Latin Versions.”*.¶ See TESTAMENT.

B. Verb.

suntithemi (συντίθεμαι, 4934), lit., “to put together,” is used only in the middle voice in the NT, and, means “to determine, agree,” John 9:22 and Acts 23:20; “to assent,” Acts 24:9; “to covenant,” Luke 22:5. See AGREE, ASSENT.¶

Note: In Matt. 26:15 the KJV translates histemi, “to place (in the balances),” i.e., to weigh, “they covenanted with”; RV, “they weighed unto.”

COVENANT-BREAKERS

asunthetos (ἄσύνθετος, 802), from suntithemi (see above), with the negative prefix a hence signifies “not covenant-keeping,” i.e., refusing to abide by “covenants” made, “covenant-breaking,” faithless, Rom. 1:31.¶

In the Sept. it is found in Jer. 3:8-11.¶ Cf. the corresponding verb asuntithemi, in the Sept. of Ps. 73:15, “to deal treacherously” (RV), and the noun asunthesua, “transgression, or covenant-breaking,” e.g., Ezra 9:2, 4; 10:6.

Note: Trench, Syn. Sec. lii, notes the distinction between asunthetos and aspondos, “implacable,” the latter, in 2 Tim. 3:3 only, being derived from sponde, “a sacrificial libation,” which accompanied treaty-making; hence, with the negative prefix a, “without a treaty or covenant,” thus denoting a person who cannot be persuaded to enter into a “covenant.” He points out that asunthetos presumes a state of peace interrupted by the unrighteous, aspondos a state of war, which the implacable refuse to terminate equitably. The words are clearly not synonymous.

COVER, COVERING

A. Verbs.

1. kalupto (καλύπτω, 2572) signifies “to cover,” Matt. 8:24; 10:26; Luke 8:16; 23:30; Jas. 5:20 (RV); 1 Pet. 4:8; to veil, in 2 Cor. 4:3 (RV; KJV, “hid”). See HIDE.¶

Note: Cf. the corresponding noun kalumma, “a veil,” 2 Cor. 3:13-16. See VEIL.¶

2. epikalupto (ἐπικαλύπτω, 1943), “to cover up or over” (epi, “over”), is used in Rom. 4:7, lit., “whose sins are covered over.”¶ Cf. epikalumma, “a cloke,” 1 Pet. 2:16.¶

3. perikalupto (περικαλύπτω, 4028), “to cover around” (peri, “around”), e.g., the face, and so, to blindfold, is translated “cover” in Mark 14:65, “blindfold” in Luke 22:64. In Heb. 9:4, it signifies “to overlay.” See BLINDFOLD, OVERLAY.¶

4. sunkalupto (συγκαλύπτω, 4780), lit., “to cover together”; the sun-, however, is intensive, and the verb signifies “to cover wholly, to cover up,” Luke 12:2.¶

5. katakalupto (κατακαλύπτω, 2619), “to cover up” (kata, intensive), in the middle voice, “to cover oneself,” is used in 1 Cor. 11:6-7 (RV, “veiled”).¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 11:4, “having his head covered” is, lit., “having (something) down the head.”

B. Nouns.

1. peribolaion (περιβόλαιον, 4018) lit. denotes “something thrown around” (peri, “around,” ballo, “to throw”); hence, “a veil, covering,” 1 Cor. 11:15 (marg.), or “a mantle around the body, a vesture,” Heb. 1:12. See CLOTHING, Note (1), VESTURE.¶

2. skepasma (σκέπασμα, 4629), “a covering” (skepazo, “to cover”), strictly, “a roofing,” then, “any kind of shelter or covering,” is used in the plural in 1 Tim. 6:8 (KJV, “raiment”; RV, “covering”).¶

COVET, COVETOUS, COVETOUSNESS

A. Verbs.

1. epithumeo (ἐπιθυμέω, 1937), “to fix the desire upon” (epi, “upon,” used intensively, thumos, “passion”), whether things good or bad; hence, “to long for, lust after, covet,” is used with the meaning “to covet evilly” in Acts 20:33, of “coveting money and apparel”; so in Rom. 7:7; 13:9. See DESIRE, FAIN, LUST.

2. zeloo (ζηλόω, 2206) is rendered “covet earnestly,” in 1 Cor. 12:31, KJV; RV, “desire earnestly,” as in 14:39 (KJV “covet”). See AFFECT, DESIRE, ENVY, JEALOUS, ZEALOUS.

3. orego (ὀρέγομαι, 3713), “to stretch after,” is rendered “covet after” in 1 Tim. 6:10, KJV; RV. “reaching after.” See DESIRE, REACH.

B. Nouns.

1. epithumetes (ἐπιθυμητής, 1938), “a luster after” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated in 1 Cor. 10:6, in verbal form, “should not lust after.” See LUST.¶

2. epithumia (ἐπιθυμία, 1939) denotes “coveting,” Rom. 7:7-8, RV; KJV, “lust” and “concupiscence”; the commandment here referred to convicted him of sinfulness in his desires for unlawful objects besides that of gain. See DESIRE, LUST.

3. pleonexia (πλεονεξία, 4124), “covetousness,” lit., “a desire to have more” (pleon, “more,” echo, “to have”), always in a bad sense, is used in a general way in Mark 7:22 (plural, lit., “covetings,” i.e., various ways in which “covetousness” shows itself); Rom. 1:29; Eph. 5:3; 1 Thess. 2:5. Elsewhere it is used, (a) of material possessions, Luke 12:15; 2 Pet. 2:3; 2 Cor. 9:5 (RV, “extortion”), lit., “as (a matter of) extortion” i.e., a gift which betrays the giver’s unwillingness to bestow what is due; (b) of sensuality, Eph. 4:19, “greediness”; Col. 3:5 (where it is called “idolatry”); 2 Pet. 2:14 (KJV, “covetous practices”). See EXTORTION.¶

Note: Cf. the corresponding verb pleonekteo, “to gain, take advantage of wrong.” See ADVANTAGE, DEFRAUD, GAIN, B, Note (2), WRONG

C. Adjectives.

1. pleonektes (πλεονέκτης, 4123), lit., “(eager) to have more” (see B, No. 3), i.e., to have what belongs to others; hence, “greedy of gain, covetous,” 1 Cor. 5:10-11; 6:10; Eph. 5:5 (“covetous man”).¶

2. philarguros (φιλάργυρος, 5366), lit., “money-loving,” is rendered “covetous” in the KJV of Luke 16:14 and 2 Tim. 3:2; RV, “lovers of money,” the wider and due significance.¶

3. aphilarguros (ἀφιλάργυρος, 866), No. 2, with negative prefix, is translated “without covetousness” in Heb. 13:5, KJV; RV, “free from the love of money.” In 1 Tim. 3:3, the KJV has “not covetous,” the RV, “no lover of money.”

Note: Trench, Syn. Sec.24, points out the main distinction between pleonexia and philarguria as being that between “covetousness” and avarice, the former having a much wider and deeper sense, being “the genus of which philarguria is the species.” The “covetous” man is often cruel as well as grasping, while the avaricious man is simply miserly and stinting.

CRAFT, CRAFTSMAN

1. techne (τέχνη, 5078), “craft,” Rev. 18:22: see ART.

2. technites (τεχνίτης, 5079), akin to No. 1, “an artificer, artisan, craftsman,” is translated “craftsman” in Acts 19:24, 38 and Rev. 18:22. It is found elsewhere in Heb. 11:10 “builder”; but this is practically the same as “maker” (demiourgos, the next noun in the verse; see No. 5, Note). Trench, Syn. Sec.qv., suggests that technites brings out the artistic side of creation, viewing God as “moulding and fashioning ... the materials which He called into existence.” This agrees with the usage of the word in the Sept. See BUILDER.¶

3. ergasia (ἐργασία, 2039): see DILIGENCE.

4. homotechnos (ὁμότεχνος, 3673), “one of the same trade” (from homos, “same,” and techne, see No. 1), is used in Acts 18:3 (RV, “trade”).¶ Cf. architekton, “master-builder,” 1 Cor. 3:10.¶

5. meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part, portion,” is translated “craft” in Acts 19:27, KJV; “trade,” RV (cf. ergasia in v. 25). See BEHALF, COAST, PART, PIECE, PORTION, RESPECT, SORT.

Note: Demiourgos, “a maker,” properly signifies one who works for the people, or whose work stands forth to the public gaze (demos, “people,” ergon, “work”), but this idea has been lost in the use of the word, which came to signify “a maker,” Heb. 11:10. This has reference to the structure, No. 2 to the design. Cf. ktistes, “a creator.”¶

CRAFTINESS, CRAFTY

A. Noun.

panourgia (πανουργία, 3834), lit., “allworking,” i.e., doing everything (pan, “all,” ergon, “work”), hence, “unscrupulous conduct, craftiness,” is always used in a bad sense in the NT, Luke 20:23; 1 Cor. 3:19; 2 Cor. 4:2; 11:3; Eph. 4:14, KJV, “cunning craftiness.” See SUBTLETY. ¶ In the Sept. it is used in a good sense, Prov. 1:4; 8:5; indifferently in Num. 24:22 and Josh. 9:4.¶

B. Adjective.

panourgos (πανούργος, 3835), “cunning, crafty,” is found in 2 Cor. 12:16, where the apostle is really quoting an accusation made against him by his detractors.¶ In the Sept. it is used in a good sense in Prov. 13:1; 28:2.¶

C. Noun.

dolos (δόλος, 1388), primarily, “a bait,” hence, “fraud, guile, deceit,” is rendered “craft” in the KJV of Mark 14:1 (RV “subtilty”). See DECEIT, GUILLE, SUBTLETY.

CRAVE

Note: The word “crave,” found in the KJV of Mark 15:43, translates the verb aiteo, “to ask” (RV, “asked for”). See ASK.

CREATE, CREATION, CREATOR, CREATURE

A. Verb.

ktizo (κτίζω, 2936), used among the Greeks to mean the founding of a place, a city or colony, signifies, in Scripture, “to create,” always of the act of God, whether (a) in the natural creation, Mark 13:19; Rom. 1:25 (where the title “The Creator” translates the article with the aorist participle of the verb); 1 Cor. 11:9; Eph. 3:9; Col. 1:16; 1 Tim. 4:3; Rev. 4:11; 10:6, or (b) in the spiritual creation, Eph. 2:10, 15; 4:24; Col. 3:10. See MAKE.¶

B. Nouns.

1. ktisis (κτίσις, 2937), primarily “the act of creating,” or “the creative act in process,” has this meaning in Rom. 1:20 and Gal. 6:15. Like the English word “creation,” it also signifies the product of the “creative” act, the “creature,” as in Mark 16:15, RV; Rom. 1:25; 8:19; Col. 1:15 etc.; in Heb. 9:11, KJV, “building.” In Mark 16:15 and Col. 1:23 its significance has special reference to mankind in general. As to its use in Gal. 6:15 and 2 Cor. 5:17, in the former, apparently, “the reference is to the creative act of God, whereby a man is introduced into the blessing of salvation, in contrast to circumcision done by human hands, which the Judaizers claimed was necessary to that end. In 2 Cor. 5:17 the reference is to what the believer is in Christ; in consequence of the creative act he has become a new creature.”*

Ktisis is once used of human actions, 1 Pet. 2:13, “ordinance” (marg., “creation”). See BUILDING, ORDINANCE.

2. ktistma (κτίσμα, 2938) has the concrete sense, “the created thing, the creature, the product of the creative act,” 1 Tim. 4:4; Jas. 1:18; Rev. 5:13; 8:9.¶

3. ktistes (κτιστής, 2939), among the Greeks, the founder of a city, etc., denotes in Scripture “the Creator,” 1 Pet. 4:19 (cf. Rom. 1:20, under B, No. 1, above).¶

Note: It is a significant confirmation of Rom. 1:20-21, that in all nonchristian Greek literature these words are never used by Greeks to convey the idea of a creator or of a creative act by any of their gods. The words are confined by them to the acts of human beings.

4. zoon (ζῶον, 2226), “a living creature”: see BEAST.

For CREDITOR see LEND, LENDER

For CREEK see BAY

CREEP, CREEPING, CREPT

A. Verbs.

1. enduno (ἐνδύνω, 1744), properly, “to envelop in” (en, “in,” duno, “to enter”), “to put on,” as of a garment, has the secondary and intransitive significance of “creeping into, insinuating oneself into,” and is found with this meaning in 2 Tim. 3:6. Cf. enduo, “to clothe.”¶

2. pareisduno (ἀναστροφῇ, 391), “to enter in by the side” (para, “beside,” eis, “in”), to insinuate oneself into, by stealth, to creep in stealthily, is used in Jude 4.¶

B. Noun.

herpeton (ἐρπετόν, 2062) signifies “a creeping thing” (herpo, “to creep”; Eng., “serpent,” Jas. 3:7 (RV, “creeping things,” for KJV, “serpents,” which form only one of this genus); it is set in contrast to quadrupeds and birds, Acts 10:12; 11:6; Rom. 1:23. See SERPENT.¶

For CRIME see CHARGE

For CRIPPLE see HALT

CROOKED

skolios (σκολιός, 4646), “curved, crooked,” was especially used (a) of a way, Luke 3:5, with spiritual import (see Prov. 28:18, Sept.); it is set in contrast to orthos and euthus, “straight”; (b) metaphorically, of what is morally “crooked,” perverse, froward, of people belonging to a particular generation, Acts 2:40 (KJV, “untoward”); Phil. 2:15; of tyrannical or unjust masters, 1 Pet. 2:18, “froward”; in this sense it is set in contrast to agathos, “good.”¶

CROSS, CRUCIFY

A. Noun.

stauros (σταυρός, 4716) denotes, primarily, “an upright pale or stake.” On such malefactors were nailed for execution. Both the noun and the verb stauroo, “to fasten to a stake or pale,” are originally to be distinguished from the ecclesiastical form of a two beamed “cross.” The shape of the latter had its origin in ancient Chaldea, and was used as the symbol of the god Tammuz (being in the shape of the mystic Tau, the initial of his name) in that country and in adjacent lands, including Egypt. By the middle of the 3rd cent. A.D. the churches had either departed from, or had travestied, certain doctrines of the Christian faith. In order to increase the prestige of the apostate ecclesiastical system pagans were received into the churches apart from regeneration by faith, and were permitted largely to retain their pagan signs and symbols. Hence the Tau or T, in its most frequent form, with the cross-piece lowered, was adopted to stand for the “cross” of Christ.

As for the Chi, or X, which Constantine declared he had seen in a vision leading him to champion the Christian faith, that letter was the initial of the word “Christ” and had nothing to do with “the Cross” (for xulon, “a timber beam, a tree,” as used for the stauros, see under TREE).

The method of execution was borrowed by the Greeks and Romans from the Phoenicians. The stauros denotes (a) “the cross, or stake itself,” e.g., Matt. 27:32; (b) “the crucifixion suffered,” e.g., 1 Cor. 1:17-18, where “the word of the cross,” RV, stands for the gospel; Gal. 5:11, where crucifixion is metaphorically used of the renunciation of the world, that characterizes the true Christian life; 6:12, 14; Eph. 2:16; Phil. 3:18.

The judicial custom by which the condemned person carried his stake to the place of execution, was applied by the Lord to those sufferings by which His faithful followers were to express their fellowship with Him, e.g., Matt. 10:38.

B. Verbs.

1. stauroō (σταυρώω, 4717) signifies (a) “the act of crucifixion,” e.g., Matt. 20:19; (b) metaphorically, “the putting off of the flesh with its passions and lusts,” a condition fulfilled in the case of those who are “of Christ Jesus,” Gal. 5:24, RV; so of the relationship between the believer and the world, 6:14.

2. sustauroō (συσταυρώω, 4957), “to crucify with” (su-, “for,” sun, “with”), is used (a) of actual “crucifixion” in company with another, Matt. 27:44; Mark 15:32; John 19:32; (b) metaphorically, of spiritual identification with Christ in His death, Rom. 6:6, and Gal. 2:20.¶

3. anastauroō (ἀνασταυρώω, 388) (ana, again) is used in Heb. 6:6 of Hebrew apostates, who as merely nominal Christians, in turning back to Judaism, were thereby virtually guilty of “crucifying” Christ again.¶

4. prospegnumi (προσπῆγγνυμι, 4362), “to fix or fasten to anything” (pros, “to,” pegnumi, “to fix”), is used of the “crucifixion” of Christ, Acts 2:23.¶

CROSS (Verb)

diaperaō (διαπεράω, 1276), “to pass over, to cross over” (dia, “through,” perao, “to pass”: akin to this are peran, “across,” peras, “a boundary,” Latin, porta, “a gate,” Eng., “portal, port,” etc.), is translated by the verb “to cross” in the RV, but differently in the KJV; in Matt. 9:1; Mark 5:21; 6:53 (KJV, “passed”); Matt. 14:34 (KJV, “were gone”); Luke 16:26 (KJV, “neither can they pass”); Acts 21:2 (KJV, “sailing”). See GO, PASS, SAIL.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 30:13; Isa. 23:2.¶

For the verb CROW (CREW) see CALL, A, No. 8

CROWD

ochlos (ὄχλος, 3793), “a confused throng,” is usually translated “multitude.”

The RV translates it “crowd” (KJV, “press” in some) in Matt. 9:23, 25; Mark 2:4; 3:9; 5:27, 30; Luke 8:19; 19:3; Acts 21:34-35; 24:12, 18. See COMPANY, MULTITUDE NUMBER PEOPLE.

B. Verb.

ochlopoieō (ὄχλοποιέω, 3792), “to make a crowd” (A, with poieō, “to make”), is translated “gathered a crowd” in Acts 17:5, RV (KJV, “company”).

CROWN (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. stephanos (στέφανος, 4735), primarily, “that which surrounds, as a wall or crowd” (from stepho, “to encircle”), denotes (a) “the victor’s crown,” the symbol of triumph in the games or some such contest; hence, by metonymy, a reward or prize; (b) “a token of public honor” for distinguished service, military prowess, etc., or of nuptial joy, or festal gladness, especially at the parousia of kings. It was woven as a garland of oak, ivy, parsley, myrtle, or olive, or in imitation of these in gold. In some passages the reference to the games is clear, 1 Cor. 9:25; 2 Tim. 4:8 (“crown of righteousness”); it may be so in 1 Pet. 5:4, where the fadeless character of “the crown of glory” is set in contrast to the garlands of earth. In other passages it stands as an emblem of life, joy, reward and glory, Phil. 4:1; 1 Thess. 2:19; Jas. 1:12 (“crown of life ”); Rev. 2:10 (ditto); 3:11; 4:4, 10: of triumph, 6:2; 9:7; 12:1; 14:14.

It is used of “the crown of thorns” which the soldiers plaited and put on Christ’s head, Matt. 27:29; Mark 15:17; John 19:2, 5. At first sight this might be taken as an alternative for diadema, “a kingly crown” (see below), but considering the blasphemous character of that masquerade, and the materials used, obviously diadema would be quite unfitting and the only alternative was stephanos (see Trench Syn. Sec.xxxii).¶

2. diadema (διάδημα, 1238) is never used as stephanos is; it is always the symbol of kingly or imperial dignity, and is translated “diadem” instead of “crown” in the RV, of the claims of the Dragon, Rev. 12:3; 13:1; 19:12. See DIADEM.¶

B. Verb.

stephanoo (στεφανόω, 4737), “to crown,” conforms in meaning to stephanos; it is used of the reward of victory in the games, in 2 Tim. 2:5; of the glory and honor bestowed by God upon man in regard to his position in creation, Heb. 2:7; of the glory and honor bestowed upon the Lord Jesus in His exaltation, v. 9.¶

For CRUCIFY see CROSS

psichion (ψιχίον, 5589), “a small morsel,” a diminutive of psix, “a bit, or crumb”, of bread or meat, it is used in Matt. 15:27 and Mark 7:28; some mss. have it in Luke 16:21.¶

CRUSE

alabastron (ἀλάβαστρον, 211) was a vessel for holding ointment or perfume; it derived its name from the alabaster stone, of which it was usually made. “Cruse,” RV, is a more suitable rendering than “box”; Matt. 26:7; Mark 14:3; Luke 7:37.¶

CRUSH

apothlibo (ἀποθλίβω, 598), a strengthened form of thlibo, “to throng” (apo, intensive), is used in Luke 8:45, RV, “crush,” for KJV, “press,” of the multitude who were pressing around Christ (cf. the preceding word sunecho, “to press”).¶ In the Sept., Num. 22:25.¶

CRY (Noun and Verb), CRYING

A. Nouns.

1. krauge (κραυγή, 2906), an onomatopoeic word, is used in Matt. 25:6; Luke 1:42 (some mss. have phone); Acts 23:9, RV, “clamor”; Eph. 4:31, “clamor”; Heb. 5:7; Rev. 21:4, “crying.” Some mss. have it in Rev. 14:18 (the most authentic have phone). See CLAMOR.¶

2. boe (βοή, 995), especially “a cry for help,” an onomatopoeic word (cf. Eng., “boo”), connected with boao (see B, No. 1), is found in Jas. 5:4.¶

B. Verbs.

1. boao (βοάω, 994), akin to A, No. 2, signifies (a) “to raise a cry,” whether of joy, Gal. 4:27, or vexation, Acts 8:7; (b) “to speak with a strong voice,” Matt. 3:3; Mark 1:3; 15:34; Luke 3:4; 9:38 (some mss. have anaboao here: see No. 2); John 1:23; Acts 17:6; 25:24 (some mss. have epiboao, No. 3, here); (c) “to cry out for help,” Luke 18:7, 38.¶ For Acts 21:34, see No. 8.

2. anaboao (ἀναβοάω, 310), ana, “up,” intensive, and No. 1, “to lift up the voice, cry out,” is said of Christ at the moment of His death, a testimony to His supernatural power in giving up His life, Matt. 27:46; in some mss. in Mark 15:8, of the shouting of a multitude; in some mss. in Luke 9:38, of the “crying” out of a man in a company (see No. 1).¶

3. epiboao (ἐπιβοάω, 1916), epi, “upon,” intensive, and No. 1, “to cry out, exclaim vehemently,” is used in some mss. in Acts 25:24 (see No. 1.¶)

4. krazo (κράζω, 2896), akin to A, No. 1, “to cry out,” an onomatopoeic word, used especially of the “cry” of the raven; then, of any inarticulate cries, from fear, pain etc.; of the “cry” of a Canaanitish woman, Matt. 15:22 (so the best mss., instead of kraugazo); of the shouts of the children in the Temple, Matt. 21:15; of the people who shouted for Christ to be crucified, 27:23; Mark 15:13-14; of the “cry” of Christ on the Cross at the close of His sufferings, Matt. 27:50; Mark 15:39 (see No. 2, above).

In John’s gospel it is used three times, out of the six, of Christ’s utterances, 7:28, 37; 12:44. In the Acts it is not used of “cries” of distress, but chiefly of the shouts of opponents; in the Apocalypse, chiefly of the utterances of heavenly beings concerning earthly matters; in Rom. 8:15 and Gal. 4:6, of the appeal of believers to God the Father; in Rom. 9:27, of a prophecy concerning Israel; in Jas. 5:4, metaphorically, of hire kept back by fraud.

Note: A recent translator renders this verb in Matt. 27:50 “uttered a scream,” an utterly deplorable mistranslation and a misrepresentation of the nature of the Lord’s “cry.”

5. anakrazo (ἀνακράζω, 349), ana, “up,” intensive, and No. 4, signifies “to cry out loudly,” Mark 1:23; 6:49; Luke 4:33; 8:28; 23:18.¶

6. kraugazo (κραυγάζω, 2905), a stronger form of No. 4, “to make a clamor or outcry” (A, No. 1), is used in Matt. 12:19, in a prophecy from Isaiah of Christ; in Luke 4:41 (in the best mss., instead of krazo); John 11:43; 12:13 (in the best mss.); 18:40; 19:6, 12, 19:15; Acts 22:23.¶

7. phoneo (φωνέω, 5455), “to utter a loud sound or cry,” whether of animals, e.g., Matt. 26:34; or persons, Luke 8:8; 16:24; this is the word which Luke uses to describe the “cry” of the Lord at the close of His sufferings on the cross, Luke 23:46 (see under anaboao and krazo, above); also, e.g., Acts 16:28; Rev. 14:18. See CALL, A, No. 8, CROW.

8. epiphoneo (ἐπιφωνέω, 2019), No. 7, with epi, “upon,” or “against,” signifies “to shout,” either against, Luke 23:21; Acts 21:34 (in the best mss., No. 1); 22:24, or in acclamation, Acts 12:22. See SHOUT.¶

Note: For aphiemi, Mark 15:37, See UTTER.

Comparing the various verbs, kaleo, denotes “to call out for any purpose,” boao, “to cry out as an expression of feeling,” krazo, to cry out loudly.” Kaleo suggests intelligence, boao, sensibilities, krazo, instincts.

CRYSTAL

A. Noun.

krustallos (κρύσταλλος, 2930), from kruos, “ice,” and hence properly anything congealed and transparent, denotes “crystal,” a kind of precious stone, Rev. 4:6; 22:1. Rock crystal is pure quartz; it crystallizes in hexagonal prisms, each with a pyramidal apex.¶

B. Verb.

krustallizo (κρυσταλλίζω, 2929), “to be of crystalline brightness and transparency, to shine like crystal,” is found in Rev. 21:11, where it is said of Christ as the “Light-giver” (phoster) of the heavenly city (not phos, “light,” RV and KJV). Possibly there the verb has a transitive force, “to transform into crystal splendor,” as of the effect of Christ upon His saints.¶

CUBIT

pechus (πῆχυς, 4083) denotes the forearm, i.e., the part between the hand and the elbowjoint; hence, “a measure of length,” not from the wrist to the elbow, but from the tip of the middle finger to the elbow joint, i.e., about a foot and a half, or a little less than two feet, Matt. 6:27; Luke 12:25; John 21:8; Rev. 21:17.¶

CUMBER

1. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673), lit., “to reduce to idleness or inactivity” (kata, “down,” and argos, “idle”), is once rendered “cumber,” Luke 13:7. See ABOLISH.

2. perispao (περισπάω, 4049), lit., “to draw around” (peri), “draw away, distract,” is used in the passive voice in the sense of being overoccupied about a thing, to be “cumbered,” Luke 10:40.¶

kuminon (κύμινον, 2951) is an umbelliferous plant with aromatic seeds, used as a condiment, Matt. 23:23.

For the KJV CUNNING see CRAFTINESS. For CUNNINGLY see DEvised

poterion (ποτήριον, 4221), a diminutive of poter, denotes, primarily, a “drinking vessel”; hence, “a cup” (a) literal, as, e.g., in Matt. 10:42. The “cup” of blessing, 1 Cor. 10:16, is so named from the third (the fourth according to Edersheim) “cup” in the Jewish Passover feast, over which thanks and praise were given to God. This connection is not to be rejected on the ground that the church at Corinth was unfamiliar with Jewish customs. That the contrary was the case, see 5:7; (b) figurative, of one’s lot or experience, joyous or sorrowful (frequent in the Psalms; cf. Ps. 116:18, “cup of salvation”); in the NT it is used most frequently of the sufferings of Christ, Matt. 20:22-23; 26:39; Mark 10:38-39; 14:36; Luke 22:42; John 18:11; also of the evil deeds of Babylon, Rev. 17:4; 18:6; of divine punishments to be inflicted, Rev. 14:10; 16:19. Cf. Ps. 11:6; 75:8; Isa. 51:17; Jer. 25:15; Ezek. 23:32-34; Zech. 12:2.

CURE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

iasis (ἰασις, 2392), “a healing, a cure” (akin to iaomai, “to heal,” and iatros, “a physician”), is used in the plural in Luke 13:32; in Acts 4:22, “healing,” in 4:30 with the preposition eis “unto,” lit., “unto healing,” translated “heal.” See HEALING.¶

B. Verb.

therapeuo (θεραπεύω, 2323), (Eng., “therapeutics,” etc.), denotes (a) primarily, “to serve” (cf. therapeia and therapon), Acts 17:25 (KJV, “worshiped”); then, (b) “to heal, restore to health, to cure”; it is usually translated “to heal,” but “cure” in Matt. 17:16, 18; Luke 7:21; 9:1; John 5:10; Acts 28:9, RV. See HEAL, WORSHIP.

CURIOUS

Note: For the adjective periergos, “busy about trifles,” see BUSYBODY: it is used of magic arts in Acts 19:19 (lit., “things that are around work,” and thus superfluous), i.e., the arts of those who pry into forbidden things, with the aid of evil spirits. See also 1 Tim. 5:13, where the meaning is “inquisitive,” prying into other people’s affairs.¶

CURSE, CURSING (Noun and Verb), CURSED, ACCURSED

A. Nouns.

1. ara (ἄρά, 685), in its most usual meaning, “a malediction, cursing” (its other meaning is “a prayer”), is used in Rom. 3:14 (often in the Sept.)¶

2. katara (κατάρα, 2671), kata, “down,” intensive, and No. 1, denotes an “execration, imprecation, curse,” uttered out of malevolence, Jas. 3:10; 2 Pet. 2:14; or pronounced by God in His righteous judgment, as upon a land doomed to barrenness, Heb. 6:8; upon those who seek for justification by obedience, in part or completely, to the Law, Gal. 3:10, 13; in this 13th verse it is used concretely of Christ, as having “become a curse” for us, i.e., by voluntarily undergoing on the cross the appointed penalty of the “curse.” He thus was identified, on our behalf, with the doom of sin. Here, not the verb in the Sept. of Deut. 21:23 is used (see B, No. 3), but the concrete noun.¶

3. anathema (ἄνε, 33), transliterated from the Greek, is frequently used in the Sept., where it translates the Heb. cherem, “a thing devoted to God,” whether (a) for His service, as the sacrifices, Lev. 27:28 (cf. anathema, a votive offering, gift), or (b) for its destruction, as an idol, Deut. 7:26, or a city, Josh. 6:17. Later it acquired the more general meaning of “the disfavor of Jehovah,” e.g., Zech. 14:11. This is the meaning in the NT. It is used of (a) the sentence pronounced, Acts 23:14 (lit., “cursed themselves with a curse”; see anathematizo below); (b) of the object on which the “curse” is laid, “accursed”; in the following, the RV keeps to the word “anathema,” Rom. 9:3; 1 Cor. 12:3; 16:22; Gal. 1:8-9, all of which the KJV renders by “accursed” except 1 Cor. 16:22, where it has “Anathema.” In Gal. 1:8-9, the apostle declares in the strongest manner that the gospel he preached was the one and only way of salvation, and that to preach another was to nullify the death of Christ.¶

4. katathema (κατανάθεμα, 2652), or, as in some mss., the longer form katanathema, is stronger than No. 3 (kata, intensive), and denotes, by metonymy, “an accursed thing” (the object “cursed” being put for the “curse” pronounced), Rev. 22:3.¶

B. Verbs.

1. anathematizo (ἀναθεματίζω, 332), akin to No. 3, signifies “to declare anathema,” i.e., “devoted to destruction, accursed, to curse,” Mark 14:71, or “to bind by a curse,” Acts 23:12, 14, 21.¶

2. katanathematizo (καταναθεματίζω, 2653), a strengthened form of No. 1, denotes “to utter curses against,” Matt. 26:74; cf. Mark’s word concerning the same occasion (No. 1).¶

3. kataraomai (καταράομαι, 2672), akin to A, No. 2, primarily signifies “to pray against, to wish evil against a person or thing”; hence “to curse,” Matt. 25:41; Mark 11:21; Luke 6:28; Rom. 12:14; Jas. 3:9. Some mss. have it in Matt. 5:44.¶

4. kakologeo (κακολογέω, 2551), “to speak evil” (kakos, “evil,” lego, “to speak”), is translated by the verb “to curse” in Matt. 15:4, and Mark 7:10, “to speak evil of father and mother,” not necessarily “to curse,” is what the Lord intended (RV). KJV and RV have the verb “to speak evil” in Mark 9:39 and Acts 19:9. See EVIL.

C. Adjectives.

1. epikataratos (ἐπικατάρατος, 1944), “cursed, accursed” (epi “upon,” and A, No. 2), is used in Gal. 3:10, 13.¶

2. eparatos (ἐπάνω, 1883a), “accursed,” is found, in the best mss., in John 7:49, RV, “accursed,” instead of No. 1.

For CUSHION see PILLOW

CUSTOM (Usage), ACCUSTOM (Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. ethos (ἔθος, 1485) denotes (a) “a custom, usage, prescribed by law,” Acts 6:14; 15:1; 25:16; “a rite or ceremony,” Luke 2:42; (b) a “custom, habit, manner,” Luke 22:39; John 19:40; Heb. 10:25 (KJV, “manner”). See MANNER, WONT.

2. sunetheia (συνήθεια, 4914), sun, “with,” ethos (see No. 1), denotes (a) “an intercourse, intimacy,” a meaning not found in the NT; (b) “a custom, customary usage,”

John 18:39; 1 Cor. 11:16; “or force of habit,” 1 Cor. 8:7, RV, “being used to” (some mss. here have suneidsis, “conscience”; whence KJV, “with conscience of”).¶

B. Verbs.

1. ethizo (ἐθίζω, 1480), akin to A, No. 1, signifies “to accustom,” or in the passive voice, “to be accustomed.” In the participial form it is equivalent to a noun, “custom,” Luke 2:27.¶

2. etho (ἔθω, 1486), “to be accustomed,” as in the case of No. 1, is used in the passive participle as a noun, signifying “a custom,” Luke 4:16; Acts 17:2 (KJV, “manner”; RV, “custom”); in Matt. 17:15 and Mark 10:1, “was wont.” See MANNER, WONT.¶

CUSTOM (Toll)

1. telos (τέλος, 5056) “an end, termination,” whether of time or purpose, denotes, in its secondary significance, “what is paid for public ends, a toll, tax, custom,” Matt. 17:25 (RV, “toll”); Rom. 13:7 (RV and KJV, “custom”). In Palestine the Herods of Galilee and Perea received the “custom”; in Judea it was paid to the procurator for the Roman government. See END, FINALLY, UTTERMOST.

2. telonion (τελώνιον, 5058) denotes “a custom-house,” for the collection of the taxes, Matt. 9:9; Mark 2:14; Luke 5:27 (RV, “place of toll”).

CUT

1. kopto (κόπτω, 2875) denotes “to cut by a blow,” e.g., branches, Matt. 21:8; Mark 11:8. See BEWAIL, LAMENT, MOURN, WAIL.

2. apokopto (ἀποκόπτω, 609), “to cut off, or cut away” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), is used (a) literally, of members of the body, Mark 9:43, 45; John 18:10, 26; of ropes, Acts 27:32; (b) metaphorically, in the middle voice, of “cutting off oneself,” to excommunicate, Gal. 5:12, of the Judaizing teachers, with a reference, no doubt, to circumcision.¶

3. ekkopto (ἐκκόπτω, 1581), lit., “to cut or strike out” (ek, “out or off,” and No. 1), “to cut down,” is used (a) literally, Matt. 5:30 (in 3:10 and 7:19 and Luke 3:9, “hewn down”); 18:8; Luke 13:7, 9; (b) metaphorically, of “cutting off” from spiritual blessing, Rom. 11:22, 24; of depriving persons of an occasion for something 2 Cor. 11:12. See HEW.¶

Note: In 1 Pet. 3:7 the best mss. have enkopto, “to hinder”; some have ekkopto.

4. katakopto (κατακόπτω, 2629), lit., “to cut down, cut in pieces” (kata, “down,” intensive), Mark 5:5, of the demoniac.¶

5. diaprio (διαπρίω, 1282) signifies “to saw asunder” (dia, “asunder,” prio, “to saw”), “to divide by a saw” (as in 1 Chron. 20:3, Sept.), hence, metaphorically, “to be sawn through mentally, to be rent with vexation, to be cut to the heart,” is used in Acts 5:33; 7:54.¶

6. dichotomeo (διχοτομέω, 1371), lit., “to cut into two parts” (dicha, “apart,” temno, “to cut,” tome, “a cutting”), Matt. 24:51, “to cut asunder,” is used in Luke 12:46. Some take the reference to be to the mode of punishment by which criminals and captives were “cut” in two; others, on account of the fact that in these passages the delinquent is still surviving after the treatment, take the verb to denote “to cut up” by scourging, to scourge severely, the word being used figuratively.

As to Matt. 24:51, it has been remarked that the “cutting asunder” was an appropriate punishment for one who had lived a double life. In both passages the latter part of the sentence applies to retribution beyond this life.¶ In the Sept. the verb is used in Exod. 29:17 of the dividing of the ram as a whole burnt offering at the consecration of the priests.¶ The corresponding noun is found in Gen. 15:11, 17; Ex. 29:17; Lev. 1:8; Ezek. 24:4.¶

8. aphaireo (ἀφαιρέω, 851), “to take away, remove,” is translated “cut off” in Mark 14:47, KJV, and Luke 22:50, and “smote off” in Matt. 26:51; RV, “struck off” in each place. See SMITE, TAKE.

CYMBAL

kumbalon (κύμβαλον, 2950), “a cymbal,” was so called from its shape (akin to kumbos, “a hollow basin,” kumbe, “a cup”), and was made of bronze, two being struck together, 1 Cor. 13:1.¶

DAILY (Adjective)

1. epiousios (ἐπιούσιος, 1967) is found in Matt. 6:11 and Luke 11:3. Some would derive the word from epi, “upon,” and eimi, “to be,” as if to signify “(bread) present,” i.e., sufficient bread, but this formation is questionable. The same objection applies to the conjecture, that it is derived from epi, and ousia, and signifies “(bread) for sustenance.” The more probable derivation is from epi, and eimi, “to go,” (bread) for going on, i.e., for the morrow and after, or (bread) coming (for us). See the RV marg. This suits the added semeron, “to-day,” i.e., the prayer is to be for bread that suffices for this day and next, so that the mind may conform to Christ’s warning against anxiety for the morrow. Confirmation of this derivation is also to be found in the word epious, in the phrase “the next day,” Acts 7:26; 16:11.¶

2. ephmeros (ἐφήμερος, 2184) signifies “for the day” (epi “upon, or for,” hemera, “a day,” Eng., “ephemeral”), Jas. 2:15.¶

3. kathemerinos (καθημερινός, 2522) means, lit., “according to” (kata) “the day” (hemera), “day by day, daily,” Acts 6:1.¶

Notes: The following phrases contain the word hemera, “day,” and are translated “daily” or otherwise: (a) kath hemeran, lit., “according to, or for, (the) day, or throughout the day,” “day by day,” e.g., Luke 11:3; Acts 3:2; 16:5; 1 Cor. 15:31; Heb. 7:27; (b) hemera kai hemera, lit., “day and day,” “day by day,” 2 Cor. 4:16; (c) hemeran ex hemeras, lit., “day from day,” “from day to day,” 2 Pet. 2:8; (d) semeron, “this day,” or “today,” used outside the Synoptists and the Acts, in 2 Cor. 3:14-15, eight times in Hebrews, and in Jas. 4:13; (e) tessemeron hemeras, “(unto) this very day,” Rom. 11:8 (RV); (f) tas hemeras, Luke 21:37, RV, “every day,” for KJV, “in the daytime”; (g) pasan hemeran, Acts 5:42, RV, “every day”; preceded by kata in Acts 17:17, RV, “every day”; (h) kath hekasten hemeran, lit., “according to each day,” Heb. 3:13, “day by day,” RV.

DAINTY

liparos (λιπαρός, 3045) properly signifies “oily, or anointed with oil” (from lipos, “grease,” connected with aleipho, “to anoint”); it is said of things which pertain to delicate and sumptuous living; hence, “dainty,” Rev. 18:14.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 3:29; Neh. 9:35; Isa. 30:23.¶

For DAMNABLE, DAMNATION, and DAMNED see CONDEMNATION, DESTRUCTION, JUDGE, JUDGMENT

DAMSEL

1. korasion (κοράσιον, 2877), a diminutive of kore, “a girl,” denotes “a little girl” (properly a colloquial word, often used disparagingly, but not so in later writers); in the NT it is used only in familiar conversation, Matt. 9:24-25 (KJV, “maid”); 14:11; Mark 5:41-42; 6:22, 28.¶

2. paidion (παιδίον, 3813), a diminutive of pais, denotes “a young child (male or female)” in the KJV of Mark 5:39-41 (1st line); the RV corrects “damsel” to “child,” so as to distinguish between the narrative of facts, and the homely address to the little girl herself, in which, and in the following sentence, korasion is used. (See No. 1). See CHILD.

3. paidiske (παιδίσκη, 3814) denotes “a young girl, or a female slave”; “damsel,” KJV, in John 18:17; Acts 12:13; 16:16; RV “maid” in each case. See BONDMAID, BONDWOMAN, MAID, MAIDEN.

DANCE

orcheo (ὀρχέομαι, 3738), (cf. Eng., “orchestra”), probably originally signified “to lift up,” as of the feet; hence, “to leap with regularity of motion.” It is always used in the middle voice, Matt. 11:17; 14:6; Mark 6:22; Luke 7:32. The performance by the daughter of Herodias is the only clear instance of artistic dancing, a form introduced from Greek customs.¶

DANCING

choros (χορός, 5525), (Eng., “chorus”), primarily denoted “an enclosure for dancing”; hence, “a company of dancers and singers.” The supposition that the word is connected with orcheo by metathesis (i.e., change of place, of the letters ch and o) seems to be without foundation. The word is used in Luke 15:25.¶

DANGER, DANGEROUS

A. Verb.

kinduneuo (κινδυνεύω, 2793) properly signifies “to run a risk, face danger,” but is used in the NT in the sense of “being in danger, jeopardy,” Acts 19:27, 40. It is translated “were in jeopardy” in Luke 8:23, and “stand we in jeopardy,” 1 Cor. 15:30.¶

Note: Kindunos, akin to A, “peril, danger,” is always rendered “peril,” Rom. 8:35 and 2 Cor. 11:26 (eight times).¶

B. Adjectives.

1. enochos (ἐνοχος, 1777), lit., “held in, contained in” (en, “in,” echo, “to have, hold”), hence, “bound under obligation to, liable to, subject to,” is used in the sense of being in “danger” of the penal effect of a misdeed, i.e.. in a forensic sense, signifying the connection of a person with (a) his crime, “guilty of an eternal sin,” Mark 3:29, RV; (b) the trial or tribunal, as a result of which sentence is passed, Matt. 5:21–22, “the judgment,” “the council”; enochos here has the obsolete sense of control (J. Hastings); (c) the penalty itself, 5:22, “the hell of fire,” and, with the translation “worthy” (KJV, “guilty”), of the punishment determined to be inflicted on Christ, Matt. 26:66 and Mark 14:64, “death”; (d) the person or thing against whom or which the offense is committed 1 Cor. 11:27, “guilty,” the crime being against “the body and blood of the Lord”; Jas. 2:10, “guilty” of an offense against all the Law, because of a breach of one commandment.

Apart from the forensic sense, this adjective is used of the thing by which one is bound, “subject to” (bondage), in Heb. 2:15. See GUILTY, SUBJECT, WORTHY.¶

2. episphales (ἐπισφαλής, 2000), lit., “prone to fall” (epi, “upon,” i.e., near upon, sphallo, “to fall”), hence, “insecure, dangerous,” is used in Acts 27:9.¶

DARE, DARING, DURST

A. Verb.

tolmao (τολμάω, 5111) signifies “to dare,” (a) in the sense of not dreading or shunning through fear, Matt. 22:46; Mark 12:34; Mark 15:43, “boldly,” lit., “having dared, went in”; Luke 20:40; John 21:12; Acts 5:13; 7:32; Rom. 15:18; 2 Cor. 10:2, RV, “show courage,” (KJV, “be bold”); 10:12, RV, “are (not) bold”, 11:21; Phil. 1:14, “are bold”; Jude 9; (b) in the sense of bearing, enduring, bringing oneself to do a thing, Rom. 5:7; 1 Cor. 6:1.¶ Cf. apotolmao, “to be very bold,” Rom. 10:20.¶ See BOLD.

B. Adjective.

tolmetes (τολμητής, 5113), akin to A, “daring,” is used in 2 Pet. 2:10, RV, “daring” (KJV “presumptuous”), “shameless and irreverent daring.”¶

DARK, DARKEN, DARKLY, DARKNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. skoteinos (σκοτεινός, 4652), “full of darkness, or covered with darkness,” is translated “dark” in Luke 11:36; “full of darkness,” in Matt. 6:23 and Luke 11:34, where the physical condition is figurative of the moral. The group of skot- words is derived from a root ska—, meaning “to cover.” The same root is to be found in skene, “a tent”.¶

Note: Contrast photeinos, “full of light,” e.g., Matt. 6:22.

2. auchmeros (αὐχμηρός, 850), from auchmos, “drought produced by excessive heat,” hence signifies “dry, murky, dark,” 2 Pet. 1:19 (RV marg., “squalid”). No. 1 signifies “darkness” produced by covering; No. 2, “darkness” produced by being squalid or murky.¶

B. Nouns.

1. skotia (σκοτία, 4653) is used (a) of physical darkness, “dark,” John 6:17, lit., “darkness had come on,” and 20:1, lit., “darkness still being”; (b) of secrecy, in general, whether what is done therein is good or evil, Matt. 10:27; Luke 12:3; (c) of spiritual or moral “darkness,” emblematic of sin, as a condition of moral or spiritual depravity, Matt. 4:16; John 1:5; 8:12; 12:35, 46; 1 John 1:5; 2:8-9, 11.¶

2. skotos (σκότος, 4655), an older form than No. 1, grammatically masculine, is found in some mss. in Heb. 12:18.¶

3. skotos (σκότος, 4655), a neuter noun frequent in the Sept., is used in the NT as the equivalent of No. 1; (a) of “physical darkness,” Matt. 27:45; 2 Cor. 4:6; (b) of “intellectual darkness,” Rom. 2:19 (cf. C, No. 1); (c) of “blindness,” Acts 13:11; (d) by metonymy, of the “place of punishment,” e.g., Matt. 8:12; 2 Pet. 2:17; Jude 13; (e) metaphorically, of “moral and spiritual darkness,” e.g., Matt. 6:23; Luke 1:79; 11:35; John 3:19; Acts 26:18; 2 Cor. 6:14; Eph. 6:12; Col. 1:13; 1 Thess. 5:4-5; 1 Pet. 2:9; 1 John 1:6; (f) by metonymy, of “those who are in moral or spiritual darkness,” Eph. 5:8; (g) of “evil works,” Rom. 13:12; Eph. 5:11, (h) of the “evil powers that dominate the world,” Luke 22:53; (i) “of secrecy” [as in No. 1, (b)]. While skotos is used more than twice as many times as skotia in the NT, the apostle John uses skotos only once, 1 John 1:6, but skotia 15 times out of the 18.

4. zophos (ζόφος, 2217) denotes “the gloom of the nether world,” hence, “thick darkness darkness that may be felt”; it is rendered “darkness” in Heb. 12:18; 2 Pet. 2:4 and Jude 6; in 2 Pet. 2:17, RV, “blackness,” KJV, “mists”; in Jude 13, RV and KJV, blackness. See BLACKNESS, B, Nos. 1 and 2, MIST.¶

C. Verbs.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 157-158.

1. skotizo (σκοτίζω, 4654), “to deprive of light, to make dark,” is used in the NT in the passive voice only, (a) of the heavenly bodies Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:24; Rev. 8:12; (b) metaphorically, of the mind, Rom. 1:21; 11:10; (some mss. have it in Luke 23:45).¶

2. skotoo (σκοτώω, 4656), “to darken,” is used (a) of the heavenly bodies, Rev. 9:2; 16:10; (b) metaphorically, of the mind, Eph. 4:18.¶

Note: The phrase en ainigmati, lit., “in an enigma,” is rendered “darkly” in 1 Cor. 13:12. Ainigma is akin to the verb ainissomai “to hint obscurely.” The allusion is to Num. 12:8 (Sept.), “not in (dia, “by means of”) dark speeches” (lit., “enigmas”); God’s communications to Moses were not such as in the case of dreams, etc. After the same analogy, what we see and know now is seen “darkly” compared with the direct vision in the presence of God hereafter. The riddles of seeming obscurity in life will all be made clear.

DART

belos (βέλος, 956), akin to ballo, “to throw,” denotes “a missile, an arrow, javelin, dart, etc.,” Eph. 6:16 (see FIERY).¶ Cf. bole, “a stone’s throw or cast,” Luke 22:41,¶; bolizo, “to sound” (to fathom the depth of water), Acts 27:28.¶

Note: The noun bolis, “a dart,” is found in some texts in Heb. 12:20 (see KJV).¶

DASH

1. proskopto (προσκόπτω, 4350) denotes “to beat upon or against, to strike against, dash against” (pros, “to or against,” kopto, “to strike, beat”); hence, of the foot, to stumble, “dash” (KJV and RV), Matt. 4:6; Luke 4:11. See BEAT, STUMBLE.

2. rhēgnumi (ρήγνυμι, 4486), “to tear, rend, break,” is used of the action of a demon upon a human victim, Mark 9:18, “dasheth ... down,” RV; (KJV, marg.; KJV, text, “teareth”); Luke 9:42, RV, “dashed ... down” (KJV, “threw ... down”). See BREAK, No. 6.

3. edaphizo (ἐδαφίζω, 1474), “to beat level with the earth,” e.g., as a threshing floor (cf. edaphos, “the ground”), Luke 19:44; RV, “shall dash (thee) to the ground”; (KJV, “shall lay (thee) even with the ground”). See GROUND.¶

DAUGHTER, DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

1. thugater (θυγάτηρ, 2364), “a daughter,” (etymologically, Eng., “daughter” is connected), is used of (a) the natural relationship (frequent in the gospels); (b) spiritual relationship to God, 2 Cor. 6:18, in the sense of the practical realization of acceptance with, and the approval of, God (cf. Isa. 43:6), the only place in the NT where it applies to spiritual relationship; (c) the inhabitants of a city or region, Matt. 21:5; John 12:15 (“of Zion”); cf. Isa. 37:22; Zeph. 3:14 (Sept.); (d) the women who followed Christ to Calvary, Luke 23:28; (e) women of Aaron’s posterity, Luke 1:5; (f) a female descendant of Abraham, Luke 13:16.

2. thugatrion (θυγάτριον, 2365), a diminutive of No. 1, denotes “a little daughter,” Mark 5:23; 7:25.¶

3. parthenos (παρθένος, 3933), “a maiden, virgin,” e.g., Matt. 1:23, signifies a virgin-daughter in 1 Cor. 7:36-38 (RV); in Rev. 14:4, it is used of chaste persons. See VIRGIN.

4. numphe (νύμφη, 3565), (Eng., “nymph”), denotes “a bride,” John 3:29; also “a daughter-in-law, Matt. 10:35; Luke 12:53. See BRIDE.

Note: In 1 Pet. 3:6, teknon, “a child,” is translated “daughters” (KJV), “children” (RV).

DAWN

A. Verbs.

1. augazo (αὐγάζω, 826), “to shine,” is used metaphorically of the light of dawn, in 2 Cor. 4:4 (some texts have kataugazo). Cf. auge, “brightness or break of day,” Acts 20:11. The word formerly meant “to see clearly,” and it is possible that this meaning was continued in general usage.¶

2. diaugazo (διαυγάζω, 1306) signifies “to shine through” (dia, “through,” auge, “brightness”); it describes the breaking of daylight upon the darkness of night, metaphorically in 2 Pet. 1:19, of the shining of spiritual light into the heart. A probable reference is to the day to be ushered in at the second coming of Christ: “until the Day gleam through the present darkness, and the Light-bringer dawn in your hearts.”¶

3. epiphosko (ἐπιφώσκω, 2020), “to grow light” (epi, “upon,” phos, “light”), in the sense of shining upon, is used in Matt. 28:1; in Luke 23:54, “drew on” (of the Sabbath-day); RV, marg., “began to dawn.” See DRAW.¶

B. Noun.

orthros (ὄρθρος, 3722), “daybreak,” denotes “at early dawn,” Luke 24:1 (RV), “early in the morning” (KJV), and John 8:2 (KJV and RV); in Acts 5:21, RV, “about daybreak,” for KJV, “early in the morning.”¶

Note: Cf. orthrios, “early,” in some texts in Luke 24:22;¶ orthrinος, a later form of orthros, in some mss. in Rev. 22:16;¶ orthrizo, “to do anything early in the morning,” in Luke 21:38.¶

DAY

A. Nouns.

1. hemera (ἡμέρα, 2250), “a day,” is used of (a) the period of natural light, Gen. 1:5; Prov. 4:18; Mark 4:35; (b) the same, but figuratively, for a period of opportunity for service, John 9:4; Rom. 13:13; (c) one period of alternate light and darkness, Gen. 1:5; Mark 1:13; (d) a period of undefined length marked by certain characteristics, such as “the day of small things,” Zech. 4:10; of perplexity and distress, Isa. 17:11; Obad. 12-14; of prosperity and of adversity, Ecc. 7:14; of trial or testing, Ps. 95:8; of salvation, Isa. 49:8; 2 Cor. 6:2; cf. Luke 19:42; of evil, Eph. 6:13; of wrath and revelation of the judgments of God, Rom. 2:5; (e) an appointed time, Ecc. 8:6; Eph. 4:30; (f) a notable defeat in battle, etc., Isa. 9:4; Psal. 137:7; Ezek. 30:9; Hos. 1:11; (g) by metonymy = “when,” “at the time when”; (1), of the past, Gen. 2:4; Num. 3:13; Deut. 4:10, (2), of the future, Gen. 2:17; Ruth 4:5; Matt. 24:50; Luke 1:20; (h) a judgment or doom, Job 18:20.*

(i) of a time of life, Luke 1:17-18 (“years”).

As the “day” throws light upon things that have been in darkness, the word is often associated with the passing of judgment upon circumstances. In 1 Cor. 4:3, “man’s day,” KJV, “man’s judgement,” RV, denotes mere human judgment upon matters (“man’s” translates the adjective anthropinos, “human”), a judgment exercised in the present period of human rebellion against “God”; probably therefore “the Lord’s Day,” Rev. 1:10, or “the Day of the Lord” (where an adjective, kuriakos, is similarly used), is the day of His manifested judgment on the world.

The phrases “the day of Christ,” Phil. 1:10; 2:16; “the day of Jesus Christ,” 1:6; “the day of the Lord Jesus,” 1 Cor. 5:5; 2 Cor. 1:14; “the day of our Lord Jesus Christ,” 1 Cor. 1:8, denote the time of the Parousia of Christ with His saints, subsequent to the Rapture, 1 Thess. 4:16-17. In 2 Pet. 1:19 this is spoken of simply as the day, (see DAY-STAR).

From these the phrase “the day of the Lord” is to be distinguished; in the OT it had reference to a time of the victorious interposition by God for the overthrow of the foes of Israel, e.g., Isa. 2:12; Amos 5:18; if Israel transgressed in the pride of their hearts, the Day of the Lord would be a time of darkness and judgment. For their foes, however, there would come “a great and terrible day of the Lord,” Joel 2:31; Mal. 4:5. That period, still future, will see the complete overthrow of gentile power and the establishment of Messiah’s kingdom, Isa. 13:9-11; 34:8; Dan. 2:34, 44; Obad. 15; cf. Isa. 61:2; John 8:56.

In the NT “the day of the Lord” is mentioned in 1 Thess. 5:2 and 2 Thess. 2:2, RV, where the apostle’s warning is that the church at Thessalonica should not be deceived by thinking that “the Day of the Lord is now present.” This period will not begin till the circumstances mentioned in verses 3 and 4 take place.

For the eventual development of the divine purposes in relation to the human race see 2 Pet. 3:12, “the Day of God.”

2. auge (αὐγή, 827), “brightness, bright, shining, as of the sun”; hence, “the beginning of daylight,” is translated “break of day” in Acts 20:11.¶

B. Adverb.

ennucha (ἐννυχον, 1773**), the neuter plural of ennuchos, used adverbially, lit., “in night” (en, “in,” nux, “night,” with lian, “very”), signifies “very early, yet in the night,” “a great while before day,” Mark 1:35.¶

Notes: (1) For phrases, see DAILY. (2) In Mark 6:35, the clause “the day was far spent” is, lit., “a much hour (i.e., a late hour) having become,” or, perhaps, “many an hour having become,” i.e., many hours having passed. In the end of the V., RV, “day,” for KJV, “time.” (3) In Mark 2:26, KJV, “in the days of,” there is no word for “days” in the original; RV (from best mss.), “when” in Acts 11:28, “in the days of” (4) In John 21:4, the adjective proios, “at early morn,” is translated “day” (RV, for KJV, “the morning”), see

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 150-151.

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

Matt. 27:1.¶ (5) In 2 Thess. 2:3, “that day shall not come” (KJV) translates nothing in the original; it is inserted to supply the sense (see the RV); cf. Luke 7:11 (RV, “soon afterwards”); 1 Cor. 4:13 (RV, “even until now”).

(6) For “day following” see MORROW.

For DAYBREAK (RV, in Acts 5:21) see DAWN, B

anatole (ἀνατολή, 395), lit., “a rising up” (cf. anatello, “to cause to rise”), is used of the rising of the sun and stars; it chiefly means the east, as in Matt. 2:1, etc.; rendered “dayspring” in Luke 1:78. Its other meaning, “a shoot,” is found in the Sept. in Jer. 23:5; Zech. 6:12. See also the margin of Luke 1:78, “branch.” See EAST.

DAY-STAR

phosphoros (φωσφόρος, 5459), (Eng., “phosphorus,” lit., “light-bearing” phos, “light,” phero, “to bear”), is used of the morning star, as the light-bringer, 2 Pet. 1:19, where it indicates the arising of the light of Christ as the personal fulfillment, in the hearts of believers, of the prophetic Scriptures concerning His coming to receive them to Himself.¶

DAZZLING

1. astrapto (ἀστράπτω, 797), “to flash forth, lighten,” is said of lightning, Luke 17:24, and of the apparel of the two men by the Lord’s sepulchre, 24:4, KJV, “shining.” See LIGHTEN, SHINE.¶

2. exastrapto (ἐξαστράπτω, 1823), a strengthened form of No. 1 (ek, out of), signifies “to flash like lightning, gleam, be radiant,” in Luke 9:29 of the Lord’s raiment at His transfiguration, RV, “dazzling”; KJV, “glistening.”¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 1:4, 7; Nahum 3:3.¶

DEACON

diakonos (διάκονος, 1249), (Eng., “deacon”), primarily denotes a “servant,” whether as doing servile work, or as an attendant rendering free service, without particular reference to its character. The word is probably connected with the verb dioko, “to hasten after, pursue” (perhaps originally said of a runner). “It occurs in the NT of domestic servants, John 2:5, 9; the civil ruler, Rom. 13:4; Christ, Rom. 15:8; Gal. 2:17; the followers of Christ in relation to their Lord, John 12:26; Eph. 6:21; Col. 1:7; 4:7; the followers of Christ in relation to one another, Matt. 20:26; 23:11, Mark 9:35; 10:43; the servants of Christ in the work of preaching and teaching, 1 Cor. 3:5; 2 Cor. 3:6; 6:4; 11:23; Eph. 3:7; Col. 1:23, 25; 1 Thess. 3:2; 1 Tim. 4:6; those who serve in the churches, Rom. 16:1 (used of a woman here only in NT); Phil. 1:1; 1 Tim. 3:8, 12; false apostles, servants of Satan, 2 Cor. 11:15. Once diakonos is used where, apparently, angels are intended, Matt. 22:13; in v. 3, where men are intended, doulos is used.”*

Diakonos is, generally speaking, to be distinguished from doulos, “a bondservant, slave”; diakonos views a servant in relationship to his work, doulos views him in relationship to his master. See, e.g., Matt. 22:2-14; those who bring in the guests (vv. 3-4, 6, 8, 10) are douloi those who carry out the king's sentence (v. 13) are diakonoι.¶

Note: As to synonymous terms, leitourgος denotes "one who performs public duties"; misthios and misthotos, "a hired servant"; oiketes, "a household servant"; huperetes, "a subordinate official waiting on his superior" (originally an under-rower in a war-galley); therapon, "one whose service is that of freedom and dignity." See MINISTER, SERVANT.

The so-called "seven deacons" in Acts 6 are not there mentioned by that name, though the kind of service in which they were engaged was of the character of that committed to such.

DEAD

A. Noun and Adjective.

nekros (νεκρός, 3498) is used of (a) the death of the body, cf. Jas. 2:26, its most frequent sense: (b) the actual spiritual condition of unsaved men, Matt. 8:22; John 5:25; Eph. 2:1, 5; 5:14; Phil. 3:11; Col. 2:13; cf. Luke 15:24: (c) the ideal spiritual condition of believers in regard to sin, Rom. 6:11: (d) a church in declension, inasmuch as in that state it is inactive and barren, Rev. 3:1: (e) sin, which apart from law cannot produce a sense of guilt, Rom. 7:8: (f) the body of the believer in contrast to his spirit, Rom. 8:10: (g) the works of the Law, inasmuch as, however good in themselves, Rom. 7:13, they cannot produce life, Heb. 6:1; 9:14: (h) the faith that does not produce works, Jas. 2:17, 26; cf. v. 20.†

B. Verbs.

1. nekroo (νεκρόω, 3499), "to put to death," is used in the active voice in the sense of destroying the strength of, depriving of power, with reference to the evil desires which work in the body, Col. 3:5. In the passive voice it is used of Abraham's body as being "as good as dead," Rom. 4:19 with Heb. 11:12.¶

2. thanatoo (θανατόω, 2289), "to put to death": see DEATH, C, No. 1.

DEADLY

1. thanatephoros (θανατήφορος, 2287), lit., "death-bearing, deadly" (thanatos, "death," phero, "to bear"), is used in Jas. 3:8.¶ In the Sept., Num. 18:22; Job 33:23.¶

2. thanasimos (θανάσιμος, 2286), from thanatos (see No. 1), "belonging to death, or partaking of the nature of death," is used in Mark 16:18.¶

HALF DEAD

hemithanes (ήμιθανής, 2253), from hemi, "half," and thnesko, "to die," is used in Luke 10:30.¶

DEADNESS

nekrosis (νέκρωσις, 3500), "a putting to death" (cf. DEAD, A and B), is rendered "dying" in 2 Cor. 4:10; "deadness" in Rom. 4:19, i.e., the state of being virtually "dead."¶

† From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 143.

kophos (κωφός, 2974), akin to kopto, “to beat,” and kopiao, “to be tired” (from a root kop, “to cut”), signifies “blunted, dull,” as of a weapon; hence, “blunted in tongue, dumb,” Matt. 9:32 etc.; “in hearing, deaf,” Matt. 11:5; Mark 7:32, 37; 9:25; Luke 7:22. See DUMB.

For a GREAT DEAL see GREAT

merizo (μερίζω, 3307) signifies “to divide into parts” (meros, “a portion, part”); hence, “to distribute, divide out, deal out to,” translated “hath dealt” in Rom. 12:3. See DIFFERENCE, DISTRIBUTE, DIVINE.

DEAL WITH, HAVE DEALINGS WITH

1. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” used to describe almost any act, whether complete or repeated, like the Eng. “do,” is translated to deal with, in Luke 2:48. In Luke 1:25, KJV, “hath dealt with (me),” the RV, adhering to the ordinary meaning, translates by “hath done unto (me).”

2. prosphero (προσφέρω, 4374), “to bring or bear to” (pros, “to,” phero, “to bear”), signifies, in the middle voice, to bear oneself towards any one, to deal with anyone in a certain manner, Heb. 12:7, “God dealeth with you.” See BRING, OFFER, PRESENT.

3. sunchraomai (συνχράομαι, 4798), lit., “to use with” (sun, “with,” chraomai, “to use”), “to have in joint use, and hence to have dealings with,” is said, in John 4:9, of Jews and Samaritans.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 25:24, entunchano, “to fall in with, meet and talk with,” and hence “to make suit to a person” by way of pleading with him, is translated “have dealt with” in the KJV; correctly in the RV, “have made suit to,” of the Jews in appealing to Festus against Paul. See INTERCESSION.

(2) Katasophizomai, “to circumvent by fraud, conquer by subtle devices” (kata, “down,” intensive, and sophizo, “to devise cleverly or cunningly”; cf. Eng., “sophist, sophistry”), is translated “dealt subtilly,” in Acts 7:19, of Pharaoh’s dealings with the Israelites.¶ This is the word in the Sept. of Ex. 1:10. See SUBTILLY.¶

(3) In 1 Thess. 2:11 the italicized phrase “we dealt with” (RV), has no corresponding word in the original, but is inserted in order to bring out the participial forms of the verbs “exhorting,” “encouraging,” “testifying,” as showing the constant practice of the apostles at Thessalonica. The incompleteness of the sentence in the original illustrates the informal homeliness of the Epistle.

(4) In 2 Cor. 13:10, the verb chraomai, “to use,” is rendered, in the RV, “deal (sharply),” KJV, “use (sharpness).”

DEAR

1. timios (τίμιος, 5093), from time, “honor, price,” signifies (a), primarily, “accounted as of great price, precious, costly,” 1 Cor. 3:12; Rev. 17:4; 18:12, 16; 21:19, and in the superlative degree, 18:12; 21:11; the comparative degree is found in 1 Pet. 1:7 (polutimoteros, in the most authentic mss., “much more precious”); (b) in the metaphorical sense, “held in honor, esteemed, very dear,” Acts 5:34, “had in honor,” RV

2. entimos (ἐντιμος, 1784), “held in honor” (time, see above), “precious, dear,” is found in Luke 7:2, of the centurion’s servant; 14:8, “more honorable”; Phil. 2:29, “honor” (KJV, “reputation”), of devoted servants of Christ, in 1 Pet. 2:4, 6, “precious,” of stones, metaphorically. See HONORABLE, REPUTATION, PRECIOUS.¶

3. agapetos (ἀγαπητός, 27), from agape, “love,” signifies “beloved”; it is rendered “very dear” in 1 Thess. 2:8 (KJV, “dear”), of the affection of Paul and his fellow workers for the saints at Thessalonica; in Eph. 5:1 and Col. 1:7, KJV, dear; RV, “beloved.” See BELOVED.

Note: In Col. 1:13, agape is translated “dear” in the KJV; the RV, adhering to the noun, has “the Son of His love.”

For DEARLY see BELOVED

For DEARTH see FAMINE

DEATH, DEATH-STROKE (See also DIE)

A. Nouns

1. thanatos (θάνατος, 2288), “death,” is used in Scripture of:

(b) the separation of man from God; Adam died on the day he disobeyed God, Gen. 2:17, and hence all mankind are born in the same spiritual condition, Rom. 5:12, 14, 17, 21, from which, however, those who believe in Christ are delivered, John 5:24; 1 John 3:14. “Death” is the opposite of life; it never denotes nonexistence. As spiritual life is “conscious existence in communion with God,” so spiritual “death” is “conscious existence in separation from God.”

2. anairesis (ἀνάρισις, 336), another word for “death,” lit. signifies “a taking up or off” (ana, “up,” airo, “to take”), as of the taking of a life, or “putting to death”; it is found in Acts 8:1, of the murder of Stephen. Some mss. have it in 22:20. See anaireo, under KILL.¶ In the Sept., Num. 11:15; Judg. 15:17, “the lifting of the jawbone.”¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 134.

3. teleute (τελευτή, 5054), “an end, limit” (cf. telos, see END), hence, “the end of life, death,” is used of the “death” of Herod, Matt. 2:15.¶

B. Adjective.

epithanatos (ἐπιθανάτιος, 1935), “doomed to death” (epi, “upon,” thanatos, A, No. 1), is said of the apostles, in 1 Cor. 4:9.¶

C. Verbs.

1. thanatoo (θανατόω, 2289), “to put to death” (akin to A, No. 1), in Matt. 10:21; Mark 13:12; Luke 21:16, is translated “shall ... cause (them) to be put to death,” lit., “shall put (them) to death” (RV marg.). It is used of the death of Christ in Matt. 26:59; 27:1; Mark 14:55 and 1 Pet. 3:18. In Rom. 7:4 (passive voice) it is translated “ye ... were made dead,” RV (for KJV, “are become”), with reference to the change from bondage to the Law to union with Christ; in 8:13, “mortify” (marg., “make to die”), of the act of the believer in regard to the deeds of the body; in 8:36, “are killed”; so in 2 Cor. 6:9. See KILL, MORTIFY.¶

2. anaireo (ἀναιρέω, 337), lit., “to take or lift up or away” (see A, No. 2), hence, “to put to death,” is usually translated “to kill or slay”; in two places “put to death,” Luke 23:32; Acts 26:10. It is used 17 times, with this meaning, in Acts. See KILL, SLAY, TAKE.

3. apago (ἀπάγω, 520), lit., “to lead away” (apo, “away,” ago, “to lead”), is used especially in a judicial sense, “to put to death,” e.g., Acts 12:19. See BRING, CARRY, LEAD, TAKE.

4. apokteino (ἀποκτείνω, 615), to kill, is so translated in the RV, for the KJV, “put to death,” in Mark 14:1; Luke 18:33; in John 11:53; 12:10 and 18:31, RV, “put to death.” See KILL, SLAY.

Note: The phrase eschatos echo, lit., “to have extremely,” i.e., “to be in extremity,” in extremis, “at the last (gasp), to be at the point of death,” is used in Mark 5:23.¶

For the KJV DEBATE (Rom. 1:29 and 2 Cor. 12:20) see STRIFE DEBT

1. opheile (ὀφειλή, 3782), “that which is owed” (see Note, below), is translated “debt” in Matt. 18:32; in the plural, “dues,” Rom. 13:7; “(her) due,” 1 Cor. 7:3, of conjugal duty: some texts here have opheilomenen (eunoian) “due (benevolence),” KJV; the context confirms the RV. See DUE.¶

2. opheilema (ὀφείλημα, 3783), a longer form of No. 1, expressing a “debt” more concretely, is used (a) literally, of that which is legally due, Rom. 4:4; (b) metaphorically, of sin as a “debt,” because it demands expiation, and thus payment by way of punishment, Matt. 6:12.¶

3. daneion (δάνειον, 1156), “a loan” (akin to danos, “a gift”), is translated “debt” in Matt. 18:27 (RV, marg., “loan”), of the ten thousand talents debtor.¶ Cf. daneizo, “to lend,” and daneistes, “a money-lender, a creditor.”

Note: In Matt. 18:30, opheilo, “to owe,” is translated “debt” in the KJV (RV, “that which was due.”). See DUE.

DEBTOR

1. opheiletes (ὀφειλέτης, 3781), “one who owes anything to another,” primarily in regard to money; in Matt. 18:24, “who owed” (lit., “one was brought, a debtor to him of ten thousand talents”). The slave could own property, and so become a “debtor” to his master, who might seize him for payment.

It is used metaphorically,

2. chreopheiletes (χρεωφειλέτης, 5533), lit., “a debt-ower” (chreos, “a loan, a debt,” and No. 1), is found in Luke 7:41, of the two “debtors” mentioned in the Lord’s parable addressed to Simon the Pharisee, and in 16:5, of the “debtors” in the parable of the unrighteous steward. This parable indicates a system of credit in the matter of agriculture.¶ In the Sept., Job 31:37, “having taken nothing from the debtor”; Prov. 29:13, “when the creditor and the debtor meet together.”¶ The word is more expressive than No. 1.

Note: In Matt. 23:16 opheilo, “to owe” (see DEBT), is translated “he is a debtor.” The RV marg., keeping the verbal form, has “bound by his oath” (KJV, marg., “bound”). In the 18th verse the KJV, “he is guilty,” means that he is under obligation to make amends for his misdeeds.

DECAY

1. palaioo (παλαιόω, 3822), “to make old” (palaios), is translated in Heb. 8:13, firstly, “hath made ... old,” secondly (passive voice), RV “is becoming old” (KJV, “decayeth”); “wax old,” Luke 12:33 and Heb. 1:11. See OLD.¶

2. diaphtheiro (διαφθείρω, 1311), “to destroy utterly,” as used in 2 Cor. 4:16 (here in the passive voice, lit., “is being destroyed”), is rendered “is decaying” (RV, for KJV, “perish”). See CORRUPT, DESTROY.

DECEASE

A. Noun.

exodos (ἐξοδος, 1841), (Eng., “exodus”), lit. signifies “a way out” (ex, “out,” hodos, “a way”); hence, “a departure,” especially from life, “a decease”; in Luke 9:31, of the Lord’s death, “which He was about to accomplish”; in 2 Pet. 1:15, of Peter’s death (marg., “departure” in each case); “departure” in Heb. 11:22, RV. See DEPARTURE.¶

B. Verb.

teleutao (τελευτάω, 5053), lit., “to end,” is used intransitively and translated “deceased” in Matt. 22:25. See DEATH, A, No. 3, DIE.

DECEIT, DECEITFUL, DECEITFULLY, DECEITFULNESS, DECEIVE, DECEIVABLENESS

A. Nouns.

1. apate (ἀπάτη, 539), “deceit or deceitfulness” (akin to apatao, “to cheat, deceive, beguile”), that which gives a false impression, whether by appearance, statement or influence, is said of riches, Matt. 13:22; Mark 4:19; of sin, Heb. 3:13. The phrase in Eph. 4:22, “deceitful lusts,” KJV, “lusts of deceit,” RV, signifies lusts excited by “deceit,” of which “deceit” is the source of strength, not lusts “deceitful” in themselves. In 2 Thess. 2:10, “all deceit of unrighteousness,” RV, signifies all manner of unscrupulous words and deeds designed to “deceive” (see Rev. 13:13-15). In Col. 2:8, “vain deceit” suggests that “deceit” is void of anything profitable.¶

Note: In 2 Pet. 2:13, the most authentic texts have “revelling in their love-feasts,” RV (agapais), for KJV, “deceivings” (apatais).

2. dolos (δόλος, 1388), primarily “a bait, snare”; hence, “craft, deceit, guile,” is translated “deceit” in Mark 7:22; Rom. 1:29. See CRAFT, GUILLE, SUBTILTY.

Notes: (1) Plane, rendered “deceit” in 1 Thess. 2:3, KJV, signifies wandering (cf. Eng., “planet”), hence, “error” (RV), i.e., a wandering from the right path; in Eph. 4:14, “wiles of error,” KJV, “to deceive.” See DELUDE, ERROR. (2) For dolioo, “to use deceit,” see C, No. 4.

B. Adjective.

dolios (δόλιος, 1386), “deceitful,” is used in 2 Cor. 11:13, of false apostles as “deceitful workers”; cf. A, No. 2 and Note (2).¶

C. Verbs.

1. apatao (ἀπατάω, 538), “to beguile, deceive” (see A, No. 1), is used (a) of those who “deceive” “with empty words,” belittling the true character of the sins mentioned, Eph. 5:6; (b) of the fact that Adam was “not beguiled,” 1 Tim. 2:14, RV (cf. what is said of Eve; see No. 2 below); (c) of the “self-deceit” of him who thinks himself religious, but bridles not his tongue, Jas. 1:26.¶

2. exapatao (ἐξαπατάω, 1818), ek (ex), intensive, and No. 1, signifies “to beguile thoroughly, to deceive wholly,” 1 Tim. 2:14, RV. See BEGUILE.

3. phrenapatao (φρεναπατάω, 5422), lit., “to deceive in one’s mind” (phren, “the mind,” and No. 1), “to deceive by fancies” (Lightfoot), is used in Gal. 6:3, with reference to self-conceit, which is “self-deceit,” a sin against common sense. Cf. Jas. 1:26 (above).¶

Note: Cf. phrenapates, No. 2, under DECEIVE.

4. dolioo (δολιόω, 1387), “to lure,” as by a bait (see A, No. 2), is translated “have used deceit” in Rom. 3:13.¶

5. doloo (δολόω, 1389), a short form of No. 4, primarily signifies “to ensnare”; hence, “to corrupt,” especially by mingling the truths of the Word of God with false doctrines or notions, and so handling it “deceitfully,” 2 Cor. 4:2.¶ Cf. kapeleuo, “to corrupt by way of hucksterizing,” 2:17.¶ For the difference between the words see CORRUPT, A, No. 1.

6. planao (πλανάω, 4105), akin to plane, A, Note (1) (Eng., “planet”), in the passive form sometimes means “to go astray, wander,” Matt. 18:12; 1 Pet. 2:25; Heb. 11:38; frequently active, “to deceive, by leading into error, to seduce,” e.g., Matt. 24:4, 5, 11, 24; John 7:12, “leadeth astray,” RV (cf. 1 John 3:7). In Rev. 12:9 the present participle is used with the definite article, as a title of the Devil, “the Deceiver,” lit., “the deceiving one.” Often it has the sense of “deceiving oneself,” e.g., 1 Cor. 6:9; 15:33; Gal. 6:7; Jas. 1:16, “be not deceived,” RV, “do not err,” KJV. See ERR, LEAD (astray), SEDUCE, WANDER, WAY (be out of the).

7. paralogizomai (παραλογίζομαι, 3884); see BEGUILE, No. 3.

DECEIVER

1. planos (πλάνος, 4108) is, properly, an adjective, signifying “wandering, or leading astray, seducing,” 1 Tim. 4:1, “seducing (spirits),” used as a noun, it denotes an impostor of the vagabond type, and so any kind of “deceiver” or corrupter, Matt. 27:63; 2 Cor. 6:8; 2 John 7 (twice), in the last of which the accompanying definite article necessitates the translation “the deceiver,” RV. See SEDUCE.¶

2. phrenapates (φρεναπάτης, 5423), akin to C, No. 3, under DECEIVE, lit., “a mind-deceiver,” is used in Titus 1:10.¶

Note: For “the deceiver,” in Rev. 12:9, see DECEIVE, C, No. 6.

DECENTLY

euschemonos (εὐσχημόνως, 2156) denotes “gracefully, becomingly, in a seemly manner” (eu, “well,” schema, “a form, figure”); “honestly,” in Rom. 13:13 (marg., “decently”), in contrast to the shamefulness of gentile social life; in 1 Thess. 4:12, the contrast is to idleness and its concomitant evils and the resulting bad testimony to unbelievers; in 1 Cor. 14:40, “decently,” where the contrast is to disorder in oral testimony in the churches. See HONESTLY.¶

Note: Cf. euschemosune, “comeliness,” 1 Cor. 12:23.¶, and euschemon, “comely, honorable.” See COMELY.

DECIDE, DECISION

A. Verb.

diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252) primarily signifies “to make a distinction,” hence, “to decide, especially judicially, to decide a dispute, to give judgment,” 1 Cor. 6:5, KJV, “judge”; RV, “decide,” where church members are warned against procuring decisions by litigation in the world’s law courts. See CONTEND.

B. Nouns.

1. diagnosis (διάγνωσις, 1233), transliterated in English, primarily denotes “a discrimination” (dia, “apart,” ginosko, “to know”), hence, “a judicial decision,” which is its meaning in Acts 25:21, RV, “for the decision of the Emperor” (KJV, “hearing”).¶

Note: Cf. diaginosko, “to distinguish,” Acts 23:15, “to judge” (KJV, “enquire”), or “determine,” 24:22, RV (KJV, “know the uttermost of”).¶

2. diakrisis (διάκρισις, 1253), “a distinguishing,” and so “a decision” (see A), signifies “discerning” in 1 Cor. 12:10; Heb. 5:14, lit., “unto a discerning of good and evil” (translated “to discern”); in Rom. 14:1, “not to (doubtful) disputations” is more literally rendered in the margin “not for decisions (of doubts).” See DISCERN. Cf. JUDGE.¶ In the Sept., Job 37:16.¶

chrusoo (χρυσόω, 5558), lit., “to gild with gold” (chrusos, “gold”), is used in Rev. 17:4; 18:16.¶

DECLARE, DECLARATION

A. Verbs.

1. anangelo (ἀναγγέλλω, 312) signifies “to announce, report, bring back tidings” (ana, “back,” angelo, “to announce”). Possibly the ana carries the significance of upward, i.e., heavenly, as characteristic of the nature of the tidings. In the following, either the KJV or the RV translates the word by the verb “to declare”; in John 4:25, RV, “declare,” KJV, “tell”; in 16:13-15, RV, “declare,” KJV, “shew”; in Acts 15:4, RV, “rehearsed,” KJV, “declared”; in 19:18, RV, “declaring,” KJV, “shewed” (a reference, perhaps, to the destruction of their idols, in consequence of their new faith); in 20:20, RV, “declaring,” KJV, “have shewed”; in 1 John 1:5, RV, “announce,” KJV, “declare.” See REHEARSE, REPORT, SHEW, SPEAK, TELL.

2. apangelo (ἀπαγγέλλω, 518) signifies “to announce or report from a person or place” (apo, “from”); hence, “to declare, publish”; it is rendered “declare” in Luke 8:47; Heb. 2:12; 1 John 1:3. It is very frequent in the Gospels and Acts; elsewhere, other than the last two places mentioned, only in 1 Thess. 1:9 and 1 John 1:2. See BRING, A, No. 36.

3. diangelo (διαγγέλλω, 1229), lit., “to announce through,” hence, “to declare fully, or far and wide” (dia, “through”), is translated “declaring” in Acts 21:26, RV (KJV, “to signify”); in Luke 9:60, RV, “publish abroad” (for KJV, “preach”), giving the verb its fuller significance; so in Rom. 9:17, for KJV, “declared.” See PREACH, SIGNIFY.¶

4. katangelo (καταγγέλλω, 2605), lit., “to report down” (kata, intensive), is ordinarily translated “to preach”; “declare” in Acts 17:23, KJV (RV, “set forth”); in 1 Cor. 2:1, RV, “proclaiming,” for KJV, “declaring.” It is nowhere translated by “declare” in the RV. See PREACH, SHOW, SPEAK, TEACH.

5. parangelo (παράγγελλω, 3853): see CHARGE, B, No. 8.

6. diegeomai (διηγέομαι, 1334), “to conduct a narration through to the end” (dia, “through,” intensive, hegeomai, “to lead”), hence denotes “to recount, to relate in full,” Mark 5:16; Luke 8:39; 9:10; Acts 8:33; 9:27; 12:17; in Mark 9:9 and Heb. 11:32, “tell. See SHOW, TELL.¶

7. ekdiegeomai (ἐκδιηγέομαι, 1555), properly, “to narrate in full,” came to denote, “to tell, declare”; it is used in Acts 13:41; 15:3.¶

8. exgeomai (ἐξηγέομαι, 1834), lit., “to lead out,” signifies “to make known, rehearse declare,” Luke 24:35 (KJV, “told”; RV, “rehearsed”); Acts 10:8; 15:12, 14; 21:19. In John 1:18, in the sentence “He hath declared Him,” the other meaning of the verb is in view, to unfold in teaching, “to declare” by making known. See TELL.¶

9. horizo (ὁρίζω, 3724), “to mark off by boundaries,” signifies “to determine,” usually of time; in Rom. 1:4, Christ is said to have been “marked out” as the Son of God, by the fact of His resurrection; “declared” (RV, marg., “determined”). See DEFINE. 10.

deloo (ὁρίζω, 1213), “to make plain,” is rendered “to declare” in 1 Cor. 1:11, KJV; 3:13; Col. 1:8. See SIGNIFY.

11. phrazo (φράζω, 5419), “to declare,” occurs in Matt. 15:15 and (in some texts) in 13:36 (as KJV).

Note: For gnorizo, “to make known,” rendered “to declare” in John 17:26; 1 Cor. 15:1 and Col. 4:7, see KNOW, A, No. 8. For emphanizo, “to declare plainly,” Heb. 11:14, KJV, see MANIFEST, A, No. 2. For phaneroo, see MANIFEST, B, No. 1. For anatithemi, Acts 25:14, KJV, see COMMUNICATE. For declare glad tidings” see TIDINGS.

B. Noun.

endeixis (ἐνδειξις, 1732), “a showing, pointing out” (en, “in,” deiknumi, “to show”), is said of the “showing forth” of God’s righteousness, in Rom. 3:25-26, KJV, “to declare”; RV, “to show,” and “(for) the showing.” In 2 Cor. 8:24, “proof”; Phil. 1:28, “an evident token.” See SHOW, TOKEN.¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 1:1, diegesis is a “narrative” (RV), not a “declaration” (KJV).

(2) In 2 Cor. 8:19, “declaration” does not represent any word in the original.

DECREASE (Verb)

elattoo (ἐλαττώω, 1642) signifies “to make less or inferior, in quality, position or dignity”; “madest ... lower” and “hast made ... lower,” in Heb. 2:7, 9. In John 3:30, it is used in the middle voice, in John the Baptist’s “I must decrease,” indicating the special interest he had in his own “decrease,” i.e., in authority and popularity. See LOWER.¶

DECREE (Noun and Verb)

dogma (δόγμα, 1378), transliterated in English, primarily denoted “an opinion or judgment” (from dokeo, “to be of opinion”), hence, an “opinion expressed with authority, a doctrine, ordinance, decree”; “decree,” Luke 2:1; Acts 16:4; 17:7; in the sense of ordinances, Eph. 2:15; Col. 2:14. See ORDINANCE.¶

Note: Krino, “to determine,” is translated “hath decreed” in 1 Cor. 7:37, KJV; RV, “hath determined.”

DEDICATE, DEDICATION

A. Verb.

enkainizo (ἐγκαινίζω, 1457) primarily means “to make new, to renew” (en, “in,” kainos, “new”), as in the Sept. of 2 Chron. 15:8; then, to initiate or “dedicate,” Heb. 9:18, with reference to the first covenant, as not “dedicated” without blood; in 10:20, of Christ’s “dedication” of the new and living way (KJV, “consecrated”; RV, “dedicated”). See CONSECRATE.¶ In the Sept. it has this meaning in Deut. 20:5; 2 Chron. 7:5; Isa. 16:11; 41:1; 45:16, “keep feast (to Me).”

B. Noun.

enkainia (ἐγκαινία, 1456), akin to A, frequent in the Sept., in the sense of “dedication,” became used particularly for the annual eight days’ feast beginning on the 25th of Chisleu (mid. of Dec.), instituted by Judas Maccabaeus, 164, B.C., to commemorate the cleansing of the Temple from the pollutions of Antiochus Epiphanes;

hence it was called the Feast of the Dedication, John 10:22. This feast could be celebrated anywhere. The lighting of lamps was a prominent feature; hence the description “Feast of Lights.” Westcott suggests that John 9:5 refers to this.¶

DEED, DEEDS

1. ergon (ἔργον, 2041) denotes “a work” (Eng., “work” is etymologically akin), “deed, act.” When used in the sense of a “deed or act,” the idea of “working” is stressed, e.g., Rom. 15:18; it frequently occurs in an ethical sense of human actions, good or bad, e.g., Matt. 23:3; 26:10; John 3:20-21; Rom. 2:7, 15; 1 Thess. 1:3; 2 Thess. 1:11, etc.; sometimes in a less concrete sense, e.g., Titus 1:16; Jas. 1:25 (RV that worketh, lit., of work). See LABOR, WORK.

2. praxis (πράξις, 4234) denotes “a doing, transaction, a deed the action of which is looked upon as incomplete and in progress” (cf. prasso, “to practice”); in Matt. 16:27, RV, “deeds,” for KJV, “works”; in Luke 23:51, “deed”; in v. 41, the verb is used [see Note (2) below]; Acts 19:18; Rom. 8:13; Col. 3:9. In Rom. 12:4 it denotes an “action,” business, or function, translated “office.” See OFFICE, WORK.¶

Note: Contrast pragma, “that which has been done, an accomplished act,” e.g., Jas. 3:16, RV, “deed,” KJV, “work.”

3. poiesis (ποίησις, 4162), “a doing” (akin to poieo, “to do”), is translated “deed” in Jas. 1:25, KJV, (RV, “doing”).¶

4. euergesia (εὐεργεσία, 2108): see BENEFIT, No. 1.

Notes: (1) Katargazomai, “to work out, bring about something, to perpetrate a deed,” is used with the neuter demonstrative pronoun touto “this,” in 1 Cor. 5:3, “hath (so) done this deed,” KJV; RV, “hath (so) wrought this thing.”

(2) Prasso (see No. 2), is used in Luke 23:41, with the neuter plural of the relative pronoun “of our deeds”; lit., “(the things) which we practiced.”

(3) In 2 Cor. 12:12 the phrase “mighty deeds” (RV, “mighty works”) translates dunameis, “powers” (marg.). See WORK.

(4) In Acts 24:2, diorthoma, “a straightening,” with ginomai, “to become,” is translated in the KJV, “very worthy deeds are done,” RV, “evils are corrected”; more lit., “reforms take place.”¶ For the variant reading katorthoma, see CORRECTION, No. 1.

DEEM

huponoeo (ὑπονοέω, 5282), “to suppose, conjecture, surmise,” is translated “deemed” in Acts 27:27, KJV (RV, “surmised”); in 13:25, “think ye” (KJV); RV, “suppose ye”; in 25:18, supposed. See SUPPOSE, THINK.¶

DEEP (Noun and Adjective), DEEPNESS, DEEPLY, DEPTH

A. Nouns.

1. bathos (βάθος, 899) is used (a) naturally, in Matt. 13:5, “deepness”; Mark 4:5, KJV, “depth,” RV, “deepness”; Luke 5:4, of “deep” water; Rom. 8:39 (contrasted with hupsoma, “height”); (b) metaphorically, in Rom. 11:33, of God’s wisdom and knowledge; in 1 Cor. 2:10, of God’s counsels; in Eph. 3:18, of the dimensions of the sphere of the activities of God’s counsels, and of the love of Christ which occupies that sphere; in 2 Cor. 8:2, of “deep” poverty; some mss. have it in Rev. 2:24.¶

2. buthos (βυθός, 1037), “a depth,” is used in the NT only in the natural sense, of the sea 2 Cor. 11:25.¶

Notes: (1) Cf. buthizo, “to sink” (intransitive), middle voice, Luke 5:7; (transitive) “to drown,” 1 Tim. 6:9.¶

(2) Abussos, (Eng., “abyss”), is translated “the deep” in Luke 8:31 and Rom. 10:7, KJV. See ABYSS, BOTTOM.

B. Adjective and Adverb.

bathus (βαθύς, 901), akin to A, No. 1, “deep,” is said in John 4:11, of a well; in Acts 20:9, of sleep; in Rev. 2:24 the plural is used, of the “deep things,” the evil designs and workings, of Satan.

Notes: (1) In Luke 24:1, some mss. have batheos, the genitive case, with orthros, “dawn”; the most authentic mss. have batheos, “deeply,” i.e., very early.

(2) In Mark 8:12, “He sighed deeply” represents anastenazo, “to fetch a deep-drawn sigh” (ana, “up,” stenazo, “to sigh or groan”). See SIGH.¶

C. Verb.

bathuno (βαθύνω, 900), “to deepen, make deep,” is used in Luke 6:48 (KJV, “digged deep”). The original has two separate verbs, skapto, “to dig,” and bathuno; the RV therefore has “digged and went deep.”¶

dusphemeo (δυσ-, 1418 and δυσ-, 5346), lit., “to speak injuriously” (from dus□, an inseparable prefix signifying “opposition, injury, etc.,” and phemi, “to speak”), is translated “defamed,” 1 Cor. 4:13. Some mss. have blasphemeo. See BLASPHEME.¶

DEFECT

hettema (ἥττημα, 2275), primarily “a lessening, a decrease, diminution,” denotes “a loss.” It is used of the “loss” sustained by the Jewish nation in that they had rejected God’s testimonies and His Son and the gospel, Rom. 11:12, the reference being not only to national diminution but to spiritual “loss”; RV, “loss,” for KJV, “diminishing.” Here the contrasting word is pleroma, “fullness.” In 1 Cor. 6:7 the reference is to the spiritual “loss” sustained by the church at Corinth because of their discord and their litigious ways in appealing to the world’s judges. Here the RV has “defect” (marg. “loss”), for KJV “fault.” The preceding adverb “altogether” shows the comprehensiveness of the “defect”; the “loss” affected the whole church, and was “an utter detriment.”

In the Sept. of Isa. 31:8 the word signifies the “loss” of a defeat, with reference to the overthrow of the Assyrians; lit. “his young men shall be for loss” (i.e., “tributary”). See DIMINISHING, FAULT, LOSS.¶

Note: Cf. hettao, “to make inferior,” used in the passive voice, “to be overcome” (of spiritual defeat, 2 Pet. 2:20), and the adjective hetton or hesson, “less, worse.”

DEFEND

amuno (ἀμύνομαι, 292), “to ward off,” is used in the middle voice in Acts 7:24, of the assistance given by Moses to his fellow Israelite against an Egyptian (translated, “defended”). The middle voice indicates the special personal interest Moses had in the act.¶

DEFENSE

apologia (ἀπολογία, 627), a speech made in defense. See ANSWER.

B. Verb.

apologeomai (ἀπολογέομαι, 626): see ANSWER, B, No. 4.

DEFER

anaballo (ἀναβάλλομαι, 306), lit., “to throw up” (ana, “up,” ballo, “to throw”), hence “to postpone,” is used in the middle voice in Acts 24:22, in the forensic sense of “deferring” the hearing of a case.¶

Note: Cf. anabole, “a putting off, delay” Acts 25:17.¶

DEFILE, DEFILEMENT

A. Verbs.

1. koīnoo (κοινώω, 2840) denotes (a) “to make common”; hence, in a ceremonial sense, “to render unholy, unclean, to defile,” Matt. 15:11, 18, 20; Mark 7:15, 18, 20, 23; Acts 21:28 (RV, “defiled”; KJV, “polluted”); Heb. 9:13 (RV, “them that have been defiled,” KJV, “the unclean”); (b) “to count unclean,” Acts 10:15; 11:9. In Rev. 21:27, some mss. have this verb, “defileth”; the most authentic have the adjective, koinos, “unclean.” See CALL, COMMON.¶

2. miaino (μιάινω, 3392), primarily, “to stain, to tinge or dye with another color,” as in the staining of a glass, hence, “to pollute, contaminate, soil, defile,” is used (a) of “ceremonial defilement,” John 18:28; so in the Sept., in Lev. 22:5, 8; Num. 19:13, 20 etc.; (b) of “moral defilement,” Titus 1:15 (twice); Heb. 12:15; “of moral and physical defilement,” Jude 8. See B, Nos. 1 and 2.¶

3. moluno (μολύνω, 3435) properly denotes “to besmear,” as with mud or filth, “to befoul.” It is used in the figurative sense, of a conscience “defiled” by sin, 1 Cor. 8:7; of believers who have kept themselves (their “garments”) from “defilement,” Rev. 3:4, and of those who have not “soiled” themselves by adultery or fornication, Rev. 14:4.¶

Note: The difference between miaino and moluno is that the latter is not used in a ritual or ceremonial sense, as miaino is (Trench, Syn. Sec.xxxi).

4. spīloo (σπιλώω, 4695), “to make a stain or spot,” and so “to defile,” is used in Jas. 3:6 of the “defiling” effects of an evil use of the tongue; in Jude 23, “spotted,” with reference to moral “defilement.” See SPOT.¶

Note: (1) Cf. spilos, “a spot, a moral blemish,” Eph. 5:27; 2 Pet. 2:13;¶ aspilos, “without spot, spotless,” 1 Tim. 6:14; Jas. 1:27; 1 Pet. 1:19; 2 Pet. 3:14;¶ spilas, Jude 12, “hidden rocks,” RV (KJV “spots,” a late meaning, equivalent to spilos).¶

5. phtheiro (φθείρω, 5351): see CORRUPT, A, No. 2.

B. Nouns.

1. miasma (μίασμα, 3393), whence the Eng. word, denotes “defilement” (akin to A, No. 2), and is found in 2 Pet. 2:20, KV, “pollutions,” RV, “defilements,” the vices of the ungodly which contaminate a person in his intercourse with the world.¶

2. miasmos (μιασμός, 3394), also akin to A, No. 2, primarily denotes “the act of defiling,” the process, in contrast to the “defiling” thing (No. 1). It is found in 2 Pet. 2:10 (KJV, “uncleanness,” RV, “defilement.”).¶

3. molusmos (μολυσμός, 3436), akin to A, No. 3, denotes “defilement,” in the sense of an action by which anything is “defiled,” 2 Cor. 7:1.¶ Cf. the synonymous word spilos, A, No. 4, Note.

C. Adjective.

koinos (κοινός, 2839), akin to A, No. 1, common, and, from the idea of coming into contact with everything, “defiled,” is used in the ceremonial sense in Mark 7:2; in v. 5, RV, “defiled,” for KJV, “unwashed” (the verb is used in 7:15). See COMMON, UNCLEAN.

DEFINE

horizo (ὀρίζω, 3724), (Eng., “horizon”), primarily means “to mark out the boundaries of a place” (as in the Sept. of Num. 34:6; Josh. 13:27); hence “to determine, appoint.” In Heb. 4:7, where the reference is to the time of God’s invitation to enter into His rest, in contrast to Israel’s failure to do so, the word may mean either the appointing of the day (i.e., the period), or the “defining” of the day, i.e., marking its limits. So the RV (KJV, “limiteth”). See DECLARE, DETERMINE, LIMIT, ORDAIN.

DEFRAUD

1. apostereo (ἀποστερέω, 650) signifies “to rob, despoil, defraud,” Mark 10:19; 1 Cor. 6:8; 7:5 (of that which is due to the condition of natural relationship of husband and wife); in the middle voice, “to allow oneself to be defrauded,” 1 Cor. 6:7; in the passive voice, “bereft,” 1 Tim. 6:5, RV, with reference to the truth, with the suggestion of being retributively “robbed” of the truth, through the corrupt condition of the mind. Some mss. have this verb in Jas. 5:4 for aphustereo, “to keep back by fraud.” See BEREFT, DESTITUTE, FRAUD.¶ In the Sept., Exod. 21:10; in some mss, Deut. 24:14.¶

2. pleonekteo (πλεονεκτέω, 4122), translated “defraud” in 1 Thess. 4:6, KJV (RV, “wrong”), the reference being to the latter part of the Tenth Commandment. See ADVANTAGE, C, No. 2.

DEGREE

bathmos (βαθμός, 898) denotes “a step,” primarily of a threshold or stair, and is akin to baino, “to go”; figuratively, “a standing, a stage in a career, position, degree,” 1 Tim. 3:13, of faithful deacons.¶

Note: Tapeinos, “low, humble,” whether in condition or mind, is translated “of low degree” in Luke 1:52 and Jas. 1:9.¶

DELAY

A. Verbs.

1. okneo (ὀκνέω, 3635), akin to oknos, “a shrinking, to be loath or slow to do a thing, to hesitate, delay,” is used in Acts 9:38.¶ In the Sept. in Num. 22:16, “do not delay”; Judg. 18:9.¶

2. chronizo (χρονίζω, 5549), from chronos, “time,” lit. means “to while away time,” i.e., by way of lingering, tarrying, “delaying”; “delayeth,” Matt. 24:48; Luke 12:45, “tarried” Matt. 25:5; “tarried so long,” Luke 1:21; “will (not) tarry,” Heb. 10:37. See TARRY.¶

B. Noun.

anabole (ἀναβολή, 311) lit. signifies “that which is thrown up” (ana, “up,” ballo, “to throw”); hence “a delay,” Acts 25:17. See DEFER.¶

Note: In Rev. 10:6, chronos is translated “delay” in RV marg., and is to be taken as the true meaning.

DELICACIES

Note: For strenos, rendered “delicacies” in Rev. 18:3, KJV, denoting “wantonness” (RV), i.e., arrogant luxury, see WANTON.¶ Cf. the verb streniao, below, under DELICATELY.

DELICATELY (live)

A. Verbs.

truphao (τρυφάω, 5171), from thrupto, “to enervate,” signifies “to lead a voluptuous life, to give oneself up to pleasure,” Jas. 5:5, RV, “ye have lived delicately”; KJV, “ye have lived in pleasure.”¶

Notes: (1) Cf. spatalao, from spatale, “wantonness, to live riotously,” used with A in Jas. 5:5, “ye have lived in pleasure” (RV, “have taken your ...”); cf. 1 Tim. 5:6, of carnal women in the church, KJV, “liveth in pleasure,” RV, “giveth herself to pleasure.” See PLEASURE.¶

(2) Cf. also streniao, “to run riot,” translated “lived deliciously,” in Rev. 18:7, 9, KJV (RV, “waxed wanton” and “lived wantonly”). Cf DELICACIES (above). See WANTON.¶ Cf. the intensive form katastreniao, “to wax utterly wanton,” 1 Tim. 5:11.¶

(3) Spatalao “might properly be laid to the charge of the prodigal, scattering his substance in riotous living, Luke 15:13; ... truphao to the charge of the rich man, faring sumptuously every day, Luke 16:19; streniao to Jeshurun, when, waxing fat, he kicked, Deut. 32:15” (Trench, Syn. Sec.liv).

B. Noun.

truphe (τρυφή, 5172), akin to A, is used with en, in the phrase en truphe, “luxuriously,” “delicately,” Luke 7:25, and denotes effeminacy, softness; “to revel” in 2

Pet. 2:13 (KJV, “riot”), lit., “counting reveling in the day time a pleasure.” See REVEL, RIOT.¶

Note: Entruphao, “to revel luxuriously,” is used in 2 Pet. 2:13, RV, “reveling” (KJV, “sporting themselves”).¶

For DELICIOUSLY, Rev. 18:7, 9, KJV, see Note (1) above

DELIGHT IN

sunedomai (συνήδομαι, 4913), lit., “to rejoice with (anyone), to delight in (a thing) with (others),” signifies “to delight with oneself inwardly in a thing,” in Rom. 7:22.¶

Note: Cf. hedone, “desire, pleasure.”

DELIVER, DELIVERANCE, DELIVERER

A. Verbs.

1. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is translated “delivered” in Luke 7:15; RV, “gave”; so 19:13. See GIVE.

2. anadidomi (ἀναδίδωμι, 325), ana, “up,” and No. 1, “to deliver over, give up,” is used of “delivering” the letter mentioned in Acts 23:33.¶

Note: For the different verb in Acts 15:30, see No. 4.

3. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), apo, “from,” and No. 1, lit., “to give away,” hence, “to give back or up,” is used in Pilate’s command for the Lord’s body to be “given up,” Matt. 27:58; in the sense of “giving back,” of the Lord’s act in giving a healed boy back to his father, Luke 9:42. See GIVE, PAY, PAYMENT, PERFORM, RECOMPENSE, RENDER, REPAY, REQUITE, RESTORE, REWARD, SELL, YIELD.

4. epididomi (ἐπιδίδωμι, 1929), lit., “to give upon or in addition,” as from oneself to another, hence, “to deliver over,” is used of the “delivering” of the roll of Isaiah to Christ in the synagogue, Luke 4:17; of the “delivering” of the epistle from the elders at Jerusalem to the church at Antioch, Acts 15:30. See DRIVE (let), GIVE, OFFER.

5. paradidomi (παραδίδωμι, 3860), “to deliver over,” in Rom. 6:17, RV, “that form of teaching whereunto ye were delivered,” the figure being that of a mold which gives its shape to what is cast in it (not as the KJV). In Rom. 8:32 it is used of God in “delivering” His Son to expiatory death; so 4:25; see Mark 9:31; of Christ in “delivering” Himself up, Gal. 2:20; Eph. 5:2, 25. See BETRAY, A. In Mark 1:14, RV, it is used of “delivering” John the Baptist to prison. See PUT, No. 12.

6. apallasso (ἀπαλλάσσω, 525), lit., “to change from” (apo, “from,” allasso, “to change”), “to free from, release,” is translated “might deliver” in Heb. 2:15; in Luke 12:58, it is used in a legal sense of being quit of a person, i.e., the opponent being appeased and withdrawing his suit. For its other meaning, “to depart,” in Acts 19:12, see DEPART.¶

7. eleutheroo (ἐλευθερόω, 1659), “to set free,” is translated “deliver” in Rom. 8:21. In six other places it is translated “make free,” John 8:32, 36; Rom. 6:18, 22; 8:2; Gal. 5:1, RV, “set free.” See FREE.¶

8. exaireo (ἐξαιρέω, 1807), lit., “to take out,” denotes, in the middle voice, “to take out for oneself,” hence, “to deliver, to rescue,” the person who does so having a special interest in the result of his act. Thus it is used, in Gal. 1:4, of the act of God in “delivering” believers “out of this present evil world,” the middle voice indicating His pleasure in the issue of their “deliverance.” It signifies to “deliver” by rescuing from danger, in Acts 12:11; 23:27; 26:17; from bondage, Acts 7:10, 34. For its other meaning, “to pluck out of,” Matt. 5:29; 18:9, see PLUCK.¶

9. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673): see ABOLISH.

10. rhuomai (ρύομαι, 4506), “to rescue from, to preserve from,” and so, “to deliver,” the word by which it is regularly translated, is largely synonymous with sozo, “to save,” though the idea of “rescue from” is predominant in rhuomai (see Matt. 27:43), that of “preservation from,” in sozo. In Rom. 11:26 the present participle is used with the article, as a noun, “the Deliverer.” This is the construction in 1 Thess. 1:10, where Christ is similarly spoken of Here the KJV wrongly has “which delivered” (the tense is not past); RV, “which delivereth”; the translation might well be (as in Rom. 11:26), “our Deliverer,” that is, from the retributive calamities with which God will visit men at the end of the present age. From that wrath believers are to be “delivered.” The verb is used with apo, “away from,” in Matt. 6:13; Luke 11:4 (in some mss.); so also in 11:4; Rom. 15:31; 2 Thess. 3:2; 2 Tim. 4:18; and with ek, “from, out of,” in Luke 1:74; Rom. 7:24; 2 Cor. 1:10; Col. 1:13, from bondage; in 2 Pet. 2:9, from temptation, in 2 Tim. 3:11, from persecution; but ek is used of ills impending, in 2 Cor. 1:10; in 2 Tim. 4:17, ek indicates that the danger was more imminent than in v. 18, where apo is used. Accordingly the meaning “out of the midst of” cannot be pressed in 1 Thess. 1:10.¶

11. charizomai (χαρίζομαι, 5483), “to gratify, to do what is pleasing to anyone,” is translated “deliver” in the KJV of Acts 25:11, 16; RV, “give up” (marg., “grant by favor,” i.e., to give over to the Jews so as to gratify their wishes). See FORGIVE, GIVE, GRANT.

Note: For gennao and tikto, “to bear, to be delivered” (said of women at childbirth), see BEGET.

B. Nouns.

1. apolutrosis (ἀπολύτρωσις, 629) denotes “redemption” (apo, “from,” lutron, “a price of release”). In Heb. 11:35 it is translated “deliverance”; usually the release is effected by the payment of a ransom, or the required price, the lutron (ransom). See REDEMPTION.

2. aphesis (ἄφεσις, 859) denotes “a release, from bondage, imprisonment, etc.” (the corresponding verb is aphiemi, “to send away, let go”); in Luke 4:18 it is used of “liberation” from captivity (KJV, “deliverance,” RV, “release”). See FORGIVENESS, REMISSION.

3. lutrotes (λυτρωτής, 3086), “a redeemer, one who releases” (see No. 1), is translated “deliverer” in Acts 7:35 (RV marg., “redeemer”).¶

Note: See also DELIVER, A, No. 10.

C. Verbal Adjective.

ekdotos (ἐκδοτος, 1560), lit., “given up” (ek, “out of,” didomi, “to give”), “delivered up” (to enemies, or to the power or will of someone), is used of Christ in Acts 2:23.¶

DELUDE, DELUSION

A. Verb.

paralogizomai (παράλογίζομαι, 3884): see BEGUILE.

B. Noun.

plane (πλάνη, 4106), lit., “a wandering,” whereby those who are led astray roam hither and thither, is always used in the NT, of mental straying, wrong opinion, error in morals or religion. In 2 Thess. 2:11, KJV, it is translated delusion, RV, error. See DECEIT, ERROR.

DEMAND

Note: For DEMAND (Matt. 2:4 and Acts 21:33), see INQUIRE; for its use in Luke 3:14 and 17:20, see under ASK.

DEMEANOR

katastema (κατάστημα, 2688): see BEHAVIOR, B, No. 2.

DEMON, DEMONIAIC

A. Nouns.

1. daimon (δαίμων, 1142), “a demon,” signified, among pagan Greeks, an inferior deity, whether good or bad. In the NT it denotes “an evil spirit.” It is used in Matt. 8:31, mistranslated “devils.”

Some would derive the word from a root da□, meaning “to distribute.” More probably it is from a similar root da□, meaning “to know,” and hence means “a knowing one.”¶

2. daimonion (δαίμόνιον, 1140), not a diminutive of daimon, No. 1, but the neuter of the adjective daimonios, pertaining to a demon, is also mistranslated “devil,” “devils.” In Acts 17:18, it denotes an inferior pagan deity. “Demons” are the spiritual agents acting in all idolatry. The idol itself is nothing, but every idol has a “demon” associated with it who induces idolatry, with its worship and sacrifices, 1 Cor. 10:20-21; Rev. 9:20; cf. Deut. 32:17; Isa. 13:21; 34:14; 65:3, 11. They disseminate errors among men, and seek to seduce believers, 1 Tim. 4:1. As seducing spirits they deceive men into the supposition that through mediums (those who have “familiar spirits,” Lev. 20:6, 27, e.g.) they can converse with deceased human beings. Hence the destructive deception of spiritism, forbidden in Scripture, Lev. 19:31; Deut. 18:11; Isa. 8:19. “Demons” tremble before God, Jas. 2:19; they recognized Christ as Lord and as their future Judge, Matt. 8:29; Luke 4:41. Christ cast them out of human beings by His own power. His disciples did so in His name, and by exercising faith, e.g., Matt. 17:20.

Acting under Satan (cf. Rev. 16:13-14), “demons” are permitted to afflict with bodily disease, Luke 13:16. Being unclean they tempt human beings with unclean thoughts, Matt. 10:1; Mark 5:2; 7:25; Luke 8:27-29; Rev. 16:13; 18:2, e.g. They differ in degrees of wickedness, Matt. 12:45. They will instigate the rulers of the nations at the end of this age to make war against God and His Christ, Rev. 16:14. See DEVIL.

B. Verb.

daimonizomai (δαιμονίζομαι, 1139) signifies “to be possessed of a demon, to act under the control of a demon.” Those who were thus afflicted expressed the mind and consciousness of the “demon” or “demons” indwelling them, e.g., Luke 8:28. The verb is found chiefly in Matt. and Mark; Matt. 4:24; 8:16, 28, 33; 9:32; 12:22; 15:22; Mark 1:32; 5:15-16, 18; elsewhere in Luke 8:36 and John 10:21, “him that hath a devil (demon).”¶

C. Adjective.

daimoniodes (δαιμονιώδης, 1141) signifies “proceeding from, or resembling, a demon, demoniacal”; see marg. of Jas. 3:15, RV (text, “devilish”).¶

DEMONSTRATION

apodeixis (ἀπόδειξις, 585), lit., “a pointing out” (apo, “forth,” deiknumi, “to show”), a “showing” or demonstrating by argument, is found in 1 Cor. 2:4, where the apostle speaks of a proof, a “showing” forth or display, by the operation of the Spirit of God in him, as affecting the hearts and lives of his hearers, in contrast to the attempted methods of proof by rhetorical arts and philosophic arguments.¶

DEN

spelaion (σπήλαιον, 4693): see CAVE.

DENY

1. arneomai (ἀρνέομαι, 720) signifies (a) “to say ... not, to contradict,” e.g., Mark 14:70; John 1:20; 18:25, 27; 1 John 2:22; (b) “to deny” by way of disowning a person, as, e.g., the Lord Jesus as master, e.g., Matt. 10:33; Luke 12:9; John 13:38 (in the best mss.); 2 Tim. 2:12; or, on the other hand, of Christ Himself, “denying” that a person is His follower, Matt. 10:33; 2 Tim. 2:12; or to “deny” the Father and the Son, by apostatizing and by disseminating pernicious teachings, to “deny” Jesus Christ as master and Lord by immorality under a cloak of religion, 2 Pet. 2:1; Jude 4; (c) “to deny oneself,” either in a good sense, by disregarding one’s own interests, Luke 9:23, or in a bad sense, to prove false to oneself, to act quite unlike oneself, 2 Tim. 2:13; (d) to “abrogate, forsake, or renounce a thing,” whether evil, Titus 2:12, or good, 1 Tim. 5:8; 2 Tim. 3:5; Rev. 2:13; 3:8; (e) “not to accept, to reject” something offered, Acts 3:14; 7:35, “refused”; Heb. 11:24 “refused.” See REFUSE.

2. aparneomai (ἀπαρνέομαι, 533), a strengthened form of No. 1, with apo, “from,” prefixed (Lat., abnego), means (a) “to deny utterly,” to abjure, to affirm that one has no connection with a person, as in Peter’s denial of Christ, Matt. 26:34-35, 75; Mark 14:30-31, 72; Luke 22:34, 61 (some mss. have it in John 13:38). This stronger form is used in the Lord’s statements foretelling Peter’s “denial,” and in Peter’s assurance of fidelity; the simple verb (No. 1) is used in all the records of his actual denial. The strengthened form is the verb used in the Lord’s warning as to being “denied” in the presence of the angels, Luke 12:9; in the preceding clause, “he that denieth Me,” the simple verb arneomai is used; the rendering therefore should be “he that denieth Me in the presence of men, shall be utterly denied in the presence of the angels of God”; (b) “to deny oneself” as a follower of Christ, Matt. 16:24; Mark 8:34; Luke 9:23.¶

3. antilego (ἀντίλεγω, 483) means “to speak against, contradict.” In Luke 20:27, the RV, “they which say that there is no resurrection,” follows the texts which have the simple verb lego; for the KJV, which translates the verb antilego, “which deny that there is any resurrection. See ANSWER, CONTRADICT, GAINSAY, SPEAK, No. 6.

DEPART

(a) Compounds of ago.

1. anago (ἀνάγω, 321), lit., “to lead up” (ana, “up,” ago, “to lead”), is used, in the middle voice, as a nautical term, signifying “to set sail, put to sea”; “to depart,” Acts 27:12, KJV (RV, “put to sea”); 28:10 (RV, “sailed”); v. 11 (RV, “set sail”). Cf. epanago, in Luke 5:3, to put out. See BRING, No. 11.

2. parago (παράγω, 3855), used intransitively, means “to pass by” (para, “by, beside”), and is so translated everywhere in the Gospels, except in the KJV of Matt. 9:27, “departed”; RV, “passed by.” Outside the Gospels it is used in its other meaning, “to pass away,” 1 Cor. 7:31; 1 John 2:8 (RV), 17. See PASS.

3. hupago (ὑπάγω, 5217), “to go,” translated “depart” in Jas. 2:16, KJV, primarily and lit. meant “to lead under” (hupo, “under”); in its later use, it implied a “going,” without noise or notice, or by stealth. In this passage the idea is perhaps that of a polite dismissal, “Go your ways. See GET, GO.

(b) Compounds of erchomai.

4. aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι, 565), lit., “to come or go away” (apo), hence, “to set off, depart,” e.g., Matt. 8:18, is frequent in the Gospels and Acts; Rev. 18:14, RV, “are gone.” See COME, No. 11 (Note), GO, PASS.

5. dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), “to come or go through, to pass through to a place,” is translated “departed” in Acts 13:14, KJV; RV, “passing through”; elsewhere it is usually translated “pass through” or “go through.” See COME, No. 5.

6. exerchomai (ἐξέρχομαι, 1831) denotes “to come out, or go out of, to go forth.” It is frequently translated by the verb “to depart,” e.g., Matt. 9:31; in Luke 4:42, for the KJV, “He departed and went (No. 8),” the RV has “He came out and went”; in 9:6 the KJV and RV agree. See COME, No. 3.

7. katerchomai (κατέρχομαι, 2718), “to come down” (its usual meaning), is translated “departed” in Acts 13:4, KJV (RV, “went down”).

See COME, No. 7.

8. poreuo (πορεύομαι, 4198), akin to poros, “a passage,” in the middle voice signifies “to go on one’s way, to depart from one place to another.” In some places, where the KJV has the verb “to depart,” the RV translates by “to go one’s way,” e.g., Matt. 2:9, “went their way”; 11:7; 24:1, “was going on His way.” In the following the RV has the verb “to go,” for the KJV “depart,” Luke 4:42 (latter part of verse); 13:31; John 16:7; 2 Tim. 4:10. In Luke 21:8, “go (after),” is said of disciples or partisans. In some places both KJV and RV translate by the verb “to depart,” e.g., Matt. 19:15; 25:41; Acts 5:41; Acts 22:21. This verb is to be distinguished from others signifying “to go.” It is best rendered, as often as possible, “to go on one’s way.” See GO, JOURNEY, WALK.

9. ekporeuo (ἐκπορεύομαι, 1607), ek, “from,” in the middle and passive, “to proceed from or forth,” more expressive of a definite course than simply “to go forth,” is translated “go forth,” in Mark 6:11; “went out” in Matt. 20:29, RV (KJV, “departed”); both have “depart” in Acts 25:4. It is frequently translated by the verb “to proceed,” and is often best so rendered, e.g., in Rev. 9:17-18, RV, for KJV, issued. See COME, No. 33.

(d) Compounds of choreo.

10. anachoreo (ἀναχωρέω, 402), “to go back, recede, retire” (ana, “back or up,” choreo, “to make room for, betake oneself,” choros, “a place”), is translated “departed” in Matt. 2:12–14; 4:12 (RV, “withdrew”); so in 14:13 and 15:21, but “departed” in 27:5; “withdrew” in John 6:15. In Matt. 2:22 the RV has “withdrew,” which is preferable to the KJV, “turned aside.” The most suitable translation wherever possible, is by the verb “to withdraw.” See PLACE, B, No. 1, GO, No. 15, TURN, Note (1), WITHDRAW.

11. apochoreo (ἀποχωρέω, 672), “to depart from” (apo), is so translated in Matt. 7:23; Luke 9:39; Acts 13:13 (both KJV and RV). Some mss. have it in Luke 20:20.¶

12. ekchoreo (ἐκχωρέω, 1633) signifies “to depart out” (ek), “to leave a place,” Luke 21:21.¶

13. chorizo (χωρίζω, 5563), “to put apart, separate,” means, in the middle voice, “to separate oneself, to depart from,” Acts 1:4; 18:1–2; in marital affairs, 1 Cor. 7:10-11, 15; “departed” (RV corrects to “was parted”), Philem. 15. The verb is also used in Matt. 19:6; Mark 10:9; Rom. 8:35, 39; Heb. 7:26. See PUT, No. 14, SEPARATE.¶

14. apochorizo (ἀποχωρίζω, 673) signifies “to separate off” (apo); in the middle voice, “to depart from,” Acts 15:39, KJV, “departed asunder”; RV, “parted asunder”; Rev. 6:14, RV, “was removed.” See PART, REMOVE.¶

15. diachorizo (διαχωρίζομαι, 1316), lit., “to separate throughout” (dia), i.e., “completely,” in the middle voice, “to separate oneself definitely from,” is used in Luke 9:33, RV, “were parting from.”¶

(f) Various other verbs.

16. analuo (ἀναλύω, 360), lit., “to unloose, undo” (ana, “up, or again”), signifies “to depart,” in the sense of “departing” from life, Phil. 1:23, a metaphor drawn from loosing moorings preparatory to setting sail, or, according to some, from breaking up an encampment, or from the unyoking of baggage animals. See DEPARTING, No. 1. In Luke 12:36, it has its other meaning, “to return.” See RETURN.¶

17. apoluo (ἀπολύω, 630), “to loose from” (apo), in the middle voice, signifies “to depart,” Luke 2:29; Acts 23:22, RV, “let go”; 28:25. See DISMISS.

18. exeimi (ἐξιμι, 1826), “to go out” (ex, “out,” eimi “to go”), is rendered “went out” in Acts 13:42; in 27:43, “got,” of mariners getting to shore; in 17:15, “departed”; in 20:7, “to depart.” See GET, GO.¶

19. metairo (μεταίρω, 3332), “to make a distinction, to remove, to lift away” (in its transitive sense), is used intransitively in the NT, signifying “to depart,” and is said of Christ, in Matt. 13:53; 19:1. It could be well translated “removed.”¶

20. aphistemi (ἀφίστημι, 868), in the active voice, used transitively, signifies “to cause to depart, to cause to revolt,” Acts 5:37; used intransitively, “to stand off, or aloof, or to depart from anyone,” Luke 4:13; 13:27; Acts 5:38 (“refrain from”); 12:10; 15:38; 19:9; 22:29; 2 Cor. 12:8; metaphorically, “to fall away,” 2 Tim. 2:19; in the middle voice, “to withdraw or absent oneself from,” Luke 2:37; to “apostatize,” Luke 8:13; 1 Tim. 4:1; Heb. 3:12, RV, “falling away.” See DRAW (AWAY), FALL, No. 14, REFRAIN, WITHDRAW.¶

22. metabaino (μεταβαίνω, 3327) is rendered “to depart” in Matt. 8:34; 11:1; 12:9; 15:29; John 7:3; 13:1; Acts 18:7.

DEPARTING, DEPARTURE

1. analysis (ἀνάλυσις, 359), “an unloosing” (as of things woven), “a dissolving into separate parts” (Eng., “analysis”), is once used of “departure from life,” 2 Tim. 4:6, where the metaphor is either nautical, from loosing from moorings (thus used in Greek poetry), or military, from breaking up an encampment; cf. kataluo in 2 Cor. 5:1 (cf. DEPART, No. 16).¶

2. aphixis (ἄφιξις, 867), most frequently “an arrival” (akin to aphikneomas, see COME), also signifies a “departure” (apo, “from,” hikneomai, “to come”: etymologically, to come far enough, reach; cf. hikanos, “sufficient”), the “departure” being regarded in relation to the end in view. Thus Paul speaks of his “departing,” Acts 20:29.¶

3. exodos (ἐξοδος, 1841): see DECEASE.

DEPOSE

kathaireo (καθαίρέω, 2507) lit. signifies “to take down” (kata, “down,” haireo, “to take”), the technical term for “removing a body after crucifixion,” e.g., Mark 15:36; hence, “to pull down, demolish”; in Acts 19:27, according to the most authentic mss., the translation is (as the RV) “that she (Diana) should even be deposed from her magnificence” (possibly, in the partitive sense of the genitive, “destroyed from, or diminished in, somewhat of her magnificence”). See CAST, DESTROY, PULL, PUT, TAKE (down).

DEPTH

1. bathos (βάθος, 899): see DEEP.

2. pelagos (πέλαγος, 3989), “the sea,” Acts 27:5, denotes also “the depth” (of the sea), Matt. 18:6. The word is most probably connected with a form of plesso, “to strike,” and plege, “a blow,” suggestive of the tossing of the waves. Some would connect it with plax, “a level board,” but this is improbable, and less applicable to the general usage of the word, which commonly denotes the sea in its restless character. See SEA.¶

For DEPUTY see PROCONSUL

DERIDE

Note: For ekmukterizo, lit., “to turn up the nose at, to deride out and out,” Luke 16:14; 23:35, see SCOFF.¶

DESCEND

1. katabaino (καταβαίνω, 2597), “to go down” (kata, “down,” baino, “to go”), used for various kinds of motion on the ground (e.g., going, walking, stepping), is usually translated “to descend.” The RV uses the verb “to come down,” for KJV, “descend,” in Mark 15:32; Acts 24:1; Rev. 21:10. See COME, No. 19.

2. katetchomai (κατέρχομαι, 2718), “to come or go down,” is translated “descendeth,” in Jas. 3:15, KJV; RV, “cometh down.” See COME, No. 7.

DESCENT

katabasis (κατάβασις, 2600) denotes “a going down,” akin to No. 1 under DESCEND, a way down,” Luke 19:37.¶

Note: For “descent” (KJV in Heb. 7:3, 6), see GENEALOGY (the RV rendering).

DESCRIBE

1. grapho (γράφω, 1125), “to write,” is rendered “describeth” in Rom. 10:5, KJV, “For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the Law ...”; this the RV corrects to “For Moses writeth that the man that doeth the righteousness which is of the Law ...” See WRITE.

2. lego, (λέγω, 3004) “to say,” is rendered “describeth” in Rom. 4:6, KJV, “David describeth the blessedness ...”; this the RV corrects to, “David pronounceth blessing upon ...” This might be regarded as the meaning, if David is considered as the human agent acting for God as the real pronouncer of blessing. Otherwise the verb lego is to be taken in its ordinary sense of “telling or relating”; especially as the blessedness (makarismos) is not an act, but a state of felicity resulting from God’s act of justification.

DESERT (Noun and Adjective)

A. Noun.

eremia (ἐρημία, 2047), primarily “a solitude, an uninhabited place,” in contrast to a town or village, is translated “deserts” in Heb. 11:38; “the wilderness” in Matt. 15:33, KJV, “a desert place,” RV; so in Mark 8:4; “wilderness” in 2 Cor. 11:26. It does not always denote a barren region, void of vegetation; it is often used of a place uncultivated, but fit for pasturage. See WILDERNESS.¶

B. Adjective.

eremos (ἐρημος, 2048), used as a noun, has the same meaning as eremia, in Luke 5:16 and 8:29, RV, “deserts,” for KJV, “wilderness”; in Matt. 24:26 and John 6:31, RV, “wilderness,” for KJV, “desert.” As an adjective, it denotes (a), with reference to persons, “deserted,” desolate, deprived of the friends and kindred, e.g. of a woman deserted by a husband, Gal 4:21; (b) so of a city, as Jerusalem, Matt. 23:38; or uninhabited places, “desert,” e.g., Matt. 14:13, 15; Acts 8:26; in Mark 1:35, RV, “desert,” for KJV, solitary. See DESOLATE, WILDERNESS.

DESIRE (Noun and Verb), DESIROUS

A. Nouns.

1. epithumia (ἐπιθυμία, 1939), “a desire, craving, longing, mostly of evil desires,” frequently translated “lust,” is used in the following, of good “desires”: of the Lord’s “wish” concerning the last Passover, Luke 22:15, of Paul’s “desire” to be with Christ, Phil. 1:23; of his “desire” to see the saints at Thessalonica again, 1 Thess. 2:17.

With regard to evil “desires,” in Col. 3:5 the RV has “desire,” for the KJV, “concupiscence”; in 1 Thess. 4:5, RV, “lust,” for KJV, “concupiscence”; there the preceding word pathos is translated “passion,” RV, for KJV, “lust” (see AFFECTION); also in Col. 3:5 pathos and epithumia are associated, RV, “passion,” for KJV, “inordinate affection.” Epithumia is combined with pathema, in Gal. 5:24; for the KJV, “affections and lusts,” the RV has “passions, and the lusts thereof.” Epithumia is the more comprehensive term, including all manner of “lusts and desires”; pathema denotes suffering; in the passage in Gal. (l.c.) the sufferings are those produced by yielding to the flesh; pathos points more to the evil state from which “lusts” spring. Cf orexis, “lust,” Rom. 1:27. See CONCUPISCENCE, LUST, and Trench, Syn. Sec.lxxxvii.

2. eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107), lit., “good pleasure” (eu, “well,” dokeo, “to seem”), implies a gracious purpose, a good object being in view, with the idea of a resolve, showing the willingness with which the resolve is made. It is often translated “good pleasure,” e.g., Eph. 1:5, 9; Phil. 2:13; in Phil. 1:15, “good will”; in Rom. 10:1, “desire,” (marg., “good pleasure”); in 2 Thess. 1:11, RV, “desire,” KJV and RV, marg., “good pleasure.”

It is used of God in Matt. 11:26 (“well pleasing,” RV, for KJV, “seemed good”); Luke 2:14, RV, “men in whom He is well pleased,” lit., “men of good pleasure” (the construction is objective); 10:21; Eph. 1:5, 9; Phil. 2:13. See PLEASURE, SEEM, WILL.¶

3. epipotesis (ἐπιπόθησις, 1972), “an earnest desire, a longing for” (epi, “upon,” intensive, potheo, “to desire”), is found in 2 Cor. 7:7, 11, KJV, “earnest desire,” and “vehement desire”; RV, “longing” in both places. See LONGING.¶

4. epipothia (ἐπιποθία, 1974), with the same meaning as No. 3, is used in Rom. 15:23, RV, “longing,” KJV, “great desire.”¶ Cf. epipothetos, Phil. 4:1, “longed for”¶, and epipotheo, “to long for” [see B, Note (4)]. See LONGING.

5. thelema (θέλημα, 2307) denotes “a will, that which is willed” (akin to B, No. 6). It is rendered “desires,” in Eph. 2:3. See PLEASURE, WILL.

Note: In 1 Pet. 4:3, RV, boulema is rendered “desire.” See WILL.

B. Verbs.

1. axioo (ἀξιόω, 515), “to deem worthy,” is translated “desire” in Acts 28:22, where a suitable rendering would be “We think it meet (or good) to hear of thee”; so in 15:38. See THINK.

2. epithumeo (ἐπιθυμέω, 1937), “to desire earnestly” (as with A, No. 1), stresses the inward impulse rather than the object desired. It is translated “to desire” in Luke 16:21; 17:22; 22:15; 1 Tim. 3:1; Heb. 6:11; 1 Pet. 1:12; Rev. 9:6. See COVET.

3. erotao (ἐρωτάω, 2065), in Luke 7:36 is translated “desired”; in 14:32, RV, “asketh,” for KJV, “desireth”; so in John 12:21; Acts 16:39; 18:20; 23:20; in v. 18 “asked,” for KJV, “prayed.” See ASK.

4. homeiromai or himeiromai (ἡμείρομαι, 2442), “to have a strong affection for, a yearning after,” is found in 1 Thess. 2:8, “being affectionately desirous of you.” It is probably derived from a root indicating remembrance.¶

5. orego (ὀρέγομαι, 3713), “to reach or stretch out,” is used only in the middle voice, signifying the mental effort of stretching oneself out for a thing, of longing after it, with stress upon the object desired (cf. No. 2); it is translated “desire” in Heb. 11:16; in 1 Tim. 3:1, RV, “seeketh,” for KJV, “desireth”; in 1 Tim. 6:10, RV, “reached after,” for KJV, “coveted after.” In Heb. 11:16, a suitable rendering would be “reach after.” See COVET, SEEK.¶ Cf. orexis, lust, Rom. 1:27.¶

6. thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to will, to wish,” implying volition and purpose, frequently a determination, is most usually rendered “to will.” It is translated “to desire” in the RV of the following: Matt. 9:13; 12:7; Mark 6:19; Luke 10:29; 14:28; 23:20; Acts 24:27; 25:9; Gal. 4:17; 1 Tim. 5:11; Heb. 12:17; 13:18. See DISPOSED, FORWARD, INTEND, LIST, LOVE, MEAN, PLEASED, RATHER, VOLUNTARY, WILL.

7. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), “to wish, to will deliberately,” expresses more strongly than thelo (No. 6) the deliberate exercise of the will; it is translated “to desire” in the RV of the following: Acts 22:30; 23:28; 27:43; 28:18; 1 Tim. 2:8; 5:14; 6:9 and Jude 5. See DISPOSED, INTEND, LIST, MINDED, WILLING, WISH, WOULD.

8. zeloo (ζηλόω, 2206), “to have a zeal for, to be zealous towards,” whether in a good or evil sense, the former in 1 Cor. 14:1, concerning spiritual gifts RV, “desire earnestly,” KJV, “desire”; in an evil sense, in Jas. 4:2, RV, “covet,” for KJV, “desire to have.”

9. aiteo (αἰτέω, 154), “to ask,” is rendered “to desire” in KJV, e.g., in Matt. 20:20; Luke 23:25 [RV, always “to ask (for)”].

10. speudo (σπεύδω, 4692) is translated “earnestly desiring” in 2 Pet. 3:12, RV. See HASTE.

Note: The following are translated by the verb “to desire” in the KJV.

(1) Eperotao, No. 3, with epi, intensive, “to ask, interrogate, inquire of, consult, or to demand of a person”; in Matt. 16:1, RV, “asked.” See ASK. (2) Zeteo, “to seek”; in Matt. 12:46–47, RV, “seeking”; in Luke 9:9, RV, “sought.” See ENDEAVOR, GO, Note (2), (a), INQUIRE, REQUIRE, SEEK. (3) Epizeteo, “to seek earnestly” (No. 2, with epi, intensive), in Acts 13:7, RV, “sought”; in Phil. 4:17, RV, “seek for” (twice). See INQUIRE, SEEK. (4)

Epipotheo, “to long after, to lust”; in 2 Cor. 5:2, RV, “longing”; in 1 Thess. 3:6 and 2 Tim. 1:4, RV, “longing”; in 1 Pet. 2:2, RV, “long for.” See A, Hos. 3-4. See LONG, LUST. (5) Exaiteomai, intensive of No. 9, occurs in Luke 22:31.¶ (6) For parakaleo, see BESEECH, EXHORT, INTREAT. (7) For desirous of vain glory,” see VAINGLORY.

DESOLATE (Verb and Adjective), DESOLATION

A. Verbs.

1. eremoo (ἐρημώω, 2049) signifies “to make desolate, lay waste.” From the primary sense of “making quiet” comes that of “making lonely.” It is used only in the passive voice in the NT; in Rev. 17:16, “shall make desolate” is, lit., “shall make her desolated”; in 18:17, 19, “is made desolate”; in Matt. 12:25 and Luke 11:17, “is brought to desolation.” See NOUGHT (COME TO).¶ Cf. DESERT.

2. monoo (μονόω, 3443), “to leave alone” (akin to monos, “alone”), is used in 1 Tim. 5:5, in the passive voice, but translated “desolate,” lit., “was made desolate” or “left desolate.”¶

B. Adjectives.

1. eremos (ἐρημος, 2048) is translated “desolate” in the Lord’s words against Jerusalem, Matt. 23:38; some mss. have it in Luke 13:35; in reference to the habitation of Judas, Acts 1:20, and to Sarah, from whom, being barren, her husband had turned, Gal. 4:27. See DESERT.

2. orphanos (ὀρφανός, 3737) (Eng., “orphan”; Lat., “orbus”), signifies “bereft of parents or of a father.” In Jas. 1:27 it is translated “fatherless.” It was also used in the general sense of being “friendless or desolate.” In John 14:18 the Lord uses it of the relationship between Himself and His disciples, He having been their guide, teacher and protector; RV, “desolate,” KJV, “comfortless.” Some mss. have the word in Mark 12:40. See FATHERLESS.¶

C. Noun.

eremosis (ἐρήμωσις, 2050), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “desolation,” (a) in the sense of “making desolate,” e.g., in the phrase “the abomination of desolation,” Matt. 24:15; Mark 13:14; the genitive is objective, “the abomination that makes desolate”; (b) with stress upon the effect of the process, Luke 21:20, with reference to the “desolation” of Jerusalem.

DESPAIR

1. exaporeo (ἐξαπορέομαι, 1820) is used in the NT in the passive voice, with middle sense, “to be utterly without a way” (ek, “out of,” intensive, a, negative, poros, “a way through”; cf poreuo, “to go through”; (Eng., “ferry” is connected); “to be quite at a loss, without resource, in despair.” It is used in 2 Cor. 1:8, with reference to life; in 4:8, in the sentence “perplexed, yet not unto (KJV, ‘in’) despair,” the word “perplexed” translates the verb aporeo, and the phrase “unto despair” translates the intensive form exaporeo, a play on the words.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 88:15, where the translation is “having been lifted up, I was brought low and into despair.”¶

2. apelpizo (ἀπελπίζω, 560), lit., “to hope away” (apo, “away from,” elpizo, “to hope”). i.e., “to give up in despair, to despair,” is use. in Luke 6:35, RV, “nothing despairing,” i.e., without anxiety as to the result, or not “despairing” of the recompense from God; this is probably the true meaning; KJV, “hoping for nothing again.” The marg., “of no man,” is to be rejected.¶

DESPISE, DESPISER

A. Verbs.

1. exoutheneo (ἐξουθενέω, 1848), “to make of no account” (ex, “out,” oudeis, “nobody,” alternatively written, outheis), “to regard as nothing, to despise utterly, to treat with contempt.” This is usually translated to “set at nought,” Luke 18:9, RV, KJV, “despised.” So in Rom. 14:3. Both have “set at nought” in Luke 23:11; Acts 4:11; Rom. 14:10. Both have “despise” in 1 Cor. 16:11; Gal. 4:14, and 1 Thess. 5:20; in 2 Cor. 10:10, RV, “of no account,” for KJV, “contemptible”; in 1 Cor. 1:28, KJV and RV, “despised.” For the important rendering in 1 Cor. 6:4, RV, see ACCOUNT.¶

Note: In Mark 9:12 some mss. have this verb; the most authentic have the alternative spelling exoudeneo, “set at nought.”

2. kataphroneo (καταφρονέω, 2706), lit., “to think down upon or against anyone” (kata, “down,” phren, “the mind”), hence signifies “to think slightly of, to despise,” Matt. 6:24; 18:10; Luke 16:13; Rom. 2:4; 1 Cor. 11:22; 1 Tim. 4:12; 6:2; Heb. 12:2; 2 Pet. 2:10.¶

3. periphroneo (περιφρονέω, 4065) lit. denotes “to think round a thing, to turn over in the mind”; hence, “to have thoughts beyond, to despise,” Titus 2:15.¶

Notes: The following verbs, translated “to despise, etc.” in the KJV, are given suitable meanings in the RV:

(1) Atheteo, lit., “to displace, to set aside,” RV, “to reject,” Luke 10:16; 1 Thess. 4:8; in 1 Tim. 5:12, “rejected,” for KJV, “cast off”; in Heb. 10:28, “hath set at nought”; so Jude 8. See DISANNUL, REJECT, VOID, No. 2. (2) Atimazo, “to dishonor” (a, negative, time, “honor”); in Jas. 2:6, RV, “have dishonored.” See DISHONOR, ENTREAT, SHAME, C, No. 1, SHAMEFULLY. (3) Oligoreo, “to care little for, regard lightly” (oligos, “little”); in Heb. 12:5, RV, “regard lightly. See REGARD.¶ (4) The phrase logizomai eis ouden signifies “to reckon as nothing”; in the passive voice, “to be counted as nothing”; in Acts 19:27, RV, “be made of no account.”

B. Adjective.

atimos (ἄτιμος, 820), “without honor,” see Note (2), above, is translated as a verb in 1 Cor. 4:10, KJV, “are despised”; RV, “have dishonor,” lit., “(we are) without honor”; “without honor” in Matt. 13:57; Mark 6:4. The comparative degree atimoteros, “less honorable,” is used in 1 Cor. 12:23.¶

Note: Aphilagathos, “not loving the good” (a, negative, phileo, “to love,” agathos, “good”), is used in 2 Tim. 3:3, KJV, “despisers of those that are good,” RV, “no lovers of good.” See LOVER.¶

C. Noun.

kataphronetes (καταφροντής, 2707), lit., “one who thinks down against,” hence, “a despiser” (see A, No. 2), is found in Acts 13:41.¶ In the Sept., Hab. 1:5; 2:5 and Zeph. 3:4.¶

DESPITE, DESPITEFUL, DESPITEFULLY (use)

1. enubrizo (ἐνυβρίζω, 1796), “to treat insultingly, with contumely” (en, intensive, hubrizo, “to insult”; some connect it with hyper, “above, over,” Lat. super, which suggests the insulting disdain of one who considers himself superior), is translated “hath done despite” in Heb. 10:29.¶

Notes: (1) Hubrizo, “to insult, act with insolence,” is translated “to use despitefully” in Acts 14:5, KJV; RV, “to entreat ... shamefully.” See SHAMEFULLY (ENTREAT), SPITEFULLY (ENTREAT), REPROACH, B, No. 2.

(2) The noun hubristes, “a violent man,” is translated “despiteful” in Rom. 1:30, KJV; RV, “insolent”; in 1 Tim. 1:13, “injurious.”¶

2. epereazo (ἐπηρεάζω, 1908), for which see ACCUSE, B, No. 3, is found in some mss. in Matt. 5:44, and translated “despitefully use,” KJV (the RV follows the mss. which omit the sentence). In the corresponding passage in Luke 6:28, the KJV and RV have “despitefully use”; in 1 Pet. 3:16, KJV, “falsely accuse,” RV, “revile.” See ACCUSE, REVILE.¶

DESTITUTE (be, etc.)

1. apostereo (Ἀποστερέω, 650): see DEFRAUD.

2. hustereo (ὕστερέω, 5302), primarily, “to be behind, to be last,” hence, “to lack, fail of, come short of,” is translated “being destitute” in Heb. 11:37. See BEHIND, B, No. 1.

3. leipo (λείπω, 3007) signifies “to leave, forsake”; in the passive voice, “to be left, forsaken, destitute”; in Jas. 2:15, KJV, “destitute,” RV, “be in lack.” See LACK, WANT.

DESTROY, DESTROYER, DESTRUCTION, DESTRUCTIVE

A. Verbs.

1. apollumi (ἀπόλλυμι, 622), a strengthened form of ollumi, signifies “to destroy utterly”; in middle voice, “to perish.” The idea is not extinction but ruin, loss, not of being, but of wellbeing. This is clear from its use, as, e.g., of the marring of wine skins, Luke 5:37; of lost sheep, i.e., lost to the shepherd, metaphorical of spiritual destitution, Luke 15:4, 6, etc.; the lost son, 15:24; of the perishing of food, John 6:27; of gold, 1 Pet. 1:7. So of persons, Matt. 2:13, “destroy”; 8:25, “perish”; 22:7; 27:20; of the loss of wellbeing in the case of the unsaved hereafter, Matt. 10:28; Luke 13:3, 5; John 3:16 (v. 15 in some mss.); 10:28; 17:12; Rom. 2:12; 1 Cor. 15:18; 2 Cor. 2:15, “are perishing”; 4:3; 2 Thess. 2:10; Jas. 4:12; 2 Pet. 3:9. Cf. B, II, No. 1. See DIE, LOSE, MARRED, PERISH.

2. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673): see ABOLISH.

3. kathaireo (καθαίρεω, 2507), “to cast down, pull down by force, etc.,” is translated “to destroy” in Acts 13:19. In Acts 19:27, KJV, “should be destroyed,” the RV suitably has “should be deposed.” See CAST, No. 13, PULL, PUT, TAKE.

4. luo (λύω, 3089), “to loose, dissolve, sever, break, demolish,” is translated “destroy,” in 1 John 3:8, of the works of the Devil. See BREAK, A, No. 4.

5. kataluo (καταλύω, 2647), kata, “down,” intensive, and No. 4, “to destroy utterly, to overthrow completely,” is rendered “destroy,” in Matt. 5:17, twice, of the Law; Matt. 24:2; 26:61; 27:40; Mark 13:2; 14:58; 15:29; Luke 21:6, of the Temple; in Acts 6:14, of Jerusalem; in Gal. 2:18, of the Law as a means of justification; in Rom. 14:20 (KJV, “destroy,” RV, “overthrow”), of the marring of a person’s spiritual well-being (in v. 15 apollumi, No. 1, is used in the same sense); in Acts 5:38 and 39 (RV, “overthrow”) of the failure of purposes; in 2 Cor. 5:1, of the death of the body (“dissolved”). See DISSOLVE, NOUGHT (COME TO), OVERTHROW, THROW.

For its other meaning, “to lodge,” see Luke 9:12 and 19:7. See GUEST, LODGE.¶

6. olothreuo (ὀλοθρεύω, 3645), “to destroy,” especially in the sense of slaying, is found in Heb. 11:28, where the RV translates the present participle with the article by the noun “destroyer.”¶ See B, below. The verb occurs frequently in the Sept., e.g., Ex. 12:23; Josh. 3:10; 7:25; Jer. 2:30; 5:6; 22:7.

7. exolothreuo (ἐξολοθρεύω, 1842), ek, “out of” (intensive), and No. 6, “to destroy utterly to slay wholly,” is found in Acts 3:23, RV, “utterly destroyed,” referring to the “destruction” of one who would refuse to hearken to the voice of God through Christ.¶ This verb is far more abundantly used in the Sept. than No. 6; it occurs 35 times in Deut. 34 in Josh. 68 in the Psalms.

9. diaphtheiro (διαφθείρω, 1311); See CORRUPT, A, No. 3.

Note: Porthreo, “to ruin by laying waste, to make havock of,” is translated “destroyed” in Acts 9:21, of the attacks upon the church in Jerusalem by Saul of Tarsus; “wasted,” in Gal. 1:13, with reference to the same; “destroyed” in Gal. 1:23, where “the faith” is put by metonymy (one thing being put for another associated with it), for those who held the faith. In each of these places the RV consistently translates by “made havock of.” See HAVOC, WASTE.¶

B. Nouns.

(I) (Personal: DESTROYER)

olothreutes (ὀλοθρευτής, 3644), akin to A, No. 6, “a destroyer,” is found in 1 Cor. 10:10.¶

Note: For the construction in Heb. 11:28, “the destroyer,” see A, No. 6. Cf. apolluon, in Rev. 9:11, the present participle of apollumi, A, No. 1, used as a proper noun.¶

(II) (Abstract: DESTRUCTION)

1. apoleia (ἀπώλεια, 684), akin to A, No. 1, and likewise indicating “loss of well-being, not of being,” is used (a) of things, signifying their waste, or ruin; of ointment, Matt. 26:8; Mark 14:4; of money, Acts 8:20 (“perish”); (b) of persons, signifying their spiritual and eternal perdition, Matt. 7:13; John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3, where “son of perdition” signifies the proper destiny of the person mentioned; metaphorically of men persistent in evil, Rom. 9:22, where “fitted” is in the middle voice, indicating that the vessels of wrath fitted themselves for “destruction”, of the adversaries of the Lord’s people, Phil. 1:28 (“perdition”); of professing Christians, really enemies of the cross of Christ, Phil. 3:19 (RV, “perdition”); of those who are subjects of foolish and hurtful lusts, 1 Tim. 6:9 (for the preceding word “destruction” see No. 3, below); of professing Hebrew adherents who shrink back into unbelief, Heb. 10:39; of false teachers, 2 Pet. 2:1, 3; of ungodly men, 3:7; of those who wrest the Scriptures, 3:16; of the Beast, the final head of the revived Roman Empire, Rev. 17:8, 11; (c) of impersonal subjects, as heresies, 2 Pet. 2:1, where “destructive heresies” (RV; KJV, “damnable”) is, lit., “heresies of destruction” (marg., “sects of perdition”); in v. 2 the most authentic mss. have aselgeiais, “lascivious,” instead of apoleiais. See PERDITION, PERNICIOUS, WASTE.¶

2. kathairesis (καθαίρεσις, 2506), akin to A, No. 3, “a taking down, a pulling down,” is used three times in 2 Cor., “casting down” in the RV in each place; in 10:4 (KJV, “pulling down”); in 10:8 and 13:10 (KJV, “destruction”). See PULL.¶

3. olethros (ὄλεθος, 3639), “ruin, destruction,” akin to A, No. 6, always translated “destruction,” is used in 1 Cor. 5:5, of the effect upon the physical condition of an erring believer for the purpose of his spiritual profit; in 1 Thess. 5:3 and 2 Thess. 1:9, of the effect of the divine judgments upon men at the ushering in of the Day of the Lord and the revelation of the Lord Jesus; in 1 Tim. 6:9, of the consequences of the indulgence of the flesh, referring to physical “ruin” and possibly that of the whole being, the following word apoleia (see No. 1) stressing the final, eternal and irrevocable character of the ruin.¶

4. phthora (φθορά, 5356), akin to A, No. 8, denotes “the destruction that comes with corruption.” In 2 Pet. 2:12 it is used twice; for the KJV, “made to be taken and destroyed ... shall utterly perish (phtheiro) in their own corruption,” the RV has “to be taken and destroyed (lit., ‘unto capture and destruction,’ phthora) ... shall in their destroying (phthora) surely be destroyed,” taking the noun in the last clause in the sense of their act of “destroying” others. See CORRUPT, CORRUPTION.

5. suntrimma (σύντριμμα, 4938), “a breaking in pieces, shattering” (the corresponding verb is suntribo; see under BREAK, BRUISE), hence, “ruin, destruction,” is compounded of sun, “together,” and trimma, “a rubbing or wearing away.” The latter, and tribo, “to beat,” are derived from a root, signifying “to rub, wear away”; hence Eng., “tribulation and trouble.” It is used, metaphorically, of “destruction,” in Rom. 3:16 (from Isa. 59:7), which, in a passage setting forth the sinful state of mankind in general, suggests the “wearing” process of the effects of cruelty.¶ The word is frequent in the Sept., especially in Isaiah and Jeremiah.

DETERMINE, DETERMINATE

1. krino (κρίνω, 2919), primarily “to separate,” hence, “to be of opinion, approve, esteem,” Rom. 14:5, also “to determine, resolve, decree,” is used in this sense in Acts 3:13; 20:16; 25:25; 27:1; 1 Cor. 2:2; 2 Cor. 2:1; Titus 3:12. See CONDEMN, JUDGE, JUDGMENT, LAW, B, No. 2

2. horizo (ὁρίζω, 3724) denotes “to bound, to set a boundary” (Eng., “horizon”); hence, “to mark out definitely, determine”; it is translated “to determine” in Luke 22:22, of the foreordained pathway of Christ; Acts 11:29, of a “determination” to send relief; 17:26, where it is used of fixing the bounds of seasons. In Acts 2:23 the verb is translated “determinate,” with reference to counsel. Here the verbal form might have been adhered to by the translation “determined”; that is to say, in the sense of “settled.”

In Rom. 1:4 it is translated “declared,” where the meaning is that Christ was marked out as the Son of God by His resurrection and that of others (see under DECLARE). In Acts 10:42 and 17:31 it has its other meaning of “ordain,” that is, “to appoint by determined counsel.” In Heb. 4:7, it is translated “limiteth,” but preferably in the RV, “defineth,” with reference to a certain period; here again it approaches its primary meaning of marking out the bounds of. See DECLARE, No. 9, LIMIT ORDAIN.¶

3. proorizo (προορίζω, 4309), pro, “beforehand,” and No. 2, denotes “to mark out beforehand, to determine before, foreordain”; in Acts 4:28, KJV, “determined before,” RV, “foreordained”; so the RV in 1 Cor. 2:7, KJV, “ordained”, in Rom. 8:29-30 and Eph. 1:5, 11, KJV, “predestinate,” RV, “foreordain.” See ORDAIN, Note (1), PREDESTINATE.¶

4. epiluo (ἐπιλύω, 1956), lit., “to loosen upon,” denotes “to solve, expound,” Mark 4:34; “to settle,” as of a controversy, Acts 19:39, KJV, “it shall be determined,” RV, “it shall be settled.” See EXPOUND, SETTLE.¶

5. diaginosko (διαγινώσκω, 1231), besides its meaning “to ascertain exactly,” Acts 23:15, was an Athenian law term signifying “to determine,” so used in 24:22, RV, “determine”; KJV, “know the uttermost of.”¶

6. tasso (τάσσω, 5021): see APPOINT, No. 5.

Note: Boulomai, “to be minded, to purpose,” is translated “determined” in Acts 15:37; RV, was minded. See MINDED, No. 2.

DEVICE

1. enthumesis (ἐνθύμησις, 1761), “a cogitation, an inward reasoning” (generally, evil surmising or supposition), is formed from en, “in,” and thumos, “strong feeling, passion” (cf. thumoo, in the middle voice, “to be wroth, furious”); Eng., “fume” is akin; the root, thu, signifies “to rush, rage.” The word is translated “device” in Acts 17:29, of man’s production of images; elsewhere, “thoughts,” Matt. 9:4; 12:25; Heb. 4:12, where the accompanying word ennoia denotes inward intentions. See THOUGHT.¶

2. noema (νόημα, 3540) denotes “thought, that which is thought out” (cf. noeo, “to understand”); hence, “a purpose, device”; translated “devices” in 2 Cor. 2:11; “minds” in 2 Cor. 3:14; 4:4; 11:3; in 2 Cor. 10:5, “thought”; in Phil. 4:7, KJV, “minds,” RV, “thoughts.” See MIND, THOUGHT.¶

DEVIL, DEVILISH

diabolos (διάβολος, 1228), “an accuser, a slanderer” (from diaballo, “to accuse, to malign”), is one of the names of Satan. From it the English word “Devil” is derived, and should be applied only to Satan, as a proper name. Daimon, “a demon,” is frequently, but wrongly, translated “devil”; it should always be translated “demon,” as in the RV margin. There is one “Devil,” there are many demons. Being the malignant enemy of God and man, he accuses man to God, Job 1:6-11; 2:1-5; Rev. 12:9, 10, and God to man, Gen. 3. He afflicts men with physical sufferings, Acts 10:38. Being himself sinful, 1 John 3:8, he instigated man to sin, Gen. 3, and tempts man to do evil, Eph. 4:27; 6:11, encouraging him thereto by deception, Eph. 2:2. Death having been brought into the world by sin, the “Devil” had the power of death, but Christ through His own death, has triumphed over him, and will bring him to nought, Heb. 2:14; his power over death is intimated in his struggle with Michael over the body of Moses, Jude 9. Judas, who gave himself over to the “Devil,” was so identified with him, that the Lord described him as such, John 6:70 (see 13:2). As the “Devil” raised himself in pride against God and fell under condemnation, so believers are warned against similar sin, 1 Tim. 3:6; for them he lays snares, v. 7, seeking to devour them as a roaring lion, 1 Pet. 5:8; those who fall into his snare may be recovered therefrom unto the will of God, 2 Tim. 2:26, “having been taken captive by him (i.e., by the ‘Devil’)”; “by the Lord’s servant” is an alternative, which some regard as confirmed by the use of zogreo (“to catch alive”) in Luke 5:10; but the general use is that of taking captive in the usual way. If believers resist he will flee from them, Jas. 4:7. His fury and malignity will be especially exercised at the end of the present age, Rev. 12:12. His doom is the lake of fire, Matt. 25:41; Rev. 20:10. The noun is applied to slanderers, false accusers, 1 Tim. 3:11; 2 Tim. 3:3; Titus 2:3.

Note: For devilish, Jas. 3:17, see DEMON, C.

DEVISED (cunningly)

sophizo (σοφίζω, 4679), from sophos, “wise” (connected etymologically with sophes, “tasty”), in the active voice signifies “to make wise,” 2 Tim. 3:15 (so in the Sept. of Ps. 19:7, e.g., “making babes wise”; in 119:98, “Thou hast made me wiser than mine enemies”). In the middle voice it means (a) “to become wise”; it is not used thus in the NT, but is so found in the Sept., e.g., in Eccles. 2:15, 19; 7:17; (b) “to play the sophist, to devise cleverly”, it is used with this meaning in the passive voice in 2 Pet. 1:16, “cunningly devised fables.” See WISE.¶

Note: Cf. katasophizomai, “to deal subtly.” See DEAL WITH, Note (2).

DEVOTION

Note: For this word, in Acts 17:23, KJV, which translates sebasma, “devotions,” marg., “gods that ye worship,” RV, “objects of your worship,” in 2 Thess. 2:4, “that is worshiped,” see WORSHIP.¶ Cf. Acts 14:15, where, in translating mataia, the KJV has “vanities,” the abstract for the concrete (RV, “vain things”).

DEVOUR

1. esthio (ἐσθίω, 2068) is a strengthened form of an old verb edo, from the root ed—, whence Lat., edo, Eng., “eat.” The form ephagon, used as the 2nd aorist tense of this verb, is from the root phag-, “to eat up.” It is translated “devour” in Heb. 10:27; elsewhere, by the verb “to eat.” See EAT.

2. katesthio and kataphago (κατεσθίω, 2719), kata, “down,” intensive, and No. 1, signifies (a) “to consume by eating, to devour,” said of birds, Matt. 13:4; Mark 4:4; Luke

8:5; of the Dragon, Rev. 12:4; of a prophet, “eating” up a book, suggestive of spiritually “eating” and digesting its contents, Rev. 10:9 (cf. Ezek. 2:8; 3:1-3; Jer. 15:16); (b) metaphorically, “to squander, to waste,” Luke 15:30; “to consume” one’s physical powers by emotion, John 2:17; “to devour” by forcible appropriation, as of widows’ property, Matt. 23:14 (KJV only); Mark 12:40; “to demand maintenance,” as false apostles did to the church at Corinth, 2 Cor. 11:20; “to exploit or prey on one another,” Gal. 5:15, where “bite ... devour ... consume” form a climax, the first two describing a process, the last the act of swallowing down; to “destroy” by fire, Rev. 11:5; 20:9. See EAT.¶

3. katapino (καταπίνω, 2666), from kato, “down,” intensive, pino, “to drink,” in 1 Pet. 5:8 is translated “devour,” of Satan’s activities against believers. The meaning “to swallow” is found in Matt. 23:24; 1 Cor. 15:54; 2 Cor. 2:7; 5:4; Heb. 11:29, RV (for KJV, “drowned”); Rev. 12:16. See SWALLOW.¶

DEVOUT

1. eulabes (εὐλάβης, 2126), lit., “taking hold well” (eu, “well,” lambano, “to take hold”), primarily, “cautious,” signifies in the NT, “careful as to the realization of the presence and claims of God, reverencing God, pious, devout”, in Luke 2:25 it is said of Simeon, in Acts 2:5, of certain Jews; in 8:2, of those who bore Stephen’s body to burial; of Ananias, 22:12 (see No. 2). “In that mingled fear and love which, combined, constitute the piety of man toward God, the Old Testament placed its emphasis on the fear, the New places it on the love (though there was love in the fear of God’s saints then, as there must be fear in their love now),” Trench, Syn., Sec.xlviii.¶

Note. Cf. the noun eulabeia, “reverence,” and the verb eulabeomai, “to reverence.”

2. eusebes (εὐσεβής, 2152), from eu, “well,” sebomai, “to reverence,” the root seb- signifying “sacred awe,” describes “reverence” exhibited especially in actions, reverence or awe well directed. Among the Greeks it was used, e.g., of practical piety towards parents. In the NT it is used of a pious attitude towards God, Acts 10:2, 7; (in some mss. in 22:12); “godly,” in 2 Pet. 2:9. See GODLY.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 12:12; Isa. 24:16; 26:7; 32:8; Mic. 7:2.¶

Notes: (1) While eulabes especially suggests the piety which characterizes the inner being, the soul, in its attitude towards God, eusebes directs us rather to the energy which, directed by holy awe of God, finds expression in devoted activity.¶

(2) Cf. theosebeia, and theosebes, which, by their very formation (theos, “God,” and sebomai, express “reverence” towards God. See Trench (Sec.xlviii).

3. sebomai (σέβομαι, 4576), “to feel awe,” whether before God or man, “to worship,” is translated “devout,” in Acts 13:43, RV (KJV, “religious”); 13:50; 17:4, 17. See WORSHIP.

DIADEM

diadema (διάδημα, 1238) is derived from diadeo, “to bind round.” It was the kingly ornament for the head, and especially the blue band marked with white, used to bind on the turban or tiara of Persian kings. It was adopted by Alexander the Great and his successors. Among the Greeks and Romans it was the distinctive badge of royalty. Diocletian was the first Roman emperor to wear it constantly. The word is found in Rev. 12:3; 13:1; 19:12, in which passages it symbolizes the rule respectively of the Dragon, the Beast, and Christ.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 1:11; 2:17, in some mss. in 6:8 and 8:15; also in Isa. 62:3-4. For the distinction between this and stephanos, see CROWN.

DIE, DEAD (to be, become), DYING

1. thnesko (θνῆσκω, 2348), “to die” (in the perf. tense, “to be dead”), in the NT is always used of physical “death,” except in 1 Tim. 5:6, where it is metaphorically used of the loss of spiritual life. The noun thanatos, and the verb thanatoo (below) are connected. The root of this group of words probably had the significance of the breathing out of the last breath. Cf words under DEATH.

2. apothnesko (ἀποθνῆσκω, 599), lit., “to die off or out,” is used (a) of the separation of the soul from the body, i.e., the natural “death” of human beings, e.g., Matt. 9:24; Rom. 7:2; by reason of descent from Adam, 1 Cor. 15:22; or of violent “death,” whether of men or animals; with regard to the latter it is once translated “perished,” Matt. 8:32; of vegetation, Jude 12; of seeds, John 12:24; 1 Cor. 15:36; it is used of “death” as a punishment in Israel under the Law, in Heb. 10:28; (b) of the separation of man from God, all who are descended from Adam not only “die” physically, owing to sin, see (a) above, but are naturally in the state of separation from God, 2 Cor. 5:14. From this believers are freed both now and eternally, John 6:50; 11:26, through the “death” of Christ, Rom. 5:8, e.g.; unbelievers, who “die” physically as such, remain in eternal separation from God, John 8:24. Believers have spiritually “died” to the Law as a means of life, Gal. 2:19; Col. 2:20; to sin, Rom. 6:2, and in general to all spiritual association with the world and with that which pertained to their unregenerate state, Col. 3:3, because of their identification with the “death” of Christ, Rom. 6:8 (see No. 3, below). As life never means mere existence, so “death,” the opposite of life, never means nonexistence. See PERISH.

3. sunapothnesko (συναποθνῆσκω, 4880), “to die with, to die together,” is used of association in physical “death,” Mark 14:31; in 2 Cor. 7:3, the apostle declares that his love to the saints makes separation impossible, whether in life or in “death.” It is used once of association spiritually with Christ in His “death,” 2 Tim. 2:11. See No. 2 (b).¶

4. teleutao (τελευτάω, 5053), “to end” (from telos, “an end”), hence, “to end one’s life,” is used (a) of the “death” of the body, Matt. 2:19; 9:18; 15:4, where “die the death” means “surely die,” RV, marg., lit., “let him end by death”; Mark 7:10; Matt. 22:25, “deceased”; Luke 7:2; John 11:39, some mss. have verb No. 1 here; Acts 2:29; 7:15; Heb. 11:22 (RV, “his end was nigh”); (b) of the gnawings of conscience in self reproach, under the symbol of a worm, Mark 9:48 (vv. 44 and 46, KJV). See DECEASE.¶

5. koimao (κοιμάω, 2837), in the middle and passive voices, its only use in the NT, signifies “to fall asleep.” It is connected etymologically with keimai “to lie down,” the root kti signifying “to lie.” Hence it is used metaphorically of “death,” Matt. 27:52, etc. It is translated “be dead” in 1 Cor. 7:39. See ASLEEP.

6. apoginomai (ἀπογενόμενος, 581**), lit., “to be away from” (apo, “from,” ginomai, “to be, become”; apo here signifies “separation”), is used in 1 Pet. 2:24 of the believer’s attitude towards sin as the result of Christ’s having borne our sins in His body on the tree; RV, “having died unto sins,” the aorist or momentary tense, expressing an event in the past.¶

Note: Apollumi, “to destroy,” is found in the middle voice in some mss. in John 18:14, and translated “die.” The most authentic mss. have apothnesko (No. 2, above).

DIFFER, DIFFERING, DIFFERENT, DIFFERENCE

A. Verbs.

1. diaphero (διαφέρω, 1308), lit., “to bear through, carry different ways,” hence, “to be different from,” is said of the stars, 1 Cor. 15:41; of a child under age in comparison with a servant, Gal. 4:1; in Phil. 1:10, marg., “things that differ,” for “things that are excellent. See BETTER (be).

2. merizo (μερίζω, 3307) denotes “to divide” (from meros, “a part”: the root mer□ indicates distribution, or measuring out, and is seen in meris, “a district”). In 1 Cor. 7:34 the perfect tense of the passive voice is translated “there is a difference.” Some take the verb with what precedes, with reference to the married brother, and translate “he has been divided.” See DEAL, DISTRIBUTE, DIVIDE, GIVE, PART.

3. diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252), lit., “to separate throughout, to make a distinction,” Acts 15:9, RV, is translated “to make to differ,” in 1 Cor. 4:7. In Jude 22, where the middle voice is used, the KJV has “making a difference”; the RV, adopting the alternative reading, the accusative case, has “who are in doubt,” a meaning found in Matt. 21:21; Mark 11:23; Acts 10:20; Rom. 14:23; Jas. 1:6; 2:4. See CONTEND.

B. Nouns.

1. diairesis (διαίρεσις, 1243) lit. signifies “to take asunder,” from dia, “apart,” and haireo, “to take” (Eng., “diaeresis,” i.e., distinguishing two successive vowels as separate sounds); it is rendered in the KJV, “diversities” in 1 Cor. 12:4 and 1 Cor. 12:6 “differences” in v. 5; RV, “diversities,” in each place.¶

2. diastole (διαστολή, 1293) signifies “a setting asunder” (dia, “asunder,” stello, “to set, place, arrange”), hence, “a distinction”; in Rom. 3:22 and 10:12, KJV, “difference”; RV, “distinction”; in 1 Cor. 14:7 it is used of the “distinction” in musical sounds.¶

C. Adjectives.

1. diaphoros (διάφορος, 1313), akin to A, No. 1, signifies “varying in kind, different, diverse.” It is used of spiritual gifts, Rom. 12:6; of ceremonial washings, Heb. 9:10 (“divers”). See DIVERS, and for its other meaning, in Heb. 1:4; 8:6, see EXCELLENT.¶

2. heteros (ἕτερος, 2087), RV, “different,” for KJV, “another,” in Rom. 7:23; 2 Cor. 11:4; Gal. 1:6; cf. 1 Tim. 1:3; 6:3. See ANOTHER.

DIFFICULTY

molis (μόλις, 3433) signifies “with difficulty, hardly” (from molos, “toil”). In Luke 9:39, it is rendered “hardly,” of the “difficulty” in the departure of a demon. In Acts 27:7,

8, 16, where the KJV has three different renderings, “scarce,” “hardly,” and “much work,” respectively, the RV has “with difficulty” in each place. For its other meanings, “scarce, scarcely,” see Acts 14:18; Rom. 5:7 1 Pet. 4:18. See HARDLY, No. 3.¶

DIG, DIG DOWN

1. orusso (ὀρύσσω, 3736), “to dig, dig up soil, dig a pit,” is said of a place for a winepress, Matt. 21:33; Mark 12:1; of “digging” a pit for hiding something, Matt. 25:15.¶

Notes: (1) Diorusso, lit., “to dig through” (dia, “through”), is translated “to break through (or up)” in Matt. 6:19-20; 24:43; Luke 12:39. See BREAK.¶

(2) Exorusso, lit., “to dig out,” is translated “to break up” in Mark 2:4; “to pluck out (the eyes)” in Gal. 4:15. See BREAK, PLUCK.¶

2. skapto (σκάπτω, 4626), primarily, “to dig, by way of hollowing out,” hence, denotes “to dig.” The root skap is seen in skapane, “a spade,” skapetos, “a ditch,” skaphe, “a boat,” and in Eng., “scoop, skiff, and ship” (i.e., something hollowed out). The verb is found in Luke 6:48; 13:8; 16:3.¶

3. kataskapto (κατασκάπτω, 2679), “to dig down” (kata, “down,” and No. 2), is found in Rom. 11:3, of altars, and in some mss. in Acts 15:16, “ruins,” lit., “the things dug down.” Here the best texts have katastrepho, “to overthrow, overturn.”¶

doxa (δόξα, 1391) primarily denotes “an opinion, estimation, repute”; in the NT, always “good opinion, praise, honor, glory, an appearance commanding respect, magnificence, excellence, manifestation of glory”; hence, of angelic powers, in respect of their state as commanding recognition, “dignities,” 2 Pet. 2:10; Jude 8. See GLORY, HONOR, PRAISE, WORSHIP.

DILIGENCE, DILIGENT, DILIGENTLY

A. Nouns.

1. ergasia (ἐργασία, 2039), (a) lit., “a working” (akin to ergon, “work”), is indicative of a process, in contrast to the concrete, ergon, e.g., Eph. 4:19, lit., “unto a working” (RV marg., “to make a trade of”); contrast ergon in v. 12; (b) “business,” Acts 19:25, RV (for KJV, “craft”); or gain got by “work,” Acts 16:16, 19; 19:24; (c) endeavor, pains, “diligence,” Luke 12:58. See CRAFT, GAIN, WORK.¶

2. spoude (σπουδή, 4710), “earnestness, zeal,” or sometimes “the haste accompanying this,” Mark 6:25; Luke 1:39, is translated “diligence” in Rom. 12:8; in v. 11, KJV, “business” (RV, “diligence”); in 2 Cor. 8:7, KJV, “diligence,” RV, “earnestness”; both have “diligence” in Heb. 6:11; 2 Pet. 1:5; Jude 3; in 2 Cor. 7:11, 12, RV, “earnest care,” KJV, “carefulness,” and “care.” See CARE.¶

B. Verbs.

1. spoudazo (σπουδάζω, 4704) has meanings corresponding to A, No. 2; it signifies “to hasten to do a thing, to exert oneself, endeavor, give diligence”; in Gal. 2:10, of remembering the poor, KJV, “was forward,” RV, “was zealous”; in Eph. 4:3, of keeping the unity of the Spirit, KJV “endeavoring,” RV, “giving diligence”; in 1 Thess. 2:17, of going to see friends, “endeavored”; in 2 Tim. 4:9; 4:21, “do thy diligence”; in the following the RV uses the verb “to give diligence”: 2 Tim. 2:15, KJV, “study”; Titus 3:12, KJV, “be diligent”; Heb. 4:11, of keeping continuous Sabbath rest, KJV, “let us labor”; in 2 Pet. 1:10, of making our calling and election sure; in 2 Pet. 1:15, of enabling believers to call Scripture truth to remembrance, KJV, “endeavour”; in 2 Pet. 3:14, of being found in peace without fault and blameless, when the Lord comes, KJV, be diligent. See ENDEAVOR, FORWARD, LABOR, STUDY, ZEALOUS.¶

2. meletao (μελετάω, 3191), signifies “to care for, attend carefully” (from melete, “care”); in 1 Tim. 4:15, KJV, “meditate,” RV, “be diligent in”; in Acts 4:25, “imagine” (marg., “meditate”), in Mark 13:11, the most authentic mss. have promerimnao. See IMAGINE, MEDITATE.¶

C. Adjectives.

1. spoudaios (σπουδαῖος, 4705), akin to A, No. 2 and B, No. 1, primarily signifies “in haste”; hence, diligent, earnest, zealous, 2 Cor. 8:22, KJV, “diligent, RV, “earnest.” See EARNEST FORWARD.¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 41:25, “stout (planks).”¶

2. spoudaioteros (σπουδαιότερος, 4707), the comparative degree of No. 1, 2 Cor. 8:22, KJV, “more diligent,” RV, “more earnest”, in v. 17 KJV, “more forward,” RV, “very earnest.” See EARNEST; cf. FORWARD.¶

D. Adverbs.

1. epimelos (ἐπιμελῶς, 1960), from epi intensive, and an adverbial form of the impersonal verb melei, “it is a care” (cf. B, No. 2), signifies “carefully, diligently,” Luke 15:8.¶

2. pugme (πυγμή, 4435), the dative case of pugme, “a fist,” lit. means “with the fist” (one hand being rubbed with the clenched fist of the other), a metaphorical expression for “thoroughly,” in contrast to what is superficial; Mark 7:3, RV and KJV marg., “diligently” (KJV, text, “oft”). It also signified “boxing” (not in the NT); cf. puktes and pugmachos, “a boxer” (Lat., pugnus and pugno; Eng., “pugilist”).¶ In the Sept., Exod. 21:18; Isa. 58:4.¶

3. spoudaios (σπουδαίως, 4709), “speedily, earnestly, diligently” (cf. the corresponding noun, verb and adjective above), is translated “earnestly” in the RV of Luke 7:4 (KJV, “instantly”); “diligently” in Titus 3:13. See INSTANTLY.

4. spoudaioteros (σπουδαιότερως, 4708), the comparative degree of No. 3, “more diligently,” is used in Phil. 2:28, RV, “the more diligently” (KJV, “the more carefully”). See CAREFULLY.¶

Notes: (1) Some mss. have the neuter of the comparative adjective spoudaioteron in 2 Tim. 1:17. The most authentic texts have the adverb No. 4.

(2) Akribos (ἀκριβῶς, 199), means “accurately, exactly.” The KJV translates it “diligently” in Matt. 2:8 and Acts 18:25; “perfectly” in 1 Thess. 5:2 (cf. Luke 1:3). See ACCURATELY, CAREFUL, CIRCUMSPECTLY, PERFECTLY.

DIMINISHING

hettema (ἥττημα, 2275): see DEFECT.

DINE, DINNER

A. Verb.

aristao (ἀριστάω, 709), primarily, “to breakfast” (see B), was later used also with the meaning “to dine,” e.g., Luke 11:37; in John 21:12, 15, RV, “break your fast,” and “had broken their fast,” for KJV, “dine”; obviously there it was the first meal in the day.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 43:25; 1 Sam. 14:24; 1 Chron. 13:7.¶

B. Noun.

ariston (ἄριστον, 712), primarily, “the first food,” taken early in the morning before work; the meal in the Pharisee’s house, in Luke 11:37, was a breakfast or early meal (see RV, marg.); the dinner was called deipnon. Later the breakfast was called akratisma (not in NT), and dinner, ariston, as in Matt. 22:4; Luke 11:38; 14:12.¶

DIP, DIPPED, DIPPETH

1. bapto (βάπτω, 911), “to immerse, dip” (derived from a root signifying “deep”), also signified “to dye,” which is suggested in Rev. 19:13, of the Lord’s garment “dipped (i.e. dyed) in blood” (RV, “sprinkled” translates the verb rhantizo: see SPRINKLED. It is elsewhere translated “to dip,” Luke 16:24; John 13:26. Cf the longer form baptizo (primarily a frequentative form). See BAPTIZE.¶

2. embapto (ἐμβάπτω, 1686), en, “in,” and No. 1, “to dip into,” is used of the act of Judas in “dipping” his hand with that of Christ in the dish, Matt. 26:23; Mark 14:20.¶

kateuthuno (κατευθύνω, 2720), “to make straight” (kata, “down,” intensive, euthus, “straight,” euthuno, “to straighten”), is translated “guide” in Luke 1:79, of the Lord’s “guidance” of the feet of His people; “direct,” in 1 Thess. 3:11, of His “directing” the way of His servants; in 2 Thess. 3:5, of His “directing” the hearts of His saints into the love of God. See GUIDE.¶

DISALLOW

apodokimazo (ἀποδοκιμάζω, 593), “to reject as the result of disapproval” (apo, “away from,” dokimazo, “to approve”), is always translated “to reject,” except in the KJV of 1 Pet. 2:4 and 7. See REJECT.

DISANNUL, DISANNULLING

A. Verbs.

1. atheteo (ἀθετέω, 114) signifies “to put as of no value” (a, negative, (theton, “what is placed,” from tithemi, “to put, place”); hence, (a) “to act towards anything as though it were annulled”; e.g., to deprive a law of its force by opinions or acts contrary to it, Gal. 3:15, KJV, “disannulleth,” RV, “maketh void”; (b) “to thwart the efficacy of anything, to nullify, to frustrate it,” Luke 7:30, “rejected”; 1 Cor. 1:19, “will I reject”; to make void, Gal. 2:21; to set at nought, Jude 8, RV (KJV, “despised”); the parallel passage, in 2 Pet. 2:10, has kataphroneo. In Mark 6:26, the thought is that of breaking faith with. See DESPISE, A, Note (1).

2. akuroo (ἀκυρόω, 208), “to deprive of authority” (a, negative, kuros, “force, authority”; cf. kunos, “a lord,” kuroo, “to strengthen”), hence, “to make of none effect,” Matt. 15:6; Mark 7:13, with reference to the commandment or word of God, RV, “to make void,” is translated “disannul” in Gal. 3:17, of the inability of the Law to deprive of force God’s covenant with Abraham. This verb stresses the effect of the act, while No. 1 stresses the attitude of the rejector. See VOID.¶

B. Noun.

athetesis (ἀθέτησις, 115), akin to A, No. 1, “a setting aside, abolition,” is translated “disannulling” in Heb. 7:18, with reference to a commandment; in 9:26 “to put away,” with reference to sin, lit., “for a putting away.” See PUTTING, Note.¶

DISBELIEVE

apisteo (ἄπιστέω, 569), “to be unbelieving” (a, negative, pistis, “faith”; cf. apistos, “unbelieving”), is translated “believed not,” etc., in the KJV (except in 1 Pet. 2:7, “be disobedient”); “disbelieve” (or “disbelieved”) in the RV, in Mark 16:11, 16; Luke 24:11, 41; Acts 28:24; “disbelieve” is the best rendering, implying that the unbeliever has had a full opportunity of believing and has rejected it; some mss. have apeitheo, “to be disobedient,” in 1 Pet. 2:7; Rom. 3:3, RV, “were without faith”; 2 Tim. 2:13, RV, “are faithless.” Cf. DISOBEDIENT, C. See BELIEVE.¶

DISCERN, DISCERNER, DISCERNMENT

A. Verbs.

1. anakrino (ἀνακρίνω, 350), “to distinguish, or separate out so as to investigate (krino) by looking throughout (ana, intensive) objects or particulars,” hence signifies “to examine, scrutinize, question, to hold a preliminary judicial examination preceding the trial proper” (this first examination, implying more to follow, is often present in the nonlegal uses of the word), e.g. Luke 23:14; figuratively, in 1 Cor. 4:3; it is said of searching the Scriptures in Acts 17:11; of “discerning” or determining the excellence or defects of a person or thing, e.g., 1 Cor. 2:14, KJV, “discerned”; RV, “judged”; in 1 Cor. 10:27, “asking (no) question” (i.e., not raising the question as to whether the meat is the residue from an idolatrous sacrifice). Except in Luke 23:14, this word is found only in Acts and 1 Cor. See EXAMINE, JUDGE.

2. diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252) signifies “to separate, discriminate”; then, “to learn by discriminating, to determine, decide.” It is translated “discern” in Matt. 16:3, of discriminating between the varying conditions of the sky (see dokimazo, No. 3, below, in Luke 12:56), and in 1 Cor. 11:29, with reference to partaking of the bread and the cup of the Lord’s Supper unworthily, by not “discerning” or discriminating what they represent; in v. 31, the RV has “discerned,” for the KJV, “would judge,” of trying oneself, “discerning” one’s condition, and so judging any evil before the Lord; in 14:29, regarding oral testimony in a gathering of believers, it is used of “discerning” what is of the Holy Spirit, RV, “discern” (KJV, “judge”). See CONTEND, DECIDE, DIFFER, etc.

3. dokimazo (δοκιμάζω, 1381) signifies “to test, prove, scrutinize,” so as “to decide.” It is translated “discern” in the KJV of Luke 12:56; RV, “interpret” (marg., “prove”). See APPROVE.

B. Noun.

diakrisis (διάκρισις, 1253), cf. A, No. 2, “a distinguishing, a clear discrimination, discerning, judging,” is translated “discernings” in 1 Cor. 12:10, of “discerning” spirits, judging by evidence whether they are evil or of God. In Heb. 5:14 the phrase consisting of pros, with this noun, lit., “towards a discerning,” is translated “to discern,” said of those who are capable of discriminating between good and evil. In Rom. 14:1 the word has its other sense of decision or judgment, and the phrase “doubtful disputations” is, lit., “judgments of reasonings” (marg., “not for decisions of doubts,” i.e., not to act as a judge of the weak brother’s scruples). See DECISION, B, No. 2.¶

Note: For “discernment,” Phil. 1:19, see JUDGMENT, Note (4).¶

C. Adjective.

kritikos (κριτικός, 2924) signifies “that which relates to judging (krino, “to judge”), fit for, or skilled in, judging” (Eng., “critical”), found in Heb. 4:12, of the Word of God as “quick to discern the thoughts and intents of the heart,” (lit., “critical of, etc.”), i.e., discriminating and passing judgment on the thoughts and feelings.¶

DISCHARGED

katargeo (καταργέω, 2673) means “to reduce to inactivity.” “Discharged” is the RV translation of the word in Rom. 7:2 and 6 (KJV, “is loosed,” and “are delivered”). In v. 2 the meaning is that the death of a woman’s first husband makes void her status as a wife in the eyes of the Law; she is therefore “discharged” from the prohibition against remarrying; the prohibition is rendered ineffective in her case. So, in v. 6, with the believer in relation to the Law, he has been made dead to the Law as a means of justification and life. It is not the Law that has died (KJV), but the believer (see the RV), who has been “discharged,” through being put to death, as to the old nature, in identification with the death of Christ, that he might have life in Christ. See ABOLISH.

DISCIPLE

A. Nouns.

1. mathetes (μαθητής, 3101), lit., “a learner” (from manthano, “to learn,” from a root math□, indicating thought accompanied by endeavor), in contrast to didaskalos, “a teacher”; hence it denotes “one who follows one’s teaching,” as the “disciples” of John, Matt. 9:14; of the Pharisees, Matt. 22:16; of Moses, John 9:28; it is used of the “disciples” of Jesus (a) in a wide sense, of Jews who became His adherents, John 6:66; Luke 6:17, some being secretly so, John 19:38; (b) especially of the twelve apostles, Matt. 10:1; Luke 22:11, e.g.; (c) of all who manifest that they are His “disciples” by abiding in His Word, John 8:31, cf. 13:35; 15:8; (d) in the Acts, of those who believed upon Him and confessed Him, 6:1-2, 7; 14:20, 22, 28; 15:10; 19:1, etc.

A “disciple” was not only a pupil, but an adherent; hence they are spoken of as imitators of their teacher; cf. John 8:31; 15:8.

2. mathetria (μαθήτρια, 3102), “a female disciple,” is said of Tabitha, Acts 9:36.¶

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

3. summathetes (συμμαθητής, 4827) means “a fellow disciple” (sun, with, and No. 1), John 11:16.¶

Note: In Acts 1:15, the RV translates the mss. which have adelphon, “brethren”; in 20:7, RV, “we,” for KJV, “disciples.”

B. Verb.

matheteuo (μαθητεύω, 3100) is used in the active voice, intransitively, in some mss., in Matt. 27:57, in the sense of being the “disciple” of a person; here, however, the best mss. have the passive voice, lit., “had been made a disciple,” as in Matt. 13:52, RV, “who hath been made a disciple.” It is used in this transitive sense in the active voice in 28:19 and Acts 14:21.¶

sophronismos (σωφρονισμός, 4995), from sophron, lit., “saving the mind,” from saos, “contracted to” sos, “safe” (cf. sozo, “to save”), phren, “the mind,” primarily, “an admonishing or calling to soundness of mind, or to selfcontrol,” is used in 2 Tim. 1:7, KJV, “a sound mind”; RV, “discipline.” Cf. sophroneo (“to be of sound mind”), sophronizo (“to admonish”), sophronos (“soberly”), and sophron, “of sound mind. See MIND.¶ Cf. CHASTISEMENT.

DISCOURAGE (-D)

athumeo (ἀθυμέω, 120), “to be disheartened, dispirited, discouraged” (a, negative, thumos, “spirit, courage,” from the root thu, found in thuo, “to rush,” denoting “feeling, passion”; hence Eng., “fume”), is found in Col. 3:21.¶

dialogomai (διαλέγομαι, 1256) primarily denotes “to ponder, resolve in one’s mind” (dia, “through,” lego, “to say”); then, “to converse, dispute, discuss, discourse with”; most frequently, “to reason or dispute with.” In Heb. 12:5 the RV, “reasoneth with” is to be preferred to the KJV, “speaketh unto.” The KJV translates it “preached,” in Acts 20:7 and 9; this the RV corrects to “discoursed,” lit., “dialogued,” i.e., not by way of a sermon, but by a “discourse” of a more conversational character. See DISPUTE, PREACH, REASON, SPEAK. In the Sept., Exod. 6:27; Judg. 8:1; Isa. 63:1.

DISCOVER

Two verbs are translated by the verb “to discover,” in the KJV. The RV translates differently in each case.

1. anaphaino (ἀναφαίνω, 398): see APPEAR, A, No. 3.

2. katanoeo (κατανοέω, 2657), “to perceive distinctly, discern clearly, descry,” is translated “discovered” in Acts 27:39, KJV, of finding a bay with a creek (RV, “perceived”). See BEHOLD.

DISCREET, DISCREETLY

A. Adjective.

sophron (σώφρων, 4998), “of sound mind self-controlled” (for the derivation, see DISCIPLINE), is translated “sober-minded,” in its four occurrences in the RV, 1 Tim. 3:2

B. Adverb.

nounechos (νουνεχῶς, 3562), lit., “mindpossessing” (nous, “mind, understanding,” echo, “to have”), hence denotes “discreetly, sensibly prudently.” Mark 12:34.¶

DISEASE, DISEASED (BE) A. Nouns.

1. astheneia (ἀσθένεια, 769), lit., “lacking strength” (a, negative, sthenos, “strength”), “weakness, infirmity,” is translated “diseases” in Matt. 8:17, RV, for KJV, “sicknesses,” and in Acts 28:9. Its usual rendering is “infirmity” or “infirmities”; “sickness,” in John 11:4. Cf. B, No. 1. See INFIRMITY, SICKNESS, WEAKNESS.

2. malakia (μαλακία, 3119) primarily denotes “softness” (cf. malakos, “soft,” Matt. 11:8, etc.); hence, “debility, disease.” It is found in Matthew only, 4:23; 9:35; 10:1.¶ It is frequent in the Sept., e.g., Gen. 42:4; 44:29; Deut. 7:15; 28:61; Isa. 38:9; 53:3.

3. nosos (νόσος, 3554), akin to Lat. nocere, “to injure” (Eng., “nosology”), is the regular word for “disease, sickness,” Matt. 4:23; 8:17; 9:35; 10:1, RV, “disease,” KJV, “sickness”; in Matt. 4:24; Mark 1:34; Luke 4:40; 6:17; 9:1; Acts 19:12, KJV and RV render it “diseases.” In Luke 7:21, KJV has “infirmities.” The most authentic mss. omit the word in Mark 3:15. See SICKNESS.¶

4. nosema (νόσημα, 3553), an alternative form of No. 3, is found in some mss. in John 5:4.¶ Cf. noseo, “to dote about, have a diseased craving for,” 1 Tim. 6:4.¶

B. Verbs.

1. astheneo (ἀσθενέω, 770), akin to A, No. 1, “to lack strength, to be weak, sick,” is translated “were diseased” in John 6:2, KJV (RV, “were sick”). See IMPOTENT, SICK, WEAK.

2. echo kakos lit., “to have badly,” i.e., “to be ill or in an evil case,” is used in Matt. 14:35 (KJV, “were diseased,” RV, “were sick”); so in Mark 1:32; Luke 7:2. See SICK.¶

aphanizo (ἀφανίζω, 853) primarily means “to cause to disappear,” hence (a) “to make unsightly, to disfigure,” as of the face, Matt. 6:16; (b) “to cause to vanish away, consume,” Matt. 6:19, 20; (c) in the passive voice, “to perish,” Acts 13:41, or “to vanish away,” Jas. 4:14. See CONSUME.¶

DISH

trublion (τρύβλιον, 5165) denotes “a bowl,” somewhat deep, Matt. 26:23; Mark 14:20; among the Greeks it was a measure in medical prescriptions.¶

DISHONESTY

aischune (αἰσχύνη, 152), “shame,” so the RV in 2 Cor. 4:2 (for KJV, “dishonesty”), is elsewhere rendered “shame,” Luke 14:9; Phil. 3:19; Heb. 12:2; Jude 13; Rev. 3:18. See SHAME.¶

DISHONOR

A. Noun.

atimia (ἀτιμία, 819), from a, negative, time, “honor,” denotes “dishonor, ignominy, disgrace,” in Rom. 1:26, “vile passions” (RV), lit., ‘passions of dishonor;’ in Rom. 9:21, “dishonor,” of vessels designed for meaner household purposes (in contrast to time, “honor,” as in 2 Tim. 2:20); in 1 Cor. 11:14, said of long hair, if worn by men, RV, “dishonor,” for KJV, “shame,” in contrast to doxa, glory, v. 15; so in 1 Cor. 15:43, of the “sowing” of the natural body, and in 2 Cor. 6:8, of the apostle Paul’s ministry. In 2 Cor. 11:21 he uses it in selfdisparagement, KJV, “reproach,” RV, “disparagement. See DISPARAGEMENT, REPROACH, SHAME, VILE.

B. Adjective.

atimos (ἄτιμος, 820), akin to A: see DESPISE, B.

C. Verbs.

1. atimazo (ἀτιμάζω, 818) akin to A, signifies “to dishonour, treat shamefully, insult,” whether in word, John 8:49, or deed, Mark 12:4; Luke 20:11, RV “handled (him) shamefully,” (RV “entreated ... shamefully”); Rom. 1:24; 2:23, “dishonorest;” Jas. 2:6, RV, “ye have dishonored (the poor),” (KJV, “despised”); in the passive voice, to suffer dishonor, Acts 5:41 (KJV, “suffer shame”). See DESPISE, A, Note (2).

Note: Atimao is found in some mss. in Mark 12:4.

2. kataischuno (καταισχύνω, 2617): see ASHAMED, No. 3.

DISMISS (-ED)

apoluo (ἀπολύω, 630), lit., “to loose from” (apo, “from,” luo, “to loose”), is translated “dismiss” in Acts 15:30, 33, RV (KJV, “let go”) and 19:41. See DEPART, DIVORCE, FORGIVE, GO, LIBERTY, LOOSE, PUT, No. 16, RELEASE, SEND.

DISOBEDIENCE, DISOBEDIENT

A. Nouns.

1. apeitheia (ἀπειθεία, 543), lit., “the condition of being unpersuadable” (a, negative, peitho, “to persuade”), denotes “obstinacy, obstinate rejection of the will of God”; hence, “disobedience”; Eph. 2:2; 5:6; Col. 3:6, and in the RV of Rom. 11:30, 32 and Heb. 4:6, 11 (for KJV, “unbelief”), speaking of Israel, past and present. See UNBELIEF.¶

2. parakoe (παρακοή, 3876), primarily, “hearing amiss” (para, “aside,” akouo, “to hear”), hence signifies “a refusal to hear”; hence, “an act of disobedience,” Rom. 5:19; 2 Cor. 10:6; Heb. 2:2. It is broadly to be distinguished from No. 1, as an act from a condition, though parakoe itself is the effect, in transgression, of the condition of failing or refusing to hear. Carelessness in attitude is the precursor of actual “disobedience.” In the OT “disobedience” is frequently described as “a refusing to hear,” e.g., Jer. 11:10; 35:17; cf. Acts 7:57. See Trench, Syn. Sec.lxvi.¶

B. Adjective.

apeithes (ἀπειθής, 545), akin to A, No. 1, signifies “unwilling to be persuaded, spurning belief, disobedient,” Luke 1:17; Acts 26:19; Rom. 1:30; 2 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:16; 3:3.¶

Note: In 1 Tim. 1:9 anupotaktos, “insubordinate, unsubjected” (a, negative, n, euphonic, hupo, “under,” tasso, “to order”), is translated “disobedient” in the KJV; the RV has “unruly,” as in Titus 1:6, 10; in Heb. 2:8, “not subject” (RV), “not put under” (KJV). See PUT, UNRULY.¶

C. Verb.

apeitheo (ἀπειθέω, 544), akin to A, No. 1, and B, “to refuse to be persuaded, to refuse belief, to be disobedient,” is translated “disobedient,” or by the verb “to be disobedient,” in the RV of Acts 14:2 (KJV, “unbelieving”), and 19:9 (KJV, “believed not”); it is absent from the most authentic mss. in Acts 17:5; in John 3:36 “obeyeth not,” RV (KJV, “believeth not”); in Rom. 2:8 “obey not”; in 10:21, “disobedient”; in 11:30, 31, “were disobedient” (KJV, “have not believed”); so in 15:31; Heb. 3:18; 11:31; in 1 Pet. 2:8, “disobedient”; so in 3:20; in 3:1 and 4:17, “obey not.” In 2:7 the best mss. have apisteo, “to disbelieve.” See OBEY, B, No. 4, UNBELIEVING.¶

DISORDERLY

A. Adjective.

ataktos (ἄτακτος, 813) signifies “not keeping order” (a, negative, tasso, “to put in order, arrange”); it was especially a military term, denoting “not keeping rank, insubordinate”; it is used in 1 Thess. 5:14, describing certain church members who manifested an insubordinate spirit, whether by excitability or officiousness or idleness. See UNRULY.¶

B. Adverb.

ataktos (ἄτάκτως, 814) signifies “disorderly, with slackness” (like soldiers not keeping rank) 2 Thess. 3:6; in v. 11 it is said of those in the church who refused to work, and became busybodies (cf. 1 Tim. 5:13).¶

C. Verb.

atakteo (ἀτακτέω, 812) signifies “to be out of rank, out of one’s place, undisciplined, to behave disorderly”: in the military sense, “to break rank”; negatively in 2 Thess. 3:7, of the example set by the apostle and his fellow missionaries, in working for their bread while they were at Thessalonica so as not to burden the saints. See BEHAVE.¶

DISPARAGEMENT

For this RV translation of atimia in 2 Cor. 11:21, see DISHONOR, A.

DISPENSATION

oikonomia (οἰκονομία, 3622) primarily signifies “the management of a household or of household affairs” (oikos, “a house,” nomos, “a law”); then the management or administration of the property of others, and so “a stewardship,” Luke 16:2-4; elsewhere only in the epistles of Paul, who applies it (a) to the responsibility entrusted to him of preaching the gospel, 1 Cor. 9:17 (RV, “stewardship,” KJV, “dispensation”); (b) to the stewardship committed to him “to fulfill the Word of God,” the fulfillment being the unfolding of the completion of the divinely arranged and imparted cycle of truths which are consummated in the truth relating to the church as the body of Christ, Col. 1:25 (RV and KJV, “dispensation”); so in Eph. 3:2, of the grace of God given him as a stewardship (“dispensation”) in regard to the same “mystery”; (c) in Eph. 1:10 and 3:9, it is used of the arrangement or administration by God, by which in “the fullness of the times” (or seasons) God will sum up all things in the heavens and on earth in Christ. In Eph. 3:9

some mss. have koinonia, “fellowship,” for oikonomia, “dispensation.” In 1 Tim. 1:4 oikonomia may mean either a stewardship in the sense of (a) above, or a “dispensation” in the sense of (c). The reading oikodomia, “edifying,” in some mss., is not to be accepted. See STEWARDSHIP.¶

Note: A “dispensation” is not a period or epoch (a common, but erroneous, use of the word), but a mode of dealing, an arrangement or administration of affairs. Cf.

oikonomos, “a steward,” and oikonomeo, “to be a steward.”

DISPERSE, DISPERSION

A. Verbs.

1. dialuo (διαλύω, 1262), “to dissolve,” is used in Acts 5:36 of the breaking up and dispersion of a company of men, RV, “dispersed,” KJV, “scattered.” See SCATTER.¶

2. skorpizo (σκορπίζω, 4650), “to scatter” (probably from a root, skarp-, signifying “to cut asunder,” akin to skorprios, “a scorpion”), is used in Matt. 12:30; Luke 11:23; John 10:12; 16:32; in the RV of 2 Cor. 9:9, “scattered abroad” (KJV, “he hath dispersed abroad”), of one who liberally dispenses benefits. See SCATTER.¶

3. diaskorpizo (διασκορπίζω, 1287), dia, “through,” and No. 2, signifies “to scatter abroad,” in Matt. 26:31; Mark 14:27, metaphorically of sheep; in Luke 1:51, of the proud; in John 11:52, of the “scattering” of the children of God; in Acts 5:37, of the followers of Judas of Galilee (KJV, “were dispersed”); cf. No. 1, re v. 36; of “scattering” grain by winnowing Matt. 25:24, 26; in Luke 15:13 and 16:1, it signifies “to waste. See SCATTER, STRAWED, WASTE.¶

4. diaspeiro (διασπείρω, 1289), “to scatter abroad” (dia, “through,” speiro, “to sow”), is used in Acts 8:1, 4; 11:19.¶

B. Noun.

diaspora (διασπορά, 1290), akin to A, No. 4, “a scattering, a dispersion,” was used of the Jews who from time to time had been scattered among the Gentiles, John 7:35; later with reference to Jews, so “scattered,” who had professed, or actually embraced, the Christian faith, “the Dispersion,” Jas. 1:1, RV; especially of believers who were converts from Judaism and “scattered” throughout certain districts, “sojourners of the Dispersion,” 1 Pet. 1:1, RV.¶ In the Sept., of Israelites, “scattered” and exiled, e.g., Deut. 28:25; 30:4; Neh. 1:9.

DISPLEASED

1. aganakteo (ἀγανακτέω, 23), from agan, “much,” and achomai, “to grieve,” primarily meant “to feel a violent irritation, physically”; it was used, too, of the fermenting of wine hence, metaphorically, “to show signs of grief, to be displeased, to be grieved, vexed”; it is translated “sore displeased” in Matt. 21:15, KJV; “much displeased,” in Mark 10:14, 41; the RV always renders it “to be moved with, or to have, indignation,” as the KJV elsewhere, Matt. 20:24; 26:8; Mark 14:4; Luke 13:14. See INDIGNATION.¶

2. prosochthizo (προσοχθίζω, 4360), “to be wroth or displeased with” (pros, “toward,” or “with,” ochtheo, “to be sorely vexed”), is used in Heb. 3:10, 17 (KJV, “grieved”; RV, “displeased”). “Grieved” does not adequately express the righteous anger of God intimated in the passage. See GRIEVE.¶

3. thumomacheo (θυμομαχέω, 2371), lit., “to fight with great animosity” (thumos, “passion,” machomai, “to fight”), hence, “to be very angry, to be highly displeased,” is said of Herod’s “displeasure” with the Tyrians and Sidonians, Acts 12:20.¶

DISPOSED (to be)

1. boulomai (βούλωμαι, 1014), “to wish, to purpose, to will deliberately,” indicating a predisposition acting through the deliberate will, is translated “was disposed” in Acts 18:27, KJV (RV, “was minded”). It expresses more strongly than thelo (No. 2) the deliberate exercise of the will. See DESIRE, B, No. 7.

2. thelo (θέλω, 2309) means “to will”; it signifies more especially the natural impulse or volition, and indicates a less formal or deliberate purpose than No. 1. It is translated “are disposed” in 1 Cor. 10:27. See DESIRE, B, No. 6.

DISPOSITION

diatage (διαταγή, 1296), an ordinance, e.g., Rom. 13:2 (cf. diatasso, “to appoint, ordain”), is rendered “disposition” in Acts 7:53; RV, “as it (the law) was ordained by angels” (marg., “as the ordinance of angels”; lit., “unto ordinances of angels”). Angels are mentioned in connection with the giving of the Law of Moses in Deut. 33:2. In Gal. 3:19 and Heb. 2:2 the purpose of the reference to them is to show the superiority of the gospel to the Law. In Acts 7:53 Stephen mentions the angels to stress the majesty of the Law. See ORDAIN, ORDINANCE.¶

DISPUTATION

1. zetesis (ζήτησις, 2214) denotes, firstly, “a seeking” (zeteo, “to seek”), then, “a debate, dispute, questioning,” Acts 15:2, 7 (some texts have suzetesis, “reasoning,” in both verses), RV, “questioning,” for KJV, “disputation” and “disputing”; for John 3:25; Acts 25:20; 1 Tim. 1:4; 6:4; 2 Tim. 2:23; Titus 3:9, see QUESTION, QUESTIONING.¶

2. dialogismos (διαλογισμός, 1261) is translated “disputations” in Rom. 14:1. See below.

DISPUTE, DISPUTER, DISPUTING

A. Nouns.

1. dialogismos (διαλογισμός, 1261) denotes, primarily, “an inward reasoning, an opinion” (dia, “through,” suggesting separation, logismos, “a reasoning”), e.g., Luke 2:35; 5:22; 6:8; then, “a deliberating, questioning,” Luke 24:38; (more strongly) “a disputing,” Phil. 2:14; 1 Tim. 2:8 (KJV, “doubtings”); in Rom. 14:1, “disputations”; marg., “(not for decisions) of doubts” (lit., “not unto discussions or doubts,” which is perhaps a suitable rendering). Cf. dialogizomai, “to reason.” See DOUBTING, IMAGINATION, REASONING, THOUGHT.

2. logomachia (λογομαχία, 3055) denotes “a dispute about words” (logos, “a word,” mache, “a fight”), or about trivial things, 1 Tim. 6:4, RV, “disputes,” KJV, “strifes.” See STRIFE.¶

3. diaparatribe (παραδιατριβή, 3859v) denotes “a constant or incessant wrangling” (dia “through,” para, “beside,” tribo, “to wear out,” suggesting the attrition or wearing effect of contention), 1 Tim. 6:5, RV, “wranglings,” KJV, “perverse disputings.” Some mss. have the word paradiatribe, in the opposite order of the prefixed prepositions. See WRANGLING.¶

4. antilogia (ἀντιλογία, 485) denotes “a gainsaying, contradiction” (anti, “against,” lego, “to speak”), Heb. 6:16 (KJV, “strife,” RV, “dispute,”); 7:7, “a gainsaying” (RV, “dispute”; KJV, “contradiction”); 12:3 (RV, “gainsaying”; KJV, “contradiction”), Jude 11 (“gainsaying”). See CONTRADICTION, B.¶

5. suzetetes (συζητητής, 4804), from sun, “with,” zeteo, “to seek,” denotes “a disputer,” 1 Cor. 1:20, where the reference is especially to a learned “disputant,” a sophist.¶

B. Verbs.

1. dialegomai (διαλέγομαι, 1256), akin to A No. 1, primarily signifies “to think different things with oneself, to ponder”; then, with other persons, “to converse, argue, dispute”; it is translated “to dispute” in Mark 9:34 (for v. 33, see No. 2), the RV and KJV “had disputed” is somewhat unsuitable here, for the delinquency was not that they had wrangled, but that they had reasoned upon the subject at all; in Acts 17:17, KJV (RV, “reasoned,” as in the KJV of 18:4, 19); in 19:8-9 (RV, “reasoning”); in 24:12, “disputing”; in Jude 9, “disputed.” See DISCOURSE.

2. dialogizomai (διαλογίζομαι, 1260), akin to A, No. 1, “to bring together different reasons, to reckon them up, to reason, discuss,” in Mark 9:33 is translated “ye disputed among yourselves,” KJV; RV, “were reasoning.” See CAST No. 15, REASON.

3. suzeteo (συζητέω, 4802), akin to A, No. 5, lit., “to seek or examine together,” signifies “to discuss,” but is translated “to dispute” in Acts 6:9, and 9:29; elsewhere only in Mark and Luke. See INQUIRE, QUESTION, REASON.

DISREPUTE

apelegmos (ἀπελεγμός, 557), from apo, “from,” and elencho, “to refute,” denotes “censure, repudiation” (of something shown to be worthless), hence, “contempt,” “disrepute,” Acts 19:27, RV, “(come into) disrepute,” for KJV, “(to be) set at nought.” It is akin to apelencho “to convict, refute” (not in the NT), elencho, “to convict,” elenxis, “rebuke,” and elegmos, “reproof.” See NOUGHT.¶

For DISSEMBLE see DISSIMULATION

DISSENSION

stasis (στάσις, 4714), akin to histemi, “to stand,” denotes (a) “a standing, stability,” Heb. 9:8, “(while as the first tabernacle) is yet standing”; (b) “an insurrection, uproar,”

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

Mark 15:7; Luke 23:19, 25; Acts 19:40; 24:5; (c) “a dissension, Acts 15:2; 23:7, 10. See INSURRECTION, SEDITION, STANDING, UPROAR.¶

DISSIMULATION, DISSEMBLE

A. Noun.

hupokrisis (ὑπόκρισις, 5272), primarily, “a reply,” came to mean “the acting of a stageplayer,” because such answered one another in dialogue; hence the meaning “dissembling or pretense.” It is translated “dissimulation” in Gal. 2:13 (see B). See HYPOCRISY.

B. Verb.

sunupokrinomai (συνυποκρίνομαι, 4942), sun, “with,” hupokrinomai, akin to A, “to join in acting the hypocrite,” in pretending to act from one motive, whereas another motive really inspires the act. So in Gal. 2:13, Peter with other believing Jews, in separating from believing Gentiles at Antioch, pretended that the motive was loyalty to the Law of Moses, whereas really it was fear of the Judaizers.¶

C. Adjective.

anupokritos (ἀνυπόκριτος, 505), from a, negative, n, euphonic, and an adjectival form corresponding to A, signifies “unfeigned”; it is said of love, 2 Cor. 6:6; 1 Pet. 1:22; Rom. 12:9, KJV, “without dissimulation,” RV, “without hypocrisy”; of faith, 1 Tim. 1:5; 2 Tim. 1:5, “unfeigned”; of the wisdom that is from above, Jas. 3:17, “without hypocrisy.” See HYPOCRISY.¶

DISSOLVE

1. luo (λύω, 3089), “to loose,” is used of the future demolition of the elements or heavenly bodies, 2 Pet. 3:10-12; in v. 10, KJV, “shall melt,” RV, “shall be dissolved”; in verses 11-12, KJV and RV, “dissolved.” See BREAK.

2. kataluo (καταλύω, 2647): see DESTROY A, No. 5.

For DISTINCTION (diastole) see DIFFERENCE

DISTRACTION (without)

aperispastos (ἀπερισπάστως, 563), from a, negative, perispao, “to draw around, draw away, distract” (see CUMBER), is found in 1 Cor. 7:35.¶

DISTRESS, DISTRESSED

A. Nouns.

1. ananke (ἀνάγκη, 318) denotes (a) “a necessity,” imposed whether by external circumstances, e.g., Luke 23:17, or inward pressure, e.g., 1 Cor. 9:16; (b) “straits, distress,” Luke 21:23 (in v. 25 “distress” translates No. 3); 1 Cor. 7:26; 1 Thess. 3:7; the last two refer to the lack of material things. See NECESSARY, NECESSITY, NEEDS.

2. stenochoria (στενοχωρία, 4730): see ANGUISH.

3. sunochē (συνόχη, 4928): see ANGUISH.

4. thlipsis (θλίψις, 2347): see AFFLICTION, B, No. 5.

B. Verbs.

1. basanizo (βασανίζω, 928), properly signifies “to test by rubbing on the touchstone” (basanos, “a touchstone”), then, “to question by applying torture”; hence “to vex, torment”; in the passive voice, “to be harassed, distressed”; it is said of men struggling in a boat against wind and waves, Matt. 14:24, RV, “distressed” (KJV, “tossed”); Mark 6:48, RV, “distressed” (KJV, toiling). See PAIN, TOIL, TORMENT, VEX.

2. skullo (σκούλλω, 4660) primarily signifies “to skin, to flay”; then “to rend, mangle”; hence, “to vex, trouble, annoy”; it is found in the most authentic mss. in Matt. 9:36, RV, “distressed” (of the multitudes who applied to the Lord for healing); KJV, “fainted,” translating the alternative reading, ekluo, lit., “to loosen out.” It is also used in Mark 5:35; Luke 7:6; 8:49. See TROUBLE.¶

3. stenochoreo (στενοχωρέω, 4729): see ANGUISH.

4. kataponeo (καταπονέω, 2669), primarily, “to tire down with toil, exhaust with labor” (kata, “down,” ponos, “labor”), hence signifies “to afflict, oppress”; in the passive voice, “to be oppressed, much distressed”; it is translated “oppressed” in Acts 7:24, and “sore distressed” in 2 Pet. 2:7, RV, (KJV, “vexed”). See OPPRESS, VEX.¶

DISTRIBUTE, DISTRIBUTION

A. Verbs.

1. diadidomi (διαδίδωμι, 1239), lit., “to give through,” (dia, “through,” didomi, “to give”), as from one to another, “to deal out,” is said of “distributing” to the poor, Luke 18:22; Acts 4:35, “distribution was made,” or to a company of people, John 6:11. It is translated “divideth” in Luke 11:22. In Rev. 17:13 the most authentic mss. have the verb didomi, to give, instead of the longer form.¶

2. merizo (μερίζω, 3307) is translated “hath distributed” in 1 Cor. 7:17, and in the KJV of 2 Cor. 10:13, where, however, this rendering is unsuitable, as it is not a case of distributing among a number, but apportioning a measure to the apostle and his co-workers; hence the RV, apportioned. See DIFFER, A, No. 2.

Note: Koinoneo, “to share in common with,” is translated “distributing” in Rom. 12:13, KJV. The verb does not mean “to distribute”; hence RV, “communicating.” Similarly koinonia, “fellowship, communion,” is translated “distribution” in 2 Cor. 9:13, KJV; RV, “contribution.”

B. Adjective.

eumetadotos (εὐμετάδοτος, 2130), “ready to impart” (eu, “well,” meta, “with,” didomi, “to give”: see A, No. 1), is used in 1 Tim. 6:18, “ready to distribute.”¶ meris (μερίς, 3310) denotes “a part” (akin to merizo, DISTRIBUTE, A, No. 2), Luke 10:42; Acts 8:21; 2 Cor. 6:15; Col. 1:12 (lit., “unto the part,” or share, of the inheritance). In Acts 16:12 the RV translates it “district,” with reference to Macedonia. See PART.¶

DISTRICT

DITCH

bothunos (βόθυνος, 999), any kind of “deep hole or pit” (probably connected with bathos, “deep”), is translated “ditch” in the KJV of Matt. 15:14 and Luke 6:39, RV, “pit” in each place, as in both versions of Matt. 12:11. See PIT.¶

DIVERS

A. Adjectives.

1. diaphoros (διάφορος, 1313) is rendered divers in Heb. 9:10. See DIFFER, C.

2. poikilos (ποικίλος, 4164) denotes “particolored, variegated” (poikillo means “to make gay”: the root of the first syllable is pik□, found in Eng., “picture”), hence “divers,” Matt. 4:24; Mark 1:34; Luke 4:40; 2 Tim. 3:6; Titus 3:3; Heb. 2:4 (RV, “manifold”), 13:9; Jas. 1:2 (RV, “manifold”); in 1 Pet. 1:6 and 4:10, “manifold,” both KJV and RV. See MANIFOLD.¶

Notes: (1) Cf. polypoikilos, Eph. 3:10, “manifold” (lit., “much varied”).

(2) The pronoun tines, “some” (the plural of tis, “someone”), is translated “divers” in the KJV of Mark 8:3 and Acts 19:9; RV, “some.”

(3) In 1 Cor. 12:28, genos, in the plural, is rendered “divers kinds.” See DIVERSITIES.

B. Adverb.

polutropos (πολυτρόπως, 4187) means “in many ways” (polus, “much,” tropos, “a manner, way”; Eng., “trope”), “in divers manners,” Heb. 1:1.¶

Note: The phrase kata topous, lit., “throughout places” (kata, “down, or throughout,” in a distributive sense, topos, “a place”), is translated “in divers places,” in Matt. 24:7; Mark 13:8 and Luke 21:11.

DIVERSITY, DIVERSITIES

diairesis (διαίρεσις, 1243): See DIFFER, B, No. 1.

Note: Genos, “a kind, class, sort” (Eng., “genus”), is translated “diversities” in the KJV of 1 Cor. 12:28 (marg., “kinds”); RV, “divers kinds.”

DIVIDE, DIVIDER, DIVIDING

A. Verbs.

1. aphorizo (ἀφορίζω, 873), lit., “to mark off by boundaries or limits” (apo, “from,” horizo, “to determine, mark out”), denotes “to separate”; “divideth,” Matt. 25:32, KJV; RV, “separateth,” as in the preceding part of the verse. See SEPARATE, SEVER

2. diaireo (διαίρῃω, 1244), lit., “to take asunder” (see DIFFER, B, No. 1), “to divide into parts, to distribute,” is found in Luke 15:12 and 1 Cor. 12:11.¶

3. diadidomi (διαδίδωμι, 1239): see DISTRIBUTE, A, No. 1.

4. diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252), “to separate,” discriminate, hence, “to be at variance with oneself, to be divided in one’s mind,” is rendered “divided” in Jas. 2:4, RV; KJV, “partial.” See DISCERN.

5. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is translated “was divided” in Rev. 16:19 (of “the great city”), lit., “became into three parts.”

6. merizo (μερίζω, 3307), akin to meros, “a part, to part, divide into,” in the middle voice means “to divide anything with another, to share with.” The usual meaning is “to divide,” Matt. 12:25, 26; Mark 3:24-26; 6:41; Luke 12:13 (middle voice); Rom. 12:3,

“hath dealt”; 1 Cor. 1:13; Heb. 7:2, RV (KJV, “gave a part”). Elsewhere with other meanings, 1 Cor. 7:17, 34; 2 Cor. 10:13. See DEAL, DIFFER, A, No. 2, DISTRIBUTE, A, No. 2, GIVE.¶

7. diamerizo (διαμερίζω, 1266), dia, “through,” and No. 6, “to divide through,” i.e., “completely, to divide up,” is translated “to divide” in Luke 11:17-18; 12:52-53; 22:17; “parted” in Matt. 27:35; Mark 15:24; Luke 23:34; John 19:24; Acts 2:45; in Acts 2:3, KJV, “cloven,” RV, “parting asunder.” See CLOVEN.¶

8. orthotomeo (ὀρθοτομέω, 3718), lit., “to cut straight” (orthos, “straight,” temno, “to cut”), is found in 2 Tim. 2:15, KJV, “rightly dividing,” RV, “handling aright” (the word of truth); the meaning passed from the idea of cutting or “dividing,” to the more general sense of “rightly dealing with a thing.” What is intended here is not “dividing” Scripture from Scripture, but teaching Scripture accurately.¶ In the Sept., of directing one’s paths, Prov. 3:6 and 11:5 (“righteousness traces out blameless paths”).¶

Note: In Acts 13:19, the KJV, “He divided their land ... by lot,” represents the verb kataklerodoteo, from kata, suggesting “distribution,” kleros, “a lot,” didomi, “to give.” The most authentic mss. have katakleronomeo, “to distribute,” as an inheritance, from kleronomia, “an inheritance”; hence RV, “He gave them their land for an inheritance.”¶ For schizo, Acts 14:4; 23:7, see BREAK, No. 12.

B. Nouns.

1. meristes (μεριστής, 3312), “a divider,” is found in Luke 12:14.¶

2. merismos (μερισμός, 3311), akin to No. 1, primarily denotes “a division, partition” (meros, “a part”); hence, (a) “a distribution,” Heb. 2:4, “gifts” (marg. of RV, “distributions”); (b) “a dividing or separation,” Heb. 4:12, “dividing” (KJV, “dividing asunder”). Some take this in the active sense, “as far as the cleaving asunder or separation of soul and spirit”; others in the passive sense, “as far as the division (i.e., the dividing line) between soul and spirit,” i.e., where one differs from the other. The former seems more in keeping with the meaning of the word. See GIFT.¶

DIVINATION

puthon (Πύθων, 4436), (Eng., “python”), in Greek mythology was the name of the Pythian serpent or dragon, dwelling in Pytho, at the foot of mount Parnassus, guarding the oracle of Delphi, and slain by Apollo. Thence the name was transferred to Apollo himself. Later the word was applied to diviners or soothsayers, regarded as inspired by Apollo. Since demons are the agents inspiring idolatry, 1 Cor. 10:20, the young woman in Acts 16:16 was possessed by a demon instigating the cult of Apollo, and thus had “a spirit of divination.”¶

DIVINE

A. Adjective.

theios (θεῖος, 2304), “divine” (from theos, “God”), is used of the power of God, 2 Pet. 1:3, and of His nature, v. 4, in each place, as that which proceeds from Himself. In Acts 17:29 it is used as a noun with the definite article, to denote “the Godhead,” the Deity (i.e., the one true God). This word, instead of theos, was purposely used by the apostle in speaking to Greeks on Mars Hill, as in accordance with Greek usage. Cf. DIVINITY.¶ In the Sept., Exod. 31:3; 35:31; Job 27:3; 33:4; Prov. 2:17.¶

B. Noun.

latreia (λατρεία, 2999), akin to latreuo, “to serve,” primarily, any service for hire denotes in Scripture the service of God according to the requirements of the Levitical Law, Rom. 9:4; Heb. 9:1, 6, “divine service.” It is used in the more general sense of service to God, in John 16:2; Rom. 12:1. See SERVICE.¶

DIVINITY

theiotes (θειότης, 2305), divinity, the RV rendering in Rom. 1:20 (KJV, “Godhead”), is derived from theios (see DIVINE, A), and is to be distinguished from theotes, in Col. 2:9, “Godhead.” In Rom. 1:20 the apostle “is declaring how much of God may be known from the revelation of Himself which He has made in nature, from those vestiges of Himself which men may everywhere trace in the world around them. Yet it is not the personal God whom any man may learn to know by these aids; He can be known only by the revelation of Himself in His Son; ... But in the second passage (Col. 2:9), Paul is declaring that in the Son there dwells all the fullness of absolute Godhead; they were no mere rays of Divine glory which gilded Him, lighting up His Person for a season and with a splendor not His own; but He was, and is, absolute and perfect God; and the apostle uses theotes to express this essential and personal Godhead of the Son” (Trench, Syn. Sec.ii). Theotes indicates the “divine” essence of Godhood, the personality of God; theiotes, the attributes of God, His “divine” nature and properties. See GODHEAD.¶

DIVISION

1. diamerismos (διαμερισμός, 1267), primarily, “a parting, distribution,” denotes “a discussion, dissension, division or discord, breaking up as of family ties” (dia, “asunder,” meros, “a part”), it is found in Luke 12:51, where it is contrasted with eirene, “peace.” Cf. DIVIDE, A, No. 7.

2. dichostasia (διαφανής, 1307), lit., “a standing apart” (diche, “asunder, apart,” stasis, “a standing”, the root di indicating “division,” is found in many words in various languages), is used in Rom. 16:17, where believers are enjoined to mark those who cause “division” and to turn away from them; and in Gal. 5:20, RV (KJV, “seditions”), where “divisions” are spoken of as “works of the flesh.” Some mss. have this noun in 1 Cor. 3:3.¶

3. schisma (σχίσμα, 4978), (Eng., “schism”), denotes “a cleft, a rent,” Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21, then, metaphorically, “a division dissension,” John 7:43; 9:16; 10:19; 1 Cor. 1:10; 11:18; in 1 Cor. 12:25 it is translated “schism” (marg., “division”). The root is skid— seen in the corresponding verb schizo, “to cleave” (Lat. scindo). See SCHISM. Cf. hairesis, a sect.¶

DIVORCE, DIVORCEMENT

A. Verb.

apoluō (ἀπολύω, 630), “to let loose from, let go free” (apo, “from,” luo, “to loose”), is translated “is divorced” in the KJV of Matt. 5:32 (RV, “is put away”); it is further used of “divorce” in Matt. 1:19; 19:3, 7-9; Mark 10:2, Mk 4:11; Luke 16:18. The Lord also used it of the case of a wife putting away her husband, Mark 10:12, a usage among Greeks and Romans, not among Jews. See DISMISS.

B. Noun.

apostasion (ἀποστάσιον, 647), primarily, “a defection,” lit., “a standing off” (apo, “from,” stasis, “a standing”; cf. aphistemi, “to cause to withdraw”), denotes, in the NT, “a writing or bill of divorcement,” Matt. 5:31; 19:7; Mark 10:4.¶ In Sept., Deut. 24:3; Isa. 50:1; Jer. 3:8.¶

DO, DONE

In English the verb “to do” serves the purpose of a large number of verbs, and has a large variety of meanings. It therefore translates a considerable number of Greek verbs. These, with their specific meanings, are as follows:

1. poieō (ποιέω, 4160) signifies (a) “to make,” (b) “to do,” i.e., to adopt a way of expressing by act the thoughts and feelings. It stands for a number of such acts, chiefly “to make, produce, create, cause,” e.g., Matt. 17:4. See ABIDE, APPOINT, BEAR, BRING, CAUSE, COMMIT, CONTINUE, DEAL, EXECUTE, EXERCISE, FULFILL, GAIN, GIVE, HOLD, KEEP, MAKE, MEAN, OBSERVE, ORDAIN, PERFORM, PROVIDE, PURPOSE, PUT, SHOW, SHOOT FORTH, SPEND, TAKE, TARRY, WORK, YIELD.

2. prasso (πράσσω, 4238) signifies “to practice,” though this is not always to be pressed. The apostle John, in his epistles, uses the continuous tenses of poieō, to indicate a practice, the habit of doing something, e.g., 1 John 3:4 (the KJV, “committeth” and “commit” in 1 John 3:8 and 9, e.g., is wrong; “doeth,” RV, in the sense of practicing, is the meaning). He uses prasso twice in the Gospel, 3:20 and 5:29. The apostle Paul uses prasso in the sense of practicing, and the RV so renders the word in Rom. 1:32; 2:2, instead of KJV, “commit,” though, strangely enough, the RV translates it “committed,” instead of “practiced,” in 2 Cor. 12:21.

Generally speaking, in Paul’s epistles poieō denotes “an action complete in itself,” while prasso denotes “a habit.” The difference is seen in Rom. 1:32, RV. Again, poieō stresses the accomplishment, e.g., “perform,” in Rom. 4:21; prasso stresses the process leading to the accomplishment, e.g., “doer,” in 2:25. In Rom. 2:3 he who does, poieō, the things mentioned, is warned against judging those who practice them, prasso.

The distinction in John 3:20-21 is noticeable: “Every one that doeth (prasso, practiseth) ill ... he that doeth (poieō) the truth.” While we cannot draw the regular distinction, that prasso speaks of doing evil things, and poieō of doing good things, yet very often “where the words assume an ethical tinge, there is a tendency to use the verbs with this distinction” (Trench, Syn., Sec.xcvi). See COMMIT, EXACT, KEEP, REQUIRE, USE.

3. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is sometimes translated “do” or “done,” e.g., Luke 4:23, “done (at Capernaum),” followed by poieo in the next clause. In Matt. 21:42 and Mark 12:11, this verb is translated, in the KJV, “(the Lord’s) doing”; RV, “this was from the Lord.” See BECOME.

4. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038) denotes “to work” (ergon, “work”). In Gal. 6:10 the RV renders it “let us work,” for KJV, “let us do”; in 3 John 5, “thou doest.” See COMMIT, LABOR, MINISTER, TRADE, WORK.

5. katergazomai (κατεργάζομαι, 2716), kata (intensive), is a more emphatic verb than No. 4. In Rom. 2:9 the RV has “worketh” for KJV, “doeth.” In Rom. 7:15, 17, both translate it “I do” (RV marg., “work”); so in v. 20, “I that do.” In 1 Cor. 5:3 the RV has “wrought,” for KJV, “done.” In Eph. 6:13 both render it “having done (all); more suitably, “having wrought” (all); the KJV marg. “having overcome” does not give the correct meaning. See CAUSE, B, Note (2), PERFORM, WORK, WROUGHT.

6. ischuo (ἰσχύω, 2480) signifies “to be strong, to prevail.” It is translated “I can do,” in Phil. 4:13. See ABLE, etc.

7. parecho (παρέχω, 3930), lit. means “to hold near” (para, “beside,” and echo, “to have”), i.e., “to present, offer, supply.” It is translated “do for” in Luke 7:4. See BRING, No. 21.

Notes: (1) In Phil. 2:13 energeo, “to work,” is translated “to do,” KJV; RV, “to work.” (2) In Luke 13:32 apoteleo, “to complete, perform,” is translated “I ... do,” KJV; RV, “I perform” (some mss. have epiteleo here). (3) In Acts 15:36, echo, “to have, to hold,” sometimes used to express the condition in which a person is, how he is faring, is translated “(how) they do,” KJV; RV, “how they fare.” It is often used of a physical condition, e.g., Matt. 4:24 (see SICK). (4) In Acts 25:9 katatithemi, “to deposit, or lay up, for future use, to lay up favor for oneself with a person,” is translated “to do (the Jews a pleasure),” KJV; RV, “to gain (favor with the Jews).” (5) In John 16:2 prosphero, “to bring near, offer, present,” is translated “doeth (service),” KJV; RV, “offereth (service).” (6) In Heb. 4:13 the phrase hemin ho logos, rendered “(with whom) we have to do,” is, lit., “(with whom is) the account to us.” (7) In 1 Cor. 13:10, katargeo, “to render inactive, abolish,” so is translated “shall be done away”; 2 Cor. 3:7, KJV, “was to be done away,” RV, “was passing away; 2Co 3:11. See ABOLISH, DESTROY. (8) For “done aforetime,” Rom. 3:25, RV, see PAST. For “did,” 2 Tim. 4:14, KJV, see SHOW, NO. 3. For “do good” see GOOD.

For DOING see DEED, No. 3, DO, No. 3

DOCTOR

1. didaskalos (διδάσκαλος, 1320), a teacher (from didasko, “to teach”), cf. didaskalia, “teaching, doctrine, instruction,” is translated “doctors,” with reference to the teachers of the Jewish religion, Luke 2:46. Cf. paideutes, “a teacher”. See MASTER, TEACHER.

2. nomodidaskalos (νομοδιδάσκαλος, 3547), “a teacher of the Law” (nomos, “a law,” and No. 1), with reference to the teachers of the Mosaic Law, is used in the same sense as No. 1, Luke 5:17; Acts 5:34; also of those who went about among Christians, professing to be instructors of the Law, 1 Tim. 1:7. See TEACHER.¶ See under LAW.

DOCTRINE

1. didache (διδασχῆ, 1322), akin to No. 1, under DOCTOR, denotes “teaching,” either (a) that which is taught, e.g., Matt. 7:28, KJV, “doctrine,” RV, “teaching”; Titus 1:9, RV; Rev. 2:14-15, 24, or (b) the act of teaching, instruction, e.g., Mark 4:2, KJV, “doctrine,” RV, “teaching” the RV has “the doctrine” in Rom. 16:17. See NOTE (1) below.

2. didaskalia (διδασκαλία, 1319) denotes, as No. 1 (from which, however, it is to be distinguished), (a) “that which is taught, doctrine,” Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7; Eph. 4:14; Col. 2:22; 1 Tim. 1:10; 4:1, 6; 6:1, 3; 2 Tim. 4:3; Titus 1:9 (“doctrine,” in last part of verse: see also No. 1); 2:1, 10; (b) “teaching, instruction,” Rom. 12:7, “teaching”; 15:4, “learning,” 1 Tim. 4:13, KJV, “doctrine,” RV, “teaching”; v. 16, KJV, “the doctrine,” RV, (correctly) “thy teaching”; 5:17, KJV, “doctrine,” RV “teaching”; 2 Tim. 3:10, 16 (ditto); Titus 2:7, “thy doctrine.” Cf. No. 1, under DOCTOR. See LEARNING.¶

Notes: (1) Whereas didache is used only twice in the Pastoral Epistles, 2 Tim. 4:2, and Titus 1:9, didaskalia occurs fifteen times. Both are used in the active and passive senses (i.e., the act of teaching and what is taught), the passive is predominant in didache, the active in didaskalia, the former stresses the authority, the latter the act (Cremer). Apart from the apostle Paul, other writers make use of didache only, save in Matt. 15:9 and Mark 7:7 (didaskalia).

(2) In Heb. 6:1, logos, “a word,” is translated “doctrine,” KJV; the RV margin gives the lit. rendering, “the word (of the beginning of Christ),” and, in the text, “the (first) principles (of Christ).”

poietaes (ποιητής, 4163), akin to poieo, see DO, No. 1, signifies “a doer,” Rom. 2:13; Jas. 1:22-23, 25; 4:11. Its meaning “poet” is found in Acts 17:28.¶

(2) In 2 Tim. 2:9, kakourgos is rendered “evil doer” (RV, “malefactor”).

DOG

1. kuon (κύων, 2965) is used in two senses, (a) natural, Matt. 7:6; Luke 16:21; 2 Pet. 2:22; (b) metaphorical, Phil. 3:2; Rev. 22:15, of those whose moral impurity will exclude them from the New Jerusalem. The Jews used the term of Gentiles, under the idea of ceremonial impurity. Among the Greeks it was an epithet of impudence. Lat., canis, and Eng., “hound” are etymologically akin to it.¶

2. kunarion (κυνάριον, 2952), a diminutive of No. 1, “a little dog, a puppy,” is used in Matt. 15:26-27; Mark 7:27, 28.¶

DOMINION (have ... over) A. Nouns.

1. kratos (κράτος, 2904), “force, strength, might,” more especially “manifested power,” is derived from a root kra—, “to perfect, to complete”: “creator” is probably connected. It also signifies “dominion,” and is so rendered frequently in doxologies, 1 Pet. 4:11; 5:11; Jude 25; Rev. 1:6; 5:13 (RV); in 1 Tim. 6:16, and Heb. 2:14 it is translated “power.” See MIGHT, POWER, STRENGTH.

Note: Synonymous words are bia, “force,” often oppressive, dunamis, “power,” especially “inherent power”; energeia, “power” especially in exercise, operative power; exousia, primarily “liberty of action,” then “authority” either delegated or arbitrary; ischus, “strength,” especially physical, power as an endowment.

2. kuriotes (κυριότης, 2963) denotes “lordship” (kurios, “a lord”), “power, dominion,” whether angelic or human, Eph. 1:21; Col. 1:16; 2 Pet. 2:10 (RV, for KJV, “government”); Jude 8. In Eph. and Col. it indicates a grade in the angelic orders, in which it stands second.¶

B. Verbs.

1. kurieuo (κυριεύω, 2961), “to be lord over, rule over, have dominion over” (akin to A, No. 2), is used of (a) divine authority over men, Rom. 14:9, “might be Lord”; (b) human authority over men, Luke 22:25, “lordship,” 1 Tim. 6:15, “lords” (RV, marg., “them that rule as lords”); (c) the permanent immunity of Christ from the “dominion” of death, Rom. 6:9; (d) the deliverance of the believer from the “dominion” of sin, Rom. 6:14; (e) the “dominion” of law over men, Rom. 7:1; (f) the “dominion” of a person over the faith of other believers, 2 Cor. 1:24 (RV, “lordship”). See LORD.¶

2. katakurieuo (κατακυριεύω, 2634), kata, “down” (intensive), and No. 1, “to exercise, or gain, dominion over, to lord it over,” is used of (a) the “lordship” of gentile rulers, Matt. 20:25, KJV, “exercise dominion,” RV, “lord it”, Mark 10:42, KJV, “exercise lordship,” RV, “lord it”; (b) the power of demons over men, Acts 19:16, KJV, “overcame,” RV, “mastered”; (c) of the evil of elders in “lording” it over the saints under their spiritual care, 1 Pet. 5:3. See LORDSHIP, OVERCOME.

Note: For authenteo, “to have dominion,” 1 Tim. 2:12, RV, see AUTHORITY, No. 3.

DOOMED

For RV in 1 Cor. 4:9, see APPOINT (Note at end), DEATH, B.

DOOR

thura (θύρα, 2374), “a door, gate” (Eng., “door” is connected), is used (a) literally, e.g., Matt. 6:6; 27:60; (b) metaphorically, of Christ, John 10:7, 9; of faith, by acceptance of the gospel, Acts 14:27; of “openings” for preaching and teaching the Word of God, 1 Cor. 16:9; 2 Cor. 2:12; Col. 4:3; Rev. 3:8; of “entrance” into the Kingdom of God, Matt. 25:10; Luke 13:24-25; of Christ’s “entrance” into a repentant believer’s heart, Rev. 3:20; of the nearness of Christ’s second advent, Matt. 24:33; Mark 13:29; cf. Jas. 5:9; of “access” to behold visions relative to the purposes of God, Rev. 4:1.

Note: For the phrase “that kept the door,” thuroros, John 18:16-17 (“porter” in Mark 13:34; John 10:3), see PORTER.¶

NOTE

noseo (νοσέω, 3552) signifies “to be ill, to be ailing,” whether in body or mind; hence, “to be taken with such a morbid interest in a thing as is tantamount to a disease, to dote,” 1 Tim. 6:4 (marg., “sick”). The primary meaning of “dote” is to be foolish (cf. Jer. 50:36), the evident meaning of noseo, in this respect, is “to be unsound.”¶

DOUBLE

A. Adjective.

diplous (διπλοῦς, 1362) denotes “twofold, double,” 1 Tim. 5:17; Rev. 18:6 (twice).¶ The comparative degree diploteron (neuter) is used adverbially in Matt. 23:15, “twofold more.”¶

B. Verb.

diploo (διπλόω, 1363) signifies “to double, to repay or render twofold,” Rev. 18:6.¶

DOUBLE-MINDED

dipsuchos (δίψυχος, 1374) lit. means “twosouled” (dis, “twice,” psuche, “a soul”), hence, “double-minded,” Jas. 1:8; 4:8.¶

DOUBLE-TONGUED

dilogos (δίλογος, 1351) primarily means “saying the same thing twice, or given to repetition” (dis, “twice,” logos, “a word, or speech”); hence, “saying a thing to one person and giving a different view of it to another, double-tongued,” 1 Tim. 3:8.¶

DOUBT (be in, make to), DOUBTFUL, DOUBTING

A. Verbs.

1. aporeo (ἀπορέω, 639), always used in the middle voice, lit. means “to be without a way” (a, negative, poros, “a way, transit”), “to be without resources, embarrassed, in doubt, perplexity, at a loss,” as was Herod regarding John the Baptist, Mark 6:20 (RV, following the most authentic mss., “was much perplexed”); as the disciples were, regarding the Lord’s betrayal, John 13:22, “doubting”; and regarding the absence of His body from the tomb, Luke 24:4, “were perplexed”; as was Festus, about the nature of the accusations brought against Paul, Acts 25:20, KJV “doubted,” RV, “being perplexed”; as Paul was, in his experiences of trial 2 Cor. 4:8, “perplexed,” and, as to the attitude of the believers of the churches in Galatia towards Judaistic errors, Gal. 4:20, KJV, “I stand in doubt,” RV, “I am perplexed.” Perplexity is the main idea. See PERPLEX.¶ Cf. the noun aporia, “distress,” Luke 21:25.¶

2. diaporeo (διαπορέω, 1280), dia, “asunder” (intensive), and No. 1, signifies “to be thoroughly perplexed,” with a perplexity amounting to despair, Acts 2:12; 5:24 and 10:17, KJV, “were in doubt,” “doubted,” RV, “were (was) perplexed.” See also Luke 9:7 (some mss. have it in Luke 24:4, where the most authentic have No. 1). See PERPLEX.¶

3. diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252): see CONTEND and DIFFER, A, No. 2; in Acts 11:12, KJV, “nothing doubting,” RV, “making no distinction”; in Jude 22, RV, “who are in doubt” (KJV, “making a difference,” RV, marg., “while they dispute”); in Jas. 1:6, KJV, “wavereth,” RV, “doubteth.” This verb suggests, not so much weakness of faith, as lack of it (contrast, Nos. 4 and 5).

4. distazo (διστάζω, 1365), “to stand in two ways” (dis, “double,” stasis, “a standing”), implying “uncertainty which way to take,” is used in Matt. 14:31 and 28:17; said of believers whose faith is small. Cf. No 5.¶

5. meteorizo (μετεωρίζω, 3349), from meteoros (Eng., “meteor”), signifying “in mid air, raised on high,” was primarily used of putting a ship out to sea, or of “raising” fortifications, or of the “rising” of the wind. In the Sept., it is used, e.g., in Micah 4:1, of the “exaltation” of the Lord’s house; in Ezek. 10:16, of the “lifting” up of the wings of the cherubim; in Obad. 4, of the “mounting” up of the eagle; in the NT metaphorically, of “being anxious,” through a “distracted” state of mind, of “waver” between hope and fear, Luke 12:29, “neither be ye of doubtful mind” (KJV, marg., “live not in careful suspense”), addressed to those who have little faith. Cf. No. 4. The interpretation “do not exalt yourselves” is not in keeping with the context.¶

6. psuchen airo, lit., “to raise the breath, or to lift the soul,” signifies “to hold in suspense,” RV of John 10:24 (KJV, “make us to doubt”), suggestive of “an objective suspense due to lack of light” (Warfield), through a failure of their expectations, rather than, subjectively, through unbelief. The meaning may thus be, “How long dost Thou raise our expectations without satisfying them?”

B. Noun.

dialogismos (διαλογισμός, 1261) expresses reasoning or questioning hesitation, 1 Tim. 2:8. See DISPUTE, A, No. 1.

Note: For KJV, “doubtful” in Rom. 14:1 see DECISION, B, No. 2.

DOUBT (No), DOUBTLESS

pantos (πάντως, 3843): see ALTOGETHER, B.

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 12:1 the best texts have no word representing “doubtless.” (2) In Luke 11:20, the particle ara, KJV, “no doubt,” means “then” (RV). (3) In 1 Cor. 9:10 the conjunction gar, KJV, “no doubt,” here means “assuredly,” or “yea” (RV). (4) In Phil. 3:8, the opening phrase means “yea, verily,” as RV. (5) In 1 Cor. 9:2, the RV, “at least,” gives the right sense (not “doubtless”).

DOVE, TURTLE-DOVE

1. peristera (περιστερά, 4058) denotes “a dove or pigeon,” Matt. 3:16; 10:16 (indicating its proverbial harmlessness); 21:12; Mark 1:10; 11:15; Luke 2:24 (pigeons); 3:22; John 1:32; 2:14, 16.¶

2. trugon (τρυγών, 5167) denotes “a turtledove” (from truzo, “to murmur, to coo”), Luke 2:24.¶

DRAG

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

1. suro (σύρω, 4951), “to draw, drag, haul,” is used of a net, John 21:8; of violently “dragging” persons along, Acts 8:3, “haling”; 14:19, RV, “dragged,” KJV, “drew”; 17:6 (ditto); Rev. 12:4, KJV, “drew,” RV, “draweth.” See DRAW, HALE.¶

2. helkuo (or helko) (ἐλκύω, 1670), “to draw,” differs from suro, as “drawing” does from violent “dragging.” It is used of “drawing” a net, John 21:6, 11 (cf. No. 1, in v. 8), Trench remarks, “At vv. 6 and 11 helko (or helkuo) is used; for there a drawing of the net to a certain point is intended; by the disciples to themselves in the ship, by Peter to himself upon the shore. But at v. 8 helko gives place to suro: for nothing is there intended but the dragging of the net, which had been fastened to the ship, after it through the water” (Syn., Sec.xxi).

This less violent significance, usually present in helko, but always absent from suro, is seen in the metaphorical use of helko, to signify “drawing” by inward power, by divine impulse, John 6:44; 12:32. So in the Sept., e.g., Song of Sol. 1:4, and Jer. 31:3, “with lovingkindness have I drawn thee.” It is used of a more vigorous action, in John 18:10, of “drawing” a sword; in Acts 16:19; 21:30, of forcibly “drawing” men to or from a place; so in Jas. 2:6, KJV, “draw,” RV, “drag.” See DRAW.¶

drakon (δράκων, 1404) denoted “a mythical monster, a dragon”; also a large serpent, so called because of its keen power of sight (from a root derk□, signifying “to see”). Twelve times in the Apocalypse it is used of the Devil 12:3-4, 7, 9, 13, 16-17; 13:2, 4, 11; 16:13; 20:2.¶

For DRANK see DRINK

DRAUGHT

1. agra (ἄγρα, 61), “a hunting, catching” (from ago, “to lead”), is used only in connection with fishing. In Luke 5:4 it signifies the act of catching fish; in v. 9 it stands for the catch itself.¶

2. aphedron (ἀφεδρών, 856), “a latrine, a sink, drain,” is found in Matt. 15:17 and Mark 7:19.¶

For DRAVE and DROVE see DRIVE

DRAW (Away, Back, Nigh, On, Out, Up)

(A) In the sense of □ dragging, pulling, or attracting”:

1. anabibazo (ἀναβιβάζω, 307), a causal form of anabaino, “to go up,” denotes, lit., “to make go up, cause to ascend” (ana, “up,” bibazo, “to cause to mount”), hence, “to draw a boat up on land,” Matt. 13:48.¶

2. helko (ἐλκύω, 1670) is translated “to draw” in the KJV, of Acts 21:30 and Jas. 2:6; see DRAG, No. 2.

3. suro (σύρω, 4951): see DRAG, No. 1.

4. spao (σπάω, 4685), “to draw or pull,” is used, in the middle voice of “drawing” a sword from its sheath, Mark 14:47; Acts 16:27.¶

5. anaspao (ἀνασπάω, 385), ana, “up,” and No. 4, “to draw up,” is used of “drawing” up an animal out of a pit, Luke 14:5 (RV, “draw up”; KJV, “pull out”), and of the “drawing” up of the sheet into heaven, in the vision in Acts 11:10.¶

6. apospao (ἀποσπάω, 645), apo, “from,” and No. 4, “to draw away,” lit., “to wrench away from,” is used of a sword, Matt. 26:51, of “drawing” away disciples into error, Acts 20:30; of Christ’s “withdrawal” from the disciples, in Gethsemane, Luke 22:41, KJV, “was withdrawn,” RV, “was parted” (or “was reft away from them”); of “parting” from a company, Acts 21:1 (KJV, “were gotten,” RV, “were parted”). See GET, PART.¶

7. antleo (ἀντλέω, 501) signified, primarily, “to draw out a ship’s bilgewater, to bale or pump out” (from antlos, “bilge-water”), hence, “to draw water” in any way (ana, “up” and a root, tel□, “to lift, bear”), John 2:8-9; 4:7, 15.¶

Note: In John 4:11, “to draw with” translates the corresponding noun antlema, “a bucket for drawing water by a rope.”¶

8. exelko (ἐξέλκω, 1828), ek, “out of,” and No. 2, “to draw away, or lure forth,” is used metaphorically in Jas. 1:14, of being “drawn away” by lust. As in hunting or fishing the game is “lured” from its haunt, so man’s lust “allures” him from the safety of his self-restraint.¶

9. anatassomai (ἀνατάσσομαι, 392), “to arrange in order,” is used in Luke 1:1, RV, “to draw up” (some interpret the word to mean to “bring together” from memory assisted by the Holy Spirit).¶

(B) In the sense of □ approaching or withdrawing”:

1. engizo (ἐγγίζω, 1448), “to come near draw nigh” (akin to engus, “near”), is translated by the verb “draw near or nigh,” in the RV, Luke 12:33, KJV, “approacheth”; Heb. 10:25, KJV, “approaching”; Luke 18:35; 19:29, 37; Acts 22:6, KJV, “was come nigh”; Luke 7:12 “came nigh”; Acts 9:3, “came near.” See APPROACH.

2. proserchomai (προσέρχομαι, 4334) is translated “draw near” in Heb. 4:16; 7:25, RV, and 10:22, KJV and RV; in Acts 7:31, “drew near.” See COME, GO.

3. prosago (προσάγω, 4317), used transitively, “to bring to”; intransitively, “to draw near,” Is so rendered in Acts 27:27. See BRING.

4. hupostello (ὑποστέλλω, 5288), “to draw back, withdraw,” perhaps a metaphor from lowering a sail and so slackening the course, and hence of being remiss in holding the truth; in the active voice, rendered “drew back” in Gal. 2:12, RV (KJV, “withdrew”); in the middle, in Heb. 10:38, “shrink back” RV (KJV, “draw back”); the prefix hupo, “underneath,” is here suggestive of stealth. In v. 39 the corresponding noun, hupostole, is translated “of them that shrink back,” RV; KJV, “draw back” (lit., “of shrinking back”). In Acts 20:20, 27, “shrank,” RV. See KEEP, Note (6), SHRINK, SHUN, WITHDRAW.¶

5. aphistemi (ἀφίστημι, 868): see DEPART, A, No. 20.

6. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, begin to be,” is translated “drawing nigh,” in John 6:19. See BECOME.

7. epiphosko (ἐπιφώσκω, 2020), “to dawn” (lit., “to make to shine upon”), is said of the approach of the Sabbath, Luke 23:54 (marg., “began to dawn”); cf. Matt. 28:1.¶ See DAWN, A, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In Mark 6:53, prosormizo, “to bring a ship (or boat) to anchor, cast anchor, land at a place” (pros, “to,” hormizo, “to moor, bring to anchorage”), is translated “moored to the shore,” in the RV, for KJV, “drew.”¶

(2) In Acts 19:33, where the most authentic mss. have sumbibazo, the RV translates it “brought” (marg., “instructed”), KJV, “draw out.” Some mss. have probibazo, “to bring or drag forward.” See BRING, No. 24.

DREAM (noun and verb), DREAMER

A. Nouns.

1. onar (ὄναρ, 3677) is “a vision in sleep,” in distinction from a waking vision, Matt. 1:20; 2:12-13, 19, 22; 27:19.¶

2. enupnion (ἐνύπνιον, 1798), is, lit., “what appears in sleep” (en, “in,” hupnos, “sleep”), an ordinary “dream,” Acts 2:17. For synonymous nouns, see VISION.¶

B. Verb.

enupniazō (ἐνυπνιάζομαι, 1797), akin to A, No. 2, is used in Acts 2:17, in the passive voice in a phrase (according to the most authentic mss.) which means “shall be given up to dream by dreams,” translated “shall dream dreams” metaphorically in Jude 8, of being given over to sensuous “dreamings,” RV, KJV, “dreamers,” and so defiling the flesh.¶

DRESSED

Note: This is the KJV translation of the passive of georgēo, Heb. 6:7, “to till the ground, to practice as a farmer”; RV, “is tilled.” See TILL.¶

DRESSER

Note: For ampelourgos, “dresser,” Luke 13:7, KJV (RV, “vine-dresser”), see VINEDRESSER.

For DRIED see DRY, B

DRIFT

pararheo (παράρῥυέω, 3901), lit., “to flow past, glide by” (para, “by,” rheo, “to flow”), is used in Heb. 2:1, where the significance is to find oneself “flowing” or “passing by,” without giving due heed to a thing, here “the things that were heard,” or perhaps the salvation of which they spoke; hence the RV, “lest haply we drift away from them,” for KJV, “let them slip.” The KJV marg. “run out as leaking vessels,” does not give the meaning.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 3:21; Isa. 44:4.¶

DRINK (-ETH, -ER, -ING), DRANK

A. Nouns.

1. poma (πόμα, 4188), akin to B, No. 1, denotes “the thing drunk” (from a root po, found in the Eng., “potion”; it is connected with the root pi; see B, No. 3), 1 Cor. 10:4; Heb. 9:10.¶

2. posis (πόσις, 4213), akin to B, No. 1, suggests “the act of drinking,” John 6:55 (where it is practically equivalent to No. 1); Rom. 14:17, “drinking,” RV; Col. 2:16.¶

3. sikera (σίκερα, 4608) is “a strong, intoxicating drink,” made from any sweet ingredients, whether grain, vegetables, or the juice of fruits, or a decoction of honey; “strong drink,” Luke 1:15.¶ In the Sept., Lev. 10:9; Num. 6:3; 28:7; Deut. 14:26; 29:6; Isa. 5:11, 22; 24:9; 28:7; 29:9.

B. Verbs.

1. pino (πίνω, 4095), “to drink,” is used chiefly in the Gospels and in 1 Cor., whether literally (most frequently), or figuratively, (a) of “drinking” of the blood of Christ, in the sense of receiving eternal life, through His death, John 6:53-54, 56; (b) of “receiving” spiritually that which refreshes, strengthens and nourishes the soul, John 7:37; (c) of “deriving” spiritual life from Christ, John 4:14, as Israel did typically 1 Cor. 10:4; (d) of “sharing” in the sufferings of Christ humanly inflicted, Matt. 20:22-23; Mark 10:38-39; (e) of “participating” in the abominations imparted by the corrupt religious and commercial systems emanating from Babylon, Rev. 18:3; (f) of “receiving” divine judgment, through partaking unworthily of the Lord’s Supper, 1 Cor. 11:29; (g) of “experiencing” the wrath of God, Rev. 14:10; 16:6; (h) of the earth’s “receiving” the benefits of rain, Heb. 6:7.

2. methuo (μεθύω, 3184), from methu, “wine, to be drunk,” is used in John 2:10 in the passive voice, and is translated in the RV, “have drunk freely”; KJV, “have well drunk.” See DRUNK.

3. potizo (ποτίζω, 4222), “to give to drink, to make to drink,” is used (a) in the material sense, in Matt. 10:42, 25:35, 37, 42 (here of “ministering” to those who belong to Christ and thus doing so virtually to Him); 27:48; Mark 9:41; 15:36; Luke 13:15 (“to watering”); Rom. 12:20; 1 Cor. 3:7-8; (b) figuratively, with reference to “teaching” of an elementary character, 1 Cor. 3:2, “I fed (you with milk)”; of “spiritual watering by teaching” the Word of God, 3:6; of being “provided” and “satisfied” by the power and blessing of the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 12:13; of the effect upon the nations of “partaking” of the abominable mixture, provided by Babylon, of paganism with details of the Christian faith Rev. 14:8. See FEED, WATER.¶

4. sumpino (συνπίνω, 4844), “to drink together” (sun, “with,” and B, No. 1), is found in Acts 10:41.¶

5. hudropoteo (ὕδροποτέω, 5202), “to drink water” (hudor, “water,” poteo, “to drink”), is found in 1 Tim. 5:23, RV, “be (no longer) a drinker of water.”¶

DRIVE, DRIVEN, DRAVE, DROVE

1. ekballo (ἐκβάλλω, 1544) denotes, lit., “to cast forth,” with the suggestion of force (ek, “out,” ballo, “to cast”); hence “to drive out or forth.” It is translated “driveth” in Mark 1:12, RV, “driveth forth.” In John 2:15 for the KJV, “drove,” the RV has “cast,” the more usual translation. See CAST, No. 5.

2. ekdioko (ἐκδιώκω, 1559), “to chase away, drive out” (ek, “out,” dioko, “to pursue”), is used in 1 Thess. 2:15, RV, “drave out,” KJV, “have persecuted.” Some mss. have this verb for dioko, in Luke 11:49.¶

3. elauno (ἐλαύνω, 1643) signifies “to drive, impel, urge on.” It is used of “rowing,” Mark 6:48 and John 6:19; of the act of a demon upon a man, Luke 8:29; of the power of winds upon ships, Jas. 3:4; and of storms upon mists, 2 Pet. 2:17, KJV, “carried,” RV, “driven.” See also CARRY, Note (2), ROW.

4. apelauno (ἀπελαύνω, 556), apo, “from,” and No. 3, “to drive from” is used in Acts 18:16.¶

5. exotheo (ἐξωθέω, 1856), “to thrust out” (ek, “out,” otheo, “to push, thrust”), is translated “thrust” in Acts 7:45, RV (KJV, “drave”); in 27:39, of “driving” a storm-tossed ship ashore (RV, “drive,” KJV, “thrust”). Cf. No. 6. See THRUST.¶

6. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear,” is translated “driven” in Acts 27:15, 17, of “being borne” in a storm-tossed ship. See BEAR, etc.

7. diaphero (διαφέρω, 1308), lit., “to bear through” (dia, “through,” and No. 6), in Acts 27:27 signifies “to be borne hither and thither” (RV, “were driven to and fro”; KJV, “up and down”). See BETTER (be), No. 1.

8. anemizo (ἀνεμίζω, 416), “to drive by the wind” (anemos, “wind”), is used in Jas. 1:6.¶

(Note: For “let ... drive,” Acts 27:15, see GIVE, No. 3.

DROP (Noun)

thrombos (θρόμβος, 2361), “a large, thick drop of clotted blood” (etymologically akin to trepho, “to curdle”), is used in Luke 22:44, in the plural, in the narrative of the Lord’s agony in Gethsemane.¶

DROPSY

hudropikos (ὕδρωπικός, 5203), “dropsical, suffering from dropsy” (hudrops, “dropsy”), is found in Luke 14:2, the only instance recorded of the healing of this disease by the Lord.¶

DROWN

1. buthizo (βυθίζω, 1036), “to plunge into the deep, to sink” (buthos, “bottom, the deep, the sea”), akin to bathos, “depth,” and abussos, “bottomless,” and Eng., “bath,” is used in Luke 5:7 of the “sinking” of a boat; metaphorically in 1 Tim. 6:9, of the effect of foolish and hurtful lusts, which “drown men in destruction and perdition.” See SINK.¶

2. katapino (καταπίνω, 2666), lit., “to drink down” (pino, “to drink,” prefixed by kata, “down”), signifies “to swallow up” (RV, in Heb. 11:29, for KJV, “were drowned”). It is elsewhere translated by the verb “to swallow, or swallow up,” except in 1 Pet. 5:8, “devour.” See DEVOUR, No. 3, SWALLOW.

3. katapontizo (καταποντίζω, 2670), “to throw into the sea” (kata, “down,” pontos, “the open sea”), in the passive voice, “to be sunk in, to be drowned,” is translated “were drowned,” in Matt. 18:6, KJV (RV, “should be sunk”); elsewhere in 14:30, “(beginning) to sink.” See SINK.¶

DRUNK, (-EN, be), DRUNKARD, DRUNKENNESS

A. Verbs.

1. methuo (μεθύω, 3184) signifies “to be drunk with wine” (from methu, “mulled wine”; hence Eng., “mead, honey-wine”); originally it denoted simply “a pleasant drink.” For John 2:10 see under DRINK. The verb is used of “being intoxicated” in Matt. 24:49; Acts 2:15; 1 Cor. 11:21; 1 Thess. 5:7b; metaphorically, of the effect upon men of partaking of the abominations of the Babylonish system, Rev. 17:2; of being in a state of mental “intoxication,” through the shedding of men’s blood profusely, v. 6.¶

2. methusko (μεθύσκω, 3182) signifies “to make drunk, or to grow drunk” (an inceptive verb, marking the process or the state expressed in No. 1), “to become intoxicated,” Luke 12:45; Eph. 5:18; 1 Thess. 5:7a.¶

B. Adjective.

methusos (μέθυσος, 3183), “drunken” (cf. No. 2), is used as noun, in the singular, in 1 Cor. 5:11, and in the plural, in 6:10, “drunkard,” “drunkards.”¶

C. Noun.

methe (μέθη, 3178), “strong drink” (akin to methu, “wine,” see under A. 1, above), denotes “drunkenness, habitual intoxication,” Luke 21:34; Rom. 13:13; Gal. 5:21.¶

DRY

A. Adjectives.

1. xeros (ξηρός, 3584) is used (a) naturally, of “dry” land, Heb. 11:29; or of land in general, Matt. 23:15, “land”; or of physical infirmity, “withered,” Matt. 12:10; Mark 3:3; Luke 6:6, 8; John 5:3; (b) figuratively, in Luke 23:31, with reference to the spiritual “barrenness” of the Jews, in contrast to the character of the Lord. Cf. Ps. 1:3; Isa. 56:3; Ezek. 17:24; 20:47. See LAND, WITHERED.¶

2. anudros (ἄνυδρος, 504), “waterless” (a, negative, n, euphonic, hudor, “water”), is rendered “dry” in Matt. 12:43, KJV, and Luke 11:24 (RV, “waterless”); “without water” in 2 Pet. 2:17 and Jude 12. See WATER.¶

B. Verb.

xeraino (ξηραίνω, 3583), akin to A. 1, “to dry, dry up, make dry, wither,” is translated “dried” (of physical infirmity), in Mark 5:29; of a tree, in the KJV of Mark 11:20 (RV, “withered away”); of water, in Rev. 16:12. It is translated “ripe” (RV, “overripe”) in Rev. 14:15, of a harvest (used figuratively of the gathered nations against Jerusalem at the end of this age); “pineth away,” in Mark 9:18. See OVERRIPE, PINE AWAY, RIPE, WITHER.

DUE

A. Adjective.

idios (ἴδιος, 2398), “one’s own,” is applied to kairos, “a season,” in Gal. 6:9, “in due season,” i.e., in the season divinely appointed for the reaping. So in 1 Tim. 2:6, “the testimony to be borne in its own (KJV, ‘due’) times (seasons)’; 6:15, “in its own (idios) times (seasons)’; similarly in Titus 1:3. See BUSINESS, B.

Note: For axios, “the due reward,” see REWARD, Note (1).

B. Verbs.

1. opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784) signifies “to owe, to be indebted,” especially financially, Matt. 18:30, RV, “that which was due”; 18:34, “all that was due.” See BEHOVE, BOUND (TO BE).

2. dei (δεῖ, 1163), an impersonal verb signifying “it is necessary,” is translated “was due” in Rom. 1:27, RV (KJV, “was meet”). See BEHOVE.

C. Noun.

opheile (ὀφειλή, 3782), akin to B, No. 1, is rendered “dues” in Rom. 13:7. In 1 Cor. 7:3, RV, it is translated “her due” (the KJV, “due benevolence” follows another reading).

Notes: (1) In the phrases “in due season” in Matt. 24:45; Luke 12:42; Rom. 5:6 (lit., “according to time”), and “in due time,” 1 Pet. 5:6, there is no word representing “due” in the original, and the phrases are, lit., “in season,” “in time.”

(2) For the phrase “born out of due time,” in 1 Cor. 15:8, see BEGET, B, No. 2.

DULL

A. Adjective.

nothros (νωθρός, 3576), “slow, sluggish, indolent, dull” (the etymology is uncertain), is translated “dull” in Heb. 5:11 (in connection with akoe, “hearing”; lit., “in hearings”); “sluggish,” in 6:12. See SLOTHFUL, SLUGGISH.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 22:29.¶ Cf. nothrokardios, “slow of heart” (kardia, “the heart), Prov. 12:8.¶

Note: In Luke 24:25 “slow (of heart)” translates the synonymous word bradus. Of these Trench says (Syn. Sec.civ), “Bradus differs from the words with which it is here brought into comparison, in that no moral fault or blame is necessarily involved in it; so far indeed is it from this, that of the three occasions on which it is used in the NT two are in honor; for to be ‘slow’ to evil things, to rash speaking, or to anger (Jas. 1:19, twice), is a grace, and not the contrary.... There is a deeper, more inborn sluggishness implied in nothros, and this bound up as it were in the very life, more than in either of the other words of this group.” Trench compares and contrasts argos, “idle,” but this word is not strictly synonymous with the other two.¶

B. Adverb.

bareos (βαρέως, 917), “heavily, with difficulty” (barus, “heavy”), is used with akouo, “to hear,” in Man. 13:15, and Acts 28:27 (from Isa. 6:10), lit., “to hear heavily, to be dull of hearing.”¶ In the Sept., Gen. 31:35 (lit., “bear it not heavily”); Isa. 6:10.¶

DUMB

A. Adjectives.

1. alolos (ἄλαλος, 216), lit., “speechless” (a, negative, and laleo, “to speak”), is found in Mark 7:37; 9:17, 25.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 38:13.¶

2. aphonos (ἄφωνος, 880), lit., “voiceless, or soundless” (a, negative, and phone, “a sound”), has reference to voice, Acts 8:32; 1 Cor. 12:2; 2 Pet. 2:16, while alalos has reference to words. In 1 Cor. 14:10 it is used metaphorically of the significance of voices or sounds, “without signification.”¶ In the Sept. Isa. 53:7.¶

3. kophos (κωφός, 2974) denotes “blunted or dulled”; see DEAF.

B. Verb.

siopao (σιωπάω, 4623), from siope, “silence, to be silent,” is used of Zacharias’ “dumbness,” Luke 1:20. See PEACE (HOLD ONE’S).

DUNG

1. skubalon (σκύβαλον, 4657) denotes “refuse,” whether (a) “excrement,” that which is cast out from the body, or (b) “the leavings of a feast,” that which is thrown away from the table. Some have derived it from kusibalon (with metathesis of k and s), “thrown to dogs”; others connect it with a root meaning “shred.” Judaizers counted gentile Christians as dogs, while they themselves were seated at God’s banquet. The apostle, reversing the image, counts the Judaistic ordinances as refuse upon which their advocates feed, Phil. 3:8.¶

2. kopron (κοπρία, 2874d), “manure,” Luke 13:8, used in the plural with ballo, “to throw,” is translated by the verb “to dung.” Some mss. have the accusative case of the noun kopria, “a dunghill” See below.¶

kopria (κοπρία, 2874), “a dunghill,” is found in Luke 14:35.¶

For DURE see under WHILE, Note 1

DUST

A. Nouns.

1. chous, or choos (χόος, 5522), from cheo, “to pour,” primarily, “earth dug out, an earth heap,” then, “loose earth or dust,” is used in Mark 6:11 and Rev. 18:19.¶

2. koniortos (κονιορτός, 2868), “raised or flying dust” (konia, “dust,” ornumi, “to stir up”), is found in Matt. 10:14; Luke 9:5; 10:11; Acts 13:51; 22:23.¶

B. Verb.

likmao (λικμάω, 3039), primarily, “to winnow” (from likmos, “a winnowing-fan”), hence, “to scatter” as chaff or dust, is used in Matt. 21:44 and Luke 20:18, RV, “scatter as dust,” KJV, “grind to powder.” There are indications in the papyri writings that the word came to denote “to ruin, to destroy.”

DUTY

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784), “to owe, to be indebted,” is translated “it was our duty,” in Luke 17:10, lit., “we owe (ought) to do”; so in Rom. 15:27, KJV, “their duty is”: RV, “they owe it.” See BEHOVE, BOUND.

DWELL, DWELLERS, DWELLING (place) A. Verbs.

1. oikeo (οἰκέω, 3611), “to dwell” (from oikos, “a house”), “to inhabit as one’s abode,” is derived from the Sanskrit, vic, “a dwelling place” (the Eng. termination — “wick” is connected). It is used (a) of God as “dwelling” in light, 1 Tim. 6:16; (b) of the “indwelling” of the Spirit of God in the believer, Rom. 8:9, 11, or in a church, 1 Cor. 3:16; (c) of the “indwelling” of sin, Rom. 7:20; (d) of the absence of any good thing in the flesh of the believer, Rom. 7:18; (e) of the “dwelling” together of those who are married, 1 Cor. 7:12-13.¶

2. katoikeo (κατοικέω, 2730), kata, “down,” and No. 1, the most frequent verb with this meaning, properly signifies “to settle down in a dwelling, to dwell fixedly in a place.” Besides its literal sense, it is used of (a) the “indwelling” of the totality of the attributes and powers of the Godhead in Christ, Col. 1:19; 2:9; (b) the “indwelling” of Christ in the hearts of believers (“may make a home in your hearts”), Eph. 3:17; (c) the “dwelling” of Satan in a locality, Rev. 2:13; (d) the future “indwelling” of righteousness in the new heavens and earth, 2 Pet. 3:13. It is translated “dwellers” in Acts 1:19; 2:9; “inhabitants” in Rev. 17:2, KJV (RV, “they that dwell”), “inhabiters” in Rev. 8:13 and 12:12, KJV (RV, “them that dwell”).

Cf. the nouns katoikesis (below), katoikia, “habitation,” Acts 17:26¶; katoiketerion, “a habitation,” Eph. 2:22; Rev. 18:2.¶ Contrast paroikeo, “to sojourn,” the latter being temporary, the former permanent. See HABITATION, INHABITANT.

3. katoikizo (κατοικέω, 2730d), “to cause to dwell,” is said of the act of God concerning the Holy Spirit in Jas. 4:5, RV (some mss. have No. 2).¶

4. enoikeo (ἐνοικέω, 1774), lit., “to dwell in” (en, “in,” and No. 1), is used, with a spiritual significance only, of (a) the “indwelling” of God in believers, 2 Cor. 6:16; (b) the “indwelling” of the Holy Spirit, Rom. 8:11; 2 Tim. 1:14; (c) the “indwelling” of the Word of Christ, Col. 3:16; (d) the “indwelling” of faith, 2 Tim. 1:5; (e) the “indwelling” of sin in the believer, Rom. 7:17.¶

5. perioikeo (περιοικέω, 4039), peri, “around,” and No. 1, “to dwell around, be a neighbor,” is used in Luke 1:65.¶ Cf. perioikos, “a neighbor,” Luke 1:58.¶

6. sunoiikeo (συνοικέω, 4924), sun, “with,” and No. 1, “to dwell with,” is used in 1 Pet. 3:7.¶

7. enkatoikeo (ἐγκατοικέω, 1460), en, “in,” and No. 2, “to dwell among,” is used in 2 Pet. 2:8.¶

8. meno (μένω, 3306), “to abide, remain,” is translated “to dwell,” in the KJV of John 1:38-39; 6:56; 14:10, 17; Acts 28:16. The RV adheres throughout to the verb “to abide.” See ABIDE.

9. skenoo (σκηνώ, 4637), “to pitch a tent” (skene), “to tabernacle,” is translated “dwelt,” in John 1:14, KJV, RV marg., “tabernacled”; in Rev. 7:15, KJV, “shall dwell,” RV, “shall spread (His) tabernacle”; in Rev. 12:12; 13:6; 21:3, dwell. See TABERNACLE.

10. kataskenoo (κατασκηνώ, 2681), “to pitch one’s tent” (kata, “down,” skene, “a tent”), is translated “lodge” in Matt. 13:32; Mark 4:32; Luke 13:19; in Acts 2:26, RV, “dwell,” KJV, “rest.”¶

11. embateuo (ἐμβατεύω, 1687), primarily, “to step in, or on” (from embaino, “to enter”), hence (a) “to frequent, dwell in,” is used metaphorically in Col. 2:18, RV, “dwelling in” (marg., “taking his stand upon”); (b) with reference to the same passage, alternatively, “to invade, to enter on”; perhaps used in this passage as a technical term of the mystery religions, denoting the entrance of the initiated into the new life (KJV, “intruding into”). A suggested alternative reading involves the rendering “treading on air,” i.e., indulging in vain speculations, but evidences in the papyri writings make the emendation unnecessary.¶

12. kathemai (κάθημαι, 2521), “to sit down,” is translated “dwell,” in Luke 21:35. See SET, SIT.

13. kathizo (καθίζω, 2523), “to sit down,” denotes “to dwell,” in Acts 18:11 (RV, “dwelt,” for KJV, “continued”).

14. astateo (ἄστατέω, 790), “to wander about” (a, negative, histemi, “to stand”), “to have no fixed dwelling-place,” is used in 1 Cor. 4:11.¶ Cf. akatastatos, “unstable,” Jas. 1:8; 3:8.¶; akatastasia, “revolution, confusion,” e.g., 1 Cor. 14:33.

B. Nouns.

1. paroikia (παροικία, 3940) denotes “a sojourning,” Acts 13:17, lit., “in the sojourning,” translated “when they sojourned,” RV (KJV, “dwelt as strangers”); in 1 Pet. 1:17, “sojourning.”¶

2. katoikesis (κατοίκησις, 2731), akin to A, No. 2, “a dwelling, a habitation,” is used in Mark 5:3.¶

Note: Cf. oikia, and oikos, “a house,” oikema, “a prison,” katoikia, “a habitation” (see A, No. 2).

3. misthoma (μίσθωμα, 3410), primarily, “a price, a hire” (akin to misthos, “wages, hire” and misthoo, “to let out for hire”) is used in Acts 28:30 to denote “a hired dwelling.”¶

For DYING see DEADNESS

DYSENTERY

dusenterion (δυσεντερία, 1420**), whence Eng., “dysentery,” is so translated in Acts 28:8, RV, for KJV “bloody flux” (enteron denotes an “intestine”).¶

EACH, EACH MAN, EACH ONE

1. hekastos (ἑκάστος, 1538), “each” or “every,” is used of any number separately, either (a) as an adjective qualifying a noun, e.g., Luke 6:44; John 19:23; Heb. 3:13, where “day by day,” is, lit., “according to each day”; or, more emphatically with heis, “one,” in Matt. 26:22; Luke 4:40; 16:5; Acts 2:3, 6, 20:31; 1 Cor. 12:18; Eph. 4:7, 16, RV, “each (several),” for KJV, “every”; Col. 4:6; 1 Thess. 2:11; 2 Thess. 1:3; (b) as a distributive pronoun, e.g., Acts 4:35; Rom. 2:6; Gal. 6:4; in Phil. 2:4, it is used in the plural; some mss. have it thus in Rev. 6:11. The repetition in Heb. 8:11 is noticeable “every man” (i.e., everyone). Prefixed by the preposition ana, “apiece” (a colloquialism), it is used, with stress on the individuality, in Rev. 21:21, of the gates of the heavenly city, “each one of the several,” RV; in Eph. 5:33, preceded by kath̄ hena, “by one,” it signifies “each (one) his own.”

2. The phrase hen kath̄ hen, lit., “one by one,” is used in Rev. 4:8, “each one of them.”

EACH OTHER

allelon (ἀλλήλων, 240), a reciprocal pronoun, preceded by the preposition meta, “with,” signifies “with each other,” Luke 23:12, RV, for KJV, “together.” Similarly in 24:14 pros allelous, where pros suggests greater intimacy. See ONE ANOTHER.

EAGLE

aetos (ἀετός, 105), “an eagle” (also a vulture), is perhaps connected with aemi, “to blow,” as of the wind, on account of its windlike flight. In Matt. 24:28 and Luke 17:37 the vultures are probably intended. The meaning seems to be that, as these birds of prey gather where the carcass is, so the judgments of God will descend upon the corrupt state of humanity. The figure of the “eagle” is used in Ezek. 17 to represent the great powers of Egypt and Babylon, as being employed to punish corrupt and faithless Israel. Cf. Job 39:30; Prov. 30:17. The “eagle” is mentioned elsewhere in the NT in Rev. 4:7; 8:13 (RV); 12:14. There are eight species in Palestine.¶

EAR (of the body)

1. ous (οὖς, 3775), Latin auris, is used (a) of the physical organ, e.g., Luke 4:21; Acts 7:57; in Acts 11:22, in the plural with akouo, “to hear,” lit., “was heard into the ears of someone,” i.e., came to the knowledge of, similarly, in the singular, Matt. 10:27, in familiar private conversation; in Jas. 5:4 the phrase is used with eiserchomai, “to enter into”; in Luke 1:44, with ginomai, “to become, to come”; in Luke 12:3, with lalein, “to speak” and pros, “to”, (b) metaphorically, of the faculty of perceiving with the mind, understanding and knowing, Matt. 13:16; frequently with akouo, “to hear,” e.g., Matt. 11:15; 13:9, 43; Rev. 2 and 3, at the close of each of the messages to the churches, in Matt. 13:15 and Acts 28:27, with bareos, “heavily,” of being slow to understand and obey; with a negative in Mark 8:18; Rom. 11:8; in Luke 9:44 the lit. meaning is “put those words into your ears,” i.e., take them into your mind and keep them there, in Acts 7:51 it is used with aperitmetos, “uncircumcised.” As seeing is metaphorically associated with conviction, so hearing is with obedience (hupakoe, lit., “hearing under”; the Eng., “obedience” is etymologically “hearing over against,” i.e., with response in the hearer).

2. otion (ὠτίον, 5621), a diminutive of No. 1, but without the diminutive force, it being a common tendency in everyday speech to apply a diminutive form to most parts of the body, is used in Matt. 26:51; Mark 14:47 (in some mss.); Luke 22:51; John 18:10 (in some mss.) and v. 26, all with reference to the “ear” of Malchus.¶

Note: The most authentic mss. have the alternative diminutive otaron, in Mark 14:47 and John 18:10.¶

3. akoe (ἀκοή, 189), “hearing,” akin to akouo, “to hear,” denotes (a) the sense of “hearing,” e.g., 1 Cor. 12:17; 2 Pet. 2:8; (b) that which is “heard,” a report, e.g., Matt. 4:24; (c) the physical organ, Mark 7:35, standing for the sense of “hearing”; so in Luke 7:1, RV, for KJV, “audience”; Acts 17:20; 2 Tim. 4:3-4 (in v. 3, lit., “being tickled as to the ears”); (d) a message or teaching, John 12:38; Rom. 10:16-17; Gal. 3:2, 5; 1 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 4:2, RV, “(the word) of hearing,” for KJV, “(the word) preached.” See FAME, HEARING, PREACH, REPORT, RUMOR.

Note: In Matt. 28:14, the verb akouo is used with the preposition epi, “upon or before” (or hupo, “by,” in some mss.), lit., “if this come to a hearing before the governor.”

EAR (of corn)

stachus (στάχυς, 4719) is found in Matt. 12:1; Mark 2:23; 4:28 (“ear,” twice); Luke 6:1. The first part of the word is derived from the root sta found in parts of the verb histemi, “to cause to stand.” It is used as a proper name in Rom. 16:9.¶

EARLY

A. Noun.

orthros (ὄρθρος, 3722) denotes “daybreak, dawn” (cf. Lat. orior, “to rise”). Used with the adverb batheos, “deeply,” in Luke 24:1, it means “at early dawn” (RV). In John 8:2 it is used in the genitive case, orthrou, “at dawn,” i.e., “early in the morning.” In Acts 5:21, it is used with the article and preceded by the preposition hupo, “under,” or about, lit., “about the dawn,” “about daybreak,” RV (for KJV, “early in the morning.”).¶

B. Adjectives.

1. orthrinos (ὀρθρινός, 3720) “early,” akin to A., is a later form of orthrios. It is found, in the most authentic mss., in Luke 24:22, of the women at the sepulchre, lit., “early ones” (some texts have the form orthrios, “at daybreak”).¶

2. proimos (πρώϊμος, 4406) or proimos, a longer and later form of proios, pertaining to the “morning,” is formed from pro, “before” (cf. protos, “first”), and used in Jas. 5:7, of the early rain.¶

C. Adverb.

proi (πρώϊ, 4404), “early in the day, at morn,” is derived from pro, “before” (see B, No. 2, above). In Mark 16:2, KJV, it is translated “early in the morning”; in Mark 16:9 and John 18:28; 20:1, “early”; in Matt. 16:3; 20:1; 21:18; Mark 1:35; 11:20; 13:35; 15:1, “in the morning”; in Acts 28:23, “(from) morning.” See MORNING.¶

Note: In Matt. 20:1, hama, “at once,” is rendered “early.”

EARNEST (Noun)

arrabon (ἀρράβων, 728), originally, “earnest-money” deposited by the purchaser and forfeited if the purchase was not completed, was probably a Phoenician word, introduced into Greece. In general usage it came to denote “a pledge” or “earnest” of any sort; in the NT it is used only of that which is assured by God to believers; it is said of the Holy Spirit as the divine “pledge” of all their future blessedness, 2 Cor. 1:22; 5:5; in Eph. 1:14, particularly of their eternal inheritance.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 38:17-18, 20.¶ In modern Greek arrabona is an “engagement ring.”

EARNEST, EARNESTNESS, EARNESTLY

A. Noun.

spoude (σπουδή, 4710), akin to spoudeō, “to hasten,” denotes “haste,” Mark 6:25; Luke 1:39; hence, “earnestness,” 2 Cor. 8:7, RV, for KJV, “diligence,” and v. 8, for KJV, “forwardness”; in 7:12, “earnest care,” for KJV, “care”; in 8:16, earnest care. See BUSINESS, CARE, CAREFULNESS, DILIGENCE, FORWARDNESS, HASTE.

B. Adjective.

spoudaios (σπουδαῖος, 4705), akin to A, denotes “active, diligent, earnest,” 2 Cor. 8:22 RV, “earnest,” for KJV, “diligent”; in the latter part of the verse the comparative degree, spoudaioteros, is used, RV, “more earnest,” for KJV, “more diligent”; in v. 17, RV, in the superlative sense, “very earnest,” for KJV, “more forward.” See DILIGENT, FORWARD.¶

C. Adverbs.

1. ektenos (ἐκτενῶς, 1619), “earnestly” (ek, “out,” teino, “to stretch”; Eng., “tension,” etc.), is used in Acts 12:5, “earnestly,” RV, for KJV, “without ceasing” (some mss. have the adjective ektenes, “earnest”); in 1 Pet. 1:22, “fervently.” The idea suggested is that of not relaxing in effort, or acting in a right spirit. See FERVENTLY.¶

2. ektenesteron (ἐκτενέστερον, 1617), the comparative degree of No. 1, used as an adverb in this neuter form, denotes “more earnestly, fervently,” Luke 22:44.¶

3. spoudaios (σπουδαίως, 4709), akin to B, signifies “with haste,” or “with zeal, earnestly,” Luke 7:4, RV, “earnestly,” for KJV, “instantly”; in 2 Tim. 1:17, RV, and Titus 3:13, “diligently”;¶ in Phil. 2:28, the comparative spoudaioteros, RV, “the more diligently,” KJV, “the more carefully. See CAREFULLY, DILIGENTLY, INSTANTLY.¶

D. Adverbial Phrase.

en ekteneia, lit., “in earnestness,” cf. C, No. 1, is translated “earnestly” in Acts 26:7, RV, for KJV, “instantly.” See INSTANTLY.¶

Notes: (1) For the phrase “earnest expectation, Rom. 8:19 and Phil. 1:20, see EXPECTATION. (2) In 1 Cor. 12:31; 14:1, 39, zeloo, “to be zealous about,” is translated “desire earnestly.” See DESIRE. (3) In 2 Pet. 3:12, speudo is translated “earnestly desiring,” for KJV, “hasting unto.” See HASTEN. (4) In Jude 3, epagonizo, “to contend earnestly,” is so translated.¶ (5) In Jas. 5:17 the dative case of the noun proseuche is translated “earnestly” (KJV), in connection with the corresponding verb, lit., “he prayed with prayer” (RV, “fervently”), implying persevering continuance in prayer with fervor. Cf. e.g., Ps. 40:1, lit., “in waiting I waited.” See FERVENT. (6) Atenizo, akin to C, No. 1, “to fix the eyes upon, gaze upon,” is translated “earnestly looked” in Luke 22:56, KJV (RV, “looking steadfastly”); in Acts 3:12, KJV, “look ye earnestly,” RV, “fasten ye your eyes on”; in Acts 23:1, KJV, “earnestly beholding,” RV, “looking steadfastly on.” (7) In Heb. 2:1, prosecho, “to give heed,” is used with the adverb perissoteros, “more abundantly,” to signify “to give the more earnest heed”; lit., “to give heed more exceedingly.” For the verb see ATTEND, GIVE, No. 16, HEED, REGARD.

EARTH

1. ge (γῆ, 1093) denotes (a) “earth as arable land,” e.g., Matt. 13:5, 8, 23; in 1 Cor. 15:47 it is said of the “earthly” material of which “the first man” was made, suggestive of frailty; (b) “the earth as a whole, the world,” in contrast, whether to the heavens, e.g., Matt. 5:18, 35, or to heaven, the abode of God, e.g., Matt. 6:19, where the context suggests the “earth” as a place characterized by mutability and weakness; in Col. 3:2 the same contrast is presented by the word “above”; in John 3:31 (RV, “of the earth,” for KJV, “earthly”) it describes one whose origin and nature are “earthly” and whose speech is characterized thereby, in contrast with Christ as the One from heaven; in Col. 3:5 the physical members are said to be “upon the earth,” as a sphere where, as potential instruments of moral evils, they are, by metonymy, spoken of as the evils themselves; (c) “the inhabited earth,” e.g., Luke 21:35; Acts 1:8; 8:33; 10:12; 11:6; 17:26; 22:22; Heb. 11:13; Rev. 13:8. In the following the phrase “on the earth” signifies “among men,” Luke 12:49; 18:8; John 17:4, (d) “a country, territory,” e.g. Luke 4:25; John 3:22; (e) “the ground,” e.g., Matt. 10:29; Mark 4:26, RV, “(upon the) earth,” for KJV, “(into the) ground”; (f) “land,” e.g., Mark 4:1; John 21:8-9, 11. Cf. Eng. words beginning with ge□, e.g., “geodetic,” “geodesy,” “geology,” “geometry,” “geography.” See COUNTRY, GROUND, LAND, WORLD.

2. oikoumene (οἰκουμένη, 3625), the present participle, passive voice, of oikeo, “to dwell, inhabit,” denotes the “inhabited earth.” It is translated “world” in every place where it has this significance, save in Luke 21:26, KJV, where it is translated “earth.” See WORLD.

Note: For epigeios, translated “on earth” in Phil. 2:10, ostrakinos, “of earth,” 2 Tim. 2:20, and katachthonios, “under the earth,” Phil. 2:10,¶ see EARTHEN.

EARTHEN, EARTHLY, EARTHY

1. ostrakinos (ὀστράκινος, 3749) signifies “made of earthenware or clay” (from ostrakon, “baked clay, potsherd, shell”; akin to osteon, “a bone”), 2 Tim. 2:20, “of earth”; 2 Cor. 4:7, “earthen.”¶

2. epigeios (ἐπίγειος, 1919), “on earth” (epi, “on,” ge, “the earth”), is rendered “earthly” in John 3:12; 2 Cor. 5:1; Phil. 3:19; Jas. 3:15; in Phil. 2:10, “on earth,” RV; “terrestrial” in 1 Cor. 15:40 (twice). See TERRESTRIAL.¶

3. choikos (χοϊκός, 5517) denotes “earthy,” made of earth, from chous, “soil, earth thrown down or heaped up,” 1 Cor. 15:47-49.¶

4. katachthonios (καταχθόνιος, 2709), “under the earth, subterranean” (kata, “down,” chthon, “the ground,” from a root signifying that which is deep), is used in Phil. 2:10.¶

EARTHQUAKE

seismos (σεισμός, 4578), “a shaking, a shock,” from seio, “to move to and fro, to shake,” chiefly with the idea of concussion (Eng., “seismic,” “seismology,” “seismometry”), is used (a) of a “tempest” in the sea, Matt. 8:24; (b) of “earthquakes,” Matt. 24:7; 27:54; 28:2; Mark 13:8; Luke 21:11; Acts 16:26; Rev. 6:12; 8:5; 11:13 (twice), 19; 16:18 (twice). See TEMPEST.¶

EASE, EASED

A. Verb.

anapauo (ἀναπαύω, 373) signifies “to cause or permit one to cease from any labor or movement” so as to recover strength. It implies previous toil and care. Its chief significance is that of taking, or causing to take, rest; it is used in the middle voice in Luke 12:19, “take (thine) ease,” indicative of unnecessary, self-indulgent relaxation. In the papyri it is used technically, as an agricultural term. Cf. anapausis, “rest.” See REFRESH, REST.

B. Noun.

anesis (ἀνεσις, 425) denotes “a letting loose, relaxation, easing”; it is connected with aniemi, “to loosen, relax” (ana, “back,” and hiemi, “to send”). It signifies “rest,” not from toil, but from endurance and suffering. Thus it is said (a) of a “less vigorous” condition in imprisonment, Acts 24:23, “indulgence,” KJV, “liberty”; (b) “relief” from anxiety, 2 Cor. 2:13; 7:5, “relief” (KJV, “rest”), (c) “relief” from persecutions, 2 Thess. 1:7, “rest”; (d) of “relief” from the sufferings of poverty, 2 Cor. 8:13, “be eased,” lit., “(that there should be) easing for others (trouble to you).” Cf. the synonymous word anapausis, “cessation or rest” (akin to A). See INDULGENCE, LIBERTY, RELIEF, REST.¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 23:15.¶

For EASILY see EASY

EAST

anatole (ἀνατολή, 395), primarily “a rising,” as of the sun and stars, corresponds to anatello, “to make to rise,” or, intransitively, “to arise,” which is also used of the sunlight, as well as of other objects in nature. In Luke 1:78 it is used metaphorically of Christ as “the Dayspring,” the One through whom light came into the world, shining immediately into Israel, to dispel the darkness which was upon all nations. Cf. Mal. 4:2. Elsewhere it denotes the “east,” as the quarter of the sun’s rising, Matt. 2:1-2, 9; 8:11; 24:27; Luke 13:29; Rev. 7:2; 16:12; 21:13. The “east” in general stands for that side of things upon which the rising of the sun gives light. In the heavenly city itself, Rev. 21:13, the reference to the “east” gate points to the outgoing of the influence of the city “eastward.” See DAYSPRING.¶

EASTER

pascha (πάσχα, 3957), mistranslated “Easter” in Acts 12:4, KJV, denotes the Passover (RV). The phrase “after the Passover” signifies after the whole festival was at an end. The term “Easter” is not of Christian origin. It is another form of Astarte, one of the titles of the Chaldean goddess, the queen of heaven. The festival of Pasch held by Christians in post-apostolic times was a continuation of the Jewish feast, but was not instituted by Christ, nor was it connected with Lent. From this Pasch the pagan festival of “Easter” was quite distinct and was introduced into the apostate Western religion, as part of the attempt to adapt pagan festivals to Christianity. See PASSOVER.

EASY, EASIER, EASILY

1. chrestos (χρηστός, 5543) primarily signifies “fit for use, able to be used” (akin to chraomai, “to use”), hence, “good, virtuous, mild, pleasant” (in contrast to what is hard, harsh, sharp, bitter). It is said (a) of the character of God as “kind, gracious,” Luke 6:35; 1 Pet. 2:3; “good,” Rom. 2:4, where the neuter of the adjective is used as a noun, “the goodness” (cf. the corresponding noun chrestotes, “goodness,” in the same verse); of the yoke of Christ, Matt. 11:30, “easy” (a suitable rendering would be “kindly”); (c) of believers, Eph. 4:32; (d) of things, as wine, Luke 5:39, RV, “good,” for KJV, “better” (cf. Jer. 24:3, 5, of figs); (e) ethically, of manners, 1 Cor. 15:33. See GOOD, GRACIOUS, KIND.¶

2. eukopoterous (εὐκοπώτερος, 2123), the comparative degree of eukopos, “easy, with easy labor” (eu, “well,” kopos, “labor”), hence, of that which is “easier to do,” is found in the Synoptics only, Matt. 9:5; 19:24; Mark 2:9; 10:25; Luke 5:23; 16:17; 18:25.

Notes: (1) The adverb “easily” is included in the translation of euperistatos in Heb. 12:1, “easily beset,” lit., “the easily besetting sin,” probably a figure from a garment, “easily surrounding,” and therefore easily entangling. See BESET. (2) In 1 Cor. 13:5, KJV, “is not easily provoked,” there is no word in the original representing “easily”; RV, “is not provoked.” (3) For “easy to be entreated” see INTREAT. For easy to be understood see UNDERSTAND.

EAT, EAT WITH, EATING

A. Verbs.

1. esthio (ἐσθίω, 2068) signifies “to eat” (as distinct from pino, “to drink”); it is a lengthened form from edo (Lat., edo; cf. Eng., “edible”); in Heb. 10:27, metaphorically, “devour”; it is said of the ordinary use of food and drink, 1 Cor. 9:7; 11:22; of partaking of food at table, e.g., Mark 2:16; of reveling, Matt. 24:49; Luke 12:45. Cf. the strengthened, form katesthio, and the verb sunesthio, below. See DEVOUR.

2. phago (φάγω, 5315), “to eat, devour, consume,” is obsolete in the present and other tenses, but supplies certain tenses which are wanting in No. 1, above. In Luke 8:55 the KJV has “(to give her) meat,” the RV “(that something be given her) to eat.” The idea that this verb combines both “eating” and “drinking,” while No. 1 differentiates the one from the other, is not borne out in the NT. The word is very frequent in the Gospels and is used eleven times in 1 Cor. See also No. 3. See MEAT.

3. trogo (τρώγω, 5176), primarily, “to gnaw, to chew,” stresses the slow process; it is used metaphorically of the habit of spiritually feeding upon Christ, John 6:54, 56-58 (the aorists here do not indicate a definite act, but view a series of acts seen in perspective); of the constant custom of “eating” in certain company, John 13:18; of a practice unduly engrossing the world, Matt. 24:38.

In John 6, the change in the Lord’s use from the verb esthio (phago) to the stronger verb trogo, is noticeable. The more persistent the unbelief of His hearers, the more difficult His language and statements became. In vv. 49 to 53 the verb phago is used; in 54, 58, trogo (in v. 58 it is put into immediate contrast with phago). The use of trogo in Matt. 24:38 and John 13:18 is a witness against pressing into the meaning of the word the sense of munching or gnawing; it had largely lost this sense in its common usage.¶

4. geuo (γεύομαι, 1089), primarily, “to cause to taste, to give one a taste of,” is used in the middle voice and denotes (a) “to taste,” its usual meaning; (b) “to take food, to eat,” Acts 10:10; 20:11; 23:14; the meaning to taste must not be pressed in these passages, the verb having acquired the more general meaning. As to whether Acts 20:11 refers to the Lord’s Supper or to an ordinary meal, the addition of the words “and eaten” is perhaps a sufficient indication that the latter is referred to here, whereas v. 7, where the single phrase “to break bread” is used, refers to the Lord’s Supper. A parallel instance is found in Acts 2:43, 46. In the former verse the phrase “the breaking of bread,” unaccompanied by any word about taking food, clearly stands for the Lord’s Supper; whereas in v. 46 the phrase “breaking bread at home” is immediately explained by “they did take their food,” indicating their ordinary meals. See TASTE.

5. bibrosko (βιβρώσκω, 977), “to eat,” is derived from a root, bor□, “to devour” (likewise seen in the noun broma, “food, meat”; cf. Eng., “carnivorous,” “voracious,” from Lat. vorax). This verb is found in John 6:13. The difference between this and phago, No. 2, above, may be seen perhaps in the fact that whereas in the Lord’s question to Philip in v. 5, phago intimates nothing about a full supply, the verb bibrosko, in v. 13, indicates that the people had been provided with a big meal, of which they had partaken eagerly.¶

6. kataphago (Aor. of κατεσθίω, 2719) signifies “to eat up” (kata, used intensively, and No. 2), John 2:17; Rev. 10:9-10; elsewhere it is translated “devour,” as also is katesthio (see No. 1). See DEVOUR.

7. korennumi (κορέννυμι, 2880), “to satiate, to satisfy,” as with food, is used in the middle voice in Acts 27:38, “had eaten enough”; in 1 Cor. 4:8, “ye are filled.” See FILL.¶

8. sunesthio (συνεσθίω, 4906), “to eat with” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is found in Luke 15:2; Acts 10:41; 11:3; 1 Cor. 5:11; Gal. 2:12.¶

9. nomen echo is a phrase consisting of the noun nomen, denoting (a) “pasturage,” (b) “growth, increase,” and echo, “to have.” In John 10:9 the phrase signifies “to find pasture” (a). In 2 Tim. 2:17, with the meaning (b), the phrase is, lit., “will have growth,” translated “will eat,” i.e., “will spread like a gangrene.” It is used in Greek writings, other than the NT, of the spread of a fire, and of ulcers. See PASTURE.¶

Note: The verb metalambano, “to take a part or share of anything with others, to partake of, share,” is translated “did eat,” in Acts 2:46, corrected in the RV to “did take”; a still more suitable rendering would be “shared,” the sharing of food being suggested; cf. metadidomi, “to share,” e.g., Luke 3:11.

B. Nouns.

1. broxis (βρώσις, 1035), akin to A, No. 5, denotes (a) “the act of eating,” e.g., Rom. 14:17; said of rust, Matt. 6:19-20; or, more usually (b) “that which is eaten, food” (like broma, “food”), “meat,” John 4:32; 6:27, 55; Col. 2:16; Heb. 12:16 (“morsel of meat”); “food,” 2 Cor. 9:10; “eating,” 1 Cor. 8:4. See FOOD, MEAT, RUST.¶

2. prosphagion (προσφάγιον, 4371), primarily “a dainty or relish” (especially cooked fish), to be eaten with bread (pros, “to,” and A, No. 2), then, “fish” in general, is used in John 21:5, “Have ye aught to eat?” (KJV, “have ye any meat?”). Moulton remarks that the evidences of the papyri are to the effect that prosphagion, “is not so broad a word as ‘something to eat.’ The apostles had left even loaves behind them once, Mark 8:14; they might well have left the ‘relish’ on this occasion. It would normally be fish; cf. Mark 6:38” (Gram. of NT Greek, Vol. 1, p. 170).¶

C. Adjective.

brosimos (βρώσιμος, 1034), akin to A, No. 5, and B., signifying “eatable,” is found in Luke 24:41, RV, appropriately, “to eat,” for the KJV, “meat.”¶ In the Sept., Lev. 19:23; Neh. 9:25; Ezek. 47:12.¶

EDGE, EDGED

A. Noun.

stoma (στόμα, 4750), the mouth (cf. Eng., “stomach,” from stomachos, 1 Tim. 5:23), has a secondary and figurative meaning in reference to the “edge of a sharp instrument, as of a sword,” Luke 21:24; Heb. 11:34 (cf. the Sept., e.g., Gen. 34:26; Judg. 18:27). See FACE, MOUTH.

B. Adjective.

distomos (δίστομος, 1366), lit., “doublemouthed” (dis, “twice,” and A.), “two-edged,” is used of a sword with two edges, Heb. 4:12; Rev. 1:16; 212.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 3:16; Psa. 149:6; Prov. 5:4.¶

EDIFICATION, EDIFY, EDIFYING

A. Noun.

oikodome (οἰκοδομή, 3619) denotes (a) “the act of building” (oikos, “a home,” and demo, “to build”); this is used only figuratively in the NT, in the sense of edification, the promotion of spiritual growth (lit., “the things of building up”), Rom. 14:19; 15:2; 1 Cor. 14:3, 5, 12, 26, e.g.; (b) “a building, edifice,” whether material, Matt. 24:1, e.g., or figurative, of the future body of the believer, 2 Cor. 5:1, or of a local church, 1 Cor. 3:9, or the whole church, “the body of Christ, Eph. 2:21. See BUILDING.

B. Verb.

oikodomeo (οἰκοδομέω, 3618), lit., “to build a house” (see above), (a) usually signifies “to build,” whether literally, or figuratively; the present participle, lit., “the (ones) building,” is used as a noun, “the builders,” in Matt. 21:42; Mark 12:10; Luke 20:17; Acts 4:11 (in some mss.; the most authentic have the noun oikodomos;) 1 Pet. 2:7; (b) is used metaphorically, in the sense of “edifying,” promoting the spiritual growth and development of character of believers, by teaching or by example, suggesting such spiritual progress as the result of patient labor. It is said (1) of the effect of this upon local churches, Acts 9:31; 1 Cor. 14:4; (2) of the individual action of believers towards each other, 1 Cor. 8:1; 10:23; 14:17; 1 Thess. 5:11; (3) of an individual in regard to himself, 1 Cor. 14:4. In 1 Cor. 8:10, where it is translated “emboldened,” the apostle uses it with pathetic irony, of the action of a brother in “building up” his brother who had a weak conscience, causing him to compromise his scruples; “strengthened,” or “confirmed,” would be suitable renderings. See BUILD, EMBOLDEN.

EFFECT (of none)

1. akuroo (ἀκυρόω, 208) signifies “to render void, deprive of force and authority” (from a, negative, and kuros, “might, authority”; kurios, “a lord,” is from the same root), the opposite to kuroo, “to confirm” (see CONFIRM). It is used of making “void” the Word of God, Matt. 15:6; Mark 7:13 (KJV, “making of none effect”), and of the promise of God to Abraham as not being deprived of authority by the Law 430 years after, Gal. 3:17, “disannul.” Kuroo is used in v. 15. See DISANNUL, VOID.¶

2. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673), “to reduce to inactivity, to render useless,” is translated “to make of none effect,” in Rom. 3:3, 31; 4:14; Gal. 3:17 (cf. akuroo, No. 1, in the same verse), and in the KJV of Gal. 5:4, RV, “ye are severed” (from Christ). For the meaning and use of the word see ABOLISH AND DESTROY.

3. kenoo (κενόω, 2758), “to make empty, to empty,” is translated “should be made of none effect” in 1 Cor. 1:17, KJV (RV “made void”); it is used (a) of the Cross of Christ, there; (b) of Christ, in emptying Himself, Phil. 2:7; (c) of faith, Rom. 4:14; (d) of the apostle Paul’s glorying in the gospel ministry, 1 Cor. 9:15; (e) of his glorying on behalf of the church at Corinth, 2 Cor. 9:3. See EMPTY, VAIN, VOID.¶

Note: In Rom. 9:6 the verb ekpipto, lit., “to fall out of, as of a ship falling out of its course” (cf. the same word in Acts 27:17, “were driven”), is translated “hath taken none effect,” KJV (RV, “hath come to nought”). See NOUGHT.

EFFECTUAL

A. Adjective.

energes (ἐνεργής, 1756) denotes “active, powerful in action” (en, “in,” ergon, “work”; Eng. “energy”; the word “work” is derived from the same root). It is translated “effectual” in 1 Cor. 16:9, of the door opened for the gospel in Ephesus, and made “effectual” in the results of entering it; and in Philem. 6, of the fellowship of Philemon’s faith “in the knowledge of every good thing” (RV). In Heb. 4:12 it describes the Word of God as “active,” RV (KJV, “powerful”), i.e., full of power to achieve results. See ACTIVE, POWERFUL.¶

B. Verb.

energeo (ἐνεργέω, 1754), “to put forth power, be operative, to work” (its usual meaning), is rendered by the verb “to work effectually,” or “to be effectual,” in the KJV of 2 Cor. 1:6; Gal. 2:8 and 1 Thess. 2:13; in each case the RV translates it by the simple verb “to work” (past tense, “wrought”). In Jas. 5:16 the RV omits the superfluous word “effectual,” and translates the sentence “the supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working,” the verb being in the present participial form. Here the meaning may be “in its inworking,” i.e., in the effect produced in the praying man, bringing him into line with the will of God, as in the case of Elijah. For a fuller treatment of the word, see WORK. See also DO, MIGHTY, SHEW, Note (11).

Note: The noun energeia, “working,” is translated “effectual working,” in the KJV of Eph. 3:7, and 4:16.

EFFEMINATE

malakos (μαλακός, 3120), “soft, soft to the touch” (Lat., mollis, Eng., “mollify,” “emollient,” etc.), is used (a) of raiment, Matt. 11:8 (twice); Luke 7:25; (b) metaphorically, in a bad sense, 1 Cor. 6:9, “effeminate,” not simply of a male who practices forms of lewdness, but persons in general, who are guilty of addiction to sins of the flesh, voluptuous.¶

EFFULGENCE

apaugasma (ἀπαύγασμα, 541), “radiance, effulgence,” is used of light shining from a luminous body (apo, “from,” and auge, “brightness”). The word is found in Heb. 1:3, where it is used of the Son of God as “being the effulgence of His glory.” The word “effulgence” exactly corresponds (in its Latin form) to apaugasma. The “glory” of God expresses all that He is in His nature and His actings and their manifestation. The Son, being one with the Father in Godhood, is in Himself, and ever was, the shining forth of the “glory,” manifesting in Himself all that God is and does, all, for instance, that is involved in His being “the very image of His substance,” and in His creative acts, His sustaining power, and in His making purification of sins, with all that pertains thereto and issues from it.¶

oon (ὠόν, 5609) denotes “an egg” (Lat., ovum), Luke 11:12.¶

EIGHT, EIGHTEEN, EIGHTH

okto (ὀκτώ, 3638), “eight” (Lat., octo, octavus; cf. Eng., “octagon,” “octave,” “octavo,” “October,” etc.), is used in Luke 2:21; 9:28; John 20:26; Acts 9:33; 25:6; 1 Pet. 3:20; in composition with other numerals, okto kai deka, lit., “eight and ten, eighteen,” Luke 13:4, 11, 16; triakonta kai okto, “thirty and eight,” John 5:5.¶

ogdoos (ὀγδοός, 3590), “eighth” (connected with the preceding), is used in Luke 1:59; Acts 7:8; 2 Pet. 2:5; Rev. 17:11; 21:20.¶

oktaemeros (ὀκταήμερος, 3637), an adjective, signifying an “eighth-day” person or thing, “eight days old” (okto, and hemera, “a day”), is used in Phil. 3:5. This, and similar numerical adjectives not found in the NT, indicate duration rather than intervals. The apostle shows by his being an “eighth-day” person as to circumcision, that his parents were neither Ishmaelites (circumcised in their thirteenth year) nor other Gentiles, converted to Judaism (circumcised on becoming Jews).

EITHER

e (ἤ, 2228) is a disjunctive particle. One of its uses is to distinguish things which exclude each other, or one of which can take the place of another. It is translated “either” in Matt. 6:24; 12:33; Luke 16:13; Acts 17:21; 1 Cor. 14:6. The RV rightly omits it in Luke 6:42, and translates it by “or” in Luke 15:8; Phil. 3:12 and Jas. 3:12.

Note: The adverb enteuthen, denoting “hence,” is repeated in the phrase rendered “on either side,” (lit., “hence and hence”) in John 19:18. The RV of Rev. 22:2 translates it “on this side,” distinguishing it from ekeithen, “on that side”; the KJV, following another reading for the latter adverb, has “on either side.” See HENCE.

ELDER, ELDEST

A. Adjectives.

1. presbuteros (πρεσβύτερος, 4245), an adjective, the comparative degree of presbus, “an old man, an elder,” is used (a) of age, whether of the “elder” of two persons, Luke 15:25, or more, John 8:9, “the eldest”, or of a person advanced in life, a senior, Acts 2:17; in Heb. 11:2, the “elders” are the forefathers in Israel so in Matt. 15:2; Mark 7:3, 5 the feminine of the adjective is used of “elder” women in the churches, 1 Tim. 5:2, not in respect of position but in seniority of age; (b) of rank or positions of responsibility, (1) among Gentiles, as in the Sept. of Gen. 50:7; Num. 22:7, (2) in the Jewish nation, firstly, those who were the heads or leaders of the tribes and families, as of the seventy who assisted Moses, Num. 11:16; Deut. 27:1, and those assembled by Solomon; secondly, members of the Sanhedrin, consisting of the chief priests, “elders” and scribes, learned in Jewish law, e.g., Matt. 16:21; 26:47; thirdly, those who managed public affairs in the various cities, Luke 7:3; (3) in the Christian churches those who, being raised up and qualified by the work of the Holy Spirit, were appointed to have the spiritual care of, and to exercise oversight over, the churches. To these the term “bishops,” episkopoi, or “overseers,” is applied (see Acts 20, v. 17 with v. 28, and Titus 1:5 and 7), the latter term indicating the nature of their work presbuteroi their maturity of spiritual experience. The divine arrangement seen throughout the NT was for a plurality of these to be appointed in each church, Acts 14:23; 20:17; Phil. 1:1; 1 Tim. 5:17; Titus 1:5. The duty of “elders” is described by the verb episkopeo. They were appointed according as they had given evidence of fulfilling the divine qualifications, Titus 1:6 to 9; cf. 1 Tim. 3:1-7 and 1 Pet. 5:2; (4) the twenty-four “elders” enthroned in heaven around the throne of God, Rev. 4:4, 10; 5:5-14; 7:11, 13; 11:16; 14:3; 19:4. The number twenty-four is representative of earthly conditions. The word “elder” is nowhere applied to angels. See OLD.

2. sumpresbuteros (συμπρεσβύτερος, 4850), “a fellow-elder” (sun, “with”), is used in 1 Pet. 5:1.¶

3. meizon (μείζων, 3187), “greater,” the comparative degree of megas, “great,” is used of age, and translated “elder” in Rom. 9:12, with reference to Esau and Jacob. See GREATER, GREATEST, MORE.

B. Noun.

presbuterion (πρεσβυτήριον, 4244), “an assembly of aged men,” denotes (a) the Council or Senate among the Jews, Luke 22:66; Acts 22:5; (b) the “elders” or bishops in a local church, 1 Tim. 4:14, “the presbytery.” For their functions see A, No. 1, (3).

ELECT, ELECTED, ELECTION

A. Adjectives.

1. eklektos (ἐκλεκτός, 1588) lit. signifies “picked out, chosen” (ek, “from,” lego, “to gather, pick out”), and is used of (a) Christ, the “chosen” of God, as the Messiah, Luke 23:35 (for the verb in 9:35 see Note below), and metaphorically as a “living Stone,” “a chief corner Stone,” 1 Pet. 2:4, 6; some mss. have it in John 1:34, instead of huios, “Son”; (b) angels, 1 Tim. 5:21, as “chosen” to be of especially high rank in administrative association with God, or as His messengers to human beings, doubtless in contrast to fallen angels (see 2 Pet. 2:4 and Jude 6); (c) believers (Jews or Gentiles), Matt. 24:22, 24, 31; Mark 13:20, 22, 27; Luke 18:7; Rom. 8:33; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 1:1; 2:9 (as a spiritual race); Matt. 20:16; 22:14 and Rev. 17:14, “chosen”; individual believers are so mentioned in Rom. 16:13; 2 John 1, 13.¶

Believers were “chosen” “before the foundation of the world” (cf. “before times eternal,” 2 Tim. 1:9), in Christ, Eph. 1:4, to adoption, Eph. 1:5; good works, 2:10; conformity to Christ, Rom. 8:29; salvation from the delusions of the Antichrist and the doom of the deluded, 2 Thess. 2:13; eternal glory, Rom. 9:23.

The source of their “election” is God’s grace, not human will, Eph. 1:4, 5; Rom. 9:11; 11:5. They are given by God the Father to Christ as the fruit of His death, all being foreknown and foreseen by God, John 17:6 and Rom. 8:29. While Christ’s death was sufficient for all men, and is effective in the case of the “elect,” yet men are treated as responsible, being capable of the will and power to choose. For the rendering “being chosen as firstfruits,” an alternative reading in 2 Thess. 2:13, see FIRSTFRUITS. See CHOICE, B.

2. suneklektos (συνεκλεκτός, 4899) means “elect together with,” 1 Pet. 5:13.¶

B. Noun.

ekloge (ἐκλογή, 1589) denotes “a picking out, selection” (Eng., “eclogue”), then, “that which is chosen”; in Acts 9:15, said of the “choice” of God of Saul of Tarsus, the phrase is, lit., “a vessel of choice.” It is used four times in Romans; in 9:11, of Esau and Jacob, where the phrase “the purpose ... according to election” is virtually equivalent to “the electing purpose”; in 11:5, the “remnant according to the election of grace” refers to believing Jews, saved from among the unbelieving nation; so in v. 7; in v. 28, “the election” may mean either the “act of choosing” or the “chosen” ones; the context, speaking of the fathers, points to the former, the choice of the nation according to the covenant of promise. In 1 Thess. 1:4, “your election” refers not to the church collectively, but to the individuals constituting it; the apostle’s assurance of their “election” gives the reason for his thanksgiving. Believers are to give “the more diligence to make their calling and election sure,” by the exercise of the qualities and graces which make them fruitful in the knowledge of God, 2 Pet. 1:10.¶ For the corresponding verb eklegomai, see CHOOSE.

ELEMENTS

stoicheion (στοιχείον, 4747), used in the plural, primarily signifies any first things from which others in a series, or a composite whole take their rise; the word denotes “an element, first principle” (from stoichos, “a row, rank, series”; cf. the verb stoicheo, “to walk or march in rank”; see WALK); it was used of the letters of the alphabet, as elements of speech. In the NT it is used of (a) the substance of the material world, 2 Pet. 3:10, 12; (b) the delusive speculations of gentile cults and of Jewish theories, treated as elementary principles, “the rudiments of the world,” Col. 2:8, spoken of as “philosophy and vain deceit”; these were presented as superior to faith in Christ; at Colosse the worship of angels, mentioned in v. 18, is explicable by the supposition, held by both Jews and Gentiles in that district, that the constellations were either themselves animated heavenly beings, or were governed by them; (c) the rudimentary principles of religion, Jewish or Gentile, also described as “the rudiments of the world,” Col. 2:20, and as “weak and beggarly rudiments,” Gal. 4:3, 9, RV, constituting a yoke of bondage; (d) the “elementary” principles (the A.B.C.) of the OT, as a revelation from God, Heb. 5:12, RV, “rudiments,” lit., “the rudiments of the beginning of the oracles of God,” such as are taught to spiritual babes. See PRINCIPLES, RUDIMENTS.¶

ELEVEN, ELEVENTH

hendeka (ἐνδεκα, 1733), lit., “one ten” (Lat., undecim), is used only of the eleven apostles remaining after the death of Judas Iscariot, Matt. 28:16; Mark 16:14; Luke 24:9, 33; Acts 1:26; 2:14.¶

hendekatos (ἐνδέκατος, 1734), an adjective derived from the above, is found in Matt. 20:6, 9; Rev. 21:20.¶

ELOQUENT

logios (λόγιος, 3052), an adjective, from logos, “a word,” primarily meant “learned, a man skilled in literature and the arts.” In the KJV of Acts 18:24, it is translated “eloquent,” said of Apollos; the RV is almost certainly right in translating it “learned.” It was much more frequently used among the Greeks of one who was erudite than of one who was skilled in words. He had stores of “learning” and could use it convincingly.¶

ELSE

epei (ἐπεί, 1893), a conjunction, when used of cause, meaning “since,” “otherwise,” “for then,” “because”; in an ellipsis, “else,” as in 1 Cor. 7:14, where the ellipsis would be “if the unbelieving husband were not sanctified in the wife, your children would be unclean”; cf. Rom. 11:6, 22; 1 Cor. 5:10; Heb. 9:26. Sometimes it introduces a question, as in Rom. 3:6; 1. Cor. 14:16; 15:29; Heb. 10:2. It is translated “else” in 1 Cor. 14:16 and in the RV in Heb. 9:26 and 10:2, for KJV, “for then.”

ELSEWHERE

allachou (ἀλλαχόθεν, 237v), connected with allos, “another,” is used in Mark 1:38 (RV only).¶

For EMBARK (RV, in Acts 27:2) see ABOARD

EMBOLDEN

oikodomeo (οἰκοδομέω, 3618) is rendered “embolden” in 1 Cor. 8:10, in reference to blameworthy actions (see marg.), the delinquent being built up, so to speak, to do what is contrary to his conscience. See BUILD, EDIFICATION.

EMBRACE

1. aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι, 782) lit. signifies “to draw to oneself”; hence, “to greet, salute, welcome,” the ordinary meaning, e.g., in Rom. 16, where it is used 21 times. It also signifies “to bid farewell,” e.g., Acts 20:1, RV, “took leave of” (KJV, “embraced”). A “salutation or farewell” was generally made by embracing and kissing (see Luke 10:4, which indicates the possibility of delay on the journey by frequent salutation). In Heb. 11:13 it is said of those who greeted the promises from afar, RV, “greeted,” for KJV, “embraced.” Cf. aspasmos, “a salutation. See GREET, LEAVE (take), SALUTE.

Note: In Acts 21:6 the most authentic texts have apaspazomai (apo, and No. 1), “to bid farewell.”

2. sumperilambano (συμπεριλαμβάνω, 4843), lit., “to take around with,” (sun, “with” peri “around,” lambano, “to take”), “to embrace,” is used in Acts 20:10, in connection with Paul’s recovery of Eutychus.¶ In the Sept., Ezra 5:3, “to enclose.”¶

EMPEROR

sebastos (σεβαστός, 4575), “august, reverent,” the masculine gender of an adjective (from sebas, “reverential awe”), became used as the title of the Roman emperor, Acts 25:21, 25, RV, for KJV, “Augustus”; then, taking its name from the emperor, it became a title of honor applied to certain legions or cohorts or battalions, marked for their valor, Acts 27:1.¶ Cf. sebazomai, “to worship,” Rom. 1:25;¶ sebasma, “an object of worship,” Acts 17:23; 2 Thess. 2:4.¶

EMERALD

A. Noun.

---

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

smaragdōs (σμάραγδος, 4665) is a transparent stone of a light green color, occupying the first place in the second row on the high priest's breastplate, Exod. 28:18. Tyre imported it from Syria, Ezek. 27:16. It is one of the foundations of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:19. The name was applied to other stones of a similar character, such as the carbuncle.¶

B. Adjective.

smaragdinos (σμαράγδινος, 4664), "emerald in character," descriptive of the rainbow round about the throne in Rev. 4:3, is used in the papyri to denote emerald green.¶

EMPTY

A. Verbs.

1. kenōō (κενόω, 2758), "to empty," is so translated in Phil. 2:7, RV, for KJV, "made ... of no reputation." The clauses which follow the verb are exegetical of its meaning, especially the phrases "the form of a servant," and "the likeness of men." Christ did not "empty" Himself of Godhood. He did not cease to be what He essentially and eternally was. The KJV, while not an exact translation, goes far to express the act of the Lord (see GIFFORD on the Incarnation). For other occurrences of the word, see Rom. 4:14; 1 Cor. 1:17; 9:15; 2 Cor. 9:3.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 14:2; 15:9.¶

2. scholazo (σχολάζω, 4980), from scholē, "leisure," that for which leisure is employed, such as "a lecture" (hence, "the place where lectures are given"; Eng., "school"), is used of persons, to have time for anything and so to be occupied in, 1 Cor. 7:5; of things, to be unoccupied, empty, Matt. 12:44 (some mss. have it in Luke 11:25). See GIVE (oneself to).¶

B. Adjective.

kenos (κενός, 2756) expresses the "hollowness" of anything, the "absence" of that which otherwise might be possessed. It is used (a) literally, Mark 12:3; Luke 1:53; 20:10-11; (b) metaphorically, of imaginations, Acts 4:25; of words which convey erroneous teachings, Eph. 5:6; of deceit, Col. 2:8; of a person whose professed faith is not accompanied by works, Jas. 2:20; negatively, concerning the grace of God, 1 Cor. 15:10; of refusal to receive it, 2 Cor. 6:1; of faith, 1 Cor. 15:14; of preaching (id.); and other forms of Christian activity and labor, 1 Cor. 15:58; Gal. 2:2; Phil. 2:16; 1 Thess. 2:1; 3:5.¶ The synonymous word mataios, "vain," signifies "void" of result, it marks the aimlessness of anything. The vain (kenos) man in Jas. 2:20 is one who is "empty" of divinely imparted wisdom; in 1:26 the vain (mataios) religion is one that produces nothing profitable. Kenos stresses the absence of quality, mataios, the absence of useful aim or effect. Cf. the corresponding adverb kenos, "in vain," in Jas. 4:5,¶ the noun kenodoxia, "vainglory," Phil. 2:3,¶ the adjective kenodoxos, "vainglorious," Gal. 5:26,¶ and the noun kenophonia, "vain," or "empty," babblings, 1 Tim. 6:20; 2 Tim. 2:16.¶

For EMULATION, KJV (Rom. 11:14; Gal. 5:20) see JEALOUSY

ENABLE

endunamōō (ἐνδυναμώω, 1743), "to render strong" (en, "in," dunamis, "power"), is translated "enabled" in 1 Tim. 1:12, more lit., "instrengthened," "inwardly strengthened," suggesting strength in soul and purpose (cf. Phil. 4:13). See STRENGTH, STRONG. (In the Sept., Judg. 6:34; 1 Chron. 12:18; Ps. 52:7.¶)

ENACT

nomotheteo (νομοθετέω, 3549), “to ordain by law, to enact” (nomos, “a law,” tithemi, “to put”), is used in the passive voice, and rendered “enacted” in Heb. 8:6, RV, for KJV, “established”; in 7:11, used intransitively, it is rendered “received the Law.” See ESTABLISH, LAW.¶

For ENCLOSE see INCLOSE

ENCOUNTER

sumballo (συμβάλλω, 4820), lit., “to throw together” (sun, “with,” ballo, “to throw”), is used of “encountering” in war, Luke 14:31, RV, “to encounter ... (in war),” for KJV, “to make war against”; of meeting in order to discuss, in Acts 17:18, “encountered,” of the philosophers in Athens and the apostle. See CONFER, HELP, MAKE, MEET, PONDER.

ENCOURAGE, ENCOURAGEMENT

A. Verbs.

1. protrepo (προτρέπομαι, 4389), “to urge forward, persuade,” is used in Acts 18:27 in the middle voice, RV, “encouraged,” indicating their particular interest in giving Apollos the “encouragement” mentioned; the KJV, “exhorting,” wrongly connects the verb.¶

2. paramutheomai (παράμυθέομαι, 3888), from para, “with,” and muthos, “counsel, advice,” is translated “encouraging” in 1 Thess. 2:11, RV, and “encourage” in 5:14, RV, there signifying to stimulate to the discharge of the ordinary duties of life. In John 11:19, 31, it means “to comfort.” See COMFORT.¶

Cf. the nouns paramuthia, 1 Cor. 14:3,¶ and paramuthion, Phil. 2:1, “comfort.”¶

B. Noun.

paraklesis (παράκλησις, 3874), “a calling to one’s aid” (para, “by the side,” kaleo, “to call”), then, “an exhortation, encouragement,” is translated “encouragement” in Heb. 6:18, RV, for KJV, “consolation”; it is akin to parakaleo, “to beseech or exhort, encourage, comfort,” and parakletos, “a paraclete or advocate.” See COMFORT, CONSOLATION, EXHORTATION, INTREATY.

END, ENDING

A. Nouns.

1. telos (τέλος, 5056) signifies (a) “the limit,” either at which a person or thing ceases to be what he or it was up to that point, or at which previous activities were ceased, 2 Cor. 3:13; 1 Pet. 4:7; (b) “the final issue or result” of a state or process, e.g., Luke 1:33; in Rom. 10:4, Christ is described as “the end of the Law unto righteousness to everyone that believeth”; this is best explained by Gal. 3:23-26; cf. Jas. 5:11; the following more especially point to the issue or fate of a thing, Matt. 26:58; Rom. 6:21; 2 Cor. 11:15; Phil. 3:19; Heb. 6:8; 1 Pet. 1:9; (c) “a fulfillment,” Luke 22:37, KJV, “(have) an end”; (d) “the utmost degree” of an act, as of the love of Christ towards His disciples, John 13:1; (e) “the aim or purpose” of a thing, 1 Tim. 1:5; (f) “the last” in a succession or series Rev.

1:8 (KJV, only, “ending”); 21:6; 22:13. See CONTINUAL, CUSTOM (TOLL), FINALLY, UTTERMOST.

Note: The following phrases contain telos (the word itself coming under one or other of the above): eis telos, “unto the end,” e.g., Matt. 10:22; 24:13; Luke 18:5, “continual”; John 13:1 (see above); 2 Cor. 3:13, “on the end” (RV); heos telous, “unto the end,” 1 Cor. 1:8; 2 Cor. 1:13;¶ achri telous, “even to the end” (a stronger expression than the preceding); Heb. 6:11; Rev. 2:26 (where “even” might well have been added);¶ mechri telous, with much the same meaning as achri telous, Heb. 3:6, 14.¶ See other expressions in the Notes after C.

2. sunteleia (συντέλεια, 4930) signifies “a bringing to completion together” (sun “with,” teleo, “to complete,” akin to No. 1), marking the “completion” or consummation of the various parts of a scheme. In Matt. 13:39-40, 49; 24:3; 28:20, the rendering “the end of the world” (KJV and RV, text) is misleading; the RV marg., “the consummation of the age,” is correct. The word does not denote a termination, but the heading up of events to the appointed climax. Aion is not the world, but a period or epoch or era in which events take place. In Heb. 9:26, the word translated “world” (KJV) is in the plural, and the phrase is “the consummation of the ages.” It was at the heading up of all the various epochs appointed by divine counsels that Christ was manifested (i.e., in His Incarnation) “to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself.”¶

3. peras (πέρας, 4009), “a limit, boundary” (from pera, “beyond”), is used (a) of space, chiefly in the plural, Matt. 12:42, RV, “ends,” for KJV, “uttermost parts”; so Luke 11:31 (KJV, “utmost”); Rom. 10:18 (KJV and RV, “ends”); (b) of the termination of something occurring in a period, Heb. 6:16, RV, “final,” for KJV, “an end,” said of strife. See UTTERMOST.¶

4. ekbasis (ἐκβασίς, 1545) denotes “a way out” (ek, “out,” baino, “to go”), 1 Cor. 10:13, “way of escape”; or an issue, Heb. 13:7 (KJV, “end,” RV, “issue”). See ISSUE.¶

B. Verbs.

1. teleo (τελέω, 5055), “to complete, finish, bring to an end,” is translated “had made an end,” in Matt. 11:1. See ACCOMPLISH.

2. sunteleo (συντελέω, 4931), cf. A, No. 2, signifies (a) “to bring to an end, finish completely” (sun, “together,” imparting a perfective significance to teleo), Matt. 7:28 (in some mss.); Luke 4:2, 13; Acts 21:27, RV, “completed”; (b) “to bring to fulfillment,” Mark 13:4; Rom. 9:28; (c) “to effect, make,” Heb. 8:8. See FINISH, FULFILL, MAKE.¶

3. pleroo (πληρόω, 4137), (a) “to fill,” (b) “to fulfill, complete, end,” is translated “had ended” in Luke 7:1; “were ended” (passive) in Acts 19:21 See ACCOMPLISH.

Note: In John 13:2, the verb ginomai, there signifying “to be in progress,” and used in the present participle, is translated “during supper” (RV). A less authentic reading, is genomenou, “being ended” (KJV).

C. Adjective.

eschatos (ἔσχατος, 2078), “last, utmost, extreme,” is used as a noun (a) of time, rendered “end” in Heb. 1:2, RV, “at the “end” of these days,” i.e., at the “end” of the period under the Law, for KJV, “in these last days”; so in 1 Pet. 1:20, “at the end of the times.” In 2 Pet. 2:20, the plural, ta eschata, lit., “the last things,” is rendered “the latter end,” KJV, (RV, “the last state”); the same phrase is used in Matt. 12:45; Luke 11:26; (b) of place, Acts 13:47, KJV, “ends (of the earth),” RV, “uttermost part. See LAST, LOWEST, UTTERMOST.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 28:1, opse, “late (in the evening),” is rendered “in the end (of),” KJV, RV, “late (on).” (2) In 1 Pet. 1:13, teleios, “perfectly,” RV, is rendered “to the end,” in KJV (3) The phrase eis touto, lit., “unto this,” signifies “to this end,” John 18:37, RV (twice; KJV, “for this cause,” in the second clause); so Mark 1:38; Acts 26:16; Rom. 14:9; 2 Cor. 2:9; 1 Tim. 4:10 (KJV, “therefore”); 1 Pet. 4:6; 1 John 3:8 (KJV, “for this purpose”). (4) Eis, “unto,” followed by the article and the infinitive mood of a verb, signifies “to the end that ...” marking the aim of an action, Acts 7:19; Rom. 1:11; 4:16, 18; Eph. 1:12; 1 Thess. 3:13; 2 Thess. 1:5; 2:2, 6; 1 Pet. 3:7. In Luke 18:1, pros, “to,” has the same construction and meaning. (5) The conjunction hina, “in order that,” is sometimes rendered “to the end that,” Eph. 3:17; 2 Thess. 3:14; Titus 3:8. (6) In Matt. 24:31, the prepositions apo, “from,” and heos, “unto,” are used with the plural of akros, “highest, extreme,” signifying “from one end ... to the other,” lit., “from extremities ... to extremities.”

ENDEAVOR

1. spoudazo (σπουδάζω, 4704), “to make haste, to be zealous,” and hence, “to be diligent,” is rendered “endeavoring” in Eph. 4:3, KJV; RV, “giving diligence.” In 2 Pet. 1:15, KJV, “endeavor,” RV, “give diligence.” Both have “endeavored in 1 Thess. 2:17. See DILIGENCE.

2. zeteo (ζητέω, 2212), “to seek after,” is translated “endeavor” in Acts 16:10, KJV, RV, “sought”. See ABOUT (to be), DESIRE, INQUIRE, SEEK.

ENDLESS

1. akatalutos (ἀκατάλυτος, 179) denotes indissoluble (from a, negative, kata, “down,” luo, “to loose”), Heb. 7:16, “endless”; see the RV, marg., i.e., a life which makes its possessor the holder of His priestly office for evermore.¶

2. aperantos (ἀπέραντος, 562), from a, negative and peraino, “to complete, finish,” signifies “interminable, endless”; it is said of genealogies, 1 Tim. 1:4.¶ In the Sept., Job 36:26.¶

enduo (ἐνδύω, 1746), in the middle voice, “to put on oneself, be clothed with,” is used metaphorically of power, Luke 24:49, RV, clothed. See CLOTHE.

Note: In Jas. 3:13 the adjective epistemon, “knowing, skilled,” is translated “endued with knowledge,” KJV, RV, “understanding.”¶

ENDURE, ENDURING

A. Verbs.

1. meno (μένω, 3306), “to abide,” is rendered “to endure” in the KJV of John 6:27 and 1 Pet. 1:25 (RV, “abideth”); Heb. 10:34, KJV, “enduring (substance),” RV, “abiding.” See ABIDE.

2. hupomeno (ὑπομένω, 5278), a strengthened form of No. 1, denotes “to abide under, to bear up courageously” (under suffering), Matt. 10:22; 24:13; Mark 13:13; Rom. 12:12, translated “patient”; 1 Cor. 13:7; 2 Tim. 2:10, 12 (KJV, “suffer”); Heb. 10:32; 12:2-3, 7; Jas. 1:12; 5:11; 1 Pet. 2:20, “ye shall take it patiently.” It has its other significance, “to tarry, wait for, await,” in Luke 2:43; Acts 17:14 (in some mss., Rom. 8:24).¶ Cf. B. See ABIDE, PATIENT, SUFFER, TARRY. Cf. makrothumeo, “to be longsuffering” (see No. 7).

3. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear,” is translated “endured” in Rom. 9:22 and Heb. 12:20. See BEAR.

4. hupophero (ὑποφέρω, 5297), a strengthened form of No. 3, “to bear or carry,” by being under, is said metaphorically of “enduring” temptation, 1 Cor. 10:13, KJV, “bear”; persecutions, 2 Tim. 3:11; griefs, 1 Pet. 2:19. See BEAR.¶

5. anecho (ἀνέχομαι, 430), “to hold up” (ana, “up,” echo, “to hold or have”), always in the middle voice in the NT, is rendered “endure” in 2 Thess. 1:4, of persecutions and tribulations; in 2 Tim. 4:3, of sound doctrine. See BEAR.

6. kartereo (καρτερέω, 2594), “to be steadfast, patient,” is used in Heb. 11:27, “endured,” of Moses in relation to Egypt.¶ In the Sept., Job 2:9; Isa. 42:14.¶

7. makrothumeo (μακροθυμέω, 3114), “to be long-tempered” (makros, “long,” thumos, “mind”), is rendered “patiently endured” in Heb. 6:15, said of Abraham. See B, below. See BEAR, LONGSUFFERING, PATIENCE, SUFFER.

Note: In 2 Tim. 2:9, kakopatheo, “to suffer evil” (kakos, “evil,” pascho, “to suffer”), is translated “endure hardness,” KJV; RV, “suffer hardship”; so in 4:5, KJV, “endure afflictions”; elsewhere in Jas. 5:13.¶ In 2 Tim. 2:3 the most authentic mss. have sunkakopatheo, “to suffer hardship with,” as in 1:8.¶ See HARDSHIP, SUFFER.

B. Noun.

hupomone (ὑπομονή, 5281), “patience,” lit., “a remaining under” (akin to A, No. 2), is translated “patient enduring” in 2 Cor. 1:6, RV, for KJV, “enduring.” Cf. makrothumia, “longsuffering” (akin to A, No. 7). See PATIENCE.

ENEMY

echthros (ἐχθρός, 2190), an adjective, primarily denoting “hated” or “hateful” (akin to echthos, “hate”; perhaps associated with ekos, “outside”), hence, in the active sense, denotes “hating, hostile”; it is used as a noun signifying an “enemy,” adversary, and is said (a) of the Devil, Matt. 13:39; Luke 10:19; (b) of death, 1 Cor. 15:26; (c) of the professing believer who would be a friend of the world, thus making himself an enemy of God, Jas. 4:4; (d) of men who are opposed to Christ, Matt. 13:25, 28; 22:44; Mark 12:36; Luke 19:27; 20:43; Acts 2:35; Rom. 11:28; Phil. 3:18; Heb. 1:13; 10:13; or to His servants, Rev. 11:5, 12; to the nation of Israel, Luke 1:71, 74; 19:43; (e) of one who is opposed to righteousness, Acts 13:10; (f) of Israel in its alienation from God, Rom. 11:28; (g) of the unregenerate in their attitude toward God, Rom. 5:10; Col. 1:21; (h) of believers in their former state, 2 Thess. 3:15; (i) of foes, Matt. 5:43-44; 10:36; Luke 6:27, 35; Rom. 12:20; 1 Cor. 15:25; of the apostle Paul because he told converts “the truth,” Gal. 4:16. See FOE. Cf. echthra, “enmity”.¶

ENGRAFTED

Note: This is the KJV rendering of emphutos, Jas. 1:21, an adjective derived from emphuo, “to implant”; the RV has “implanted.”¶ The metaphor is that of a seed rooting itself in the heart; cf. Matt. 13:21; 15:13; 1 Cor. 3:6, and the kindred word sumphutos, Rom. 6:5, “planted together” (sun, “with”).¶ The KJV “engrafted” would translate the word emphuteuton (from emphuteuo, “to graft”), which is not found in the NT; it uses enkentrizo in Rom. 11. Cf. ekphuo, “to cause to grow out, put forth” (leaves), Matt. 24:32; Mark 13:28.

ENGRAVE

entupoo (ἐντυπώω, 1795), “to imprint, engrave” (en, “in,” tupos, “a mark, impression, form, type”), is used of the “engraving” of the Law on the two stones, or tablets, 2 Cor. 3:7.¶ In the Sept., Exod. 36:39 (some texts have ektupoo).¶ See also GRAVEN.

ENJOIN

1. entellomai (ἐντέλλομαι, 1781) is translated “hath enjoined” in the KJV of Heb. 9:20. See COMMAND (RV).

2. epitasso (ἐπιτάσσω, 2004), lit., “to set or arrange over, to charge, command,” is rendered “enjoin” in Philem. 8. See COMMAND. Cf. keleuo, “to order.”

ENJOY

A. Verb.

tunchano (τυγχάνω, 5177), used transitively, denotes “to hit upon, meet with”; then, “to reach, get, obtain”; it is translated “enjoy” (i.e., obtain to our satisfaction) in Acts 24:2. See CHANCE, COMMON, Note (3), OBTAIN.

B. Noun.

apolausis (ἀπόλαυσις, 619), “enjoyment” (from apolauo, “to take hold of, enjoy a thing”), suggests the advantage or pleasure to be obtained from a thing (from a root, lab— seen in lambano, “to obtain”); it is used with the preposition eis, in 1 Tim. 6:17, lit., “unto enjoyment,” rendered “to enjoy”; with echo, “to have,” in Heb. 11:25, lit., “to have pleasure (of sin),” translated “to enjoy the pleasures.”¶ See PLEASURE.

ENLARGE

1. megaluno (μεγαλύνω, 3170) denotes “to make great” (from megas, “great”), Matt. 23:5, “enlarge”; 2 Cor. 10:15, KJV, “enlarged,” RV, “magnified”; elsewhere in the KJV it is rendered by the verb “to magnify,” except in Luke 1:58, KJV, “had showed great (mercy),” RV, “had magnified (His mercy); see Luke 1:46; Acts 5:13; 10:46; 19:17; Phil. 1:20. See MAGNIFY.¶

2. platuno (πλατύνω, 4115), “to make broad,” from platus, “broad,” is translated “enlarged” in 2 Cor. 6:11, 13 (metaphorically), “make broad,” Matt. 23:5 (literally). From the primary sense of freedom comes that of the joy that results from it. See BROAD.¶ Cf. platos, “breadth,” and plateia, “a street.”

ENLIGHTEN

photizo (φωτίζω, 5461), from phos, “light,” (a), used intransitively, signifies “to give light, shine,” Rev. 22:5; (b), used transitively, “to enlighten, illumine,” is rendered “enlighten” in Eph. 1:18, metaphorically of spiritual “enlightenment”; so John 1:9, i.e., “lighting every man” (by reason of His coming); Eph. 3:9, “to make (all men) see” (RV marg., “to bring to light”); Heb. 6:4, “were enlightened”; 10:32, RV, “enlightened,” KJV, “illuminated.” See ILLUMINATED, LIGHT. Cf. photismos, “light,” and photeinos, “full of light.”

ENMITY

echthra (ἐχθρα, 2189), from the adjective echthros (see ENEMY) is rendered “enmity” in Luke 23:12; Rom. 8:7; Eph. 2:15-16; Jas. 4:4; “enmities,” Gal. 5:20, RV, for KJV, “hatred.” It is the opposite of agape, “love.”¶

ENOUGH

A. Adjectives.

1. arketos (ἄρκετός, 713), “sufficient,” akin to arkeo (see B, No. 1), is rendered “enough” in Matt. 10:25; “sufficient” in Matt. 6:34; “suffice” in 1 Pet. 4:3, lit., “(is) sufficient.” See SUFFICE, SUFFICIENT.¶

2. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “sufficient, competent, fit” (akin to hikano and hiko, “to reach, attain” and hikanoo, “to make sufficient”), is translated “enough” in Luke 22:38, of the Lord’s reply to Peter concerning the swords. See ABLE.

Note: In Luke 15:17 the verb perisseuo, “to have abundance,” is translated “have enough and to spare.” In Acts 27:38 the verb korennumi, “to satisfy,” is translated “had eaten enough.”

B. Verbs.

1. arkeo (ἀρκέω, 714), “to ward off”; hence, “to aid, assist”; then, “to be strong enough,” i.e., “to suffice, to be enough” (cf. A, No. 1), is translated “be enough” in Matt. 25:9. See CONTENT.

2. apectho (ἀπέχω, 568), lit., “to hold off from, to have off or out” (apo, “from,” echo, “to have”), i.e., “to have in full, to have received,” is used impersonally in Mark 14:41, “it is enough,” in the Lord’s words to His slumbering disciples in Gethsemane. It is difficult, however, to find examples of this meaning in Greek usage of the word, and apectho may here refer, in its commercial significance, to Judas (who is mentioned immediately afterwards), with the meaning “he hath received” (his payment); cf. the same use in Matt. 6:2, 5, 16 (see Deissmann, Light from the Ancient East, pp. 110ff.).

See ABSTAIN, HAVE, RECEIVE.

For ENQUIRE see INQUIRE

ENRICH

ploutizo (πλουτίζω, 4148), “to make rich” (from ploutos, “wealth, riches”), is used metaphorically, of spiritual “riches,” in 1 Cor. 1:5, “ye were enriched”; 2 Cor. 6:10, “making rich”; 2 Cor. 9:11, “being enriched.” See RICH.

ENROLL, ENROLLMENT

A. Verb.

apographo (ἀπογράφω, 583) primarily signifies “to write out, to copy”; then, “to enroll, to inscribe,” as in a register. It is used of a census, Luke 2:1, RV, “be enrolled,” for KJV, “be taxed”; in the middle voice, vv. 3, 5, to enroll oneself, KJV, “be taxed.” Confirmation that this census (not taxation) was taken in the dominions of the Roman Empire is given by the historians Tacitus and Suetonius. Augustus himself drew up a sort of Roman Domesday Book, a rationarium, afterwards epitomized into a breviarium, to include the allied kingdoms, appointing twenty commissioners to draw up the lists. In Heb. 12:23 the members of the church of the firstborn are said to be “enrolled,” RV.¶

Note: For RV, 1 Tim. 5:9, katalego, see TAKE, Note (18); for RV, 2 Tim. 2:4, stratologeo, see SOLDIER, B, Note (2).

B. Noun.

apographē (ἀπογραφή, 582) primarily denotes “a written copy,” or, as a law term, “a deposition”; then, “a register, census, enrollment,” Luke 2:2; Acts 5:37, RV, for KJV, “taxing.” Luke’s accuracy has been vindicated, as against the supposed inconsistency that as Quirinius was governor of Syria in A.D. 6, ten years after the birth of Christ, the census, as “the first” (RV), could not have taken place. At the time mentioned by Luke, Cilicia, of which Quirinius was governor, was separated from Cyprus and joined to Syria. His later direct governorship of Syria itself accounts for the specific inclusion of, and reference to, his earlier connection with that province. Justin Martyr, a native of Palestine, writing in the middle of the 2nd century, asserts thrice that Quirinius was present in Syria at the time mentioned by Luke (see Apol., 1:34, 46; Trypho 78). Noticeable, too, are the care and accuracy taken by Luke in his historical details, 1:3, RV.

As to charges made against Luke’s accuracy, Moulton and Milligan say as follows:—“The deduction so long made ... about the census apparently survives the demonstration that the blunder lay only in our lack of information: the microbe is not yet completely expelled. Possibly the salutary process may be completed by our latest inscriptional evidence that Quirinius was a legate in Syria for census purposes in 8-6 B.C.”¶

ENSAMPLE

1. tupos (τύπος, 5179) primarily denoted “a blow” (from a root tup□, seen also in tupto, “to strike”), hence, (a) an impression, the mark of a “blow,” John 20:25; (b) the “impress” of a seal, the stamp made by a die, a figure, image, Acts 7:43; (c) a “form” or mold, Rom. 6:17 (see RV); (d) the sense or substance of a letter, Acts 23:25; (e) “an ensample,” pattern, Acts 7:44; Heb. 8:5, “pattern”; in an ethical sense, 1 Cor. 10:6; Phil.

3:17; 1 Thess. 1:7; 2 Thess. 3:9; 1 Tim. 4:12, RV, “ensample”; Titus 2:7, RV, “ensample,” for KJV, “pattern”; 1 Pet. 5:3; in a doctrinal sense, a type, Rom. 5:14. See EXAMPLE, FASHION, FIGURE, FORM, MANNER, PATTERN, PRINT.¶

2. hupotuposis (ὑποτύπωσις, 5296), “an outline, sketch,” akin to hupotupoo, “to delineate,” is used metaphorically to denote a “pattern,” an “ensample,” 1 Tim. 1:16, RV, “ensample,” for KJV, “pattern”; 2 Tim. 1:13, RV, “pattern,” for KJV, “form.” See FORM, PATTERN.¶

3. hupodeigma (ὑπόδειγμα, 5262), lit., “that which is shown” (from hupo, “under,” and deiknumi, “to show”), hence, (a) “a figure, copy,” Heb. 8:5, RV, “copy,” for KJV, “example”; 9:23; (b) “an example,” whether for imitation, John 13:15; Jas. 5:10, or for warning, Heb. 4:11; 2 Pet. 2:6, RV, example. See EXAMPLE, PATTERN.¶

douloo (δουλόω, 1402), “to make a slave of,” is rendered “enslaved” (to much wine) in Titus 2:3, RV, for KJV, given to. See BONDAGE.

ENSNARE

pagideuo (παγιδεύω, 3802), “to entrap, lay snares for” (from pagis, “anything which fixes or grips,” hence, “a snare”), is used in Matt. 22:15, of the efforts of the Pharisees to “entrap” the Lord in His speech, KJV, “entangle.” See ENTANGLE.¶

ENTANGLE

1. pagideuo: see ENSNARE.

2. empleko (ἐμπλέκω, 1707), “to weave in” (en, “in,” pleko, “to weave”), hence, metaphorically, to be involved, entangled in, is used in the passive voice in 2 Tim. 2:4, “entangleth himself;” 2 Pet. 2:20, “are entangled.”¶ In the Sept., Prov. 28:18.¶

ENTER, ENTERING, ENTRANCE

A. Verbs.

1. eiserchomai (εἰσερχομαι, 1525), “to come into” (eis, “in,” erchomai, “to come”), is frequently rendered “entered” in the RV for KJV, “went into,” e.g., Matt. 9:25; 21:12; or “go in,” e.g., Matt. 7:13; Luke 8:51; “go,” Luke 18:25; “was coming in,” Acts 10:25. See COME, No. 2, GO (Notes).

2. suneiserchomai (συνεἰσερχομαι, 4897), “to enter together,” is used in John 6:22 (in the best mss.; see No. 6) and 18:15.¶

3. pareiserchomai (παρεισέρχομαι, 3922), (a) “to come in beside” (para, “beside,” and No. 1), is rendered “entered” in Rom. 5:20, KJV for RV, “came in beside,” the meaning being that the Law entered in addition to sin; (b) “to enter” secretly, by stealth, Gal. 2:4, “came in privily,” to accomplish the purposes of the circumcision party. See COME, No. 8.¶ Cf. pareisduo (or □duno), Jude 4, “crept in privily.”¶

4. eisporeuomai (εἰσπορεύομαι, 1531), “to go into,” found only in the Synoptists and Acts, is translated “to enter,” in the RV of Mark 1:21; 6:56; 11:2; Luke 8:16; 11:33 (KJV, “come in”); 19:30 (KJV, “at your entering”); 22:10; in the following the RV has the verb “to go,” for the KJV, “to enter,” Matt. 15:17; Mark 5:40; 7:15, 18-19; in Acts 28:30, “went,” KJV, “came”; in 9:28, RV, “going,” KJV, “coming”; in the following both KJV and RV have the verb “to enter,” Mark 4:19; Luke 18:24 (in the best mss.); Acts 3:2; 8:3. See GO, No. 5.¶

5. anabaino (ἀναβαίνω, 305), “to go up” (ana, “up,” baino, “to go”), is translated “entered” in 1 Cor. 2:9, metaphorically, of “coming” into the mind. In John 21:3, the best mss. have No. 6. See ARISE, No. 6.

6. embaino (ἐμβαίνω, 1684), “to go in” (en, “in”), is used only in the Gospels, of “entering” a boat, Matt. 8:23; 9:1; 13:2; 14:22, 32; 15:39; Mark 4:1; 5:18; 6:45; 8:10, 13; Luke 5:3; 8:22, 37; John 6:17, (in some mss., in v. 22), 24, RV, “got into the boats,” for KJV, “took shipping”; 21:3 (some mss. have No. 5 here); Acts 21:6 (in the best mss.); of stepping into water, John 5:4 (RV omits the verb). See COME, No. 21, GET, No. 5, GO, Note (2), m, STEP, TAKE, Note (3).¶

7. epibaino (ἐπιβαίνω, 1910), “to go upon” (epi, “upon”), is used of “going” on board ship, Acts 21:2; 27:2, KJV, “entering into,” RV, “embarking in. See ABOARD, COME, No. 16, SIT, Note.

8. eiseimi (εἰσείμι, 1524), “to go into” (eis, “into,” eimi, “to go”), Acts 3:3; 21:18, 26, KJV, “entered”; Heb. 9:6, RV, “go in,” for KJV, “went into.” See GO, No. 12.¶

Notes: (1) Erchomai, “to come,” is never translated “to enter,” in the RV; in the KJV, Mark 1:29; Acts 18:7. (2) In 2 John 7, the most authentic mss. have the verb exerchomai, “gone forth,” RV, for KJV (No. 1), “entered.” (3) In Luke 16:16, biazō, “to force, to enter in violently,” is so rendered in the RV, for KJV, “presseth.”

B. Noun.

eisodos (εἰσόδος, 1529), lit., “a way in” (eis, “in,” hodos, “a way”), “an entrance,” is used (a) of the “coming” of Christ into the midst of the Jewish nation, Acts 13:24, RV marg., “entering in”; (b) of “entrance” upon gospel work in a locality, 1 Thess. 1:9; 2:1; (c) of the present “access” of believers into God’s presence, Heb. 10:19, lit., “for entrance into”; (d) of their “entrance” into Christ’s eternal Kingdom, 2 Pet. 1:11. See COMING.¶

ENTERTAIN

xenizo (ξενίζω, 3579) signifies (a) “to receive as a guest” (xenos, “a guest”) rendered “entertained” in Acts 28:7, RV, for KJV, “lodged”; in Heb. 13:2, “have entertained”; (b) “to be astonished by the strangeness of a thing,” Acts 17:20; 1 Pet. 4:4, 12. See LODGE, STRANGE (think).

Note: In Heb. 13:2 (first part), philoxenia, lit., “love of strangers” (phileo, “to love,” and xenos, “a stranger or guest”), is translated “to show love to,” RV, for KJV, “entertain.” See HOSPITALITY.

ENTICE, ENTICING

A. Verb.

deleazo (δელιάζω, 1185), primarily, “to lure by a bait” (from delear, “a bait”), is used metaphorically in Jas. 1:14, of the “enticement” of lust; in 2 Pet. 2:14, of seducers, RV, “enticing,” for KJV, “beguiling”; in v. 18, RV, “entice (in),” for KV, “allure (through).”¶

B. Adjective.

peithos (πειθός, 3981), “apt to persuade” (from peitho, “to persuade”), is used in 1 Cor. 2:4, KJV, “enticing,” RV, “persuasive.”¶

Note: In Col. 2:4, pithanologia, “persuasive speech” (from pithanos, “persuasive, plausible,” akin to the above, and logos, “speech”), is rendered “enticing” in the KJV (RV, “persuasiveness of.”) It signifies the employment of plausible arguments, in contrast to demonstration.¶ Cf. eulogia, “fair speech,” Rom. 16:18, i.e., “nice style.”¶

holokleros (ὁλόκληρος, 3648), “complete, sound in every part” (holos, “whole,” kleros, “a lot,” i.e., with all that has fallen by lot), is used ethically in 1 Thess. 5:23, indicating that every grace present in Christ should be manifested in the believer; so Jas. 1:4.¶ In the Sept. the word is used, e.g., of a “full” week, Lev. 23:15; of altar stones unhewn, Deut. 27:6 and Josh. 8:31; of a “full-grown” vine tree, useless for work, Ezek. 15:5; of the “sound” condition of a sheep, Zech. 11:16.

The corresponding noun holokleria is used in Acts 3:16, “perfect soundness.”¶ The synonymous word teleios, used also in Jas. 1:4, “perfect,” indicates the development of every grace into maturity.

The Heb. shalom, “peace,” is derived from a root meaning “wholeness.” See, e.g., Isa. 42:19, marg., “made perfect,” for text, “at peace”; cf. 26:3. Cf. also Col. 1:28 with 2 Pet. 3:14.

For ENTREAT, to request, see INTREAT;

for ENTREATY see INTREATY

ENTREAT (“to deal with, to treat”)

Note: The distinction between this and the preceding word is maintained in the RV, which confines the initial “e” to the sense of “dealing with,” or uses the verb “to treat.”

chraomai (χράω, 5531) denotes (a) “to use” (of things); (b) “to use well or ill, to treat, deal with” (of persons); “treated (kindly),” Acts 27:3, RV, KJV, “(courteously) entreated.” The remaining ten instances come under (a). See USE.

Note: In Luke 20:11, atimazo, “to dishonor” (a, negative, time, “honor”), is translated “entreated shamefully,” KJV (RV, “handled shamefully”). For kakoucheo, Heb. 11:37, RV, and sunkakoucheomai, Heb. 11:25, RV, see SUFFER, Nos. 6 and 7.

ENVY, ENVYING

A. Noun.

phthonos (φθόνος, 5355), “envy,” is the feeling of displeasure produced by witnessing or hearing of the advantage or prosperity of others; this evil sense always attaches to this word, Matt. 27:18; Mark 15:10; Rom. 1:29; Gal. 5:21; Phil. 1:15; 1 Tim. 6:4; Titus 3:3; 1 Pet. 2:1; so in Jas. 4:5, where the question is rhetorical and strongly remonstrative, signifying that the Spirit (or spirit) which God made to dwell in us was certainly not so bestowed that we should be guilty of “envy.”¶

Note: Zelos, “zeal or jealousy,” translated “envy” in the KJV, in Acts 13:45; Rom. 13:13; 1 Cor. 3:3; 2 Cor. 12:20; Jas. 3:14, 16, is to be distinguished from phthonos, and, apart from the meanings “zeal” and “indignation,” is always translated “jealousy” in the RV. The distinction lies in this, that “envy” desires to deprive another of what he has, “jealousy” desires to have the same or the same sort of thing for itself See FERVENT, INDIGNATION, JEALOUSY, ZEAL.

B. Verbs.

1. phthoneo (φθονέω, 5354), “to envy” (akin to A.), is used in Gal. 5:26.¶

2. zeloo (ζηλόω, 2206) denotes “to be zealous, moved with jealousy,” Acts 7:9 and 17:5, RV, “moved with jealousy” (KJV, “moved with envy”); both have “envieth” in 1 Cor. 13:4. See the Note under A. See AFFECT, COVET, DESIRE, JEALOUS, ZEALOUS.

EPHPHATHA

Note: Ephphatha is an Aramaic word signifying “to open,” used in the imperative mood, “be opened,” Mark 7:34; while the application in this case was to the ears, the tongue was remedially affected.

EPILEPTIC

seleniazo (σεληνιάζομαι, 4583), lit., “to be moon struck” (from selene, “the moon”), is used in the passive voice with active significance, RV, “epileptic,” for KJV, “lunatick,” Matt. 4:24; 17:15; the corresponding English word is “lunatic.” Epilepsy was supposed to be influenced by the moon.

epistole (ἐπιστολή, 1992), primarily “a message” (from epistello, “to send to”), hence, “a letter, an epistle,” is used in the singular, e.g., Acts 15:30; in the plural, e.g., Acts 9:2; 2 Cor. 10:10. “Epistle is a less common word for a letter. A letter affords a writer more freedom, both in subject and expression, than does a formal treatise. A letter is usually occasional, that is, it is written in consequence of some circumstance which requires to be dealt with promptly. The style of a letter depends largely on the occasion that calls it forth.”* “A broad line is to be drawn between the letter and the epistle. The one is essentially a spontaneous product dominated throughout by the image of the reader, his sympathies and interests, instinct also with the writer’s own soul: it is virtually one half of an imaginary dialogue, the suppressed responses of the other party shaping the course of what is actually written.... the other has a general aim, addressing all and sundry whom it may concern: it is like a public speech and looks towards publication” (J. V. Bartlet, in Hastings Bib. Dic.).

In 2 Pet. 3:16 the apostle includes the Epistles of Paul as part of the God-breathed Scriptures.

EQUAL, EQUALITY

A. Adjective.

isos (ἴσος, 2470), “the same in size, number, quality,” etc., is translated “equal” in John 5:18; Phil. 2:6; in the latter the word is in the neuter plural, lit., “equalities”; “in the RV the words are translated ‘on an equality with God,’ instead of ‘equal with God,’ as in the KJV. The change is of great importance to the right interpretation of the whole passage. The rendering ‘equal with God,’ is evidently derived from the Latin Version.... It was apparently due at first to the fact that the Latin language had no adequate mode of representing the exact form and meaning of the Greek. The neuter plural denotes the various modes or states in which it was possible for the nature of Deity to exist and manifest itself as Divine.”†

Note: Cf. isotimos, “equally precious,” 2 Pet. 1:1;¶ isopsuchos, “of equal soul, like-minded,” Phil. 2:20;¶ also Eng. words beginning with the prefix iso□.

B. Nouns.

1. isotes (ἰσότης, 2471), “equality” (akin to A.), is translated “equality” in 2 Cor. 8:14, twice; in Col. 4:1, with the article, “that which is ... equal,” (lit., “the equality,” as marg.), i.e., equity, fairness, what is equitable.¶ In the Sept., Job 36:29; Zech. 4:7.¶

2. sunelikiotes (συνηλικιώτης, 4915) denotes “one of the same age, an equal in age” (sun, “with,” helikia, “an age”), “a contemporary,” Gal. 1:14, RV, “of mine own age,” for KJV “mine equals,” the reference being to the apostle’s good standing among his fellow students in the rabbinical schools; cf. Acts 22:3.¶

ERR

1. planao (πλανάω, 4105), in the active voice, signifies “to cause to wander, lead astray, deceive” (plane, “a wandering”; cf. Eng., “planet”); in the passive voice, “to be led astray, to err.” It is translated “err,” in Matt. 22:29; Mark 12:24, 27; Heb. 3:10; Jas. 1:16 (KJV, “do not err,” RV, “be not deceived”); 5:19. See DECEIVE, SEDUCE, WANDER, WAY, Note (5).

2. apoplanao (ἀποπλανάω, 635), “to cause to wander away from, to lead astray from” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically of leading into error, Mark 13:22, KJV, “seduce,” RV “lead astray”; 1 Tim. 6:10, in the passive voice, KJV, “have erred,” RV, “have been led astray.” See SEDUCE.¶

† Gifford. The Incarnation, p. 20.

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

3. astocheo (ἀστοχέω, 795), “to miss the mark, fail” (a, negative, stochos, “a mark”), is used only in the Pastoral Epistles, 1 Tim. 1:6, “having swerved”; 6:21 and 2 Tim. 2:18, “have erred.” See SWERVE.¶

ERROR

1. plane (πλάνη, 4106), akin to planao (see ERR, No. 1), “a wandering, a forsaking of the right path,” see Jas. 5:20, whether in doctrine, 2 Pet. 3:17; 1 John 4:6, or in morals, Rom. 1:27; 2 Pet. 2:18; Jude 11, though, in Scripture, doctrine and morals are never divided by any sharp line. See also Matt. 27:64, where it is equivalent to ‘fraud.’”† “Errors” in doctrine are not infrequently the effect of relaxed morality, and vice versa.

In Eph. 4:14 the RV has “wiles of error,” for KJV, “they lie in wait to deceive”; in 1 Thess. 2:3, RV, “error,” for KJV, “deceit”; in 2 Thess. 2:11, RV, “a working of error,” for KJV, “strong delusion.” See DECEIT.¶ Cf. planetes, “a wandering,” Jude 13,¶ and the adjective planos, “leading astray, deceiving, a deceiver.”

2. agnoema (ἀγνόημα, 51), “a sin of ignorance” (cf. agnoia, “ignorance,” and agnoeo, “to be ignorant”), is used in the plural in Heb. 9:7.¶

ESCAPE

A. Verbs.

1. pheugo (φεύγω, 5343), “to flee” (Lat., fuga, “flight,” etc.; cf. Eng., “fugitive, subterfuge”), is rendered “escape” in Matt. 23:33; Heb. 11:34. See FLEE.

2. apopheugo (ἀποφεύγω, 668), “to flee away from” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), is used in 2 Pet. 1:4; 2:18, 20.¶

3. diapheugo (διαφεύγω, 1309), lit., “to flee through,” is used of the “escaping” of prisoners from a ship, Acts 27:42. For the word in v. 44, see No. 5.¶

4. ekpheugo (ἐκφεύγω, 1628), “to flee out of a place” (ek, “out of,” and No. 1), is said of the “escape” of prisoners, Acts 16:27; of Sceva’s sons, “fleeing” from the demoniac, 19:16; of Paul’s escape from Damascus, 2 Cor. 11:33; elsewhere with reference to the judgments of God, Luke 21:36; Rom. 2:3; Heb. 2:3; 12:25; 1 Thess. 5:3. See FLEE.¶

5. diasozo (διασώζω, 1295), in the active voice, “to bring safely through a danger” (dia, “through,” intensive, sozo, “to save”), to make completely whole, to heal, Luke 7:3; to bring “safe,” Acts 23:24; “to save,” 27:43; in the passive voice, Matt. 14:36, “were made whole”; 1 Pet. 3:20. It is also used in the passive voice, signifying “to escape,” said of shipwrecked mariners, Acts 27:44; 28:1, 4. See HEAL, SAFE, SAVE.¶

Note: Exerchomai, “to come or go out of a place,” is rendered, “He escaped,” in John 10:39, KJV, an unsuitable translation, both in meaning and in regard to the circumstances of the Lord’s departure from His would-be captors. The RV “went forth” is both accurate and appropriate to the dignity of the Lord’s actions.

B. Noun.

† From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine p. 53.

ekbasis (ἐκβάσις, 1545), “a way out” (ek, “out,” baino, “to go”), denotes (a) “an escape,” 1 Cor. 10:13, used with the definite article and translated “the way of escape,” as afforded by God in case of temptation; (b) “an issue or result,” Heb. 13:7. See END, ISSUE.¶ Cf. ekbaino, “to go out,” Heb. 11:15 (some mss. have exerchomai).¶

ESCHEW

ekklineo (ἐκκλίνω, 1578), “to turn aside” (ek, “from,” klino, “to turn, bend”), is used metaphorically (a) of leaving the right path, Rom. 3:12, RV, “turned aside,” for KJV, “gone out of the way”; (b) of turning away from divisionmakers, and errorists, 16:17, RV, “turn away from”; (c) of turning away from evil, 1 Pet. 3:11, RV, “turn away from,” KJV, “eschew.” See AVOID, TURN.¶ In the Sept. the verb is frequently used of declining or swerving from God’s ways, e.g., Job 23:11; Ps. 44:18; 119:51, 157.

ESPECIALLY

malista (μάλιστα, 3122), “most, most of all, above all,” is the superlative of mala, “very much”; translated “especially” in Acts 26:3; Gal. 6:10; 1 Tim. 5:17; 2 Tim. 4:13; Phil. 4:22, RV (for KJV, “chiefly”); “specially,” Acts 25:26; 1 Tim. 4:10; 5:8; Titus 1:10; Philem. 16; in Acts 20:38, “most of all. See CHIEFLY, MOST.

ESPOUSED

1. harmozo (ἁρμόζω, 718), “to fit, join” (from hamnos, “a joint, joining”; the root ar□, signifying “to fit,” is in evidence in various languages; cf. arthron, “a joint,” arithmos, “a number,” etc.), is used in the middle voice, of marrying or giving in marriage; in 2 Cor. 11:2 it is rendered “espoused,” metaphorically of the relationship established between Christ and the local church, through the apostle’s instrumentality. The thought may be that of “fitting” or “joining” to one husband, the middle voice expressing the apostle’s interest or desire in doing so.¶

2. mnesteuo (μνηστεύω, 3423), “to woo and win, to espouse or promise in marriage,” is used in the passive voice in Matt. 1:18; Luke 1:27; 2:5, all with reference to the Virgin Mary, RV, “betrothed,” for KJV, “espoused,” in each case. See BETROTH.¶

ESTABLISH

1. sterizo (στηρίζω, 4741), “to fix, make fast, to set” (from sterix, “a prop”), is used of “establishing” or “stablishing” (i.e., the confirmation) of persons; the apostle Peter was called by the Lord to “establish” his brethren, Luke 22:32, translated “strengthen”; Paul desired to visit Rome that the saints might be “established,” Rom. 1:11; cf. Acts 8:23; so with Timothy at Thessalonica, 1 Thess. 3:2; the “confirmation” of the saints is the work of God, Rom. 16:25, “to stablish (you)”; 1 Thess. 3:13, “stablish (your hearts)”; 2 Thess. 2:17, “stablish them (in every good work and word)”; 1 Pet. 5:10, “stablish”; the means used to effect the “confirmation” is the ministry of the Word of God, 2 Pet. 1:12, “are established (in the truth which is with you)”; James exhorts Christians to “stablish” their hearts, Jas. 5:8; cf. Rev. 3:2, RV.

The character of this “confirmation” may be learned from its use in Luke 9:51, “steadfastly set”; 16:26, “fixed,” and in the Sept. in Exod. 17:12, “stayed up” (also from its strengthened form episterizo, “to confirm,” in Acts 14:22; 15:32, 41; in some mss. “to strengthen,” in 18:23; see CONFIRM.¶). Neither the laying on of hands nor the impartation of the Holy Spirit is mentioned in the NT in connection with either of these words, or with the synonymous verb bebaioo (see 1 Cor. 1:8; 2 Cor. 1:21, etc.). See FIX, SET, STRENGTHEN.¶

2. stereoō (στερεόω, 4732), “to make firm, or solid” (akin to stereos, “hard, firm, solid”; cf Eng., “stereotype”), is used only in Acts, (a) physically, 3:7, “received strength”; 3:16, “hath made strong”; (b) metaphorically, of establishment in the faith, 16:5, RV, “strengthened,” for KJV established.¶

3. histēmi (ἵστημι, 2476), “to cause to stand,” is translated “establish” in Rom. 3:31; 10:3; Heb. 10:9. See ABIDE, APPOINT, STAND, etc.

4. bebaioo (βεβαιόω, 950), “to confirm,” is rendered “stablish,” 2 Cor. 1:21; “stablished,” Col. 2:7; “be established,” Heb. 13:9. See CONFIRM.

5. nomotheteō (νομοθετέω, 3549): see ENACT.

ESTATE, STATE

1. euschemon (εὐσχήμων, 2158), signifying “elegant, graceful, comely” (eu, “well,” schema, “figure, fashion”), is used (a) in a moral sense, seemly, becoming, 1 Cor. 7:35; (b) in a physical sense, comely, 1 Cor. 12:24; (c) with reference to social degree, influential, a meaning developed in later Greek, and rendered of “honorable estate” in the RV of Mark 15:43; Acts 13:50; 17:12 (for KJV, “honorable”). See COMELY, HONORABLE.¶

2. tapeinosis (ταπεινώσις, 5014) denotes “abasement, humiliation, low estate” (from tapeinos, “lowly”), Luke 1:48, “low estate”; Acts 8:33, “humiliation”; Phil. 3:21, RV, “of humiliation,” for KJV, “vile”; Jas. 1:10, “is made low,” lit., “in his low estate. See HUMILIATION, LOW, VILE.¶

3. hupsos (ὑψος, 5311), signifying “height,” is rendered “(in his) high estate,” Jas. 1:9, RV, for KJV, “in that he is exalted”; “on high,” Luke 1:78; 24:49; Eph. 4:8; “height,” Eph. 3:18; Rev. 21:16. See EXALT, HEIGHT, HIGH.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 22:5, presbuterion, “presbytery, a body of elders,” is translated “estate of the elders,” lit., “the presbytery,” i.e., the Sanhedrin. (2) In Col. 4:7 the plural of the definite article with the preposition kata, and the singular personal pronoun with panta, “all,” is rendered “all my state,” KJV, RV, “all my affairs”; in v. 8 the preposition peri, with the personal pronoun, lit., “the things concerning us,” is translated “our estate,” i.e., “how we fare”; so in Phil. 2:19-20, “your state,” i.e., “your condition.” (3) In Mark 6:21 protos, lit., “first,” is rendered “chief estates,” KJV, RV, “the chief men,” i.e., the men to whom belongs the dignity. (4) In Rom. 12:16 tapeinos, in the plural with the article, lit., “the lowly,” is translated “men of low estate,” KJV, RV, “things that are lowly.” (5) In Jude 6 arche, “principality,” RV, KJV has “first estate,” (6) For “last state” see LAST.

ESTEEM

1. hegeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233) signifies “to lead”; then, “to lead before the mind, to suppose, consider, esteem”; translated “esteem” in Phil. 2:3, KJV, RV, “counting”; in 1 Thess. 5:13, “esteem”; in Heb. 11:26, KJV, “esteeming,” RV, “accounting.”

2. krino (κρίνω, 2919) signifies “to separate, choose”; then, “to approve, esteem”; translated “esteemeth” in Rom. 14:5 (twice), said of days; here the word “alike” (KJV) is rightly omitted in the RV, the meaning being that every day is especially regarded as sacred. See DETERMINE.

3. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049), “to reckon,” is translated “esteemeth” in Rom. 14:14 (RV, “accounteth”). See ACCOUNT.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 6:4, KJV, exoutheneo, “to set at nought,” is rendered “are least esteemed”; the meaning is that judges in the world’s tribunals have no place (are not of account) in the church. See ACCOUNT. (2) In the KJV marg. of 1 Pet. 2:17, timao, “to honor,” is rendered “esteem.” (3) For “highly esteemed,” Luke 16:15, KJV, see EXALT, B. ETERNAL

1. aiōn (αἰών, 165), “an age,” is translated “eternal” in Eph. 3:11, lit., “(purpose) of the ages” (marg.), and 1 Tim. 1:17, lit. “(king) of the ages” (marg.). See AGE.

2. aiōnios (αἰώνιος, 166) “describes duration, either undefined but not endless, as in Rom. 16:25; 2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 1:2; or undefined because endless as in Rom. 16:26, and the other sixty-six places in the NT.

“The predominant meaning of aiōnios, that in which it is used everywhere in the NT, save the places noted above, may be seen in 2 Cor. 4:18, where it is set in contrast with proskairos, lit., ‘for a season,’ and in Philem. 15, where only in the NT it is used without a noun. Moreover it is used of persons and things which are in their nature endless, as, e.g., of God, Rom. 16:26; of His power, 1 Tim. 6:16, and of His glory, 1 Pet. 5:10; of the Holy Spirit, Heb. 9:14; of the redemption effected by Christ, Heb. 9:12, and of the consequent salvation of men, 5:9, as well as of His future rule, 2 Pet. 1:11, which is elsewhere declared to be without end, Luke 1:33; of the life received by those who believe in Christ, John 3:16, concerning whom He said, ‘they shall never perish,’ 10:28, and of the resurrection body, 2 Cor. 5:1, elsewhere said to be ‘immortal,’ 1 Cor. 15:53, in which that life will be finally realized, Matt. 25:46; Titus 1:2.

“Aionios is also used of the sin that ‘hath never forgiveness,’ Mark 3:29, and of the judgment of God, from which there is no appeal, Heb. 6:2, and of the fire, which is one of its instruments, Matt. 18:8; 25:41; Jude 7, and which is elsewhere said to be ‘unquenchable,’ Mark 9:43.

“The use of aiōnios here shows that the punishment referred to in 2 Thess. 1:9, is no temporary, but final, and, accordingly, the phraseology shows that its purpose is not remedial but retributive.”*

3. aidios (αἰδιος, 126); see EVERLASTING.

EUNUCH

A. Noun.

eunouchos (εὐνοῦχος, 2135) denotes (a) “an emasculated man, a eunuch,” Matt. 19:12; (b) in the 3rd instance in that verse, “one naturally incapacitated for, or voluntarily

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp 232, 233.

abstaining from, wedlock”; (c) one such, in a position of high authority in a court, “a chamberlain,” Acts 8:27-39.¶

B. Verb.

eunouchizo (εὐνουχίζω, 2134), “to make a eunuch” (from A), is used in Matt. 19:12, as under (b) in A; and in the passive voice, “were made eunuchs,” probably an allusion by the Lord to the fact that there were eunuchs in the courts of the Herods, as would be well known to His hearers.¶

EVANGELIST

euangelistes (εὐαγγελιστής, 2099), lit., “a messenger of good” (eu, “well,” angelos, “a messenger”), denotes a “preacher of the gospel,” Acts 21:8; Eph. 4:11, which makes clear the distinctiveness of the function in the churches; 2 Tim. 4:5.¶ Cf. euangelizo, “to proclaim glad tidings,” and euangelion, “good news, gospel.” Missionaries are “evangelists,” as being essentially preachers of the gospel.

EVEN (Noun), EVENING, EVENTIDE

A. Nouns.

1. hespera (ἑσπέρα, 2073), properly, the feminine of the adjective hesperos, “of, or at, evening, western” (Lat., vesper, Eng., “vespers”), is used as a noun in Luke 24:29; Acts 4:3, “eventide”; 28:23. Some mss. have the word in 20:15, “in the evening (we touched),” instead of hetera, “next (day).”

2. opsia (ὄψις, 3798**), the feminine of the adjective opsios, “late,” used as a noun, denoting “evening,” with hora, “understood” (see No. 1), is found seven times in Matthew, five in Mark, two in John, and in these places only in the NT (some mss. have it in Mark 11:11, see B). The word really signifies the “late evening,” the latter of the two “evenings” as reckoned by the Jews, the first from 3 p.m. to sunset, the latter after sunset; this is the usual meaning. It is used, however, of both, e.g., Mark 1:32 (cf. opsimos, “latter,” said of rain, Jas. 5:7).

B. Adverb.

opse (ὀψέ, 3796), “long after, late, late in the day, at evening” (in contrast to proi, “early,” e.g., Matt. 20:1), is used practically as a noun in Mark 11:11, lit., “the hour being at eventide”; 11:19; 13:35; in Matt. 28:1 it is rendered “late on,” RV, for KJV, “in the end of.” Here, however, the meaning seems to be “after,” a sense in which the word was used by late Greek writers. See LATE.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 24:11; Exod. 30:8; Jer. 2:23; Isa. 5:11.¶

Note: In Luke 12:38 some mss. have the adjective hesperinos, “of the evening” (see A, No. 1), lit., “in the evening watch.”

EVEN (Adjective)

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

Notes: (1) In Luke 19:44 (KJV, “shall lay thee even with the ground”), there is no word representing “even”; the verb edaphizo signifies “to beat level” (like a threshing floor); hence, “to dash to the ground” See DASH.¶

(2) In Heb. 12:13 the adjective orthos, “straight,” is rendered “even” in the KJV, marg.

EVEN (Adverb, etc.), EVEN AS, EVEN SO

1. kai (καί, 2532), a conjunction, is usually a mere connective, meaning “and”; it frequently, however, has an ascensive or climactic use, signifying “even,” the thing that is added being out of the ordinary, and producing a climax. The determination of this meaning depends on the context. Examples are Matt. 5:46-47; Mark 1:27; Luke 6:33 (RV); 10:17; John 12:42; Gal. 2:13, 17, where “also” should be “even”; Eph. 5:12. Examples where the RV corrects the KJV “and” or “also,” by substituting “even,” are Luke 7:49; Acts 17:28; Heb. 11:11; in 1 John 4:3 the RV rightly omits “even.”

When followed by “if” or “though,” kai often signifies “even,” e.g., Matt. 26:35; John 8:14. So sometimes when preceded by “if,” e.g., 1 Cor. 7:11, where “but and if” should be “but even if.”

The expegetical or explanatory use of kai followed by a noun in apposition, and meaning “namely,” or “even” is comparatively rare. Winer’s cautionary word needs heeding, that “this meaning has been introduced into too many passages” (Gram. of the NT, p. 546.). Some think it has this sense in John 3:5, “water, even the Spirit,” and Gal. 6:16, “even the Israel of God.”

2. de (δέ, 1161), usually signifying “but,” is sometimes used for emphasis, signifying “even,” e.g., Rom. 3:22; 9:30, “even the righteousness”; Phil. 2:8 (RV, “yea”). This is to be distinguished from No. 1.

3. eti (ἐτι, 2089), an adverb, “as yet, still,” is rendered “even” in Luke 1:15.

4. hos (ὥς, 5613), “as,” in comparative sentences, is sometimes translated “even as,” Matt. 15:28; Mark 4:36; Eph. 5:33; 1 Pet. 3:6 (KJV only); Jude 7.

5. houtos (οὗτος, 3778), or houto, “so, thus,” is frequently rendered “even so,” e.g., Matt. 7:17; 12:45; 18:14; 23:28; “so” in 1 Cor. 11:12 and 1 Thess. 2:4, RV.

6. kathos (καθώς, 2531), “according as” (kata, “according to,” and No. 4), is frequently translated “even as,” e.g., Mark 11:6; Luke 1:2; 1 Thess. 5:11.

7. hosper (ὥσπερ, 5618), No. 4, strengthened by per, is translated “even as” in Matt. 20:28.

8. kathaper (καθάπερ, 2509), “just as, even as,” is rendered “even as” in Rom. 4:6; 9:13; 10:15; 12:4 (RV); 2 Cor. 3:18; 1 Thess. 3:6, 12; 4:5; Heb. 4:2; “according as,” Rom. 11:8; elsewhere simply “as.”

9. nai (ναί, 3483), a particle of strong affirmation, “yea, verily, even so,” is rendered “even so” in the KJV, “yea” in the RV, in Matt. 11:26; Luke 10:21; Rev. 16:7; both KJV and RV have it in Rev. 1:7; the most authentic mss. omit it in 22:20. See SURELY, TRUTH, VERILY, YEA, YES.

10. homos (ὁμῶς, 3676), “yet, nevertheless,” is translated “even” in 1 Cor. 14:7 (KJV, “and even”); elsewhere John 12:42, “nevertheless”; Gal. 3:15, “yet” (i.e., “nevertheless,” an example of hyperbaton, by which a word is placed out of its true position).¶

Notes: (1) In Rom. 1:26, there is no word representing “even” in the original. The KJV seems to have put it for the particle te, which simply annexes the statement to the preceding and does not require translation. (2) In 1 Thess. 2:18 the KJV renders the particle men by “even”; if translated, it signifies “indeed.” (3) In 1 Cor. 12:2, hos (see No. 4, above), followed by the particle an, means “howsoever” (RV, for KJV, “even as”). (4) In Matt. 23:37, “even as” translates the phrase hon tropon, lit., “(in) what manner.” (5) In 1 Tim. 3:11, hosautos, a strengthened form of No. 4, “likewise, in like manner,” is rendered “even so,” KJV (RV, “in like manner”). (6) Kago, for kai ego, means either “even I” or “even so I” or “I also.” In John 10:15, the RV has “and I” for the KJV, “even so ... I”; in 17:18 and 20:21, KJV and RV, “even so I”; in the following, kago is preceded by hos, or kathos, “even as I,” 1 Cor. 7:8; 10:33; “even as I also,” 11:1; “as I also,” Rev. 2:27. (7) In Luke 12:7 the RV renders kai by “very” (for KJV, “even the very”). (8) In John 6:57 kakeinos (for kai ekeinos, “also he”), is translated “he also,” RV, for KJV, “even he.” (9) In Eph. 1:10 there is no word in the original for “even.” The RV expresses the stress on the pronoun by “in Him, I say.”

EVER, FOREVER, EVERMORE

A. Adverbs.

1. pantote (πάντοτε, 3842), “at all times, always” (akin to pas, “all”), is translated “ever” in Luke 15:31; John 18:20; 1 Thess. 4:17; 5:15; 2 Tim. 3:7; Heb. 7:25; “evermore” in John 6:34; in 1 Thess. 5:16, RV, “always,” for KJV, “evermore.” It there means “on all occasions,” as, e.g., in 1 Thess. 1:2; 3:6; 5:15; 2 Thess. 1:3, 11; 2:13. See ALWAYS.¶

2. aei (ἀεί, 104), “ever,” is used (a) of continuous time, signifying “unceasingly, perpetually,” Acts 7:51; 2 Cor. 4:11; 6:10; Titus 1:12; Heb. 3:10; (b) of successive occurrences, signifying “on every occasion,” 1 Pet. 3:15; 2 Pet. 1:12. Some texts have the word in Mark 15:8. See ALWAYS.¶

Note: The adjective dienekes, “unbroken, continuous,” is used in a phrase with eis, “unto,” and the article, signifying “perpetually, for ever,” Heb. 7:3; 10:1, 12, 14.¶

B. Phrases.

The following phrases are formed in connection with aion, “an age”: they are idiomatic expressions betokening undefined periods and are not to be translated literally: (a) eis aiona, lit., “unto an age,” Jude 13, “for ever”; (b) eis ton aiona, lit., “unto the age,” “for ever” (or, with a negative, “never”), Matt. 21:19; Mark 3:29; 11:14; Luke 1:55; John 4:14; 6:51, 58; 8:35 (twice), 51-52; 10:28; 11:26; 12:34; 13:8; 14:16; 1 Cor. 8:13; 2 Cor. 9:9; Heb. 5:6; 6:20; 7:17, 21, 24, 28; 1 Pet. 1:25; 1 John 2:17; 2 John 2; (c) eis tous aionas, lit., “unto the ages,” “for ever,” Matt. 6:13 (KJV only); Luke 1:33; Rom. 1:25; 9:5;

11:36; 16:27 (some mss. have the next phrase here); 2 Cor. 11:31; Heb. 13:8; (d) eis tous aionas ton aionon, lit. “unto the ages of the ages,” “for ever and ever,” or “for evermore,” Gal. 1:5; Phil. 4:20; 1 Tim. 1:17; 2 Tim. 4:18; Heb. 13:21; 1 Pet. 4:11; 5:11 [(c) in some mss.]; Rev. 1:6 [(c) in some mss.]; 1:18, “for evermore”; 4:9-10; 5:13; 7:12; 10:6; 11:15; 15:7; 19:3; 20:10; 22:5; (e) eis aionas aionon, lit., “unto ages of ages,” “for ever and ever,” Rev. 14:11; (f) eis ton aiona tou aionos, lit., “unto the age of the age,” “for ever and ever,” Heb. 1:8; (g) tou aionos ton aionon, lit., “of the age of the ages,” “for ever and ever,” Eph. 3:21; (h) eis pantas tous aionas, lit., “unto all the ages,” Jude 25 (“for evermore,” RV; “ever,” KJV); (i) eis hemeran aionos, lit., “unto a day of an age,” “for ever,” 2 Pet. 3:18.

EVERLASTING

1. aionios (αἰώνιος, 166): see ETERNAL.

2. aidios (ἄιδιος, 126) denotes “everlasting” (from aei, “ever”), Rom. 1:20, RV, “everlasting,” for KJV, “eternal”; Jude 6, KJV and RV “everlasting.” Aionios, should always be translated “eternal” and aidios, “everlasting.” “While aionios ... negatives the end either of a space of time or of unmeasured time, and is used chiefly where something future is spoken of, aidios excludes interruption and lays stress upon permanence and unchangeableness” (Cremer).¶

EVERY, EVERYONE (MAN), EVERYTHING

1. pas (πᾶς, 3956) signifies (1) with nouns without the article, (a) “every one” of the class denoted by the noun connected with pas, e.g., Matt. 3:10, “every tree”; Mark 9:49, “every sacrifice”; see also John 2:10; Acts 2:43; Rom. 2:9; Eph. 1:21; 3:15; 2 Thess. 2:4; 2 Tim. 3:16, RV; (b) “any and every, of every kind, all manner of,” e.g., Matt. 4:23; “especially with nouns denoting virtues or vices, emotions, condition, indicating every mode in which a quality manifests itself; or any object to which the idea conveyed by the noun belongs” (GrimmThayer). This is often translated “all,” e.g., Acts 27:20; Rom. 15:14; 2 Cor. 10:6; Eph. 4:19, 31; Col. 4:12, “all the will of God,” i.e., everything God wills; (2) without a noun, “every one, everything, every man” (i.e., person), e.g., Luke 16:16; or with a negative, “not everyone,” e.g., Mark 9:49; with a participle and the article, equivalent to a relative clause, everyone who, e.g., 1 Cor. 9:25; Gal. 3:10, 13; 1 John 2:29; 3:3-4, 6, 10, 15, rendered “whosoever.” So in the neuter, 1 John 2:16; 5:4, often rendered “whatsoever”; governed by the preposition en, “in,” without a noun following, it signifies “in every matter, or condition,” Phil. 4:6; 1 Thess. 5:18; “in every way or particular,” 2 Cor. 4:8, translated “on every side”; so 2 Cor. 7:5; “in everything,” Eph. 5:24; Phil. 4:12, lit., “in everything and (perhaps “even”) in all things.” See THOROUGHLY, WHOLE.

2. hapas (ᾧπας, 537), a strengthened form of No. 1, signifies “all, the whole, altogether”; it is translated “every one” in Acts 5:16, where it occurs in the plural. In Mark 8:25, the KJV, “every man” translates the text with the masculine plural; the best mss. have the neuter plural, RV, “all things.” See ALL, WHOLE.

3. hekastos (ἑκάστος, 1538): see EACH, No. 1. It is used with heis, “one,” in Acts 2:6, “every man,” and in Eph. 4:16, “each several (part),” for KJV, “every (part).” In Rev. 22:2 the most authentic mss. omit the numeral in the phrase “every month.” It is preceded by kath hena (kata, “according to,” hena, “one”), a strengthened phrase, in Eph. 5:33, KJV, “everyone ... in particular,” RV, “severally, each one.” The same kind of phrase with ana, “each,” before the numeral, is used in Rev. 21:21, RV, “each one of the several (gates),” for KJV, “every several (gate).” See EACH, PARTICULAR, SEVERAL.

Notes: (1) The preposition kata, “down,” is sometimes found governing a noun, in the sense of “every,” e.g., Luke 2:41, “every year”; 16:19, “every day”; Heb. 9:25, “every year” (RV, “year by year”); so 10:3. This construction sometimes signifies “in every ...,” e.g., Acts 14:23, “in every church”; 15:21, “in every city”; so 20:23; Titus 1:5; Acts 22:19, “in every synagogue” (plural); Acts 8:3 “(into) every house.” In Luke 8:1 the phrase means “throughout every city,” as in the KJV; in v. 4 “of every city,” RV. In Acts 5:42 the RV renders kata oikon “at home,” for KJV, “in every house”; in 2:46, for KJV, “from house to house” (marg., “at home”). In Acts 15:21 (last part) the adjective pas, “all,” is placed between the preposition and the noun for the sake of emphasis. In Acts 26:11, kata, followed by the plural of pas and the article before the noun, is rendered “in all the synagogues,” RV, for KJV, “in every synagogue.” The presence of the article confirms the RV. See SEVERALLY.

(2) In Matt. 20:9-10, the preposition ana, “upward” (used distributively), governing the noun denarion, is translated “every man (a penny).” There is no word for “every man,” and an appropriate rendering would be “a penny apiece”; cf. Luke 9:14, “fifty each,” RV; 10:1, “two and two”; John 2:6, “two or three ... apiece”; Rev. 4:8, “each ... six wings.”

(3) The pronoun tis, “anyone,” is rendered “any” in Acts 2:45, RV, for the incorrect KJV, “every.” In Mark 15:24, the interrogative form is rendered “what each (should take)” (KJV, “every man”), lit., “who (should take) what.”

EVERYWHERE, EVERY QUARTER, EVERY SIDE

1. pantache (πανταχοῦ, 3837v), “everywhere,” is used in Acts 21:28.¶

2. pantachou (πανταχοῦ, 3837), a variation of No. 1, is translated “everywhere” in Mark 1:28, RV, of the report throughout Galilee concerning Christ; in Mark 16:20, of preaching; Luke 9:6, of healing; Acts 17:30, of a divine command for repentance; 28:22, of disparagement of Christians; 1 Cor. 4:17, of apostolic teaching; in Acts 24:3, it is rendered “in all places.”¶ In the Sept., Isa. 42:22.¶ See PLACE.

3. pantother (παντόθεν, 3840) or pantachother, “from all sides,” is translated “from every quarter,” Mark 1:45; in Luke 19:43, “on every side”; in Heb. 9:4, “round about.”¶

Notes: (1) In Phil. 4:12, the phrase en panti, KJV, “everywhere,” is corrected to “in everything,” in the RV; in 2 Cor. 4:8, “on every side.”

(2) In 1 Tim. 2:8, en panti topo, “in every place,” RV, is translated “everywhere” in the KJV.

EVERY WHIT

holos (ὅλος, 3650), “all, whole, complete,” is rendered “every whit” in John 7:23; 13:10. See ALL.

EVIDENT, EVIDENTLY

A. Adjectives.

1. delos (δῆλος, 1212), properly signifying “visible, clear to the mind, evident,” is translated “evident” in Gal. 3:11 and 1 Cor. 15:27, RV (KJV, “manifest”); “bewrayeth,” Matt. 26:73; “certain,” 1 Tim. 6:7, KJV. Cf. deloo, “to declare, signify.” See BEWRAY, CERTAIN, MANIFEST.¶

2. katadelos (κατάδηλος, 2612), a strengthened form of No. 1, “quite manifest, evident,” is used in Heb. 7:15 (KJV, “more evident”).¶ For the preceding verse see No. 3.

3. prodelos (πρόδηλος, 4271), “manifest beforehand” (pro, “before,” and No. 1), is used in Heb. 7:14 in the sense of “clearly evident.” So in 1 Tim. 5:24-25, RV, “evident,” for KJV, “open beforehand,” and “manifest beforehand.” The pro is somewhat intensive.¶

Note: Phaneros, “visible, manifest” (akin to phainomai, “to appear”), is synonymous with the above, but is not translated “evident” in the NT. For “evident token” see TOKEN.

B. Adverb.

phaneros (φανερῶς, 5320), manifestly (see note above), is rendered “openly” in Mark 1:45; “publicly” in John 7:10, RV (opposite to “in secret”); in Acts 10:3, RV, “openly,” for KJV, evidently. See OPENLY, PUBLICLY.¶

Note: For the KJV, “evidently,” in Gal. 3:1, see OPENLY.

EVIL, EVIL-DOER

A. Adjectives.

1. kakos (κακός, 2556) stands for “whatever is evil in character, base,” in distinction (wherever the distinction is observable) from poneros (see No. 2), which indicates “what is evil in influence and effect, malignant.” Kakos is the wider term and often covers the meaning of poneros. Kakos is antithetic to kalos, “fair, advisable, good in character,” and to agathos, “beneficial, useful, good in act”; hence it denotes what is useless, incapable, bad; poneros is essentially antithetic to chrestos, “kind, gracious, serviceable”; hence it denotes what is destructive, injurious, evil. As evidence that poneros and kakos have much in common, though still not interchangeable, each is used of thoughts, cf. Matt. 15:19 with Mark 7:21; of speech, Matt. 5:11 with 1 Pet. 3:10; of actions, 2 Tim. 4:18 with 1 Thess. 5:15; of man, Matt. 18:32 with 24:48.

The use of kakos may be broadly divided as follows: (a) of what is morally or ethically “evil,” whether of persons, e.g., Matt. 21:41; 24:48; Phil. 3:2; Rev. 2:2, or qualities, emotions, passions, deeds, e.g., Mark 7:21; John 18:23, 30; Rom. 1:30; 3:8; 7:19, 21; 13:4; 14:20; 16:19; 1 Cor. 13:5; 2 Cor. 13:7; 1 Thess. 5:15; 1 Tim. 6:10; 2 Tim. 4:14; 1 Pet. 3:9, 12; (b) of what is injurious, destructive, baneful, pernicious, e.g., Luke 16:25; Acts 16:28; 28:5; Titus 1:12; Jas. 3:8; Rev. 16:2, where kakos and poneros come in that order, “noisome and grievous.” See B, No. 3. For compounds of kakos, see below.

2. poneros (πονηρός, 4190), akin to ponos, “labor, toil,” denotes “evil that causes labor, pain, sorrow, malignant evil” (see No. 1); it is used (a) with the meaning bad, worthless, in the physical sense, Matt. 7:17-18; in the moral or ethical sense, “evil,” wicked; of persons, e.g., Matt. 7:11; Luke 6:45; Acts 17:5; 2 Thess. 3:2; 2 Tim. 3:13; of “evil” spirits, e.g., Matt. 12:45; Luke 7:21; Acts 19:12-13, 15-16; of a generation, Matt. 12:39, 45; 16:4; Luke 11:29; of things, e.g., Matt. 5:11; 6:23; 20:15; Mark 7:22; Luke 11:34; John 3:19; 7:7; Acts 18:14; Gal. 1:4; Col. 1:21; 1 Tim. 6:4; 2 Tim. 4:18; Heb. 3:12; 10:22; Jas. 2:4; 4:16; 1 John 3:12; 2 John 11; 3 John 10; (b) with the meaning toilsome, painful, Eph. 5:16; 6:13; Rev. 16:2. Cf. poneria, “iniquity, wickedness.” For its use as a noun see B, No. 2.

3. phaulos (φαῦλος, 5337) primarily denotes “slight, trivial, blown about by every wind”; then, “mean, common, bad,” in the sense of being worthless, paltry or contemptible, belonging to a low order of things; in John 5:29, those who have practiced “evil” things, RV, “ill” (phaula), are set in contrast to those who have done good things (agatha); the same contrast is presented in Rom. 9:11 and 2 Cor. 5:10, in each of which the most authentic mss. have phaulos for kakos; he who practices “evil” things (RV, “ill”) hates the light, John 3:20; jealousy and strife are accompanied by “every vile deed,” Jas. 3:16. It is used as a noun in Titus 2:8 (see B, No. 4). See BAD, ILL, VILE.¶

B. Nouns.

1. kakia (κακία, 2549), primarily, “badness” in quality (akin to A, No. 1), denotes (a) “wickedness, depravity, malignity,” e.g., Acts 8:22, “wickedness”; Rom. 1:29, “maliciousness”; in Jas. 1:21, KJV, “naughtiness”; (b) “the evil of trouble, affliction,” Matt. 6:34, only, and here alone translated “evil.” See MALICE, MALICIOUSNESS, NAUGHTINESS, WICKEDNESS.

2. poneros (πονηρός, 4190), the adjective (A, No. 2), is used as a noun, (a) of Satan as the “evil” one, Matt. 5:37; 6:13; 13:19, 38; Luke 11:4 (in some texts); John 17:15; Eph. 6:16; 2 Thess. 3:3; 1 John 2:13-14; 3:12; 5:18-19; (b) of human beings, Matt. 5:45; (probably v. 39); 13:49; 22:10; Luke 6:35; 1 Cor. 5:13; (c) neuter, “evil (things),” Matt. 9:4; 12:35; Mark 7:23; Luke 3:19; “that which is evil,” Luke 6:45; Rom. 12:9; Acts 28:21, “harm.”

3. kakon (κακός, 2556), the neuter of A, No. 1, is used with the article, as a noun, e.g., Acts 23:9; Rom. 7:21; Heb. 5:14; in the plural, “evil things,” e.g., 1 Cor. 10:6; 1 Tim. 6:10, “all kinds of evil,” RV.

4. phaulon (φαῦλος, 5337), the neuter of A, No. 3, is used as a noun in Titus 2:8.

5. kakopoios (κακοποιός, 2555), properly the masculine gender of the adjective, denotes an “evil-doer” (kakon, “evil,” poieo, “to do”), 1 Pet. 2:12, 14; 4:15; in some mss.

in 3:16 and John 18:30 (so the KJV).¶ For a synonymous word see Note (1). Cf. the verb below. In the Sept., Prov. 12:4; 24:19. See MALEFACTOR.¶

Notes: (1) Kakourgos, “an evil-worker” (kakon, “evil,” ergon, “a work”), is translated “evil-doer” in 2 Tim. 2:9, KJV (RV, “malefactor”). Cf. Luke 23:32-33, 39.¶

(2) Adikema, “an injustice” (a, negative, *dikaio*s, “just”), is translated “evil-doing,” in Acts 24:20, KJV, RV, “wrong-doing.” See INIQUITY, WRONG.

C. Verbs.

1. kakoo (κακόω, 2559), “to ill-treat” (akin to A, No. 1), is rendered “to entreat evil” in Acts 7:6, 19; “made (them) evil affected,” 14:2. See AFFECT, AFFLICT, HARM, HURT, VEX.

2. kakopoieo (κακοποιέω, 2554) signifies “to do evil” (cf. B, No. 5), Mark 3:4 (RV, “to do harm”); so, Luke 6:9; in 3 John 11, “doeth evil”; in 1 Pet. 3:17, “evil doing.” See HARM.¶

Note: Cf. kakologeo, “to speak evil” (see CURSE, SPEAK); kakopatheo, “to endure evil” (see ENDURE, SUFFER); kakopatheia, “suffering affliction” (see SUFFER); kakoucheo, “to suffer adversity” (see SUFFER).

D. Adverb.

kakos (κακῶς, 2560), “badly, evilly,” akin to A, No. 1, is used in the physical sense, “to be sick,” e.g., Matt. 4:24; Mark 1:32, 34; Luke 5:31 (see DISEASE). In Matt. 21:41 this adverb is used with the adjective, “He will miserably destroy those miserable men,” more lit., “He will evilly destroy those men (evil as they are),” with stress on the adjective; (b) in the moral sense, “to speak evilly,” John 18:23; Acts 23:5; to ask evilly, Jas. 4:3. See AMISS, GRIEVOUSLY, SICK, SORE.

EVIL SPEAKING

1. blasphemia (βλασφημία, 988) is translated “evil speaking” in Eph. 4:31, KJV (RV, railing). See BLASPHEMY.

2. katalalia (καταλαλία, 2636), “evil speaking, 1 Pet. 2:1; see BACKBITING.

EXACT (Verb)

1. prasso (πράσσω, 4238), “to do, to practice,” also has the meaning of “transacting,” or “managing in the matter of payment, to exact, to get money from a person,” Luke 3:13 (RV, “extort”). Cf. the English idiom “to do a person in.” This verb is rendered “required,” in 19:23.

2. sukophanteo (συκοφαντέω, 4811), “to accuse falsely,” Luke 3:14, has its other meaning, “to exact wrongfully,” in 19:8. See ACCUSE.¶

EXACT, EXACTLY

akribesteron (ἀκριβέστερον, 197), the comparative degree of akribos, “accurately, carefully,” is used in Acts 18:26, KJV, “more perfectly,” RV, “more carefully”; 23:15, KJV, “more perfectly,” RV, “more exactly”; so v. 20; 24:22, KJV, “more perfect,” RV, “more exact” (lit., “knowing more exactly”). See CAREFULLY, PERFECTLY.¶

Cf. akribeia, “precision, exactness,” Acts 22:3,¶ and akriboo, “to learn carefully, to enquire with exactness,” Matt. 2:7, 16.¶

EXALT, EXALTED

A. Verbs.

1. hupsoo (ὑψόω, 5312), “to lift up” (akin to hupsos, “height”), is used (a) literally of the “lifting” up of Christ in His crucifixion, John 3:14; 8:28; 12:32, 34; illustratively, of the serpent of brass, John 3:14; (b) figuratively, of spiritual privileges bestowed on a city, Matt. 11:23; Luke 10:15; of “raising” to dignity and happiness, Luke 1:52; Acts 13:17; of haughty self-exaltation, and, contrastingly, of being “raised” to honor, as a result of self-humbling, Matt. 23:12; Luke 14:11; 18:14; of spiritual “uplifting” and revival, Jas. 4:10; 1 Pet. 5:6; of bringing into the blessings of salvation through the gospel, 2 Cor. 11:7; (c) with a combination of the literal and metaphorical, of the “exaltation” of Christ by God the Father, Acts 2:33; 5:31. See LIFT.¶

2. hyperupsoo (ὑπερυψόω, 5251), “to exalt highly” (hyper, “over,” and No. 1), is used of Christ, as in No. 1, (c), in Phil. 2:9.¶

3. epairo (ἐπαίρω, 1869), “to lift up” (epi, “up,” airo, “to raise”), is said (a) literally, of a sail, Acts 27:40; hands, Luke 24:50; 1 Tim. 2:8; heads, Luke 21:28; eyes, Matt. 17:8, etc.; (b) metaphorically, of “exalting” oneself, being “lifted up” with pride, 2 Cor. 10:5; 11:20. See LIFT.

4. hyperairo (ὑπεραίρωμαι, 5229), “to raise over” (hyper, “above,” and airo, see No. 3), is used in the middle voice, of “exalting” oneself exceedingly, 2 Cor. 12:7; 2 Thess. 2:4.¶

B. Adjective.

hupselos (ὑψηλός, 5308), “high, lofty,” is used metaphorically in Luke 16:15, as a noun with the article, RV, “that which is exalted,” KJV, “that which is highly esteemed.” See ESTEEM, HIGH.

Note: For Jas. 1:9, RV, “in his high estate,” see ESTATE, No. 3.

EXAMINATION, EXAMINE

A. Noun.

anakrisis (ἀνάκρισις, 351), from ana, “up or through,” and krino, “to distinguish,” was a legal term among the Greeks, denoting the preliminary investigation for gathering evidence for the information of the judges, Acts 25:26.¶

B. Verbs.

1. anakrino (ἀνακρίνω, 350), “to examine, investigate,” is used (a) of searching or enquiry, Acts 17:11; 1 Cor. 9:3; 10:25, 27; (b) of reaching a result of the enquiry, judging, 1 Cor. 2:14-15; 4:3-4; 14:24; (c) forensically, of examining by torture, Luke 23:14; Acts 4:9; 12:19; 24:8; 28:18. See ASK, DISCERN, JUDGE, SEARCH.¶

2. anetazo (ἀνετάζω, 426), “to examine judicially” (ana, “up,” etazo, “to test”), is used in Acts 22:24, 29.¶ Cf. the synonymous verb exetazo, “to search” or “enquire carefully,” Matt. 2:8; 10:11; John 21:12.¶

3. dokimazo (δοκιμάζω, 1381), “to prove, test, approve,” is rendered “examine” in 1 Cor. 11:28, KJV (RV, prove). See APPROVE.

4. peirazo (πειράζω, 3985), “to tempt, try,” is rendered “examine” in 2 Cor. 13:5, KJV (RV, try). See GO, PROVE, TEMPT, TRY.

EXAMPLE

A. Nouns.

1. deigma (δείγμα, 1164), primarily “a thing shown, a specimen” (akin to deiknumi, “to show”), denotes an “example” given as a warning, Jude 7.¶

Note: The corresponding word in 2 Pet. 2:6 is No. 2.

2. hupodeigma (ὑπόδειγμα, 5262): see ENSAMPLE, No. 3.

3. tupos (τύπος, 5179): see ENSAMPLE, No. 1.

4. hupogrammos (ὑπογραμμός, 5261), lit., “an under-writing” (from hupographo, “to write under, to trace letters” for copying by scholars); hence, “a writing-copy, an example,” 1 Pet. 2:21, said of what Christ left for believers, by His sufferings (not expiatory, but exemplary), that they might “follow His steps.”

B. Verbs.

1. deigmatizo (δειγματίζω, 1165), “to make a show of, to expose” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “to make a public example,” in Matt. 1:19 (some mss. have the strengthened form paradeigmatizo here; “put ... to an open shame,” Heb. 6:6,¶); in Col. 2:15, “made a show of.”¶

2. hupodeiknumi (ὑποδείκνυμι, 5263), primarily, “to show secretly” (hupo, “under,” deiknumi, “to show”), “to show by tracing out” (akin to A, No. 2); hence, “to teach, to show by example,” Acts 20:35, RV, “I gave you an example,” for KJV, “I showed you.” Elsewhere, “to warn,” Matt. 3:7; Luke 3:7; 12:5, RV, for KJV, “forewarn”; “to show,” Luke 6:47; Acts 9:16. See FOREWARN, SHOW, WARN.¶

EXCEED, EXCEEDING, EXCEEDINGLY

A. Verbs.

1. hyperballo (ὑπερβάλλω, 5235), “to throw over or beyond” (hyper, “over,” ballo, “to throw”), is translated “exceeding” in 2 Cor. 9:14; Eph. 1:19; 2:7; “excelleth” (RV, “surpasseth”) in 2 Cor. 3:10; “passeth” in Eph. 3:19 (“surpasseth” might be the meaning here). See EXCEL, SURPASS.¶ Cf. hyperbole, under EXCEL, B, No. 1.

2. perisseuo (περισσεύω, 4052), “to be over and above, over a certain number or measure, to abound, exceed,” is translated “exceed” in Matt. 5:20; 2 Cor. 3:9. See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 1.

B. Adverbs and Adverbial Phrases.

1. lian (λίαν, 3029), “very, exceedingly,” is translated “exceeding” in Matt. 2:16 (for v. 10, see No. 2); 4:8; 8:28; Mark 9:3; Luke 23:8. See GREATLY (GREAT), SORE, VERY.

2. sphodra (σφόδρα, 4970), properly the neuter plural of sphodros, “excessive, violent” (from a root indicating restlessness), signifies “very, very much, exceedingly,” Matt. 2:10; 17:6, “sore”; 17:23; 18:31, RV, “exceeding,” for KJV, “very”; 19:25; 26:22;

27:54, RV, “exceedingly” for KJV, “greatly”; Mark 16:4, “very”; Luke 18:23 (ditto); Acts 6:7, RV, “exceedingly,” for KJV, greatly; Rev. 16:21. See GREATLY, SORE, VERY.¶

3. sphodros (σφοδρῶς, 4971), “exceedingly” (see No. 2), is used in Acts 27:18.¶

4. perissos (περισσῶς, 4057) is used in Matt. 27:23, RV, “exceedingly,” for KJV, “the more”; Mark 10:26, RV, “exceedingly,” for KJV, “out of measure”; in Acts 26:11, “exceedingly.” In Mark 15:14, the most authentic mss. have this word (RV, “exceedingly”) for No. 5 (KJV, “the more exceedingly”) See MORE.¶

5. perissoteros (περισσοτέρως, 4056), the comparative degree of No. 4, “abundantly, exceedingly” (akin to A, No. 2), Gal. 1:14, “more exceedingly”; 1 Thess. 2:17, RV, “the more exceedingly,” for KJV, “the more abundantly; see ABUNDANCE, D, No. 2.

6. huperekperissou (χόρτος, 5528 and χόρτος, 1537 and χόρτος, 4053) denotes “superabundantly” (hyper, “over,” ek, “from,” perissos, “abundant”); in 1 Thess. 3:10, “exceedingly”; Eph. 3:20, “exceeding abundantly.”¶ Another form, huperekperissos (hyper, “and” ek and No. 4), is used in 1 Thess. 5:13 (in the best mss.), “exceeding highly.”¶ Cf. the verb hyperperisseuo, “to abound more exceedingly,” Rom. 5:21; in 2 Cor. 7:4, “I overflow (with joy),” RV, for KJV, “I am exceeding (joyful).” See ABUNDANT, D, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In Acts 7:20, the phrase “exceeding fair” (asteios) is, lit., “fair to God” (see marg.). (2) In Matt. 26:7, barutimos (barus, “weighty,” time “value”), is rendered “exceeding precious,” RV, for KJV, “very precious.” (3) In Mark 4:41, “they feared exceedingly” is, lit., “they feared a great fear.” See FEAR. (4) For other combinations of the adverb, see GLAD, GREAT, JOYFUL, SORROWFUL, SORRY.

EXCEL, EXCELLENCY, EXCELLENT

A. Verbs.

1. hyperballo (ὑπερβάλλω, 5235), lit., “to throw over: see EXCEED, No. 1.

2. perisseuo (περισσεύω, 4052), “to be over and above,” is rendered “abound in 1 Cor. 14:12, RV, for KJV, excel. See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 1, and EXCEED, A, No. 2.

3. huperecho (ὑπερέχω, 5242), lit., “to have over” (hyper, “over,” echo, “to have”), is translated “excellency” in Phil. 3:8, “the surpassingness” (Moule); the phrase could be translated “the surpassing thing, which consists in the knowledge of Christ Jesus,” and this is the probable meaning. This verb is used three times in Philipppians, here and in 2:3; 4:7. See also Rom. 13:1; 1 Pet. 2:13. See BETTER, No. 4.¶

4. diaphero (διαφέρω, 1308), “to differ,” is used in the neuter plural of the present participle with the article, in Phil. 1:10, “the things that are excellent” (marg., “the things that differ”), lit., “the excellent things.” See DIFFER.

B. Nouns.

1. hyperbole (ὑπερβολή, 5236), lit., “a throwing beyond,” hence, “a surpassing, an excellence,” is translated “excellency” in 2 Cor. 4:7, KJV; RV, “exceeding greatness.” It always betokens preeminence. It is used with kata, “according to,” in the phrase kath hyperbolen, signifying “beyond measure, exceedingly,” Rom. 7:13, “exceeding sinful”; in 2 Cor. 1:8, RV, “exceedingly,” for KJV, “out of measure”; in Gal. 1:13, “beyond measure”; in 1 Cor. 12:31, “more excellent.” In 2 Cor. 4:17, there is an expanded phrase kath hyperbolen eis hyperbolen, lit., “according to a surpassing unto a surpassing,” RV, “more and more exceedingly,” which corrects the KJV, “a far more exceeding”; the phrase refers to “worketh,” showing the surpassing degree of its operation, and not to the noun “weight” (nor does it qualify, “eternal”). In 2 Cor. 12:7, the RV has “exceeding greatness,” the KJV, “abundance.” See ABUNDANCE.¶

2. huperoche (ὑπεροχή, 5247), akin to A, No. 3, strictly speaking, “the act of overhanging” (hyper, and echo, “to hold”) or “the thing which overhangs,” hence, “superiority, preeminence,” is translated “excellency (of speech)” in 1 Cor. 2:1; elsewhere, in 1 Tim. 2:2, RV, “high place,” for KJV, “authority.” See AUTHORITY, PLACE.¶

Note: In 1 Pet. 2:9 RV renders arete (virtue) “excellencies.”

C. Adjectives.

1. megaloprepes (μεγαλοπρεπής, 3169) signifies “magnificent, majestic, that which is becoming to a great man” (from megas, “great,” and prepo, “to be fitting or becoming”), in 2 Pet. 1:17, “excellent.”¶

2. diaphoroteros (διάφορος, 1313*), comparative degree of diaphoros, “excellent,” akin to A, No. 4, is used twice, in Heb. 1:4, “more excellent (name),” and 8:6, “more excellent (ministry).”¶ For the positive degree see Rom. 12:6; Heb. 9:10. See under DIFFER.¶

3. pleion (πλείων, 4119), “more, greater,” the comparative degree of polus, “much,” is translated “more excellent” in Heb. 11:4, of Abel’s sacrifice; pleion is used sometimes of that which is superior by reason of inward worth, cf. 3:3, “more (honor)”; in Matt. 6:25, of the life in comparison with meat.

4. kratistos (κράτιστος, 2903), “mightiest, noblest, best,” the superlative degree of kratus, “strong” (cf. kratos, “strength”), is used as a title of honor and respect, “most excellent,” Luke 1:3 (Theophilus was quite possibly a man of high rank); Acts 23:26; 24:3 and 26:25, RV, for KJV, “most noble.”¶

Note: The phrase kath hyperbolen (for which see B, No. 1) is translated “more excellent” in 1 Cor. 12:31.

EXCEPT, EXCEPTED

Note: For the negative conjunctions ean me and ei me, see † p. 1.

1. ektos (ἐκτός, 1622), an adverb, lit., “outside,” is used with ei me, as an extended conjunction signifying “except”; so in 1 Cor. 14:5; in 15:2, RV, for KJV, “unless”; in 1 Tim. 5:19, RV, for KJV, “but.” It has the force of a preposition in the sense of (a) “outside of,” in 1 Cor. 6:18, “without; in 2 Cor. 12:2, “out of”; (b) “besides,” except, in Acts 26:22, RV, “but,” for KJV, “other than”; in 1 Cor. 15:27 “excepted.” For its use as a noun see Matt. 23:26, “(the) outside.” See OTHER, OUT OF, OUTSIDE, UNLESS, WITHOUT.¶

2. parektos (παρεκτός, 3924), a strengthened form of No. 1 (para, beside), is used (a) as an adverb, signifying “without,” 2 Cor. 11:28; lit., “the things without,” i.e., the things happening without; (b) as a preposition signifying “except”; in Matt. 5:32, “saving”; in Acts 26:29, except.¶

Note: In Matt. 19:9, the KJV and RV, translating the mss. which have the negative me, followed by epi, render it “except for.” The authorities mentioned in the RV marg. have parektos, followed by logou, i.e., “saving for the cause of.”

3. plen (πλήν, 4133), an adverb, most frequently signifying “yet, howbeit,” or “only,” sometimes has the meaning “except (that),” “save (that),” Acts 20:23; Phil. 1:18, RV, “only that,” for KJV, “notwithstanding.” It is also used as a preposition, signifying “except, save,” Mark 12:32, “but”; John 8:10, “but” (KJV only); Acts 8:1, “except”; Acts 15:28, “than”; 27:22, “but (only).”

EXCESS

1. akrasia (ἀκρασία, 192) lit. denotes “want of strength” (a, negative, kratos, “strength”), hence, “want of self-control, incontinence,” Matt. 23:25, “excess”; 1 Cor. 7:5, “incontinency.”¶ Cf. akrates, “powerless, incontinent,” 2 Tim. 3:3, RV, “without self-control.”¶

2. anachusis (ἀνάχυσις, 401), lit., “a pouring out, overflowing” (akin to anacheo, “to pour out”), is used metaphorically in 1 Pet. 4:4, “excess,” said of the riotous conduct described in v. 3.¶

Notes: (1) Asotia denotes “prodigality, profligacy, riot” (from a, negative, and sozo, “to save”); it is translated “riot” in Eph. 5:18, RV, for KJV, “excess”; in Titus 1:6 and 1 Pet. 4:4, “riot” in KJV and RV. See RIOT.¶ Cf. the adverb asotos, “wastefully,” “in riotous living,” Luke 15:13.¶ A synonymous noun is aselgeia, “lasciviousness, outrageous conduct, wanton violence.”

(2) In 1 Pet. 4:3, oinophlugia, “drunkenness, debauchery” (oinos, “wine,” phluo, “to bubble up, overflow”), is rendered “excess of wine,” KJV (RV, “winebibbings”).¶

EXCHANGE

antallagma (ἀντάλλαγμα, 465), “the price received as an equivalent of, or in exchange for, an article, an exchange” (anti, “instead of,” allasso, “to change,” akin to allos, “another”), hence denotes the price at which the “exchange” is effected, Matt. 16:26; Mark 8:37.¶ Connected with this is the conception of atonement, as in the word lutron, “a ransom.” Cf allagma in the Sept., e.g., in Isa. 43:3.

B. Verb.

metallasso (μεταλλάσσω, 3337) denotes (a) “to exchange,” meta, “with,” implying change, and allasso (see A), Rom. 1:25, of “exchanging” the truth for a lie, RV, for KJV, “changed”; (b) “to change,” v. 26, a different meaning from that in the preceding verse. See CHANGE.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 2:7, 20.¶

Note: In Luke 24:17, “what communications are these that ye have one with another?” the verb antiballo, “to throw in turn, to exchange,” is used of conversation, lit., “what words are these that ye exchange one with another?”

For EXCHANGERS see BANKERS

EXCLUDE

ekkleio (ἐκκλείω, 1576), “to shut out” (ek, “from,” kleio, “to shut”), is said of glorying in works as a means of justification, Rom. 3:27; of Gentiles, who by Judaism would be “excluded” from salvation and Christian fellowship, Gal. 4:17.¶

EXCUSE

prophasis (πρόφασις, 4392), “a pretense, pretext” (from pro, “before,” and phemi, “to say”), is translated “excuse” in John 15:22, RV, for KJV, “cloke”; “cloke in 1 Thess. 2:5. KJV and RV. See CLOKE, PRETENCE, SHOW (Noun).

B. Adjective (negative).

anapologetos (ἀναπολόγητος, 379), “without excuse, inexcusable” (a, negative, n, euphonic, and apologeomai, see C, No. 1, below), is used, Rom. 1:20, “without excuse,” of those who reject the revelation of God in creation; 2:1, RV, for KJV, “inexcusable,” of the Jew who judges the Gentile.¶

C. Verbs.

1. apologeomai (ἀπολογέομαι, 626), lit., “to speak oneself off,” hence “to plead for oneself,” and so, in general, (a) “to defend,” as before a tribunal; in Rom. 2:15, RV, “excusing them,” means one “excusing” others (not themselves); the preceding phrase “one with another” signifies one person with another, not one thought with another; it may be paraphrased, “their thoughts with one another, condemning or else excusing one another”; conscience provides a moral standard by which men judge one another; (b) “to excuse” oneself, 2 Cor. 12:19; cf. B. See ANSWER.

2. paraiteomai (παραιτέομαι, 3868) is used in the sense of “begging off, asking to be excused or making an excuse,” in Luke 14:18 (twice) and v. 19. In the first part of v. 18 the verb is used in the middle voice, “to make excuse” (acting in imagined self-interest); in the latter part and in v. 19 it is in the passive voice, “have me excused.”

EXECUTE

1. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do, to make,” is thrice rendered “execute,” of the Lord’s authority and acts in “executing” judgment, (a) of His authority as the One to whom judgment is committed, John 5:27; (b) of the judgment which He will mete out to all transgressors at His second advent, Jude 15; (c) of the carrying out of His Word (not “work,” as in the KJV) in the earth, especially regarding the nation of Israel, the mass being rejected, the remnant saved, Rom. 9:28. That He will “execute His Word finishing and cutting it short,” is expressive of the summary and decisive character of His action. See DO.

2. hierateuo (ἱερατεύω, 2407), “to be a priest, to officiate as such,” is translated “executed the priest’s office,” in Luke 1:8.¶ It occurs frequently in the Sept., and in inscriptions. Cf. hierateuma, “priesthood,” 1 Pet. 2:5, 9,¶ hierateia, “a priest’s office,” Luke 1:9; Heb. 7:5,¶ hiereus, “a priest,” and hieros, “sacred.”

For EXECUTIONER, Mark 6:27, see GUARD, A, No. 2
EXERCISE

A. Verbs.

1. gumnazo (γυμνάζω, 1128) primarily signifies “to exercise naked” (from gumnos, “naked”); then, generally, “to exercise, to train the body or mind” (Eng., “gymnastic”), 1 Tim. 4:7, with a view to godliness; Heb. 5:14, of the senses, so as to discern good and evil; 12:11, of the effect of chastening, the spiritual “exercise producing the fruit of righteousness”; 2 Pet. 2:14, of certain evil teachers with hearts “exercised in covetousness,” RV.¶

2. askeo (ἀσκέω, 778) signifies “to form by art, to adorn, to work up raw material with skill”; hence, in general, “to take pains, endeavor, exercise by training or discipline,” with a view to a conscience void of offense, Acts 24:16.¶

3. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” is translated “exerciseth” in Rev. 13:12, said of the authority of the second “Beast.” Cf. EXECUTE. See DO.

Notes: The following verbs contain in translation the word “exercise” but belong to other headings: exousiazō, “to exercise authority over,” Luke 22:25 (exousia, “authority”); in the first part of this verse, the verb kurieuo, “to be lord,” is translated “exercise lordship,” KJV (RV, “have lordship”); katexousiazō, a strengthened form of the preceding (kata, “down,” intensive), Matt. 20:25; Mark 10:42, “exercise authority” (in the first part of these verses the synonymous verb katakurieuo, is rendered “lord it,” RV, for KJV, “exercise dominion,” and “exercise lordship,” respectively); episkopeo, “to look over or upon” (epi, “over,” skopeo, “to look”), “to care for,” 1 Pet. 5:2 (absent in some mss.), RV, “exercising the oversight,” for KJV “taking, etc.”

B. Noun.

gymnasia (γυμνασία, 1129) primarily denotes “gymnastic exercise” (akin to A, No. 1), 1 Tim. 4:8, where the immediate reference is probably not to mere physical training for games but to discipline of the body such as that to which the apostle refers in 1 Cor. 9:27, though there may be an allusion to the practices of asceticism.

EXHORT, EXHORTATION

A. Verbs.

1. parakaleo (παρακαλέω, 3870), primarily, “to call to a person” (para, “to the side,” kaleo, “to call”), denotes (a) “to call on, entreat”; see BESEECH; (b) to admonish, exhort, to urge one to pursue some course of conduct (always prospective, looking to the future, in contrast to the meaning to comfort, which is retrospective, having to do with trial experienced), translated “exhort” in the RV of Phil. 4:2; 1 Thess. 4:10; Heb. 13:19, 22, for KJV, “beseech”; in 1 Tim. 5:1, for KJV, “intreat”; in 1 Thess. 5:11, for KJV, “comfort”; “exhorted” in 2 Cor. 8:6 and 12:18, for KJV, “desired”; in 1 Tim. 1:3, for KJV, “besought. See BESEECH.

2. paraineo (παραινέω, 3867), primarily, “to speak of near” (para, “near,” and aineo, “to tell of, speak of,” then, “to recommend”), hence, “to advise, exhort, warn,” is used in Acts 27:9, “admonished,” and v. 22, “I exhort.” See ADMONISH.¶

3. protrepo (προτρέπομαι, 4389), lit., “to turn forward, propel” (pro, “before,” trepo, “to turn”); hence, “to impel morally, to urge forward, encourage,” is used in Acts 18:27, RV, “encouraged him” (Apollos), with reference to his going into Achaia; KJV, “exhorting the disciples”; while the encouragement was given to Apollos, a letter was written to the disciples in Achaia to receive him.¶

paraklesis (παράκλησις, 3874), akin to A, No. 1, primarily “a calling to one’s side,” and so “to one’s aid,” hence denotes (a) an appeal, “entreaty,” 2 Cor. 8:4; (b) encouragement, “exhortation,” e.g., Rom. 12:8; in Acts 4:36, RV, “exhortation,” for KJV, “consolation”; (c) “consolation and comfort,” e.g., Rom. 15:4. See COMFORT. Cf.

EXIST

huparcho (ὑπάρχω, 5225), primarily, “to make a beginning” (hupo, “under,” arche, “a beginning”), denotes “to be, to be in existence,” involving an “existence” or condition both previous to the circumstances mentioned and continuing after it. This is important in Phil. 2:6, concerning the deity of Christ. The phrase “being (existing) in the form (morphe, the essential and specific form and character) of God,” carries with it the two facts of the antecedent Godhood of Christ, previous to His incarnation, and the continuance of His Godhood at and after the event of His Birth (see Gifford, on the Incarnation, pp. 11, sqq.). It is translated “exist” in 1 Cor. 11:18, RV, for KJV, “there be.” Cf. Luke 16:14; 23:50; Acts 2:30; 3:2; 17:24; 22:3 etc. See BEING, GOODS, LIVE, POSSESS, SUBSTANCE.

EXORCIST

exorkistes (ἐξορκιστής, 1845) denotes (a) “one who administers an oath”; (b) “an exorcist” (akin to exorkizo, “to adjure,” from orkos, “an oath”), “one who employs a formula of conjuration for the expulsion of demons,” Acts 19:13. The practice of “exorcism” was carried on by strolling Jews, who used their power in the recitation of particular names.¶

EXPECT, EXPECTATION

A. Verbs.

---

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

1. ekdechomai (ἐκδέχομαι, 1551), lit. and primarily, “to take or receive from” (ek, “from,” dechomai, “to receive”), hence denotes “to await, expect,” the only sense of the word in the NT; it suggests a reaching out in readiness to receive something; “expecting,” Heb. 10:13; “expect,” 1 Cor. 16:11, RV (KJV, “look for”); to wait for, John 5:3 (KJV only); Acts 17:16; 1 Cor. 11:33, RV (KJV, “tarry for”); Jas. 5:7; to wait, 1 Pet. 3:20 in some mss.; “looked for,” Heb. 11:10. Cf. B, No. 1. See LOOK, TARRY, WAIT.¶

2. prosdokao (προσδοκάω, 4328), “to watch toward, to look for, expect” (pros, “toward,” dokeo, “to think”: dokao “does not exist”), is translated “expecting” in Matt. 24:50 and Luke 12:46, RV (KJV, “looketh for”); Luke 3:15, “were in expectation”; Acts 3:5, “expecting” (KJV and RV); 28:6 (twice), “expected that,” RV (KJV, “looked when”) and “when they were long in expectation” (KJV, “after they had looked a great while”). See LOOK, TARRY, WAIT.

B. Nouns.

1. apokaradokia (ἀποκαραδοκία, 603), primarily “a watching with outstretched head” (apo, “from,” kara, “the head,” and dokeo, “to look, to watch”), signifies “strained expectancy, eager longing,” the stretching forth of the head indicating an “expectation” of something from a certain place, Rom. 8:19 and Phil. 1:20. The prefix apo suggests “abstraction and absorption” (Lightfoot), i.e., abstraction from anything else that might engage the attention, and absorption in the object expected “till the fulfillment is realized” (Alford). The intensive character of the noun, in comparison with No. 2 (below), is clear from the contexts; in Rom. 8:19 it is said figuratively of the creation as waiting for the revealing of the sons of God (“waiting” translates the verb apekdechomai, a strengthened form of A, No. 1; see WAIT FOR). In Phil. 1:20 the apostle states it as his “earnest expectation” and hope, that, instead of being put to shame, Christ shall be magnified in his body, “whether by life, or by death,” suggesting absorption in the person of Christ, abstraction from aught that hinders.¶

2. prosdokia (προσδοκία, 4329), “a watching for, expectation” (akin to A, No. 2, which see), is used in the NT only of the “expectation” of evil, Luke 21:26, RV, “expectation,” KJV, “looking for,” regarding impending calamities; Acts 12:11, “the expectation” of the execution of Peter.¶

3. ekdoche (ἐκδοχή, 1561), primarily “a receiving from,” hence, “expectation” (akin to A, No. 1), is used in Heb. 10:27 (RV, “expectation”; KJV, “looking for”), of judgment.

EXPEDIENT

sumphero (συμφέρω, 4851) signifies (a), transitively, lit., “to bring together,” (sun, “with,” phero, “to bring”), Acts 19:19; (b) intransitively, “to be an advantage, profitable, expedient” (not merely ‘convenient’); it is used mostly impersonally, “it is (it was) expedient”; so in Matt. 19:10, RV (negatively), KJV, “it is (not) good”; John 11:50; 16:7; 18:14; 1 Cor. 6:12; 10:23; 2 Cor. 8:10; 12:1; “it is profitable,” Matt. 5:29-30; 18:6, RV; “was profitable,” Acts 20:20; “to profit withal,” 1 Cor. 12:7; in Heb. 12:10, used in the neuter of the present participle with the article as a noun, “for (our) profit.” See PROFIT.¶

Cf. the adjective sumphoros (or sumpheron), “profitable,” used with the article as a noun, 1 Cor. 7:35; 10:33.¶

For EXPULSED, Acts 13:50, KJV, see CAST, No. 5

EXPERIENCE (without), EXPERIMENT

1. apeiros (ἄπειρος, 552), “without experience” (a, negative, peira, “a trial, experiment”) is used in Heb. 5:13, RV, “without experience,” KJV, “unskillful,” with reference to “the word of righteousness.”¶ In the Sept., Num. 14:23, of youths; Jer. 2:6, of a land, “untried”; Zech. 11:15, of a shepherd.¶

2. dokime (δοκιμή, 1382) means (a) “the process of proving”; it is rendered “experiment” in 2 Cor. 9:13, KJV, RV, “the proving (of you)”; in 8:2, KJV, “trial,” RV, “proof”; (b) “the effect of proving, approval, approvedness,” RV, “probation,” Rom. 5:4 (twice), for KJV, “experience”; KJV and RV, “proof” in 2 Cor. 2:9; 13:3 and Phil. 2:22. See EXPERIENCE, PROOF.¶ Cf. dokimos, “approved,” dokimazo, “to prove, approve”; see APPROVE.

EXPERT

gnostes (γνώστης, 1109), “one who knows” (akin to ginosko, “to know”), denotes “an expert, a connoisseur,” Acts 26:3.¶ Cf. gnostos, “known.”

EXPIRE

Note: In Acts 7:30, the KJV “were expired” translates the verb pleroo, “to fulfill” (RV). See FULFILL. In Rev. 20:7, the KJV “are expired” translates the verb teleo, “to finish” (RV). See FINISH.

EXPLAIN

diasapheo (διασαφένω, 1285), “to make clear, explain fully” (dia “through,” intensive, and saphes, “clear”), is translated “explain” in Matt. 13:36 RV (KJV, “declare”) translates phrazo; in 18:31, “told,” of the account of the unforgiving debtor’s doings given by his fellowservants. The preferable rendering would be “they made clear” or “they explained,” suggesting a detailed explanation of the circumstances.¶

EXPOUND

1. ektithemi (ἐκτίθημι, 1620), “to set out expose” (ek, “out,” tithemi, “to place”), is used (a) literally, Acts 7:21; (b) metaphorically, in the middle voice, to set forth, “expound,” of circumstances, Acts 11:4; of the way of God, 18:26; of the kingdom of God, 28:23.¶

2. epiluo (ἐπιλύω, 1956), primarily, “to loose, release,” a strengthened form of luo, “to loose,” signifies “to solve, explain, expound,” Mark 4:34, “expounded”; in Acts 19:39, of settling a controversy, RV, “it shall be settled,” for KJV, “it shall be determined.” See DETERMINE.¶ Cf. epilusis, “an interpretation,” 2 Pet. 1:20.¶

3. diermeneuo (διερμηνεύω, 1329), “to interpret fully” (dia “through,” intensive, hermeneuo, “to interpret”); (Eng., “hermeneutics”), is translated, “He expounded” in

Luke 24:27, KJV, RV, “interpreted”; in Acts 9:36, “by interpretation,” lit., “being interpreted”; see also 1 Cor. 12:30; 14:5, 13, 27. See INTERPRET.¶

For EXPRESS, Heb. 1:3, KJV, see IMAGE, No.2

EXPRESSLY

rhotos (ῥητῶς, 4490), meaning “in stated terms” (from rhotos, “stated, specified”; from rheo, or ero, “to say”; cf. rhema, “a word”), is used in 1 Tim. 4:1, “expressly.”¶

EXTORT, EXTORTION, EXTORTIONER

A. Verb.

prasso (πράσσω, 4238), “to practice,” has the special meaning “extort” in Luke 3:13, RV (KJV, “exact”). In Luke 19:23 it is translated “required”; it may be that the master, in addressing the slothful servant, uses the word “extort” or “exact” (as in 3:13), in accordance with the character attributed to him by the servant.

B. Nouns.

1. harpagē (ἄρπαγή, 724) denotes “pillage, plundering, robbery, extortion” (akin to harpazo, “to seize, carry off by force,” and harpagmos, “a thing seized, or the act of seizing”; from the root arp, seen in Eng., “rapacious”; an associated noun, with the same spelling, denoted a rake, or hook for drawing up a bucket); it is translated “extortion” in Matt. 23:25; Luke 11:39, RV, KJV, “ravening”; Heb. 10:34, “spoiling. See RAVENING, SPOILING.¶ Cf. c. below.

2. pleonexia (πλεονεξία, 4124), “covetousness, desire for advantage,” is rendered “extortion” in 2 Cor. 9:5, RV (KJV and RV marg., “covetousness”). See COVET.

C. Adjective.

harpax (ἄρπαξ, 727), “rapacious” (akin to No. 1), is translated as a noun, “extortioners,” in Luke 18:11; 1 Cor. 5:10-11; 6:10; in Matt. 7:15 “ravening” (of wolves).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:27.¶

EYE

1. ophthalmos (ὀφθαλμός, 3788), akin to opsis, “sight,” probably from a root signifying “penetration, sharpness” (Curtius, Gk. Etym.) (cf. Eng., “ophthalmia,” etc.). is used (a) of the physical organ, e.g., Matt. 5:38; of restoring sight, e.g., Matt. 20:33; of God’s power of vision, Heb. 4:13; 1 Pet. 3:12; of Christ in vision, Rev. 1:14; 2:18; 19:12; of the Holy Spirit in the unity of Godhood with Christ, Rev. 5:6; (b) metaphorically, of ethical qualities, evil, Matt. 6:23; Mark 7:22 (by metonymy, for envy); singleness of motive, Matt. 6:22; Luke 11:34; as the instrument of evil desire, “the principal avenue of temptation,” 1 John 2:16; of adultery, 2 Pet. 2:14; (c) metaphorically, of mental vision, Matt. 13:15; John 12:40; Rom. 11:8; Gal. 3:1, where the metaphor of the “evil eye” is altered to a different sense from that of bewitching (the posting up or placarding of an “eye” was used as a charm, to prevent mischief); by gospel-preaching Christ had been, so to speak, placarded before their “eyes”; the question may be paraphrased, “What evil teachers have been malignly fascinating you?”; Eph. 1:18, of the “eyes of the heart,” as a means of knowledge.

2. omma (ὄμμα, 3659), “sight,” is used in the plural in Matt. 20:34 (No. 1 is used in v. 33); Mark 8:23 (No. 1 is used in v. 25). The word is more poetical in usage than No. 1, and the writers may have changed the word with a view to distinguishing the simple desire of the blind man from the tender act of the Lord Himself.¶

3. trumalia (τρυμαλία, 5168) is used of the “eye” of a needle, Mark 10:25 (from trume, “a hole,” truo, “to wear away”).¶ Cf. trema, “a hole, perforation,” Matt. 19:24 (some texts have trupema, “a hole,” from trupao, “to bore a hole”) and Luke 18:25, as in the most authentic mss. (some texts have trumalia here).¶

monophthalmos (μονόφθαλμος, 3442), “oneeyed, deprived of one eye” (monos, “only,” and No. 1, above), is used in the Lord’s warning in Matt. 18:9; Mark 9:47.¶

EYE-SALVE

kollourion (κολλούριον, 2854), primarily a diminutive of kollura, and denoting “a coarse bread roll” (as in the Sept. of 1 Kings 12: after v. 24, lines 30, 32, 39; Eng. version, 14:3 ¶), hence an “eye-salve,” shaped like a roll, Rev. 3:18, of the true knowledge of one’s condition and of the claims of Christ. The word is doubtless an allusion to the Phrygian powder used by oculists in the famous medical school at Laodicea (Ramsay, Cities and Bishoprics of Phrygia, Vol. 1, p. 52).

EYE-SERVICE

ophthalmodoulia (ὀφθαλμοδουλεία, 3787) denotes “service performed only under the master’s eye” (ophthalmos, “an eye,” doulos, “a slave”), diligently performed when he is looking, but neglected in his absence, Eph. 6:6 and Col. 3:22.¶

EYEWITNESS

1. autoptes (αὐτόπτης, 845) signifies “seeing with one’s own eyes” (autos, “self,” and a form, optano, “to see”), Luke 1:2.¶

2. epoptes (ἐπόπτης, 2030), primarily “an overseer” (epi, “over”), then, a “spectator, an eyewitness” of anything, is used in 2 Pet. 1:16 of those who were present at the transfiguration of Christ. Among the Greeks the word was used of those who had attained to the third grade, the highest, of the Eleusinian mysteries, a religious cult at Eleusis, with its worship, rites, festival and pilgrimages; this brotherhood was open to all Greeks.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 5:1, where it is used of God as the Overseer and Preserver of all things.¶ Cf. epopteuo, “to behold,” 1 Pet. 2:12 and 3:2.¶

FABLE

muthos (μῦθος, 3454) primarily signifies “speech, conversation.” The first syllable comes from a root mu□, signifying “to close, keep secret, be dumb”; whence, muo, “to close” (eyes, mouth) and musterion, “a secret, a mystery”; hence, “a story, narrative, fable, fiction” (Eng., “myth”). The word is used of gnostic errors and of Jewish and profane fables and genealogies, in 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:7; 2 Tim. 4:4; Titus 1:14; of fiction, in 2 Pet. 1:16.¶

Muthos is to be contrasted with aletheia, “truth,” and with logos, “a story, a narrative purporting to set forth facts,” e.g., Matt. 28:15, a “saying” (i.e., an account, story, in which actually there is a falsification of facts); Luke 5:15, RV, “report.”

FACE

1. prosopon (πρόσωπον, 4383) denotes “the countenance,” lit., “the part towards the eyes” (from pros, “towards,” ops, “the eye”), and is used (a) of the “face,” Matt. 6:16-17; 2 Cor. 3:7, 2nd part (KJV, “countenance”); in 2 Cor. 10:7, in the RV, “things that are before your face” (KJV, “outward appearance”), the phrase is figurative of superficial judgment; (b) of the look i.e., the “face,” which by its various movements affords an index of inward thoughts and feelings. e.g., Luke 9:51, 53; 1 Pet. 3:12; (c) the presence of a person, the “face” being the noblest part, e.g., Acts 3:13, RV, “before the face of,” KJV, “in the presence of”; 5:41, “presence”; 2 Cor. 2:10, “person”; 1 Thess. 2:17 (first part), “presence”; 2 Thess. 1:9, RV, “face,” KJV, “presence”; Rev. 12:14, “face”; (d) the person himself, e.g., Gal. 1:22; 1 Thess. 2:17 (second part); (e) the appearance one presents by his wealth or poverty, his position or state, Matt. 22:16; Mark 12:14; Gal. 2:6; Jude 16; (f) the outward appearance of inanimate things, Matt. 16:3; Luke 12:56; 21:35; Acts 17:26.

“To spit in a person’s face” was an expression of the utmost scorn and aversion, e.g., Matt. 26:67 (cf. 27:30; Mark 10:34; Luke 18:32). See APPEARANCE.

2. opsis (ὄψις, 3799) is primarily “the act of seeing”; then, (a) “the face”; of the body of Lazarus, John 11:44; of the “countenance” of Christ in a vision, Rev. 1:16; (b) the “outward appearance” of a person or thing, John 7:24. See APPEARANCE.¶

Note: The phrase “face to face” translates two phrases in Greek: (1) kata prosopon (kata, “over against,” and No. 1), Acts 25:16; (2) stoma pros stoma, lit., “mouth to mouth” (stoma, “a mouth”), 2 John 12; 3 John 14. See MOUTH. (3) For antophthalmo, Acts 27:15, RV has “to face.”

FACTION, FACTIOUS

erithia (or —eia) (ἐριθεία, 2052) denotes “ambition, self-seeking, rivalry,” self-will being an underlying idea in the word; hence it denotes “party-making.” It is derived, not from eris, “strife,” but from erithos, “a hireling”; hence the meaning of “seeking to win followers,” “factions,” so rendered in the RV of 2 Cor. 12:20, KJV, “strifes”; not improbably the meaning here is rivalries, or base ambitions (all the other words in the list express abstract ideas rather than factions); Gal. 5:20 (ditto); Phil. 1:17 (RV; KJV, v. 16, “contention”); 2:3 (KJV, “strife”); Jas. 3:14, 16 (ditto); in Rom. 2:8 it is translated as an adjective, “factious” (KJV, “contentious”). The order “strife, jealousy, wrath, faction,” is the same in 2 Cor. 12:20 and Gal. 5:20. “Faction” is the fruit of jealousy.¶ Cf. the synonymous adjective hairetikos, Titus 3:10, causing division (marg., “factious”), not necessarily “heretical,” in the sense of holding false doctrine.¶

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

FADE (away)

A. Verb.

maraino (μαραίνω, 3133) was used (a) to signify “to quench a fire,” and in the passive voice, of the “dying out of a fire”; hence (b) in various relations, in the active voice, “to quench, waste, wear out”; in the passive, “to waste away,” Jas. 1:11, of the “fading” away of a rich man, as illustrated by the flower of the field.¶ In the Sept., Job 15:30; 24:24.¶

B. Adjectives (negative).

1. amarantos (ἀμάραντος, 263), “unfading” (a, negative, and A, above), whence the “amaranth,” an unfading flower, a symbol of perpetuity (see Paradise Lost, iii. 353), is used in 1 Pet. 1:4 of the believer’s inheritance, “that fadeth not away.” It is found in various writings in the language of the Koine, e.g., on a gladiator’s tomb; and as a proper name (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.).¶

2. amarantinos (ἀμαράντινος, 262) primarily signifies “composed of amaranth” (see No. 1); hence, “unfading,” 1 Pet. 5:4, of the crown of glory promised to faithful elders.¶ Cf. rhodinos, “made of roses” (rhodon, “a rose”).

FAIL

A. Verbs.

1. ekleipo (ἐκλείπω, 1587), “to leave out” (ek, “out,” leipo, “to leave”), used intransitively, means “to leave off, cease, fail”; it is said of the cessation of earthly life, Luke 16:9; of faith, 22:32; of the light of the sun, 23:45 (in the best mss.); of the years of Christ, Heb. 1:12.¶

2. epileipo (ἐπιλείπω, 1952), “not to suffice for a purpose” (epi, over), is said of insufficient time, in Heb. 11:32.¶

3. pipto (πίπτω, 4098), “to fall,” is used of the law of God in its smallest detail, in the sense of losing its authority or ceasing to have force, Luke 16:17. In 1 Cor. 13:8 it is used of love (some mss. have ekpipto, “to fall off”). See FALL.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 13:8, katargeo, “to reduce to inactivity” (see ABOLISH), in the passive voice, “to be reduced to this condition, to be done away,” is translated “shall fail,” KJV. This, however, misses the distinction between what has been previously said of love and what is here said of prophecies (see No. 3); the RV has “shall be done away”; so also as regards knowledge (same verse). (2) In Heb. 12:15, hustereo, “to come behind, fall short, miss,” is rendered “fail” in the KJV, RV, “falleth short.” (3) In Luke 21:26, apopsucho, lit., “to breathe out life,” hence, “to faint,” is translated “hearts failing,” in the KJV, RV, “fainting.” See FAINT.¶

B. Adjective.

anekleiptos (ἀνέκλειπτος, 413), “unfailing” (a, negative, and A, No. 1), is rendered “that faileth not,” in Luke 12:33.¶ In a Greek document dated A.D. 42, some contractors undertake to provide “unfailing” heat for a bath during the current year (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab).¶

FAIN

1. boulomai (βούλωμαι, 1014), “to will deliberately, wish, desire, be minded,” implying the deliberate exercise of volition (contrast No. 3), is translated “would fain” in Philem. 13 (in the best mss.). See DISPOSED.

2. epithumeo (ἐπιθυμέω, 1937), “to set one’s heart upon, desire,” is translated “would fain” in Luke 15:16, of the Prodigal Son. See DESIRE.

3. thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to wish, to design to do anything,” expresses the impulse of the will rather than the intention (see No. 1); the RV translates it “would fain” in Luke 13:31, of Herod’s desire to kill Christ, KJV, “will (kill)”; in 1 Thess. 2:18, of the desire of the missionaries to return to the church in Thessalonica. See DISPOSED.

Note: In Acts 26:28, in Agrippa’s statement to Paul, the RV rendering is “with but little persuasion thou wouldest fain make me a Christian.” The lit. rendering is “with (or in) little (labor or time) thou art persuading me so as to make (me) a Christian.” There is no verb for “wouldest” in the original, but it brings out the sense.

FAINT

1. ekluo (ἐκλύω, 1590) denotes (a) “to loose, release” (ek, “out,” luo, “to loose”); (b) “to unloose,” as a bow-string, “to relax,” and so, “to enfeeble,” and is used in the passive voice with the significance “to be faint, grow weary,” (1) of the body, Matt. 15:32; (some mss. have it in 9:36); Mark 8:3; (2) of the soul, Gal. 6:9 (last clause), in discharging responsibilities in obedience to the Lord; in Heb. 12:3, of becoming weary in the strife against sin; in v. 5, under the chastening hand of God.¶ It expresses the opposite of anazonnumi, “to gird up,” 1 Pet. 1:13.¶

2. enkakeo or ekkakeo (ἐκκακέω, 1573), “to lack courage, lose heart, be fainthearted” (en, “in,” kakos, “base”), is said of prayer, Luke 18:1; of gospel ministry, 2 Cor. 4:1, 16; of the effect of tribulation, Eph. 3:13; as to well doing, 2 Thess. 3:13, “be not weary” (KJV marg., “fain not”). Some mss. have this word in Gal. 6:9 (No. 1).¶

3. kamno (κάμνω, 2577) primarily signified “to work”; then, as the effect of continued labor, “to be weary”; it is used in Heb. 12:3, of becoming “weary” (see also No. 1), RV, “wax not weary”; in Jas. 5:15, of sickness; some mss. have it in Rev. 2:3, KJV, “hast (not) fainted,” RV, “grown weary.” See SICK, WEARY.¶

Note: For apopsucho, Luke 21:26, RV, see FAIL, Note (3).¶

oligopsuchos (ὀλιγόψυχος, 3642), lit., “small-souled” (oligos, “small,” psuche, “the soul”), denotes “despondent”; then, “fainthearted,” 1 Thess. 5:14, RV, for the incorrect KJV, “feeble-minded.” ¶ In the Sept., similarly, in a good sense, Isa. 57:15, “who giveth endurance to the fainthearted,” for RV, “to revive the spirit of the humble”; in a bad sense, Prov. 18:14, “who can endure a fainthearted man?”

FAIR

1. asteios (ἄστειος, 791), lit., “of the city” (from astu, “a city”; like Lat. urbanus, from urbs, “a city”; Eng., “urbane”; similarly, “polite,” from polis, “a town”), hence, “fair, elegant” (used in the papyri writings of clothing), is said of the external form of a child, Acts 7:20, of Moses “(exceeding) fair,” lit., “fair to God”; Heb. 11:23 (RV, “goodly,” KJV, “proper”). See BEAUTIFUL, GOODLY, Note. ¶

2. eudia (εὐδία, 2105) denotes “fair weather,” Matt. 16:2, from eudios, “calm”; from eu, “good,” and dios, “divine,” among the pagan Greeks, akin to the name for the god Zeus, or Jupiter. Some would derive Dios and the Latin deus (god) and dies (day) from a root meaning “bright.” Cf. the Latin sub divo, “under a bright, open sky.” ¶

3. kalos (καλός, 2570), “beautiful, fair, in appearance,” is used as part of the proper name, Fair Havens, Acts 27:8. See BETTER, GOOD.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 16:18 eulogia, which generally signifies “blessing,” is used in its more literal sense, “fair speech,” i.e., a fine style of utterance, giving the appearance of reasonableness.

(2) In Gal. 6:12 the verb euprosopo, “to look well,” lit., “to be fair of face” (eu, “well,” and prosopon, “a face”), signifies “to make a fair or plausible show,” used there metaphorically of making a display of religious zeal.

FAITH

pistis (πίστις, 4102), primarily, “firm persuasion,” a conviction based upon hearing (akin to peitho, “to persuade”), is used in the NT always of “faith in God or Christ, or things spiritual.”

The word is used of (a) trust, e.g., Rom. 3:25 [see Note (4) below]; 1 Cor. 2:5; 15:14, 17; 2 Cor. 1:24; Gal. 3:23 [see Note (5) below]; Phil. 1:25; 2:17; 1 Thess. 3:2; 2 Thess. 1:3; 3:2; (b) trust-worthiness, e.g., Matt. 23:23; Rom. 3:3, RV, “the faithfulness of God”; Gal. 5:22 (RV, “faithfulness”); Titus 2:10, “fidelity”; (c) by metonymy, what is believed, the contents of belief, the “faith,” Acts 6:7; 14:22; Gal. 1:23; 3:25 [contrast 3:23, under (a)]; 6:10; Phil. 1:27; 1 Thess. 3:10; Jude 3, 20 (and perhaps 2 Thess. 3:2); (d) a ground for “faith,” an assurance, Acts 17:31 (not as in KJV, marg., “offered faith”); (e) a pledge of fidelity, pledged “faith,” 1 Tim. 5:12.

The main elements in “faith” in its relation to the invisible God, as distinct from “faith” in man, are especially brought out in the use of this noun and the corresponding verb, pisteuo; they are (1) a firm conviction, producing a full acknowledgement of God’s revelation or truth, e.g., 2 Thess. 2:11-12; (2) a personal surrender to Him, John 1:12; (3) a conduct inspired by such surrender, 2 Cor. 5:7. Prominence is given to one or other of these elements according to the context. All this stands in contrast to belief in its purely natural exercise, which consists of an opinion held in good “faith” without necessary reference to its proof. The object of Abraham’s “faith” was not God’s promise (that was the occasion of its exercise); his “faith” rested on God Himself, Rom. 4:17, 20-21. See ASSURANCE, BELIEF, FAITHFULNESS, FIDELITY.

Notes: (1) In Heb. 10:23, elpis, “hope,” is mistranslated “faith” in the KJV (RV, “hope”). (2) In Acts 6:8 the most authentic mss. have charis, “grace,” RV, for pistis, “faith.” (3) In Rom. 3:3, RV, apistia, is rendered “want of faith,” for KJV, “unbelief” (so translated elsewhere). See UNBELIEF. The verb apisteo in that verse is rendered “were without faith,” RV, for KJV, “did not believe.” (4) In Rom. 3:25, the KJV wrongly links “faith” with “in His blood,” as if “faith” is reposed in the blood (i.e., the death) of Christ; the en is instrumental; “faith” rests in the living Person; hence the RV rightly puts a comma after “through faith,” and renders the next phrase “by His blood,” which is to be connected with “a propitiation.” Christ became a propitiation through His blood (i.e., His death in expiatory sacrifice for sin). (5) In Gal. 3:23, though the article stands before “faith” in the original, “faith” is here to be taken as under (a) above, and as in v. 22, and not as under (c), “the faith”; the article is simply that of renewed mention. (6) For the difference between the teaching of Paul and that of James, on “faith” and works, see Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 117-119.

FAITH (of little)

oligopistos (ὀλιγόπιστος, 3640), lit., “little of faith” (oligos, “little,” pistis, “faith”), is used only by the Lord, and as a tender rebuke, for anxiety, Matt. 6:30 and Luke 12:28; for fear, Matt. 8:26; 14:31; 16:8.¶

FAITHFUL, FAITHFULLY, FAITHLESS

1. pistos (πιστός, 4103), a verbal adjective, akin to peitho (see FAITH), is used in two senses, (a) passive, “faithful, to be trusted, reliable,” said of God, e.g., 1 Cor. 1:9; 10:13; 2 Cor. 1:18 (KJV, “true”); 2 Tim. 2:13; Heb. 10:23; 11:11; 1 Pet. 4:19; 1 John 1:9; of Christ, e.g., 2 Thess. 3:3; Heb. 2:17; 3:2; Rev. 1:5; 3:14; 19:11; of the words of God, e.g., Acts 13:34, “sure”; 1 Tim. 1:15; 3:1 (KJV, “true”); 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Titus 1:9; 3:8; Rev. 21:5; 22:6; of servants of the Lord, Matt. 24:45; 25:21, 23; Acts 16:15; 1 Cor. 4:2, 17; 7:25; Eph. 6:21; Col. 1:7; 4:7, 9; 1 Tim. 1:12; 3:11; 2 Tim. 2:2; Heb. 3:5; 1 Pet. 5:12; 3 John 5; Rev. 2:13; 17:14; of believers, Eph. 1:1; Col. 1:2; (b) active, signifying “believing, trusting, relying,” e.g., Acts 16:1 (feminine); 2 Cor. 6:15; Gal. 3:9 seems best taken in this respect, as the context lays stress upon Abraham’s “faith” in God, rather than upon his “faithfulness.” In John 20:27 the context requires the active sense, as the Lord is reproaching Thomas for his want of “faith.” See No. 2.

With regard to believers, they are spoken of sometimes in the active sense, sometimes in the passive, i.e., sometimes as believers, sometimes as “faithful.” See Lightfoot on Galatians, p. 155.

Note: In 3 John 5 the RV has “thou doest a faithful work,” for KJV, “thou doest faithfully.” The lit. rendering is “thou doest (poieo) a faithful thing, whatsoever thou workest (ergazo).” That would not do as a translation. To do a “faithful” work is to do what is worthy of a “faithful” man. The KJV gives a meaning but is not exact as a translation. Westcott suggests “thou makest sure (piston) whatsoever thou workest” (i.e., it will not lose its reward). The change between poieo, “to do,” and ergazo, “to work,” must be maintained. Cf. Matt. 26:10 (ergazo and ergon).

2. apistos (ἄπιστος, 571) is used with meanings somewhat parallel to No. 1; (a) “untrustworthy” (a, negative, and No. 1), not worthy of confidence or belief, is said of things “incredible,” Acts 26:8 (b) “unbelieving, distrustful,” used as a noun, “unbeliever,” Luke 12:46; 1 Tim. 5:8 (RV, for KJV, “infidel”); in Titus 1:15 and Rev. 21:8, “unbelieving”; “faithless” in Matt. 17:17; Mark 9:19; Luke 9:41; John 20:27. The word is most frequent in 1 and 2 Corinthians. See BELIEVE, INCREDIBLE, INFIDEL, UNBELIEVER, UNFAITHFUL. (In the Sept., Prov. 17:6; 28:25; Isa. 17:10.¶).

FAITHFULNESS

Note: This is not found in the KJV. The RV corrects the KJV “faith” to “faithfulness” in Rom. 3:3; Gal. 5:22. See FAITH.

FALL, FALLEN, FALLING, FELL

A. Nouns.

1. ptosis (πτῶσις, 4431); “a fall” (akin to B, No. 1), is used (a) literally, of the “overthrow of a building,” Matt. 7:27; (b) metaphorically, Luke 2:34, of the spiritual “fall” of those in Israel who would reject Christ; the word “again” in the KJV of the next clause is misleading; the “rising up” (RV) refers to those who would acknowledge and receive Him, a distinct class from those to whom the “fall” applies. The “fall” would be irretrievable, cf. (a); such a lapse as Peter’s is not in view.¶

2. paraptoma (παράπτωμα, 3900), primarily “a false step, a blunder” (para, “aside,” pipto, “to fall”), then “a lapse from uprightness, a sin, a moral trespass, misdeed,” is translated “fall” in Rom. 11:11-12, of the sin and “downfall” of Israel in their refusal to acknowledge God’s claims and His Christ; by reason of this the offer of salvation was made to Gentiles; cf. ptaio, “to stumble,” in v. 11. See FAULT, OFFENSE, SIN, TRESPASS.

3. apostasia (ἀποστασία, 646), “a defection, revolt, apostasy,” is used in the NT of religious apostasy; in Acts 21:21, it is translated “to forsake,” lit., “thou teachest apostasy from Moses.” In 2 Thess. 2:3 “the falling away” signifies apostasy from the faith. In papyri documents it is used politically of rebels.¶ Note: For “mighty fall,” Rev. 18:21, RV, see VIOLENCE.

B. Verbs.

1. pipto (πίπτω, 4098), “to fall,” is used (a) of descent, to “fall” down from, e.g., Matt. 10:29; 13:4; (b) of a lot, Acts 1:26; (c) of “falling” under judgment, Jas. 5:12 (cf. Rev. 18:2, RV); (d) of persons in the act of prostration, to prostrate oneself, e.g., Matt. 17:6; John 18:6; Rev. 1:17; in homage and worship, e.g., Matt. 2:11; Mark 5:22; Rev. 5:14; 19:4; (e) of things, “falling” into ruin, or failing, e.g., Matt. 7:25; Luke 16:17, RV, “fall,” for KJV, “fail”; Heb. 11:30; (f), of “falling” in judgment upon persons, as of the sun’s heat, Rev. 7:16, RV, “strike,” KJV, “light”; of a mist and darkness, Acts 13:11 (some mss. have epipipto); (g) of persons, in “falling” morally or spiritually, Rom. 14:4; 1 Cor. 10:8, 12; Rev. 2:5 (some mss. have No. 3 here). See FAIL, LIGHT (upon), STRIKE.

2. apopipto (ἀποπίπτω, 634), “to fall from” (apo, “from”), is used in Acts 9:18, of the scales which “fell” from the eyes of Saul of Tarsus.¶

3. ekpipto (ἐκπίπτω, 1601), “to fall out of” (ek, “out,” and No. 1), “is used in the NT, literally, of flowers that wither in the course of nature, Jas. 1:11; 1 Pet. 1:24; of a ship not under control, Acts 27:17, 26, 29, 32; of shackles loosed from a prisoner’s wrist, 12:7; figuratively, of the Word of God (the expression of His purpose), which cannot “fall” away from the end to which it is set, Rom. 9:6; of the believer who is warned lest he “fall” away from the course in which he has been confirmed by the Word of God, 2 Pet. 3:17.”* So of those who seek to be justified by law, Gal. 5:4, “ye are fallen away from grace.” Some mss. have this verb in Mark 13:25, for No. 1; so in Rev. 2:5. See CAST, EFFECT.¶

5. epipipto (ἐπίπίπτω, 1968), “to fall upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is used (a) literally, Mark 3:10, “pressed upon”; Acts 20:10, 37; (b) metaphorically, of fear, Luke 1:12; Acts 19:17; Rev. 11:11 (No. 1, in some mss.); reproaches, Rom. 15:3; of the Holy Spirit, Acts 8:16; 10:44; 11:15.

Note: Some mss. have this verb in John 13:25; Acts 10:10; 13:11. See PRESS.¶

6. katapipto (καταπίπτω, 2667), “to fall down” (kata, “down,” and No. 1), is used in Luke 8:6 (in the best mss.); Acts 26:14; 28:6.¶

7. parapipto (παραπίπτω, 3895), akin to A, No. 2, properly, “to fall in one’s way” (para, “by”), signifies “to fall away” (from adherence to the realities and facts of the faith), Heb. 6:6.¶

8. peripipto (περίπίπτω, 4045), “to fall around” (peri, “around”), hence signifies to “fall” in with, or among, to light upon, come across, Luke 10:30, “among (robbers)”; Acts 27:41, KJV, “falling into,” RV, “lighting upon,” a part of a shore; Jas. 1:2, into temptation (i.e., trials). See LIGHT (to 1. upon).¶ In the Sept., Ruth 2:3; 2 Sam. 1:6; Prov. 11:5.¶

9. prospipto (προσπίπτω, 4363), “to fall towards anything” (pros, “towards”), “to strike against,” is said of “wind,” Matt. 7:25; it also signifies to “fall” down at one’s feet, “fall” prostrate before, Mark 3:11; 5:33; 7:25; Luke 5:8; 8:28, 47; Acts 16:29.¶

10. hustereo (ὕστερέω, 5302), “to come late, to be last, behind, inferior,” is translated “falleth short” in Heb. 12:15, RV, for KJV, “fail,” and “fall short” in Rom. 3:23, for KJV, “come short,” which, in view of the preceding “have,” is ambiguous, and might be taken as a past tense. See BEHIND.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine p. 242.

11. epiballo (ἐπιβάλλω, 1911), “to cast upon” (epi, “on,” ballo, “to throw”), also signifies to “fall” to one’s share, Luke 15:12, “that falleth.” The phrase is frequently found in the papyri documents as a technical formula. See CAST, A, No. 7.

12. erchomai (ἐρχομαι, 2064), “to come,” is translated “have fallen out,” in Phil. 1:12, of the issue of circumstances. See COME.

13. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is translated “falling” (headlong) in Acts 1:18. See Note (1) below. See BECOME.

14. aphistemi (ἀφίστημι, 868), when used intransitively, signifies “to stand off” (apo, “from,” histemi, “to stand”), “to withdraw from”; hence, “to fall away, to apostatize,” 1 Tim. 4:1, RV, “shall fall away,” for KJV, “shall depart”; Heb. 3:12, RV, “falling away.” See DEPART, No. 20.

15. parabaino (παρβαίνω, 3845), “to transgress, fall” (para, “away, across,” baino, “to go”), is translated “fell away” in Acts 1:25, RV, for KJV, “by transgression fell.” See TRANSGRESS.

16. katabaino (καταβαίνω, 2597) denotes “to come (or fall) down,” Luke 22:44; in Rev. 16:21, “cometh down,” RV. See COME, DESCEND.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 16:2, ginomai, “to become,” is translated “it became,” RV, for KJV, “there fell.” (2) In 2 Pet. 1:10, ptaio, “to stumble,” is translated “stumble,” RV, for KJV, “fall.” (3) In Rom. 14:13, skandalon, “a snare, a means of doing wrong,” is rendered “an occasion of falling,” RV, for KJV “an occasion to fall.” (4) Koimao, in the middle voice, signifies “to fall asleep,” Matt. 27:52, RV, “had fallen asleep,” for KJV, “slept.” See ASLEEP. (5) In Acts 27:34, apollumi, “to perish,” is translated “shall ... perish,” RV, for KJV, “shall ... fall.” (6) In Jude 24 the adjective aptaistos, “without stumbling, sure footed” (a, negative, and ptaio, “to stumble”), is translated “from stumbling,” RV, for KJV, “from falling.” (7) In Acts 1:18 the phrase prenes, headlong, with the aorist participle of ginomai, “to become,” “falling headlong.” lit., “having become headlong,” is used of the suicide of Judas Iscariot. Some would render the word (it is a medical term) “swollen,” (as connected with a form of the verb pimpremi, “to burn”), indicating the condition of the body of certain suicides. (8) In Acts 20:9, KJV, kataphero, “to bear down,” is translated “being fallen into” (RV, “borne down”), and then “he sunk down” (RV, ditto), the first of gradual oppression, the second (the aorist tense) of momentary effect. (9) In Acts 19:35 diopetes, from dios, “heaven,” pipto, “to fall,” i.e., “fallen” from the sky, is rendered “image which fell down from Jupiter” (RV marg., “heaven”).

FALSE, FALSEHOOD, FALSELY

A. Adjectives.

1. pseudes (ψευδής, 5571), is used of “false witnesses,” Acts 6:13; “false apostles,” Rev. 2:2, RV, “false,” KJV, “liars”; Rev. 21:8, “liars.”¶

Note: For compound words with this adjective, see APOSTLE, BRETHREN, CHRIST, PROPHET, WITNESS.

2. pseudonumos (ψευδώνυμος, 5581), “under a false name” (No. 1, and onoma, “a name”; Eng., “pseudonym”), is said of the knowledge professed by the propagandists of various heretical cults, 1 Tim. 6:20.¶

B. Noun.

pseudos (ψεῦδος, 5579), “a falsehood” (akin to A, No. 1), is so translated in Eph. 4:25, RV (KJV, “lying”); in 2 Thess. 2:9, “lying wonders” is lit. “wonders of falsehood,” i.e., wonders calculated to deceive; it is elsewhere rendered “lie,” John 8:44; Rom. 1:25; 2 Thess. 2:11; 1 John 2:21, 27; Rev. 14:5, RV; 21:27; 22:15. See GUILLE, LIE.¶

C. Verb.

pseudo (ψεύδομαι, 5574), “to deceive by lies,” is used in the middle voice, translated “to say ... falsely,” in Matt. 5:11; it is elsewhere rendered “to lie,” Acts 5:3-4; Rom. 9:1; 2 Cor. 11:31; Gal. 1:20; Col. 3:9; 1 Tim. 2:7. See LIE.

FAME

A. Noun.

pheme (φήμη, 5345) originally denoted “a divine voice, an oracle”; hence, “a saying or report” (akin to phemi, “to say,” from a root meaning “to shine, to be clear”; hence, Lat., fama, Eng., “fame”), is rendered “fame” in Matt. 9:26 and Luke 4:14.¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 5:15, RV, logos, “a word, report, account,” is translated “report,” for KJV, “fame.” See REPORT. (2) Akoe, “a hearing,” is translated “report” in the RV of Matt. 4:24; 14:1; Mark 1:28, for KJV, “fame.” See EAR, No. 3. HEARING. (3) Echos, “a noise, report, sound,” is translated “rumor,” in the RV of Luke 4:37, for KJV, “fame”; “sound” in Acts 2:2; Heb. 12:19. See RUMOR, SOUND.¶

B. Verb.

diaphemizo (διαφημίζω, 1310) signifies “to spread abroad a matter,” Matt. 28:15, RV; Mark 1:45, RV (from dia, “throughout,” and phemi, “to say”); hence, “to spread abroad one’s fame,” Matt. 9:31. All the passages under this heading relate to the testimony concerning Christ in the days of His flesh.¶

FAMILY

1. oikos (οἶκος, 3624) signifies (a) “a dwelling, a house” (akin to oikeo, to dwell); (b) “a household, family,” translated “family” in 1 Tim. 5:4, RV, for KJV, “at home.” See HOME, HOUSE, HOUSEHOLD, TEMPLE.

2. patria (πατριά, 3965), primarily “an ancestry, lineage,” signifies in the NT “a family or tribe” (in the Sept. it is used of related people, in a sense wider than No. 1, but narrower than phule, “a tribe,” e.g., Exod. 12:3; Num. 32:28); it is used of the “family” of David, Luke 2:4, RV, for KJV, “lineage”; in the wider sense of “nationalities, races,” Acts 3:25, RV, “families,” for KJV, “kindreds”; in Eph. 3:15, RV, “every family,” for KJV, “the whole family,” the reference being to all those who are spiritually related to God the Father, He being the Author of their spiritual relationship to Him as His children, they being united to one another in “family” fellowship (patria is akin to pater, “a father”); Luther’s translation, “all who bear the name of children,” is advocated by Cremer, p. 474. The phrase, however, is lit., “every family.”¶ See KINDRED.¶

limos (λιμός, 3042) is translated “hunger” in Luke 15:17; 2 Cor. 11:27; elsewhere it signifies “a famine,” and is so translated in each place in the RV; the KJV has the word “dearth” in Acts 7:11 and 11:28, and “hunger” in Rev. 6:8; the RV “famine” is preferable there; see Matt. 24:7; Mark 13:8; Luke 4:25; 15:14; 21:11; Rom. 8:35; Rev. 18:8. See HUNGER.¶

FAN

ptuon (πτύον, 4425) denotes “a winnowing shovel or fan,” with which grain is thrown up against the wind, in order to separate the chaff, Matt. 3:12; Luke 3:17.¶

FAR

A. Adjective.

makros (μακρός, 3117) is used (a) of space and time, long, said of prayers (in some mss., Matt. 23:14), Mark 12:40; Luke 20:47; (b) of distance, “far, far” distant, Luke 15:13; 19:12. See LONG.¶

B. Adverbs.

1. makran (μακράν, 3112), properly a feminine form of the adjective above, denotes “a long way, far,” (a) literally, Matt. 8:30, RV, “afar off.” Luke 7:6; 15:20, RV, “afar off”; John 21:8; Acts 17:27; 22:21; (b) metaphorically, “far (from the kingdom of God),” Mark 12:34; in spiritual darkness, Acts 2:39; Eph. 2:13, 17. See AFAR.¶

2. makrothen (μακρόθεν, 3113), from “far” (akin to No. 1), Mark 8:3: see AFAR.

3. porro (πόρρω, 4206) is used (a) literally, Luke 14:32, “a great way off”; the comparative degree porroteron, “further,” is used in 24:28; (b) metaphorically, of the heart in separation from God, Matt. 15:8; Mark 7:6. See FURTHER, WAY.¶ Cf. porrothen, “afar off”; see AFAR.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 16:22, Peter’s word to the Lord “be it far from Thee” translates the phrase hileos soi, lit., “(God be) propitious to Thee,” RV, marg., “God have mercy on Thee.” Some would translate it “God avert this from Thee!” Others render it “God forbid!” Luther’s translation is “spare Thyself.” Lightfoot suggests “Nay, verily!” or “Away with the thought!” It was the vehement and impulsive utterance of Peter’s horrified state of mind. Hileos signifies “propitious, merciful,” Heb. 8:12. See MERCY, C.¶ (2) In Luke 22:51, “thus far” translates the phrase heos toutou, lit., “unto this.” (3) In Gal. 6:14 the RV, “far be it” translates the phrase megenoi to, lit., “let it not be,” elsewhere translated idiomatically “God forbid,” e.g., Luke 20:16. See FORBID. (4) In Heb. 7:15 the KJV “far more” translates perissoteron, RV, “more abundantly”; see ABUNDANT. (5) In the following the verb apodemeo, “to go abroad,” is rendered, in the KJV, “to go into a far country,” RV, “to go into another country,” Matt. 21:33; 25:14; Mark 12:1; in Matt. 25:15, RV, “he went on his journey” (KJV, “took etc.”). In Luke 15:13 the KJV and RV have “took (his) journey into a far country”; in Luke 20:9, RV, “another country,” for KJV, “a far country.”¶ The adjective apodemos in Mark 13:34 is rendered in the KJV, “taking a far journey,” RV, “sojourning in another country.” See JOURNEY.¶ (6) In 2 Cor. 4:17 the phrase kath̄ hyperbolēn is translated “more and more,” RV, for KJV, “a far more.” (7) In the following, heos, used as a preposition, is translated “as far as” in the RV, for different words in the KJV; Acts 17:14, in the best mss., instead of hos, which the KJV renders “as it were”; 17:15, “unto”; 23:23, “to.” Both versions have “as far as” in 11:19, 22; in Luke 24:50, the RV has “until they were over against,” for KJV, “as far as to.” (8) In Rev. 14:20, the preposition apo, “from,” is translated “as far as” in the RV, for KJV, “by the space of.”

FARE, FAREWELL

1. euphraino (εὐφραίνω, 2165), in the active voice, signifies “to cheer, gladden,” 2 Cor. 2:2; in the passive, “to rejoice, make merry”; translated “faring sumptuously” in Luke 16:19, especially of food (RV, marg., “living in mirth and splendor”). See GLAD, MERRY, REJOICE.

2. rhonnumi (ῥώννυμι, 4517), “to strengthen, to be strong,” is used in the imperative mood as a formula at the end of letters, signifying “Farewell,” Acts 15:29; some mss. have it in 23:30 (the RV omits it, as do most Versions).¶

3. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have,” is used idiomatically in Acts 15:36, RV, “(how) they fare,” KJV, “how they do.”

4. chairo (χαίρω, 5463), “to joy, rejoice, be glad,” is used in the imperative mood in salutations, (a) on meeting, “Hail,” e.g., Matt. 26:49; or with lego, “to say, to give a greeting,” 2 John 11; in letters, “greeting,” e.g., Acts 15:23; (b) at parting, the underlying thought being joy, 2 Cor. 13:11 (RV, marg., “rejoice”); (c) on other occasions, see the RV marg. in Phil. 3:1; 4:4. See GLAD, GREETING, No. 2, HAIL, JOY, JOYFULLY.

Note: As “farewell” is inadequate to express chairo, which always conveys the thought of joy or cheer, (b) properly comes under (c).

5. apotasso (ἀποτάσσομαι, 657) primarily denotes “to set apart”; then, in the middle voice, (a) “to take leave of, bid farewell to,” Mark 6:46, “had taken leave of”; cf. Acts 18:18, 21; 2 Cor. 2:13 (in these three verses, the verb may signify to give final instructions to); Luke 9:61, “to bid farewell”; (b) “to forsake,” Luke 14:33. In the papyri, besides saying goodbye, the stronger meaning is found of getting rid of a person (Moulton and Milligan). See FORSAKE, LEAVE (take), RENOUNCE, SEND (away).¶

Note: For aspazomai, “to bid farewell,” see LEAVE (C), No. 2.

FARM

agros (ἀγρός, 68) denotes (a) “a field” (cf Eng., “agriculture”), e.g., Matt. 6:28; (b) “the country,” e.g., Mark 15:21, or, in the plural, “country places, farms,” Mark 5:14; 6:36, 56; Luke 8:34; 9:12; (c) “a piece of ground,” e.g., Mark 10:29; Acts 4:37; “a farm,” Matt. 22:5. See COUNTRY, FIELD, GROUND, LAND.

Note: For the synonymous word chora, “a country, land,” see COUNTRY. Moulton and Milligan point out that agros is frequent in the Sept., and in the Synoptic Gospels, but that Luke uses chora especially, and that possibly agros was a favorite word with translators from Hebrew and Aramaic.

For FARTHER SIDE, Mark 10:1, see BEYOND, No. 2

FARTHING

1. assarion (ἄσσάριον, 787), a diminutive of the Latin as, was one-tenth of a drachma, or one-sixteenth of a Roman denarius, i.e., about three farthings, Matt. 10:29; Luke 12:6.¶

2. kodrantes (κοδράντης, 2835) was the Latin quadrans, “the fourth part of an as” (see No. 1), about two thirds of a farthing, Matt. 5:26; Mark 12:42.¶

FASHION

A. Nouns.

1. eidos (εἶδος, 1491), “that which is seen, an appearance,” is translated “fashion” in Luke 9:29, of the Lord’s countenance at the Transfiguration. See APPEARANCE, and Note under IMAGE, No. 1.

2. prosopon (πρόσωπον, 4383), “the face, countenance,” is translated “fashion” in Jas. 1:11, of the flower of grass. See COUNTENANCE. Cf. v. 24, “what manner of man,” which translates hopoios, “of what sort.”

3. schema (σχῆμα, 4976), “a figure, fashion” (akin to echo, “to have”), is translated “fashion” in 1 Cor. 7:31, of the world, signifying that which comprises the manner of life, actions, etc. of humanity in general; in Phil. 2:8 it is used of the Lord in His being found “in fashion” as a man, and signifies what He was in the eyes of men, “the entire outwardly perceptible mode and shape of His existence, just as the preceding words morphe, “form,” and homoion, “likeness,” describe what He was in Himself as Man” (Gifford on the Incarnation, p. 44). “Men saw in Christ a human form, bearing, language, action, mode of life ... in general the state and relations of a human being, so that in the entire mode of His appearance He made Himself known and was recognized as a man” (Meyer).

4. tupos (τύπος, 5179), “a type, figure, example,” is translated “fashion” in the KJV of Acts 7:44, RV, “figure,” said of the tabernacle. See ENSAMPLE.

B. Adverb.

houtos (οὕτω, 3779), “thus, so, in this way,” is rendered “on this fashion” in Mark 2:12. See EVEN, No. 5, LIKEWISE, MANNER, SO, THUS, WHAT.

C. Verbs.

1. metaschematizo (μετασχηματίζω, 3345), “to change in fashion or appearance” (meta, “after,” here implying change, schema, see A, No. 3), is rendered “shall fashion anew” in Phil. 3:21, RV; KJV, “shall change,” of the bodies of believers as changed or raised at the Lord’s return; in 2 Cor. 11:13, 14, 15, the RV uses the verb “to fashion oneself,” for KJV, to transform, of Satan and his human ministers, false apostles; in 1 Cor.

4:6 it is used by way of a rhetorical device, with the significance of transferring by a figure. See CHANGE, TRANSFORM.¶

2. suschematizo (συσχηματίζω, 4964), “to give the same figure or appearance as, to conform to” (sun, “with,” schema, cf. No. 1), used in the passive voice, signifies “to fashion oneself, to be fashioned,” Rom. 12:2, RV, “be not fashioned according to,” for KJV, “be not conformed to”; 1 Pet. 1:14, “(not) fashioning yourselves.” See CONFORMED.¶

Note: In Rom. 12:2 being outwardly “conformed” to the things of this age is contrasted with being “transformed” (or transfigured) inwardly by the renewal of the thoughts through the Holy Spirit’s power. A similar distinction holds good in Phil. 3:21; the Lord will “fashion anew,” or change outwardly, the body of our humiliation, and “conform” it in its nature (summorphos) to the body of His glory.

D. Adjective.

summorphos (συμμορφός, 4832), “having like form with” (sun, “with,” morphe, “form”), is used in Rom. 8:29 and Phil. 3:21 (KJV, “fashioned,” RV, “conformed”). See CONFORM.¶

FAST, FASTING

A. Nouns.

1. nesteia (νηστεία, 3521), “a fasting, fast” (from ne, a negative prefix, and esthio, “to eat”), is used (a) of voluntary abstinence from food, Luke 2:37; Acts 14:23 (some mss. have it in Matt. 17:21 and Mark 9:29); “fasting” had become a common practice among Jews, and was continued among Christians; in Acts 27:9, “the Fast” refers to the Day of Atonement, Lev. 16:29; that time of the year would be one of dangerous sailing; (b) of involuntary abstinence (perhaps voluntary is included), consequent upon trying circumstances, 2 Cor. 6:5; 11:27.¶

2. nestis (νήστις, 3523), “not eating” (see No. 1), “fasting,” is used of lack of food, Matt. 15:32; Mark 8:3.¶

Note: Asitia, Acts 27:21, means “without food” (not through lack of supplies), i.e., abstinence from food. See ABSTINENCE, and cf. C, below.

B. Verb.

nesteuo (νηστεύω, 3522), “to fast, to abstain from eating” (akin to A, Nos. 1 and 2), is used of voluntary “fasting,” Matt. 4:2; 6:16, 17, 18; 9:14, 15; Mark 2:18, 19, 20; Luke 5:33, 34, 35; 18:12; Acts 13:2, 3. Some of these passages show that teachers to whom scholars or disciples were attached gave them special instructions as to “fasting.” Christ taught the need of purity and simplicity of motive.

The answers of Christ to the questions of the disciples of John and of the Pharisees reveal His whole purpose and method. No doubt He and His followers observed such a fast as that on the Day of Atonement, but He imposed no frequent “fasts” in addition. What He taught was suitable to the change of character and purpose which He designed for His disciples. His claim to be the Bridegroom, Matt. 9:15, and the reference there to the absence of “fasting,” virtually involved a claim to be the Messiah (cf. Zech. 8:19).¶ Some mss. have the verb in Acts 10:30.

C. Adjective.

asitos (ἄσιτος, 777), “without food” (a, negative, sitos, “corn, food”), is used in Acts 27:33, “fasting.” Cf. asitia, Note under A, No. 2.¶

FAST (to make)

asphalizo (ἀσφαλίζω, 805), “to make secure, safe, firm” (akin to asphales, “safe”), (a, negative, and sphallo, “to trip up”), is translated “make ... fast,” in Acts 16:24, of prisoners’ feet in the stocks. In Matt. 27:64, 65, 66, it is rendered “to make sure.” See SURE.¶

Note: For HOLD (fast) and STAND (fast), see HOLD and STAND, No. 7.

FASTEN

1. atenizo (ἀτενίζω, 816), from atenes, “strained, intent,” and teino, “to stretch, strain” (from a root ten—, seen in Eng., “tension, tense,” etc.), signifies “to look fixedly, gaze, fasten one’s eyes upon,” and is found twelve times in the writings of Luke (ten in the Acts), out of its fourteen occurrences. It always has a strongly intensive meaning, and is translated “to fasten the eyes upon” in the KJV and RV in Luke 4:20; Acts 3:4; 11:6; so in the RV, where the KJV has different renderings, in Acts 6:15 (for KJV, “looking steadfastly”); 10:4 (“looked”); 13:9 (“set his eyes”); 14:9 (“steadfastly beholding”). In Acts 7:55, both have “looked up steadfastly.” In the following the RV also varies the translation, Luke 22:56; Acts 1:10; 3:12; 23:1; 2 Cor. 3:7, 13. See BEHOLD, LOOK.¶

2. kathapto (καθάπτω, 2510), “to fasten on, lay hold of, attack,” is used of the serpent which fastened on Paul’s hand, Acts 28:3.¶

FATHER

A. Noun.

pater (πατήρ, 3962), from a root signifying “a nourisher, protector, upholder” (Lat., pater, Eng., “father,” are akin), is used (a) of the nearest ancestor, e.g., Matt. 2:22; (b) of a more remote ancestor, the progenitor of the people, a “forefather,” e.g., Matt. 3:9; 23:30; 1 Cor. 10:1; the patriarchs, 2 Pet. 3:4; (c) one advanced in the knowledge of Christ, 1 John 2:13; (d) metaphorically, of the originator of a family or company of persons animated by the same spirit as himself, as of Abraham, Rom. 4:11, 12, 16, 17, 18, or of Satan, John 8:38, 41, 44; (e) of one who, as a preacher of the gospel and a teacher, stands in a “father’s” place, caring for his spiritual children, 1 Cor. 4:15 (not the same as a mere title of honor, which the Lord prohibited, Matt. 23:9); (f) of the members of the Sanhedrin, as of those who exercised religious authority over others, Acts 7:2; 22:1; (g) of God in relation to those who have been born anew (John 1:12, 13), and so are believers, Eph. 2:18; 4:6 (cf. 2 Cor. 6:18), and imitators of their “Father,” Matt. 5:45, 48; 6:1, 4, 6, 8, 9, etc. Christ never associated Himself with them by using the personal pronoun “our”; He always used the singular, “My Father,” His relationship being unoriginated and essential, whereas theirs is by grace and regeneration, e.g., Matt. 11:27; 25:34; John 20:17; Rev. 2:27; 3:5, 21; so the apostles spoke of God as the “Father” of the Lord Jesus Christ, e.g., Rom. 15:6; 2 Cor. 1:3; 11:31; Eph. 1:3; Heb. 1:5; 1 Pet. 1:3; Rev. 1:6; (h) of God, as the “Father” of lights, i.e., the Source or Giver of whatsoever provides illumination, physical and spiritual, Jas. 1:17; of mercies, 2 Cor. 1:3; of glory, Eph. 1:17; (i) of God, as Creator, Heb. 12:9 (cf. Zech. 12:1).

Note: Whereas the everlasting power and divinity of God are manifest in creation, His “Fatherhood” in spiritual relationship through faith is the subject of NT revelation, and waited for the presence on earth of the Son, Matt. 11:27; John 17:25. The spiritual relationship is not universal, John 8:42, 44 (cf. John 8:12 and Gal. 3:26).

B. Adjectives.

1. patroos (πατρῶος, 3971) signifies “of one’s fathers,” or “received from one’s fathers” (akin to A), Acts 22:3; 24:14; 28:17.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 27:10.¶

2. patrikos (πατρικός, 3967), “from one’s fathers, or ancestors,” is said of that which is handed down from one’s “forefathers,” Gal. 1:14.¶

3. apator (ἀπάτωρ, 540), “without father” (a, negative, and pater), signifies, in Heb. 7:3, with no recorded genealogy.¶

4. patroparadotos (πατροπαράδοτος, 3970), “handed down from one’s fathers” (pater, and paradidomi, “to hand down”), is used in 1 Pet. 1:18.¶

FATHER-IN-LAW

pentheros (πενθερός, 3995), “a wife’s father” (from a root signifying “a bond, union”), is found in John 18:13.¶

FATHERLESS

orphanos (ὀρφανός, 3737), properly, “an orphan,” is rendered “fatherless” in Jas. 1:27; “desolate” in John 14:18, for KJV, “comfortless. See COMFORTLESS.¶

FATHOM

orguia (ὀργυιά, 3712), akin to orego, “to stretch,” is the length of the outstretched arms, about six feet, Acts 27:28 (twice).¶

FATLING, FATTED

1. sitistos (σιτιστός, 4619), “fattened,” lit., “fed with grain” (from siteuo, “to feed, to fatten”), is used as a neuter plural noun, “fatlings,” in Matt. 22:4.¶ Cf. asitos, under FASTING. 2. siteutos (σιτιστός, 4618), “fed” (with grain), denotes “fatted,” Luke 15:23, 27, 30.¶

FATNESS

piotes (πίοτης, 4096), from pion, “fat,” from a root, pi□, signifying “swelling,” is used metaphorically in Rom. 11:17. The gentile believer had become a sharer in the spiritual life and blessing bestowed by divine covenant upon Abraham and his descendants as set forth under the figure of “the root of (not ‘and’) the ‘fatness’ of the olive tree.”¶

FAULT, FAULTLESS

A. Noun.

aition (αἴτιον, 158), properly the neuter of aitios, causative of, responsible for, is used as a noun, “a crime, a legal ground for punishment,” translated “fault” in Luke 23:4, 14; in v. 22, cause. See AUTHOR, CAUSE. Notes: (1) For aitia, rendered “fault” in John 18:38; 19:4, 6, KJV (like aition, denoting “a ground for punishment”), see ACCUSATION, CAUSE, CHARGE. (2, For hettema, “a loss,” translated fault in 1 Cor. 6:7, KJV, see DEFECT (RV). (3 For paraptoma, “a false step, a trespass,” translated “fault” in Gal. 6:1, KJV, and “faults” in Jas. 5:16, KJV, see SIN, A, No. 2, Note (1), TRESPASS.

B. Adjective.

amemptos (ἄμεμπος, 273), “without blame,” is rendered “faultless,” in Heb. 8:7. See BLAMELESS.

Note: For anomos, “without blemish,” rendered “faultless,” i.e., without any shortcoming, in Jude 24, and “without fault” in Rev. 14:5, KJV, see BLEMISH.

C. Verbs.

1. memphomai (μέμφομαι, 3201), “to blame,” is translated “to find fault” in Rom. 9:19 and Heb. 8:8. Some mss. have the verb in Mark 7:2. See BLAME.

2. elencho (ἐλέγχω, 1651), “to convict, reprove, rebuke,” is translated “shew (him) his fault” in Matt. 18:15. See CONVICT.

Note: In 1 Pet. 2:20, KJV, the verb hamartano, “to sin” (strictly, to miss the mark) is rendered “for your faults.” The RV corrects to “when ye sin (and are buffeted for it).”

FAVOR, FAVORED

A. Noun.

charis (χάρις, 5485) denotes (a) objectively, “grace in a person, graciousness,” (b) subjectively, (1) “grace on the part of a giver, favor, kindness,” (2) “a sense of favor received, thanks.” It is rendered “favor” in Luke 1:30; 2:52; Acts 2:47; 7:10, 46; 24:27 and 25:9, RV (for KJV, “pleasure”); 25:3; see more fully under GRACE.

B. Verb.

charitoo (χαριτόω, 5487), akin to A, to endow with charis, primarily signified “to make graceful or gracious,” and came to denote, in Hellenistic Greek, “to cause to find favor,” Luke 1:28, “highly favored” (marg., “endued with grace”); in Eph. 1:6, it is translated “made ... accepted,” KJV, “freely bestowed,” RV (lit., “graced”); it does not here mean to endue with grace. Grace implies more than favor; grace is a free gift, favor may be deserved or gained.¶

FEAR, FEARFUL, FEARFULNESS

A. Nouns.

1. phobos (φόβος, 5401) first had the meaning of “flight,” that which is caused by being scared; then, “that which may cause flight,” (a) “fear, dread, terror,” always with this significance in the four Gospels; also e.g., in Acts 2:43; 19:17; 1 Cor. 2:3; 1 Tim. 5:20 (lit., “may have fear”); Heb. 2:15; 1 John 4:18; Rev. 11:11; 18:10, 15; by metonymy, that which causes “fear,” Rom. 13:3; 1 Pet. 3:14, RV, “(their) fear,” KJV “(their) terror,” an adaptation of the Sept. of Isa. 8:12, “fear not their fear”; hence some take it to mean, as there, “what they fear,” but in view of Matt. 10:28, e.g., it seems best to understand it as that which is caused by the intimidation of adversaries; (b) “reverential fear,” (1) of God, as a controlling motive of the life, in matters spiritual and moral, not a mere “fear” of His power and righteous retribution, but a wholesome dread of displeasing Him, a “fear” which banishes the terror that shrinks from His presence, Rom. 8:15, and which influences the disposition and attitude of one whose circumstances are guided by trust in God, through the indwelling Spirit of God, Acts 9:31; Rom. 3:18; 2 Cor. 7:1; Eph. 5:21 (RV, “the fear of Christ”); Phil. 2:12; 1 Pet. 1:17 (a comprehensive phrase: the reverential “fear” of God will inspire a constant carefulness in dealing with others in His “fear”); 3:2, 15; the association of “fear and trembling,” as, e.g., in Phil. 2:12, has in the Sept. a much sterner import, e.g., Gen. 9:2; Exod. 15:16; Deut. 2:25; 11:25; Ps. 55:5; Isa. 19:16; (2) of superiors, e.g., Rom. 13:7; 1 Pet. 2:18. See TERROR.

2. deilia (δειλία, 1167), “fearfulness” (from deos, “fright”), is rightly rendered “fearfulness” in 2 Tim. 1:7, RV (for KJV, “fear”). That spirit is not given us of God. The word denotes “cowardice and timidity” and is never used in a good sense, as No. 1 is.¶ Cf. deilos, B, No. 2, below, and deiliao, to be fearful (KJV, “afraid”), John 14:27.¶

3. eulabeia (εὐλάβεια, 2124) signifies, firstly, “caution”; then, “reverence, godly fear,” Heb. 5:7; 12:28, in best mss., “reverence”; in general, “apprehension, but especially holy fear,” “that mingled fear and love which, combined, constitute the piety of man toward God; the OT places its emphasis on the fear, the NT ... on the love, though there was love in the fear of God’s saints then, as there must be fear in their love now” (Trench, Syn. Sec.xlviii).¶ In the Sept., Josh. 22:24; Prov. 28:14.¶

Note: In Luke 21:11, phobetron (akin to No. 1) denotes a terror, RV, “terrors,” for KJV, “fearful sights,” i.e., objects or instruments of terror.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. phoberos (φοβερός, 5398), “fearful” (akin to A, No. 1), is used only in the active sense in the NT, i.e., causing “fear,” terrible, Heb. 10:27, 31; 12:21, RV, “fearful,” for KJV, “terrible.”¶

2. deilos (δειλός, 1169), “cowardly” (see A, No. 2), “timid,” is used in Matt. 8:26; Mark 4:40; Rev. 21:8 (here “the fearful” are first in the list of the transgressors).¶

3. ekphobos (ἐκφοβός, 1630), signifies “frightened outright” (ek, “out,” intensive, and A, No. 1), Heb. 12:21 (with eimi, “I am”), “I exceedingly fear” (see No. 4); Mark 9:6, “sore afraid.”¶

4. entromos (ἐντρομος, 1790), “trembling with fear” (en, “in,” intensive, and tremo, “to tremble, quake”; Eng., “tremor,” etc.), is used with ginomai, “to become,” in Acts 7:32, “trembled”; 16:29, RV, “trembling for fear”; with eimi, “to be,” in Heb. 12:21, “quake” (some mss. have ektromos here). See QUAKE, TREMBLE.¶ The distinction between No. 3 and No. 4, as in Heb. 12:21, would seem to be that ekphobos stresses the intensity of the “fear,” entromos the inward effect, “I inwardly tremble (or quake).”

C. Adverb.

aphobos (ἄφωνος, 880) denotes “without fear” (a, negative, and A, No. 1), and is said of serving the Lord, Luke 1:74; of being among the Lord’s people as His servant, 1 Cor. 16:10; of ministering the Word of God, Phil. 1:14; of the evil of false spiritual shepherds, Jude 12.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 1:33.¶

D. Verbs.

1. phobeo (φοβέω, 5399), in earlier Greek, “to put to flight” (see A, No. 1), in the NT is always in the passive voice, with the meanings either (a) “to fear, be afraid,” its most frequent use, e.g., Acts 23:10, according to the best mss. (see No. 2); or (b) “to show reverential fear” [see A, No. 1, (b)], (1) of men, Mark 6:20; Eph. 5:33, RV, “fear,” for KJV, “reverence”; (2) of God, e.g., Acts 10:2, 22; 13:16, 26; Col. 3:22 (RV, “the Lord”); 1 Pet. 2:17; Rev. 14:7; 15:4; 19:5; (a) and (b) are combined in Luke 12:4, 5, where Christ warns His followers not to be afraid of men, but to “fear” God. See MARVEL, B, No. 1, Note.

2. eulbeomai (εὐλαβέομαι, 2125), “to be cautious, to beware” (see A, No. 3), signifies to act with the reverence produced by holy “fear,” Heb. 11:7, “moved with godly fear.”

Notes: (1) In Acts 23:10 some mss. have this verb with the meaning (a) under No. 1.

(2) In Luke 3:14, diaseio, “to shake violently, to intimidate, to extort by violence, blackmail,” is rendered “put no man in fear” in KJV marg. See VIOLENCE.

FEAST

A. Nouns.

1. heorte (ἑορτή, 1859), “a feast or festival,” is used (a) especially of those of the Jews, and particularly of the Passover; the word is found mostly in John’s gospel (seventeen times); apart from the Gospels it is used in this way only in Acts 18:21; (b) in a more general way, in Col. 2:16, KJV, “holy day,” RV, “a feast day.”

2. deipnon (δεῖπνον, 1173) denotes (a) “the chief meal of the day,” dinner or supper, taken at or towards evening; in the plural “feasts,” Matt. 23:6; Mark 6:21; 12:39; Luke 20:46; otherwise translated “supper,” Luke 14:12, 16, 17, 24; John 12:2; 13:2, 4; 21:20; 1 Cor. 11:21 (of a social meal); (b) “the Lord’s Supper,” 1 Cor. 11:20; (c) “the supper or feast” which will celebrate the marriage of Christ with His spiritual Bride, at the inauguration of His Kingdom, Rev. 19:9; (d) figuratively, of that to which the birds of prey will be summoned after the overthrow of the enemies of the Lord at the termination of the war of Armageddon, 19:17 (cf. Ezek. 39:4, 17-20). See SUPPER.¶

3. doche (δοχή, 1403), “a reception feast, a banquet” (from dechomai, “to receive”), Luke 5:29; 14:13 (not the same as No 2; see v. 12).¶

4. gamos (γάμος, 1062), “a wedding,” especially a wedding “feast” (akin to gameo, “to marry”); it is used in the plural in the following passages (the RV rightly has “marriage feast” for the KJV, “marriage,” or “wedding”), Matt. 22:2, 3, 4, 9 (in verses 11, 12, it is used in the singular, in connection with the wedding garment); 25:10; Luke 12:36; 14:8; in the following it signifies a wedding itself, John 2:1, 2; Heb. 13:4; and figuratively in Rev. 19:7, of the marriage of the Lamb; in v. 9 it is used in connection with the supper, the wedding supper (or what in English is termed “breakfast”), not the wedding itself, as in v. 7.

5. agape (ἀγάπη, 26), “love,” is used in the plural in Jude 12, signifying “love feasts,” RV (KJV, “feasts of charity”); in the corresponding passage, 2 Pet. 2:13, the most authentic mss. have the word apate, in the plural, “deceivings.”

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 10:27 the verb kaleo, “to call,” in the sense of inviting to one’s house, is translated “biddeth you (to a feast)”; in the most authentic texts there is no separate phrase representing “to a feast,” as in some mss., eis deipnon (No. 2). (2) In Mark 14:2 and John 2:23 the KJV translates heorte (see No. 1) by “feast day” (RV, “feast”). (3) For the “Feast of the Dedication,” John 10:22, see DEDICATION.

B. Verbs.

1. heortizo (ἐορτάζω, 1858), “to keep festival” (akin to A, No. 1) is translated “let us keep the feast,” in 1 Cor. 5:8. This is not the Lord’s Supper, nor the Passover, but has reference to the continuous life of the believer as a festival or holy-day (see KJV, margin), in freedom from “the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.”¶

2. suneuocheo (συνευωχέω, 4910), “to entertain sumptuously with,” is used in the passive voice, denoting “to feast sumptuously with” (sun, “together,” and euochia, “good cheer”), “to revel with,” translated “feast with” in 2 Pet. 2:13 and Jude 12.¶

FEEBLE

asthenes (ἀσθενής, 772), “without strength” (a, negative, and sthenos, “strength”), is translated “feeble” in 1 Cor. 12:22, of members of the body. See IMPOTENT, SICK, STRENGTH, B, Note (5), WEAK.

Notes: (1) In Heb. 12:12 paraluo, “to weaken, enfeeble,” in the passive voice, “to be enfeebled,” as by a paralytic stroke, is translated “feeble” in the KJV (RV, “palsied”). (2) For “feeble-minded” in 1 Thess. 5:14, KJV, see FAINTHEARTED.

FEED, FED

1. bosko (βόσκω, 1006), “to feed,” is primarily used of a herdsman (from boo, “to nourish,” the special function being to provide food; the root is bo, found in boter, “a herdsman or herd,” and botane, “fodder, pasture”), its uses are (a) literal, Matt. 8:30; in v. 33, the RV corrects the KJV, “they that kept,” to “they that fed,” as in Mark. 5:14 (KJV and RV) and Luke 8:34; in Mark 5:11 and Luke 8:32, “feeding”; Luke 15:15; (b) metaphorical, of spiritual ministry, John 21:15, 17 (see Note on No. 2). See KEEP.¶

2. poimaino (ποιμαίνω, 4165), “to act as a shepherd” (from poimen, “a shepherd”), is used (a) literally, Luke 17:7, RV, “keeping sheep,” for KJV, “feeding cattle”; 1 Cor. 9:7, (b) metaphorically, “to tend, to shepherd”; said of Christ Matt. 2:6, RV, “shall be Shepherd of” (for KJV, “shall rule”); of those who act as spiritual shepherds under Him, John 21:16, RV, “tend” (for KJV “feed”), so 1 Pet. 5:2; Acts 20:28, “to feed” (“to tend” would have been a consistent rendering; a shepherd does not only “feed” his flock); of base shepherds, Jude 12. See RULE.

Note: In John 21:15, 16, 17, the Lord, addressing Peter, first uses No. 1, bosko (v. 15) then No. 2, poimaino (v. 16), and then returns to bosko (v. 17). These are not simply interchangeable (nor are other variations in His remarks); a study of the above notes will show this. Nor, again, is there a progression of ideas. The lesson to be learnt, as Trench points out (Syn. Sec.xxv), is that, in the spiritual care of God’s children, the “feeding” of the flock from the Word of God is the constant and regular necessity; it is to have the foremost place. The tending (which includes this) consists of other acts, of discipline, authority, restoration, material assistance of individuals, but they are incidental in comparison with the “feeding.”

3. trepho (τρέφω, 5142) signifies (a) “to make to grow, bring up, rear,” Luke 4:16, “brought up”; (b) “to nourish, feed,” Matt. 6:26; 25:37; Luke 12:24; Acts 12:20; Rev. 12:6, 14; of a mother, “to give suck,” Luke 23:29 (some mss. here have thelazo, “to suckle”); “to fatten,” as of fattening animals, Jas. 5:5, “ye have nourished (your hearts).” See BRING, A, No. 33.¶

4. chortazo (χορτάζω, 5526), “to feed, to fatten,” is used (a) primarily of animals, Rev. 19:21; (b) of persons, to fill or satisfy with food. It is usually translated by the verb “to fill,” but is once rendered “to be fed,” in Luke 16:21, of Lazarus, in his desire for the crumbs (he could be well supplied with them) that fell from the rich man’s table, a fact which throws light upon the utter waste that went on at the table of the latter. The crumbs that fell would provide no small meal. See FILL, SATISFY.

5. psomizo (ψωμίζω, 5595) primarily denotes “to feed with morsels,” as nurses do child dren; then, “to dole out or supply with food,” Rom. 12:20; 1 Cor. 13:3.¶ Cf. psomion, “a fragment, morsel,” John 13:26, 27, 30 (“sop”).¶

6. potizo (ποτίζω, 4222), to give to drink, is translated “I fed (you with milk)” in 1 Cor. 3:2. See DRINK, WATER.

FEEL, FEELING, FELT

1. ginosko (γινώσκω, 1097), “to know, perceive,” is translated “she felt (in her body),” of the woman with the issue of blood, Mark 5:29, i.e., she became aware of the fact. See KNOW.

2. phroneo (φρονέω, 5426), “to think, to be minded,” is translated “I felt” in the RV of 1 Cor. 13:11 (for KJV, I understood). See CAREFUL.

3. pselaphao (ψηλαφάω, 5584), “to feel or grope about” (from psao, “to touch”), expressing the motion of the hands over a surface, so as to “feel” it, is used (a) metaphorically, of seeking after God, Acts 17:27; (b) literally, of physical handling or touching, Luke 24:39 with 1 John 1:1; Heb. 12:18. See HANDLE, TOUCH.¶

4. sumpatheo (συμπαθέω, 4834), “to have a fellow-feeling for or with,” is rendered “touched with the feeling of” in Heb. 4:15; “have compassion” in 10:34. See COMPASSION.¶

5. apalgeo (ἀπαλγέω, 524) signifies “to cease to feel pain for” (apo, “from,” algeo, “to feel pain”; cf. Eng., “neuralgia”); hence, to be callous, “past feeling,” insensible to honor and shame, Eph. 4:19.¶

Note: In Acts 28:5 pascho, “to suffer,” is rendered “felt (no harm),” RV, “took,” lit., “suffered no ill (effect).”

For FEET see FOOT

FEIGN, FEIGNED

A. Verb.

hupokrinomai (ὑποκρίνομαι, 5271) primarily denotes “to answer”; then, “to answer on the stage, play a part,” and so, metaphorically, “to feign, pretend,” Luke 20:20.¶ Cf. hupokrites, “a hypocrite,” and hupokrisis, “hypocrisy.”

B. Adjective.

plastos (πλαστός, 4112) primarily denotes “formed, molded” (from plasso, to mold; Eng., “plastic”); then, metaphorically, “made up, fabricated, feigned,” 2 Pet. 2:3.¶ Cf. plasma, “that which is molded,” Rom. 9:20.¶

For FELL see FALL

FELLOW

1. aner (άνήρ, 435) denotes “a man,” in relation to his sex or age; in Acts 17:5 (plural) it is rendered “fellows,” as more appropriate to the accompanying description of them. See HUSBAND, MAN, SIR.

2. hetairos (ἑταῖρος, 2083), “a companion, comrade,” is translated “fellows” in Matt. 11:16 [where, however, the most authentic mss. have heterois, “(the) others”]. The word is used only by Matthew and is translated “friend” in 20:13; 22:12; 26:50. See FRIEND.¶

3. metochos (μέτοχος, 3353), properly an adjective, signifying “sharing in, partaking of,” is translated “partners” in Luke 5:7; “partakers” in Heb. 3:1, 14; 6:4; 12:8; “fellows” in Heb. 1:9, of those who share in a heavenly calling, or have held, or will hold, a regal position in relation to the earthly, messianic kingdom. (Cf. summetochos, “fellow-partakers,” in Eph. 3:6, RV). See PARTAKER, PARTNER.

Notes: (1) In Acts 24:5 loimos, “a plague, a pest,” is rendered “a pestilent fellow.” This is a sample of the strongest use of the epithet “fellow.” (2) Toioutos, an adjective, “such a one,” is often used as a noun, e.g., Acts 22:22, where it is translated “such a fellow.” (3) Houtos, “this,” is translated “this fellow” in the KJV of Luke 23:2 (RV, “this man”). So in John 9:29. Both versions have “this man,” e.g., in Mark 2:7; John 6:52, in the same contemptuous sense. (4) For the word in combination with various nouns see CITIZEN, DISCIPLE, ELDER, HEIR, HELPER, LABORER, MEMBER, PARTNER, PRISONER, SERVANT, SOLDIER, WORK, WORKER.

FELLOWSHIP

A. Nouns.

1. koinonia (κοινωνία, 2842), (a) “communion, fellowship, sharing in common” (from koinos, “common”), is translated “communion” in 1 Cor. 10:16; Philem. 6, RV, “fellowship,” for KJV, “communication”; it is most frequently translated “fellowship”; (b) “that which is the outcome of fellowship, a contribution,” e.g., Rom. 15:26; 2 Cor. 8:4. See COMMUNION, CONTRIBUTION, etc.

Note: In Eph. 3:9, some mss. have koinonia, instead of oikonomia, “dispensation,” RV.

2. metoche (μετοχή, 3352), “partnership” (akin to No. 3, under FELLOW), is translated “fellowship” in 2 Cor. 6:4.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 122:3, “Jerusalem is built as a city whose fellowship is complete.”¶ The word seems to have a more restricted sense than koinonia. Cf. the verb form in Heb. 2:14.

3. koinonos (κοινωνός, 2844) denotes “a partaker” or “partner” (akin to No. 1); in 1 Cor. 10:20 it is used with ginomai, “to become,” “that ye should have communion with,” RV (KJV, fellowship with). See COMPANION, PARTAKER, PARTNER.

B. Verbs.

1. koinoneo (κοινωνέω, 2841), “to have fellowship,” is so translated in Phil. 4:15, RV, for KJV, “did communicate.” See COMMUNICATE.

2. sunkoinoneo (συγκοινωνέω, 4790), “to have fellowship with or in” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is used in Eph. 5:11; Phil. 4:14, RV, “ye had fellowship,” for KJV, “ye did communicate”; Rev. 18:4, RV, “have (no) fellowship with,” for KJV, “be (not) partakers of” See COMMUNICATE, PARTAKER.¶

For FELT see FEEL

FEMALE

thelus (θήλυς, 2338), an adjective (from thele, “a breast”), is used in the form thelu (grammatically neuter) as a noun, “female,” in Matt. 19:4; Mark 10:6; Gal. 3:28; in the feminine form theleia, in Rom. 1:26, “women”; v. 27 “woman.” See WOMAN.¶

FERVENT, FERVENTLY

A. Adjective.

ektenes (ἐκτενής, 1618) denotes “strained, stretched” (ek, “out,” teino, “to stretch”); hence, metaphorically, “fervent,” 1 Pet. 4:8. Some mss. have it in Acts 12:5, for the adverb (see B).¶ Cf. ekteneia (with en), “intently, strenuously,” in Acts 26:7, KJV, “instantly,” RV, “earnestly.” Cf. EARNEST.

B. Adverb.

ektenos (ἐκτενώς, 1619), “fervently” (akin to A), is said of love, in 1 Pet. 1:22; of prayer, in some mss., Acts 12:5 (see under A); for the comparative degree in Luke 22:44, see EARNESTLY.¶

C. Verb.

zeo (ζέω, 2204), “to be hot, to boil” (Eng. “zeal” is akin), is metaphorically used of “fervency” of spirit, Acts 18:25; Rom. 12:11.¶

Notes: (1) In Col. 4:12, the verb agonizomai, “to strive,” is translated “laboring fervently,” KJV (RV, “striving”). (2) In 2 Cor. 7:7, the noun zelos, “zeal” (akin to C.), is translated “fervent mind,” KJV (RV, “zeal”). (3) In Jas. 5:17, “he prayed fervently” (KJV, “earnestly”) translates the noun proseuche, followed by the corresponding verb, lit., “he prayed with prayer.” In v. 16 deesis, “supplication,” is so translated in the RV, for the KJV, “effectual fervent prayer.” There is nothing in the original corresponding to the word “effectual.” The phrase, including the verb energeomai, “to work in,” is, lit., “the inworking supplication,” suggesting a supplication consistent with inward conformity to the mind of God. (4) For “fervent heat” see HEAT, B.

FETCH

metapempo (μεταπέμπω, 3343), “to send after or for” (meta, “after,” pempo, “to send”), in the middle voice, is translated “fetch” in the RV of Acts 10:5 and 11:13. See CALL.

Notes: (1) In Acts 16:37, the RV gives to exago, “to bring out,” the adequate meaning “let them ... bring us out,” for the KJV, “let them fetch us out.” “Fetch” is not sufficiently dignified for the just demand made. (2) For Acts 28:13, KJV, “fetched a compass,” see CIRCUIT.

FETTER

pede (πέδη, 3976), “a fether” (akin to peza, “the instep,” and pous, “a foot”; cf. Eng. prefix ped-), occurs in Mark 5:4 and Luke 8:29. Cf FOOT.¶

FEVER (to be sick of) A. Noun.

puretos (πυρετός, 4446), “feverish heat” (from pur, “fire”), hence, “a fever,” occurs in Matt. 8:15; Mark 1:31; John 4:52; Acts 28:8; in Luke 4:38, with megas, “great, a high fever”; v. 39. Luke, as a physician, uses the medical distinction by which the ancients classified fevers into great and little.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 28:22.¶

B. Verb.

puresso (πυρέσσω, 4445) signifies “to be ill of a fever” (akin to A), Matt. 8:14; Mark 1:30.¶

FEW

A. Adjectives.

1. oligos (ὀλίγος, 3641), used of number quantity, and size, denotes “few, little, small, slight,” e.g., Matt. 7:14; 9:37; 15:34; 20:16; neuter plural, “a few things,” Matt. 25:21, 23; Rev. 2:14 (20 in some mss.); in Eph. 3:3, the phrase en oligo, in brief, is translated “in a few words.”

2. brachus (βραχύς, 1024) denotes (a) “short,” in regard to time, e.g., Heb. 2:7; or distance, Acts 27:28; (b) “few,” in regard to quantity, Heb. 13:22, in the phrase dia bracheon, lit., “by means of few,” i.e., “in few words.” See LITTLE.

Note: In Luke 10:42, in the Lord’s words to Martha, many ancient authorities provide the rendering, “but there is need of few things (neuter plural) or one.”

B. Adverb.

suntomos (συντόμως, 4935), “concisely, briefly, cut short” (from suntemno, “to cut in pieces,” sun, used intensively, temno, “to cut”), occurs in the speech of Tertullus, Acts 24:4.¶

FICKLENESS

elaphria (ἐλαφρία, 1644) denotes lightness, levity, “fickleness,” 2 Cor. 1:17, RV (for KJV, “lightness”).¶ The corresponding adjective is elaphros, “light,” Matt. 11:30; 2 Cor. 4:17.¶

FIDELITY

pistis (πίστις, 4102), “faith, faithfulness,” is translated “fidelity” in Titus 2:10. See FAITH (b).

FIELD, CORNFIELD

1. agros (ἄγρός, 68), “a cultivated field,” or “fields in the aggregate,” e.g., Matt. 6:28; Mark 11:8 (some mss. here have dendron, “trees”); Luke 15:15. See FARM.

2. chora (χώρα, 5561), (a) “a space, place,” then, (b) “land, country, region,” is translated “fields” in John 4:35; Jas. 5:4. See COUNTRY.

3. chorion (χωρίον, 5564), a diminutive of No. 2, denotes (a) “a place, region,” (b) “a piece of land, property,” rendered “field” in Acts 1:18, 19. See LAND, PARCEL, PLACE, POSSESSION.

4. sporimos (σπόριμος, 4702) signifies “fit for sowing” (from speiro, “to sow”), and denotes “a cornfield,” Matt. 12:1; Mark 2:23; Luke 6:1.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 1:29; Lev. 11:37.¶

FERCE, FIERCENESS

A. Adjectives.

1. anemeros (ἀνήμερος, 434) signifies “not tame, savage” (from a negative, and hemeros, “gentle”), 2 Tim. 3:3. Epictetus describes those who forget God as their creator, as resembling lions, “wild, savage and fierce” (anemeroi) (Moulton and Milligan, Greek Test Vocab.).¶

2. chalepos (χαλέπος, 5467) “hard,” (a) “hard to do or deal with, difficult, fierce,” is said of the Gadarene demoniacs, Matt. 8:28; (b) “hard to bear, painful, grievous,” said of the last times, 2 Tim. 3:1, RV, “grievous,” for KJV, “perilous.” See GRIEVOUS.¶

Notes: (1) In Jas. 3:4, skleros, “hard, rough, violent,” is said of winds, RV, “rough,” for KJV, “fierce.” (2) In Luke 23:5, the verb epischuo, “to make or grow stronger” (from epi, “over,” intensive, and ischus, “strength”), is used metaphorically, “they were the more urgent,” RV, for KJV, “the more fierce.”¶

B. Nouns.

1. thumos (θυμός, 2372), “hot anger, wrath,” is rendered “fierceness” in Rev. 16:19; 19:15, of the wrath of God. See ANGER (A, Notes), INDIGNATION, WRATH.

2. zelos (ζήλος, 2205), “zeal, jealousy,” is rendered “fierceness” in Heb. 10:27, RV (of fire).

FIERY

puroo (πυρόω, 4448), “to set on fire, burn up” (from pur, “fire”), always used in the passive voice in the NT, is translated “fiery” in Eph. 6:16, metaphorically of the darts of the evil one; “fire-tipped” would perhaps bring out the verbal force of the word. The most ancient mss. have the article repeated, lit., “the darts of the evil one, the fiery (darts),” marking them as particularly destructive. Some mss. omit the repeated article. In ancient times, darts were often covered with burning material. See BURN, FIRE, TRY, Note (1).

Notes: (1) For Heb. 10:27, RV, see FIRE (cf. FIERCE, B, No. 2). (2) For purosis, “a fiery trial,” 1 Pet. 4:12, (lit., “a burning,” as in Rev. 18:9, 18), “a refining, or trial by fire,” see TRIAL.

FIFTEEN, FIFTEENTH

dekapente (δεκαπέντε, 1178), lit., “ten-five,” occurs in John 11:18; Acts 27:28; Gal. 1:18.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 7:14, “threescore and fifteen” translates a different numeral, lit., “seventy-five.” This refers to all Joseph’s kindred whom he sent for. There is no discrepancy between this and Gen. 46:26. The Sept. translations give the number as 75 in Gen. 46:27 and in Exod. 1:5, and this Stephen follows, being a Grecian Jew. (2) The corresponding ordinal numeral pentekaidekatos, “fifteenth” (lit., “five and tenth”) is found in Luke 3:1, where Luke dates the reign of Tiberias from the period of his joint rule with Augustus.

FIFTH

pemptos (πέμπτος, 3991), akin to pente, “five,” is found only in the Apocalypse, 6:9; 9:1; 16:10; 21:20.¶

FIFTY

pentekonta (πεντήκοντα, 4004) is found in Luke 7:41; 16:6; John 8:57; 21:11; Acts 13:20; in Mark 6:40 with kata (in the most authentic mss.), according to, “by fifties”; in Luke 9:14, with ana, “up,” used distributively, “fifty each,” RV (Luke adds hosei, “about”).¶

1. sukon (σῦκον, 4810) denotes “the ripe fruit of a suke, a fig-tree” (see below; cf. No. 2), Matt. 7:16; Mark 11:13; Luke 6:44; Jas. 3:12.¶

2. olunthos (ὄλυνθος, 3653) denotes “an unripe fig,” which grows in winter and usually falls off in the spring, Rev. 6:13.¶ In the Sept. Song of Sol., 2:13.¶

FIG TREE

suke or sukea (συκῆ, 4808), “a fig tree,” is found in Matt. 21:19, 20, 21; 24:32; Mark 11:13, 20, 21; 13:28; Luke 13:6, 7; 21:29; John 1:48, 50, Jas. 3:12; Rev. 6:13 (see sukon, above).¶

Note: A “fig tree” with leaves must have young fruits already, or it will be barren for the season. The first figs ripen in late May or early June. The tree in Mark 11:13 should have had fruit, unripe indeed, but existing. In some lands “fig trees” bear the early fruit under the leaves and the later fruit above the leaves. In that case the leaves were a sign that there should have been fruit, unseen from a distance, underneath the leaves. The condemnation of this fig tree lay in the absence of any sign of fruit.

FIGHT

A. Nouns.

1. agon (ἀγών, 73), akin to ago, “to lead,” primarily “a gathering,” then, “a place of assembly,” and hence, “a contest, conflict,” is translated “fight” in 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 4:7. See CONFLICT.

2. athlesis (ἄθλησις, 119) is translated fight in Heb. 10:32, KJV. See CONFLICT.¶

Note: In Heb. 11:34, polemos, “war,” is translated “fight,” KJV (RV, “war”); it is misrendered “battle” in the KJV of 1 Cor. 14:8; Rev. 9:7, 9; 16:14; 20:8.

B. Verbs.

1. agonizomai (ἀγωνίζομαι, 75), from A, No. 1, denotes (a) “to contend” in the public games, 1 Cor. 9:25 (“striveth in the games,” RV); (b) “to fight, engage in conflict,” John 18:36; (c) metaphorically, “to contend” perseveringly against opposition and temptation, 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 4:7 (cf. A, No. 1; in regard to the meaning there, the evidence of Koine inscriptions is against the idea of games-contests); to strive as in a contest for a prize, straining every nerve to attain to the object Luke 13:24; to put forth every effort, involving toil, Col. 1:29; 1 Tim. 4:10 (some mss. have oneidizomai here, “to suffer reproach”); to wrestle earnestly in prayer, Col. 4:12 (cf. sunagonizomai, Rom. 15:30). See LABOR, STRIVE.¶

2. pukteuo (πυκτέω, 4438), “to box” (from puktes, “a pugilist”), one of the events in the Olympic games, is translated “fight” in 1 Cor. 9:26.¶

3. machomai (μάχομαι, 3164), “to fight,” is so rendered in Jas. 4:2 (cf. “fightings,” v. 1, see below), and translated “strive” in 2 Tim. 2:24; “strove” in John 6:52; Acts 7:26. See STRIVE.¶

4. theriomacheo (θηριομαχέω, 2341) signifies “to fight with wild beasts” (therion, “a beast,” and No. 3), 1 Cor. 15:32. Some think that the apostle was condemned to fight with wild beasts; if so, he would scarcely have omitted it from 2 Cor. 11:23-end. Moreover, he would have lost his status as a Roman citizen. Probably he uses the word figuratively of contending with ferocious men. Ignatius so uses it in his Ep. to the Romans.¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 2:16 and 12:7, KJV, polemeo, “to war,” is translated “to fight,” RV, “will make war,” “going forth to war,” and “warred.” (2) In Acts 23:9 some mss. have the verb theomacheo, “to fight against God.” Cf. the corresponding adjective, below, under FIGHTING.

FIGHTING

A. Noun.

mache (μάχη, 3163), “a fight, strife” (akin to B, No. 3, under FIGHT), is always used in the plural in the NT, and translated “fightings” in 2 Cor. 7:5; Jas. 4:1; and Titus 3:9, RV (for KJV, “strivings”); “strifes” in 2 Tim. 2:23. See STRIFE.¶

B. Adjective.

theomachos (θεόμαχος, 2314), “fighting against God” (theos, “God,” and A, occurs in Acts 5:39 (KJV, “to fight”), lit., “God-fighters.”)¶

FIGURE

1. tupos (τύπος, 5179), “a type, figure, pattern,” is translated “figures” (i.e., representations of gods) in Acts 7:43; in the RV of v. 44 (for KJV, “fashion”) and in Rom. 5:14, of Adam as a “figure of Christ.” See ENSAMPLE.

2. antitupos (ἀντίτυπον, 499), an adjective, used as a noun, denotes, lit., “a striking back”; metaphorically, “resisting, adverse”; then, in a passive sense, “struck back”; in the NT metaphorically, “corresponding to,” (a) a copy of an archetype (anti, “corresponding to, and No. 1), i.e., the event or person or circumstance corresponding to the type, Heb. 9:24, RV, “like in pattern” (KJV, “the figure of”), of the tabernacle, which, with its structure and appurtenances, was a pattern of that “holy place,” “Heaven itself,” “the true,” into which Christ entered, “to appear before the face of God for us.” The earthly tabernacle anticipatively represented what is now made good in Christ; it was a “figure” or “parable” (9:9), “for the time now present,” RV, i.e., pointing to the present time, not “then present,” KJV (see below); (b) “a corresponding type,” 1 Pet. 3:21, said of baptism; the circumstances of the flood, the ark and its occupants, formed a type, and baptism forms “a corresponding type” (not an antitype), each setting forth the spiritual realities of the death, burial, and resurrection of believers in their identification with Christ. It is not a case of type and antitype, but of two types, that in Genesis, the type, and baptism, the corresponding type.¶

3. parabole (παράβολή, 3850), “a casting or placing side by side” (para, “beside,” ballo, “to throw”) with a view to comparison or resemblance, a parable, is translated “figure” in the KJV of Heb. 9:9 (RV, “a parable for the time now present”) and 11:19, where the return of Isaac was (parabolically, in the lit. sense of the term) figurative of resurrection (RV, “parable”). See No. 2 (a). See PARABLE.

Notes: (1) The synonymous noun hupotuposis, “an example, pattern,” 1 Tim. 1:16; 2 Tim. 1:13, denotes simply a delineation or outline.¶ (2) For metaschemaizo, rendered “I have in a figure transferred” in 1 Cor. 4:6, where the fact stated is designed to change its application, i.e., from Paul and Apollos to circumstances in Corinth, see FASHION.

FILL, FILL UP

A. Verbs.

1. pleroo (πληρόω, 4137) denotes (1) “to make full, to fill to the full”; in the passive voice, “to be filled, made full”; it is used (1) of things: a net, Matt. 13:48; a building, John 12:3; Acts 2:2; a city, Acts 5:28; needs, Phil. 4:19, KJV “supply,” RV, “fulfill”; metaphorically, of valleys, Luke 3:5; figuratively, of a measure of iniquity, Matt. 23:32; (2) of persons: (a) of the members of the church, the body of Christ, as filled by Him, Eph. 1:23 (“all things in all the members”); 4:10; in 3:19, of their being filled “into” (eis), RV, “unto,” KJV, “with” (all the fullness of God); of their being “made full” in Him, Col. 2:10 (RV, for KJV, “complete”); (b) of Christ Himself: with wisdom, in the days of His flesh, Luke 2:40; with joy, in His return to the Father, Acts 2:28; (c) of believers: with the Spirit, Eph. 5:18; with joy, Acts 13:52; 2 Tim. 1:4; with joy and peace, Rom. 15:13, [from these are to be distinguished those passages which speak of joy as being fulfilled or completed, which come under FULFILL, John 3:29; 15:11 (RV); 16:24 (RV); Phil. 2:2; 1 John 1:4 (RV); 2 John 12 (RV)]; with knowledge, Rom. 15:14; with comfort, 2 Cor. 7:4;

with the fruits of righteousness, Phil. 1:11 (Gk. “fruit”); with the knowledge of God’s will, Col. 1:9; with abundance through material supplies by fellow believers, Phil. 4:18; (d) of the hearts of believers as the seat of emotion and volition, John 16:6 (sorrow); Acts 5:3 (deceitfulness); (e) of the unregenerate who refuse recognition of God, Rom. 1:29; (II), “to accomplish, complete, fulfill. See ACCOMPLISH, FULFILL.

2. anapleroo (ἀναπληρόω, 378), “to fill up adequately, completely” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), is twice translated by the verbs “to fill, to fill up,” in 1 Cor. 14:16, RV (for KJV, “occupieth”), of a believer as a member of an assembly, who “fills” the position or condition (not one who “fills” it by assuming it) of being unable to understand the language of him who had the gift of tongues; in 1 Thess. 2:16, “to fill up their sins,” of the Jews who persisted in their course of antagonism and unbelief See FULFILL.

3. antanapleroo (ἀνταναπληρόω, 466), “to fill up in turn (or on one’s part”; anti, “corresponding to,” and No. 2), is used in Col. 1:24, of the apostle’s responsive devotion to Christ in “filling” up, or undertaking on his part a full share of, the sufferings which follow after the sufferings of Christ, and are experienced by the members of His Body, the church. “The point of the apostle’s boast is that Christ, the sinless Master, should have left something for Paul, the unworthy servant, to suffer” (Lightfoot, on Col., p. 165).¶

4. sumpleroo (συμπληρόω, 4845), “to fill completely” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is used in the passive voice (a) of a boat filling with water, and, by metonymy, of the occupants themselves, Luke 8:23 (RV, “were filling”); (b) of “fulfilling,” with regard to time, “when the days were well-nigh come,” RV, for KJV, “when the time was come” (RV, marg., “were being fulfilled”), Luke 9:51; Acts 2:1, see RV, marg. See COME.¶ In the Sept. Jer. 25:12.¶

5. pimplemi (πλήθω, 4130) and pletho (πλήθω, 4130), lengthened forms of pleo, “to fill” (pletho supplies certain tenses of pimplemi), is used (1) of things; boats, with fish, Luke 5:7; a sponge, with vinegar, Matt. 27:48 (some mss. have this verb in John 19:29); a city, with confusion, Acts 19:29; a wedding, with guests, Matt. 22:10; (2) of persons (only in Luke’s writings): (a) with the Holy Spirit, Luke 1:15, 41, 67; Acts 2:4; 4:8, 31; 9:17; 13:9; (b) with emotions: wrath, Luke 4:28; fear, 5:26; madness, 6:11; wonder, amazement, Acts 3:10; jealousy, 5:17, RV, for KJV, “indignation,” and 13:45 (KJV, “envy”). For its other significance, “to complete,” see ACCOMPLISH.

6. empiplemi (ἐμπίπλημι, 1705) or empletho (as in No. 5), “to fill full, to satisfy,” is used (a) of “filling” the hungry, Luke 1:53; John 6:12; of the abundance of the rich, Luke 6:25; (b) metaphorically, of a company of friends, Rom. 15:24, RV, “satisfied,” for KJV, “filled.”¶

7. empiplao (ἐμπίπλημι, 1705v), an alternative form of No. 6, is found in Acts 14:17, “filling (your hearts),” of God’s provision for mankind.¶

8. chortazo (χορτάζω, 5526), “to fill or satisfy with food,” e.g., Matt. 15:33; Phil. 4:12, is used metaphorically in Matt. 5:6; Luke 6:21. See FEED.

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

9. gemizo (γεμίζω, 1072), “to fill or load full,” is used of a boat, Mark 4:37 (RV, “was filling”); a sponge, Mark 15:36 (cf. No. 5, Matt. 27:48), a house, Luke 14:23; the belly, Luke 15:16; waterpots, John 2:1; baskets, 6:13; bowls, with fire, Rev. 8:5; the temple, with smoke, 15:8.¶ Cf. gemo, “to be full.” See FULL.

10. korennumi (κορέννυμι, 2880), “to satisfy” (akin to koros, “a surfeit”), is used metaphorically of spiritual things, in 1 Cor. 4:8, RV, “ye are filled”; in Acts 27:38, “had eaten enough,” lit., “having being satisfied with food.” See EAT, ENOUGH.¶

11. mestoo (μεστώω, 3325), “to fill full,” from mestos, “full,” is used of being “filled” with wine, Acts 2:13, RV, “are filled with.”¶

pleroma (πλήρωμα, 4138), fullness, has two meanings, (a) in the active sense, “that which fills up,” a piece of undressed cloth on an old garment, Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21, lit., “the filling” (RV, “that which should fill it up”), i.e., “the patch,” which is probably the significance; (b) “that which has been completed, the fullness,” e.g., Mark 8:20. See FULLNESS.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 18:6, KJV, kerannumi, “to mix,” is incorrectly rendered “to fill full” (RV, to mingle). (2) In Rev. 15:1, KJV, teleo, “to finish, complete,” is incorrectly rendered “filled up” (RV, “finished”); the contents of the seven bowls are not the sum total of the divine judgments; they form the termination of them; there are many which precede (see previous chapters), which are likewise comprised under “the wrath of God,” to be executed at the closing period of the present age, e.g., 6:17; 11:18; 14:10, 19.

FILTH

1. perikatharma (περικάθαρμα, 4027) denotes “offscouring, refuse” (lit., “cleanings,” i.e., that which is thrown away in cleansing; from perikathairo, “to purify all around,” i.e., completely, as in the Sept. of Deut. 18:10; Josh. 5:4.¶) It is once used in the Sept. (Prov. 21:18) as the price of expiation; among the Greeks the term was applied to victims sacrificed to make expiation; they also used it of criminals kept at the public expense, to be thrown into the sea, or otherwise killed, at the outbreak of a pestilence, etc. It is used in 1 Cor. 4:13 much in this sense (not of sacrificial victims), “the filth of the world” representing “the most abject and despicable men” (Grimm-Thayer), the scum or rubbish of humanity.¶

2. rhupos (ρύπος, 4509) denotes “dirt, filth,” 1 Pet. 3:21.¶ Cf. rhuparia, “filthiness” (see A, No. 2, below); rhuparos, “vile,” Jas. 2:2; Rev. 22:11, in the best mss. (see B, No. 3, below);¶ rhupoo, “to make filthy,” Rev. 22:11;¶ rhupaino (see D below).

FILTHINESS, FILTHY (to make) A. Nouns.

1. aischrotes (αἰσχρότης, 151), “baseness” (from aischos, “shame, disgrace”), is used in Eph. 5:4, of obscenity, all that is contrary to purity.¶

2. rhuparia (ρυπαρία, 4507) denotes “dirt, filth” (cf. No. 2, under FILTH), and is used metaphorically of moral “defilement” in Jas. 1:21.¶

3. molusmos (μολυσμός, 3436), “a soiling, defilement,” is used in 2 Cor. 7:1. See DEFILEMENT.¶

4. aselgeia (ἀσέλγεια, 766), “wantonness, licentiousness, lasciviousness,” is translated “filthy (conversation),” in 2 Pet. 2:7, KJV; RV, lascivious (life). See LASCIVIOUSNESS, WANTONNESS.

Notes: (1) Broadly speaking, aischrotes signifies “whatever is disgraceful”; rhuparia, “that which is characterized by moral impurity”, molusmos, “that which is defiling by soiling the clean”; aselgeia, “that which is an insolent disregard of decency.” (2) In Col. 3:8 aischrologia, which denotes any kind of “base utterance,” the utterance of an uncontrolled tongue, is rendered “filthy communication” in the KJV; but this is only part of what is included in the more comprehensive RV rendering, “shameful speaking.” In the papyri writings the word is used of “abuse.” In general it seems to have been associated more frequently with “foul” or “filthy,” rather than abusive, “speaking” (Moulton and Milligan).¶

B. Adjectives.

1. aischros (αἰσχύρος, 150), “base, shameful” (akin to A, No. 1), is used of “base gain,” “filthy (lucre),” Titus 1:11, and translated “shame” in 1 Cor. 11:6, with reference to a woman with shorn hair; in 14:35, of oral utterances of women in a church gathering (RV, “shameful”); in Eph. 5:12, of mentioning the base and bestial practices of those who live lascivious lives. See SHAME.¶

2. aischrokerdes (αἰσχροκερδής, 146), “greedy of base gain” (No. 1, and kerdos, “gain”), is used in 1 Tim. 3:8 and Titus 1:7, “greedy of filthy lucre”; some mss. have it also in 1 Tim. 3:3.¶

3. rhuparos (ῥυπαρός, 4508), akin to A, No. 2 (see also FILTH, No. 2), “dirty,” is said of shabby clothing, Jas. 2:2; metaphorically, of moral “defilement,” Rev. 22:11 (in the best mss.).¶

Note: For akathartos see UNCLEAN, No. 1.

C. Adverb.

aischrokerdos (αἰσχροκερδῶς, 147), “eagerness for base gain” (akin to B, No. 2), is used in 1 Pet. 5:2, “for filthy lucre.”¶

D. Verb.

rhupaino (ῥυπῶω, 4510v), “to make filthy, defile” (from A, No. 2), is used in the passive voice, in an ethical sense, in Rev. 22:11 (cf. B, No. 3, in the same verse), “let him be made filthy,” RV. The tense (the aorist) marks the decisiveness of that which is decreed. Some texts have rhupareuomai, here, with the same meaning; some have rhupoo, in the middle voice, “to make oneself filthy.”¶

FINAL, FINALLY

A. Nouns.

1. peras (πέρας, 4009), “a limit, end,” is translated “final” in Heb. 6:16, RV, “an oath is final for confirmation” (the KJV connects the clauses differently). See END.

2. telos (τέλος, 5056), “an end,” most frequently of the termination of something, is used with the article adverbially, meaning “finally” or “as to the end,” i.e., as to the last detail, 1 Pet. 3:8. See END.

B. Adverb.

loipon (λοιπόν, 3063) is the neuter of the adjective loipos, remaining (which is used in its different genders as a noun, “the rest”), and is used either with the article or without, to signify “finally,” lit., “for the rest.” The apostle Paul uses it frequently in the concluding portion of his epistles, introducing practical exhortations, not necessarily implying that the letter is drawing to a close, but marking a transition in the subject-matter, as in Phil. 3:1, where the actual conclusion is for the time postponed and the farewell injunctions are resumed in 4:8. See also 1 Thess. 4:1 (KJV, “furthermore”); 2 Thess. 3:1.

FIND, FOUND

1. heurisko (εὕρισκω, 2147) denotes (a) “to find,” either with previous search, e.g., Matt. 7:7, 8, or without, e.g., Matt. 27:32; in the passive voice, of Enoch’s disappearance, Heb. 11:5; of mountains, Rev. 16:20; of Babylon and its occupants, 18:21, 22; (b) metaphorically, “to find out by enquiry,” or “to learn, discover,” e.g., Luke 19:48; John 18:38; 19:4, 6; Acts 4:21; 13:28; Rom. 7:10; Gal. 2:17, which indicates “the surprise of the Jew” who learned for the first time that before God he had no moral superiority over the Gentiles whom he superciliously dubbed “sinners,” while he esteemed himself to be “righteous”; 1 Pet. 1:7; Rev. 5:4; (c) in the middle voice, “to find for oneself, gain, procure, obtain,” e.g. Matt. 10:39; 11:29, “ye shall find (rest)”; Luke 1:30; Acts 7:46; 2 Tim. 1:18. See GET, OBTAIN.

2. aneurisko (ἀνευρίσκω, 429), “to find out” (by search), “discover” (ara, “up,” and No. 1), implying diligent searching, is used in Luke 2:16, of the shepherds in searching for and “finding” Mary and Joseph and the Child; in Acts 21:4, of Paul and his companions, in searching for and “finding” “the disciples” at Tyre [Acts 21:2, No. 1, is used).¶

3. lambano (λαμβάνω, 2983), “to take, receive,” is translated “finding (occasion)” in Rom. 7:11, RV (KJV, taking). See ACCEPT.

4. katalambano (καταλαμβάνω, 2638), “to lay hold of,” said of mental action, “to comprehend” by laying hold of or “finding” facts, is translated “I found,” of Festus regarding charges made against Paul, Acts 25:25. See APPREHEND.

Notes: (1) For sunanapauomai, “to be refreshed in spirit,” in Rom. 15:32, RV, “find rest with,” see FIND, REFRESH. (2) In Rom. 7:18, there is no word in the original for “find.” Hence the RV has “is not.” (3) In Rom. 11:33, anexichniastos, untraceable, is rendered “past finding out,” KJV, RV, “past tracing out” (ichniazo, “to track out”); in Eph. 3:8, “unsearchable. See TRACE, UNSEARCHABLE.¶

For FINE see BRASS, No. 4, FLOUR, GOODLY, Note, LINEN

daktulos (δάκτυλος, 1147), Matt. 23:4; Mark 7:33; Luke 11:46; 16:24; John 8:6; 20:25, 27, is used metaphorically in Luke 11:20, for the power of God, the effects of which are made visible to men (cf. Matt. 12:28, “by the Spirit of God”; cf. also Exod. 8:19).¶

FINISH

1. teleo (τελέω, 5055), “to bring to an end” (telos, “an end”), in the passive voice, “to be finished,” is translated by the verb “to finish” in Matt. 13:53; 19:1; 26:1; John 19:28, where the RV “are ... finished” brings out the force of the perfect tense (the same word as in v. 30, “It is finished”), which is missed in the KJV; as Stier says, “the word was in His heart before He uttered it”, 2 Tim. 4:7; Rev. 10:7; 11:7; 20:3, RV, “should be finished” (KJV, “fulfilled”), 5, 7, RV, “finished” (KJV, “expired”). In Rev. 15:1 the verb is rightly translated “is finished,” RV, see FILL, Note (2). In 15:8 the RV, “should be finished” corrects the KJV, “were fulfilled.” See ACCOMPLISH.

2. teleioo (τελειόω, 5048), akin to the adjective teleios, “complete, perfect,” and to No. 1, denotes “to bring to an end” in the sense of completing or perfecting, and is translated by the verb “to finish” in John 4:34; 5:36; 17:4; Acts 20:24. See CONSECRATE, FULFIL, PERFECT.

3. ekteleo (ἐκτελέω, 1615), lit., “to finish out,” i.e., “completely” (ek, “out,” intensive, and No. 1) is used in Luke 14:29, 30.¶

4. epiteleio (ἐπιτελέω, 2005), “to bring through to an end,” is rendered “finish” in 2 Cor. 8:6, KJV (RV, “complete”). See ACCOMPLISH.

5. sunteleo (συντελέω, 4931), “to bring to fulfillment, to effect,” is translated “finishing” (KJV, “will finish”) in Rom. 9:28. See COMPLETE.

6. dianuo (διανύω, 1274) is translated “had finished,” in Acts 21:7, of the voyage from Tyre to Ptolemais. As this is so short a journey, and this verb is intensive in meaning, some have suggested the rendering “but we having (thereby) completed our voyage (i.e., from Macedonia, 20:6), came from Tyre to Ptolemais.” In late Greek writers, however, the verb is used with the meaning “to continue,” and this is the probable sense here.¶

7. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, to come into existence,” is translated “were finished” in Heb. 4:3, i.e., were brought to their predestined end.

Notes: (1) In Luke 14:28, apartismos denotes “a completion,” and the phrase is, lit., “unto a completion.” The KJV has “to finish” (RV, “to complete”). See COMPLETE.¶ (2) In Jas. 1:15 apoteleo, “to perfect,” to bring to maturity, to become “fullgrown,” RV (KJV, “is finished”), is said of the full development of sin. (3) In Heb. 12:2 the RV suitably translates teleiotes “perfector,” for KJV, “finisher.”

FIRE

A. Nouns.

1. pur (πῦρ, 4442), (akin to which are No. 2, pura, and puretos, “a fever,” Eng., “fire,” etc.) is used (besides its ordinary natural significance):

(a) of the holiness of God, which consumes all that is inconsistent therewith, Heb. 10:27; 12:29; cf. Rev. 1:14; 2:18; 10:1; 15:2; 19:12; similarly of the holy angels as His ministers Heb. 1:7 in Rev. 3:18 it is symbolic of that which tries the faith of saints, producing what will glorify the Lord:

(b) of the divine judgment, testing the deeds of believers, at the judgment seat of Christ 1 Cor. 3:13 and 15:

(c) of the fire of divine judgment upon the rejectors of Christ, Matt. 3:11 (where a distinction is to be made between the baptism of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost and the “fire” of divine retribution; Acts 2:3 could not refer to baptism): Luke 3:16:

(d) of the judgments of God at the close of the present age previous to the establishment of the kingdom of Christ in the world, 2 Thess. 1:8; Rev. 18:8:

(e) of the “fire” of Hell, to be endured by the ungodly hereafter, Matt. 5:22; 13:42, 50; 18:8, 9; 25:41; Mark 9:43, 48; Luke 3:17:

(f) of human hostility both to the Jews and to Christ’s followers, Luke 12:49:

(g) as illustrative of retributive judgment upon the luxurious and tyrannical rich, Jas. 5:3:

(h) of the future overthrow of the Babylonish religious system at the hands of the Beast and the nations under him, Rev. 17:16:

(i) of turning the heart of an enemy to repentance by repaying his unkindness by kindness, Rom. 12:20:

(j) of the tongue, as governed by a “fiery” disposition and as exercising a destructive influence over others, Jas. 3:6:

(k) as symbolic of the danger of destruction, Jude 23.

Note: See also under FLAME.

2. pura (πυρά, 4443), from No. 1, denotes “a heap of fuel” collected to be set on fire (hence Eng., “pyre”), Acts 28:2, 3.¶

Note: In Mark 14:54, the italicized phrase “of the fire” is added in the Eng. versions to indicate the light as coming from the “fire.”

B. Adjective.

purinos (πύρινος, 4447), “fiery” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “of fire” in Rev. 9:17.¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 28:14, 16.¶

C. Verbs.

1. puroo (πυρόω, 4448) is translated “being on fire” (middle voice) in 2 Pet. 3:12. See FIERY.

2. phlogizo (φλογίζω, 5394), “to set on fire, burn up,” is used figuratively, in both active and passive voices, in Jas. 3:6, of the tongue, firstly of its disastrous effects upon the whole round of the circumstances of life; secondly, of satanic agency in using the tongue for this purpose.¶

metretes (μετρητής, 3355) is a liquid measure (akin to metreo, “to measure”), equivalent to one and a half Roman amphorae, or about nine gallons, John 2:6.¶

FIRM

1. bebaios (βέβαιος, 949), “firm, steadfast, secure” (from baino, “to go”), is translated “firm” in Heb. 3:6, of the maintenance of the boldness of the believer’s hope, and in 3:14, RV, of “the beginning of our confidence” (KJV, “steadfast”). See STEADFAST, SURE.

2. stereos (στερεός, 4731), “solid, hard, stiff,” is translated “firm” in 2 Tim. 2:19, RV, “the firm (foundation of God),” KJV, “(standeth) sure”; stereos is not part of the predicate; “solid (food)” in Heb. 5:12, 14, RV; “steadfast” in 1 Pet. 5:9. See SOLID, STEADFAST, STRONG.¶

Note: Cf. stereoō, “to make strong, establish,” Acts 3:7, 16; 16:5, and stereoma, “steadfastness,” Col. 2:5.¶

FIRST

protos (πρῶτος, 4413), the superlative degree of pro, “before,” is used (I) “of time or place,” (a) as a noun, e.g., Luke 14:18; Rev. 1:17; opposite to “the last,” in the neuter plural, Matt. 12:45; Luke 11:26; 2 Pet. 2:20; in the neuter singular, opposite to “the second,” Heb. 10:9; in 1 Cor. 15:3, en protois, lit., “in the first (things, or matters)” denotes “first of all”; (b) as an adjective, e.g., Mark 16:9, used with “day” understood, lit., “the first (day) of (i.e., after) the Sabbath,” in which phrase the “of” is objective, not including the Sabbath, but following it (cf. B, No. 3); in John 20:4, 8; Rom. 10:19, e.g., equivalent to an English adverb; in John 1:15, lit., “first of me,” i.e., “before me” (of superiority); (II) “of rank or dignity,” see CHIEF. Cf. B, Nos. 3 and 4.

B. Adverbs.

1. proteron (πρότερον, 4386), the comparative degree of pro (see No. 1), “former, before,” denotes “first” in Heb. 7:27; in 4:6, RV, “before” (KJV, “first”), speaking of Israel as having heard God’s good tidings previously to the ministry of the Gospel; in Gal. 4:13, “I preached ... unto you the first time” means on the former of his two previous visits.

2. anōthen (ἀνωθεν, 509), “from above,” is rendered “from the first” in Luke 1:3, RV, it may mean “from their beginning, or source.”

3. protos (πρῶτος, 4413), “firstly,” is used in Acts 11:26, “first” (some mss. have No. 4 here).¶

4. proton (πρῶτον, 4412), the neuter of the adjective protos, is used as an adverb, signifying “first, firstly,” e.g., of time, Matt. 8:21; of order, Rom. 3:2 (KJV, “chiefly”); in John 7:51, RV, “except it first hear from himself” (the KJV “before it hear him,” follows the mss. which have No. 1).

C. Numeral.

mia (μία, 3391), a grammatically feminine form of heis, “one,” is translated “first” in certain occurrences of the phrase “on the first day of the week,” e.g., Luke 24:1; 1 Cor. 16:2; cf. A, and see DAY; also in Titus 3:10, of a “first” admonition to a heretical man. See ONE.

D. Noun.

arche (ἀρχή, 746), “a beginning,” is translated “first” in Heb. 5:12, “of the first (principles of the oracles of God),” lit. “(the principles) of the beginning (of the oracles of God)”; in 6:1 “the first (principles) of Christ,” lit., “(the account) of the beginning of Christ,” i.e., the elementary teaching concerning Christ. In Acts 26:4, where the word is preceded by apo, “from,” the KJV has “at the first,” the RV, “from the beginning.”

Notes: (1) In Jude 6 arche has the meaning “principality,” as in the RV and the KJV margin.

(2) In 2 Cor. 8:12 prokeimai, “to be present,” lit., “to lie beforehand” (pro, “before,” keimai, “to lie”), RV renders “(if the readiness) is there,” for KJV, “if there be first (a willing mind).” See SET, A, No. 23.

FIRST-BEGOTTEN, FIRSTBORN

prototokos (πρωτοτόκος, 4416), “firstborn” (from protos, “first,” and tikto, “to beget”), is used of Christ as born of the Virgin Mary, Luke 2:7; further, in His relationship to the Father, expressing His priority to, and preeminence over, creation, not in the sense of being the “first” to be born. It is used occasionally of superiority of position in the OT, see Exod. 4:22; Deut. 21:16, 17, the prohibition being against the evil of assigning the privileged position of the “firstborn” to one born subsequently to the “first” child.

The five passages in the NT relating to Christ may be set forth chronologically thus: (a) Col. 1:15, where His eternal relationship with the Father is in view, and the clause means both that He was the “Firstborn” before all creation and that He Himself produced creation (the genitive case being objective, as v. 16 makes clear); (b) Col. 1:18 and Rev. 1:5, in reference to His resurrection; (c) Rom. 8:29, His position in relationship to the church; (d) Heb. 1:6, RV, His second advent (the RV “when He again bringeth in,” puts “again” in the right place, the contrast to His first advent, at His birth, being implied); cf. Ps. 89:27. The word is used in the plural, in Heb. 11:28, of the firstborn sons in the families of the Egyptians, and in 12:23, of the members of the Church.¶

Note: With (a) cf. John 1:30, “He was before me,” lit., “He was first (protos) of me,” i.e., “in regard to me,” expressing all that is involved in His preexistence and priority.

FIRSTFRUIT(S)

aparche (ἀπαρχή, 536) denotes, primarily, “an offering of firstfruits” (akin to aparchomai, “to make a beginning”; in sacrifices, “to offer firstfruits”). “Though the English word is plural in each of its occurrences save Rom. 11:16, the Greek word is always singular. Two Hebrew words are thus translated, one meaning the “chief” or “principal part,” e.g., Num. 18:12; Prov. 3:9; the other, “the earliest ripe of the crop or of the tree,” e.g., Exod. 23:16; Neh. 10:35; they are found together, e.g., in Exod. 23:19, “the first of the firstfruits.”

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 271.

Notes: (1) In Jas. 1:15 the qualifying phrase, “a kind of,” may suggest a certain falling short, on the part of those mentioned, of what they might be. (2) In 2 Thess. 2:13, instead of ap̃ arches, “from the beginning,” there is an alternative reading, well supported, viz., aparchen, “(God chose you) as firstfruits.”

FISH

1. ichthus (ἰχθύς, 2486) denotes “a fish,” Matt. 7:10; Mark 6:38, etc.; apart from the Gospels, only in 1 Cor. 15:39.

2. ichthudion (ἰχθύδιον, 2485) is a diminutive of No. 1, “a little fish,” Matt. 15:34; Mark 8:7.¶

3. opson (ὀψάριον, 3795) is a diminutive of opson, “cooked meat,” or “a relish, a dainty dish, especially of fish”; it denotes “a little fish,” John 6:9, 11; 21:9, 10, 13.¶

FISH (Verb), FISHER, FISHERMAN

A. Noun.

halieus (ἁλιεύς, 231), “a fisherman, fisher” (from hals, “the sea”), occurs in Matt. 4:18, 19; Mark 1:16, 17; Luke 5:2.¶

halieuo (ἁλιεύω, 232), “to fish” (akin to A.), occurs in John 2:3.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 16:16.¶

FIT (Adjective and Verb), FITLY, FITTING

A. Adjectives.

1. euthetos (εὖθετος, 2111), “ready for use, fit, well adapted,” lit., “well placed” (eu, “well,” tithemi, “to place”), is used (a) of persons, Luke 9:62, negatively, of one who is not fit for the kingdom of God; (b) of things, Luke 14:35, of salt that has lost its savor; rendered “meet” in Heb. 6:7, of herbs. See MEET.¶

2. arestos (ἄρεστός, 701), “pleasing” (akin to aresko, “to please”), is translated “(it is not) fit,” RV (KJV, “reason”), in Acts 6:2. See PLEASE, REASON.

B. Verbs.

1. aneko (ἀνέκω, 433), properly, “to have come up to” (ana, “up,” and heko, “to arrive”), is translated “is fitting,” in Col. 3:18, RV. See BEFITTING.

2. katheko (καθήκω, 2520), “to come or reach down to” (kata, “down”), hence, “to befit, be proper,” is translated “is (not fit)” in Acts 22:22; in Rom. 1:28, RV, “fitting” (KJV, “convenient”). See CONVENIENT.¶

3. katartizo (καταρτίζω, 2675), “to make fit, to equip, prepare” (kata, “down,” artos, “a joint”), is rendered “fitted” in Rom. 9:22, of vessels of wrath; here the middle voice signifies that those referred to “fitted” themselves for destruction (as illustrated in the case of Pharaoh, the self-hardening of whose heart is accurately presented in the RV in the first part of the series of incidents in the Exodus narrative, which records Pharaoh’s doings; only after repeated and persistent obstinacy on his part is it recorded that God hardened his heart.) See FRAME, JOIN, PERFECT, PREPARE, RESTORE.

4. sunarmologeō (συναρμολογέω, 4883), “to fit or frame together” (sun, “with,” harmos, “a joint, in building,” and lego, “to choose”), is used metaphorically of the various parts of the church as a building, Eph. 2:21, “fitly framed together”; also of the members of the church as the body of Christ, 4:16, RV, “fitly framed ... together.”¶

FIVE, FIVE TIMES

pente (πέντε, 4002) is derived by some from words suggesting the fingers of a hand, or a fist. The word is frequent in the Gospels. Pentakis, “five times,” is found in 2 Cor. 11:24;¶ pentakosioi, “five hundred,” in Luke 7:41; 1 Cor. 15:6;¶ pentakischilioi, “five thousand” (chilios, “a thousand”), in Matt. 14:21; 16:9 and corresponding passages. See FIFTEENTH, FIFTH, FIFTY.

FIX

sterizo (στηρίζω, 4741), “to set forth, make fast, fix,” is translated “fixed” in Luke 16:26, of the great gulf separating Hades or Sheol from the region called “Abraham’s bosom.” See ESTABLISH.

FLAME, FLAMING

phlox (φλόξ, 5395), akin to Lat. fulgeo, “to shine,” is used apart from pur, “fire,” in Luke 16:24; with pur, it signifies “a fiery flame,” lit., “a flame of fire,” Acts 7:30; 2 Thess. 1:8, where the fire is to be understood as the instrument of divine judgment; Heb. 1:7, where the meaning probably is that God makes His angels as active and powerful as a “flame” of fire; in Rev. 1:14; 2:18; 19:12, of the eyes of the Lord Jesus as emblematic of penetrating judgment, searching out evil.¶

FLATTERY (-ING)

kolakia (or -eia) (κολακεία, 2850), akin to kolakeuo, “to flatter,” is used in 1 Thess. 2:5 of “words of flattery” (RV), adopted as “a cloke of coveousness,” i.e., words which “flattery” uses, not simply as an effort to give pleasure, but with motives of self-interest.¶

FLAX

linon (λίνον, 3043) primarily denotes “flax” (Eng., “linen”); then, that which is made of it, “a wick of a lamp,” Matt. 12:20; several ancient mss. have the word in Rev. 15:6 (KJV only, “linen”). See LINEN.¶

FLEE, FLED

1. pheugo (φεύγω, 5343), “to flee from or away” (Lat., fugio; Eng., “fugitive,” etc.), besides its literal significance, is used metaphorically, (a) transitively, of “fleeing” fornication, 1 Cor. 6:18; idolatry, 10:14; evil doctrine, questionings, disputes of words, envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, wranglings, and the love of money, 1 Tim. 6:11; youthful lusts, 2 Tim. 2:22; (b) intransitively, of the “flight” of physical matter, Rev. 16:20; 20:11; of death, 9:6. See ESCAPE.

2. ekpheugo (ἐκφεύγω, 1628), “to flee away, escape” (ek, “from,” and No. 1), is translated “fled” in Acts 16:27 (KJV only); 19:16. In Heb. 12:25 the best mss. have this verb instead of No. 1. See ESCAPE.

3. katapheugo (καταφεύγω, 2703), “to flee for refuge” (kata, used intensively, and No. 1), is used (a) literally in Acts 14:6; (b) metaphorically in Heb. 6:18, of “fleeing” for refuge to lay hold upon hope.¶

Note: For apopheugo and diapheugo, see ESCAPE.

FLESH

1. sarx (σάρξ, 4561) has a wider range of meaning in the NT than in the OT. Its uses in the NT may be analyzed as follows:

“(a) “the substance of the body,” whether of beasts or of men, 1 Cor. 15:39; (b) “the human body,” 2 Cor. 10:3a; Gal. 2:20; Phil. 1:22; (c) by synecdoche, of “mankind,” in the totality of all that is essential to manhood, i.e., spirit, soul, and body, Matt. 24:22; John 1:13; Rom. 3:20; (d) by synecdoche, of “the holy humanity” of the Lord Jesus, in the totality of all that is essential to manhood, i.e., spirit, soul, and body John 1:14; 1 Tim. 3:16; 1 John 4:2; 2 John 7, in Heb. 5:7, “the days of His flesh,” i.e., His past life on earth in distinction from His present life in resurrection; (e) by synecdoche, for “the complete person,” John 6:51-57; 2 Cor. 7:5; Jas. 5:3; (f) “the weaker element in human nature,” Matt. 26:41; Rom. 6:19; 8:3a; (g) “the unregenerate state of men,” Rom. 7:5; 8:8, 9; (h) “the seat of sin in man” (but this is not the same thing as in the body), 2 Pet. 2:18; 1 John 2:16; (i) “the lower and temporary element in the Christian,” Gal. 3:3; 6:8, and in religious ordinances, Heb. 9:10; (j) “the natural attainments of men,” 1 Cor. 1:26; 2 Cor. 10:2, 3b; (k) “circumstances,” 1 Cor. 7:28; the externals of life, 2 Cor. 7:1; Eph. 6:5; Heb. 9:13; (l) by metonymy, “the outward and seeming,” as contrasted with the spirit, the inward and real, John 6:63; 2 Cor. 5:16; (m) “natural relationship, consanguine,” 1 Cor. 10:18; Gal. 4:23, or marital, Matt. 19:5.”*

In Matt. 26:41; Rom. 8:4, 13; 1 Cor. 5:5; Gal. 6:8 (not the Holy Spirit, here), “flesh” is contrasted with spirit, in Rom. 2:28, 29, with heart and spirit; in Rom. 7:25, with the mind; cf. Col. 2:1, 5. It is coupled with the mind in Eph. 2:3, and with the spirit in 2 Cor. 7:1.

Note: In Col. 2:18 the noun sarx is used in the phrase “(by his) fleshly mind,” lit., “by the mind of his flesh” [see (h) above], whereas the mind ought to be dominated by the Spirit.

2. kreas (κρέας, 2907) denotes “flesh” in the sense of meat. It is used in the plural in Rom. 14:21; 1 Cor. 8:13.¶

FLESHLY, FLESHY

1. sarkikos (σαρκικός, 4559), akin to No. 1, under FLESH, signifies (a) associated with or pertaining to, “the flesh, carnal,” Rom. 15:27; 1 Cor. 9:11; (b) of “the nature of the flesh, sensual,” translated “fleshly” in 2 Cor. 1:12, of wisdom, in 1 Pet. 2:11, of lusts; in 2 Cor. 10:4, negatively, of the weapons of the Christian’s warfare, RV, “of the flesh” (KJV, “carnal”). See CARNAL.

2. sarkinos (σάρκινος, 4560) denotes “of the flesh, fleshly” (the termination -inos signifying the substance or material of a thing); in 2 Cor. 3:3, RV, “(tables that are hearts) of flesh,” KJV, fleshly (tables), etc. See CARNAL.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 111, 112.

Note: The adjectives “fleshly,” “carnal” are contrasted with spiritual qualities in Rom. 7:14; 1 Cor. 3:1, 3, 4; 2 Cor. 1:12; Col. 2:18 (lit., “mind of flesh”). Speaking broadly, the carnal denotes the sinful element in man’s nature, by reason of descent from Adam; the spiritual is that which comes by the regenerating operation of the Holy Spirit.

FLIGHT

phuge (φυγή, 5437), akin to pheugo (see FLEE), is found in Matt. 24:20. Some inferior mss. have it in Mark 13:18.¶

B. Verb.

klino (κλίνω, 2827), “to make to bend,” is translated “turned to flight” in Heb. 11:34. See BOW.

FLOCK

1. poimne (ἀγαθοποιός, 17), 4167), akin to poimen, “a shepherd,” denotes “a flock” (properly, of sheep), Matt. 26:31; Luke 2:8; 1 Cor. 9:7; metaphorically, of Christ’s followers, John 10:16, RV, for the erroneous KJV, “fold.” What characterizes Christ’s sheep is listening to His voice, and the “flock” must be one as He is one.¶

2. poimnion (ποίμνιον, 4168), possibly a diminutive of No. 1, is used in the NT only metaphorically, of a group of Christ’s disciples, Luke 12:32; of local churches cared for by elders, Acts 20:28, 29; 1 Pet. 5:2, 3.¶

FLOOD

A. Nouns.

1. kataklysmos (κατακλυσμός, 2627), “a deluge” (Eng., “cataclysm”), akin to katakluzo, “to inundate,” 2 Pet. 3:6, is used of the “flood” in Noah’s time, Matt. 24:38, 39; Luke 17:27; 2 Pet. 2:5.¶

2. plemmura (πλημμύρα, 4132), akin to pletho and pimplemi, “to fill, a flood of sea or river,” the latter in Luke 6:4.¶ In the Sept., Job 40:18 (v. 23 in the EV).¶

3. potamos (ποταμός, 4215), “a river, stream, torrent,” is translated “flood” in Matt. 7:25, 27; in Rev. 12:15, 16, KJV, flood, RV, “river. See RIVER, WATER

B. Adjective.

potamophoretos (ποταμοφόρητος, 4216) signifies “carried away by a stream or river” (A, No. 3, and phero, “to carry”), Rev. 12:15, RV, “carried away by the stream” (KJV, “of the flood”).¶

For FLOOR see THRESHINGFLOOR

FLOUR

semidalis (σεμίδαλις, 4585) denotes the “finest wheaten flour,” Rev. 18:13.¶

For FLOURISH in Phil. 4:10, see REVIVE

FLOW

rheo (ρέω, 4482), “to flow,” is used figuratively in John 7:38 of the Holy Spirit, acting in and through the believer.¶

FLOWER

A. Noun.

anthos (ἄνθος, 438), “a blossom, flower” (used in certain names of flowers), occurs in Jas. 1:10, 11; 1 Pet. 1:24 (twice).¶

B. Adjective.

hyperakmos (ὑπέρακμος, 5230), “past the bloom of youth” (from hyper, “beyond,” and akme, “the highest point of anything,” the full bloom of a flower: Eng., “acme”), is used in 1 Cor. 7:36, “past the flower of her age”; Lightfoot prefers the rendering “of full age.”

For FLUX see DYSENTERY

FLUTE-PLAYERS

auletes (αὐλητής, 834), “a flute-player” (from auleo, “to play the flute”), occurs in Matt. 9:23 (KJV, “minstrel”), and Rev. 18:22 (KJV “pipers”). In the papyri writings of the time the word is chiefly associated with religious matters (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). Cf. MINSTREL.¶

FLY

petomai (πέτομαι, 4072), “to fly” (the root of which is seen in pteron and pterux, “a wing,” ptilon, “a feather,” etc.), is confined to the Apocalypse, 4:7; 8:13; 12:14; 14:6; 19:17. Some mss. have the verb petaomai, a frequentative form.¶

FOAL

huios (υἱός, 5207), “a son,” primarily signifying the relation of offspring to parent, is used of the “foal” of an ass in Matt. 21:5. See SON.

FOAM

A. Verbs.

1. aphrizo (ἀφρίζω, 875) denotes “to foam at the mouth” (akin to aphros, “foam”; see B.) Mark 9:18, 20.¶

2. epaphrizo (ἐπαφρίζω, 1890), “to foam out, or up” (epi, “up,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically in Jude 13, of the impious libertines, who had crept in among the saints, and “foamed” out their own shame with swelling words. The metaphor is drawn from the refuse borne on the crest of waves and cast up on the beach.¶

B. Noun.

aphros (ἀφρός, 876), “foam,” occurs in Luke 9:39, where it is used with the preposition meta, “with,” lit., “(teareth him) with (accompanied by) foam.”¶

FOE

echthros (ἐχθρός, 2190), an adjective signifying “hated, hateful, or hostile,” is used also as a noun denoting “an enemy,” translated “foes” in Matt. 10:36 and the KJV of Acts 2:35. See ENEMY.

FOLD

aule (αὐλή, 833) first signifies “an open courtyard” before a house; then, “an enclosure” in the open, “a sheepfold,” John 10:1, 16. In the papyri “the word is extremely common, denoting the court attached to a house” (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). The “sheepfold” was usually surrounded by a stone wall, Numb. 32:16, preferably near a well, Exod. 2:16; Ps. 23:2, and often protected by a tower, 2 Chron. 26:10; Mic. 4:8. See COURT, HALL, PALACE.

Note: For the erroneous KJV rendering, “fold,” of poimne, “a flock,” in John 10:16, see FLOCK.

For FOLD UP see ROLL, A, No. 4

For FOLK see IMPOTENT, B, SICK, B, No. 2

FOLLOW, FOLLOW AFTER

1. akoloutheo (ἀκολουθέω, 190), to be an akolouthos, “a follower,” or “companion” (from the prefix a, here expressing “union, likeness,” and keleuthos, “a way”; hence, “one going in the same way”), is used (a) frequently in the literal sense, e.g., Matt. 4:25; (b) metaphorically, of “discipleship,” e.g., Mark 8:34; 9:38; 10:21. It is used 77 times in the Gospels, of “following” Christ, and only once otherwise, Mark 14:13.

2. exakoloutheo (ἐξακολουθέω, 1811), “to follow up, or out to the end” (ek, “out,” used intensively, and No. 1), is used metaphorically, and only by the apostle Peter in his second epistle: in 1:16, of cunningly devised fables; 2:2 of lascivious doings; 2:15, of the way of Balaam.¶ In the Sept., Job 31:9; Is. 56:11; Jer. 2:2; Amos 2:4.¶

3. epakoloutheo (ἐπακολουθέω, 1872), “to follow after, close upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is used of signs “following” the preaching of the gospel. Mark 16:20; of “following” good works, 1 Tim. 5:10; of sins “following” after those who are guilty of them, 5:24; of “following” the steps of Christ, 1 Pet. 2:21.¶

4. katakoloutheo (κατακολουθέω, 2628), “to follow behind or intently after” (kata, “after,” used intensively, and No. 1), is used of the women on their way to Christ’s tomb, Luke 23:55; of the demon-possessed maid in Philippi in “following” the missionaries, Acts 16:17.¶

5. parakoloutheo (παρακολουθέω, 3877) lit. signifying “to follow close up, or side by side,” hence, “to accompany, to conform to” (para, “beside,” and No. 1), is used of signs accompanying “them that believe,” Mark 16:17; of tracing the course of facts, Luke 1:3, RV; of “following” the good doctrine, 1 Tim. 4:6, RV (KJV, “attained”); similarly of “following” teaching so as to practice it, 2 Tim. 3:10, RV, “didst follow” (KJV, “hast fully known”). See ATTAIN, KNOW, TRACE, UNDERSTAND.¶

6. sunakoloutheo (συνακολουθέω, 4870), “to follow along with, to accompany a leader” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is given its true rendering in the RV of Mark 5:37, “He suffered no man to follow with Him”; in 14:51, of the young man who “followed with” Christ (inferior mss. have No. 1 here); Luke 23:49, of the women who “followed with” Christ from Galilee.¶

7. dioko (διώκω, 1377) denotes (a) “to drive away,” Matt. 23:34; (b) “to pursue without hostility, to follow, follow after,” said of righteousness, Rom. 9:30; the Law, 9:31; 12:13, hospitality (“given to”) lit., “pursuing” (as one would a calling), the things which make for peace, 14:19; love, 1 Cor. 14:1; that which is good, 1 Thess. 5:15; righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness, 1 Tim. 6:11; righteousness, faith, love, peace, 2 Tim. 2:22; peace and sanctification, Heb. 12:14; peace, 1 Pet. 3:11; (c) “to follow on” (used intransitively), Phil. 3:12, 14, RV, “I press on”; “follow after,” is an inadequate meaning. See GIVE, PERSECUTE, PRESS, PURSUE.

8. katadioko (καταδιώκω, 2614), “to follow up or closely,” with the determination to find (kata, “down,” intensive, giving the idea of a hard, persistent search, and No. 7), Mark 1:36, “followed after (Him),” is said of the disciples in going to find the Lord who had gone into a desert place to pray.¶ The verb is found, e.g., in 1 Sam. 30:22; Ps. 23:6, and with hostile intent in Gen. 31:36.

9. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, to come into existence,” is used in Rev. 8:7; 11:15, 19, in the sense of taking place after translated “there followed.” See BECOME.

10. epeimi (ἐπί, 1909 and ἐπί, 1510), “to come upon,” or, of time, “to come on or after” (epi, “upon,” and eimi, “to go”), is used in the present participle as an adjective, in reference to a day, in Acts 7:26; 16:11; 20:15; 21:18; a night, 23:11, RV, “following,” in each place (KJV, “next”).¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 13:33, the present participle, middle voice, of the verb echo, “to have, to be next,” is used with the article, the word hemera, “a day,” being understood, signifying “the day following.” (2) In John 1:43 and 6:22 the adverb epaurion with the article, “on the morrow,” is translated “the day following” in the KJV. See MORROW. (3) In Acts 21:1 the adverb hexes, in order, next, is translated “the day following” (KJV). (4) Mimeomai, “to imitate, be an imitator,” is so translated always in the RV, where the KJV uses the verb “to follow”; it is always used in a good sense, 2 Thess. 3:7, 9; Heb. 13:7; 3 John 11. So with the nouns mimetes, “an imitator,” and summimetes, “an imitator together.” See IMITATE, IMITATOR. (5) In Matt. 4:19, deute, “come hither,” with opiso, “after,” is translated “come ye after,” RV (KJV, “follow”). (6) In Matt. 27:62, RV, the phrase eimi meta, “to be after,” is translated “(which) is (the day) after” (KJV, “that followed”). (7) In 1 Pet. 1:11, the phrase meta tauta, lit., “after these things,” is translated “that should follow,” said of glories after the sufferings of Christ. (8) In Luke 22:49, the phrase to esomenon, lit. “the (thing) about to be” (from eimi, “to be”), is translated “what would follow.” (9) In Acts 3:24, the adverb kathexes, “successively, in order,” is translated “(them) that followed after,” i.e., those who succeeded (him), lit., “the (ones) successively (to him).” Cf. Note (3) above. See AETERWARD.

FOLLY

anoia (ἄνοια, 454) lit. signifies “without understanding” (a, negative, nous, “mind”); hence, “folly,” or, rather, “senselessness,” 2 Tim. 3:9; in Luke 6:11 it denotes violent or mad rage, “madness.” See MADNESS.¶ Cf. anoetos, “foolish.”

Note: For aphrosune, rendered “folly” in 2 Cor. 11:1, KJV, see FOOLISHNESS (RV).

FOOD

1. trophe (τροφή, 5160) denotes “nourishment, food” (akin to trephe, “to rear, nourish, feed”); it is used literally, in the Gospels, Acts and Jas. 2:15; metaphorically, in Heb. 5:12, 14, RV, “(solid) food,” KJV, “(strong) meat,” i.e., deeper subjects of the faith than that of elementary instruction. The word is always rendered “food” in the RV, where the KJV has “meat”; e.g., Matt. 3:4; 6:25; 10:10; 24:45; Luke 12:23; John 4:8; Acts 2:46, “did take their food,” RV (KJV, “did eat their meat”); 9:19, “took food”; 27:33, 34, 36. The KJV also has “food” in Acts 14:17 and Jas. 2:15.¶

2. diatrophe (διατροφή, 1305), “sustenance, food,” a strengthened form of No. 1 (dia, “through,” suggesting a sufficient supply), is used in 1 Tim. 6:8.¶

3. broxis (βρώσις, 1035), “eating, the act of eating” (akin to bibrosko, “to eat”) is translated “food” in 2 Cor. 9:10. See EATING, MEAT, RUST.

4. sitometrion (σιτόμετρον, 4620), a measured “portion of food” (sitos, “corn,” metreo, “to measure”), is used in Luke 12:42, RV.¶

5. broma (βρώμα, 1033), akin to No. 3, frequently translated “meat,” and always so in the KJV except in Matt. 14:15, “victuals,” is rendered “food” in the RV in Matt. 14:15; Luke 3:11; 9:13.

Note: For asitia, “without food,” see ABSTINENCE.

FOOL, FOOLISH, FOOLISHLY, FOOLISHNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. aphron (ἄφρων, 878) signifies “without reason” (a, negative, phren, “the mind”), “want of mental sanity and sobriety, a reckless and inconsiderate habit of mind” (Hort), or “the lack of commonsense perception of the reality of things natural and spiritual ... or the imprudent ordering of one’s life in regard to salvation” (G. Vos, in Hastings’ Bible Dic.); it is mostly translated “foolish” or “foolish ones” in the RV; Luke 11:40; 12:20; Rom. 2:20; 1 Cor. 15:36; 2 Cor. 11:16 (twice), 19 (contrasted with phronimos, “prudent”); 12:6, 11; Eph. 5:17; 1 Pet. 2:15.¶

2. anoetos (ἀνόητος, 453) signifies “not understanding” (a, negative, noeo, “to perceive, understand”), not applying nous, “the mind,” Luke 24:25; in Rom. 1:14 and Gal. 3:1, 3 it signifies “senseless,” an unworthy lack of understanding; sometimes it carries a moral reproach (in contrast with sophron, “sober-minded, selfcontrolled”) and describes one who does not govern his lusts, Titus 3:3; in 1 Tim. 6:9 it is associated with evil desires, lusts. See UNWISE.¶

3. moros (μωρός, 3474) primarily denotes “dull, sluggish” (from a root mu, “to be silly”); hence, “stupid, foolish”; it is used (a) of persons, Matt. 5:22, “Thou fool”; here the word means morally worthless, a scoundrel, a more serious reproach than “Raca”; the latter scorns a man’s mind and calls him stupid; moros scorns his heart and character; hence the Lord’s more severe condemnation; in 7:26, “a foolish man”; 23:17, 19, “fools”; 25:2, 3, 8, “foolish”; in 1 Cor. 3:18, “a fool”; the apostle Paul uses it of himself and his fellow-workers, in 4:10, “fools” (i.e., in the eyes of opponents); (b) of things, 2 Tim. 2:23, “foolish and ignorant questionings”; so Titus 3:9; in 1 Cor. 1:25, “the foolishness of God,” not moria, “foolishness” as a personal quality (see C, No. 1), but adjectivally, that which is considered by the ignorant as a “foolish” policy or mode of dealing, lit., “the foolish (thing)”]; so in v. 27, “the foolish (things) of the world.”¶

4. asunetos (ἀσύνετος, 801) denotes “without discernment,” or “understanding” (a, negative, suniemī, “to understand”); hence “senseless,” as in the RV of Rom. 1:21 (KJV, “foolish”), of the heart; in 10:19, KJV, “foolish,” RV, “void of understanding.” See UNDERSTANDING.

Note: For “fools,” Eph. 5:15, see UNWISE, No. 3.

B. Verbs.

1. moraino (μωραίνω, 3471) is used (a) in the causal sense, “to make foolish,” 1 Cor. 1:20; (b) in the passive sense, “to become foolish,” Rom. 1:22; in Matt. 5:13 and Luke 14:34 it is said of salt that has lost its flavor, becoming tasteless. See SAVOUR.¶

2. paraphroneo (παράφρονέω, 3912), “to be beside oneself” (from para, “contrary to,” and phren, “the mind”), “to be deranged,” 2 Cor. 11:23, RV, “as one beside himself,” for KJV, “as a fool.”¶

C. Nouns.

1. moria (μωρία, 3472) denotes “foolishness” (akin to A, No. 3 and B, No. 1), and is used in 1 Cor. 1:18, 21, 23; 2:14; 3:19.¶

2. aphrosune (ἄφροσύνη, 877), “senselessness,” is translated “foolishness” in Mark 7:22; 2 Cor. 11:1, 17, 21, “foolishness,” RV (KJV “folly” and “foolishly”). See FOLLY.¶

Note: Morologia denotes “foolish talking,” Eph. 5:4. See TALKING.¶

FOOT, FEET

A. Nouns.

1. pous (πούς, 4228), besides its literal meaning, is used, by metonymy, of “a person in motion,” Luke 1:79; Acts 5:9; Rom. 3:15; 10:15; Heb. 12:13. It is used in phrases expressing subjection, 1 Cor. 15:27, RV; of the humility and receptivity of discipleship, Luke 10:39; Acts 22:3; of obeisance and worship, e.g., Matt. 28:9; of scornful rejection, Matt. 10:14; Acts 13:51. Washing the “feet” of another betokened the humility of the service and the comfort of the guest, and was a feature of hospitality, Luke 7:38; John 13:5; 1 Tim. 5:10 (here figuratively).

Note: In Acts 7:5 bema, “a step,” is used with podos, the genitive case of pous, lit., “the step of a foot,” i.e., “a foot breadth,” what the “foot” can stand on, “(not so much as) to set his foot on.”

2. basis (βάσις, 939), lit., “a step” (akin to baino, “to go”), hence denotes that with which one steps, “a foot,” and is used in the plural in Acts 3:7.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. poderes (ποδήρης, 4158) signifies “reaching to the feet,” from pous, and aro, “to fit” (akin to A, No. 1), and is said of a garment, Rev. 1:13.¶ In the Sept. it is used of the high priest’s garment, e.g., Ex. 28:4. 2. pezos (ποδήρης, 3978), an adjective, “on foot,” is used in one of its forms as an adverb in Matt. 14:3, and Mark 6:33, in each place signifying “by land,” in contrast to by sea.¶ Cf. pezeuo, “to go on foot,” Acts 20:3, RV, “to go by land” (marg., “on foot”). Notes: (1) In Acts 20:18, the RV “set foot in” expresses more literally the verb epibaino (lit. “to go upon”) than the KJV “came into.” So again in 21:4 (some mss. have anabaino here). (2) In Luke 8:5, katapateo, “to tread down” (kata, “down,” pateo, “to tread, trample”), is translated “was trodden under foot,” RV (KJV “was trodden down”).

FOOTSTOOL

hupopodion (ὑποπόδιον, 5286), from hupo, “under,” and pous, “a foot,” is used (a) literally in Jas. 2:3, (b) metaphorically, of the earth as God’s “footstool,” Matt. 5:35; of the foes of the Lord, Matt. 22:44 (in some mss.); Mark 12:36, “underneath” (in some mss.), Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35; 7:49; Heb. 1:13; 10:13. The RV, adhering to the literal rendering, translates the phrase “the footstool of My (Thy, His) feet,” for the KJV, “My (etc.) footstool,” but in Matt. 22:44, “(till I put Thine enemies) underneath thy feet.”¶ For FOR and FORASMUCH see Note †, p. 1

For FORBADE see FORBID

FORBEAR, FORBEARANCE

A. Verbs.

1. anecho (ἀνέχομαι, 430), “to hold up” (ana, “up,” echo, “to have or hold”), is used in the middle voice in the NT, signifying “to bear with, endure”; it is rendered “forbearing (one another)” in Eph. 4:2 and Col. 3:13. See BEAR. Cf. B, No. 1, below.

2. aniemi (ἀνίμι, 447), lit., “to send up or back” (ana, “up,” hiemi, “to send”), hence, “to relax, loosen,” or, metaphorically, “to desist from,” is translated “forbearing” (threatening) in Eph. 6:9 (“giving up your threatening,” T. K. Abbott). See LEAVE, LOOSE.

3. pheidomai (φείδομαι, 5339), “to spare” (its usual meaning), “to refrain from doing something,” is rendered “I forbear” in 2 Cor. 12:6. See SPARE.

4. stego (στέγω, 4722) properly denotes “to protect by covering”; then, “to conceal”; then, by covering, “to bear up under”; it is translated “forbear” in 1 Thess. 3:1, 5. See BEAR.

Note: In 1 Cor. 9:6, the verb ergazomai, “to work,” is used in the present infinitive, with a negative, and translated “to forbear working” (lit., “not working”).

B. Noun.

anochē (ἀνοχή, 463), “a holding back” (akin to A, No. 1), denotes “forbearance.” a delay of punishment, Rom. 2:4; 3:25, in both places of God’s “forbearance” with men, in the latter passage His “forbearance” is the ground, not of His forgiveness, but of His pretermission of sins, His withholding punishment. In 2:4 it represents a suspense of wrath which must eventually be exercised unless the sinner accepts God’s conditions; in 3:25 it is connected with the passing over of sins in times past, previous to the atoning work of Christ.¶

Note: Cf. the noun epieikeia, Acts 24:4 “clemency”; 2 Cor. 10:1, “gentleness.”

Synonymous with this are makrothumia, “longsuffering,” and hupomone, “patience” (see Col. 1:11). Anoche and makrothumia are used together in Rom. 2:4. See also Eph. 4:2 (where A, No. 1, is used in this combination). Trench (Syn.) and Abbott-Smith (Lex.) state that huponone expresses patience with regard to adverse things, makrothumia patience with regard to antagonistic persons. It must be observed, however that in Heb. 6:15 the verb makrothumeo is used of Abraham’s patience under the pressure of trying circumstances (cf. also Jas. 5:7, 8). Makrothumia and hupomone are often found together, e.g., 2 Cor. 6:4 and 6; 2 Tim. 3:10. “Longsuffering is that quality of self-restraint in the face of provocation which does not hastily retaliate or promptly punish; it is the opposite of anger and is associated with mercy, and is used of God, Exod. 34:6, Sept.; Rom. 2:4; 1 Pet. 3:20. Patience is the quality that does not surrender to circumstances or succumb under trial; it is the opposite of despondency and is associated with hope, in 1 Thess. 1:3; it is not used of God.”*

C. Adjectives.

1. anexikakos (ἀνεξίκακος, 420) denotes “patiently forbearing evil,” lit., “patient of wrong,” (from anecho, A, No. 1 and kakos, “evil”), “enduring”; it is rendered “forbearing” in 2 Tim. 2:24.¶

2. epieikes (ἐπιεικής, 1933), an adjective (from epi, used intensively, and eikos, “reasonable”), is used as a noun with the article in Phil. 4:5, and translated “forbearance” in the RV; KJV, “moderation,” RV, marg., “gentleness,” “sweet reasonableness” (Matthew Arnold). See GENTLE.

FORBID, FORBADE

koluo (κωλύω, 2967), “to hinder, restrain, withhold, forbid” (akin to kolos, “docked, lopped, clipped”), is most usually translated “to forbid,” often an inferior rendering to that of hindering or restraining, e.g., 1 Thess. 2:16; Luke 23:2; 2 Pet. 2:16, where the RV has “stayed”; in Acts 10:47 “forbid.” In Luke 6:29, the RV has “withhold not (thy coat also).” See HINDER, KEEP, Note (7), STAY, SUFFER, A, Note (3), WITHHOLD, WITHSTAND, No. 1.

Notes: (1) The strengthened form diakoluo (dia, “through,” used intensively) is used in Matt. 3:14, where, for the KJV, “forbad” the RV has “would have hindered him” [“forbad” is unsuitable with reference to the natural and persistent (dia) effort to prevent Christ from being baptized.]¶

(2) The phrase me genoito, lit., “let it not be” (me, negative, and ginomai, “to become”), is idiomatically translated “God forbid” in Luke 20:16; Rom. 3:4, 6, 31; 6:2, 15; 7:7, 13; 9:14; 11:1, 11; 1 Cor. 6:15; Gal. 2:17; 3:21, and in the KJV of 6:14; here the RV has “far be it from me (to glory),” which the American RV uses in the OT. In Paul’s Epistles it is almost entirely used to express the apostle's repudiation of an inference which he apprehends may be drawn from his argument.

B. Adverb.

akolutos (ἀκωλύτως, 209), "without hindrance" (a, negative, and A, No. 1, is translated "none forbidding him," in Acts 28:31. From the 2nd century A.D. onwards the word is found constantly in legal documents (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab., who draw attention to the triumphant note on which the word brings the Acts to a close).¶

FORCE

A. Adjective.

bebaios (βέβαιος, 949), "firm, secure," is translated "of force" (present usage would translate it "in force") in Heb. 9:17, of a testament, or covenant, in relation to a death. See FIRM.

B. Verb.

1. harpazo (ἁρπάζω, 726), "to snatch away, carry off by force," is used in the next sentence in Matt. 11:12, to that referred to under No. 1, "men of violence (KJV 'the violent') take it by force," the meaning being, as determined by the preceding clause, that those who are possessed of eagerness and zeal, instead of yielding to the opposition of religious foes, such as the scribes and Pharisees, press their way into the kingdom, so as to possess themselves of it. It is elsewhere similarly rendered in John 6:15, of those who attempted to seize the Lord, and in Acts 23:10, of the chief captain's command to the soldiers to rescue Paul. See CATCH, PLUCK, PULL. Cf. diarpazo, "to plunder," e.g., Matt. 12:29, and sunarpazo, "to seize and carry away," e.g., Acts 6:12, and harpax, "rapacious, ravening," e.g., Matt. 7:15.

Notes: (1) Biazo, "to force" (from bia, "force"), is used in the passive voice in Matt. 11:12, of the kingdom of heaven as 'suffering violence;' so in Luke 16:16, "entereth violently into it," here in the middle voice, expressive of the special interest which the doer of the act has in what he is doing. This meaning is abundantly confirmed by the similar use in the papyri. Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) remark that Luke's statement can be naturally rendered "everyone is entering it violently." See VIOLENCE.

(2) In Matt. 11:12, the corresponding noun, biastes, "violence," is rendered "men of violence," RV (see No. 2). See VIOLENCE.

FOREFATHER

1. progonos (πρόγονος, 4269), an adjective, primarily denoting "born before" (pro, "before," and ginomai, "to become"), is used as a noun in the plural, 2 Tim. 1:3, "forefathers" (in 1 Tim. 5:4, "parents"). See PARENTS.¶

2. propator (πρό, 4253 and πρό, 3962), "a forefather" (pro, "before," pater, "a father"), is used of Abraham in Rom. 4:1.¶

FOREGOING

proago (προάγω, 4254), when used intransitively, signifies either to “lead the way,” or “to go before, precede”; in Heb. 7:18, it is used of the commandment of the Law (v. 16), as preceding the bringing in of “a better hope” (RV, “foregoing”). See BRING, GO.

FOREHEAD

metopon (μέτωπον, 3359), from meta, “with,” and ops, “an eye,” occurs only in the Apocalypse, 7:3; 9:4; 13:16; 14:1, 9; 17:5; 20:4; 22:4.¶

FOREIGN, FOREIGNER

exo (ἔξω, 1854), an adverb, signifying “outside, without,” is used in Acts 26:11, RV, “foreign,” for KJV “strange,” of cities beyond the limits of Palestine, lit., “unto (the) cities without,” including Damascus. See FORTH, OUTWARD, STRANGE, WITHOUT.

Note: In Eph. 2:19, paroikos, lit., “dwelling near” (para, “near,” oikos, a “dwelling”), denotes “an alien, a sojourner,” in contrast to fellow-citizens, RV, “sojourners” (KJV, “foreigners”); in 1 Pet. 2:11, KJV, “strangers”; see also Acts 7:6, 29. See SOJOURNER, STRANGER. Cf. allogrios, e.g., Acts 7:6; Heb. 11:9, 34; allophulos, Acts 10:28;¶ xenos, Matt. 25:35, 38, 43; 27:7; Acts 17:21, etc.

FOREKNOW, FOREKNOWLEDGE

A. Verb.

proginosko (προγινώσκω, 4267), “to know before” (pro, “before,” ginosko, “to know”), is used (a) of divine knowledge, concerning (1) Christ, 1 Pet. 1:20, RV, “foreknown” (KJV, “foreordained”); (2) Israel as God’s earthly people, Rom. 11:2; (3) believers, Rom. 8:29; “the foreknowledge” of God is the basis of His foreordaining counsels; (b) of human knowledge, (1) of persons, Acts 26:5; (2) of facts, 2 Pet. 3:17.¶

B. Noun.

prognosis (πρόγνωσις, 4268), “a foreknowledge” (akin to A.), is used only of divine “foreknowledge,” Acts 2:23; 1 Pet. 1:2.¶ “Foreknowledge” is one aspect of omniscience; it is implied in God’s warnings, promises and predictions. See Acts 15:18. God’s “foreknowledge” involves His electing grace, but this does not preclude human will. He “foreknows” the exercise of faith which brings salvation. The apostle Paul stresses especially the actual purposes of God rather than the ground of the purposes, see, e.g., Gal. 1:16; Eph. 1:5, 11. The divine counsels will ever be unthwartable. Cf. FORESHEW. For FOREORDAIN see DETERMINE, No. 3, FOREKNOW, A

FORERUNNER

prodromos (πρόδρομος, 4274), an adjective signifying “running forward, going in advance,” is used as a noun, of “those who were sent before to take observations,” acting as scouts, especially in military matters; or of “one sent before a king” to see that the way was prepared, Isa. 40:3; (cf. Luke 9:52; and, of John the Baptist, Matt. 11:10, etc). In the NT it is said of Christ in Heb. 6:20, as going in advance of His followers who are to be where He is, when He comes to receive them to Himself.¶ In the Sept., Num. 13:21, “forerunners (of the grape)”; Isa. 28:4, “an early (fig).”¶

artemon (ἀρτέμων, 736), from artao, “to fasten to,” is rendered “mainsail” in Acts 27:40, KJV; RV, “foresail.” As to the particular kind of sail there mentioned, Sir William Ramsay, quoting from Juvenal concerning the entrance of a disabled ship into harbor by means of a prow-sail, indicates that the artemon would be a sail set on the bow.¶

FORESEE, FORESEEN

1. proorao (προοράω, 4308), with the aorist form proeidon (used to supply tenses lacking in proorao), “to see before” (pro, “before,” horao, “to see”), is used with reference (a) to the past, of seeing a person before, Acts 21:29; (b) to the future, in the sense of “foreseeing” a person or thing, Acts 2:25, with reference to Christ and the Father, RV, “beheld” (here the middle voice is used).¶

2. proeidon (προείδω, 4275), an aorist tense form without a present, “to foresee,” is used of David, as foreseeing Christ, in Acts 2:31, RV, “foreseeing” (KJV, “seeing before”); in Gal. 3:8 it is said of the Scripture, personified, personal activity being attributed to it by reason of its divine source (cf. v. 22). “What saith the Scripture?” was a common formula among the Rabbis.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 37:18; Ps. 16:8 (proorao); 139:3.¶

3. problepo (προβλέπω, 4265), from pro, “before,” and blepo, “to see, perceive,” is translated “having provided” in Heb. 11:40 (middle voice), marg., “foreseen,” which is the lit. meaning of the verb, as with Eng. “provide.”¶ In the Sept., Ps. 37:13.¶

prokatangelo (προκαταγγέλλω, 4293), “to announce beforehand” (pro, “before,” katangelo, “to proclaim”), is translated “foreshewed” in Acts 3:18, RV (KJV, “before had shewed”); in 7:52, KJV and RV, “shewed before.”¶

FORESHIP

prora (πρόρα, 4408) denotes the forward part of a ship, “the prow,” Acts 27:30; in v. 41 (KJV, “forepart”) in contrast to prumna, “the stern.”¶

prolego (προλέγω, 4302), with the aorist form proeipon, and a perfect form proeireka (from proereo), signifies (1) “to declare openly” or “plainly,” or “to say” or “tell beforehand” (pro, “before,” lego, “to say”), translated in 2 Cor. 13:2 (in the first sentence), RV, “I have said beforehand,” KJV, “I told ... before,” in the next sentence, KJV, “I foretell,” RV, “I do say beforehand” (marg., “plainly”); not prophecy is here in view, but a warning given before and repeated (see under FOREWARN); (2) “to speak before, of prophecy,” as “foretelling” the future, Mark 13:23, KJV, “have foretold,” RV, “have told ... beforehand”; Acts 1:16 (of the prophecy concerning Judas); Rom. 9:29; 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17; some inferior mss. have it in Heb. 10:15. See FOREWARN, SPEAK, TELL.

Note: In Acts 3:24 some mss. have prokatangelo (see FORESHEW); the most authentic have katangelo, RV, “told.”

FOREWARN

prolego (προλέγω, 4302), with verbal forms as mentioned above, is translated “I forewarn” and “I did forewarn,” in the RV of Gal. 5:21, KJV, “I tell (you) before” and “I have told (you) in time past”; here, however, as in 2 Cor. 13:2 and 1 Thess. 3:4 (see below), the RV marg., “plainly” is to be preferred to “beforehand” or “before” (see under FORETELL); the meaning in Gal. 5:21 is not so much that Paul prophesied the result of the practice of the evils mentioned but that he had told them before of the consequence and was now repeating his warning, as leaving no possible room for doubt or misunderstanding; in 1 Thess. 3:4, the subject told before was the affliction consequent upon the preaching of the Gospel; in 1 Thess. 4:6, “we forewarned,” the warning was as to the consequences of whatsoever violates chastity.

Note: In Luke 12:5 the verb hupodeiknumi, “to shew, teach, make known,” is translated “will warn” in the RV (KJV, “forewarn”). See EXAMPLE (B, No. 2), SHEW, WARN.

FORFEIT

zemioo (ζημιόω, 2210), in the active voice signifies “to damage”; in the passive, “to suffer loss, forfeit,” Matt. 16:26 and Mark 8:36, of the “life,” RV; KJV, and RV marg., “soul”; in each place the RV has “forfeit,” for uv, “lose”; Luke 9:25, “his own self” (RV, “forfeit,” KJV, “be cast away”; here the preceding word “lose” translates apollumi, “to destroy”). What is in view here is the act of “forfeiting” what is of the greatest value, not the casting away by divine judgment, though that is involved, but losing or penalizing one’s own self, with spiritual and eternal loss. The word is also used in 1 Cor. 3:15; 2 Cor. 7:9; Phil. 3:8. See CAST, LOSE, LOSS (suffer).¶

FORGET, FORGETFUL

A. Verbs.

1. lanthano (λανθάνω, 2990), “to escape notice,” is translated “they (wilfully) forget” in 2 Pet. 3:5, RV, lit., “this escapes them (i.e., their notice, wilfully on their part),” KJV, “they willingly are ignorant of”; in v. 8, RV, “forget not,” lit., “let not this one thing escape you” (your notice), KJV, “be not ignorant of” See HIDE, IGNORANT, UNAWARES.

2. epilanthanomai (ἐπιλανθάνομαι, 1950), “to forget, or neglect” (epi, “upon,” used intensively, and No. 1), is said (a) negatively of God, indicating His remembrance of sparrows, Luke 12:6, and of the work and labor of love of His saints, Heb. 6:10; (b) of the disciples regarding taking bread, Matt. 16:5; Mark 8:14; (c) of Paul regarding “the things which are behind,” Phil. 3:13; (d) of believers, as to showing love to strangers, Heb. 13:2, RV, and as to doing good and communicating, v. 16; (e) of a person who after looking at himself in a mirror, forgets what kind of person he is, Jas. 1:24.¶

3. eklanthanomai (ἐκλανθάνομαι, 1585), “to forget utterly” (ek, “out,” intensive), is used in the middle voice in Heb. 12:5, of “forgetting” an exhortation.¶

B. Nouns.

1. lethe (λήθη, 3024), “forgetfulness” (from letho, “to forget,” an old form of lanthano, see A, No. 1; cf. Eng. “lethal,” “lethargy,” and the mythical river “Lethe,” which was supposed to cause forgetfulness of the past to those who drank of it), is used with lambano, “to take,” in 2 Pet. 1:9, “having forgotten,” lit., “having taken forgetfulness” (cf. 2 Tim. 1:5, lit., “having taken reminder”), a periphrastic expression for a single verb.¶

2. epilesmone (ἐπιλησμονή, 1953), “forgetfulness” (akin to A, No. 2), is used in Jas. 1:25, “a forgetful hearer,” RV, “a hearer that forgetteth,” lit., “a hearer of forgetfulness,” i.e., a hearer characterized by “forgetfulness.”¶

FORGIVE, FORGAVE, FORGIVENESS

A. Verbs.

1. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), primarily, “to send forth, send away” (apo, “from,” hiemi, “to send”), denotes, besides its other meanings, “to remit or forgive” (a) debts, Matt. 6:12; 18:27, 32, these being completely cancelled; (b) sins, e.g., Matt. 9:2, 5, 6; 12:31, 32; Acts 8:22 (“the thought of thine heart”); Rom. 4:7; Jas. 5:15; 1 John 1:9; 2:12. In this latter respect the verb, like its corresponding noun (below), firstly signifies the remission of the punishment due to sinful conduct, the deliverance of the sinner from the penalty divinely, and therefore righteously, imposed; secondly, it involves the complete removal of the cause of offense; such remission is based upon the vicarious and propitiatory sacrifice of Christ. In the OT atoning sacrifice and “forgiveness” are often associated, e.g., Lev. 4:20, 26. The verb is used in the NT with reference to trespasses (paraptoma), e.g., Matt. 6:14, 15; sins (hamartia), e.g., Luke 5:20; debts (see above) (opheilema), Matt. 6:12; (opheile), 18:32; (daneion), 18:27; the thought (dianoia) of the heart, Acts 8:22. Cf. kalupto, “to cover,” 1 Pet. 4:8; Jas. 5:20; and epikalupto, “to cover over,” Rom. 4:7, representing the Hebrew words for “atonement.”

Human “forgiveness” is to be strictly analogous to divine “forgiveness,” e.g., Matt. 6:12. If certain conditions are fulfilled, there is no limitation to Christ’s law of “forgiveness,” Matt. 18:21, 22. The conditions are repentance and confession, Matt. 18:15-17; Luke 17:3.

As to limits to the possibility of divine “forgiveness,” see Matt. 12:32, 2nd part (see BLASPHEMY) and 1 John 5:16 (see DEATH). See FORSAKE, LAY, Note (2) at end, LEAVE, LET, OMIT, PUT, No. 16, Note, REMIT, SEND, Note, (1), SUFFER, YIELD.

2. charizomai (χαρίζομαι, 5483), “to bestow a favor unconditionally,” is used of the act of “forgiveness,” whether divine, Eph. 4:32; Col. 2:13; 3:13; or human, Luke 7:42, 43 (debt); 2 Cor. 2:7, 10; 12:13; Eph. 4:32 (1st mention). Paul uses this word frequently, but No. 1 only, in Rom. 4:7, in this sense of the word. See DELIVER.

Note: Apoluo, “to let loose from” (apo, “from,” luo, “to loose”), “to release,” is translated “forgive,” “ye shall be forgiven,” Luke 6:37, KJV (RV, “release,” “ye shall be released”), the reference being to setting a person free as a quasi-judicial act. The verb does not mean “to forgive.” See DISMISS, RELEASE.

B. Noun.

aphesis (ἄφεσις, 859) denotes “a dismissal, release” (akin to A, No. 1); it is used of the remission of sins, and translated “forgiveness” in Mark 3:29; Eph. 1:7; Col. 1:14, and in the KJV of Acts 5:31; 13:38; 26:18, in each of which the RV has “remission.” Eleven times it is followed by “of sins,” and once by “of trespasses.” It is never used of the remission of sins in the Sept., but is especially connected with the Year of Jubilee (Lev.

25:10, etc.). Cf. the RV of Luke 4:18, “release” (KJV, “liberty”). For the significance in connection with remission of sins and the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ, see A, No. 1. See DELIVERANCE, LIBERTY, RELEASE, REMISSION. Cf. the different word paresis, “a passing over, a remission,” of sins committed under the old covenant, Rom. 3:25. The RV should be used here. This passing over, or by, was neither forgetting nor “forgiving”; it was rather a suspension of the just penalty; cf. Acts 17:30, “the times of ignorance God overlooked,” RV; see also, e.g., Ps. 78:38.

FORM (Noun)

1. morphe (μορφή, 3444) denotes “the special or characteristic form or feature” of a person or thing; it is used with particular significance in the NT, only of Christ, in Phil. 2:6, 7, in the phrases “being in the form of God,” and “taking the form of a servant.” An excellent definition of the word is that of Gifford: “morphe is therefore properly the nature or essence, not in the abstract, but as actually subsisting in the individual, and retained as long as the individual itself exists.... Thus in the passage before us morphe Theou is the Divine nature actually and inseparably subsisting in the Person of Christ.... For the interpretation of ‘the form of God’ it is sufficient to say that (1) it includes the whole nature and essence of Deity, and is inseparable from them, since they could have no actual existence without it; and (2) that it does not include in itself anything ‘accidental’ or separable, such as particular modes of manifestation, or conditions of glory and majesty, which may at one time be attached to the ‘form,’ at another separated from it....

“The true meaning of morphe in the expression ‘form of God’ is confirmed by its recurrence in the corresponding phrase, ‘form of a servant.’ It is universally admitted that the two phrases are directly antithetical, and that ‘form’ must therefore have the same sense in both.”*

The definition above mentioned applies to its use in Mark 16:12, as to the particular ways in which the Lord manifested Himself.¶

Note: For the synonymous word schema, see FASHION. For the verb morphoo, see FORMED, No. 1, below.

2. morphosis (μόρφωσις, 3446), “a form or outline,” denotes, in the NT, “an image or impress, an outward semblance,” Rom. 2:20, of knowledge of the truth; 2 Tim. 3:5, of godliness. It is thus to be distinguished from morphe (No. 1); it is used in almost the same sense as schema, “fashion” (which see), but is not so purely the outward “form” as schema is.¶

3. tupos (τύπος, 5179), “the representation or pattern” of anything (for which see ENSAMPLE), is rendered “form” in Rom. 6:17, “that form (or mold) of teaching whereunto ye were delivered,” RV. The metaphor is that of a cast or frame into which molten material is poured so as to take its shape. The Gospel is the mould; those who are obedient to its teachings become conformed to Christ, whom it presents. In Acts 23:25, it is used of a letter, RV, “form” (KJV, “manner”), with reference to the nature of the contents.

4. eidos (εἶδος, 1491), lit., “that which is seen” (eidon, “to see”), “an appearance or external form,” is rendered “form” in the RV of Luke 3:22, of the Holy Spirit’s appearance at the baptism of Christ; in John 5:37, in the Lord’s testimony concerning the Father; in Luke 9:29 it is said of Christ Himself; it is translated “sight” in 2 Cor. 5:7, the Christian being guided by what he knows to be true, though unseen; in 1 Thess. 5:22 Christians are exhorted to abstain from “every form of evil,” RV (the KJV, “appearance” is inadequate), i.e., from every kind of evil. See FASHION, SHAPE, SIGHT.¶

5. hupotuposis (ὑποτύπωσις, 5296), “an outline, sketch” (akin to hupotupoo, “to delineate,” hupo, “under,” and No. 3), is used metaphorically to denote “a pattern, example,” “form,” in 2 Tim. 1:13, “of sound words” (RV, “pattern”); in 1 Tim. 1:16, “pattern” and “ensample.” See ENSAMPLE.¶

FORMED

A. Verbs.

1. morphoo (μορφόω, 3445), like the noun (A, No. 1), refers, not to the external and transient, but to the inward and real; it is used in Gal. 4:19, expressing the necessity of a change in character and conduct to correspond with inward spiritual condition, so that there may be moral conformity to Christ.¶

Cf. metamorphoo, “to transform, transfigure,” summorphizo and suschematizo, “to conform to.”

2. plasso (πλάσσω, 4111), “to mold, to shape,” was used of the artist who wrought in clay or wax (Eng., “plastic,” “plasticity”), and occurs in Rom. 9:20; 1 Tim. 2:13.¶

B. Noun.

plasma (πλάσμα, 4110) denotes “anything molded or shaped into a form” (akin to A, No. 2), Rom. 9:20, “the thing formed.”¶ Cf. the adjective plastos, “made up, fabricated, feigned,” 2 Pet. 2:3.¶

FORMER

1. protos (πρῶτος, 4413*), “first,” is translated “former” in Acts 1:1, of Luke’s first treatise; in Rev. 21:4, RV, “first” (KJV, “former”). See BEFORE, FIRST.

2. proteros (πρότερος, 4387), “before, former,” is translated “former” in Eph. 4:22; Heb. 10:32; 1 Pet. 1:14. See BEFORE.

FORNICATION, FORNICATOR

A. Nouns.

1. porneia (πορνεία, 4202) is used (a) of “illicit sexual intercourse,” in John 8:41; Acts 15:20, 29; 21:25; 1 Cor. 5:1; 6:13, 18; 2 Cor. 12:21; Gal. 5:19; Eph. 5:3; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 4:3; Rev. 2:21; 9:21; in the plural in 1 Cor. 7:2; in Matt. 5:32 and 19:9 it stands for, or includes, adultery; it is distinguished from it in 15:19 and Mark 7:21; (b) metaphorically, of “the association of pagan idolatry with doctrines of, and professed adherence to, the Christian faith,” Rev. 14:8; 17:2, 4; 18:3; 19:2; some suggest this as the sense in 2:21.¶

2.  pornos (πόρνος, 4205) denotes “a man who indulges in fornication, a fornicator,” 1 Cor. 5:9, 10, 11; 6:9; Eph. 5:5, RV; 1 Tim. 1:10, RV; Heb. 12:16; 13:4, RV; Rev. 21:8 and 22:15, RV (KJV, “whoremonger”).¶

B. Verbs.

1. porneuo (πορνεύω, 4203) “to commit fornication,” is used (a) literally, Mark 10:19; 1 Cor. 6:18; 10:8; Rev. 2:14, 20, see (a) and (b) above; (b) metaphorically, Rev. 17:2; 18:3, 9.¶

2. ekporneuo (ἐκπορνεύω, 1608), a strengthened form of No. 1 (ek, used intensively), “to give oneself up to fornication,” implying excessive indulgence, Jude 7.¶

FORSAKE

A. Verbs.

1. kataleipo (καταλείπω, 2641), a strengthened form of leipo, “to leave,” signifies (a) “to leave, to leave behind,” e.g., Matt. 4:13; (b) “to leave remaining, reserve,” e.g., Luke 10:40; (c) “to forsake,” in the sense of abandoning, translated “to forsake” in the RV of Luke 5:28 and Acts 6:2; in Heb. 11:27 and 2 Pet. 2:15, KJV and RV. In this sense it is translated “to leave,” in Mark 10:7; 14:52; Luke 15:4; Eph. 5:31. See LEAVE, RESERVE.

2. enkataleipo (ἐγκαταλείπω, 1459), from en, “in,” and No. 1, denotes (a) “to leave behind, among, leave surviving,” Rom. 9:29; (b) “to forsake, abandon, leave in straits, or helpless,” said by, or of, Christ, Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34; Acts 2:27, 31 (No. 1 in some mss.); of men, 2 Cor. 4:9; 2 Tim. 4:10, 16; by God, Heb. 13:5; of things, by Christians (negatively), Heb. 10:25. See LEAVE.¶

3. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863) sometimes has the significance of “forsaking,” Mark 1:18; 14:50 (RV, “left”); so Luke 5:11. See FORGIVE.

4. apotasso (ἀποτάσσομαι, 657), primarily, “to set apart” (apo, off, “from,” tasso, “to arrange”), is used in the middle voice, meaning (a) “to take leave of,” e.g., Mark 6:46, (b) “to renounce, forsake,” Luke 14:33, KJV, “forsaketh,” RV, “renounceth” (“all that he hath”). See BID FAREWELL, RENOUNCE, SEND, Note (2) at end, TAKE, Note (14).

B. Noun.

apostasia (ἀποστασία, 646), “an apostasy, defection, revolt,” always in NT of religious defection, is translated “to forsake” in Acts 2:2 lit., “(thou teachest) apostasy (from Moses)”; in 2 Thess. 2:3, “falling away.” See FALL.¶

FORSWEAR

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

epiorkeo (ἐπιорκέω, 1964) signifies “to swear falsely, to undo one’s swearing, forswear oneself” (epi, “against,” orkos, “an oath”), Matt. 5:33.¶ Cf. epiorkos, “a perjured person, a perjurer,” 1 Tim. 1:10, “false swearers.”¶

FORTH

exo (ἐξω, 1854), “outside, without” (from, ek, “out of, from”), frequently signifies “forth,” especially after verbs of motion, e.g., John 11:43; 19:4, 13. See OUTWARD, STRANGE, WITHOUT.

Notes: (1) For the word “forth” in combination with various verbs, see, e.g., BREAK, BRING, COME, PUT. (2) In Matt. 26:16, the RV omits “forth,” as the similar apo tote, “from then,” simply means “from that time”; in the similar phrase “from that day forth,” Matt. 22:46; John 11:53, there is no word in the original representing “forth.” (3) In John 2:11 the RV rightly omits “forth.”

FORTHWITH

1. exautes (ἐξάυτης, 1824), “at once” (from, ek, “out of,” and autes, the genitive case of autos, “self or very,” agreeing with “hour” understood, i.e., “from that very hour”), is translated “forthwith” in the RV in Mark 6:25 (KJV, “by and by”); Acts 10:33 (KJV, “immediately”); 11:11 (ditto); 21:32 (ditto); 23:30 (KJV, “straightway”); Phil. 2:23 (KJV, “presently”). The word is frequent in the period of the koine Greek (see Preface). See IMMEDIATELY, PRESENTLY, STRAIGHTWAY.¶

2. eutheos (εὐθέως, 2112), “at once, straightway” (from the adjective, euthus, “straight”), is translated “forthwith,” in the KJV of Matt. 13:5; 26:49; (it occurs in some mss. in Mark 5:13; the RV omits it); Acts 12:10; 21:30 (RV, “straightway,” in each place). See IMMEDIATELY, SHORTLY, STRAIGHTWAY.

3. euthus (εὐθύς, 2117), an alternative adverb to No. 2, is translated “forthwith” in the KJV of Mark 1:29; 1:43 (in the best mss.), and John 19:34 (RV, straightway). See ANON, IMMEDIATELY, STRAIGHTWAY.¶

Note: Parachrema, a synonymous word denoting “instantly, on the spot,” is not translated “forthwith” in KJV or RV. See IMMEDIATELY.

FORTY

tessarakonta (τεσσαράκοντα, 5062) is used in circumstances in Scripture which indicate the number as suggesting probation, separation or judgment, e.g., Matt. 4:2; Acts 1:3; Heb. 3:9, 17.

Note: Tessarakontaetes, “forty years” (etos, “a year”), is found in Acts 7:23; 13:18.¶

FORWARD (be), FORWARDNESS

Notes: (1) The verb thelo, “to will, wish,” is translated “to be forward,” in the KJV of 2 Cor. 8:10, which the RV corrects to “to will.” (2) In Gal. 2:10, spoudazo, “to be zealous,” is so rendered in the RV (KJV, “I was forward”). (3) In 2 Cor. 8:17, the corresponding adjective spoudaios, “earnest,” is so rendered in the RV (KJV, “forward”). So in v. 8, the noun spoude, “earnestness,” is thus rendered in the RV (KJV, “forwardness”). (4) In 9:2, RV, the noun prothumia, “readiness” (pro, “before,” thumos, “impulse”), is so rendered (KJV, “forwardness of mind”). (5) For the combination of this word with verbs see GO, PUT, SET, STRETCH.

FOSTER-BROTHER

suntrophos (σύντροφος, 4939) primarily denotes “one nourished or brought up with another” (sun, “with,” trepho, “to rear”); it is rendered “foster-brother” in Acts 13:1, RV. It has, however, been found in Hellenistic usage as a court term, signifying an intimate friend of a king (Deissmann), and this would seem to be the meaning regarding Manaen and Herod the Tetrarch.

FOUL

akathartos (ἀκάθαρτος, 169) denotes “unclean, impure” (a, negative, and kathairo, “to purify”), (a) ceremonially, e.g., Acts 10:14, 28; (b) morally, always, in the Gospels, of unclean spirits; it is translated “foul” in the KJV of Mark 9:25 and Rev. 18:2, but always “unclean” in the RV. Since the word primarily had a ceremonial significance, the moral significance is less prominent as applied to a spirit, than when poneros, “wicked,” is so applied. Cf. akatharsia, “uncleanness.” See UNCLEAN.

Note: In Rev. 17:4 the best mss. have this word in the plural, RV. “the unclean things” (akathartes, “filthiness,” in some mss.).

FOUNDATION (to lay), FOUNDED

A. Nouns.

1. themelios, or themelion (θεμέλιος, 2310) is properly an adjective denoting “belonging to a foundation” (connected with tithemi, “to place”). It is used (1) as a noun, with lithos, “a stone,” understood, in Luke 6:48, 49; 14:29; Heb. 11:10; Rev. 21:14, 19; (2) as a neuter noun in Acts 16:26, and metaphorically, (a) of “the ministry of the gospel and the doctrines of the faith,” Rom. 15:20; 1 Cor. 3:10, 11, 12; Eph. 2:20, where the “of” is not subjective (i.e., consisting of the apostles and prophets), but objective, (i.e., laid by the apostles, etc.); so in 2 Tim. 2:19, where “the foundation of God” is “the foundation laid by God,”—not the Church (which is not a “foundation”), but Christ Himself, upon whom the saints are built; Heb. 6:1; (b) “of good works, 1 Tim. 6:19.¶

2. katabole (καταβολή, 2602), lit., “a casting down,” is used (a) of “conceiving seed,” Heb. 11:11; (b) of “a foundation,” as that which is laid down, or in the sense of founding; metaphorically, of “the foundation of the world”; in this respect two phrases are used, (1) “from the foundation of the world,” Matt. 25:34 (in the most authentic mss. in 13:35 there is no phrase representing “of the world”); Luke 11:50; Heb. 4:3; 9:26; Rev. 13:8; 17:8; (2) “before the foundation of the world,” John 17:24; Eph. 1:4; 1 Pet. 1:20. The latter phrase looks back to the past eternity.¶

B. Verb.

themelioo (θεμελιόω, 2311), “to lay a foundation, to found” (akin to A, No. 1), is used (a) literally, Matt. 7:25; Luke 6:48; Heb. 1:10; (b) metaphorically, Eph. 3:17, “grounded (in love)”; Col. 1:23 (ditto, “in the faith”); 1 Pet. 5:10, KJV, “settle.” See GROUND, SETTLE.¶

FOUNTAIN

pege (πηγή, 4077), “a spring or fountain,” is used of (a) “an artificial well,” fed by a spring, John 4:6; (b) metaphorically (in contrast to such a well), “the indwelling Spirit of God,” 4:14; (c) “springs,” metaphorically in 2 Pet. 2:17, RV, for KJV, “wells”; (d) “natural fountains or springs,” Jas. 3:11, 12; Rev. 8:10; 14:7; 16:4; (e) metaphorically, “eternal life and the future blessings accruing from it,” Rev. 7:17; 21:6; (f) “a flow of blood,” Mark 5:29.¶

FOUR (-TH), FOURTEEN (-TH), FOUR HUNDRED

tessares (τέσσαρες, 5064), “four,” is not found in the NT outside the Gospels, the Acts and Apocalypse; in the last it is very frequent. Tetartos, “fourth,” is found in Matt. 14:25; Mark 6:48 and seven times in the Apocalypse; also in Acts 10:30, “four days ago,” lit., “from a fourth day.” Dekatessares, “fourteen” (lit., “ten-four”), is found in Matt. 1:17; 2 Cor. 12:2; Gal. 2:1;¶ tessareskaidekatos, “fourteenth” (lit., “four-and-tenth”), Acts 27:27, 33;¶ tetrakosia, “four hundred,” Acts 5:36; 7:6; 13:20; Gal. 3:17.¶ In Acts 7:6 the 400 years refers to Abraham’s descendants and to the sojourning and the bondage. This agrees with Gen. 15:13. In Exod. 12:40 the 430 years dates from the call of Abraham himself. Likewise the giving of the Law was 430 years from the promise in Gen. 12:3, which agrees with Gal. 3:17. In John 11:39 tetartaios, lit., “a fourth day (one),” is rendered “four days.”

FOURFOLD

tetraploos (τετραπλός, 5073), an adjective, is found in Luke 19:8.¶

FOURFOOTED

tetrapous (τετράπους, 5074), from tetra, “four” (used in compound words), and pous, “a foot,” is used of “beasts,” Acts 10:12; 11:6; Rom. 1:23.¶

FOURSCORE

ogdoekonta (ὀγδοήκοντα, 3589), from ogdoos, “eighth,” is found in Luke 2:37; 16:7.¶

FOURSQUARE

tetragonos (τετράγωνος, 5068), “four-cornered” (from tetra, see above, and gonia, “a corner, or angle”), is found in Rev. 21:16.¶

For FOWL see BIRD

FOX

alopex (άλωπηξ, 258) is found in Matt. 8:20; Luke 9:58; metaphorically, of Herod, in Luke 13:32.¶

FRAME (Verb)

1. katartizo (καταρτίζω, 2675), “to fit, to render complete,” is translated “have been framed” in Heb. 11:3, of the worlds or ages. See FIT.

2. sunarmologeō (συναρμολογέω, 4883), “to fit or frame together” (sun, “with,” harmos, “a joint,” legō, “to choose”), is used metaphorically of the church as a spiritual temple, the parts being “fitly framed together,” Eph. 2:21; as a body, 4:16, RV, “fitly framed,” (for KJV, “fitly joined”).¶

libanos (ἐπόπτῃς, 2030), from a Semitic verb signifying “to be white,” is a vegetable resin, bitter and glittering, obtained by incisions in the bark of the arbor thuris, “the incense tree,” and especially imported through Arabia; it was used for fumigation at sacrifices, Exod. 30:7, etc., or for perfume, Song of Sol., 3:6. The Indian variety is called looban. It was among the offerings brought by the wise men, Matt. 2:11. In Rev. 18:13 it is listed among the commodities of Babylon. The “incense” of Rev. 8:3 should be “frankincense.” Cf. INCENSE.¶

FRANKLY

Note: In Luke 7:42, the verb charizomai, “to forgive” (as a matter of grace), is rendered “frankly forgave,” so as to bring out the force of the grace in the action. Older versions had “forgave,” and to this the RV returns.

FRAUD

aphustereo (ἀπό, 575 and ἀπό, 5302), “to keep back, deprive” (apo, “from,” hustereo, “to be lacking”), is used in Jas. 5:4, “is kept back by fraud” (some mss. have apostereo, “to defraud”). The word is found in a papyrus writing of A.D. 42, of a bath insufficiently warmed (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). The Law required the prompt payment of the laborer, Deut. 24:15.¶

FREE, FREEDOM, FREELY, FREEMAN, FREEDMAN, FREEWOMAN

A. Adjective.

eleutheros (ἐλεύθερος, 1658), primarily of “freedom to go wherever one likes,” is used (a) of “freedom from restraint and obligation” in general, Matt. 17:26; Rom. 7:3; 1 Cor. 7:39, RV, “free,” of the second marriage of a woman; 9:1, 19; 1 Pet. 2:16; from the Law, Gal. 4:26; from sin, John 8:36; with regard to righteousness, Rom. 6:20 (i.e., righteousness laid no sort of bond upon them, they had no relation to it); (b) in a civil sense, “free” from bondage or slavery, John 8:33; 1 Cor. 7:21, 22, 2nd part (for v. 22, 1st part, see C, No. 2); 12:13; Gal. 3:28; Eph. 6:8; Rev. 13:16; 19:18; as a noun, “freeman,” Col. 3:11, RV; Rev. 6:15; “freewoman,” Gal. 4:22, 23, 30, and v. 31. RV.¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 15:6 and Mark 7:11, the words “he shall be free,” KJV, have nothing to represent them in the Greek. (2) In Heb. 13:5, RV, “be ye free from the love of money,” is an abbreviated rendering of the adjective aphilarguros (“not loving money”) with the noun tropos, “turn (of mind)”; hence the marg., “let your turn of mind be free, etc.,” for KJV, “let your conversation be without covetousness.”

B. Verb.

eleutheroo (ἐλευθερόω, 1659), “to make free” (akin to A), is used of deliverance from (a) sin, John 8:32, 36; Rom. 6:18, 22; (b) the Law, Rom. 8:2; Gal. 5:1 (see, however under C); (c) the bondage of corruption, Rom. 8:21. See DELIVER.¶

Note: In Rom. 6:7, the verb dikaioo, translated “is freed,” signifies “to justify,” as in the RV, “is justified,” i.e., in the legal sense; death annuls all obligations. The death penalty which Christ endured holds good for the believer, through his identification with Christ in His death; having been crucified as to his unregenerate nature, and justified from sin, he walks in newness of life in Christ.

C. Nouns.

1. eleutheria (ἐλευθερία, 1657), “liberty” (akin to A and B), is rendered “freedom” in Gal. 5:1, “with freedom did Christ set us free.” The combination of the noun with the verb stresses the completeness of the act, the aorist (or point) tense indicating both its momentary and comprehensive character; it was done once for all. The RV margin “for freedom” gives perhaps the preferable meaning, i.e., “not to bring us into another form of bondage did Christ liberate us from that in which we were born, but in order to make us free from bondage.”

The word is twice rendered “freedom” in the RV of Gal. 5:13 (KJV, “liberty”). The phraseology is that of manumission from slavery, which among the Greeks was effected by a legal fiction, according to which the manumitted slave was purchased by a god; as the slave could not provide the money, the master paid it into the temple treasury in the presence of the slave, a document being drawn up containing the words “for freedom.” No one could enslave him again, as he was the property of the god. Hence the word apeleutheros, No. 2. The word is also translated “freedom” in 1 Pet. 2:16, RV. In 2 Cor. 3:17 the word denotes “freedom” of access to the presence of God. See LIBERTY.

2. apeleutheros (ἀπελεύθερος, 558), “a freed man” (apo, “from,” and A), is used in 1 Cor. 7:22, “the Lord’s freedman.” See the illustration above under No. 1. Here the fuller word brings out the spiritual emancipation in contrast to the natural “freedman.”

Note: (1) In Acts 22:28, the word politeia, rendered “freedom” (KJV), denotes citizenship, as in the RV (see CITIZENSHIP); in the next sentence the Greek is, lit., “But I was even born”; the necessary word to be supplied is “Roman,” from the previous verse; hence the RV, “But I am a Roman born.” (2) For “free gift” (charisma), Rom. 5:15, 16; 6:23, see GIFT

dorean (δωρεάν, 1432), from dorea, “a gift” is used as an adverb in the sense “freely,” in Matt. 10:8; Rom. 3:24; 2 Cor. 11:7 (RV, “for nought”); Rev. 21:6; 22:17. Here the prominent thought is the grace of the Giver. See CAUSE.

Notes: (1) In Acts 26:26 parrhesiazomai, “to be bold in speech,” is translated, “to speak freely.” (2) In Acts 2:29 the noun parrhesia with the preposition meta, “with,” is rendered “freely,” lit., “with free-spokenness.” (3) For charizomai, “to give freely,” Rom. 8:32; 1 Cor. 2:12, see GIVE. (4) In 2 Thess. 3:1, KJV, the verb trecho, “to run,” is rendered “may have free course”; this the RV corrects to “may run.” (5) For charitoo, “to bestow freely,” Eph. 1:6, see ACCEPT, Note. (6) For “have drunk freely,” John 2:10, RV, see DRINK, B, No. 2.

FREIGHT

ekbole (ἐκβολή, 1546), lit., “a throwing out” (from ekballo, “to throw out”), denotes “a jettison, a throwing out of cargo,” Acts 27:18, lit., “they made a throwing out,” RV, “they began to throw the freight overboard,” KJV, “they lightened the ship.”¶ In the Sept., Exod. 11:1; Jonah 1:5.¶

For FREQUENT, 2 Cor. 11:23, see ABUNDANT, D

FRESH

neos (νέος, 3501), “new” (in respect of time, as distinct from kainos, “new,” in respect of quality), is translated “fresh” in the RV of Matt. 9:17; Mark 2:22; Luke 5:38, with reference to wineskins. See NEW.

Note: Glukus, “sweet,” is used in Jas. 3:11, 12 (in this verse, KJV, “fresh,” RV, “sweet,” as in both elsewhere); Rev. 10:9, 10. See SWEET.¶

FRIEND (make one’s)

A. Nouns.

1. philos (φίλος, 5384), primarily an adjective, denoting “loved, dear, or friendly,” became used as a noun, (a) masculine, Matt. 11:19; fourteen times in Luke (once feminine, 15:9); six in John; three in Acts; two in James, 2:23, “the friend of God”; 4:4, “a friend of the world”; 3 John 14 (twice); (b) feminine, Luke 15:9, “her friends.”

2. hetairos (ἑταῖρος, 2083), “a comrade, companion, partner,” is used as a term of kindly address in Matt. 20:13; 22:12; 26:50. This, as expressing comradeship, is to be distinguished from No. 1, which is a term of endearment. Some mss. have the word in Matt. 11:16; the best have heterois, others, KJV and RV, “fellows.” See FELLOW.

Notes: (1) The phrase hoi para autou, in Mark 3:21, “his friends,” lit. means “the (ones) beside Him,” i.e., those belonging to him. (2) In Mark 5:19, “thy friends” represents the phrase hoitsoi, lit., “the (ones) to thee,” i.e., “thine own.”

B. Verb.

peitho (πείθω, 3982), “to persuade, influence,” is rendered “having made ... their friend” in Acts 12:20, of the folks of Tyre and Sidon in winning the good will of Blastus, Herod’s chamberlain, possibly with bribes. See ASSURE, B, No. 3.

FRIENDSHIP

philia (φιλία, 5373), akin to philos, “a friend” (see above), is rendered in Jas. 4:4, “the friendship (of the world).” It involves “the idea of loving as well as being loved” (Mayor); cf. the verb in John 15:19.¶

For FRO and FROM see † p. 1

FROG

batrachos (βάτραχος, 944) is mentioned in Rev. 16:13. Quacks were represented as “frogs” and were associated metaphorically with serpents.¶

For FROWARD see CROOKED

FRUIT (bear), FRUITFUL, UNFRUITFUL

A. Nouns.

1. karpōs (καρπός, 2590), “fruit,” is used (I) of the fruit of trees, fields, the earth, that which is produced by the inherent energy of a living organism, e.g., Matt. 7:17; Jas. 5:7, 18; plural, e.g., in Luke 12:17 [for the next verse, see Note (1) below] and 2 Tim. 2:6; of the human body, Luke 1:42; Acts 2:30; (II), metaphorically, (a) of works or deeds, “fruit” being the visible expression of power working inwardly and invisibly, the character of the “fruit” being evidence of the character of the power producing it, Matt. 7:16. As the visible expressions of hidden lusts are the works of the flesh, so the invisible power of the Holy Spirit in those who are brought into living union with Christ (John 15:2-8, 16) produces “the fruit of the Spirit,” Gal. 5:22, the singular form suggesting the unity of the character of the Lord as reproduced in them, namely, “love, joy, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, temperance,” all in contrast with the confused and often mutually antagonistic “works of the flesh.” So in Phil. 1:11, marg., “fruit of righteousness.” In Heb. 12:11, “the fruit of righteousness” is described as “peaceable fruit,” the outward effect of divine chastening; “the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace,” Jas. 3:18, i.e., the seed contains the fruit; those who make peace, produce a harvest of righteousness; in Eph. 5:9, “the fruit of the light” (RV, and see context) is seen in “goodness and righteousness and truth,” as the expression of the union of the Christian with God (Father, Son and Holy Spirit); for God is good, Mark 10:18, the Son is “the righteous One,” Acts 7:52, the Spirit is “the Spirit of truth,” John 16:13; (b) of advantage, profit, consisting (1) of converts as the result of evangelistic ministry, John 4:36; Rom. 1:13; Phil. 1:22; (2) of sanctification, through deliverance from a life of sin and through service to God, Rom. 6:22, in contrast to (3) the absence of anything regarded as advantageous as the result of former sins, v. 21; (4) of the reward for ministration to servants of God, Phil. 4:17; (5) of the effect of making confession to God’s Name by the sacrifice of praise, Heb. 13:15.

2. genēma (γίνωμαί, 1096d), from ginomai, “to come into being,” denotes “fruit” (a) as the produce of the earth, e.g., the vine; in the following the best mss. have this noun, Matt. 26:29; Mark 14:25; Luke 22:18; [12:18 in some mss., see Note (1)]; (b) metaphorically, as “the fruits of ... righteousness” (i.e., of material ministrations to the needy), 2 Cor. 9:10.¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 12:18 some mss. have gennemata, a mistake for genemata; the best have sitos, “corn.” (2) Genēma is to be distinguished from gennēma, “offspring” (from gennaō, “to beget”), Matt. 3:7; 12:34; 23:33; Luke 3:7.¶

3. opora (ὀπώρα, 3703) primarily denotes “late summer or early autumn,” i.e., late July, all August and early September. Since that is the time of “fruit-bearing,” the word was used, by metonymy, for the “fruits” themselves, Rev. 18:14.¶

Note: Cf. phthinoporinos, “autumnal,” in Jude 12, “autumn trees,” bearing no “fruit” when “fruit” should be expected.¶

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “d” following the number (for instance, genēma, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

B. Adjectives.

1. karpophoros (καρποφόρος, 2593) denotes “fruitful” (A, No. 1, and phero, “to bear”), Acts 14:17.¶ Cf. C, below.

2. akarpōs (ἄκαρπος, 175), “unfruitful” (a, negative, and A, No. 1), is used figuratively (a) of “the word of the Kingdom,” rendered “unfruitful” in the case of those influenced by the cares of the world and the deceitfulness of riches, Matt. 13:22; Mark 4:19; (b) of the understanding of one praying with a “tongue,” which effected no profit to the church without an interpretation of it, 1 Cor. 14:14; (c) of the works of darkness, Eph. 5:11; (d) of believers who fail “to maintain good works,” indicating the earning of one’s living so as to do good works to others, Titus 3:14; of the effects of failing to supply in one’s faith the qualities of virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, love of the brethren, and love, 2 Pet. 1:8. In Jude 12 it is rendered “without fruit,” of ungodly men, who oppose the gospel while pretending to uphold it, depicted as “autumn trees” (see Note under A, No. 3).¶ In the Sept., Jer. 2:6.¶

C. Verb.

karpophoreo (καρποφορέω, 2592), “to bear or bring forth fruit” (see B, No. 1), is used (a) in the natural sense, of the “fruit of the earth,” Mark 4:28; (b) metaphorically, of conduct, or that which takes effect in conduct, Matt. 13:23; Mark 4:20; Luke 8:15; Rom. 7:4, 5 (the latter, of evil “fruit,” borne “unto death,” of activities resulting from a state of alienation from God); Col. 1:6 in the middle voice; Col. 1:10.¶

Note: For “bring forth fruit to perfection,” Luke 8:14, see PERFECTION, B.

For FRUSTRATE, Gal. 2:21, see VOID

FULFILL, FULFILLING, FULFILLMENT

A. Verbs.

1. plerōo (πληρόω, 4137) signifies (1) “to fill” (see FILL); (2) “to fulfill, complete,” (a) of time, e.g., Mark 1:15; Luke 21:24; John 7:8 (KJV, “full come”); Acts 7:23, RV, “he was wellnigh forty years old” (KJV, “was full” etc.), lit., “the time of forty years was fulfilled to him”; v. 30, KJV, “were expired”; 9:23; 24:27 (KJV, “after two years”; RV, “when two years were fulfilled”); (b) of number, Rev. 6:11; (c) of good pleasure, 2 Thess. 1:11; (d) of joy, Phil. 2:2; in the passive voice, “to be fulfilled,” John 3:29 and 17:13; in the following the verb is rendered “fulfilled” in the RV, for the KJV, “full,” John 15:11; 16:24; 1 John 1:4; 2 John 12; (e) of obedience, 2 Cor. 10:6; (f) of works, Rev. 3:2; (g) of the future Passover, Luke 22:16; (h) of sayings, prophecies, etc., e.g., Matt. 1:22 (twelve times in Matt., two in Mark, four in Luke, eight in John, two in Acts); Jas. 2:23; in Col. 1:25 the word signifies to preach “fully,” to complete the ministry of the Gospel appointed. See FILL.

2. anaplerōo (ἀναπληρόω, 378), “to fill up fill completely” (ana, “up, up to,” and No. 1), is used (a) of Isaiah’s prophecy of Israel’s rejection of God, fulfilled in the rejection of His Son, Matt. 13:14; (b) of the status of a person in a church, RV, “filleth the place,” for KJV, “occupieth the room,” 1 Cor. 14:16; (c) of an adequate supply of service, 1 Cor. 16:17, “supplied”; Phil. 2:30, “to supply”; (d) of sins, 1 Thess. 2:16; (e) of the law of Christ; Gal. 6:2. See FILL, OCCUPY, SUPPLY.¶

3. teleo (τελέω, 5055), “to end” (akin to telos, “an end”), signifies, among its various meanings, “to give effect to,” and is translated “fulfill,” of the Law, intentionally, Jas.

2:8, or unconsciously, Rom. 2:27; of the prophetic Scriptures concerning the death of Christ, Acts 13:29; prohibitively, of the lust of the flesh, Gal. 5:16. See ACCOMPLISH, FINISH.

Notes: (1) In regard to this word in Rev. 15:1 and 8, the RV, “finished,” corrects the KJV, “filled up,” and “fulfilled,” as the judgments there indicated finish the whole series of those consisting of the wrath of God; so in 20:3, of the thousand years of the Millennium (cf. vv. 5, 7). (2) In 17:17, the RV has “should be accomplished,” for KJV, “shall be fulfilled.” (3) In Luke 22:37 the KJV has “be accomplished” (RV, “be fulfilled”).

4. sunteleo (συντελέω, 4931), “to complete,” is translated “fulfilled” in the KJV of Mark 13:4 (RV, “accomplished”). See COMPLETE.

5. teleioo (τελειόω, 5048), “to bring to an end, fulfill,” is rendered “to fulfill,” of days. Luke 2:43; of the Scripture, John 19:28. See FINISH.

6. plerophoreo (πληροφορέω, 4135), “to bring in full measure,” from pleroo (see No. 1), and phoreo, “to bring”; hence, “to fulfill,” of circumstances relating to Christ, Luke 1:1, RV, “have been fulfilled” (KJV “are most surely believed”); of evangelical ministry, 2 Tim. 4:5, “fulfill” (KJV, “make full proof”); so in v. 17, RV, “fully proclaimed” (KJV, “fully known”). See ASSURE, PERSUADE.

7. ekpleroo (ἐκπληρόω, 1603), a strengthened form of No. 1, occurs in Acts 13:33.¶

Notes: (1) Poieo, “to do,” is so rendered in the RV, for KJV “fulfill,” in Acts 13:22; Eph. 2:3; Rev. 17:17 [for the end of this verse see Note (2) under teleo, above]. (2) Ginomai, “to become, to take place,” is rendered “fulfilled” in the KJV of Matt. 5:18; 24:34; Luke 21:32, RV, “accomplished,” in each place.

B. Nouns.

1. pleroma (πλήρωμα, 4138) stands for the result of the action expressed in pleroo, “to fill.” It is used to signify (a) “that which has been completed, the complement, fullness,” e.g., John 1:16; Eph. 1:23; some suggest that the “fullness” here points to the body as the filled receptacle of the power of Christ (words terminating in —ma are frequently concrete in character; cf. dikaïoma in Rom. 5:18, act of righteousness); in Mark 8:20 the rendering “basketfuls” (RV) represents the plural of this word, lit., “the fulnesses of (how many baskets)”; (b) “that which fills up,” Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21 (see FILL); (C) “a filling up, fulfillment,” Rom. 13:10, of the fulfilling of the Law. See FULLNESS (below).

2. teleiosis (τελώνιον, 5058), a fulfillment, is so rendered in Luke 1:45, RV (KJV, “performance”). See PERFECTION.

FULL

A. Adjectives.

1. pleres (πλήρης, 4134) denotes “full,” (a) in the sense of “being filled,” materially, Matt. 14:20; 15:37; Mark 8:19 (said of baskets “full” of bread crumbs); of leprosy, Luke 5:12; spiritually, of the Holy Spirit, Luke 4:1; Acts 6:3; 7:55; 11:24; grace and truth, John 1:14; faith, Acts 6:5; grace and power, 6:8; of the effects of spiritual life and qualities, seen in good works, Acts 9:36; in an evil sense, of guile and villany, Acts 13:10; wrath,

19:28; (b) in the sense of “being complete,” “full corn in the ear,” Mark 4:28; of a reward hereafter, 2 John 8.¶

2. mestos (μεστός, 3324) probably akin to a root signifying “to measure,” hence conveys the sense of “having full measure,” (a) of material things, a vessel, John 19:29; a net, 21:11; (b) metaphorically, of thoughts and feelings, exercised (1) in evil things, hypocrisy, Matt. 23:28; envy, murder, strife, deceit, malignity, Rom. 1:29; the utterances of the tongue, Jas. 3:8; adultery, 2 Pet. 2:14; (2) in virtues, goodness, Rom. 15:14; mercy, etc., Jas. 3:17.¶

B. Verb.

gemo (γέμω, 1073), “to be full, to be heavily laden with,” was primarily used of a ship; it is chiefly used in the NT of evil contents, such as extortion and excess, Matt. 23:25; dead men’s bones, v. 27; extortion and wickedness, Luke 11:39; cursing, Rom. 3:14; blasphemy, Rev. 17:3; abominations, v. 4; of divine judgments 15:7; 21:9; (RV, “laden,” KJV, “full”); of good things, 4:6, 8; 5:8.¶

Notes: (1) Gemizo (see FILL, A, No. 9) is always rendered “to fill” in RV (2) For Acts 2:13, KJV, see FILL, No. 11. (3) For “fullgrown,” Heb. 5:14, RV, see AGE, No. 2; for Jas. 1:15, RV, see FINISH, Note (2).

FULLER

gnapheus (ἀδύνατος, 102), akin to knapto, “to card wool,” denotes “a clothcarder, or dresser” (gnaphos, “the prickly teasel-cloth”; hence, “a carding comb”); it is used of the raiment of the Lord in Mark 9:3.¶

For FULLGROWN see AGE, B, No. 2, FINISH, Note (2)

For FULLY see ASSURED, COME, KNOW, PERSUADE, PREACH, RIPE

FULLNESS

pleroma (πλήρωμα, 4138) denotes “fullness,” that of which a thing is “full”; it is thus used of the grace and truth manifested in Christ, John 1:16; of all His virtues and excellencies, Eph. 4:13; “the blessing of Christ,” Rom. 15:29, RV (not as KJV); the conversion and restoration of Israel, Rom. 11:12; the completion of the number of Gentiles who receive blessing through the gospel, v. 25; the complete products of the earth, 1 Cor. 10:26; the end of an appointed period, Gal. 4:4; Eph. 1:10; God, in the completeness of His Being, Eph. 3:19; Col. 1:19; 2:9; the church as the complement of Christ, Eph. 1:23. In Mark 6:43, “basketfuls,” RV, is, lit., “fullnesses of baskets.” For Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21 see FILL, (B); for 8:20 see FULFILL, B.

Note: For plerophoria, “fullness,” Heb. 6:11, RV, see ASSURANCE.

FURLONG

stoion (στάδιον, 4712) denotes (a) “a stadium,” i.e., a measure of length, 600 Greek feet, or one-eighth of a Roman mile, Matt. 14:24 (in the best mss.); Luke 24:13; John 6:19; 11:18; Rev. 14:20; 21:16; (b) “a race course,” the length of the Olympic course, 1 Cor. 9:24.¶

FURNACE

kaminos (κάμινος, 2575), “an oven, furnace, kiln” (whence Lat. caminus, Eng., chimney), used for smelting, or for burning earthenware, occurs in Matt. 13:42, 50; Rev. 1:15; 9:2.¶

FURNISH

1. stronnumi (στροώννυμι, 4766), or stronnuo, “to spread,” is used of “furnishing a room,” Mark 14:15; Luke 22:12; of “making a bed,” Acts 9:34; in Matt. 21:8; Mark 11:8, “spread” (KJV, “strawed,” twice). See SPREAD.¶

2. exartizo (ἐξαρτίζω, 1822), “to fit out, to prepare perfectly, to complete for a special purpose” (ex, “out,” used intensively, and artios, “joined,” artos, “a joint”), is used of “accomplishing” days, Acts 21:5, i.e., of “terminating” a space of time; of being “completely furnished,” by means of the Scriptures, for spiritual service, 2 Tim. 3:17. See ACCOMPLISH.

3. pletho (πλήθω, 4130), Matt. 21:10, “furnished” RV, filled. See FILL, No. 5.

FURTHER

1. eti (ἔτι, 2089), “yet, still, further,” is used (a) of time, most usually translated “yet,” e.g., Matt. 12:46; or negatively, “any more,” “no more,” e.g., Heb. 8:12; (b) of degree, translated “further,” or “any further,” Matt. 26:65; Mark 5:35; 14:63; Luke 22:71; Heb. 7:11 in Acts 21:28, RV, “moreover” (KJV, “further”). See LONGER, MORE, MOREOVER, STILL, THENCEFORTH, YET.

2. porroteron (πορρότερον, 4208), the comparative degree of porro, “far off,” signifies “further,” Luke 24:28. See FAR.

Note: In Acts 27:28, brachu, “a little,” is rendered “a little further,” KJV (RV, “after a little space”).

FURTHERANCE

Notes: (1) In Phil. 1:12, 25, KJV, prokope, “a striking forward” (pro, “forward,” kopto, “to cut”), is translated “furtherance”; “progress” in RV, as in 1 Tim. 4:15. Originally the word was used of a pioneer cutting his way through brushwood. See PROGRESS.¶ (2) In Phil. 1:5 the RV “(for your fellowship) in furtherance of the gospel,” and in 2:22, “in furtherance of the Gospel,” are, lit., “unto the Gospel.”

FURTHERMORE

eita (εἰτα, 1534), which is chiefly used of time or enumerations, signifying “then” or “next,” is once used in argument, signifying furthermore, Heb. 12:9. See AFTERWARD, THEN.

Note: In 1 Thess. 4:1 the KJV “furthermore” translates the phrase to loipon, lit., “for the rest,” RV, finally. See FINALLY.

G

GAIN (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. ergasia (ἐργασία, 2039) signifies (a) “work, working, performance” (from ergon, “work”), Eph. 4:19; in Luke 12:58, “diligence”; (b) “business or gain got by work,” Acts 16:16, 19; in 19:24, 25, the RV adheres to the meaning “business” (KJV, “gain” and “craft”). See CRAFT, DILIGENCE.¶

2. porismos (πορισμός, 4200) primarily denotes “a providing” (akin to porizo, “to procure”), then, “a means of gain,” 1 Tim. 6:5 (RV, “a way of gain”); 6:6.¶

3. kerdos (κέρδος, 2771), “gain” (akin to kerdaino, see below), occurs in Phil. 1:21; 3:7; Titus 1:11. See LUCRE.¶

B. Verbs.

1. kerdaino (κερδαίνω, 2770), akin to A, No. 3, signifies (I), literally, (a) “to gain something,” Matt. 16:26; 25:16 (in the best mss.), 17, 20, 22; Mark 8:36; Luke 9:25; (b) “to get gain, make a profit,” Jas. 4:13; (II), metaphorically, (a) “to win persons,” said (1) of “gaining” an offending brother who by being told privately of his offense, and by accepting the representations, is won from alienation and from the consequences of his fault, Matt. 18:15; (2) of winning souls into the kingdom of God by the gospel, 1 Cor. 9:19, 20 (twice), 21, 22, or by godly conduct, 1 Pet. 3:1 (RV, “gained”); (3) of so practically appropriating Christ to oneself that He becomes the dominating power in and over one’s whole being and circumstances, Phil. 3:8 (RV, “gain”); (b) “to gain things,” said of getting injury and loss, Acts 27:21, RV, “gotten.” See GET.¶

2. diapragmateuomai (διαπραγματεύομαι, 1281) signifies “to gain by trading,” Luke 19:15 (from dia, “through,” used intensively, and pragmateuomai, “to busy oneself, to be engaged in business”).¶

3. peripoieo (περιποιέομαι, 4046), “to save for oneself, gain,” is in the middle voice in the best mss. in Luke 17:33, RV, gain. See PURCHASE.

Notes: (1) In Luke 19:16, KJV, prosergazomai, “to work out in addition,” or “to earn in addition,” is translated “gained” (RV, “made”); in v. 18 the verb poieo, “to make,” is translated in the same way, the English verb “make” standing both for “earning” and for “producing.” (2) In 2 Cor. 12:17, 18, pleonekteo, “to claim unduly, to overreach,” is translated “make a gain of,” KJV (RV, “take advantage of”). (3) For ergazomai, Rev. 18:17, RV, see TRADE. (4) In Acts 25:9, RV, katatithemi middle voice, “to lay up for oneself,” is rendered “to gain.”

GAINSAY, GAINSAYER, GAINSAYING

A. Verbs.

1. antilego (ἀντίλεγω, 483), “to contradict, oppose,” lit., “say against,” is translated “gainsaying” in Rom. 10:21 and Titus 2:9, RV (KJV, “answering again”), of servants in regard to masters; in Titus 1:9 “gainsayers.” Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) illustrate from the papyri “the strong sense of antilego in Rom. 10:21, “contradict, oppose. See ANSWER, CONTRADICT.

---

2. anteipon (ἀντίλεγω, 483), which serves as an aorist tense of No. 1, is rendered “gainsay” in Luke 21:15; “say against” in Acts 4:14. See SAY.¶

B. Noun.

antilogia (ἀντιλογία, 485), akin to A, No. 1, is rendered “gainsaying,” in Heb. 12:3, RV, and Jude 11. Opposition in act seems to be implied in these two places; though this sense has been questioned by some, it is confirmed by instances from the papyri (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). See CONTRADICTION, DISPUTE, STRIFE.

C. Adjective.

anantirrhotos (ἀναντίρρητος, 368), lit., “not to be spoken against” (a, negative, n, euphonic, anti, “against,” rhotos, “spoken”), is rendered “cannot be gainsaid” in Acts 19:36, RV.¶

D. Adverb.

anantirrhotos (ἀναντιρρήτως, 369), corresponding to C, is translated “without gainsaying” in Acts 10:29; it might be rendered “unquestioningly.”¶

GALL

chole (χολή, 5521), a word probably connected with chloe, “yellow,” denotes “gall,” (a) literal, Matt. 27:34 (cf. Ps. 69:21); some regard the word here as referring to myrrh, on account of Mark 15:23; (b) metaphorical, Acts 8:23, where “gall of bitterness” stands for extreme wickedness, productive of evil fruit.¶ In the OT it is used (a) of a plant characterized by bitterness (probably wormwood), Deut. 29:18; Hos. 10:4; Amos 6:12; (b) as the translation of the word mererah, “bitterness,” Job. 13:26, e.g.; (c) as the translation of rosh, “venom”; in Deut. 32:32 “(grapes) of gall.” In Job 20:25, the gall bladder is referred to (the receptacle of bile). The ancients supposed that the poison of serpents lay in the gall (see Job 20:14).

For GAMES see CONTEND

GANGRENE

gangraina (γάγγραινα, 1044), “an eating sore,” spreading corruption and producing mortification, is used, in 2 Tim. 2:17, of errorists in the church, who, pretending to give true spiritual food, produce spiritual gangrene (KJV, “canker,” RV, “gangrene”).¶

GARDEN

kepos (κῆπος, 2779), “a garden,” occurs in Luke 13:19, in one of the Lord’s parables; in John 18:1, 26, of the garden of Gethsemane; in 19:41, of the garden near the place of the Lord’s crucifixion.¶

GARDENER

kepouros (κηπουρός, 2780), lit., “a gardenkeeper” (from kepos, see above, and ouros, “a watcher”), occurs in John 20:15.¶

GARLAND

stemma (στέμμα, 4725) denotes “a wreath” (from stepho, “to put around, enwreath”), as used in sacrifices, Acts 14:13.¶

GARMENT

Note: For himation, the usual word for “garment,” see CLOTHING, where see also esthesis (translated “garments” in the KJV of Luke 24:4, RV, “apparel”), enduma, chiton, and stole (RV, “robe” in Mark 16:5). The fact of the wedding garment, enduma in Matt. 22, vv. 11, 12, indicates that persons of high rank showed their magnificence by providing the guests with festal garments. See APPAREL.

GARNER

apotheke (ἀποθήκη, 596), “a storehouse, granary” (from apo, “away,” and tithemi, “to put”), is translated “garner” in Matt. 3:12 and Luke 3:17. See BARN.

GARNISH

kosmeo (κοσμέω, 2885) is translated by the verb “to garnish” in Matt. 12:44; 23:29; Luke 11:25; and in the KJV of Rev. 21:19. See ADORN.

For GARRISON see GUARD, B, No. 3

GATE

1. pule (πύλη, 4439) is used (a) literally, for a larger sort of “gate,” in the wall either of a city or palace or temple, Luke 7:12, of Nain (burying places were outside the “gates” of cities); Acts 3:10; 9:24; 12:10; Heb. 13:12; (b) metaphorically, of the “gates” at the entrances of the ways leading to life and to destruction, Matt. 7:13, 14; some mss. have pule, for thura, “a door,” in Luke 13:24 (see the RV); of the “gates” of Hades, Matt. 16:18, than which nothing was regarded as stronger. The importance and strength of “gates” made them viewed as synonymous with power. By metonymy, the “gates” stood for those who held government and administered justice there.¶

2. pulon (πυλὼν, 4440), akin to No. 1, primarily signifies “a porch or vestibule,” e.g., Matt. 26:71; Luke 16:20; Acts 10:17; 12:13, 14; then, the “gateway” or “gate tower” of a walled town, Acts 14:13; Rev. 21:12, 13, 15, 21, 25; 22:14.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 3:2 thura denotes, not a “gate,” but a “door,” RV. See DOOR. (2)

Probatikos, signifying “of, or belonging to, sheep,” denotes a sheep “gate” in John 5:2, RV, and KJV marg. (3) The conjectural emendation which suggests the idea of “floods” for “gates” in Matt. 16:18 is not sufficiently substantiated to be accepted.

GATHER, GATHERING

A. Verbs.

1. sunago (συνάγω, 4863), “to gather or bring together,” is said of (a) persons, e.g., Matt. 2:4; (b) things, e.g., Matt. 13:30; in Luke 15:13 the idea is that of “gathering” his goods together for sale, i.e., “having sold off all.” See ASSEMBLE, BESTOW, COME, RESORT.

2. episunago (ἐπισυνάγω, 1996), “to gather together,” suggesting stress upon the place at which the “gathering” is made (epi, “to”), is said of a hen and her chickens, Matt.

23:37; and so of the Lord's would-be protecting care of the people of Jerusalem, id, and Luke 13:34; of the "gathering" together of the elect, Matt. 24:31; Mark 13:27; of the "gathering" together of a crowd, Mark 1:33; Luke 12:1.¶

3. sullego (συλλέγω, 4816), "to collect, gather up or out" (sun, "with" lego, "to pick out"), is said of "gathering" grapes and figs, Matt. 7:16; Luke 6:44 (cf. No. 5); tares, Matt. 13:28, 29, 30, 40; good fish, 13:48; "all things that cause stumbling, and them that do iniquity," 13:41.¶

4. sustrepho (συστρέφω, 4962) signifies (a) "to twist together or roll into a mass" (sun, "together," strepho, "to turn"), said of the bundle of sticks "gathered" by Paul, Acts 28:3; (b) "to assemble or gather together" (possibly, to journey about together), of persons, Matt. 17:22 (in the best mss.), RV, marg.¶

5. trugao (τρυγάω, 5166) signifies "to gather in," of harvest, vintage, ripe fruits (truge denotes "fruit," etc., gathered in autumn), Luke 6:44, of grapes (last part of v.; for the previous clause, as to figs, see No. 3); metaphorically, of the clusters of "the vine of the earth," Rev. 14:18; of that from which they are "gathered," v. 19.¶

6. athroizo (ἄθλησις, 119a) denotes "to assemble, gather together," Luke 24:33 (according to the best mss.); the word is akin to athroos, "assembled in crowds" (not found in the NT).¶

7. sunathroizo (συναθροίζω, 4867), sun, "together," and No. 6, signifies (a) "to gather together," Acts 19:25, RV (KJV, "called together"); in the passive voice, 12:12.¶

8. epathroizo (ἐπαθροίζω, 1865), "to assemble besides" (epi), said of multitudes, Luke 11:29, is rendered "were gathering together" (middle voice), RV (KJV, "were gathered thick together").¶

Notes: (1) In Eph. 1:10, KJV, the verb anakephalaioo, "to sum up, head up," is rendered "might gather together in one" (RV, "sum up"). (2) In Luke 8:4, KJV (suneimi, "to come together") as "were gathered together" (see RV). (4) For "assuredly gathering," see CONCLUDE.

B. Noun.

episunagoge (ἐπισυναγωγή, 1997), "a gathering together," is used in 2 Thess. 2:1, of the "rapture" of the saints; for Heb. 10:25, see ASSEMBLE.

Note: For logia, 1 Cor. 16:2, KJV, see COLLECTION.

For GAY see GOODLY, A, Note.

For GAZE see BEHOLD, No. 3.

GAZINGSTOCK

theatrizo (θεατρίζω, 2301) signifies "to make a spectacle" (from theatron, "a theater, spectacle, show"); it is used in the passive voice in Heb. 10:33, "being made a gazingstock."¶

GEAR

skeuos (σκεῦος, 4632), “an implement, vessel, utensil,” is used of the tackling or “gear” of a ship, Acts 27:17, RV (KJV, “sail”).

For GENDER see BEGET, No. 1

GENEALOGY

A. Noun.

genealogia (γενεαλογία, 1076) is used in 1 Tim. 1:4 and Titus 3:9, with reference to such “genealogies” as are found in Philo, Josephus and the book of Jubilees, by which Jews traced their descent from the patriarchs and their families, and perhaps also to Gnostic “genealogies” and orders of aeons and spirits. Amongst the Greeks, as well as other nations, mythological stories gathered round the birth and “genealogy” of their heroes. Probably Jewish “genealogical” tales crept into Christian communities. Hence the warnings to Timothy and Titus.¶

B. Verb.

genealogeo (γενεαλογέω, 1075), “to reckon or trace a genealogy” (from genea, “a race,” and lego, “to choose, pick out”), is used, in the passive voice, of Melchizedek in Heb. 7:6, RV, “whose genealogy (KJV, ‘descent’) is not counted.”¶

C. Adjective (negative).

agenealogetos (ἀγενεαλόγητος, 35), denoting “without recorded pedigree” (a, negative, and an adjectival form from B), is rendered “without genealogy” in Heb. 7:3. The narrative in Gen. 14 is so framed in facts and omissions as to foreshadow the person of Christ.¶

For GENERAL (Assembly) see ASSEMBLY, No. 2

GENERATION

1. genea (γενεά, 1074): see AGE, No. 2.

2. genesis (γένεσις, 1078) denotes “an origin, a lineage, or birth,” translated “generation” in Matt. 1:1. See NATURAL, NATURE.

Notes: (1) For gennema, translated “generation” in the KJV of Matt. 3:7; 12:34; 23:33; Luke 3:7, see OFFSPRING.¶ (2) For genos, translated “generation” in 1 Pet. 2:9, KJV, see KIND.

GENTILES

A. Nouns.

1. ethnos (ἔθνος, 1484), whence Eng., “heathen,” denotes, firstly, “a multitude or company”; then, “a multitude of people of the same nature or genus, a nation, people”; it is used in the singular, of the Jews, e.g., Luke 7:5; 23:2; John 11:48, 50-52; in the plural, of nations (Heb., goiim) other than Israel, e.g., Matt. 4:15; Rom. 3:29; 11:11; 15:10; Gal. 2:8; occasionally it is used of gentile converts in distinction from Jews, e.g., Rom. 11:13; 16:4; Gal. 2:12, 14; Eph. 3:1.

2. hellen (Ἕλλην, 1672) originally denoted the early descendants of Thessalian Hellas; then, Greeks as opposed to barbarians, Rom. 1:14. It became applied to such Gentiles as spoke the Greek language, e.g., Gal. 2:3; 3:28. Since that was the common medium of intercourse in the Roman Empire, Greek and Gentile became more or less interchangeable terms. For this term the RV always adheres to the word “Greeks,” e.g., John 7:35; Rom. 2:9, 10; 3:9; 1 Cor. 10:32, where the local church is distinguished from Jews and Gentiles; 12:13.

B. Adjective.

ethnikos (ἔθνικός, 1482) is used as noun, and translated “Gentiles” in the RV of Matt. 5:47; 6:7; “the Gentile” in 18:17 (KJV, “an heathen man”); “the Gentiles” in 3 John 7, KJV and RV.¶

C. Adverb.

ethnikos (ἔθνικῶς, 1483), “in Gentile fashion, in the manner of Gentiles,” is used in Gal. 2:14, “as do the Gentiles,” RV.¶

Notes: (1) For the synonymous word laos, “a people,” see PEOPLE. (2) When, under the new order of things introduced by the gospel the mystery of the church was made known, the word ethnos was often used in contrast to the local church, 1 Cor. 5:1; 10:20; 12:2; 1 Thess. 4:5; 1 Pet. 2:12.

GENTLE, GENTLENESS, GENTLY

A. Adjectives.

1. epieikes (ἐπιεικής, 1933), from epi, “unto,” and eikos, “likely,” denotes “seemly, fitting”; hence, “equitable, fair, moderate, forbearing, not insisting on the letter of the law”; it expresses that considerateness that looks “humanely and reasonably at the facts of a case”; it is rendered “gentle” in 1 Tim. 3:3, RV (KJV, “patient”), in contrast to contentiousness; in Titus 3:2, “gentle,” in association with meekness, in Jas. 3:17, as a quality of the wisdom from above, in 1 Pet. 2:18, in association with the good; for the RV rendering “forbearance” in Phil. 4:5, RV, see FORBEARANCE. Cf. B. See PATIENT.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 8:13; Ps. 86:5.¶

2. epios (ἥπιος, 2261), “mild, gentle,” was frequently used by Greek writers as characterizing a nurse with trying children or a teacher with refractory scholars, or of parents toward their children. In 1 Thess. 2:7, the apostle uses it of the conduct of himself and his fellow missionaries towards the converts at Thessalonica (cf. 2 Cor. 11:13, 20); in 2 Tim. 2:24, of the conduct requisite for a servant of the Lord.¶

B. Noun.

epieikeia (ἐπιείκεια, 1932), or epieikia, denotes “fairness, moderation, gentleness,” “sweet reasonableness” (Matthew Arnold); it is said of Christ, 2 Cor. 10:1, where it is coupled with prautes, “meekness”; for its meaning in Acts 24:4, see CLEMENCY.¶ Trench (Syn. Sec.xlviii) considers that the ideas of equity and justice which are essential to the meaning, do not adequately express it in English. In contrast with prautes (“meekness”), which is more especially a temperament or habit of mind, epieikeia expresses an active dealing with others.

Note: (1) For chrestotes, “kindness, goodness of heart,” rendered “gentleness” in Gal. 5:22, KJV, see KINDNESS. The corresponding adjective chrestos is translated “good,” “kind,” “easy,” “gracious.”

(2) For metriopatheo, to bear gently with, Heb. 5:2, see BEAR, No. 13.

GET, GOT, GOTTEN

(a) In the sense of acquiring:

1. heurisko (εὕρισκω, 2147), “to find,” is translated “get” in Luke 9:12, of victuals. See FIND.

2. ктаομαι (κτάομαι, 2932), “to acquire, procure for oneself, gain,” is rendered “get” in the RV of Matt. 10:9 and KJV marg. (KJV, text, “provide”); in Luke 18:12 (for KJV, “possess”). See OBTAIN, POSSESS, PROVIDE, PURCHASE.

3. kerdaino (κερδαίνω, 2770), “to gain,” is rendered “have gotten” in Acts 27:21, RV (of injury and loss); the word is there used metaphorically, however, of avoiding, or saving oneself from. For the meaning, “to get gain,” Jas. 4:13, see GAIN.

Notes: (1) For pleonekteo; “to get an advantage of” (KJV, in 2 Cor. 2:11; RV, “an advantage may be gained over,”), see ADVANTAGE. (2) In Rev. 15:2, KJV, nikao, “to conquer, prevail over,” is translated “had gotten the victory” (RV, “come victorious”). (3) In Rev. 3:17, RV, plouteo, “to become rich,” is rendered “I have gotten riches.”

(b) In the sense of going:

1. exeimi (ἐξείμι, 1826), “to go or come out,” is used in Acts 27:43 of “getting” to land. See DEPART, GO, No. 23.

2. hupago (ὑπάγω, 5217), “to go away, withdraw,” is rendered “get,” “get ... hence,” in Matt. 4:10; 16:23; Mark 8:33; some mss. have it in Luke 4:8. See DEPART, GO, No. 8.

3. exerchomai (ἐξέρχομαι, 1831), “to come or go out,” is translated “get ... out” in Luke 13:31; Acts 7:3; 22:18. See COME, No. 3, GO (Notes).

4. katabaino (καταβαίνω, 2597), “to descend,” is translated “get ... down,” in Acts 10:20. See COME, No. 19.

5. embaino (ἐμβαίνω, 1684), “to enter,” is translated “they got into” in John 6:24 (of boats), RV [KJV, “took (shipping).”]. See COME, No. 21.

6. apobaino (ἀποβαίνω, 576), “to go from,” is translated “they got out” in John 21:9, RV (KJV, “were come to”). See COME, 21 (Note).

Note: In Acts 21:1, KJV, apospao, “to withdraw or part from,” is rendered “we had gotten (from),” RV, “had parted (from).” After the scene described at the end of ch. 20, it may well have the force of “being reft away” (or tearing themselves away) from them. Cf. the same verb in Luke 22:41 (“He was reft away from them”). See DRAW, PART, WITHDRAW.

For GHOST see SPIRIT

GHOST (give up the)

1. ekpneo (ἐκπνέω, 1606), lit., “to breathe out” (ek, “out,” pneo, “to breathe”), “to expire,” is used in the NT, without an object, “soul” or “life” being understood, Mark 15:37, 39, and Luke 23:46, of the death of Christ. In Matt. 27:50 and John 19:30, where different verbs are used, the act is expressed in a way which stresses it as of His own volition: in the former, “Jesus ... yielded up His spirit (pneuma); in the latter, “He gave up His spirit.”¶

2. ekpsucho (ἐκψύχω, 1634), “to expire,” lit., “to breathe out the soul (or life), to give up the ghost” (ek, “out,” psuche, “the soul”), is used in Acts 5:5, 10; 12:23.¶

GIFT, GIVING

1. doron (δῶρον, 1435), akin to didomi, “to give,” is used (a) of “gifts” presented as an expression of honor, Matt. 2:11; (b) of “gifts” for the support of the temple and the needs of the poor, Matt. 15:5; Mark 7:11; Luke 21:1, 4; (c) of “gifts” offered to God, Matt. 5:23, 24; 8:4; 23:18, 19; Heb. 5:1; 8:3, 4; 9:9; 11:4; (d) of salvation by grace as the “gift” of God, Eph. 2:8; (e) of “presents” for mutual celebration of an occasion, Rev. 11:10. See OFFERING.¶

2. dorea (δωρεά, 1431) denotes “a free gift,” stressing its gratuitous character; it is always used in the NT of a spiritual or supernatural gift, John 4:10; Acts 8:20; 11:17; Rom. 5:15; 2 Cor. 9:15; Eph. 3:7; Heb. 6:4; in Eph. 4:7, “according to the measure of the gift of Christ,” the “gift” is that given by Christ; in Acts 2:28, “the gift of the Holy Ghost,” the clause is exegetical, the “gift” being the Holy Ghost Himself; cf. 10:45; 11:17, and the phrase, “the gift of righteousness,” Rom. 5:17.¶

Note: For dorean, a form of this noun, used adverbially, see FREELY.

3. dorema (δῶρημα, 1434): see BOON.

4. doma (δόμα, 1390) lends greater stress to the concrete character of the “gift,” than to its beneficent nature, Matt. 7:11; Luke 11:13; Eph. 4:8; Phil. 4:17.¶

5. dosis (δόσις, 1394) denotes, properly, “the act of giving,” Phil. 4:15, euphemistically referring to “gifts” as a matter of debt and credit accounts; then, objectively, “a gift,” Jas. 1:17 (1st mention; see BOON).¶

6. charisma (χάρισμα, 5486), “a gift of grace, a gift involving grace” (charis) on the part of God as the donor, is used (a) of His free bestowments upon sinners, Rom. 5:15, 16; 6:23; 11:29; (b) of His endowments upon believers by the operation of the Holy Spirit in the churches, Rom. 12:6; 1 Cor. 1:7; 12:4, 9, 28, 30, 31; 1 Tim. 4:14; 2 Tim. 1:6; 1 Pet. 4:10; (c) of that which is imparted through human instruction, Rom. 1:11; (d) of the natural “gift” of continence, consequent upon the grace of God as Creator, 1 Cor. 7:7; (e) of gracious deliverances granted in answer to the prayers of fellow believers, 2 Cor. 1:11.¶

Note: In the KJV of 2 Cor. 8:4 charis, “grace,” is translated “gift.” The RV, “in regard of this grace,” adheres to the true meaning, as in v. 6.

7. merismos (μερισμός, 3311), “a dividing” (from meros, “a part”), is translated “gifts” in Heb. 2:4, “gifts of the Holy Ghost” (marg., “distributions”); in 4:12, “dividing.” See DIVIDING.¶

Note: In the KJV of Luke 21:5 anathema, “a votive offering,” is translated “gifts” (RV, “offerings”).¶

GIRD, GIRDED, GIRT (about, up)

1. zonnumi (ζώννυμι, 2224), or zonnuo, “to gird” in the middle voice, “to gird oneself,” is used of the long garments worn in the east, John 21:18; Acts 12:8 (perizonnumi in some mss.).¶

2. anazonnumi (ἀναζώννυμι, 328), “to gird up” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically of the loins of the mind, 1 Pet. 1:13; cf. Luke 12:35 (see No. 4). The figure is taken from the circumstances of the Israelites as they ate the Passover in readiness for their journey, Exod. 12:11; the Christian is to have his mental powers alert in expectation of Christ’s coming. The verb is in the middle voice, indicating the special interest the believer is to take in so doing.¶

3. diazonnumi (διαζώννυμι, 1241), “to gird round,” i.e., firmly (dia, “throughout,” used intensively), is used of the Lord’s act in “girding” Himself with a towel, John 13:4, 5, and of Peter’s girding himself with his coat, 21:7.¶

4. perizonnumi (περιζώννυμι, 4024), “to gird around or about,” is used (a) literally, of “girding” oneself for service, Luke 12:37; 17:8; for rapidity of movement, Acts 12:8; (b) figuratively, of the condition for service on the part of the followers of Christ, Luke 12:35; Eph. 6:14; (c) emblematically, of Christ’s priesthood, Rev. 1:13, indicative of majesty of attitude and action, the middle voice suggesting the particular interest taken by Christ in “girding” Himself thus; so of the action of the angels mentioned in 15:6.¶

zone (ζώνη, 2223), Eng., “zone,” denotes “a belt or girdle,” Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6; Acts 21:11; Rev. 1:13; 15:6; it was often hollow, and hence served as a purse, Matt. 10:9; Mark 6:8.¶

GIVE

1. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is used with various meanings according to the context; it is said, e.g., of seed “yielding fruit,” Mark 4:7, 8; of “giving” (i.e., exercising) diligence, Luke 12:58; of giving lots, Acts 1:26, RV (KJV, “gave forth”); of “rendering” vengeance, 2 Thess. 1:8; of “striking or smiting” Christ, John 18:22 (lit., “gave a blow”) and 19:3 (lit., “they gave Him blows”); of “putting” a ring on the hand, Luke 15:22; of Paul’s “adventuring” himself into a place, Acts 19:31. (In Rev. 17:13 some mss. have diadidomi, “to divide”). See ADVENTURE, BESTOW, No. 1, COMMIT, Note (1), DELIVER, GRANT, MAKE, MINISTER, OFFER, PUT, SET, SHEW, SUFFER, TAKE, UTTER, YIELD.

Note: In the following the RV gives the correct rendering: Acts 7:25, “was giving them deliverance” (KJV, “would deliver them”); Acts 10:40, “gave Him to be made manifest” (KJV, “shewed Him openly”); Rev. 13:14, 15, “it was given him” (KJV, “he had power”).

2. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591) signifies “to give up or back, to restore, return, render what is due, to pay, give an account” (apo, “back,” and No. 1), e.g., of an account. Matt. 5:26; 12:36; Luke 16:2; Acts. 19:40; Heb. 13:17; 1 Pet. 4:5; of wages, etc., e.g., Matt. 18:25-34; 20:8; of conjugal duty, 1 Cor. 7:3; of a witness, Acts 4:33; frequently of recompensing or rewarding, 1 Tim. 5:4; 2 Tim. 4:8, 14; 1 Pet. 3:9; Rev. 18:6; 22:12. In the middle voice it is used of “giving” up what is one’s own; hence, “to sell,” Acts 5:8; 7:9; Heb. 12:16. See DELIVER.

3. epididomi (ἐπιδίδωμι, 1929) signifies (a) “to give by handing, to hand” (epi, “over”), e.g., Matt. 7:9, 10; Luke 4:17; 24:30, here of the Lord’s act in “handing” the broken loaf to the two at Emmaus, an act which was the means of the revelation of Himself as the crucified and risen Lord; the simple verb, No. 1, is used of His “handing” the bread at the institution of the Lord’s Supper, Matt. 26:26; Mark 14:22; Luke 22:19; this meaning of the verb epididomi is found also in Acts 15:30, “they delivered”; (b) “to give in, give way,” Acts 27:15, RV, “we gave way to it.” See DELIVER.

4. metadidomi (μεταδίδωμι, 3330), “to give a share of, impart” (meta, “with”), as distinct from “giving.” The apostle Paul speaks of “sharing” some spiritual gift with Christians at Rome, Rom. 1:11, “that I may impart,” and exhorts those who minister in things temporal, to do so as “sharing,” and that generously, 12:8, “he that giveth”; so in Eph. 4:28; Luke 3:11; in 1 Thess. 2:8 he speaks of himself and his fellow missionaries as having been well pleased to impart to the converts both God’s gospel and their own souls (i.e., so “sharing” those with them as to spend themselves and spend out their lives for them). See IMPART.¶

5. paradidomi (παραδίδωμι, 3860), “to give or hand over,” is said of “giving” up the ghost, John 19:30; of “giving” persons up to evil, Acts 7:42; Rom. 1:24, 26; of “giving” one’s body to be burned, 1 Cor. 13:3; of Christ’s “giving” Himself up to death, Gal. 2:20; Eph. 5:2, 25. See BETRAY, COMMIT, DELIVER.

6. prodidomi (προδίδωμι, 4272), “to give before, or first” (pro, “before”), is found in Rom. 11:35.¶

7. charizomai (χαρίζομαι, 5483) primarily denotes “to show favor or kindness,” as in Gal. 3:18, RV, “hath granted” (KJV, “gave”); then, to “give” freely, bestow graciously; in this sense it is used almost entirely of that which is “given” by God, Acts 27:24, “God hath granted thee all them that sail with thee” (RV); in Rom. 8:32, “shall ... freely give”; 1 Cor. 2:12, “are freely given”; Phil. 1:29, “it hath been granted” (said of believing on Christ and suffering for Him); 2:9, “hath given” (said of the name of Jesus as “given” by God); Philem. 22, “I shall be granted unto you” (RV). In Luke 7:21, it is said in regard to the blind, upon whom Christ “bestowed” sight (RV). The only exceptions, in this sense of the word, as to divinely imparted “gifts,” are Acts 3:14, of the “granting” of Barabbas by Pilate to the Jews, and Acts 25:11, 16, of the “giving” up of a prisoner to his accusers or to execution. See DELIVER, FORGIVE, GRANT.

8. parecho (παρέχω, 3930), in the active voice, signifies “to afford, furnish, provide, supply” (lit., “to hold out or towards”; para, “near,” echo, “to hold”); it is translated “hath given” in Acts 17:31; “giveth” in 1 Tim. 6:17 (in the sense of affording); in Col. 4:1, RV, “render” (KJV, “give”). See BRING, DO, KEEP, MINISTER, OFFER, RENDER, SHEW, TROUBLE.

9. doreo (ἀισθάνομαι, 143), akin to No. 1, and used in the middle voice, “to bestow, make a gift of,” is translated in the RV by the verb “to grant,” instead of the KJV, “to give,” Mark 15:45; 2 Pet. 1:3, 4. See GRANT.¶

10. aponemo (ἀπονέμω, 632), “to assign, apportion” (apo, “away,” nemo, “to distribute”), is rendered “giving” in 1 Pet. 3:7, of giving honor to the wife. In the papyri writings it is said of a prefect who “gives” to all their dues.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 4:19.¶

11. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” is used in Jude 3 of “giving” diligence (the middle voice indicating Jude’s especial interest in his task).

12. kataphero (καταφέρω, 2702), “to bring down or against” (kata, “down”), said of an accusation in Acts 25:7 (in the best mss.), and of being “borne down” with sleep, 20:9, RV, is used of casting a ballot or “giving” a vote in 26:10. See FALL, Note (8), SINK.¶

13. prostithemi (προστίθημι, 4369), lit., “to put in addition” (pros, “to,” tithemi, “to put”), “to give more,” is translated “shall more be given,” in Mark 4:24 (passive voice). See ADD.

14. scholazo (σχολάζω, 4980), “to be at leisure,” hence, “to have time or opportunity for, to be occupied in,” is said of “giving” oneself to prayer, 1 Cor. 7:5; of an “empty” house, “lying vacant,” Matt. 12:44.¶

15. lego (λέγω, 3004), “to say,” is rendered “giving out,” of the self-advertisement of Simon Magus, Acts 8:9. See SAY.

16. prosecho (προσέχω, 4337), “to turn one’s mind to, attend to,” is used of “giving” oneself up to, 1 Tim. 3:8 (to wine); of “giving” heed to, Acts 8:6, 10, 11 (RV); 16:14 (RV); 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:1, 13 (RV); Titus 1:14; Heb. 2:1. See ATTEND.

17. dioko (διώκω, 1377), “to pursue,” is translated “given to” in Rom. 12:13, lit., “pursuing hospitality.” See FOLLOW.

Notes: (1) In John 10:11, RV, tithemi, “to put, lay down,” is rendered “layeth down,” for the KJV, “giveth.” (2) For pareisphero, “to add,” rendered “giving” in 2 Pet. 1:5, KJV, see ADD. (3) For martureo, “to bear witness” KJV “gave (record)” in 1 John 5:10, RV, “hath borne (witness),” see WITNESS. (4) For choregeo, “to supply minister,” rendered “giveth” (RV, “supplieth”) in 1 Pet. 4:11, see MINISTER. (5) For merizo, “to divide into parts,” rendered “gave a part” (RV, “divided”) in Heb. 7:2, see DIVIDE. (6) For paristemi, “to place by,” rendered “give” in Matt. 26:53, KJV (RV, “send”), see SEND. (7) For douloo, in the passive voice, “to be enslaved,” rendered “given to” in Titus 2:3, KJV, see ENSLAVE. (8) In 1 Tim. 4:15, the imperative mood of eimi, “to be,” with en, “in,” lit., “be in,” is translated “give thyself wholly to.” (9) In Luke 10:7, the phrase, lit., “the (things) by them,” is rendered “such things as they give.” (10) For epikrino, see SENTENCE. (11), For proskartereo, “to give oneself continually,” Acts 6:4, see CONTINUE. (12), See CHARGE, COMMANDMENT, DRINK, HOSPITALITY, LAW, LIGHT, MARRIAGE, PLACE, PLEASURE, SUCK, THANKS.

GIVER

dores (δότης, 1395), akin to didomi, “to give,” is used in 2 Cor. 9:7 of him who gives cheerfully (hilariously) and is thereby loved of God.¶

GLAD (be, make), GLADLY

A. Verbs.

1. chairo (χαίρω, 5463) is the usual word for “rejoicing, being glad”; it is rendered by the verb “to be glad” in Mark 14:11; Luke 15:32; 22:5; 23:8; John 8:56; 11:15; 20:20; Acts 11:23; 13:48; in the following the RV has “to rejoice” for KJV, “to be glad,” Rom. 16:19; 1 Cor. 16:17; 2 Cor. 13:9; 1 Pet. 4:13; Rev. 19:7. See FAREWELL, No. 4, GREETING, HAIL, JOY, REJOICE.

2. agalliao (ἀγαλλιάω, 21), “to exult, rejoice greatly,” is chiefly used in the middle voice (active in Luke 1:47; some mss. have the passive in John 5:35, “to be made glad”). In the OT, it is found abundantly in the Psalms, from 2:11 onward to 149:2, 5 (Sept.). It conveys the idea of jubilant exultation, spiritual “gladness,” Matt. 5:12, “be exceeding glad,” the Lord’s command to His disciples; Luke 1:47, in Mary’s song; 10:21, of Christ’s exultation (“rejoiced”); cf Acts 2:26, “(My tongue) was glad,” KJV (RV, “rejoiced”); John 8:56, of Abraham; Acts 16:34, RV, “rejoiced greatly” (of the Philippian jailor); 1 Pet. 1:6, 8; 4:13 (“with exceeding joy”), of believers in general; in Rev. 19:7, RV, “be exceeding glad” (KJV, “rejoice”). See REJOICE.¶

3. euphraino (εὐφραίνω, 2165), “to cheer, gladden,” is rendered “maketh ... glad” in 2 Cor. 2:2. See FARE, MERRY, REJOICE.

B. Adverbs.

1. hedeos (ἡδέως, 2234), “gladly” (from hedus, “sweet”), is used in Mark 6:20; 12:37; 2 Cor. 11:19.¶

2. hedista (ἡδιστα, 2236), the superlative degree of No. 1, “most gladly, most delightedly, with great relish,” is rendered “most gladly” in 2 Cor. 12:9, and in v. 15 (RV; KJV, “very gladly”).¶

3. asmenos (ἀσμένως, 780), “with delight, delightedly, gladly,” is found in Acts 21:17. It is absent from the best texts in 2:41 (see the RV).¶

GLADNESS

1. chara (χαρά, 5479), “joy, delight” (akin to A, No. 1 above), is rendered “gladness” in the KJV of Mark 4:16; Acts 12:14 and Phil. 2:29 (RV “joy”, as elsewhere in both versions). See JOY.

2. agalliasis (ἀγαλλίασις, 20), “exultation, exuberant joy” (akin to A, No. 2), is translated “gladness” in Luke 1:14; Acts 2:6; Heb. 1:9; “joy” in Luke 1:44; “exceeding joy” in Jude 24. It indicates a more exultant “joy” than No. 1. In the Sept. this word is found chiefly in the Psalms, where it denotes “joy” in God’s redemptive work, e.g., 30:5; 42:4; 45:7, 15. See JOY.

3. euphrosune (εὐφροσύνη, 2167), “good cheer, joy, mirth, gladness of heart” (akin to A, No. 3), from eu, “well,” and phren, “the mind,” is rendered “gladness” in Acts 2:28, RV (KJV, “joy”) and 14:17. See JOY.¶

GLASS, GLASSY

A. Nouns.

1. hualos (ὑαλος, 5194) primarily denoted anything transparent, e.g., a transparent stone or gem, hence, “a lens of crystal, a glass,” Rev. 21:18, 21.¶

2. esoptron (ἑσοπτρον, 2072), “a mirror,” is rendered “glass” in the KJV of 1 Cor. 13:12 and Jas. 1:23. See MIRROR.¶

Note: For the corresponding verb katoptrizo in 2 Cor. 3:18 (middle voice), see BEHOLD, No. 12.

B. Adjective.

hualinos (ὑάλινος, 5193) signifies “glassy, made of glass” (akin to A, No. 1), Rev. 4:6; 15:2 (twice), RV, “glassy.”¶

For GLISTERING see DAZZLING and SHINE, No. 4

GLORIFY

1. doxazo (δοξάζω, 1392) primarily denotes “to suppose” (from doxa, “an opinion”); in the NT (a) “to magnify, extol, praise” (see doxa below), especially of “glorifying”; God, i.e., ascribing honor to Him, acknowledging Him as to His being, attributes and acts, i.e., His glory (see GLORY), e.g., Matt. 5:16; 9:8; 15:31; Rom. 15:6, 9; Gal. 1:24; 1 Pet. 4:16; the Word of the Lord, Acts 13:48; the Name of the Lord, Rev. 15:4; also of “glorifying” oneself, John 8:54; Rev. 18:7; (b) “to do honor to, to make glorious,” e.g., Rom. 8:30; 2 Cor. 3:10; 1 Pet. 1:8, “full of glory,” passive voice (lit., “glorified”); said of Christ, e.g., John 7:39; 8:54, RV, “glorifieth,” for KJV, “honor” and “honoreth” (which would translate timao, “to honor”); of the Father, e.g., John 13:31, 32; 21:19; 1 Pet. 4:11; of “glorifying” one’s ministry, Rom. 11:13, RV, “glorify” (KJV, “magnify”); of a member of the body, 1 Cor. 12:26, “be honored” (RV marg., “be glorified”).

“As the glory of God is the revelation and manifestation of all that He has and is ... , it is said of a Self-revelation in which God manifests all the goodness that is His, John 12:28. So far as it is Christ through whom this is made manifest, He is said to glorify the Father, John 17:1, 4; or the Father is glorified in Him, 13:31; 14:13; and Christ’s meaning is analogous when He says to His disciples, ‘Herein is My Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; and so shall ye be My disciples,’ John 15:8. When doxazo is predicated of Christ ... , it means simply that His innate glory is brought to light, is made manifest; cf. 11:4. So 7:39; 12:16, 23; 13:31; 17:1, 5. It is an act of God the Father in Him.... As the revelation of the Holy Spirit is connected with the glorification of Christ, Christ says regarding Him, ‘He shall glorify Me,’ 16:14” (Cremer).

2. endoxazo (ἐνδοξάζω, 1740), No. 1 prefixed by en, “in,” signifies, in the passive voice, “to be glorified,” i.e., to exhibit one’s glory; it is said of God, regarding His saints in the future, 2 Thess. 1:10, and of the name of the Lord Jesus as “glorified” in them in the present, v. 12.¶

3. sundoxazo (συνδοξάζω, 4888), “to glorify together” (sun, “with”), is used in Rom. 8:17.¶

GLORY, GLORIOUS

A. Nouns.

1. doxa (δόξα, 1391), “glory” (from dokeo, “to seem”), primarily signifies an opinion, estimate, and hence, the honor resulting from a good opinion. It is used (I) (a) of the nature and acts of God in self-manifestation, i.e., what He essentially is and does, as exhibited in whatever way he reveals Himself in these respects, and particularly in the person of Christ, in whom essentially His “glory” has ever shone forth and ever will do, John 17:5, 24; Heb. 1:3; it was exhibited in the character and acts of Christ in the days of His flesh, John 1:14; John 2:11; at Cana both His grace and His power were manifested, and these constituted His “glory”, so also in the resurrection of Lazarus 11:4, 40; the “glory” of God was exhibited in the resurrection of Christ, Rom. 6:4, and in His ascension and exaltation, 1 Pet. 1:21, likewise on the Mount of Transfiguration, 2 Pet. 1:17. In Rom. 1:23 His “everlasting power and Divinity” are spoken of as His “glory,” i.e., His attributes and power as revealed through creation; in Rom. 3:23 the word denotes the manifested perfection of His character, especially His righteousness, of which all men fall short; in Col. 1:11 “the might of His glory” signifies the might which is characteristic of His “glory”; in Eph. 1:6, 12, 14, “the praise of the glory of His grace” and “the praise of His glory” signify the due acknowledgement of the exhibition of His attributes and ways; in Eph. 1:17, “the Father of glory” describes Him as the source from whom all divine splendor and perfection proceed in their manifestation, and to whom they belong; (b) of the character and ways of God as exhibited through Christ to and through believers, 2 Cor. 3:18 and 4:6; (c) of the state of blessedness into which believers are to enter hereafter through being brought into the likeness of Christ, e.g., Rom. 8:18, 21; Phil. 3:21 (RV, “the body of His glory”); 1 Pet. 5:1, 10; Rev. 21:11; (d) brightness or splendor, (1) supernatural, emanating from God (as in the shekinah “glory,” in the pillar of cloud and in the Holy of Holies, e.g., Exod. 16:10; 25:22), Luke 2:9; Acts 22:11; Rom. 9:4; 2 Cor. 3:7; Jas. 2:1; in Titus 2:13 it is used of Christ’s return, “the appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ” (RV); cf. Phil. 3:21, above; (2) natural, as of the heavenly bodies, 1 Cor. 15:40, 41; (II) of good reputation, praise, honor, Luke 14:10 (RV, “glory,” for KJV, “worship”); John 5:41 (RV, “glory,” for KJV, “honor”); 7:18; 8:50; 12:43 (RV, “glory,” for KJV, “praise”); 2 Cor. 6:8 (RV, “glory,” for KJV “honor”); Phil. 3:19; Heb. 3:3; in 1 Cor. 11:7, of man as representing the authority of God, and of woman as rendering conspicuous the authority of man; in 1 Thess. 2:6, “glory” probably stands, by metonymy, for material gifts, an honorarium, since in human estimation “glory” is usually expressed in things material.

The word is used in ascriptions of praise to God, e.g., Luke 17:18; John 9:24, RV, “glory” (KJV, “praise”); Acts 12:23; as in doxologies (lit., “glory-words”), e.g., Luke 2:14; Rom. 11:36; 16:27; Gal. 1:5; Rev. 1:6. See DIGNITY, HONOR, PRAISE, WORSHIP.

2. kleos (κλέος, 2811), “good report, fame, renown,” is used in 1 Pet. 2:20.¶ The word is derived from a root signifying “hearing”; hence, the meaning “reputation.”

Note: In 2 Cor. 3:11 the phrase dia doxes, “through (i.e., by means of) glory,” is rendered “with glory” in the RV (KJV, “glorious”); in the same verse en doxe, “in glory” (RV), i.e., “accompanied by glory,” is rendered “glorious” in the KJV. The first is said of the ministration of the Law, the second of that of the gospel.

B. Adjective.

endoxos (ἐνδοξος, 1741) signifies (a) “held in honor” (en, “in,” doxa, “honor”), “of high repute,” 1 Cor. 4:10, RV “have glory” (KJV, “are honorable”); (b) “splendid, glorious,” said of apparel, Luke 7:25, “gorgeously”; of the works of Christ, 13:17; of the church, Eph. 5:27. See GORGEOUSLY, HONORABLE.¶

GLORY (to boast), GLORYING

A. Verbs.

1. kauchaomai (καυχάομαι, 2744), “to boast or glory,” is always translated in the RV by the verb “to glory,” where the KJV uses the verb “to boast” (see, e.g., Rom. 2:17, 23; 2 Cor. 7:14; 9:2; 10:8, 13, 15, 16); it is used (a) of “vainglorying,” e.g., 1 Cor. 1:29; 3:21; 4:7; 2 Cor. 5:12; 11:12, 18; Eph. 2:9; (b) of “valid glorying,” e.g., Rom. 5:2, “rejoice”; 5:3, 11 (RV, “rejoice”); 1 Cor. 1:31; 2 Cor. 9:2; 10:8, 12:9; Gal. 6:14; Phil. 3:3 and Jas. 1:9, RV, “glory” (KJV, “rejoice”). See BOAST, JOY, REJOICE.

2. katakauchaomai (κατακαυχάομαι, 2620), a strengthened form of No. 1 (kata, intensive), signifies “to boast against, exult over,” Rom. 11:18, RV, “glory” (KJV, “boast”); Jas. 2:13, RV, “glorieth” (KJV, “rejoiceth”); 3:14, “glory (not).” See BOAST, REJOICE.¶

3. enkauchaomai, en, “in,” and No. 1, “to glory in,” is found, in the most authentic mss., in 2 Thess. 1:4.¶

Note: Cf. perpereuomai, “to vaunt oneself, to be perperos, vainglorious,” 1 Cor. 13:4.¶

B. Nouns.

1. kauchema (καύχημα, 2745), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “that in which one glories, a matter or ground of glorying,” Rom. 4:2 and Phil. 2:16, RV, “whereof to glory” (for Rom. 3:27, see No. 2); in the following the meaning is likewise “a ground of glorying”: 1 Cor. 5:6; 9:15, “glorying,” 16, “to glory of”; 2 Cor. 1:14 RV; 9:3, RV; Gal. 6:4, RV (KJV, “rejoicing”); Phil. 1:26 (ditto); Heb. 3:6 (ditto). In 2 Cor. 5:12 and 9:3 the word denotes the boast itself, yet as distinct from the act (see No. 2).¶

2. kauchesis (καύχησις, 2746) denotes “the act of boasting,” Rom. 3:27; 15:17, RV, “(my) glorying” (KJV, “whereof I may glory”); 1 Cor. 15:31, RV, “glorying”; 2 Cor. 1:12 (ditto); 7:4, 14 (KJV, “boasting”); 8:24; 11:10, and 17 (ditto); 1 Thess. 2:19 (KJV, “rejoicing”); Jas. 4:16 (ditto). The distinction between this and No. 1 is to be observed in 2 Cor. 8:24, speaking of the apostle’s act of “glorying” in the liberality of the Corinthians, while in 9:3 he exhorts them not to rob him of the ground of his “glorying” (No. 1). Some take the word in 2 Cor. 1:12 (see above) as identical with No. 1, a boast, but there seems to be no reason for regarding it as different from its usual sense, No. 2.¶

Note: Cf. alazoneia (or -ia), “vainglory, ostentatious (or arrogant) display,” Jas. 4:16 and 1 John 2:16,¶ and alazon, “a boaster,” Rom. 1:30 and 2 Tim. 3:2.¶

GLUTTON

gaster (γαστήρ, 1064) denotes “a belly”; it is used in Titus 1:12, with the adjective argos, “idle,” metaphorically, to signify a glutton, RV, “(idle) gluttons” [KJV “(slow) bellies”]; elsewhere, Luke 1:31. See WOMB.¶

GLUTTONOUS

phagos (φάγος, 5314), akin to phago, “to eat,” a form used for the aorist or past tense of esthio, denotes “a glutton,” Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:34.¶

GNASH, GNASHING

A. Verbs.

1. brucho (βρύχω, 1031), primarily, “to bite or eat greedily” (akin to bruko, “to chew”), denotes “to grind or gnash with the teeth,” Acts 7:54.¶

2. trizo (τρίζω, 5149), primarily used of the sounds of animals, “to chirp, cry, squeak,” came to signify “to grind or gnash with the teeth,” Mark 9:18.¶

B. Noun.

brugmos (βρυγμός, 1030), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “gnashing” (“of teeth” being added), Matt. 8:12; 13:42, 50; 22:13; 24:51; 25:30; Luke 13:28.¶

GNAT

konops (κώνωψ, 2971) denotes “the winegnat or midge,” which breeds in fermenting or evaporating wine, Matt. 23:24, where the KJV, “strain at” is corrected to “strain out,” in the RV.¶

GNAW

masaomai or massaomai (μασσάομαι, 3145) denotes “to bite or chew,” Rev. 16:10.¶ In the Sept., Job. 30:4.¶

GO (WENT), GO ONWARD, etc.

1. poreuomai (πορεύομαι, 4198), “to go on one’s way, to proceed from one place to another” (from poros, “a passage, a ford,” Eng., “pore”), is always used in the middle voice in the NT and the Sept., and is the most frequent verb signifying “to go”; it is more distinctly used to indicate procedure or course than the verb eimi, “to go” (not found in the NT). It is often rendered “go thy (your) way,” in Oriental usage the customary dismissal, marking the close of a case in court. Hence, in ordinary parlance, marking the end of a conversation, etc., e.g., Luke 7:22; 17:19; John 4:50; Acts 9:15; 24:25; cf. Dan. 12:9; in Rom. 15:24 (1st part), RV, “go” (KJV, “take my journey”); in Acts 9:3 and 26:13, journeyed (KJV and RV). See DEPART, JOURNEY, WALK.

2. paraporeuomai (παρὰπορεύομαι, 3899) denotes “to go past, to pass by” (para, “by,” and No. 1), Mark 2:23, KJV, “went (through),” RV, “was going (through)”; some mss. have No. 4 here. See PASS.

3. proporeuomai (προπορεύομαι, 4313), “to go before” (pro, and No. 1), is used in Luke 1:76 and Acts 7:40.¶

4. diaporeuomai (διαπορεύομαι, 1279), “to go through” (dia, “through,” and No. 1), “to pass across,” is translated “to go through,” in Luke 6:1; 13:22, “went on His way through,” RV; Acts 16:4; “going by” in Luke 18:36, RV (KJV, “pass by”); “in my journey” in Rom. 15:24 (2nd part). For Mark 2:23 see No. 2. See JOURNEY.

5. eisporeuomai (εἰσπορεύομαι, 1531), “to go in, enter,” is never rendered by the verb “to come in,” in the RV. See, e.g., Luke 11:33, “enter”; Acts 9:28, going in; 28:30, “went in.” See ENTER.

6. sumporeuomai (συμπορεύομαι, 4848), “to go together with” (sun, “with”), is used in Mark 10:1, RV, “come together” (KJV, “resort”); Luke 7:11; 14:25; 24:15. See RESORT.¶

7. ago (ἄγω, 71), “to bring, lead,” is used intransitively, signifying “let us go” (as if to say, “let us be leading on,” with the point of departure especially in view), Matt. 26:46; Mark 1:38; 14:42; John 11:7, 15, 16; 14:31. See BRING.

8. hupago (ἐξηνοποιέω, 1517), “to go away or to go slowly away, to depart, withdraw oneself,” often with the idea of going without noise or notice (hupo, “under,” and No. 7), is very frequent in the gospels; elsewhere it is used in Jas. 2:16; 1 John 2:11; Rev. 10:8; 13:10; 14:4; 16:1; 17:8, 11. It is frequently rendered “go your (thy) way.” See DEPART.

9. periago (περιάγω, 4013), “to lead about” (peri, “about,” and No. 7), as in 1 Cor. 9:5, is used intransitively with the meaning “to go about”; “went about,” Matt. 4:23, 9:35; Mark 6:6; Acts 13:11; in Matt. 23:15, “ye compass.” See COMPASS, LEAD.¶

10. proago (προάγω, 4254), “to lead forth,” used intransitively signifies “to go before,” usually of locality, e.g., Matt. 2:9; figuratively, in 1 Tim. 1:18, “went before” (RV, marg., “led the way to”), of the exercise of the gifts of prophecy which pointed to Timothy as one chosen by God for the service to be committed to him; in 5:24, of sins “going before unto judgment.” In 2 John 9, where the best mss. have this verb (instead of parabaino, “to transgress,” KJV), the RV renders it “goeth onward” (marg., “taketh the lead”), of not abiding in the doctrine of Christ. Cf. Mal. 4:4. See BRING.

11. apeimi (ἄπειμι, 549), “to go away,” is found in Acts 17:10.¶

12. eiseimi (εἴσειμι, 1524), “to go into, enter,” is used in Acts 3:3; 21:18, 26; Heb. 9:6, RV, “go in” (KJV, “went ... into”). See ENTER.¶

13. metabaino (μεταβαίνω, 3327), “to go or pass over from one place to another,” is translated “go” in Luke 10:7. See DEPART.

14. aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι, 565), “to go away” (apo, “from”), is chiefly used in the gospels; it signifies “to go aside” in Acts 4:15. See DEPART.

15. anachoreo (ἀναχωρέω, 402) signifies “to withdraw,” often in the sense of avoiding danger, e.g., Acts 23:19, RV, “going aside” (KJV, “went ... aside”). See DEPART.

16. hupochoreo (ὑποχωρέω, 5298), “to go back, retire” (hupo, “under,” suggesting privacy), Luke 5:16; 9:10, KJV, “went aside” (RV, “withdrew apart”). See WITHDRAW.¶

17. proerchomai (προέρχομαι, 4281), “to go before, precede, go forward or farther” (pro, “before”), is used of (a) place, e.g., Matt. 26:39; Acts 12:10, “passed on through”; (b) time, Luke 1:17; Acts 20:5, 13; 2 Cor. 9:5. See OUTGO, PASS.

18. epiduo (ἐπιδύω, 1931) signifies “to go down,” and is said of the sun in Eph. 4:26; i.e., put wrath away before sunset (see ANGER, A, Note (2). In the Sept., Deut. 24:15; Josh. 8:29; Jer. 15:9.¶

19. sunkatabaino (συγκαταβαίνω, 4782), “to go down with,” is used in Acts 25:5.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 49:17.¶

20. probaino (προβαίνω, 4260), “to go on, forwards, advance,” is used of locality, Matt. 4:21; Mark 1:19; for the metaphorical use with reference to age, Luke 1:7, 18; 2:36, see AGE, STRICKEN.¶

21. apobaino (ἀποβαίνω, 576), “to go away or from,” is translated “had gone out,” in Luke 5:2, i.e., disembarked. See COME, 21, Note, TURN.

22. prosanabaino (προσαναβαίνω, 4320), “to go up higher” (pros, “towards”), is used of moving to a couch of greater honor at a feast, Luke 14:10.¶

23. exeimi (ἐξείμι, 1826), “to go out,” is so rendered in Acts 13:42. See DEPART, GET.

24. sbennumi (σβέννυμι, 4570), “to quench,” is used in the passive voice, of the going out of the light of a torch or lamp, Matt. 25:8, “are going out” (RV). See QUENCH.

25. teleo (τελέω, 5055), “to finish,” is rendered “to go through or over” in Matt. 10:23, of “going through” the cities of Israel (KJV, marg., “end,” or “finish”). See END, FINISH.

26. diodeuo (διοδεύω, 1353), “to travel throughout or along” (dia, “through,” hodos, “a way”), is used in Luke 8:1, of “going throughout” (KJV) or “about through” (RV) cities and villages; of “passing through” towns, Acts 17:1. See PASS.

27. apodemeo (ἀποδημέω, 589), “to be abroad,” is translated “going into another country,” in Matt. 25:14 (KJV, “traveling, etc.”). See JOURNEY.

28. anerchomai (ἀνέρχομαι, 424), “to go up” (ana), occurs in John 6:3; Gal. 1:17, 18.¶

29. perierchomai (περιέρχομαι, 4022), “to go around, or about,” is translated “going about” in 1 Tim. 5:13, RV (KJV, “wandering about”); “went about” in Heb. 11:37, RV (KJV, “wandered about”). See CIRCUIT.

30. epicheireo (ἐπιχειρέω, 2021), lit., “to put the hand to” (epi, “to,” cheir, “the hand”), “to take in hand, undertake,” occurs in Luke 1:1, “have taken in hand”; in Acts 9:29, “they went about”; in 19:13, “took upon them.” See TAKE.¶

Notes: (1) The following verbs signify both “to come” and “to go,” with prefixed prepositions accordingly, and are mentioned under the word COME: erchomai (No. 1); eiserchomai (No. 2); exerchomai (No. 3); dierchomai (No. 5); katerchomai (No. 7); Luke 17:7, parerchomai (No. 9); proserchomai, “go near,” Acts 8:29 (No. 10); sunerchomai, “went with,” Acts 9:39; 15:38; 21:16 (No. 11); anabaino, (No. 15); katabaino (No. 19); paraginomai, Acts 23:16, KJV, “went,” RV “entered” (No. 13);

ekporeuo (No. 33); choreo, Matt. 15:17, KJV, “goeth,” RV, “passeth” (No. 24); anabaino, Luke 19:28, RV, “going up”; ekbaino (No. 17).

(2) In the following, the verbs mentioned, translated in the KJV by some form of the verb “to go,” are rendered in the RV more precisely in accordance with their true meaning: (a) zeteo, “to seek,” so the RV in John 7:19, 20; Acts 21:31; Rom. 10:3 (KJV, to go about); (b) peirazo, “to make an attempt,” Acts 24:6, RV, “assayed” (KJV, “have gone about”); (c) peirao, “to attempt,” Acts 26:21, RV, “assayed” KJV, “went about”); (d) epistrepho, “to return,” Acts 15:16, RV, “let us return” (KJV, “let us go again”); (e) huperbaino, “to overstep,” 1 Thess. 4:6, RV, “transgress” (KJV, “go beyond”); (f) diistemi, “to set apart, make an interval,” Acts 27:28, RV, “(after) a space” (KJV, “had gone further”); (g) suneiserchomai, “to go in with,” John 6:22 and 18:15, RV, “entered (in) with” (KJV, “went ... with”); (h) phero, in the middle voice, lit., “to bear oneself along,” Heb. 6:1, RV, “let us press on” (KJV, “let us go on”); (i) ekklino, “to bend or turn away,” Rom. 3:12, RV, “have turned aside” (KJV, “have gone out of the way”); (j) diaperao, “to pass through, or across,” Matt. 14:34, RV, “had crossed over” (KJV, “were gone over”); (k) strateuomai, “to serve in war,” 1 Cor. 9:7, RV, “(what) soldier ... serveth” (KJV, “goeth a warfare”); (l) hodoiporeo, “to be on a journey,” Acts 10:9, RV, “as they were on their journey” (KJV, “as they went, etc.”); (m) embaino, “to enter,” Matt. 13:2 and Luke 8:22, RV, “entered” (KJV, “went into”); in v. 37 (KJV, “went up into”); (n) apoluo, “to set free,” Luke 23:22 and John 19:12, RV, “release” (KJV, “let ... go”); Acts 15:33, RV, “dismissed” (KJV, ditto); Acts 28:18, RV, “set at liberty” (KJV, ditto); (o) epibaino, “to go upon,” Acts 21:4, RV, “set foot” (KJV, “go”); some mss. have anabaino; (p) apangello, “to announce,” Acts 12:17, RV, “tell” (KJV, “go shew”); (q) aperchomai, “to go away,” Matt. 5:30, RV, “go” (KJV, “be cast”); some mss. have ballo, “to cast”; (r) peripateo, “to walk,” Mark 12:38, RV, “walk” (KJV “go”); (s) for “gone by,” Acts 14:16, RV, see PASS, No. 17.

GOAD

kentron (κέντρον, 2759), from kenteo, “to prick,” denotes (a) “a sting,” Rev. 9:10; metaphorically, of sin as the “sting” of death, 1 Cor. 15:55, 56; (b) “a goad,” Acts 26:14, RV, “goad” (marg., “goads”), for KJV, “pricks” (in some mss. also in 9:5), said of the promptings and misgivings which Saul of Tarsus had resisted before conversion.¶

GOAL

skopos (σκοπός, 4649), primarily, “a watcher” (from skopeo, “to look at”; Eng., “scope”), denotes “a mark on which to fix the eye,” and is used metaphorically of an aim or object in Phil. 3:14, RV, “goal” (KJV, “mark”). See MARK.

GOAT

1. eriphos (ἔριφος, 2056) denotes “a kid or goat,” Matt. 25:32 (RV, marg., “kids”); Luke 15:29, “a kid”; some mss. have No. 2 here, indicating a sneer on the part of the elder son, that his father had never given him even a tiny kid.¶

2. eriphion (ἐρίφιον, 2055), a diminutive of No. 1, is used in Matt. 25:33. In v. 32 eriphos is purely figurative; in v. 33, where the application is made, though metaphorically, the change to the diminutive is suggestive of the contempt which those so described bring upon themselves by their refusal to assist the needy.¶

3. tragos (τράγος, 5131) denotes “a hegoat,” Heb. 9:12, 13, 19; 10:4, the male prefiguring the strength by which Christ laid down His own life in expiatory sacrifice.

GOATSKIN

Note: The adjective aigeios signifies “belonging to a goat” (from aix, “a goat”); it is used with derma, “a skin,” in Heb. 11:37.

GOD

theos (θεός, 2316), (I) in the polytheism of the Greeks, denoted “a god or deity,” e.g., Acts 14:11; 19:26; 28:6; 1 Cor. 8:5; Gal. 4:8.

(II) (a) Hence the word was appropriated by Jews and retained by Christians to denote “the one true God.” In the Sept. theos translates (with few exceptions) the Hebrew words Elohim and Jehovah, the former indicating His power and preeminence, the latter His unoriginated, immutable, eternal and self-sustained existence.

In the NT, these and all the other divine attributes are predicated of Him. To Him are ascribed, e.g., His unity, or monism, e.g., Mark 12:29; 1 Tim. 2:5; self-existence, John 5:26; immutability, Jas. 1:17; eternity, Rom. 1:20; universality, Matt. 10:29; Acts 17:26-28; almighty power Matt. 19:26; infinite knowledge, Acts 2:23; 15:18; Rom. 11:33, creative power, Rom. 11:36; 1 Cor. 8:6; Eph. 3:9; Rev. 4:11; 10:6; absolute holiness, 1 Pet. 1:15; 1 John 1:5; righteousness, John 17:25; faithfulness, 1 Cor. 1:9; 10:13; 1 Thess. 5:24; 2 Thess. 3:3; 1 John 1:9; love, 1 John 4:8, 16; mercy, Rom. 9:15, 18; truthfulness, Titus 1:2; Heb. 6:18. See GOOD, No. 1 (b).

(b) The divine attributes are likewise indicated or definitely predicated of Christ, e.g., Matt. 20:18-19; John 1:1-3; 1:18, RV, marg.; 5:22-29; 8:58; 14:6; 17:22-24; 20:28; Rom. 1:4; 9:5; Phil. 3:21; Col. 1:15; 2:3; Titus 2:13, RV; Heb. 1:3; 13:8; 1 John 5:20; Rev. 22:12, 13.

(c) Also of the Holy Spirit, e.g., Matt. 28:19; Luke 1:35; John 14:16; 15:26; 16:7-14; Rom. 8:9, 26; 1 Cor. 12:11; 2 Cor. 13:14.

(d) Theos is used (1) with the definite article, (2) without (i.e., as an anarthrous noun). “The English may or may not have need of the article in translation. But that point cuts no figure in the Greek idiom. Thus in Acts 27:23 (‘the God whose I am,’ RV) the article points out the special God whose Paul is, and is to be preserved in English. In the very next verse (ho theos) we in English do not need the article” (A. T. Robertson, Gram. of Greek, NT, p. 758).

As to this latter it is usual to employ the article with a proper name, when mentioned a second time. There are, of course, exceptions to this, as when the absence of the article serves to lay stress upon, or give precision to, the character or nature of what is expressed in the noun. A notable instance of this is in John 1:1, “and the Word was God”; here a double stress is on theos, by the absence of the article and by the emphatic position. To translate it literally, “a god was the Word,” is entirely misleading. Moreover, that “the Word” is the subject of the sentence, exemplifies the rule that the subject is to be determined by its having the article when the predicate is anarthrous (without the article). In Rom. 7:22, in the phrase “the law of God,” both nouns have the article; in v. 25, neither has the article. This is in accordance with a general rule that if two nouns are united by the genitive case (the “of” case), either both have the article, or both are without. Here, in the first instance, both nouns, “God” and “the law” are definite, whereas in v. 25 the word “God” is not simply titular; the absence of the article stresses His character as lawgiver.

Where two or more epithets are applied to the same person or thing, one article usually serves for both (the exceptions being when a second article lays stress upon different aspects of the same person or subject, e.g., Rev. 1:17). In Titus 2:13 the RV correctly has “our great God and Savior Jesus Christ.” Moulton (ProL., p. 84) shows, from papyri writings of the early Christian era, that among Greek-speaking Christians this was “a current formula” as applied to Christ. So in 2 Pet. 1:1 (cf. 1:11; 3:18).

In the following titles God is described by certain of His attributes; the God of glory, Acts 7:2; of peace, Rom. 15:33; 16:20; Phil. 4:9; 1 Thess. 5:23; Heb. 13:20; of love and peace, 2 Cor. 13:11; of patience and comfort, Rom. 15:5; of all comfort, 2 Cor. 1:3; of hope, Rom. 15:13; of all grace, 1 Pet. 5:10. These describe Him, not as in distinction from other persons, but as the source of all these blessings; hence the employment of the definite article. In such phrases as “the God of a person,” e.g., Matt. 22:32, the expression marks the relationship in which the person stands to God and God to him.

(e) In the following the nominative case is used for the vocative, and always with the article; Mark 15:34; Luke 18:11, 13; John 20:28; (Acts 4:24 in some mss.); Heb. 1:8; 10:7.

(f) The phrase “the things of God” (translated literally or otherwise) stands for (1) His interests, Matt. 16:23; Mark 8:33; (2) His counsels, 1 Cor. 2:11; (3) things which are due to Him, Matt. 22:21; Mark 12:17; Luke 20:25. The phrase “things pertaining to God,” Rom. 15:17; Heb. 2:17; 5:1, describes, in the Heb. passages, the sacrificial service of the priest; in the Rom. passage the gospel ministry as an offering to God.

(III) The word is used of divinely appointed judges in Israel, as representing God in His authority, John 10:34, quoted from Ps. 82:6, which indicates that God Himself sits in judgment on those whom He has appointed. The application of the term to the Devil, 2 Cor. 4:4, and the belly, Phil. 3:19, virtually places these instances under (I).

For GOD-SPEED see GREETING

GOD (without)

atheos (ἄθεος, 112), cf. Eng., “atheist,” primarily signifies “godless” (a, negative), i.e., destitute of God; in Eph. 2:12 the phrase indicates, not only that the Gentiles were void of any true recognition of God, and hence became morally “godless” (Rom. 1:19-32) but that being given up by God, they were excluded from communion with God and from the privileges granted to Israel (see the context and cf. Gal. 4:8). As to pagan ideas, the popular cry against the early Christians was “away with the atheists” (see the account of the martyrdom of Polycarp, in Eusebius, Eccles. Hist. iv. 15, 19).¶

GODDESS

thea (θεά, 2299) is found in Acts 19:27 (in some mss. in vv. 35, 37).¶

For GODHEAD see DIVINE, DIVINITY

GODLINESS, GODLY

A. Nouns.

1. eusebeia (εὐσέβεια, 2150), from eu, “well,” and sebomai, “to be devout,” denotes that piety which, characterized by a Godward attitude, does that which is well-pleasing to Him. This and the corresponding verb and adverb (see below) are frequent in the Pastoral Epistles, but do not occur in previous epistles of Paul. The apostle Peter has the noun four times in his 2nd Epistle, 1:3, 6, 7; 3:11. Elsewhere it occurs in Acts 3:12; 1 Tim. 2:2; 3:16; 4:7, 8; 6:3, 5, 6, 11; 2 Tim. 3:5; Titus 1:1. In 1 Tim. 6:3 “the doctrine which is according to godliness” signifies that which is consistent with “godliness,” in contrast to false teachings; in Titus 1:1, “the truth which is according to godliness” is that which is productive of “godliness”; in 1 Tim. 3:16, “the mystery of godliness” is “godliness” as embodied in, and communicated through, the truths of the faith concerning Christ; in 2 Pet. 3:11, the word is in the plural, signifying acts of “godliness.”¶

2. theosebeia (θεοσέβεια, 2317) denotes “the fear or reverence of God,” from theos, “god,” and sebomai (see No. 1), 1 Tim. 2:10.¶ Cf. the adjective theosebēs, “God-fearing,” John 9:31.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 20:11 and Job 28:28.¶

Note: For eulabeia, “godly fear,” Heb. 5:7; 12:28 see FEAR, A, No. 3; for eulabeomai, “to reverence,” Heb. 11:7 (“for His godly fear”) see FEAR, D, No. 2; for the verb eusebeo, “to show piety,” 1 Tim. 5:4; “to worship,” Acts 17:23, see PIETY and WORSHIP.¶

B. Adjective.

eusebēs (εὐσεβής, 2152), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “pious, devout, godly,” indicating reverence manifested in actions; it is rendered “godly” in 2 Pet. 2:9. See DEVOUT.

C. Adverb.

eusebōs (εὐσεβῶς, 2153) denotes “piously, godly”; it is used with the verb “to live” (of manner of life) in 2 Tim. 3:12; Titus 2:12.¶

Notes: (1) In the following the word “godly” translates the genitive case of the noun theos, lit., “of God,” 2 Cor. 1:12, KJV, “godly (sincerity),” RV, “(sincerity) of God”; 2 Cor. 11:2, “a godly jealousy,” lit., “a jealousy of God” (RV, marg.); 1 Tim. 1:4, RV, “a dispensation of God” (oikonomia, in the best mss.), KJV, “godly edifying” (oikodome lit., “an edifying of, i.e., by, God”). (2) In 2 Cor. 7:10, “godly (sorrow),” and in vv. 9 and 11, “after a godly sort,” are in all three places, lit., “according to God.” (3) In 3 John 6, where the KJV translates the adverb axios, with the noun theos, “after a godly sort,” the RV rightly substitutes “worthily of God.”

GODWARD

Note: This translates the phrase pros ton theon, lit., “toward God,” in 2 Cor. 3:4, and 1 Thess. 1:8.

GOLD, GOLDEN

A. Nouns.

1. chrusos (χρυσός, 5557) is used (a) of “coin,” Matt. 10:9; Jas. 5:3; (b) of “ornaments,” Matt. 23:16, 17; Jas. 5:3 (perhaps both coin and ornaments); Rev. 18:12; some mss. have it instead of No. 2 in 1 Cor. 3:12; (c) of “images,” Acts 17:29; (d) of “the metal in general,” Matt. 2:11; Rev. 9:7 (some mss. have it in Rev. 18:16).¶

2. chrusion (χρυσίον, 5553), a diminutive of No. 1, is used (a) of “coin,” primarily smaller than those in No. 1 (a), Acts 3:6; 20:33; 1 Pet. 1:18; (b) of “ornaments,” 1 Pet. 3:3, and the following (in which some mss. have No. 1), 1 Tim. 2:9; Rev. 17:4; 18:16; (c) of “the metal in general,” Heb. 9:4; 1 Pet. 1:7; Rev. 21:18, 21; metaphorically, (d) of “sound doctrine and its effects,” 1 Cor. 3:12; (e) of “righteousness of life and conduct,” Rev. 3:18.¶

B. Adjective.

chruseos (χρύσεος, 5552) denotes “golden,” i.e., made of, or overlaid with, gold, 2 Tim. 2:20; Heb. 9:4, and fifteen times in the Apocalypse.

GOLD RING

chrusodaktulios (χρυσοδακτύλιος, 5554), an adjective denoting “with a gold ring” (daktulos, “a finger”), occurs in Jas. 2:2.¶

GOOD, GOODLY, GOODNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. agathos (ἀγαθός, 18) describes that which, being “good” in its character or constitution, is beneficial in its effect; it is used (a) of things physical, e.g., a tree, Matt. 7:17; ground, Luke 8:8; (b) in a moral sense, frequently of persons and things. God is essentially, absolutely and consummately “good,” Matt. 19:17; Mark 10:18; Luke 18:19. To certain persons the word is applied in Matt. 20:15; 25:21, 23; Luke 19:17; 23:50; John 7:12; Acts 11:24; Titus 2:5; in a general application, Matt. 5:45; 12:35; Luke 6:45; Rom. 5:7; 1 Pet. 2:18.

The neuter of the adjective with the definite article signifies that which is “good,” lit., “the good,” as being morally honorable, pleasing to God, and therefore beneficial. Christians are to prove it, Rom. 12:2; to cleave to it, 12:9; to do it, 13:3; Gal. 6:10; 1 Pet. 3:11 (here, and here only, the article is absent); John 5:29 (here, the neuter plural is used, “the good things”); to work it, Rom. 2:10; Eph. 4:28; 6:8; to follow after it, 1 Thess. 5:15; to be zealous of it, 1 Pet. 3:13; to imitate it, 3 John 11; to overcome evil with it, Rom. 12:21. Governmental authorities are ministers of “good,” i.e., that which is salutary, suited to the course of human affairs, Rom. 13:4. In Philem. 14, “thy goodness,” RV (lit., “thy good”), means “thy benefit.” As to Matt. 19:17, “why askest thou Me concerning that which is good?” the RV follows the most ancient mss.

The neuter plural is also used of material “goods,” riches, etc., Luke 1:53; 12:18, 19; 16:25; Gal. 6:6 (of temporal supplies); in Rom. 10:15; Heb. 9:11; 10:1, the “good” things are the benefits provided through the sacrifice of Christ, in regard both to those conferred through the gospel and to those of the coming messianic kingdom. See further under No. 2. See BENEFIT, GOODS.

2. kalos (καλός, 2570) denotes that which is intrinsically “good,” and so, “goodly, fair, beautiful,” as (a) of that which is well adapted to its circumstances or ends, e.g., fruit, Matt. 3:10; a tree, 12:33; ground, 13:8, 23; fish, 13:48; the Law, Rom. 7:16; 1 Tim. 1:8; every creature of God, 1 Tim. 4:4; a faithful minister of Christ and the doctrine he teaches, 4:6; (b) of that which is ethically good, right, noble, honorable e.g., Gal. 4:18; 1 Tim. 5:10, 25; 6:18; Titus 2:7, 14; 3:8, 14. The word does not occur in the Apocalypse, nor indeed after 1 Peter.

Christians are to “take thought for things honorable” (kalos), 2 Cor. 8:21, RV; to do that which is honorable, 13:7; not to be weary in well doing, Gal. 6:9; to hold fast “that which is good,” 1 Thess. 5:21; to be zealous of good works, Titus 2:14; to maintain them, 3:8; to provoke to them, Heb. 10:24; to bear testimony by them, 1 Pet. 2:12.

Kalos and agathos occur together in Luke 8:15, an “honest” (kalos) heart, i.e., the attitude of which is right towards God; a “good” (agathos) heart, i.e., one that, instead of working ill to a neighbor, acts beneficially towards him. In Rom. 7:18, “in me ... dwelleth no good thing” (agathos) signifies that in him is nothing capable of doing “good,” and hence he lacks the power “to do that which is good” (kalos). In 1 Thess. 5:15, “follow after that which is good” (agathos), the “good” is that which is beneficial; in v. 21, “hold fast that which is good (kalos),” the “good” describes the intrinsic value of the teaching. See BETTER, FAIR HONEST, MEET, WORTHY.

3. chrestos (χρηστός, 5543), said of things, “that which is pleasant,” said of persons, “kindly, gracious,” is rendered “good” in 1 Cor. 15:33, “goodness” in Rom. 2:4. See EASY.

Note: Lampros denotes “gay, bright,” “goodly” in Jas. 2:2, KJV, (RV, “fine”); in 2:3, KJV, “gay”; in Rev. 18:14 (RV, “sumptuous”). See GORGEOUS, SUMPTUOUS. For asteios, “goodly,” Heb. 11:23, RV, see BEAUTIFUL. For hikanos, Acts 18:18, KJV, “a good while” see WHILE. Note (16).

B. Nouns.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 292.

2. agathosune (ἀγαθωσύνη, 19), “goodness,” signifies that moral quality which is described by the adjective agathos (see A, No. 1). It is used, in the NT, of regenerate persons, Rom. 15:14; Gal. 5:22; Eph. 5:9; 2 Thess. 1:11; in the last, the phrase “every desire of goodness” (RV; the addition of “His” in the KJV is an interpolation; there is no pronoun in the original) may be either subjective, i.e., desire characterized by “goodness,” “good” desire, or objective, i.e., desire after “goodness,” to be and do good.¶

Trench, following Jerome, distinguishes between chrestotes and agathosune in that the former describes the kindlier aspects of “goodness,” the latter includes also the sterner qualities by which doing “good” to others is not necessarily by gentle means. He illustrates the latter by the act of Christ in cleansing the temple, Matt. 21:12, 13, and in denouncing the scribes and Pharisees, 23:13-29; but chrestotes by His dealings with the penitent woman, Luke 7:37-50. Lightfoot regards chrestotes as a kindly disposition towards others; agathosune as a kindly activity on their behalf.

J. A. Robertson (on Eph. 5:9) remarks that agathosune is “the kindlier, as dikaiosune (righteousness) the sterner, element in the ideal character.”

3. eupoia (εὐποιᾶ, 2140), “beneficence, doing good” (eu, “well,” poieo, “to do”), is translated as a verb in Heb. 13:16, “to do good.”¶

C. Adverbs.

1. kalos (καλῶς, 2573), “well, finely,” is used in some mss. in Matt. 5:44, with poieo, “to do,” and translated “do good.” In Jas. 2:3 it is rendered “in a good place” (KJV marg., “well” or “seemly”). See WELL.

2. eu (εὖ, 2095), “well,” used with poieo, is translated “do ... good” in Mark 14:7. See WELL.

D. Verbs (to do, or be, good).

1. agathopoieo (ἀγαθοποιέω, 15), from A, No. 1, and poieo, “to do,” is used (a) in a general way, “to do well,” 1 Pet. 2:15, 20; 3:6, 17; 3 John 11; (b) with pointed reference “to the benefit of another,” Luke 6:9, 33, 35; in Mark 3:4 the parts of the word are separated in some mss. Some mss. have it in Acts 14:17, for No. 2.¶ Cf. the noun agathopoia, “well-doing,” 1 Pet. 4:19, and the adjective agathopoios, “doing well,” 1 Pet. 2:14.

2. agathourgeo (ἀγαθοεργέω, 14), for agathoergeo, “to do good” (from A, No. 1, and ergon, “a work”), is used in Acts 14:17 (in the best mss.; see No. 1), where it is said of God’s beneficence towards man, and 1 Tim. 6:18, where it is enjoined upon the rich.¶

3. euergeteo (εὐεργετέω, 2109), “to bestow a benefit, to do good” (eu, “well,” and a verbal form akin to ergon), is used in Acts 10:38.¶

Notes: (1) The verb ischuo, “to be strong” (ischus, “strength”), “to have efficacy, force or value,” is said of salt in Matt. 5:13, negatively, “it is good for nothing.” (2) In Matt. 19:10, KJV, sumphero, “to be profitable, expedient” (sun, “together,” phero, “to bring”); is rendered with a negative “it is not good” (RV, “it is not expedient”). (3) In

Mark 14:7, the two words eu, “well,” and poieo, “to do,” are in some mss. treated as one verb eupoieo, “to do good.”

GOODMAN

oikodespotes (οἰκοδεσπότης, 3617) denotes “the master of a house” (oikos, “a house,” despotes, “a master”), “a householder.” It occurs only in the Synoptists, and there 12 times. It is rendered “goodman” in Luke 22:11, where “of the house” is put separately; in Matt. 20:11, where the KJV has “the goodman of the house” for the one word, the RV renders it by “householder,” as in v. 1; in 24:43, “master”; so in Luke 12:39; in Mark 14:14, both have “the goodman of the house. See HOUSEHOLDER, MASTER.

GOODS

1. For the neuter plural of agathos, used as a noun, “goods,” see Luke 12:18, 19, where alone this word is so rendered.

2. huparxis (ὑπαρξις, 5223), primarily, “subsistence,” then, “substance, property, goods” (akin to huparcho, “to exist, be, belong to”), is translated “goods” in Acts 2:45; “possession.” RV (KJV, “substance”) in Heb. 10:34.¶

3. bios (βίος, 979), which denotes (a) “life, lifetime,” (b) “livelihood, living, means of living,” is translated “goods” in 1 John 3:17, RV (KJV, “good”). See LIFE, No. 2.

4. skeuos (σκεῦος, 4632), “a vessel,” denotes “goods” in Matt. 12:29; Mark 3:27; Luke 17:31, RV (KJV, stuff). See VESSEL.

Notes: (1) The neuter plural of the present participle of huparcho, is used as a noun denoting “goods,” in Matt. 24:47, KJV “his goods,” RV, “that he hath”; “goods” in Matt. 25:14; Luke 11:21; 16:1; 19:8; 1 Cor. 13:3; in Heb. 10:34 (1st part). (2) In Luke 6:30 “thy goods” translates the neuter plural of the possessive pronoun with the article, lit., “thy things,” or possessions. (3) In Rev. 3:17, the KJV “I am ... increased with goods” translates the perfect tense of the verb plouteo, “to be rich”; RV, “I have gotten riches.” (4) See SUBSTANCE.

GORGEOUS, GORGEOUSLY

lampros (λαμπρός, 2986), “bright, splendid,” is rendered “gorgeous” in Luke 23:11 of the apparel in which Herod and his soldiers arrayed Christ. See BRIGHT.

Note: For the KJV, “gorgeously apparelled” in Luke 7:25, see GLORIOUS, B.

GOSPEL (Noun and Verb: to preach)

A. Noun.

euangelion (εὐαγγέλιον, 2098) originally denoted a reward for good tidings; later, the idea of reward dropped, and the word stood for “the good news” itself. The Eng. word “gospel,” i.e. “good message,” is the equivalent of euangelion (Eng., “evangel”). In the NT it denotes the “good tidings” of the kingdom of God and of salvation through Christ, to be received by faith, on the basis of His expiatory death, His burial, resurrection, and ascension, e.g., Acts 15:7; 20:24; 1 Pet. 4:17. Apart from those references and those in the gospels of Matthew and Mark, and Rev. 14:6, the noun is confined to Paul’s epistles. The apostle uses it of two associated yet distinct things, (a) of the basic facts of the death, burial and resurrection of Christ, e.g., 1 Cor. 15:1-3; (b) of the interpretation of these facts, e.g., Rom. 2:16; Gal. 1:7, 11; 2:2; in (a) the “gospel” is viewed historically, in (b) doctrinally, with reference to the interpretation of the facts, as is sometimes indicated by the context.

The following phrases describe the subjects or nature or purport of the message; it is the “gospel” of God, Mark 1:14; Rom. 1:1; 15:16; 2 Cor. 11:7; 1 Thess. 2:2, 9; 1 Pet. 4:17; God, concerning His Son, Rom. 1:1-3; His Son, Rom. 1:9; Jesus Christ, the Son of God, Mark 1:1; our Lord Jesus, 2 Thess. 1:8; Christ, Rom. 15:19, etc.; the glory of Christ, 2 Cor. 4:4; the grace of God, Acts 20:24; the glory of the blessed God, 1 Tim. 1:11; your salvation, Eph. 1:13; peace, Eph. 6:15. Cf. also “the gospel of the Kingdom,” Matt. 4:23; 9:35; 24:14; “an eternal gospel,” Rev. 14:6.

In Gal. 2:14, “the truth of the gospel” denotes, not the true “gospel,” but the true teaching of it, in contrast to perversions of it.

The following expressions are used in connection with the “gospel”: (a) with regard to its testimony; (1) kerusso, “to preach it as a herald, e.g., Matt. 4:23; Gal. 2:2 (see PREACH); (2) laleo, “to speak,” 1 Thess. 2:2; (3) diamarturomai, “to testify (thoroughly),” Acts 20:24; (4) euangelizo, “to preach,” e.g., 1 Cor. 15:1; 2 Cor. 11:7; Gal. 1:11 (see B, No. 1 below); (5) katangello, “to proclaim,” 1 Cor. 9:14; (6) douleuo eis, “to serve unto” (“in furtherance of”), Phil. 2:22; (7) sunathleo en, “to labor with in,” Phil. 4:3; (8) hierourgeo, “to minister,” Rom. 15:16; (9) pleroo, “to preach fully,” Rom. 15:19; (10) sunkakopatheo, “to suffer hardship with,” 2 Tim. 1:8; (b) with regard to its reception or otherwise: (1) dechomai, “to receive,” 2 Cor. 11:4; hupakouo, “to hearken to, or obey,” Rom. 10:16; 2 Thess. 1:8; pisteuo en, “to believe in,” Mark 1:15; metastrepho, “to pervert,” Gal. 1:7.

Note: In connection with (a), the apostle’s statement in 1 Cor. 9:23 is noticeable, “I do all things for the Gospel’s sake, that I may be a joint partaker thereof,” RV, for the incorrect KJV, “that I might be partaker thereof with you.”

B. Verbs.

1. euangelizo (εὐαγγελίζω, 2097), “to bring or announce glad tidings” (Eng., “evangelize”), is used (a) in the active voice in Rev. 10:7 (“declared”) and 14:6 (“to proclaim,” RV, KJV, “to preach”); (b) in the passive voice, of matters to be proclaimed as “glad tidings,” Luke 16:16; Gal. 1:11; 1 Pet. 1:25; of persons to whom the proclamation is made, Matt. 11:5; Luke 7:22; Heb. 4:2, 6; 1 Pet. 4:6; (c) in the middle voice, especially of the message of salvation, with a personal object, either of the person preached, e.g., Acts 5:42; 11:20; Gal. 1:16, or, with a preposition, of the persons evangelized, e.g., Acts 13:32, “declare glad tidings”; Rom. 1:15; Gal. 1:8; with an impersonal object, e.g., “the word,” Acts 8:4; “good tidings,” 8:12; “the word of the Lord,” 15:35; “the gospel,” 1 Cor. 15:1; 2 Cor. 11:7; “the faith,” Gal. 1:23; “peace,” Eph. 2:17; “the unsearchable riches of Christ,” 3:8. See PREACH, SHEW, TIDINGS.

2. proeuangelizomai (προεὐαγγελίζομαι, 4283), “to announce glad tidings beforehand,” is used in Gal. 3:8.¶

Note: For other verbs see above.

For GOT and GOTTEN see GET

GOVERNMENT

kubernesis (κυβέρνησις, 2941), from kubernao, “to guide” (whence Eng., “govern”), denotes (a) “steering, pilotage”; (b) metaphorically, “governments or governings,” said of those who act as guides in a local church, 1 Cor. 12:28.¶ Cf. kubernetes, “a pilot,” Acts 27:11; Rev. 18:17.¶

Note: For kuriotes, “lordship, dominion,” rendered “government” in 2 Pet. 2:10, KJV, see DOMINION.

GOVERNOR

A. Nouns.

1. hegemon (ἡγεμών, 2232) is a term used (a) for “rulers” generally, Mark 13:9; 1 Pet. 2:14; translated “princes” (i.e., leaders) in Matt. 2:6; (b) for the Roman procurators, referring, in the gospels to Pontius Pilate, e.g., Matt. 27:2; Luke 20:20 (so designated by Tacitus, Annals, xv. 44); to Felix, Acts 23:26. Technically the procurator was a financial official under a proconsul or propretor, for collecting the imperial revenues, but entrusted also with magisterial powers for decisions of questions relative to the revenues. In certain provinces, of which Judea was one (the procurator of which was dependent on the legate of Syria), he was the general administrator and supreme judge, with sole power of life and death. Such a governor was a person of high social standing. Felix, however, was an ex-slave, a freedman, and his appointment to Judea could not but be regarded by the Jews as an insult to the nation. The headquarters of the governor of Judea was Caesarea, which was made a garrison town. See PRINCE, RULER. For anthupatos, “a proconsul,” see PROCONSUL.

2. ethnarches (ἐθνάρχης, 1481), “an ethnarch,” lit. “a ruler of a nation” (ethnos, “a people,” arche, “rule”), is translated “governor” in 2 Cor. 11:32; it describes normally the ruler of a nation possessed of separate laws and customs among those of a different race. Eventually it denoted a ruler of a province, superior to a tetrarch, but inferior to a king (e.g., Aretas).¶

3. oikonomos (οἰκονόμος, 3623), lit., “one who rules a house” (oikos, “a house,” nomos, “a law”), Gal. 4:2, denotes a superior servant responsible for the family housekeeping, the direction of other servants, and the care of the children under age. See CHAMBERLAIN, STEWARD.

4. architriklinos (ἀρχιτρίκλινος, 755), from arche, “rule,” and triklinos, “a room with three couches,” denotes “the ruler of a feast,” John 2:8, RV (KJV, “the governor of the feast”), a man appointed to see that the table and couches were duly placed and the courses arranged, and to taste the food and wine.¶

B. Verbs.

1. hegeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233), akin to A, No. 1, is used in the present participle to denote “a governor,” lit., “(one) governing,” Matt. 2:6; Acts 7:10.

2. hegemoneuo (ἡγεμονεύω, 2230), to be a hegemon, “to lead the way,” came to signify to be “a governor of a province”; it is used of Quirinius, governor of Syria, Luke 2:2, RV (for the circumstances see under ENROLLMENT), of Pontius Pilate, governor of Judea, 3:1.¶ In the first clause of this verse the noun hegemonia, “a rule or sovereignty,” is translated “reign”; Eng., “hegemony.”¶

Note. In Jas. 3:4, the verb euthuno, “to make or guide straight,” is used in the present participle, as a noun, denoting the “steersman” (RV) or pilot of a vessel, KJV, “governor.”

GRACE

1. charis (χάρις, 5485) has various uses, (a) objective, that which bestows or occasions pleasure, delight, or causes favorable regard; it is applied, e.g., to beauty, or gracefulness of person, Luke 2:40; act, 2 Cor. 8:6, or speech, Luke 4:22, RV, “words of grace” (KJV, “gracious words”); Col. 4:6; (b) subjective, (1) on the part of the bestower, the friendly disposition from which the kindly act proceeds, graciousness, loving-kindness, goodwill generally, e.g., Acts 7:10; especially with reference to the divine favor or “grace,” e.g., Acts 14:26; in this respect there is stress on its freeness and universality, its spontaneous character, as in the case of God’s redemptive mercy, and the pleasure or joy He designs for the recipient; thus it is set in contrast with debt, Rom. 4:4, 16, with works, 11:6, and with law, John 1:17; see also, e.g., Rom. 6:14, 15; Gal. 5:4; (2) on the part of the receiver, a sense of the favor bestowed, a feeling of gratitude, e.g., Rom. 6:17 (“thanks”); in this respect it sometimes signifies “to be thankful,” e.g., Luke 17:9 (“doth he thank the servant?” lit., “hath he thanks to”); 1 Tim. 1:12; (c) in another objective sense, the effect of “grace,” the spiritual state of those who have experienced its exercise, whether (1) a state of “grace,” e.g., Rom. 5:2; 1 Pet. 5:12; 2 Pet. 3:18, or (2) a proof thereof in practical effects, deeds of “grace,” e.g., 1 Cor. 16:3, RV, “bounty” (KJV, “liberality”); 2 Cor. 8:6, 19 (in 2 Cor. 9:8 it means the sum of earthly blessings); the power and equipment for ministry, e.g., Rom. 1:5; 12:6; 15:15; 1 Cor. 3:10; Gal. 2:9; Eph. 3:2, 7.

To be in favor with is to find “grace” with, e.g., Acts 2:47; hence it appears in this sense at the beginning and the end of several epistles, where the writer desires “grace” from God for the readers, e.g., Rom. 1:7; 1 Cor. 1:3; in this respect it is connected with the imperative mood of the word chairo, “to rejoice,” a mode of greeting among Greeks, e.g., Acts 15:23; Jas. 1:1 (marg.); 2 John 10, 11, RV, “greeting” (KJV, “God speed”).

The fact that “grace” is received both from God the Father, 2 Cor. 1:12, and from Christ, Gal. 1:6; Rom. 5:15 (where both are mentioned), is a testimony to the deity of Christ. See also 2 Thess. 1:12, where the phrase “according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ” is to be taken with each of the preceding clauses, “in you,” “and ye in Him.”

In Jas. 4:6, “But He giveth more grace” (Greek, “a greater grace,” RV, marg.), the statement is to be taken in connection with the preceding verse, which contains two remonstrating, rhetorical questions, “Think ye that the Scripture speaketh in vain?” and “Doth the Spirit (the Holy Spirit) which He made to dwell in us long unto envying?” (see the RV). The implied answer to each is “it cannot be so.” Accordingly, if those who are acting so flagrantly, as if it were so, will listen to the Scripture instead of letting it speak in vain, and will act so that the Holy Spirit may have His way within, God will give even

“a greater grace,” namely, all that follows from humbleness and from turning away from the world. See BENEFIT, BOUNTY, LIBERALITY, THANK.

Note: The corresponding verb charitoo, “to endue with divine favor or grace,” is used in Luke 1:28, “highly favored” (marg., “endued with grace”) and Eph. 1:6, KJV, “hath made ... accepted”; RV, “freely bestowed” (marg., “endued.”).¶

2. euprepeia (εὐπρέπεια, 2143), “comeliness, goodly appearance,” is said of the outward appearance of the flower of the grass, Jas. 1:11.¶

GRACIOUS

chrestos (χρηστός, 5543) is rendered “gracious” in 1 Pet. 2:3, as an attribute of the Lord. See EASY, GOOD, KIND.

Note: Euphemos, “fair-sounding” (eu, “well,” pheme, “a saying, or report”), “of good report,” Phil. 4:8, is rendered “gracious” in the RV marg.

GRAFF, GRAFT (RV)

enkentrizo (ἐγκεντρίζω, 1461) denotes “to graft” in (en, in, kentrizo, to graft), to insert a slip of a cultivated tree into a wild one. In Rom. 11:17, 19, 23, 24, however, the metaphor is used “contrary to nature” (v. 24), of grafting a wild olive branch (the Gentile) into the good olive tree (the Jews); that unbelieving Jews (branches of the good tree) were broken off that Gentiles might be grafted in, afforded no occasion for glorying on the part of the latter. Jew and Gentile alike must enjoy the divine blessings by faith alone. So Jews who abide not in unbelief shall, as “the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree.”¶

GRAIN

kokkos (κόκκος, 2848) denotes “a grain,” Matt. 13:31; 17:20; Mark 4:31; Luke 13:19; 17:6; John 12:24 (KJV, “corn”); 1 Cor. 15:37 (where the RV has “a ... grain,” to distinguish it from “grain” in general). See CORN.¶

GRANDCHILDREN

ekgonos (ἐκγονον, 1549**), an adjective, denoting “born of” (ek, “from,” ginomai, “to become or be born”), was used as a noun, signifying “a child”; in the plural, descendants, “grand-children,” 1 Tim. 5:4, RV (KJV, “nephews”).¶

GRANDMOTHER

mamme (μάμη, 3125), an onomatopoeic word, was primarily a child’s name for its mother; later it denoted a “grandmother,” 2 Tim. 1:5.¶

GRANT

1. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is rendered “grant” in Mark 10:37; Luke 1:74; Acts 4:29; 11:18; 14:3. See GIVE.

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

2. doreo (δωρέομαι, 1433), “to present, bestow” (akin to No. 1), is rendered “granted” in Mark 15:45, RV (KJV, “gave”); in 2 Pet. 1:3, 4, “hath granted,” “He hath granted,” RV (KJV, “hath given” and “are given”); in each place middle voice. See GIVE.¶

3. charizomai (χαρίζομαι, 5483) primarily signifies “to show favor or kindness” (akin to charis, see GRACE), Gal. 3:18, RV, “hath granted” (KJV, “gave”); it signifies more than “to give”); then, “to give freely, bestow,” rendered “to grant” in Acts 3:14; 27:24, RV (KJV, “given”); Phil. 1:29, RV; Philem. 22, RV. See DELIVER.

GRAPE

staphule (σταφυλή, 4718) denotes “a bunch of grapes, or a grape,” Matt. 7:16; Luke 6:44; Rev. 14:18. It is to be distinguished from omphax, “an unripe grape” (not in NT), e.g., in the Sept. of Job 15:33, and from botrus, “a cluster,” used together with staphule in Rev. 14:18.¶

GRASS

chortos (χόρτος, 5528) primarily denoted “a feeding enclosure” (whence Latin hortus, “a garden”; Eng.. “yard,” and “garden”); then, “food,” especially grass for feeding cattle; it is translated “grass” in Matt. 6:30; 14:19; Mark 6:39 (where “the green grass” is the first evidence of early spring); Luke 12:28; John 6:10; Jas. 1:10, 11; 1 Pet. 1:24; Rev. 8:7; 9:4; “blade” in Matt. 13:26; Mark 4:28; “hay” in 1 Cor. 3:12, used figuratively. In Palestine or Syria there are 90 genera and 243 species of grass.¶

makarismos (μακαρισμός, 3108) denotes “a declaration of blessedness, a felicitation”; it is translated “gratulation” in Gal. 4:15, RV (KJV, “blessedness”); the Galatian converts had counted themselves happy when they heard and received the gospel from Paul; he asks them rhetorically what had become of that spirit which had animated them; the word is rendered blessing in Rom. 4:6, 9. See BLESSING, C, No. 2.¶

GRAVE (Noun)

1. mnemeion (μνημείον, 3419) primarily denotes “a memorial” (akin to mnaomai, “to remember”), then, “a monument” (the significance of the word rendered “tombs,” KJV, “sepulchres,” in Luke 11:47), anything done to preserve the memory of things and persons; it usually denotes a tomb, and is translated either “tomb” or “sepulchre” or “grave.” Apart from the Gospels, it is found only in Acts 13:29. Among the Hebrews it was generally a cavern, closed by a door or stone, often decorated. Cf. Matt. 23:29. See TOMB.

2. mnema (μνήμα, 3418), akin to No. 1, like which it signified “a memorial” or “record of a thing or a dead person,” then “a sepulchral monument,” and hence “a tomb”; it is rendered “graves” in the KJV of Rev. 11:9 (RV, “a tomb”); “tomb” or “tombs,” Mark 5:3, 5 (some mss. have No. 1, as in 15:46, KJV, “sepulchre”) and 16:2 (KJV, “sepulchre”); Luke 8:27; Acts 2:29 and 7:16 (KJV, “sepulchre”). See TOMB.

Note: In 1 Cor. 15:55, where some texts have “Hades,” KJV, “grave,” the most authentic have thanatos, “death.”

GRAVE (Adjective)

semnos (σαβανός, 4518) first denoted “reverend, august, venerable” (akin to sebomai, “to reverence”); then, “serious, grave,” whether of persons, 1 Tim. 3:8, 11 (deacons and their wives); Titus 2:2 (aged men); or things, Phil. 4:8, RV, “honorable” (marg., “reverend”), KJV, “honest.” Trench (*Syn. Sec.*xcii) points out that “grave” and “gravity” fail to cover the full meaning of their original; “the word we want is one in which the sense of gravity and dignity is combined.” Cremer describes it as denoting what inspires reverence and awe, and says that semnos and hosios, “holy, consecrated,” are only secondary designations of the conception of holiness. “The word points to seriousness of purpose and to self-respect in conduct” (Moule).¶ Cf. semmotes, “gravity” (see below).

GRAVE-CLOTHES

keiria (κειρία, 2750) denotes, firstly, “a band” either for a bed girth, or bed sheets themselves (Sept. of Prov. 7:16.¶); then, “the swathings wrapped round a corpse”; it is used in the plural in John 11:44.¶

GRAVEN

charagma (χάραγμα, 5480), from charasso, “to engrave” (akin to charakter, “an impress,” RV, marg., of Heb. 1:3), denotes (a) “a mark” or “stamp,” e.g., Rev. 13:16, 17; 14:9, 11; 16:2; 19:20; 20:4; 15:2 in some mss.; (b) “a thing graven,” Acts 17:29.¶

GRAVITY

semmotes (σεμνότης, 4587) denotes “venerableness, dignity”; it is a necessary characteristic of the life and conduct of Christians, 1 Tim. 2:2, RV, “gravity” (KJV, “honesty”), a qualification of a bishop or overseer in a church, in regard to his children, 1 Tim. 3:4; a necessary characteristic of the teaching imparted by a servant of God, Titus 2:7.¶ Cf. the adjective semnos, under GRAVE.

GREAT

1. megas (μέγας, 3173) is used (a) of external form, size, measure, e.g., of a stone, Matt. 27:60; fish, John 21:11; (b) of degree and intensity, e.g., of fear, Mark 4:41; wind, John 6:18; Rev. 6:13, RV, “great” (KJV, “mighty”); of a circumstance, 1 Cor. 9:11; 2 Cor. 11:15; in Rev. 5:2, 12, the RV has “great” (KJV, “loud”), of a voice; (c) of rank, whether of persons, e.g., God, Titus 2:13; Christ as a “great Priest,” Heb. 10:21, RV; Diana, Acts 19:27, Simon Magus, Acts 8:9 “(some) great one”; in the plural “great ones,” Matt. 20:25; Mark 10:42, those who hold positions of authority in gentile nations; or of things, e.g., a mystery, Eph. 5:32. Some mss. have it in Acts 8:8, of joy (see No. 2). See also Note (2) below. See GREATEST, HIGH, LOUD, MIGHTY, STRONG.

2. polus (πολύς, 4183), “much, many, great,” is used of number, e.g., Luke 5:6; Acts 11:21; degree, e.g., of harvest, Matt. 9:37 [See Note (8)]; mercy, 1 Pet. 1:3, RV “great” (KJV, “abundant”); glory, Matt. 24:30; joy, Philem. 7, RV, “much” (KJV, “great”); peace, Acts 24:2. The best mss. have it in Acts 8:8 (RV, “much”), of joy. See ABUNDANT, COMMON, Note (1), LONG, MANY, MUCH, OFT, SORE, STRAITLY.

3. hikanos (ικανός, 2425), lit., “reaching to” (from hikano, “to reach”), denotes “sufficient, competent, fit,” and is sometimes rendered “great,” e.g., of number (of people), Mark 10:46; of degree (of light), Acts 22:6. See ABLE, ENOUGH, GOOD, LARGE, LONG, MANY, MEET, MUCH, SECURITY, SUFFICIENT WORTHY.

4. helikos (ἡλίκος, 2245) primarily denotes “as big as, as old as” (akin to helikia, “an age”); then, as an indirect interrogation, “what, what size, how great, how small” (the context determines the meaning), said of a spiritual conflict, Col. 2:1, KJV, “what great (conflict) I have”; RV, “how greatly (I strive)”; of much wood as kindled by a little fire, Jas. 3:5 (twice in the best mss.), “how much (wood is kindled by) how small (a fire),” RV, said metaphorically of the use of the tongue. Some mss. have No. 4 in Gal. 6:11; the most authentic have No. 5.¶

5. pelikos (πηλίκος, 4080), primarily a direct interrogative, “how large? how great?” is used in exclamations, indicating magnitude, like No. 4 (No. 6 indicates quantity), in Gal. 6:11, of letter characters (see No. 4, Note); in Heb. 7:4, metaphorically, of the distinguished character of Melchizedek.¶

6. posos (πόσος, 4214), an adjective of number, magnitude, degree etc., is rendered “how great” in Matt. 6:23. See MANY, MUCH.

7. hosos (ὅσος, 3745), “how much, how many,” is used in the neuter plural to signify how great things, Mark 5:19, 20; Luke 8:39 (twice); Acts 9:16, KJV (RV, “how many things”); in Rev. 21:16 (in the best mss.), “as great as,” RV (KJV, “as large as,” said of length). See ALL, MANY, No. 5, WHATSOEVER.

8. tosoutos (τοσοῦτος, 5118), “so great, so many, so much,” of quantity, size, etc., is rendered “so great,” in Matt. 8:10, and Luke 7:9, of faith; Matt. 15:33, of a multitude; Heb. 12:1, of a cloud of witnesses; Rev. 18:17, of riches. See LARGE, LONG, MANY, MUCH.

9. telikoutos (τηλικοῦτος, 5082), “so great,” is used in the NT of things only, a death, 2 Cor. 1:10; salvation, Heb. 2:3; ships, Jas. 3:4; an earthquake, Rev. 16:18, KJV, “so mighty,” corrected in the RV to “so great.” See MIGHTY.¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 7:36, “so much the more a great deal” translates a phrase lit. signifying “more abundantly”; in 10:48 “the more a great deal” translates a phrase lit. signifying “more by much.” (2) For the noun megistan, in the plural, rendered “Lords” in the KJV of Mark 6:21, see LORD; in Rev. 6:15 and 18:23, see PRINCE. (3) In Luke 1:58, the verb megaluno, “to magnify, make great” (akin to No. 1), is rendered “had magnified (His mercy),” RV [KJV, “had shewed great (mercy)”. (4) In Luke 10:13, the adverb palai, “of old, long ago,” is so rendered in the RV (KJV, “a great while ago”). (5) In 2 Pet. 1:4, megistos, the superlative of megas (No. 1), said of the promises of God, is rendered “exceeding great.”¶ (6) In Matt. 21:8, pleistos, the superlative of polus (No. 2), said of a multitude, is rendered “very great” in the KJV (RV, “the most part”). (7) In Rev. 21:10, the most authentic mss. omit “that great” [RV, “the holy (city)”. (8) In Luke 10:2, the RV renders polus by “plenteous” (KJV, “great”). (9) In Mark 1:35, the adverb lian, exceedingly (see GREATLY), is rendered “a great while.” See DAY, B. (10) In Luke 1:49 some texts have megaleia, “great things”; the best have No. 1.

GREATER

1. meizon (μείζων, 3187) is the comparative degree of megas (see GREAT, No. 1), e.g., Matt. 11:11; in Matt. 13:32, the RV rightly has “greater than” (KJV, “the greatest among”); 23:17; in Luke 22:26, RV, “the greater (among you)” (KJV, “greatest”); in Jas. 3:1, RV, “the heavier (marg., greater) judgment” (KJV, “the greater condemnation”); it is used in the neuter plural in John 1:50, “greater things”; in 14:12, “greater works” (lit., “greater things”); in 1 Cor. 12:31, RV, “the greater,” KJV, “the best”. See GREATEST, No. 2.

Note: In Matt. 20:31, the neuter of meizon, used as an adverb, is translated “the more.” See MORE.

2. meizoteros (μειζότερος, 3186), a double comparative of megas (cf. No. 1, above), is used in 3 John 4, of joy.¶

3. pleion (πλείων, 4119), the comparative of polus (see GREAT, No. 2), is used (a) as an adjective, “greater, more,” e.g., Acts 15:28; (b) as a noun, e.g., Matt. 12:41, “a greater (than Jonah)”; v. 42, “a greater (than Solomon)”; in these instances the neuter pleion, “something greater,” is “a fixed or stereotyped form” of the word; in 1 Cor. 15:6, “the greater part” (masculine plural); (c) as an adverb, e.g., Matt. 5:20, lit., “(except your righteousness abound) more greatly (than of scribes and Pharisees)”; so 26:53, “more”; Luke 9:13. See ABOVE, LONGER, MANY, MORE, MOST, YET.

4. perissoteros (περισσότερος, 4055), the comparative of perissos, “over and above, abundant,” signifies “more abundant, greater,” e.g., of condemnation, Mark 12:40; Luke 20:47. See ABUNDANT, C, No. 2.

GREATEST

1. megas (μέγας, 3173), for which see GREAT, No. 1, is translated “the greatest,” in Acts 8:10 and Heb. 8:11. The whole phrase, lit., “from small to great,” is equivalent to the Eng. idiom “one and all.” It is used in the Sept., e.g., in 1 Sam. 5:9: “God smote the people of Gath from the least to the greatest,” (“both small and great”). So 1 Sam. 30:19; 2 Chron. 34:30, etc. See GREAT.

2. meizon (μείζων, 3187), the comparative of No. 1, is sometimes translated “greatest”; besides the two cases given under GREATER, No. 1, where the RV corrects the KJV, “greatest” to “greater” (Matt. 13:32 and Luke 22:26), the RV itself has “greatest” for this comparative in the following, and relegates “greater” to the margin Matt. 18:1, 4; 23:11; Mark 9:34; Luke 9:46; 22:24. See GREATER, MORE.

GREATLY

1. lian (λίαν, 3029), “very, exceedingly,” is rendered “greatly” in Matt. 27:14, of wonder 2 Tim. 4:15, of opposition; 2 John 4 and 3 John 3, of joy. See EXCEEDING, SORE, VERY.

2. polus (πολύς, 4183) is used in the neuter singular (polu) or the plural (polla), as an adverb; in the sing., e.g., Mark 12:27; in the plural, e.g., Mark 1:45, “much”; 5:23, “greatly” (RV, “much”); v. 38, KJV and RV, “greatly”; 1 Cor. 16:12 (RV, much). See LONG, MUCH.

Note: In Acts 28:6, KJV, polu is rendered “a great while” (RV, “long”).

3. megalos (μεγάλως, 3171), from megas (GREAT, No. 1), is used of rejoicing, Phil. 4:10.¶

4. chara (χαρά, 5479), “joy,” is used in the dative case adverbially with the verb chairo, “to rejoice,” in John 3:29, “rejoiceth greatly,” lit., “rejoiceth with joy.”

Notes: (1) For sphodra, RV, “exceedingly,” in Matt. 27:54 and Acts 6:7, see EXCEED, B, No. 2. (2) In the following the RV omits “greatly,” as the verbs are adequately translated without, Phil. 1:8; 1 Thess. 3:6; 2 Tim. 1:4. In the following the RV adds “greatly” to express the fuller force of the verb, Luke 1:29; Acts 16:34; 1 Pet. 1:8. (3) In 1 Pet. 1:6, “ye greatly rejoice,” the adverb is not separately expressed, but is incorporated in the rendering of the verb agalliao, “to rejoice much, to exult.”

GREATNESS

1. megethos (μέγεθος, 3174), akin to megas (see GREAT, No. 1), is said of the power of God, in Eph. 1:19.¶

2. hyperbole (ὑπερβολή, 5236) denotes “exceeding greatness,” 2 Cor. 4:7; 12:7. see EXCEL, B, No. 1.

For GREEDILY see RUN, No. 9

For GREEDINESS see COVETOUSNESS, B, No. 3

For GREEDY see LUCRE

GREEN

1. chloros (χλωρός, 5515), akin to chloe, “tender foliage” (cf. the name “Chloe,” 1 Cor. 1:11, and Eng., “chlorine”), denotes (a) “pale green,” the color of young grass, Mark 6:39; Rev. 8:7; 9:4, “green thing”; hence, (b) “pale,” Rev. 6:8, the color of the horse whose rider’s name is Death. See PALE.¶

2. hugros (ὑγρός, 5200) denotes “wet, moist” (the opposite of xeros, “dry”); said of wood, sappy, “green,” Luke 23:31, i.e., if they thus by the fire of their wrath treated Christ, the guiltless, holy, the fruitful, what would be the fate of the perpetrators, who were like the dry wood, exposed to the fire of divine wrath.¶

GREET, GREETING

A. Verbs.

1. aspazomai (ἀσπάζομαι, 782) signifies “to greet welcome,” or “salute.” In the KJV it is chiefly rendered by either of the verbs “to greet” or “to salute.” “There is little doubt that the revisers have done wisely in giving ‘salute’ ... in the passages where KJV has ‘greet.’ For the cursory reader is sure to imagine a difference of Greek and of meaning when he finds, e.g., in Phil. 4:21, ‘Salute every saint in Christ Jesus. The brethren which are with me greet you,’ or in 3 John 14, ‘Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name’” (Hastings, Bible Dic.). In Acts 25:13 the meaning virtually is “to pay his respects to.”

In two passages the renderings vary otherwise; in Acts 20:1, of bidding farewell, KJV, “embraced them,” RV, “took leave of them,” or, as Ramsay translates it, “bade them farewell”; in Heb. 11:13, of welcoming promises, KJV, “embraced,” RV, “greeted.”

The verb is used as a technical term for conveying “greetings” at the close of a letter, often by an amanuensis, e.g., Rom. 16:22, the only instance of the use of the first person in this respect in the NT; see also 1 Cor. 16:19, 20; 2 Cor. 13:13; Phil. 4:22; Col. 4:10-15; 1 Thess. 5:26; 2 Tim. 4:21; Titus 3:15; Philem. 23; Heb. 13:24; 1 Pet. 5:13, 14; 2 John 13. This special use is largely illustrated in the papyri, one example of this showing how keenly the absence of the greeting was felt. The papyri also illustrate the use of the addition “by name,” when several persons are included in the greeting, as in 3 John 14 (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab). See EMBRACE, LEAVE, SALUTE.

2. chairo (χαίρω, 5463), “to rejoice,” is thrice used as a formula of salutation in Acts 15:23, KJV, “send greeting,” RV, “greeting”; so 23:26; Jas. 1:1. In 2 John 10, 11, the RV substitutes the phrase (to give) “greeting,” for the KJV (to bid) “God speed.” See FAREWELL, GLAD, HAIL, JOY, REJOICE.

B. Noun.

aspamos (ἀσπασμός, 783), a salutation, is always so rendered in the RV; KJV, “greetings” in Matt. 23:7; Luke 11:43; 20:46, it is used (a) orally in those instances and in Mark 12:38; Luke 1:29, 41, 44; (b) in written salutations, 1 Cor. 16:21 (cf. A, No. 1, in v. 20); Col. 4:18; 2 Thess. 3:17.¶

GRIEF, GRIEVE

A. Noun.

lupe (λύπη, 3077) signifies “pain,” of body or mind; it is used in the plural in 1 Pet. 2:19 only, RV, “griefs” (KJV, “grief”); here, however, it stands, by metonymy, for “things that cause sorrow, grievances”; hence Tyndale’s rendering, “grief,” for Wycliffe’s “sorews”; everywhere else it is rendered “sorrow,” except in Heb. 12:11, where it is translated “grievous” (lit., “of grief”). See HEAVINESS, SORROW.

B. Verbs.

1. lupeo (λυπέω, 3076), akin to A, denotes (a), in the active voice, “to cause pain, or grief, to distress, grieve,” e.g., 2 Cor. 2:2 (twice, active and passive voices); v. 5 (twice), RV, “hath caused sorrow” (KJV, “have caused grief,” and “grieved”); 7:8, “made (you) sorry”; Eph. 4:30, of grieving the Holy Spirit of God (as indwelling the believer); (b) in the passive voice, “to be grieved, to be made sorry, to be sorry, sorrowful,” e.g., Matt. 14:9, RV, “(the king) was grieved” (KJV, “was sorry”); Mark 10:22, RV, “(went away) sorrowful” (KJV, “grieved”); John 21:17, “(Peter) was grieved”, Rom. 14:15, “(if ... thy brother) is grieved”; 2 Cor. 2:4, “(not that) ye should be made sorry,” RV, KJV, “ye should be grieved.” See HEAVINESS, SORROW, SORROWFUL, SORRY.

2. sunlupeo (συλλυπέω, 4818), or sullupeo, is used in the passive voice in Mark 3:5, “to be grieved” or afflicted together with a person, said of Christ’s “grief” at the hardness of heart of those who criticized His healing on the Sabbath day; it here seems to suggest the sympathetic nature of His grief because of their self-injury. Some suggest that the sun indicates the mingling of “grief” with His anger.¶

3. stenazo (στενάζω, 4727), “to groan” (of an inward, unexpressed feeling of sorrow), is translated “with grief” in Heb. 13:17 (marg. “groaning”). It is rendered “sighed” in Mark 7:34; “groan,” in Rom. 8:23; 2 Cor. 5:2, 4; “murmur,” in Jas. 5:9, RV (KJV, “grudge”). See GROAN, MURMUR, SIGH.¶

Notes: (1) Diaponeo, “to work out with labor,” in the passive voice, “to be sore troubled,” is rendered “being grieved” in Acts 4:2 and 16:18, KJV (RV, “sore troubled”). See TROUBLE.¶ In some mss., Mark 14:4. (2) Prosochthizo, “to be angry with,” is rendered “was grieved” in Heb. 3:10, 17, KJV (RV, “was displeased”). See DISPLEASE.¶
GRIEVOUS, GRIEVOUSLY

A. Adjectives.

1. barus (βαρύς, 926) denotes “heavy, burdensome”; it is always used metaphorically in the NT, and is translated “heavy” in Matt. 23:4, of Pharisaical ordinances; in the comparative degree “weightier,” 23:23, of details of the law of God; “grievous,” metaphorically of wolves, in Acts 20:29; of charges, 25:7; negatively of God’s commandments, 1 John 5:3 (causing a burden on him who fulfills them); in 2 Cor. 10:10, “weighty,” of Paul’s letters. See HEAVY, WEIGHTY.¶

2. poneros (πονηρός, 4190), “painful, bad,” is translated “grievous” in Rev. 16:2, of a sore inflicted retributively. See BAD.

3. dusbastaktos (δυσβάστακτος, 1419), “hard to be borne” (from dus, an inseparable prefix, like Eng. “mis-,” and “un-,” indicating “difficulty, injuriousness, opposition,” etc., and bastazo, “to bear”), is used in Luke 11:46 and, in some mss., in Matt. 23:4, “grievous to be borne”; in the latter the RV marg. has “many ancient authorities omit.”¶

4. chalepos (χαλεπός, 5467), “hard,” signifies (a) “hard to deal with,” Matt. 8:28 (see FIERCE); (b) “hard to bear, grievous,” 2 Tim. 3:1, RV, “grievous” (KJV, “perilous”), said of a characteristic of the last days of this age. See FIERCE.¶

Notes: (1) For the noun lupe, “grievous,” in Heb. 12:11, see GRIEF. (2) In Phil. 3:1, the adjective okneros, “shrinking,” or “causing shrinking,” hence, “tedious” (akin to okneo, “to shrink”), is rendered “irksome” in the RV (KJV, “grievous”); the apostle intimates that, not finding his message tedious, he has no hesitation in giving it. In Matt. 25:26 and Rom. 12:11, “slothful.”¶

B. Adverbs.

1. deinos (δεινῶς, 1171), akin to deos, “fear,” signifies (a) “terribly,” Matt. 8:6, “grievously (tormented)”; (b) “vehemently,” Luke 11:53. See VEHEMENTLY.¶

2. kakos (κακῶς, 2560), “badly, ill,” is translated “grievously (vexed),” in Matt. 15:22. See AMISS, EVIL, MISERABLY, SORE.

Notes: (1) In Mark 9:20 and Luke 9:42, the RV renders the verb susparasso “tare (him) grievously,” the adverb bringing out the intensive force of the prefix su- (i.e., sun); the meaning may be “threw violently to the ground.” (2) In Matt. 17:15, the idiomatic phrase, consisting of No. 2 (above) with echo, “to have,” (lit., “hath badly”), is rendered “suffereth grievously,” RV (KJV, “is ... sore vexed”).

GRIND

1. aletho (ἀλήθω, 229) signifies “to grind at the mill,” Matt. 24:41; Luke 17:35.¶ The Sept. has both the earlier form aleo, Isa. 47:2,¶, and the later one aletho, used in the Koine period, Num. 11:8; Judg. 16:21; Eccl. 12:3, 4.¶

2. trizo (τρίζω, 5149), primarily of animal sounds, “to chirp, cry,” etc., is used of grinding the teeth, Mark 9:18, RV, “grindeth” (KJV, “gnasheth with”). See GNASH.¶

Note: In Matt. 21:44 and Luke 20:18, likmao, “to winnow,” as of grain, by throwing it up against the wind, to scatter the chaff and straw, hence has the meaning “to scatter,” as chaff or dust, and is translated “will scatter ... as dust,” RV (KJV, “will grind ... to powder”). In the Sept. it is used of being scattered by the wind or of sifting (cf. Amos 9:9). The use of the verb in the papyri writings suggests the meaning, “to ruin, destroy” (Deissmann).

GROAN, GROANING

A. Verbs.

1. embrimaomai (ἐμβριμάομαι, 1690), from en, “in,” and brime, “strength,” is rendered “groaned” in John 11:33 (preferable to the RV marg., “He had indignation”); so in v. 38. The Lord was deeply moved doubtless with the combination of circumstances, present and in the immediate future. Indignation does not here seem to express His feelings. See CHARGE.

2. stenazo (στενάζω, 4727): see GRIEVE, B, No. 3.

3. sustenazo (συστενάζω, 4959), “to groan together” (sun, “with,” and No. 2) is used of the Creation in Rom. 8:22. In v. 23, No. 2 is used.¶

B. Noun.

stenagmos (στεναγμός, 4726), akin to A No. 2, is used in Acts 7:34, in a quotation from Exod. 3:7, but not from the Sept., which there has krauge, “a cry”; the word is used, however, in Exod. 2:24; in Rom. 8:26, in the plural, of the intercessory groanings of the Holy Spirit.¶

GROSS (to wax)

pachuno (παχύνω, 3975), from pachus, “thick,” signifies “to thicken, fatten”; in the passive voice, “to grow fat”; metaphorically said of the heart, to wax gross or dull, Matt. 13:15; Acts 28:27.¶

GROUND, GROUNDED

A. Nouns.

1. ge (γῆ, 1093), “the earth, land,” etc., often denotes “the ground,” e.g., Matt. 10:29; Mark 8:6. See EARTH.

2. edaphos (ἔδαφος, 1475), “a bottom, base,” is used of the “ground” in Acts 22:7, suggestive of that which is level and hard.¶ Cf. B, No. 1, below.

3. chora (χώρα, 5561), “land, country,” is used of property, “ground,” in Luke 12:16, “the ground (of a certain rich man).” See COUNTRY.

4. chorion (χωρίον, 5564), a diminutive of No. 3, “a piece of land, a place, estate,” is translated “parcel of ground” in John 4:5. See FIELD.

5. hedraioma (ἑδραίωμα, 1477), “a support, bulwark, stay” (from hedraios, “steadfast, firm”; from hedra, “a seat”), is translated “ground” in 1 Tim. 3:15 (said of a local church); the RV marg., “stay” is preferable.¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 4:16 the RV rightly has “rocky places” (petrodes) for KJV, “stony ground.” (2) In Acts 27:29, for the KJV, “rocks” the RV has “rocky ground,” lit., “rough places,” i.e., a rocky shore. (3) In Luke 14:18, agros, “a field,” is translated “a piece of ground,” KJV, RV, a field. See FIELD.

B. Verbs.

1. edaphizo (ἐδαφίζω, 1474), akin to A, No. 2: see DASH.

2. themelioo (θεμελιόω, 2311) signifies “to lay the foundation of, to found” (akin to themelios, “a foundation”; from tithemi, “to put”), and is rendered “grounded” in Eph. 3:17, said of the condition of believers with reference to the love of Christ; in Col. 1:23, of their continuance in the faith. See FOUND.

C. Adverb.

chamai (χαμαί, 5476) (akin to Lat., humi, “on the ground,” and homo, “man”), signifies “on the ground,” John 9:6, of the act of Christ in spitting on the “ground” before anointing the eyes of a blind man; in 18:6, “to the ground,” of the fall of the rabble that had come to seize Christ in Gethsemane.¶

GROW

1. auxano (αὐξάνω, 837), “to grow or increase,” of the growth of that which lives, naturally or spiritually, is used (a) transitively, signifying to make to increase, said of giving the increase, 1 Cor. 3:6, 7; 2 Cor. 9:10, the effect of the work of God, according to the analogy of His operations in nature; “to grow, become greater,” e.g. of plants and fruit, Matt. 6:28; used in the passive voice in 13:32 and Mark 4:8, “increase”; in the active in Luke 12:27; 13:19; of the body, Luke 1:80; 2:40; of Christ, John 3:30, “increase”; of the work of the gospel of God, Acts 6:7, “increased”; 12:24; 19:20; of people, Acts 7:17; of faith, 2 Cor. 10:15 (passive voice), RV, “groweth” (KJV, “is increased”); of believers individually, Eph. 4:15; Col. 1:6, RV, 10 (passive voice), “increasing”; 1 Pet. 2:2; 2 Pet. 3:18; of the church, Col. 2:19; of churches, Eph. 2:21. See INCREASE.¶

Note: Cf. auxesis, “increase,” Eph. 4:16; Col. 2:19.¶

2. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become or come to be,” is translated “grow” in Acts 5:24, of the development of apostolic work. See ARISE, No. 5.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 21:19, for KJV, “let (no fruit) grow,” the RV, more strictly, has “let there be (no fruit).” (2) In Heb. 11:24, ginomai is used with megas, “great,” of Moses, lit., “had become great,” RV, “had grown up” (KJV, “had come to years”).

3. erchomai (ἔρχομαι, 2064), “to come or go,” is translated “grew (worse),” in Mark 5:26. See COME, No. 1.

4. anabaino (ἀναβαίνω, 305), “to ascend,” when used of plants, signifies “to grow up,” Mark 4:7, 32; in 4:8, of seed, “growing up,” RV, KJV, “that sprang up,” (for the next word, “increasing,” see No. 1). See ARISE, No. 6.

5. mekunomai (μηκύνω, 3373), “to grow long, lengthen, extend” (from mekos, “length”), is used of the “growth” of plants, in Mark 4:27.¶

Note: Three different words are used in Mark 4 of the “growth” of plants or seed, Nos. 1, 4, 5.

6. huperauxano (ὑπεραυξάνω, 5232), “to increase beyond measure” (huper, “over,” and No. 1), is used of faith and love, in their living and practical effects, 2 Thess. 1:3. Lightfoot compares this verb and the next in the verse (pleonazo, “to abound”) in that the former implies “an internal, organic growth, as of a tree,” the latter “a diffusive or expansive character, as of a flood irrigating the land.”¶

7. sunauxano (συναυξάνω, 4885), “to grow together,” is in Matt. 13:30.¶

8. phuo (φύω, 5453), “to produce,” is rendered “grew” (passive voice) in Luke 8:6. See SPRING.

9. sumphuo (συμφύω, 4855) is used in Luke 8:7, RV, “grow with.”¶

For GRUDGE (Jas. 5:9), see GRIEVE, B, No. 3, GRUDGING (1 Pet. 4:9) see MURMUR

GRUDGINGLY

Note: In 2 Cor. 9:7, the phrase ek lupes, lit., “out of sorrow” (ek, “out of,” or “from,” lupe, “sorrow, grief”), is translated “grudgingly” (RV marg., “of sorrow”); the “grudging” regret is set in contrast to cheerfulness enjoined in giving, as is the reluctance expressed in “of necessity.”

GUARD (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. koustodia (κουστωδία, 2892); “a guard,” (Latin, custodia, Eng., “custodian”), is used of the soldiers who “guarded” Christ’s sepulchre, Matt. 27:65, 66 and 28:11, and is translated “(ye have) a guard,” “the guard (being with them),” and “(some of) the guard,” RV, KJV, “... a watch,” “(setting a) watch,” and “... the watch.” This was the Temple guard, stationed under a Roman officer in the tower of Antonia, and having charge of the high priestly vestments. Hence the significance of Pilate’s words “Ye have a guard.” See WATCH.¶

2. spekoulator (σπεκουλάτωρ, 4688), Latin, speculator, primarily denotes “a lookout officer,” or “scout,” but, under the emperors, “a member of the bodyguard”; these were employed as messengers, watchers and executioners; ten such officers were attached to each legion; such a guard was employed by Herod Antipas, Mark 6:27, RV, “a soldier of his guard” (KJV, “executioner”).¶

3. phulax (φύλαξ, 5441), “a guard, keeper” (akin to phulasso, “to guard, keep”), is translated “keepers” in Acts 5:23; in 12:6, 19, RV, “guards” (KJV, “keepers”). See KEEPER.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 28:16, some mss. have the sentence containing the word stratopedarches, “a captain of the guard.” See CAPTAIN. (2) In Phil. 1:13, the noun praitorion, the “praetorian guard,” is so rendered in the RV (KJV, “palace”).

B. Verbs.

1. phulasso (φυλάσσω, 5442), “to guard, watch, keep” (akin to A, No. 3), is rendered by the verb “to guard” in the RV (KJV, “to keep”) of Luke 11:21; John 17:12; Acts 12:4; 28:16; 2 Thess. 3:3; 1 Tim. 6:20; 2 Tim. 1:12, 14; 1 John 5:21; Jude 24. In Luke 8:29, “was kept under guard, RV (KJV, kept). See BEWARE, KEEP, OBSERVE, PRESERVE, SAVE, WARE OF, WATCH.

2. diaphulasso (διαφυλάσσω, 1314), a strengthened form of No. 1 (dia, “through,” used intensively), “to guard carefully, defend,” is found in Luke 4:10 (from the Sept. of Ps. 91:11), RV, “to guard” (KJV, “to keep”).¶

3. phroureo (φρουρέω, 5432), a military term, “to keep by guarding, to keep under guard,” as with a garrison (phrouros, “a guard, or garrison”), is used, (a) of blocking up every way of escape, as in a siege; (b) of providing protection against the enemy, as a garrison does; see 2 Cor. 11:32, “guarded.” KJV, “kept,” i.e., kept the city, “with a garrison.” It is used of the security of the Christian until the end, 1 Pet. 1:5, RV, “are guarded,” and of the sense of that security that is his when he puts all his matters into the hand of God, Phil. 4:7, RV, “shall guard.” In these passages the idea is not merely that of protection, but of inward garrisoning as by the Holy Spirit; in Gal. 3:23 (“were kept in ward”), it means rather a benevolent custody and watchful guardianship in view of worldwide idolatry (cf. Isa. 5:2). See KEEP.¶

epitropos (ἐπίτροπος, 2012), lit., “one to whose care something is committed” (epi, “upon,” trepo, “to turn” or “direct”), is rendered “guardians” in Gal. 4:2, RV, KJV, “tutors” (in Matt. 20:8 and Luke 8:3, “steward”).¶

“The corresponding verb, epitrepo, is translated “permit, give leave, suffer”; see 1 Cor. 14:34; 16:7; 1 Tim. 2:12, e.g., ... An allied noun, epitrope, is translated “commission” in Acts 26:12 (¶) and refers to delegated authority over persons. This usage of cognate words suggests that the epitropos was a superior servant responsible for the persons composing the household, whether children or slaves.”*

anakeimai (ἀνακείμεναι, 345), “to recline at table,” frequently rendered “to sit at meat,” is used in its present participial form (lit., “reclining ones”) as a noun denoting “guests,” in Matt. 22:10, 11. See LEAN, LIE, SIT.

Note: For kataluo, “to unloose,” rendered “to be a guest” in Luke 19:7, KJV, (RV, “to lodge”), see LODGE.

GUEST-CHAMBER

* From Notes from Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 180.

kataluma (κατάλυμα, 2646), akin to kataluo (see Note above), signifies (a) “an inn, lodging-place,” Luke 2:7; (b) “a guest-room,” Mark 14:14; Luke 22:11. The word lit. signifies “a loosening down” (kata, “down,” luo, “to loose”), used of the place where travelers and their beasts untied their packages, girdles and sandals. “In the East, no figure is more invested with chivalry than the guest. In his own right he cannot cross the threshold, but when once he is invited in, all do him honor and unite in rendering service; cf. Gen. 18:19; Judg. 19:9, 15.” These two passages in the NT “concern a room in a private house, which the owner readily placed at the disposal of Jesus and His disciples for the celebration of the Passover ... At the festivals of Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles the people were commanded to repair to Jerusalem; and it was a boast of the Rabbis that, notwithstanding the enormous crowds, no man could truthfully say to his fellow, ‘I have not found a fire where to roast my paschal lamb in Jerusalem,’ or ‘I have not found a bed in Jerusalem to lie in,’ or ‘My lodging is too strait in Jerusalem’” (Hastings, Bib. Dic., GUESTCHAMBER and INN). See INN.¶

GUIDE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

hodegos (ὁδηγός, 3595), “a leader on the way” (hodos, “a way,” hegeomai, “to lead”), “a guide,” is used (a) literally, in Acts 1:16; (b) figuratively, Matt. 15:14, RV, “guides” (KJV, “leaders”); Matt. 23:16, 24, “guides”; Rom. 2:19, “a guide.” Cf. B, No. 1.¶

B. Verbs.

1. hodegeo (ὁδηγέω, 3594), “to lead the way” (akin to A), is used (a) literally, RV, “guide” (KJV, “lead”), of “guiding” the blind, in Matt. 15:14; Luke 6:39; of “guiding” unto foun tains of waters of life, Rev. 7:17; (b) figuratively, in John 16:13, of “guidance” into the truth by the Holy Spirit; in Acts 8:31, of the interpretation of Scripture. See LEAD.¶

2. kateuthuno (κατευθύνω, 2720), “to make straight,” is said of “guiding” the feet into the way of peace, Luke 1:79. See DIRECT.

Notes: (1) 1 Tim. 5:14, the RV rightly translates the verb oikodespoteo by “rule the household” (KJV, “guide the house”), the meaning being that of the management and direction of household affairs. See RULE.¶ (2) Hegeomai, “to lead,” in Heb. 13:7, 24, is rendered “that had the rule over” and “that have, etc.,” more lit., “them that were (are) your leaders,” or “guides.”

GUILE

dolos (δόλος, 1388), “a bait, snare, deceit,” is rendered “guile” in John 1:47, negatively of Nathanael; Acts 13:10, RV, KJV, “subtlety” (of Bar-Jesus); 2 Cor. 12:16, in a charge made against Paul by his detractors, of catching the Corinthian converts by “guile” (the apostle is apparently quoting the language of his critics); 1 Thess. 2:3, negatively, of the teaching of the apostle and his fellow missionaries; 1 Pet. 2:1, of that from which Christians are to be free; 2:22, of the guileless speech of Christ (cf. GUILLESS, No. 2); 3:10, of the necessity that the speech of Christians should be guileless. See also Matt. 26:4; Mark 7:22; 14:1. See CRAFT, DECEIT, SUBTLETY.¶

Note: In Rev. 14:5, some mss. have dolos; the most authentic have pseudos, a “lie.”

GUILELESS (WITHOUT GUILE)

1. adolos (ἄδολος, 97), “without guile” (a, negative, and dolos, see GUILE), “pure, unadulterated,” is used metaphorically of the teaching of the Word of God, 1 Pet. 2:2, RV. It is used in the papyri writings of seed, corn, wheat, oil, wine, etc.¶

2. akakos (ἄκακος, 172), lit., “without evil” (a, negative, kakos, “evil”), signifies “simple, guileless,” Rom. 16:18, “simple,” of believers (perhaps = unsuspecting, or, rather, innocent, free from admixture of evil); in Heb. 7:26, RV, “guileless” (KJV, “harmless”), the character of Christ (more lit., “free from evil”).¶ Cf. Sept., Job 2:3; 8:20; Prov. 1:4; 14:15. See HARMLESS.

GUILTLESS

anaitios (ἀναίτιος, 338), “innocent, guiltless” (a, negative, n, euphonic, aitia, “a charge of crime”), is translated “blameless” in Matt. 12:5, KJV, “guiltless” in v. 7; RV, “guiltless” in each place. See BLAMELESS.¶

GUILTY (Adjective)

enochos (ἐνοχος, 1777), lit., “held in, bound by, liable to a charge or action at law”: see DANGER.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 3:19, KJV, hupodikos, “brought to trial,” lit., ‘under judgment’ (hupo, “under,” dike, “justice”), is incorrectly rendered “guilty”; RV, “under the judgement of.” See JUDGMENT. (2) In Matt. 23:18, opheilo, to owe, to be indebted, to fail in duty, be a delinquent,” is misrendered “guilty” in the KJV; RV, “a debtor.”

GULF

chasma (χάσμα, 5490), akin to chasko, “to yawn” (Eng., “chasm”), is found in Luke 16:26.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 18:17, two words are used with reference to Absalom’s body, bothunos which signifies “a great pit,” and chasma, “a yawning abyss, or precipice,” with a deep pit at the bottom, into which the body was cast.¶

GUSH OUT

ekchuno, or ekchunno (ἐκχέω, 1632), a Hellenistic form of ekcheo, “to pour forth,” is translated “gushed out” in Acts 1:18, of the bowels of Judas Iscariot. See POUR, RUN, SHED, SPILL.

H

For HA (Mark 15:29, RV) see AH

HABITATION

1. oiketerion (οἰκητήριον, 3613), “a habitation” (from oiketer, “an inhabitant,” and oikos, “a dwelling”), is used in Jude 6, of the heavenly region appointed by God as the dwelling place of angels; in 2 Cor. 5:2, RV, “habitation,” KJV, “house,” figuratively of the spiritual bodies of believers when raised or changed at the return of the Lord. See HOUSE.¶

2. katoiketerion (κατοικητήριον, 2732), (kata, “down,” used intensively, and No. 1), implying more permanency than No. 1, is used in Eph. 2:22 of the church as the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit; in Rev. 18:2 of Babylon, figuratively, as the dwelling place of demons.¶

3. katoikia (κατοικία, 2733), “a settlement, colony, dwelling” (kata, and oikos, see above), is used in Acts 17:26, of the localities divinely appointed as the dwelling places of the nations.¶

4. epaulis (ἐπαυλις, 1886), “a farm, a dwelling” (epi, “upon,” aulis, “a place in which to pass the night, a country house, cottage or cabin, a fold”), is used in Acts 1:20 of the habitation of Judas.¶

5. skene (σκηνή, 4633), akin to skenoo, “to dwell in a tent or tabernacle,” is rendered “habitations” in Luke 16:9, KJV (RV, “tabernacles”) of the eternal dwelling places of the redeemed. See TABERNACLE.

6. skenoma (σκήνωμα, 4638), “a booth,” or “tent pitched” (akin to No. 5), is used of the Temple as God’s dwelling, as that which David desired to build, Acts 7:46 (RV, “habitation,” KJV, “tabernacle”); metaphorically of the body as a temporary tabernacle, 2 Pet. 1:13, 14.¶ See TABERNACLE.

hades (ᾍδης, 86), “the region of departed spirits of the lost” (but including the blessed dead in periods preceding the ascension of Christ). It has been thought by some that the word etymologically meant “the unseen” (from a, negative, and eido, “to see”), but this derivation is questionable; a more probable derivation is from hado, signifying “all-receiving.” It corresponds to “Sheol” in the OT. In the KJV of the OT and NT; it has been unhappily rendered “hell,” e.g., Ps. 16:10; or “the grave,” e.g., Gen. 37:35; or “the pit,” Num. 16:30, 33; in the NT the revisers have always used the rendering “hades”; in the OT, they have not been uniform in the translation, e.g. in Isa. 14:15 “hell” (marg., “Sheol”); usually they have “Sheol” in the text and “the grave” in the margin. It never denotes the grave, nor is it the permanent region of the lost; in point of time it is, for such, intermediate between decease and the doom of Gehenna. For the condition, see Luke 16:23-31.

The word is used four times in the Gospels, and always by the Lord, Matt. 11:23; 16:18; Luke 10:15; 16:23; it is used with reference to the soul of Christ, Acts 2:27, 31; Christ declares that He has the keys of it, Rev. 1:18; in Rev. 6:8 it is personified, with the signification of the temporary destiny of the doomed; it is to give up those who are therein, 20:13, and is to be cast into the lake of fire, v. 14.¶

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

Note: In 1 Cor. 15:55 the most authentic mss. have thanatos, “death,” in the 2nd part of the verse, instead of “hades,” which the KJV wrongly renders “grave” (“hell,” in the marg.).

HAIL (Noun)

chalaza (χάλαζα, 5464), akin to chalao, “to let loose, let fall,” is always used as an instrument of divine judgment, and is found in the NT in Rev. 8:7; 11:19; 16:21.¶

HAIL (Verb)

chairo (χαίρω, 5463), “to rejoice,” is used in the imperative mood, (a) as a salutation, only in the Gospels; in this respect it is rendered simply “hail,” in mockery of Christ, Matt. 26:49; 27:29; Mark 15:18; John 19:3; (b) as a greeting, by the angel Gabriel to Mary, Luke 1:28, and, in the plural, by the Lord to the disciples after His resurrection, Matt. 28:9.

HAIR

A. Nouns.

1. thrix (θρίξ, 2359) denotes the “hair,” whether of beast, as of the camel’s “hair” which formed the raiment of John the Baptist, Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6; or of man. Regarding the latter (a) it is used to signify the minutest detail, as that which illustrates the exceeding care and protection bestowed by God upon His children, Matt. 10:30; Luke 12:7; 21:18; Acts 27:34; (b) as the Jews swore by the “hair,” the Lord used the natural inability to make one “hair” white or black, as one of the reasons for abstinence from oaths, Matt. 5:36; (c) while long “hair” is a glory to a woman (see B), and to wear it loose or dishevelled is a dishonor, yet the woman who wiped Christ’s feet with her “hair” (in place of the towel which Simon the Pharisee omitted to provide), despised the shame in her penitent devotion to the Lord (slaves were accustomed to wipe their masters’ feet), Luke 7:38, 44 (RV, “hair”); see also John 11:2; 12:3; (d) the dazzling whiteness of the head and “hair” of the Son of Man in the vision of Rev. 1 (v. 14) is suggestive of the holiness and wisdom of “the Ancient of Days”; (e) the long “hair” of the spirit-beings described as locusts in Rev. 9:8 is perhaps indicative of their subjection to their satanic master (cf. 1 Cor. 11:10, RV); (f) Christian women are exhorted to refrain from adorning their “hair” for outward show, 1 Pet. 3:3.¶

Note: Goat’s hair was used in tentmaking, as, e.g., in the case of Paul’s occupation, Acts 18:3; the haircloth of Cilicia, his native province, was noted, being known in commerce as cilicium.

2. kome (κόμη, 2864) is used only of “human hair,” but not in the NT of the ornamental. The word is found in 1 Cor. 11:15, where the context shows that the “covering” provided in the long “hair” of the woman is as a veil, a sign of subjection to authority, as indicated in the headships spoken of in vv. 1-10.¶

B. Verb.

komao (κομάω, 2863) signifies “to let the hair grow long, to wear long hair,” a glory to a woman, a dishonor to a man (as taught by nature), 1 Cor. 11:14, 15.¶

C. Adjective.

trichinos (τρίχινος, 5155), akin to A, No. 1, signifies “hairy, made of hair,” Rev. 6:12, lit., “hairy sackcloth.” Cf. SACKCLOTH.¶

HALE (Verb)

1. suro (σύρω, 4951) “to drag, haul,” is rendered “haling” in Acts 8:3, of taking to trial or punishment. See DRAG.

2. katasuro (κατασύρω, 2694), an intensive form of No. 1, lit., “to pull down” (kata), hence, “to drag away,” is used in Luke 12:58, of haling a person before a judge.¶

HALF

hemisus (ἡμισυ, 2255), an adjective, is used (a) as such in the neuter plural, in Luke 19:8, lit., “the halves (of my goods)”; (b) as a noun, in the neuter sing., “the half,” Mark 6:23; “half (a time),” Rev. 12:14; “a half,” 11:9, 11, RV.¶

For HALF-SHEKEL see SHEKEL

HALL

1. aule (αὐλή, 833), “a court,” most frequently the place where a governor dispensed justice, is rendered “hall” in Mark 15:16 and Luke 22:55, KJV (RV, “court”). See COURT, FOLD, PALACE.

2. praitorion (πραιτώριον, 4232) is translated “common hall” in Matt. 27:27, KJV (RV, “palace”); “Praetorium” in Mark 15:16; “hall of judgment” or “judgment hall” in John 18:28, 33; 19:9; Acts 23:35 (RV, “palace,” in each place); “praetorian guard,” Phil. 1:13 (KJV, “palace”). See PALACE.¶

HALLELUJAH

hallelouia (ἀλληλουϊα, 239) signifies “Praise ye Jah.” It occurs as a short doxology in the Psalms, usually at the beginning, e.g., 111, 112, or the end, e.g., 104, 105, or both, e.g., 106, 135 (where it is also used in v. 3), 146-150. In the NT it is found in Rev. 19:1, 3, 4, 6, as the keynote in the song of the great multitude in heaven. “Alleluia,” without the initial “H,” is a misspelling.¶

HALLOW

hagiazō (ἀγιάζω, 37), “to make holy” (from hagios, “holy”), signifies to set apart for God, to sanctify, to make a person or thing the opposite of koinos, “common”; it is translated “Hallowed,” with reference to the name of God the Father in the Lord’s Prayer, Matt. 6:9; Luke 11:2. See SANCTIFY.

HALT

cholos (χωλός, 5560), “lame,” is translated “halt” in Matt. 18:8; Mark 9:45; John 5:3, in Acts 14:8, “cripple”; in Luke 14:21, KJV, “halt,” RV, “lame”; elsewhere, “lame,” Matt. 11:5; 15:30, 31; 21:14; Luke 7:22; 14:13; Acts 3:2; 8:7; Heb. 12:13; some mss. have it in Acts 3:11 (KJV, “the lame man”), RV, “he,” translating autou, as in the best texts.¶

Note: For kullos, Matt. 18:8, RV, “halt, see MAIMED, No. 2.

HAND

cheir (χείρ, 5495), “the hand” (cf. Eng., “chiroprady”), is used, besides its ordinary significance, (a) in the idiomatic phrases, “by the hand of,” “at the hand of,” etc., to signify “by the agency of,” Acts 5:12; 7:35; 17:25; 14:3; Gal. 3:19 (cf. Lev. 26:46); Rev. 19:2; (b) metaphorically, for the power of God, e.g., Luke 1:66; 23:46; John 10:28, 29;

Acts 11:21; 13:11; Heb. 1:10; 2:7; 10:31; (c) by metonymy, for power, e.g., Matt. 17:22; Luke 24:7; John 10:39; Acts 12:11.

AT HAND

A. Adverb.

engus (ἐγγύς, 1451), “near, nigh,” frequently rendered “at hand,” is used (a) of place, e.g., of the Lord’s sepulchre, John 19:42, “nigh at hand”; (b) of time, e.g., Matt. 26:18; Luke 21:30, 31, RV, “nigh,” KJV, “nigh at hand”; in Phil. 4:5, “the Lord is at hand,” it is possible to regard the meaning as that either of (a) or (b); the following reasons may point to (b): (1) the subject of the preceding context has been the return of Christ, 3:20, 21; (2) the phrase is a translation of the Aramaic “Maranatha,” 1 Cor. 16:22, a Christian watchword, and the use of the title “the Lord” is appropriate; (3) the similar use of the adverb in Rev. 1:3 and 22:10; (4) the similar use of the corresponding verb (see B) in Rom. 13:12; Heb. 10:25, “drawing nigh,” RV; Jas. 5:8; cf. 1 Pet. 4:7. See NEAR, NIGH, READY.

B. Verb.

engizo (ἐγγίζω, 1448): See APPROACH, A.

Notes: (1) In 2 Thess. 2:2, KJV, the verb enistemi, “to be present” (en, “in,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), is wrongly translated “is at hand”; the RV correctly renders it, “is (now) present”; the apostle is counteracting the error of the supposition that “the Day of the Lord” (RV), a period of divine and retributive judgments upon the world, had already begun.

(2) In 2 Tim. 4:6, KJV, the verb ephistemi, “to stand by, to come to or upon” (epi, “upon,” histemi, “to make to stand”), is rendered “is at hand,” of the apostle’s departure from this life; the RV “is come” represent the vivid force of the statement, expressing suddenness or imminence.

HAND (lead by the)

A. Adjective.

cheiragogos (χειραγωγός, 5497), lit., “a hand-leader” (cheir, “the hand,” ago, “to lead”), is used as a noun (plural) in Acts 13:11, “some to lead him by the hand.”¶

B. Verb.

cheiragogeō (χειραγωγέω, 5496), “to lead by the hand,” is used in Acts 9:8; 22:11.¶

HANDED DOWN

patroparadotos (πατροπαράδοτος, 3970), an adjective, denoting “handed down from one’s fathers,” is used in 1 Pet. 1:18, RV, for KJV, “received by tradition from your fathers” (from pater, “a father,” and paradidomi, “to hand down”).¶

HAND (with one’s own)

autocheir (αὐτόχειρ, 849), a noun (autos, “self,” cheir, “the hand”), is used in the plural in Acts 27:19, “with their own hands.”¶

HAND (take in)

epicheireō (ἐπιχειρέω, 2021), “to put the hand to” (epi, “to,” cheir, “the hand”), is rendered “have taken in hand” in Luke 1:1. See TAKE.

For LAY HANDS ON (krateo in Matt. 18:28; 21:46; piazo in John 8:20), see HOLD and APPREHEND

HANDS (made by, not made with)

1. cheiropoietos (χειροποίητος, 5499), “made by hand,” of human handiwork (cheir, and poieo, “to make”), is said of the temple in Jerusalem, Mark 14:58; temples in general, Acts 7:48 (RV, “houses”); 17:24; negatively, of the heavenly and spiritual tabernacle, Heb. 9:11; of the holy place in the earthly tabernacle, v. 24; of circumcision, Eph. 2:11.¶ In the Sept., of idols, Lev. 26:1, 30; Isa. 2:18; 10:11; 16:12; 19:1; 21:9; 31:7; 46:6.¶

2. acheiropoietos (ἀχειροποίητος, 886), “not made by hands” (a, negative, and No. 1), is said of an earthly temple, Mark 14:58; of the resurrection body of believers, metaphorically as a house, 2 Cor. 5:1; metaphorically, of spiritual circumcision, Col. 2:11.¶ This word is not found in the Sept.

HANDKERCHIEF

soudarion (σουδάριον, 4676) a Latin word, sudarium (from sudor, “sweat”), denotes (a) “a cloth for wiping the face,” etc., Luke 19:20; Acts 19:12; (b) “a headcovering for the dead,” John 11:44; 20:7. See NAPKIN.¶

HANDLE

1. pselaphao (ψηλαφάω, 5584), “to feel, touch, handle,” is rendered by the latter verb in Luke 24:39, in the Lord’s invitation to the disciples to accept the evidence of His resurrection in His being bodily in their midst; in 1 John 1:1, in the apostle’s testimony (against the gnostic error that Christ had been merely a phantom) that he and his fellow apostles had handled Him. See FEEL.

2. thingano (θιγγάνω, 2345) signifies (a) “to touch, to handle” (though “to handle” is rather stronger than the actual significance compared with No 1). In Col. 2:21 the RV renders it “touch,” and the first verb (hapto, “to lay hold of”) “handle,” i.e., “handle not, nor taste, nor touch”; “touch” is the appropriate rendering; in Heb. 12:20 it is said of a beast’s touching Mount Sinai; (b) “to touch by way of injuring,” Heb. 11:28. See TOUCH.¶ In the Sept., Exod. 19:12.¶

Note: The shortened form found in the passages mentioned is an aorist (or point) tense of the verb.

3. doloo (δολόω, 1389), “to corrupt,” is used in 2 Cor. 4:2, “handling (the Word of God) deceitfully,” in the sense of using guile (dolos); the meaning approximates to that of adulterating (cf. kapeleuo, in 2:17).¶

4. atimazo (ατιμάζω, 818), “to dishonor, insult,” is rendered “handled shamefully” in Mark 12:4. Some mss. have the alternative verb atimao. See DESPISE, DISHONOR.

5. orthotomeo (ὀρθοτομέω, 3718), “to cut straight,” as in road-making (orthos, “straight,” temno, “to cut”), is used metaphorically in 2 Tim. 2:15, of “handling aright (the word of truth),” RV (KJV, “rightly dividing”). The stress is on orthos; the Word of God is to be “handled” strictly along the lines of its teaching. If the metaphor is taken from plowing, cutting a straight furrow, the word would express a careful cultivation, the Word of God viewed as ground designed to give the best results from its ministry and in the life. See DIVIDE.¶

In the Sept., in Prov. 3:6 and 11:5, the knowledge of God's wisdom and the just dealing of the upright are enjoined as producing a straight walk in the life.¶

HANG

1. kremannumi (κρεμάννυμι, 2910) is used (a) transitively in Acts 5:30; 10:39; in the passive voice, in Matt. 18:6, of a millstone about a neck, and in Luke 23:39, of the malefactors; (b) intransitively, in the middle voice, in Matt. 22:40, of the dependence of "the Law and the prophets" (i.e., that which they enjoin) upon the one great principle of love to God and one's neighbor (as a door "hangs" on a hinge, or as articles "hang" on a nail); in Acts 28:4, of the serpent "hanging" from Paul's hand; in Gal. 3:13 the word is used in a quotation from the Sept. of Deut. 21:23.¶

2. ekkremannumi (ἐκκρέμαμαι, 1582), "to hang from, or upon" (ek, and No. 1), is used in the middle voice (ekkremamai) metaphorically in Luke 19:48, RV, "(the people all) "hung" upon (Him, listening)," KJV, "were very attentive."¶ In the Sept, Gen. 44:30.¶

3. pariemi (παρίημι, 3935) signifies (a) "to disregard, leave alone, leave undone," Luke 11:42 (some mss. have aphiemi, here); (b) "to relax, loosen," and, in the passive voice, "to be relaxed, exhausted," said of hands that "hang" down in weakness, Heb. 12:12.¶

4. perikeimai (περίκειμαι, 4029) signifies "to lie round" (peri, "around," keimai, "to lie"); then, "to be hanged round," said of "a great millstone" (lit., "a millstone turned by an ass"), Mark 9:42, RV, and marg., to be "hung" round the neck of him who causes one of Christ's "little ones" to stumble; in Luke 17:2, "a millstone." See BOUND (TO BE).

5. apancho (ἀπάγχωμαι, 519) signifies "to strangle"; in the middle voice, to "hang" oneself, Matt. 27:5.¶ In the Sept. it is said of Ahithophel (2 Sam. 17:23).¶

HAPLY (if, lest)

1. ei ara denotes "if therefore," "if accordingly" (i.e., if in these circumstances), e.g., Mark 11:13, of Christ and the fig tree (not "if perchance," but marking a correspondence in point of fact).

2. ei arage denotes "if in consequence," e.g., Acts 17:27, "if haply" they might feel after God, in consequence of seeking Him.

3. me pote (μήποτε, 3379), lit., "lest ever," "lest haply," e.g., Luke 14:29, of laying a foundation, with the possibility of being unable to finish the building; Acts 5:39, of the possibility of being found fighting against God; Heb. 3:2, RV, "lest haply," of the possibility of having an evil heart of unbelief. The RV usually has "lest haply" (KJV "lest at any time"), e.g., Matt. 4:6; 5:25; 13:15; Mark 4:12; Luke 4:11; 21:34; Heb. 2:1; in Matt. 25:9, the RV has "peradventure"; in 2 Tim. 2:25, KJV and RV, have "if peradventure"; in John 7:26 the RV has "Can it be that," for the word "Do" in the KJV.

4. me pos (μήπως, 3381) denotes “lest in any way,” “by any means,” e.g., 2 Cor. 9:4, KJV, “lest haply,” RV, “lest by any means.”

5. me pou denotes “lest somehow”; the RV has “lest haply” in Acts 27:29 (some mss. have No. 4, here).

HAPPEN

1. sumbaino (συμβαίνω, 4819), lit., “to go or come together” (sun, “with,” baino, “to go”), signifies “to happen together,” of things or events, Mark 10:32; Luke 24:14; Acts 3:10; 1 Cor. 10:11; 1 Pet. 4:12; 2 Pet. 2:22; “befell” in Acts 20:19; in Acts 21:35, “so it was.” See BEFALL.¶

Notes: (1) In Phil. 1:12, the phrase ta kata (i.e., kata) eme, lit., “the things relating to me,” is rendered “the things which happened unto me.” (2) In Luke 24:35, the phrase “the things that happened in the way,” RV (KJV, “what things were done in the way”), is, lit., “the things in the way.”

HAPPY, HAPPIER

A. Adjective.

makarios (μακάριος, 3107), “blessed, happy,” is rendered “happy” in the RV, in two places only, as in the KJV, Acts 26:2 and Rom. 14:22 (where “blessed” would have done); also the comparative “happier” in 1 Cor. 7:40. Elsewhere the RV uses “blessed” for KJV “happy,” e.g., John 13:17; 1 Pet. 3:14; 4:14. See BLESSED.

B. Verb.

makarizo (μακαρίζω, 3106), “to call blessed,” Luke 1:48, is rendered “we count ... happy” in Jas. 5:11. See BLESSED.¶

HARD, HARDEN, HARDENING, HARDNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. skleros (σκληρός, 4642), from skello, “to dry,” signifies “trying, exacting”: see AUSTERE.

2. duskolos (δύσκολος, 1422) primarily means “hard to satisfy with food” (dus, a prefix like Eng., un or mis, indicating “difficulty, opposition, injuriousness,” etc., the opposite of, eu, “well,” and kolon, “food”); hence, “difficult,” Mark 10:24, of the “difficulty,” for those who trust in riches, to enter into the Kingdom of God.¶

B. Nouns.

1. sklerotes (σκληρότης, 4643), akin to A, No. 1, is rendered “hardness” in Rom. 2:5.¶

2. porosis (πώρωσις, 4457) denotes “a hardening,” a covering with a poros, a kind of stone, indicating “a process” (from poroo, C, No. 1), and is used metaphorically of dulled spiritual perception, Mark 3:5, RV, “at the hardening of their hearts”; Rom. 11:25, RV, “a hardening” (KJV, “blindness”), said of the state of Israel; Eph. 4:8, RV, “hardening,” of the heart of Gentiles. See BLINDNESS.¶

Note: See also under HARSHIP and HEART (HARDNESS OF).

C. Verbs.

1. poroo (πωρόω, 4456), “to make hard, callous, to petrify” (akin to B, No. 2), is used metaphorically, of the heart, Mark 6:52; 8:17; John 12:40; of the mind (or thoughts), 2 Cor. 3:14, of those in Israel who refused the revealed will and ways of God in the gospel, as also in Rom. 11:7, RV, “hardened” (KJV, “blinded”), in both places. See BLINDNESS.¶

2. skleruno (σκληρύνω, 4645), “to make dry or hard” (akin to A, No. 1 and B, No. 1), is used in Acts 19:9; in Rom. 9:18, illustrated by the case of Pharaoh, who first persistently “hardened” his heart (see the RV marg. of Ex. 7:13, 22; 8:19; text of v. 32 and 9:7), all producing the retributive “hardening” by God, after His much long-suffering, 9:12, etc.; in Heb. 3:8, 13, 15; 4:7, warnings against the “hardening” of the heart.¶

HARDLY

1. duskolos (δυσκόλως, 1423), the adverbial form of HARD, A, No. 2, is used in Matt. 19:23; Mark 10:23; Luke 18:24 of the danger of riches.¶

2. mogis (μόγις, 3425), “with labor, pain, trouble” (akin to mogos, “toil”), is found in some mss. in Luke 9:39, instead of No. 3.¶

3. molis (μόλις, 3433), “with difficulty, scarcely, hardly” (akin to molos, “toil”), is used as an alternative for No. 2, and occurs in the most authentic mss. in Luke 9:39; it is rendered “hardly” in Acts 27:8, KJV. See DIFFICULTY.

HARDSHIP (to suffer)

1. kakopatheo (κακοπαθέω, 2553), “to suffer evil,” is translated “suffer hardship” in three places in the RV, 2 Tim. 2:3 (in some mss.; see No. 2), KJV, “endure hardness”; 2:9, KJV, “suffer trouble”; 4:5, KJV, “endure affliction”; in Jas. 5:13, RV, “suffering” (KJV, “afflicted”). See AFFLICT, ENDURE, SUFFER.¶ In the Sept., Jonah 4:10.¶

2. sunkakopatheo (συγκακοπαθέω, 4777), “to suffer hardship with,” is so rendered in 2 Tim. 1:8, RV, KJV, “be thou partaker of the afflictions” (of the gospel), and, in the best mss., in 2:3, “suffer hardship with me.” See AFFLICTION, No. 3, Note.¶

HARLOT

porne (πόρνη, 4204), “a prostitute, harlot” (from pernemi, “to sell”), is used (a) literally, in Matt. 21:31, 32, of those who were the objects of the mercy shown by Christ; in Luke 15:30, of the life of the Prodigal; in 1 Cor. 6:15, 16, in a warning to the Corinthian church against the prevailing licentiousness which had made Corinth a byword; in Heb. 11:31 and Jas. 2:25, of Rahab; (b) metaphorically, of mystic Babylon, Rev. 17:1, 5 (KJV, “harlots”), 15, 16; 19:2, RV, for KJV, “whore.”¶

HARM

A. Nouns.

1. kakos (κακός, 2556), “evil,” is rendered “harm” in Acts 16:28; 28:5. See EVIL.

2. poneros (πονηρός, 4190), “evil,” generally of a more malignant sort than No. 1, is translated “harm” in Acts 28:21. See EVIL.

3. atopos (ἄτοπος, 824): see AMISS.

4. hubris (ὑβρις, 5196) primarily denotes “wantonness, insolence”: then, “an act of wanton violence, an outrage, injury,” 2 Cor. 12:10, RV, “injuries,” KJV, “reproaches”

(more than reproach is conveyed by the term); metaphorically of a loss by sea, Acts 27:10, RV, “injury,” KJV, “hurt,” and V. 21, RV, “injury,” KJV, harm. See HURT, INJURY, REPROACH.¶

B. Verb.

1. kakoo (κακόω, 2559), “to do evil to a person” (akin to A, No. 1), is rendered “harm” in 1 Pet. 3:13, and in the RV of Acts 18:10 (KJV, “hurt”). See AFFECT, EVIL.

2. kakopoieo (κακοποιέω, 2554), “to do harm” (A, No. 1, and poieo, “to do”), is so rendered in the RV of Mark 3:4 and Luke 6:9 (KJV, “to do evil”), with reference to the moral character of what is done; in 1 Pet. 3:17, “evil doing”; 3 John 11, “doeth evil.”¶

HARMLESS

1. akeraios (ἀκέραιος, 185), lit., “unmixed, with absence of foreign mixture” (from a, negative, and kerannumi, “to mix”), “pure,” is used metaphorically in the NT of what is guileless, sincere, Matt. 10:16, “harmless” (marg., “simple”), i.e., with the simplicity of a single eye, discerning what is evil, and choosing only what glorifies God; Rom. 16:19, “simple (unto that which is evil),” KJV marg., “harmless”; Phil. 2:15, “harmless,” KJV marg., “sincere.” The Greeks used it of wine unmixed with water, of unalloyed metal; in the papyri writings it is used of a loan the interest of which is guaranteed (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). Trench compares it and synonymous words as follows: “as the akakos (see No. 2, below) has no harmfulness in him, and the adolos no guile, so the akeraios no foreign mixture, and the haplous no folds” (Syn. Sec.lvi). Haplous is said of the single eye, Matt. 6:22; Luke 11:34.¶

2. akakos (ἄκακος, 172), the negative of kakos (see HARM, A, No. 1), “void of evil,” is rendered “harmless” in Heb. 7:26 (RV, “guileless”), of the character of Christ as a High Priest; in Rom. 16:18, RV, “innocent,” KJV, “simple.”¶

HARP

A. Noun.

kithara (κithάρα, 2788), whence Eng., “guitar,” denotes “a lyre” or “harp”; it is described by Josephus as an instrument of ten strings, played by a plectrum (a smaller instrument was played by the hand); it is mentioned in 1 Cor. 14:7; Rev. 5:8; 14:2; 15:2.¶

B. Verb.

kitharizo (κithαρίζω, 2789) signifies “to play on the harp,” 1 Cor. 14:7; Rev. 14:2.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 23:16.¶

HARPER

kitharodos (κithαρῳδός, 2790) denotes “one who plays and sings to the lyre” (from kithara, “a lyre,” and aoidos, “a singer”), Rev. 14:2; 18:22.¶

HARVEST

therismos (θερισμός, 2326), akin to therizo, “to reap,” is used (a) of “the act of harvesting,” John 4:35; (b) “the time of harvest,” figuratively, Matt. 13:30, 39; Mark 4:29; (c) “the crop,” figuratively, Matt. 9:37, 38; Luke 10:2; Rev. 14:15. The beginning of “harvest” varied according to natural conditions, but took place on the average about the middle of April in the eastern lowlands of Palestine, in the latter part of the month in the coast plains and a little later in high districts. Barley “harvest” usually came first and then wheat. “Harvesting” lasted about seven weeks, and was the occasion of festivities.¶

HASTE, WITH HASTE, HASTILY

A. Noun.

spoude (σπουδή, 4710) denotes (a) “haste, speed,” accompanied by “with,” Mark 6:25; Luke 1:39; (b) “zeal, diligence, earnestness”: see BUSINESS, CARE, CAREFULNESS, DILIGENCE, FORWARDNESS.

B. Verb.

spseudo (σπεύδω, 4692) denotes (a) intransitively, “to hasten,” Luke 2:16, “with haste,” lit., “(they came) hastening”; Luke 19:5, 6; Acts 20:16; 22:18; (b) transitively, “to desire earnestly,” 2 Pet. 3:12, RV, “earnestly desiring” (marg., “hastening”), KJV, “hasting” (the day of God), i.e., in our practical fellowship with God as those who are appointed by Him as instruments through prayer and service for the accomplishment of His purposes, purposes which will be unthwartably fulfilled both in time and manner of accomplishment. In this way the earnest desire will find its fulfillment.¶

C. Adverb.

tacheos (ταχέως, 5030), “quickly,” is used in a warning to lay hands “hastily” on no man (with a suggestion of rashness), 1 Tim. 5:22, RV (KJV, “suddenly”); in John 11:31, RV, “(she rose up) quickly” (KJV, hastily). See QUICKLY, SHORTLY, SUDDENLY.

HATE, HATEFUL, HATER, HATRED

A. Verb.

miseo (μισέω, 3404), “to hate,” is used especially (a) of malicious and unjustifiable feelings towards others, whether towards the innocent or by mutual animosity, e.g., Matt. 10:22; 24:10; Luke 6:22, 27; 19:14; John 3:20, of “hating” the light (metaphorically); 7:7; 15:18, 19, 23-25; Titus 3:3; 1 John 2:9, 11; 3:13, 15; 4:20; Rev. 18:2, where “hateful” translates the perfect participle passive voice of the verb, lit., “hated,” or “having been hated”; (b) of a right feeling of aversion from what is evil; said of wrongdoing, Rom. 7:15; iniquity, Heb. 1:9; “the garment (figurative) spotted by the flesh,” Jude 23; “the works of the Nicolaitans,” Rev. 2:6 (and v. 15, in some mss.; see the KJV); (c) of relative preference for one thing over another, by way of expressing either aversion from, or disregard for, the claims of one person or thing relatively to those of another, Matt. 6:24, and Luke 16:13, as to the impossibility of serving two masters; Luke 14:26, as to the claims of parents relatively to those of Christ; John 12:25, of disregard for one’s life relatively to the claims of Christ; Eph. 5:29, negatively, of one’s flesh, i.e. of one’s own, and therefore a man’s wife as one with him.

Note: In 1 John 3:15, he who “hates” his brother is called a murderer; for the sin lies in the inward disposition, of which the act is only the outward expression.

B. Adjective.

stugetos (στυγνητός, 4767), “hateful” (from stugeo, “to hate,” not found in the NT), is used in Titus 3:3.¶

C. Nouns.

1. echthra (ἐχθρα, 2189), “hatred”: see ENMITY.

2. theostuges (θεοστυγής, 2319), from theos, “God,” and stugeo (see B), is used in Rom. 1:30, KJV, and RV, marg., “haters of God,” RV, “hateful to God”; the former rendering is appropriate to what is expressed by the next words, “insolent,” “haughty,” but the RV text seems to give the true meaning. Lightfoot quotes from the Epistle of Clement of Rome, in confirmation of this, “those who practice these things are hateful to God.”¶

HAUGHTY

huperephanos (ὑπερήφανος, 5244), “showing oneself above others” (hyper, “over,” phainomai, “to appear”), though often denoting preeminent, is always used in the NT in the evil sense of “arrogant, disdainful, haughty”; it is rendered “haughty” in Rom. 1:30 and 2 Tim. 3:2, RV, KJV, “proud,” but “proud” in both versions in Luke 1:51; Jas. 4:6, and 1 Pet. 5:5; in the last two it is set in opposition to tapeinos, “humble, lowly.” Cf. the noun huperephania, Mark 7:22, “pride”.¶

HAVE

(Note: The following are distinct from the word when it is auxiliary to the tenses of other verbs.)

1. echo (ἔχω, 2192), the usual verb for “to have,” is used with the following meanings: (a) “to hold, in the hand,” etc., e.g., Rev. 1:16; 5:8; (b) “to hold fast, keep,” Luke 19:20; metaphorically, of the mind and conduct, e.g., Mark 16:8; John 14:21; Rom. 1:28; 1 Tim. 3:9; 2 Tim. 1:13; (c) “to hold on, cling to, be next to,” e.g., of accompaniment, Heb. 6:9, “things that accompany (salvation),” lit., “the things holding themselves of salvation” (RV, marg., “are near to”); of place, Mark 1:38, “next (towns),” lit., “towns holding nigh”; of time, e.g., Luke 13:33, “(the day) following,” lit., “the holding (day)”; Acts 13:44; 20:15; 21:26; (d) “to hold, to count, consider, regard,” e.g., Matt. 14:5; 21:46; Mark 11:32; Luke 14:18; Philem. 17; (e) “to involve,” Heb. 10:35; Jas. 1:4; 1 John 4:18; (f) “to wear,” of clothing, arms, etc., e.g., Matt. 3:4; 22:12; John 18:10; (g) “to be with child,” of a woman, Mark 13:17; Rom. 9:10 (lit., “having conception”); (h) “to possess,” the most frequent use, e.g., Matt. 8:20; 19:22; Acts 9:14; 1 Thess. 3:6; (i) of complaints, disputes, Matt. 5:23; Mark 11:25; Acts 24:19; Rev. 2:4, 20; (j) of ability, power, e.g., Luke 12:4; Acts 4:14 (lit., “had nothing to say”); (k) of necessity, e.g., Luke 12:50; Acts 23:17-19; (l) “to be in a certain condition,” as of readiness, Acts 21:12 (lit., “I have readily”); of illness, Matt. 4:24, “all that were sick” (lit., “that had themselves sickly”); Mark 5:23, “lieth (lit., “hath herself”) at the point of death”; Mark 16:18 “they shall recover” (lit., “shall have themselves well”), John 4:52, “he began to amend” (lit., “he had himself better”); of evil works, 1 Tim. 5:25, “they that are otherwise,” (lit., “the things having otherwise”); to be so, e.g., Acts 7:1, “are these things so?” (lit., “have these things thus?”), of time, Acts 24:25, “for this time” (lit., “the thing having now”).

2. apecho (ἀπέχω, 568) denotes “to have in full, to have received” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), Matt. 6:2, 5, 16, RV, “have received,” for KJV “have”; Luke 6:24, KJV and RV, “have received,” but Phil. 4:18, “I have”; Philem. 15, “(that) thou shouldest have (him)” (KJV, “receive”). Deissmann, in Light from the Ancient East, and Moulton and Milligan (Vocab. of Gk. Test.) show that the verb was constantly used as a technical expression in drawing up a receipt. Consequently in the Sermon on the Mount we are led to understand ‘they have received their reward’ as ‘they have signed the receipt of their reward: their right to receive their reward is realized, precisely as if they had already given a receipt for it.’”

Is there not a hint of this in Paul’s word to Philemon concerning receiving Onesimus (v. 17)? Philemon would give the apostle a receipt for his payment in sending him. This is in keeping with the metaphorical terms of finance in vv. 18, 19. See ABSTAIN.

3. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to begin to be, come to pass, happen,” is rendered “have” in Matt. 18:12; “had” in Acts 15:2; “shall have” in 1 Cor. 4:5, lit., “praise shall be,” or come to pass. See BECOME.

4. metambano (μεταλαμβάνω, 3335), “to have,” or “get a share of,” is rendered “I have (a convenient season),” in Acts 24:25. See EAT, PARTAKE, RECEIVE, TAKE.

5. huparcho (ὑπάρχω, 5225), “to be in existence, to be ready, at hand,” is translated by the verb “to have” in Acts 3:6, lit., “silver and gold is not to me” (in the next clause, “such as I have,” echo is used); 4:37, “having (land),” lit., “(land) being (to him)”; Matt. 19:21, “that (thou) hast,” lit., “(things that) are (thine),” i.e., “thy belongings”; similarly Luke 12:33; 44; 14:33. See BEING.

6. antiballo (ἀντιβάλλω, 474), lit., “to throw in turn, exchange” (anti, “corresponding to,” ballo, “to throw”), hence, metaphorically, “to exchange thoughts,” is used in Luke 24:27, “ye have,” i.e., “ye exchange.”¶

7. eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” is often used in its various forms with some case of the personal pronoun, to signify “to be to,” or “of, a person,” e.g., Matt. 19:27, “(what then) shall we have,” lit., “what then shall be to us?”; Acts 21:23, “we have four men,” lit., “there are to us, etc.”

8. enduo (ἐνδύω, 1746), “to put on,” is rendered “having on” in Eph. 6:14. See CLOTHE.

Notes: (1) In John 5:4 (in those mss. which contain the passage), katecho, “to hold fast,” is used in the passive voice, in the phrase “whatsoever disease he had,” lit., “(by whatsoever disease) he was held.” (2) In Mark 12:22, in some mss., lambano, “to take” or “receive,” is translated “had,” in the statement “the seven had her”; in Acts 25:16, RV, “have had” (KJV, “have”); in Heb. 11:36, “had.” (3) In Matt. 27:19, “Have thou nothing to do with that righteous man” translates what is lit. “nothing to thee and that righteous man,” the verb being omitted. Similarly with the phrase, “What have I to do with thee?” lit., “what (is) to me and thee?” Mark 5:7; Luke 8:28; John 2:4, where Westcott translates it “What is there to Me and to thee?”; Ellicott, “What is that to Me and to thee,” i.e., “What is My concern and thine in the matter?” There is certainly nothing disparaging in the question. On the contrary, it answers what must have been the thought in Mary’s heart, and suggests that while there is no obligation either on Him or her, yet the need is a case for rendering help. For the construction with the plural pronoun see Matt. 8:29; Mark 1:24; Luke 4:34. (4) In Heb. 4:13, “with whom we have to do” is, lit., “with whom

(is) the account (logos) to us.” (5) In Heb. 13:5, “such things as ye have” is, lit., “the (things) present.” (6) In Mark 5:26, “all that she had” is, lit., “all the (things) with her.” (7) For Luke 15:31, KJV, “all that I have,” lit., “all my (things),” see RV. (8) For eneimi, Luke 11:41, “ye have,” see WITHIN, Note (h).

HAVEN

limen (λιμήν, 3040) is mentioned in Acts 27:8, “Fair Havens,” and v. 12; for the first of these see FAIR. The first mention in the Bible is in Gen. 49:13 (see RV marg.).¶

HAVOC

1. portheo (πορθέω, 4199), “to destroy, ravage, lay waste,” is used of the persecution inflicted by Saul of Tarsus on the church in Jerusalem, Acts 9:21, and Gal. 1:23, RV, “made havoc,” for KJV, “destroyed”; Gal. 1:13, ditto, for KJV, “wasted.” See DESTROY, Note.¶

2. luminomai (λυμαίνομαι, 3075), “to maltreat, outrage” (lume, “an outrage”), is translated “made havoc” in Acts 8:3, KJV (RV, “laid waste.”)¶

For HAY see GRASS

HAZARD

1. paradidomi (παραδίδωμι, 3860), “to give over, deliver,” signifies “to risk, to hazard,” in Acts 15:26, of Barnabas and Paul, who “hazarded” their lives for the name of the Lord Jesus. See BETRAY.

2. paraboleuomai (παραβουλεύομαι, 3851), lit., “to throw aside” (para, “aside,” ballo, “to throw”), hence, “to expose oneself to danger, to hazard one’s life,” is said of Epaphroditus in Phil. 2:30, RV, “hazarding.” Some mss. have parabouleuomai here, “to consult amiss,” KJV, “not regarding.”¶

HE

Note: This pronoun is generally part of the translation of a verb. Frequently it translates the article before nouns, adjectives, numerals, adverbs, prepositional phrases and the participial form of verbs. Apart from these it translates one of the following:

1. autos (αὐτός, 846), “he himself and no other,” emphatic, e.g., Matt. 1:21, where the RV brings out the emphasis by the rendering “it is He”; 3:11 (last clause), where the repeated “He” brings out the emphasis; in some cases it can be marked only by a circumlocution which would not constitute a translation, e.g., 8:24; this use is very frequent, especially in the Gospels, the epistles of John and the Apocalypse; see also, e.g., Eph. 2:14; 4:11; 5:23, 27. See SAME, SELF, THIS, VERY.

2. houtos (οὗτος, 3778), “this, this person here,” is always emphatic; it is used with this meaning, sometimes to refer to what precedes, e.g., Matt. 5:19, “he (shall be called great)”; John 6:46, “he (hath seen)”; often rendered “this,” e.g., Rom. 9:9, or “this man,” e.g., Matt. 27:58, RV; Jas. 1:25; “the same,” e.g., Luke 9:48. See THAT, THIS, THESE.

3. ekeinos (ἐκεῖνος, 1565) denotes “that one, that person” (in contrast to No. 2); its use marks special distinction, favorable or unfavorable; this form of emphasis should always be noted; e.g., John 2:21 “(But) He (spake)”; 5:19, “(what things soever) He (doeth)”; 7:11; 2 Cor. 10:18, lit., “for not he that commendeth himself, he (ekeinos) is approved”; 2 Tim. 2:13, “He (in contrast to “we”) abideth faithful”; 1 John 3:3, “(even as) He (is pure)”; v. 5, “He (was manifested)”; v. 7, “He (is righteous)”; v. 16, “He laid down”; 4:17, “(as) He (is).” See OTHER, THAT, THIS.

Note: The indefinite pronoun tis, “anyone, any man,” is rendered “he” in Acts 4:35, KJV (RV, rightly, “any one”); in Heb. 10:28, RV, “a man.”

HE HIMSELF

1. autos (αὐτός, 846): see No. 1, above.

2. heauton (ἐαυτοῦ, 1438), “oneself, himself,” a reflexive of No. 1, is rendered “he himself” in Luke 23:2 and Acts 25:4.

HE THAT

1. hos (ὅς, 3739), the relative pronoun “who,” is sometimes rendered “he that,” e.g., Matt. 10:38; with the particle an, expressing possibility, uncertainty or a condition, signifying “whosoever,” Mark 3:29, KJV (RV, “whosoever”); 4:25 and 9:40 (with an, in the best mss.). See WHATSOEVER, WHICH, WHO, WHOSOEVER.

2. hosge “who even” (No. 1, and the particle ge), indicates a greater in regard to a less, Rom. 8:32, “He that (spared not).”

Notes: (1) In Rev. 13:10, ei tis, “if anyone,” is rendered “if any man” in the RV, for KJV, “he that.”

(2) In Matt. 23:12, hostis, No. 1, combined with the indefinite pronoun tis (see preceding note), is properly rendered “whosoever,” RV, for KJV, “he that.”

HEAD

kephale (κεφαλή, 2776), besides its natural significance, is used (a) figuratively in Rom. 12:20, of heaping coals of fire on a “head” (see COALS); in Acts 18:6, “Your blood be upon your own heads,” i.e., “your blood-guiltiness rest upon your own persons,” a mode of expression frequent in the OT, and perhaps here directly connected with Ezek. 3:18, 20; 33:6, 8; see also Lev. 20:16; 2 Sam. 1:16; 1 Kings 2:37; (b) metaphorically, of the authority or direction of God in relation to Christ, of Christ in relation to believing men, of the husband in relation to the wife, 1 Cor. 11:3; of Christ in relation to the Church, Eph. 1:22; 4:15; 5:23; Col. 1:18; 2:19; of Christ in relation to principalities and powers, Col. 2:10. As to 1 Cor. 11:10, taken in connection with the context, the word “authority” probably stands, by metonymy, for a sign of authority (RV), the angels being witnesses of the preeminent relationship as established by God in the creation of man as just mentioned, with the spiritual significance regarding the position of Christ in relation to the Church; cf. Eph. 3:10; it is used of Christ as the foundation of the spiritual building set forth by the Temple, with its “corner stone,” Matt. 21:42; symbolically also of the imperial rulers of the Roman power, as seen in the apocalyptic visions, Rev. 13:1, 3; 17:3, 7, 9.

HEAD (to wound in the) kephalioo, or kephalioo (κεφαλαίω, 2775), from kephalion, a diminutive of kephale, usually meant “to sum up, to bring under heads”; in Mark 12:4 it is used for “wounding on the head,” the only place where it has this meaning.¶

HEADLONG (to cast, to fall)

1. katakremnizo (κατακρημνίζω, 2630) signifies “to throw over a precipice” (kata, “down,” kremnos, “a steep bank,” etc.), said of the purpose of the people of Nazareth to destroy Christ, Luke 4:29.¶

2. prenes (πρηνής, 4248), an adjective denoting “headlong, prone,” is used with the verb ginomai, “to become,” in Acts 1:18, of the death of Judas, “falling headlong”; various suggestions have been made as to the actual details; some ascribe to the word the meaning “swelling up.”¶

HEADSTRONG (RV), HEADY (KJV)

propetes (προπετής, 4312) lit. means “falling forwards” (from pro, “forwards,” and pipto, “to fall”); it is used metaphorically to signify “precipitate, rash, reckless,” and is said (a) of persons, 2 Tim. 3:4; “headstrong” is the appropriate rendering; (b) of things, Acts 19:36, RV, “(nothing) rash” (KJV, “rashly”).¶

HEAL, HEALING

A. Verbs.

1. therapeuo (θεραπεύω, 2323) primarily signifies “to serve as a therapon, an attendant”; then, “to care for the sick, to treat, cure, heal” (Eng., “therapeutics”). It is chiefly used in Matthew and Luke, once in John (5:10), and, after the Acts, only Rev. 13:3 and 12. See CURE.

2. iaomai (προτρέχω, 4390), “to heal,” is used (a) of physical treatment 22 times; in Matt. 5:28, KJV, “made whole,” RV, “healed”; so in Acts 9:34; (b) figuratively, of spiritual “healing,” Matt. 13:15; John 12:40; Acts 28:27; Heb. 12:13; 1 Pet. 2:24; possibly, Jas. 5:16 includes both (a) and (b); some mss. have the word, with sense (b), in Luke 4:18. Apart from this last, Luke, the physician, uses the word fifteen times. See WHOLE.

3. sozo (σώζω, 4982), “to save,” is translated by the verb “to heal” in the KJV of Mark 5:23 and Luke 8:36 (RV, “to make whole”; so KJV frequently); the idea is that of saving from disease and its effects. See SAVE.

4. diasozo (διασώζω, 1295), “to save thoroughly” (dia, “through,” and No. 3), is translated “heal” in Luke 7:3, KJV (RV, “save”). See ESCAPE.

B. Nouns.

1. therapeia (θεραπεία, 2322), akin to A, No. 1, primarily denotes “care, attention,” Luke 12:42 (see HOUSEHOLD); then, “medical service, healing” (Eng., “therapy”), Luke 9:11; Rev. 22:2, of the effects of the leaves of the tree of life, perhaps here with the meaning “health.”¶

2. iama (ἰαμα, 2386), akin to A, No. 2, formerly signified “a means of healing”; in the NT, “a healing” (the result of the act), used in the plural, in 1 Cor. 12:9, 28, 30, RV, “healings”; of divinely imparted gifts in the churches in apostolic times.¶

3. iasis (ἰασις, 2392), akin to A, No. 2, stresses the process as reaching completion, Luke 13:32, “cures,” of the acts of Christ in the days of His flesh; Acts 4:22, 30, “to heal,” lit. ‘unto healing.’¶

HEALTH (to be in)

hugiano (ὕγιαίνω, 5198) denotes “to be healthy, sound, in good health” (Eng., “hygiene”), rendered “mayest be in health,” in 3 John 2; rendered “safe and sound” in Luke 15:27. See SAFE, D, No. 2, SOUND, WHOLE, B, No. 1.

Note: In Acts 27:34, soteria, “salvation, safety,” is translated “health” in the KJV; the RV, gives the right meaning, “safety.”

HEAP (to)

1. soreuo (σωρεύω, 4987), “to heap one thing on another,” is said of “heaping” coals of fire on the head, Rom. 12:20 (for the meaning see COALS); in 2 Tim. 3:6 it is used metaphorically of women “laden” (or overwhelmed) with sins. See LADEN.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:22.¶

2. episoreuo (ἐπισωρεύω, 2002), “to heap upon” or “together” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically in 2 Tim. 4:3 of appropriating a number of teachers to suit the liking of those who do so. The reference may be to those who, like the Athenians, run about to hear and follow those who proclaim new ideas of their own invention.

HEAR, HEARING

A. Verbs.

1. akouo (ἀκούω, 191), the usual word denoting “to hear,” is used (a) intransitively, e.g., Matt. 11:15; Mark 4:23; (b) transitively when the object is expressed, sometimes in the accusative case, sometimes in the genitive. Thus in Acts 9:7, “hearing the voice,” the noun “voice” is in the partitive genitive case [i.e., hearing (something) of], whereas in 22:9, “they heard not the voice,” the construction is with the accusative. This removes the idea of any contradiction. The former indicates a “hearing” of the sound, the latter indicates the meaning or message of the voice (this they did not hear). “The former denotes the sensational perception, the latter (the accusative case) the thing perceived” (Cremer). In John 5:25, 28, the genitive case is used, indicating a “sensational perception” that the Lord’s voice is sounding; in 3:8, of “hearing” the wind, the accusative is used, stressing “the thing perceived.”

That God “hears” prayer signifies that He answers prayer, e.g., John 9:31; 1 John 5:14, 15. Sometimes the verb is used with para (“from beside”), e.g., John 1:40, “one of the two which heard John speak,” lit., “heard from beside John,” suggesting that he stood beside him; in John 8:26, 40, indicating the intimate fellowship of the Son with the Father; the same construction is used in Acts 10:22 and 2 Tim. 2:2, in the latter case, of the intimacy between Paul and Timothy. See HEARKEN.

2. eisakouo (εἰσακούω, 1522), “to listen to” (eis, to, and No. 1), has two meanings, (a) “to hear and to obey,” 1 Cor. 14:21, “they will not hear”; (b) “to hear so as to answer,” of God’s answer to prayer, Matt. 6:7; Luke 1:13; Acts 10:31; Heb. 5:7.¶

3. diakouo (διακούομαι, 1251), “to hear through, hear fully” (dia, “through,” and No. 1), is used technically, of “hearing” judicially, in Acts 23:35, of Felix in regard to the charges against Paul.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 1:16; Job 9:33.¶

4. epakouo (ἐπακούω, 1873), “to listen to, hear with favor, at or upon an occasion” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is used in 2 Cor. 6:2 (RV, “hearken”).¶

5. epakroaomai (ἐπακροάομαι, 1874), “to listen attentively to” (epi, used intensively, and a verb akin to No. 1), is used in Acts 16:25, “(the prisoners) were listening to (them),” RV, expressive of rapt attention.¶

6. proakouo (προακούω, 4257) signifies “to hear before” (pro), Col. 1:5, where Lightfoot suggests that the preposition contrasts what they heard before, the true gospel, with the false gospel of their recent teachers.¶

7. parakouo (παρακούω, 3878) primarily signifies “to overhear, hear amiss or imperfectly” (para, “beside, amiss,” and No. 1); then (in the NT) “to hear without taking heed, to neglect to hear,” Matt. 18:17 (twice); in Mark 5:36 the best mss. have this verb, which the RV renders “not heeding” (marg., “overhearing”); some mss. have No. 1, KJV, “hearing.” It seems obvious that the Lord paid no attention to those from the ruler’s house and their message that his daughter was dead.¶ Cf. the noun parakoe, “disobedience.”

B. Nouns.

1. akoe (ἀκοή, 189), akin to A, No. 1, denotes (a) “the sense of hearing,” 1 Cor. 12:17; 2 Pet. 2:8; a combination of verb and noun is used in phrases which have been termed Hebraic as they express somewhat literally an OT phraseology, e.g., “By hearing ye shall hear,” Matt. 13:14; Acts 28:26, RV, a mode of expression conveying emphasis; (b) “the organ of hearing,” Mark 7:35, “ears”; Luke 7:1, RV, “ears,” for KJV, “audience”; Acts 17:20; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; Heb. 5:11, “dull of hearing,” lit., “dull as to ears”; (c) “a thing heard, a message or teaching,” John 12:38, “report”; Rom. 10:16; 1 Thess. 2:13, “the word of the message,” lit. “the word of hearing” (KJV, “which ye heard”); Heb. 4:2, “the word of hearing,” RV, for KJV, “the word preached”; in a somewhat similar sense, “a rumor, report,” Matt. 4:24; 14:1; Mark 1:28, KJV, “fame,” RV, “report”; Matt. 24:6; Mark 13:7, “rumors (of wars)”; (d) “the receiving of a message,” Rom. 10:17, something more than the mere sense of “hearing” [see (a)]; so with the phrase “the hearing of faith,” Gal. 3:2, 5, which it seems better to understand so than under (c). See EAR, FAME, PREACH, REPORT, RUMOR.¶

Notes: (1) For diagnosis (investigation, followed by decision), rendered “hearing” in Acts 25:21, KJV, see DECISION. (2) For the phrase to be dull of hearing, lit., “to hear heavily,” Matt. 13:15; Acts 28:27, see DULL. (3) For akroaterion, “a place of hearing,” Acts 25:23, see PLACE.¶

akroates (ἀκροατής, 202), from akroaomai, “to listen,” is used in Rom. 2:13, “of a law”; Jas. 1:22, 23, “of the word”; v. 25, “a (forgetful) hearer.”¶

Note: In Eph. 4:29 and 2 Tim. 2:14, the verb akouo, “to hear,” is rendered “hearers” in the KJV (RV, “them that hear”).

HEARKEN

1. akouo (ἀκούω, 191), “to hear,” is rendered

“hearken” in the KJV and RV, in Mark 4:3; Acts 4:19; 7:2; 15:13; Jas. 2:5; in the RV only, in Acts 3:22, 23; 13:16 (KJV, “give audience”); 15:12, “hearkened” (KJV “gave audience”). See HEAR, No. 1.

Note: In Acts 12:13, hupakouo, lit., “to hearken,” with the idea of stillness, or attention (hupo, “under,” akouo, “to hear”), signifies “to answer a knock at a door,” RV, “to answer” (KJV, “to hearken”). See OBEY.

2. epakouo (ἐπακούω, 1873), denotes “to hearken to,” 2 Cor. 6:2, RV (see HEAR, A, No. 4).¶

3. enotizomai (ἐνωτίζομαι, 1801), “to give ear to, to hearken” (from en, “in,” and ous, “an ear”), is used in Acts 2:14, in Peter’s address to the men of Israel.¶

4. peitharcheo (πειθαρχέω, 3980), “to obey one in authority, be obedient” (peithomai, “to be persuaded,” arche, “rule”), is translated “to hearken unto” in Acts 27:21, in Paul’s reminder to the shipwrecked mariners that they should have given heed to his counsel. See OBEY.

HEART, HEARTILY

kardia (καρδία, 2588), “the heart” (Eng., “cardiac,” etc.), the chief organ of physical life (“for the life of the flesh is in the blood,” Lev. 17:11), occupies the most important place in the human system. By an easy transition the word came to stand for man’s entire mental and moral activity, both the rational and the emotional elements. In other words, the heart is used figuratively for the hidden springs of the personal life. “The Bible describes human depravity as in the ‘heart,’ because sin is a principle which has its seat in the center of man’s inward life, and then ‘defiles’ the whole circuit of his action, Matt. 15:19, 20. On the other hand, Scripture regards the heart as the sphere of Divine influence, Rom. 2:15; Acts 15:9.... The heart, as lying deep within, contains ‘the hidden man,’ 1 Pet. 3:4, the real man. It represents the true character but conceals it” (J. Laidlaw, in Hastings’ Bible Dic.).

As to its usage in the NT it denotes (a) the seat of physical life, Acts 14:17; Jas. 5:5; (b) the seat of moral nature and spiritual life, the seat of grief, John 14:1; Rom. 9:2; 2 Cor. 2:4; joy, John 16:22; Eph. 5:19; the desires, Matt. 5:28; 2 Pet. 2:14; the affections, Luke 24:32; Acts 21:13; the perceptions, John 12:40; Eph. 4:18; the thoughts, Matt. 9:4; Heb. 4:12; the understanding, Matt. 13:15; Rom. 1:21; the reasoning powers, Mark 2:6; Luke 24:38; the imagination, Luke 1:51; conscience, Acts 2:37; 1 John 3:20; the intentions, Heb. 4:12, cf. 1 Pet. 4:1; purpose, Acts 11:23; 2 Cor. 9:7; the will, Rom. 6:17; Col. 3:15; faith, Mark 11:23; Rom. 10:10; Heb. 3:12.

The heart, in its moral significance in the OT, includes the emotions, the reason and the will.

2. psuche (ψυχή, 5590), the soul, or life, is rendered “heart” in Eph. 6:6 (marg., “soul”), “doing the will of God from the heart.” In Col. 3:23, a form of the word psuche preceded by ek, from, lit., “from (the) soul,” is rendered “heartily.”

Notes: (1) The RV, “heart” is substituted for KJV, “bowels,” in Col. 3:12; Philem. 7, 12, 20. (2) In 2 Cor. 3:3, the RV has “tables that are hearts of flesh,” for KJV, “fleshy tables of the heart.” (3) In Eph. 1:18, the best mss. have kardia, “(the eyes of your) heart”; some have dianoia, “understanding” (KJV). (4) In Heb. 8:10 and 10:16, the KJV has “in their hearts” and “into their hearts”; RV, “on their heart.” (5) In Luke 21:26, where there is no word for “hearts” in the original, the RV has “men fainting (for fear).” (6) In 2 Cor. 7:2, the verb choreo, to make room for, “receive” (KJV), is translated, or rather, interpreted, “open your hearts,” RV, marg., “make room for (us).”

HEART (hardness of)

sklerokardia (σκληροκαρδία, 4641), “hardness of heart” (skleros, “hard,” and kardia), is used in Matt. 19:8; Mark 10:5; 16:14.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 10:16; Jer. 4:4.¶

HEART (knowing the)

kardiognostes (καρδιογνώστης, 2589), “a knower of hearts” (kardia and ginosko, “to know”), is used in Acts 1:24; 15:8.¶

HEAT

A. Nouns.

1. kauson (καύσων, 2742) denotes “a burning heat” (from kaio, “to burn”; cf. Eng., “caustic,” “cauterize”), Matt. 20:12; Luke 12:55 (KJV, “heat”), RV, in each place, “scorching heat” (marg. “hot wind”); in Jas. 1:11, “a burning heat,” KJV, RV, “the scorching wind” like the sirocco. Cf. Amos 4:9, where the Sept. has purosis, “burning” (pur, “fire”). See BURNING.

2. kauma (καῦμα, 2738), “heat” (akin to No. 1), signifies “the result of burning,” or “the heat produced,” Rev. 7:16; 16:9;¶ cf. kaumatizo, “to scorch,” kausis, “burning,” kauteriazomai, “to brand, sear.”

3. therme (θέρμη, 2329) denotes “warmth, heat,” Acts 28:3 (Eng., “thermal,” etc.).¶

B. Verb.

kausoo (καυσώ, 2741) was used as a medical term, of “a fever”; in the NT, “to burn with great heat” (akin to A, No. 1), said of the future destruction of the natural elements, 2 Pet. 3:10, 12, “with fervent heat,” passive voice, lit.. “being burned.”¶

For HEATHEN see GENTILES

HEAVEN, HEAVENLY (-IES)

A. Nouns.

1. ouranos (οὐρανός, 3772), probably akin to ornumi, “to lift, to heave,” is used in the NT (a) of “the aerial heavens,” e.g., Matt. 6:26; 8:20; Acts 10:12; 11:6 (RV, “heaven,” in each place, KJV, “air”); Jas. 5:18; (b) “the sidereal,” e.g., Matt. 24:29, 35; Mark 13:25, 31; Heb. 11:12, RV, “heaven,” KJV, “sky”; Rev. 6:14; 20:11; they, (a) and (b), were created by the Son of God, Heb. 1:10, as also by God the Father, Rev. 10:6; (c) “the eternal dwelling place of God,” Matt. 5:16; 12:50; Rev. 3:12; 11:13; 16:11; 20:9. From thence the Son of God descended to become incarnate, John 3:13, 31; 6:38, 42. In His ascension Christ “passed through the heavens,” Heb. 4:14, RV; He “ascended far above all the heavens,” Eph. 4:10, and was “made higher than the heavens,” Heb. 7:26; He “sat down on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens,” Heb. 8:1; He is “on the right hand of God,” having gone into heaven, 1 Pet. 3:22. Since His ascension it is the scene of His present life and activity, e.g., Rom. 8:34; Heb. 9:24. From thence the Holy Spirit descended at Pentecost, 1 Pet. 1:12. It is the abode of the angels, e.g., Matt. 18:10; 22:30; cf. Rev. 3:5. Thither Paul was “caught up,” whether in the body or out of the body, he knew not, 2 Cor. 12:2. It is to be the eternal dwelling place of the saints in resurrection glory, 2 Cor. 5:1. From thence Christ will descend to the air to receive His saints at the Rapture, 1 Thess. 4:16; Phil. 3:20, 21, and will subsequently come with His saints and with His holy angels at His second advent, Matt. 24:30; 2 Thess. 1:7. In the present life “heaven” is the region of the spiritual citizenship of believers, Phil. 3:20. The present “heavens,” with the earth, are to pass away, 2 Pet. 3:10, “being on fire,” v. 12 (see v. 7); Rev. 20:11, and new “heavens” and earth are to be created, 2 Pet. 3:13; Rev. 21:1, with Isa. 65:17, e.g.

In Luke 15:18, 21, “heaven” is used, by metonymy, for God. See AIR.

Notes: (1) For the phrase in Luke 11:13, see Note on B, No. 2. (2) In Luke 11:2, the KJV, “as in heaven,” translates a phrase found in some mss.

2. mesouranema (μεσουράνημα, 3321) denotes “mid-heaven,” or the midst of the heavens (mesos, “middle,” and No. 1), Rev. 8:13; 14:6; 19:17.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. ouranios (οὐράνιος, 3770), signifying “of heaven, heavenly,” corresponding to A, No. 1, is used (a) as an appellation of God the Father, Matt. 6:14, 26, 32, “your heavenly Father”; 15:13, “My heavenly Father”; (b) as descriptive of the holy angels, Luke 2:13; (c) of the vision seen by Paul, Acts 26:19.¶

2. epouranios (ἐπουράνιος, 2032), “heavenly,” what pertains to, or is in, heaven (epi, in the sense of “pertaining to,” not here, “above”), has meanings corresponding to some of the meanings of ouranos, A, No. 1. It is used (a) of God the Father, Matt. 18:35; (b) of the place where Christ “sitteth at the right hand of God” (i.e., in a position of divine authority), Eph. 1:20; and of the present position of believers in relationship to Christ, Eph. 2:6; where they possess “every spiritual blessing,” 1:3; (c) of Christ as “the Second Man,” and all those who are related to Him spiritually, 1 Cor. 15:48; (d) of those whose sphere of activity or existence is above, or in contrast to that of earth, of “principalities and powers,” Eph. 3:10; of “spiritual hosts of wickedness,” 6:12, RV, “in heavenly places,” for KJV, “in high places”; (e) of the Holy Spirit, Heb. 6:4; (f) of “heavenly things,” as the subjects of the teaching of Christ, John 3:12, and as consisting of the spiritual and “heavenly” sanctuary and “true tabernacle” and all that appertains thereto in relation to Christ and His sacrifice as antitypical of the earthly tabernacle and sacrifices under the Law, Heb. 8:5; 9:23; (g) of the “calling” of believers, Heb. 3:1; (h) of heaven as the abode of the saints, “a better country” than that of earth, Heb. 11:16, and of the spiritual Jerusalem, 12:22; (i) of the kingdom of Christ in its future manifestation, 2 Tim. 4:18; (j) of all beings and things, animate and inanimate, that are “above the earth,” Phil. 2:10; (k) of the resurrection and glorified bodies of believers, 1 Cor. 15:49; (l) of the “heavenly orbs,” 1 Cor. 15:40 (“celestial,” twice, and so rendered here only).¶

Note: In connection with (a), the word “heavenly,” used of God the Father in Luke 11:13, represents the phrase ex ouranou, “from heaven.”

C. Adverb.

ouranóthen (οὐρανόθεν, 3771), formed from A, No. 1, and denoting “from heaven,” is used of (a) the aerial heaven, Acts 14:17; (b) heaven, as the uncreated sphere of God’s abode, 26:13.¶

HEAVY, HEAVINESS

A. Nouns.

1. lupe (λύπη, 3077), “grief, sorrow,” is rendered “heaviness” in the KJV of Rom. 9:2; 2 Cor. 2:1 (RV, “sorrow,” in both places). See GRIEF, SORROW.

2. katepheia (κατήφεια, 2726) probably denotes a downcast look, expressive of sorrow; hence, “dejection, heaviness”; it is used in Jas. 4:9.¶

B. Verbs.

1. ademoneo (ἀδημονέω, 85), “to be troubled, much distressed,” is used of the Lord’s sorrow in Gethsemane, Matt. 26:37; Mark 14:33, KJV, “to be very heavy,” RV, “to be sore troubled”; of Epaphroditus, because the saints at Philippi had received news of his sickness, Phil. 2:26, KJV, “was full of heaviness,” RV, “was sore troubled. See TROUBLE, B, No 12.¶

2. lupeo (λυπέω, 3076), “to distress, grieve” (akin to A, No. 1), is rendered “are in heaviness” in 1 Pet. 1:6, KJV (RV, “have been put to grief”); here, as frequently, it is in the passive voice. See GRIEF, SORROWFUL.

3. bareo (βαρέω, 916), always in the passive voice in the NT, is rendered “were heavy” in Matt. 26:43; Mark 14:40; Luke 9:32. See BURDEN.

Note: For “heavy laden,” Matt. 11:28, see LADE, No. 3.

C. Adjective.

barus (βαρύς, 926), “heavy” (akin to B, No. 3), is so rendered in Matt. 23:4. See GRIEVOUS.

HEDGE

phragmos (φραγμός, 5418) denotes any sort of fence, hedge, palings or wall (akin to phrasso, “to fence in, stop”). It is used (a) in its literal sense, in Matt. 21:33, lit. “(he put) a hedge (around)”; Mark 12:1; Luke 14:23; (b) metaphorically, of the “partition” which separated Gentile from Jew, which was broken down by Christ through the efficacy of His expiatory sacrifice, Eph. 2:14.¶

HEED (to give, to take)

1. blepo (βλέπω, 991), “to look,” see, usually implying more especially an intent, earnest contemplation, is rendered “take heed” in Matt. 24:4; Mark 4:24; 13:5, 9, 23, 33;

Luke 8:18; 21:8; 1 Cor. 3:10; 8:9; 10:12; Gal. 5:15; Col. 2:8 (KJV, “beware”); 4:17; Heb. 3:12. See BEHOLD, BEWARE, LIE, LOOK, PERCEIVE, REGARD, SEE.

2. horao (ὁράω, 3708), “to see,” usually expressing the sense of vision, is rendered “take heed” in Matt. 16:6; 18:10, KJV (RV, “see”); Mark 8:15; Luke 12:15; Acts 22:26 (KJV only). See BEHOLD, SEE.

3. prosecho (προσέχω, 4337), lit., “to hold to,” signifies “to turn to, turn one’s attention to”; hence, “to give heed”; it is rendered “take heed” in Matt. 6:1; Luke 17:3; 21:34; Acts 5:35; 20:28; 2 Pet. 1:19; to give heed to, in Acts 8:6, 10; in v. 11 (KJV, “had regard to”); 16:14 (KJV, “attended unto”); 1 Tim. 1:4; 4:1, 13 (KJV, “give attendance to”); Titus 1:14; Heb. 2:1, lit., “to give heed more earnestly.” See ATTEND, BEWARE, GIVE, REGARD.

4. epecho (ἐπέχω, 1907), lit., “to hold upon,” then, “to direct towards, to give attention to,” is rendered “gave heed,” in Acts 3:5; “take heed,” in 1 Tim. 4:16. See HOLD (FORTH), MARK, STAY.

Notes: (1) In Luke 11:35, KJV, skoepo, “to look,” is translated “take heed (that),” RV, “look (whether).” (2) Nos. 2 and 3 are used together in Matt. 16:6; Nos. 2 and 1, in that order, in Mark 8:15; but in Luke 12:15 the RV rightly follows No. 2 by “keep yourselves from” (phulasso, “to guard”). (3) For the RV of Mark 5:36, “not heeding,” see under HEAR, No. 7. (4) In Rom. 11:21 the KJV adds “take heed,” because of a variant reading which introduces the clause by a conjunctive phrase signifying “lest.”

HEEL

pterna (πτέρνα, 4418) is found in John 13:18, where the Lord quotes from Ps. 41:9; the metaphor is that of tripping up an antagonist in wrestling.¶ Cf. the verb in Gen. 27:36; Jer. 9:4; Hos. 12:3.

HEIFER

damalis (δάμαλις, 1151), etymologically “one of fit age to be tamed to the yoke” (damao, “to tame”), occurs in Heb. 9:13, with reference to the “red heifer” of Num. 19.¶

HEIGHT

1. hupsos (ὕψος, 5311), “a summit, top,” is translated “height” in Eph. 3:18, where it may refer either to “the love of Christ” or to “the fullness of God”; the two are really inseparable, for they who are filled into the fullness of God thereby enter appreciatively into the love of Christ, which “surpasseth knowledge”; in Rev. 21:16, of the measurement of the heavenly Jerusalem. See ESTATE, HIGH.

2. hupsoma (ὑψωμα, 5313), more concrete than No. 1, is used (a) of “a height,” as a mountain or anything definitely termed a “height,” Rom. 8:39 (metaphorically); (b) of “a high thing” lifted up as a barrier or in antagonistic exaltation, 2 Cor. 10:5. See HIGH.¶ Cf. hupsoo, “to exalt.”

HEIR

A. Noun.

1. kleronomos (κληρονόμος, 2818) lit. denotes “one who obtains a lot or portion (kleros, “a lot,” nemomai, “to possess”), especially of an inheritance. The NT usage may be analyzed as under: “(a) the person to whom property is to pass on the death of the owner, Matt. 21:38; Mark 12:7; Luke 20:14; Gal. 4:1; (b) one to whom something has been assigned by God, on possession of which, however, he has not yet entered, as Abraham, Rom. 4:13, 14; Heb. 6:17; Christ, Heb. 1:2; the poor saints, Jas. 2:5; (c) believers, inasmuch as they share in the new order of things to be ushered in at the return of Christ, Rom. 8:17; Gal. 3:29; 4:7; Titus 3:7; (d) one who receives something other than by merit, as Noah, Heb. 11:7.”*¶

In the Sept., Judg. 18:7; 2 Sam. 14:7; Jer. 8:10; Mic. 1:15.¶

2. sunkleronomos (συγκληρονόμος, 4789), “a joint-heir, co-inheritor” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), “is used of Isaac and Jacob as participants with Abraham in the promises of God, Heb. 11:9; of husband and wife who are also united in Christ, 1 Pet. 3:7; of Gentiles who believe, as participants in the gospel with Jews who believe, Eph. 3:6; and of all believers as prospective participants with Christ in His glory, as recompense for their participation in His sufferings, Rom. 8:17.”*¶

B. Verb.

kleronomeo (κληρονομέω, 2816), “to be an heir to, to inherit” (see A, No. 1), is rendered “shall (not) inherit with” in Gal. 4:30, RV, KJV, “shall (not) be heir with”; in Heb. 1:14, RV, “shall inherit,” KJV, “shall be heirs of.” See INHERIT. Cf. kleroomai, “to be taken as an inheritance,” kleronomia, “an inheritance,” kleros, “a lot, an inheritance.”

HELL

1. geenna (γέεννα, 1067) represents the Hebrew Ge-Hinnom (the valley of Tophet) and a corresponding Aramaic word; it is found twelve times in the NT, eleven of which are in the Synoptists, in every instance as uttered by the Lord Himself. He who says to his brother, Thou fool (see under FOOL), will be in danger of “the hell of fire,” Matt. 5:22; it is better to pluck out (a metaphorical description of irrevocable law) an eye that causes its possessor to stumble, than that his “whole body be cast into hell,” v. 29; similarly with the hand, v. 30; in Matt. 18:8, 9, the admonitions are repeated, with an additional mention of the foot; here, too, the warning concerns the person himself (for which obviously the “body” stands in chapt. 5); in v. 8, “the eternal fire” is mentioned as the doom, the character of the region standing for the region itself, the two being combined in the phrase “the hell of fire,” v. 9. To the passage in Matt. 18, that in Mark 9:43-47, is parallel; here to the word “hell” are applied the extended descriptions “the unquenchable fire” and “where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched.”

That God, “after He hath killed, hath power to cast into hell,” is assigned as a reason why He should be feared with the fear that keeps from evil doing, Luke 12:5; the parallel passage to this in Matt. 10:28 declares, not the casting in, but the doom which follows, namely, the destruction (not the loss of being, but of wellbeing) of “both soul and body.”

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 178.

In Matt. 23 the Lord denounces the scribes and Pharisees, who in proselytizing a person “make him two-fold more a son of hell” than themselves (v. 15), the phrase here being expressive of moral characteristics, and declares the impossibility of their escaping “the judgment of hell,” v. 33. In Jas. 3:6 “hell” is described as the source of the evil done by misuse of the tongue; here the word stands for the powers of darkness, whose characteristics and destiny are those of “hell.”¶

For terms descriptive of “hell,” see e.g., Matt. 13:42; 25:46; Phil. 3:19; 2 Thess. 1:9; Heb. 10:39; 2 Pet. 2:17; Jude 13; Rev. 2:11; 19:20; 20:6, 10, 14; 21:8.

Notes: (1) For the rendering “hell” as a translation of hades, corresponding to Sheol, wrongly rendered “the grave” and “hell,” see HADES. (2) The verb tartaroo, translated “cast down to hell” in 2 Pet. 2:4, signifies to consign to Tartarus, which is neither Sheol nor hades nor hell, but the place where those angels whose special sin is referred to in that passage are confined “to be reserved unto judgment”; the region is described as “pits of darkness.” RV¶

For HELM (Jas. 3:4) see RUDDER

HELMET

perikephalaia (περικεφαλαία, 4030), from peri, “around,” and kephale, “a head,” is used figuratively in Eph. 6:17, with reference to salvation, and 1 Thess. 5:8, where it is described as “the hope of salvation.” The head is not to be regarded here as standing for the seat of the intellect; the word is not so used elsewhere in Scripture. In Eph. 6:17 salvation is a present experience of the Lord’s deliverance of believers as those who are engaged in spiritual conflict; in 1 Thess. 5:8, the hope is that of the Lord’s return, which encourages the believer to resist the spirit of the age in which he lives.¶

HELP, HOLPEN

A. Nouns.

1. antilepsis or antilempsis (ἀντίληψις, 484) properly signifies “a laying hold of, an exchange” (anti, “in exchange,” or, in its local sense, “in front,” and lambano, “to take, lay hold of,” so as to support); then, “a help” (akin to B, No. 1); it is mentioned in 1 Cor. 12:28, as one of the ministrations in the local church, by way of rendering assistance, perhaps especially of “help” ministered to the weak and needy. So Theophylact defines the injunction in 1 Thess. 5:14, “support the weak”; cf. Acts 20:35; not official functionaries are in view in the term “helps,” but rather the functioning of those who, like the household of Stephanas, devote themselves to minister to the saints. Hort defines the ministration as “anything that would be done for poor or weak or outcast brethren.”¶

2. boetheia (βοήθεια, 996), from boe, “a shout,” and theo, “to run,” denotes “help, succour,” Heb. 4:16, lit., “(grace) unto (timely) help”; in Acts 27:17, where the plural is used, the term is nautical, “frapping.”¶

3. epikouria (ἐπικουρία, 1947) strictly denotes such aid as is rendered by an epikouros, “an ally, an auxiliary”; Paul uses it in his testimony to Agrippa, “having therefore obtained the help that is from God,” Acts 26:22, RV.¶

B. Verbs.

1. antilambano (ἀντιλαμβάνομαι, 482), lit., “to take instead of, or in turn” (akin to A, No. 1), is used in the middle voice, and rendered “He hath holpen” in Luke 1:54; “to help,” RV, “to support,” KJV, in Acts 20:35; its other meaning, to partake of, is used of partaking of things, 1 Tim. 6:2, “that partake of,” for KJV, “partakers of.” See PARTAKE, SUPPORT.¶

2. sullambano (συλλαμβάνω, 4815), “to assist, take part with” (sun, “with,” and lambano), is used, in the middle voice, of rendering help in what others are doing, Luke 5:7, of bringing in a catch of fish; in Phil. 4:3, in an appeal to Synzygus (“yokefellow”) to help Euodia and Syntyche (v. 2). See CATCH, CONCEIVE.

3. sunantizambano (συναντιλαμβάνομαι, 4878) signifies “to take hold with at the side for assistance” (sun, “with,” and No. 1); hence, “to take a share in, help in bearing, to help in general.” It is used, in the middle voice in Martha’s request to the Lord to bid her sister help her, Luke 10:40; and of the ministry of the Holy Spirit in helping our infirmities, Rom. 8:26.¶ In the Sept., Exod. 18:22; Num. 11:17; Ps. 89:21.

4. boetheo (βοηθέω, 997), “to come to the aid of anyone, to succour” (akin to A, No. 2), is used in Matt. 15:25; Mark 9:22, 24; Acts 16:9; 21:28; 2 Cor. 6:2, “did I succour”; Heb. 2:18, “to succour”; Rev. 12:16.¶

5. sumballo (συμβάλλω, 4820), lit., “to throw together” (sun, “with,” ballo, “to throw”), is used in the middle voice in Acts 18:27, of helping or benefiting believers by discussion or ministry of the Word of God. See CONFER, ENCOUNTER, MAKE (war), MEET, PONDER.

6. sunupourgeo (συνυπουργέω, 4943) denotes “to help together, join in helping, to serve with anyone as an underworker” (sun, “with,” hupourgeo, “to serve”; hupo, “under,” ergon, “work”); it is used in 2 Cor. 1:11.¶

7. sunergeo (συνεργέω, 4903), “to help in work, to co-operate, be a co-worker,” is rendered “that helpeth with” in 1 Cor. 16:16. See WORK.

Note: Paristemi, “to place beside” (para, “by,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), “to stand by, be at hand,” is used of “standing up for help,” in Rom. 16:2, “that ye assist,” and 2 Tim. 4:17, “stood with.” See BRING, COME, COMMEND, GIVE, PRESENT, PROVE, PROVIDE, SHEW, STAND, YIELD.

HELPER, FELLOW-HELPER

1. boethos (βοηθός, 998), an adjective, akin to A, No. 2, and B, No. 4, under HELP, signifying “helping,” is used as a noun in Heb. 13:6, of God as the helper of His saints.¶

2. sunergos (συνεργός, 4904), an adjective, akin to B, No. 7, under HELP, “a fellow worker,” is translated “helper” in the KJV of Rom. 16:3, 9, RV, “fellow worker”; in 2 Cor. 1:24, KJV and RV, “helpers”; in 2 Cor. 8:23, KJV, “fellow helper,” RV, “fellow worker”; so the plural in 3 John 8: See COMPANION, LABORER, etc.

For HEM see BORDER

HEN

ornis (ὄρνις, 3733), “a bird,” is used, in the NT, only of a “hen,” Matt. 23:37; Luke 13:34.¶

HENCE

1. enthen (ἐντεῦθεν, 1782v) is found in the best mss. in Matt. 17:20; Luke 16:26.¶

2. enteuthen (ἐντεῦθεν, 1782), akin to No. 1, is used (a) of place, “hence,” or “from hence,” Luke 4:9; 13:31; John 2:16; 7:3; 14:31; 18:36; in John 19:18, “on either side (one),” lit., “hence and hence”; in Rev. 22:2, it is contrasted with ekeithen, “thence,” RV, “on this side ... on that” (KJV, “on either side”), lit. “hence ... thence”; (b) causal; Jas. 4:1, “(come they not) hence,” i.e., “owing to.”¶

Notes: (1) For makran, “far hence,” in Acts 22:21, see FAR. (2) In Acts 1:5, the phrase “not many days hence” is, lit., “not after (meta) many days.”

HENCEFORTH (from, and negatives), HENCEFORWARD

Notes: (1) Positively, “henceforth” stands for the following: (a) ap̄ arti (i.e., apo arti), lit., “from now,” e.g., Matt. 26:64; Luke 22:69; John 13:19, RV, and KJV marg., “from henceforth”; Rev. 14:13 (where aparti is found as one word in the best mss.); (b) to loipon, lit., “(for) the remaining (time),” Heb. 10:13; tou loipou, Gal. 6:17; (c) apo tou nun, lit., “from the now,” e.g., Luke 1:48; 5:10; 12:52; Acts 18:6; 2 Cor. 5:16 (1st part); (2) negatively, “henceforth ... not” (or “no more”) translates one or other of the negative adverbs ouketi and meketi, “no longer,” e.g., Acts 4:17, KJV, and RV, “henceforth (to no man)”; in the following the RV has “no longer” for the KJV, “henceforth” (with a negative), John 15:15; Rom. 6:6; 2 Cor. 5:15; Eph. 4:17; in 2 Cor. 5:16 (last part), RV, “no more”; in Matt. 21:19 and Mark 11:14, “no (fruit ... ) henceforward”; KJV in the latter, “hereafter.” See HEREAFTER.

For HER and HERSELF see the forms under HE

HERB

1. lachanon (λάχανον, 3001) denotes “a garden herb, a vegetable” (from lachaino, “to dig”), in contrast to wild plants, Matt. 13:32; Mark 4:32; Luke 11:42; Rom. 14:2.¶

2. botane (βοτάνη, 1008) denotes “grass, fodder, herbs” (from bosko, “to feed”; cf. Eng., “botany”), Heb. 6:7.¶

HERD

agele (ἀγέλη, 34), from ago, “to lead,” is used, in the NT, only of swine, Matt. 8:30, 31, 32; Mark 5:11, 13; Luke 8:32, 33.¶

HERE

1. hode (ὧδε, 5602), an adverb signifying (a) “here” (of place), e.g., Matt. 12:6; Mark 9:1; used with the neuter plural of the article, Col. 4:9, “(all) things (that are done) here,” lit., “(all) the (things) here”; in Matt. 24:23, hode is used in both parts, hence the RV, “Lo, here (is the Christ, or) Here”; in Mark 13:21 hode is followed by ekei, “there.” The word is used metaphorically in the sense of “in this circumstance,” or connection, in 1 Cor. 4:2; Rev. 13:10, 18; 14:12; 17:9. See HITHER.

---

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

2. enthade (ἐνθάδε, 1759) has the same meanings as No. 1; “here” in Luke 24:41; Acts 16:28; 25:24. See HITHER (John 4:15, 16; Acts 25:17).¶

3. autou (αὐτοῦ, 847), the genitive case of autos, “self,” signifies “just here” in Matt. 26:36. See THERE, No. 5.

HERE (to be, be present)

pareimi (παρεῖμι, 3918), “to be by or beside or here” (para, “by,” and eimi, “to be”), is rendered “to have been here” in Acts 24:19. See COME, PRESENT.

Note: For sumpareimi, “to be here present,” see PRESENT.

HEREAFTER

Notes: (1) This adverb translates the phrase meta tauta, lit., “after these things,” John 13:7; Rev. 1:19, and frequently in the Apocalypse, see 4:1 (twice); 7:9; 9:12; 15:5; 18:1; 19:1; 20:3, (2) For Matt. 26:64 and Luke 22:69 (KJV, “hereafter”) see HENCEFORTH; for Mark 11:14 see HENCEFORWARD. (3) In John 14:30, ouk eti is rendered “no more” in the RV (KJV, “Hereafter ... not”). (4) In 1 Tim. 1:16, “hereafter” translates the verb mello, “to be about to.”

HEREBY

Notes: (1) This translates the phrase en touto, lit., “in this,” 1 Cor. 4:4; 1 John 2:3, 5; 3:16, 19, 24; 4:2, 13; 5:2 (RV, “hereby,” KJV, “by this”). (2) In 1 John 4:6, KJV, ek toutou, lit., “out of this,” i.e., in consequence of this, is rendered “hereby” (RV, “by this”).¶

HEREIN

Note: This translates the phrase en touto, “in this,” in John 4:37; 9:30; 15:8; Acts 24:16; 2 Cor. 8:10; 1 John 4:9 (KJV, “in this”), 10, 17.¶

HEREOF

Notes: (1) This translates the word haute, “this,” the feminine of houtos, “this,” in Matt. 9:26, lit., “this (fame),” KJV, and RV marg. (2) In Heb. 5:3, KJV, dia tauten, lit., “by reason of (dia) this” (i.e., this infirmity), is rendered “hereof”; the best texts have auten, RV, “thereof.”

HERESY

hairesis (αἵρεσις, 139) denotes (a) “a choosing, choice” (from haireomai, “to choose”); then, “that which is chosen,” and hence, “an opinion,” especially a self-willed opinion, which is substituted for submission to the power of truth, and leads to division and the formation of sects, Gal. 5:20 (marg., “parties”); such erroneous opinions are frequently the outcome of personal preference or the prospect of advantage; see 2 Pet. 2:1, where “destructive” (RV) signifies leading to ruin; some assign even this to (b); in the papyri the prevalent meaning is “choice” (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.); (b) “a sect”; this secondary meaning, resulting from (a), is the dominating significance in the NT, Acts 5:17; 15:5; 24:5, 14; 26:5; 28:22; “heresies” in 1 Cor. 11:19 (see marg.). See SECT.¶

HERETICAL

hairetikos (αἱρετικός, 141), akin to the above, primarily denotes “capable of choosing” (haireomai); hence, “causing division by a party spirit, factious,” Titus 3:10, RV, “heretical.”¶

For HERETOFORE see SIN, C, No. 2

HEREUNTO

Note: This translates the phrase eis touto, lit., “unto this,” in 1 Pet. 2:21.

For HEREWITH see TRADE, A, No. 2

HERITAGE

kleroo (κληρόω, 2820), primarily, “to cast lots” or “to choose by lot,” then, “to assign a portion,” is used in the passive voice in Eph. 1:11, “we were made a heritage,” RV (KJV, “we have obtained an inheritance”). The RV is in agreement with such OT passages as Deut. 4:20, “a people of inheritance”; 9:29; 32:9; Ps. 16:6. The meaning “were chosen by lot,” as in the Vulgate, and in 1 Sam. 14:41, indicating the freedom of election without human will (so Chrysostom and Augustine), is not suited to this passage.¶

HEW, HEW DOWN, HEWN

A. Verbs.

1. ekkopto (ἐκκόπτω, 1581), “to cut out or down” (ek, “out of,” kopto, “to cut”) is rendered “to hew down,” of trees, Matt. 3:10; 7:19 (a similar testimony by John the Baptist and Christ); Luke 3:9. See CUT, HINDER.

2. latomeo (λατομέω, 2998) signifies “to hew out stones” (from latomos, “a stone-cutter”; las, “a stone,” temno, “to cut”), and is used of the sepulchre which Joseph of Arimathaea had “hewn” out of a rock for himself, where the body of the Lord was buried, Matt. 27:60; Mark 15:46.¶

B. Adjective.

laxeutos (λαξευτός, 2991) denotes “hewn in stone” (las, “a stone,” xeo, “to scrape”; cf. A, No. 2), is used of Christ’s tomb, in Luke 23:53.¶

HIDE, HID, HIDDEN

A. Verbs.

1. krupto (κρύπτω, 2928), “to cover, conceal, keep secret” (Eng., “crypt,” “cryptic,” etc.), is used (a) in its physical significance, e.g., Matt. 5:14; 13:44; 25:18 (some mss. have No. 2); (b) metaphorically, e.g., Matt. 11:25 (some mss. have No. 2 here); 13:35, RV, “(things) hidden”; KJV, “(things) which have been kept secret”; Luke 18:34; 19:42; John 19:38, “secretly.” See SECRET.

2. apokrupto (ἀποκρύπτω, 613), “to conceal from, to keep secret” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically, in Luke 10:21, of truths “hidden” from the wise and prudent and revealed to babes; 1 Cor. 2:7, of God’s wisdom; Eph. 3:9, of the mystery of the unsearchable riches of Christ, revealed through the gospel Col. 1:26, of the mystery associated with the preceding.¶

3. enkrupto (ἐγκρύπτω, 1470), “to hide in anything” (en, “in,” and No. 1), is used in Matt. 13:33, of leaven “hidden” in meal.¶

4. perikrupto (περικρύπτω, 4032) signifies “to hide by placing something around, to conceal entirely, to keep hidden” (peri, “around,” used intensively, and No. 1), Luke 1:24.¶

5. kalupto (καλύπτω, 2572) signifies “to cover, conceal,” so that no trace of it can be seen (hence somewhat distinct from No. 1): it is not translated “to hide” in the RV; in 2 Cor. 4:3 it is rendered “veiled,” suitably continuing the subject of 3:13-18; in Jas. 5:20, “shall hide,” KJV (RV, “shall cover”). See COVER.

6. parakalupto (παρακαλύπτω, 3871), lit., “to cover with a veil,” KJV, “hid,” in Luke 9:45, “it was veiled from them”; see CONCEAL.¶

7. lanthano (λανθάνω, 2990), “to escape notice, to be hidden from,” is rendered “(could not) be hid” in Mark 7:24, of Christ; “was (not) hid,” Luke 8:47, of the woman with the issue of blood; “is hidden,” Acts 26:26, of the facts concerning Christ; the sentence might be rendered “none of these things has escaped the king’s notice.” See FORGET, UNAWARES.

B. Adjectives.

1. kruptos (κρυπτός, 2927), akin to A, No. 1, “hidden, secret,” is translated “hid” in Matt. 10:26; Mark 4:22; Luke 8:17, RV, for KJV, “secret”; 12:2 (last part); in 1 Cor. 4:5, “hidden (things of darkness)”; 2 Cor. 4:2, “hidden (things of shame)”; 1 Pet. 3:4, “hidden (man of the heart).” See INWARDLY, SECRET.

2. apokruphos (ἀπόκρυφος, 614), “hidden away from” (corresponding to A, No. 2; cf Eng., “apocryphal”), is translated, “made (KJV, kept) secret,” in Mark 4:22; in Luke 8:17, RV, “secret,” for KJV, “hid”; in Col. 2:3, RV, “hidden,” KJV, “hid.” See SECRET.¶

HIGH (from on, most), HIGHLY

A. Adjectives.

1. hupselos (ὕψηλός, 5308), “high, lofty,” is used (a) naturally, of mountains, Matt. 4:8; 17:1; Mark 9:2; Rev. 21:10; of a wall, Rev. 21:12; (b) figuratively, of the arm of God, Acts 13:17; of heaven, “on high,” plural, lit., “in high (places),” Heb. 1:3; (c) metaphorically, Luke 16:15, RV, “exalted” (KJV, “highly esteemed”); Rom. 11:20, in the best texts, “high-minded” [lit., “mind (not) high things”]; 12:16.¶

2. hupsistos (ὑψιστος, 5310), “most high,” is a superlative degree, the positive not being in use; it is used of God in Luke 1:32, 35, 76; 6:35, in each of which the RV has “the most High,” for KJV, “the highest”, KJV and RV in Mark 5:7; Luke 8:28; Acts 7:48; 16:17; Heb. 7:1. See HIGHEST (below).

3. meas (μέγας, 3173), “great,” is translated “high” in John 19:31, of the Sabbath day at the Passover season; here the meaning is virtually equivalent to “holy.” See GREAT.

Note: In Heb. 10:21, the RV rightly has “a great (priest),” KJV, “high.” For “high places,” Eph. 6:12, KJV, see HEAVENLY, B, No. 2.

B. Nouns.

1. hupsos (ὑψος, 5311), “height,” is used with ex (ek) “from,” in the phrase “on high,” Luke 1:78; 24:49; with eis, “in” or “into,” Eph. 4:8. See ESTATE, HEIGHT, No. 1.

2. hupsoma (ὑψωμα, 5313), “high thing,” 2 Cor. 10:5; in Rom. 8:39, “height.” See HEIGHT, No 2.¶

C. Adverb.

ano (ἄνω, 507), “above, upward,” is used in Phil. 3:14, of the “high calling of God in Christ Jesus,” the prize of which is set before believers as their goal, lit., “calling upward” (RV, marg.), a preferable rendering to “heavenly calling.” See ABOVE.

HIGHER

A. Adverb.

1. anoteron (ἀνώτερος, 511**), the neuter of anoterōs, “higher,” the comparative of ano (see C, under HIGH), is used as an adverb of place in Luke 14:10; for the meaning “above,” in Heb. 10:8, see ABOVE.¶

B. Verb.

huperecho (ὑπερέχω, 5242), lit., “to hold over anything,” as being superior, is used metaphorically in Rom. 13:1, of rulers, as the “higher” powers; cf. 1 Pet. 2:13, “supreme.” See BETTER, EXCELLENCY, PASS, SUPREME.

HIGHEST

hupsistos (ὑψιστος, 5310) is used in the plural in the phrase “in the highest,” i.e., in the “highest” regions, the abode of God, Matt. 21:9; Mark 11:10; Luke omits the article, Luke 2:14; 19:38; for its use as a title of God, see HIGH, A, No. 2.

For HIGHLY see DISPLEASE, EXALT, EXCEEDING, FAVOR, THINK

HIGH-MINDED

1. tuphoo (τυφώω, 5187) properly means “to wrap in smoke” (from tuphos, “smoke”; metaphorically, for “conceit”); it is used in the passive voice, metaphorically in 1 Tim. 3:6, “puffed up,” RV (KJV, “lifted up with pride”); so 6:4, KJV, “proud,” and 2 Tim. 3:4, KJV, “highminded.” See PROUD, PUFF (UP).¶ Cf. tuphomai, “to smoke,” Matt. 12:20,¶ and tuphonikos, “tempestuous” (with anemos, “wind,” understood), Acts 27:14.¶

2. hupselophroneo (ὑψηλοφρονέω, 5309), “to be highminded,” is used in 1 Tim. 6:17.¶

hodos (ὁδός, 3598), “a way, path, road,” is rendered “highways” in Matt. 22:10; Luke 14:23; in Mark 10:46, RV, “way side,” KJV, “highway side”; in Matt. 22:9, the word is used with diexodoi (“ways out through”), and the phrase is rightly rendered in the RV, “the partings of the highways” (i.e., the crossroads), KJV, “the highways.” See WAY.

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

1. oros (ὄρος, 3735), “a hill or mountain,” is translated “hill” in Matt. 5:14; Luke 4:29; “mountain” in Luke 9:37, RV, KJV, “hill” (of the mount of transfiguration) as in v. 28. See MOUNTAIN.

2. oreinos (ὄρεινός, 3714), an adjective meaning “mountainous, hilly,” is used in the feminine, oreine, as a noun, and rendered “hill country” in Luke 1:39, 65. See COUNTRY.¶

3. bounos (βουνός, 1015), “a mound, heap, height,” is translated “hill” in Luke 3:5, “hills” in 23:30.¶

Note: In Acts 17:22, KJV, pagos is translated “hill.” “The Areopagus,” RV, stands for the council (not hill) held near by.

For HIM and HIMSELF see HE

HINDER, HINDRANCE

A. Verbs.

1. enkopto (ἐγκόπτω, 1465), lit., “to cut into” (en, “in,” kopto, “to cut”), was used of “impeding” persons by breaking up the road, or by placing an obstacle sharply in the path; hence, metaphorically, of “detaining” a person unnecessarily, Acts 24:4, of “hindrances” in the way of reaching others, Rom. 15:22; or returning to them, 1 Thess. 2:18; of “hindering” progress in the Christian life, Gal. 5:7 (anakopto in some mss.), where the significance virtually is “who broke up the road along which you were travelling so well?”; of “hindrances” to the prayers of husband and wife, through low standards of marital conduct, 1 Pet. 3:7 (ekkopto, “to cut out, repulse,” in some mss.).¶

2. koluo (κωλύω, 2967), “to hinder, forbid, restrain,” is translated “to hinder” in Luke 11:52; Acts 8:36; Rom. 1:13, RV (KJV, “was let”); Heb. 7:23, RV (KJV, “were not suffered”). See FORBID.

3. diakoluo (διακωλύω, 1254), a strengthened form of No. 2, “to hinder thoroughly,” is used in Matt. 3:14, of John the Baptist’s endeavor to “hinder” Christ from being baptized, KJV, “forbad,” RV, “would have hindered,” lit., “was hindering.”¶

B. Noun.

enkope (ἐγκοπή, 1464), “a hindrance,” lit., “a cutting in,” akin to A, No. 1, with corresponding significance, is used in 1 Cor. 9:12, with didomi, “to give,” RV, “(that) we may cause (no) hindrance,” KJV, “(lest) we should hinder.”¶

For HINDER (part) see STERN

HIRE, HIRED

A. Noun.

misthos (μισθός, 3408) denotes (a) “wages, hire,” Matt. 20:8; Luke 10:7; Jas. 5:4; in 1 Tim. 5:18; 2 Pet. 2:13; Jude 11, RV, “hire” (KJV, “reward”); in 2 Pet. 2:15, RV, “hire” (KJV, “wages”). See REWARD.

B. Verb.

misthoo (μισθόω, 3409), “to let out for hire,” is used in the middle voice, signifying “to hire, to engage the services of anyone by contract,” Matt. 20:1, 7.¶

Note: In v. 9 there is no word for “hired” in the original.

HIRED HOUSE

misthoma (μίσθωμα, 3410), akin to A and B, above, primarily denotes “a hire,” as in the Sept. of Deut. 23:18; Prov. 19:13; Ezek. 16:31, 34, 41, etc.; in the NT, it is used of “a hired dwelling,” Acts 28:30.¶

HIRED SERVANT, HIRELING

1. misthotos (μισθωτός, 3411), an adjective denoting “hired,” is used as a noun, signifying “one who is hired,” “hired servants,” Mark 1:20; “hireling,” John 10:12, 13; here, it expresses, not only one who has no real interest in his duty (that may or may not be present in its use in Mark 1:20, and in misthios, No. 2), but one who is unfaithful in the discharge of it; that sense attaches always to the word rendered “hireling.”¶

2. misthios (μίσθιος, 3407), an adjective, akin to No. 1, and similarly signifying “a hired servant,” is used in Luke 15:17, 19 (in some texts, v. 21).¶

HIS, HIS OWN

Note: These translate (a) forms of pronouns under HE, No. 1 (a frequent use: in 1 Pet. 2:24, “His own self”); the form autou, “his,” becomes emphatic when placed between the article and the noun, e.g., 1 Thess. 2:19; Titus 3:5; Heb. 2:4; also under HE, No. 3 (in which “his” is emphasized), e.g., John 5:47; 9:28; 1 Cor. 10:28; 2 Cor. 8:9; 2 Tim. 2:26; Titus 3:7; 2 Pet. 1:16; (b) heautou, “of himself, his own”; the RV rightly puts “his own,” for the KJV, “his,” in Luke 11:21; 14:26; Rom. 4:19; 5:8, “His own (love)”; 1 Cor. 7:37; Gal. 6:8; Eph. 5:28, 33; 1 Thess. 2:11, 12; 4:4; in Rev. 10:7 the change has not been made; it should read “his own servants”; (c) idios, “one’s own,” “his own,” in the RV, in Matt. 22:5; John 5:18; 2 Pet. 2:16; in Matt. 25:15, it is rendered “his several”; in John 19:27, “his own home,” lit., “his own things”; in 1 Tim. 6:15, RV, “its own (times),” referring to the future appearing of Christ; in Heb. 4:10 (end of verse), both KJV and RV have “his,” where it should be “his own”; so in Acts 24:23, for KJV and RV, “his”; in 1 Cor. 7:7, RV, “his own,” KJV, “his proper”; (d) in Acts 17:28, the genitive case of the definite article, “His (offspring),” lit., “of the” (i.e., the one referred to, namely, God).

HITHER

1. hode (ὧδε, 5602), primarily an adverb of manner then, of place, (a) of “motion” or “direction towards a place,” e.g., Matt. 8:29; Mark 11:3; Luke 9:41; John 6:25; (b) of “position”; see HERE, PLACE

2. enthade (ἐνθάδε, 1759) has the same meaning as No. 1; “hither,” John 4:15, 16; Acts 17:6; 25:17. See HERE.

Note: For deuro, “come hither,” see COME, and HITHERTO, Note (2).

HITHERTO

Notes: (1) The phrase heos arti, “until now,” is rendered “hitherto” in John 16:24, KJV, and RV; in 5:17, RV, “even until now,” which more definitely expresses the meaning than the KJV, “hitherto”; the rest of the Father and the Son having been broken by man’s sin, they were engaged in the accomplishment of their counsels of grace with a view to redemption. (2) The phrase achri tou deuro, lit., “until the hither,” or “the present,” is used of time in Rom. 1:13, “hitherto.” (3) In 1 Cor. 3:2, KJV, oupo, “not yet,” is translated “hitherto ... not,” RV, “not yet.”

HOISE UP, HOIST UP

1. airo (αἶρω, 142), “to raise,” is used of “hoisting up” a skiff, or little boat, before undergirding the ship, Acts 27:17, RV, “had hoisted up,” for KJV, “had taken up.” See AWAY, TAKE.

2. epairo (ἐπαίρω, 1869), “to raise up” (epi, “up,” and No. 1), is used of “hoisting up” the foresail of a vessel, Acts 27:40, RV, “hoisting up.” See EXALT, LIFT.

HOLD (Noun)

1. teresis (τήρησις, 5084), translated “hold” in Acts 4:3, KJV, “prison” in 5:18 (RV, “ward”), signifies (a) “a watching, guarding”; hence, “imprisonment, ward” (from tereo, “to watch, keep”); the RV, has “ward” in both places; (b) “a keeping,” as of commandments, 1 Cor. 7:19. See KEEPING, WARD.¶

2. phulake (φυλακή, 5438), “a guarding” or “guard” (akin to phulasso, “to guard or watch”), also denotes “a prison, a hold,” Rev. 18:2 (twice), RV, “hold” in both places, KJV, “cage,” in the second (RV, marg., “prison,” in both). See CAGE, IMPRISONMENT, PRISON

HOLD (down, fast, forth, on, to, up), HELD, HOLDEN, (take) HOLD

1. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have or hold,” is used of mental conception, “to consider, account,” e.g., Matt. 21:26; of “steadfast adherence to faith, or the faith,” e.g., 1 Tim. 1:19; 3:9; 2 Tim. 1:13. See HAVE.

2. katecho (κατέχω, 2722), “to hold firmly, hold fast” (kata, “down,” and No. 1), is rendered “hold fast” in 1 Cor. 11:2, RV (KJV, “keep”); 1 Thess. 5:21; Heb. 3:6, 14 (RV); 10:23; “hold down,” Rom. 1:18, RV, of unrighteous men who restrain the spread of truth by their unrighteousness, or, as RV marg., “who hold the truth in (or with) unrighteousness,” contradicting their profession by their conduct (cf. 2:15, RV); in Rom. 7:6, RV, “holden,” KJV, “held,” of the Law as that which had “held” in bondage those who through faith in Christ were made dead to it as a means of life. See KEEP, MAKE (toward), POSSESS, RESTRAIN, RETAIN, SEIZE, STAY, TAKE.

3. antecho (ἀντέχομαι, 472), anti, “against, or to,” and No. 1, signifies in the middle voice, (a) “to hold firmly to, cleave to,” of “holding” or cleaving to a person, Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; of “holding” to the faithful word, Titus 1:9, RV, KJV, “holding fast”; (b) “to support,” 1 Thess. 5:14 (the weak). See SUPPORT.¶

4. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912), sun, “with,” intensive, and No. 1, is used of “holding” a prisoner, in Luke 22:63. See CONSTRAIN, KEEP, PRESS, STOP, STRAIT, STRAITENED, TAKE.

5. epecho (ἐπέχω, 1907) is used in Phil. 2:16, of “holding” forth the word of life (epi, “forth,” and No. 1). See (give) HEED, (take) HEED, MARK, STAY.

6. krateo (κρατέω, 2902), “to be strong, mighty, to prevail,” (1) is most frequently rendered “to lay or take hold on” (a) literally, e.g., Matt. 12:11; 14:3; 18:28 and 21:46, RV (KJV, “laid hands on”); 22:6, RV (KJV, “took”); 26:55, KJV (RV, “took”); 28:9, RV, “took hold of” (KJV, “held by”); Mark 3:21; 6:17; 12:12; 14:51; Act 24:6, RV (KJV, “took”);

Rev. 20:2; (b) metaphorically, of “laying hold of the hope of the Lord’s return,” Heb. 6:18; (2) also signifies “to hold” or “hold fast,” i.e., firmly, (a), literally, Matt. 26:48, KJV (RV, “take”); Acts 3:11; Rev. 2:1; (b) metaphorically, of “holding fast a tradition or teaching,” in an evil sense, Mark 7:3, 4, 8; Rev. 2:14, 15; in a good sense, 2 Thess. 2:15; Rev. 2:25; 3:11; of “holding” Christ, i.e., practically apprehending Him, as the head of His church, Col. 2:19; a confession, Heb. 4:14; the name of Christ, i.e., abiding by all that His name implies, Rev. 2:13; of restraint, Luke 24:16, “(their eyes) were holden”; of the winds, Rev. 7:1; of the impossibility of Christ’s being “holden” of death, Acts 2:24. See KEEP, RETAIN (of sins), TAKE.

7. epilambano (ἐπιλαμβάνομαι, 1949), “to lay hold of, to take hold of” (epi, “upon,” lambano, “to take”), with a special purpose, always in the middle voice, is so translated in Luke 20:20, 26, of taking “hold” of Christ’s words; in 23:26 and Acts 21:33, RV, of laying “hold” of persons; in 1 Tim. 6:12, 19, of laying “hold” on eternal life, i.e., practically appropriating all the benefits, privileges and responsibilities involved in the possession of it; in Heb. 2:16, RV “He taketh hold” (KJV “took on”) perhaps to be viewed in connection with “deliver” (v. 15) and “succor” (v. 18). See APPREHEND CATCH, TAKE.

8. tereo (τηρέω, 5083), akin to A, No. 1, under HOLD (Noun), “to watch over, keep, give heed to, observe,” is rendered “hold fast” in Rev. 3:3, KJV (RV, “keep”). See KEEP, OBSERVE, RESERVE, WATCH

9. eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” is used in the imperfect tense, with the preposition, sun, “with,” in the idiomatic phrase “held with,” in Acts 14:4, lit., “were with.”

Notes: (1) In Rom. 14:4, histemi, “to cause to stand,” in the passive voice, “to be made to stand,” is used in both forms, the latter in the first part, RV, “he shall be made to stand” (KJV, “he shall be holden up”), the active voice in the second part, KJV, and RV, “to make stand.” (2) In Matt. 12:14, RV, lambano, “to take,” is translated “took (counsel),” KJV, “held (a council).” (3) In Mark 15:1, some mss. have the verb poieo, “to make,” rendered “held (a consultation)”; the most authentic have hetoimazo, “to prepare,” also translated “held.”

HOLE

1. pholeos (φωλεός, 5454), “a lair, burrow, den or hole,” is used of foxes in Matt. 8:20 and Luke 9:58.¶

2. ope (ὀπή, 3692) is translated “holes” in Heb. 11:38, RV, KJV “caves.” See CAVE, OPENING.

HOLINESS, HOLY, HOLILY

A. Nouns.

1. hagiasmos (ἁγιασμός, 38), translated “holiness” in the KJV of Rom. 6:19, 22; 1 Thess. 4:7; 1 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 12:14, is always rendered “sanctification” in the RV. It signifies (a) separation to God, 1 Cor. 1:30; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:2; (b) the resultant state, the conduct befitting those so separated, 1 Thess. 4:3, 4, 7, and the four other places mentioned above. “Sanctification” is thus the state predetermined by God for believers, into which in grace He calls them, and in which they begin their Christian course and so pursue it. Hence they are called “saints” (hagioi). See SANCTIFICATION.¶

Note: The corresponding verb hagiazō denotes “to set apart to God.” See HALLOW, SANCTIFY.

2. hagiosune (ἁγιωσύνη, 42) denotes the manifestation of the quality of “holiness” in personal conduct; (a) it is used in Rom. 1:4, of the absolute “holiness” of Christ in the days of His flesh, which distinguished Him from all merely human beings; this (which is indicated in the phrase “the spirit of holiness”) and (in vindication of it) His resurrection from the dead, marked Him out as (He was “declared to be”) the Son of God; (b) believers are to be “perfecting holiness in the fear of God,” 2 Cor. 7:1, i.e., bringing “holiness” to its predestined end, whereby (c) they may be found “unblameable in holiness” in the Parousia of Christ, 1 Thess. 3:13.¶

3. hagiotēs (ἁγιότης, 41), “sanctity,” the abstract quality of “holiness,” is used (a) of God, Heb. 12:10; (b) of the manifestation of it in the conduct of the apostle Paul and his fellowlaborers, 2 Cor. 1:12 (in the best mss., for haplotēs).¶

4. hosiotes (ὁσιότης, 3742) is to be distinguished from No. 3, as denoting that quality of “holiness” which is manifested in those who have regard equally to grace and truth; it involves a right relation to God; it is used in Luke 1:75 and Eph. 4:24, and in each place is associated with righteousness.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 3:12, the KJV translates eusebeia, by “holiness,” RV, “godliness,” as everywhere, the true meaning of the word. See GODLINESS. (2) In Titus 2:3, KJV, hieroprepes, which denotes “suited to a sacred character, reverent,” is rendered “as becometh holiness,” RV, “reverent.” See REVERENT.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. hagios (ἅγιος, 40), akin to A, Nos. 1 and 2, which are from the same root as hagnos (found in hazo, “to venerate”), fundamentally signifies “separated” (among the Greeks, dedicated to the gods), and hence, in Scripture in its moral and spiritual significance, separated from sin and therefore consecrated to God, sacred.

(a) It is predicated of God (as the absolutely “Holy” One, in His purity, majesty and glory): of the Father, e.g., Luke 1:49; John 17:11; 1 Pet. 1:15, 16; Rev. 4:8; 6:10; of the Son, e.g., Luke 1:35; Acts 3:14; 4:27, 30; 1 John 2:20; of the Spirit, e.g., Matt. 1:18 and frequently in all the Gospels, Acts, Romans, 1 and 2 Cor., Eph., 1 Thess.; also in 2 Tim. 1:14; Titus 3:5; 1 Pet. 1:12; 2 Pet. 1:21; Jude 20.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine pp. 108, 115.

(b) It is used of men and things (see below) in so far as they are devoted to God. Indeed the quality, as attributed to God, is often presented in a way which involves divine demands upon the conduct of believers. These are called hagioi, “saints,” i.e., “sanctified” or “holy” ones.

This sainthood is not an attainment, it is a state into which God in grace calls men; yet believers are called to sanctify themselves (consistently with their calling, 2 Tim. 1:9), cleansing themselves from all defilement, forsaking sin, living a “holy” manner of life, 1 Pet. 1:15; 2 Pet. 3:11, and experiencing fellowship with God in His holiness. The saints are thus figuratively spoken of as “a holy temple”, 1 Cor. 3:17 (a local church); Eph. 2:21 (the whole Church), cp. 5:27; “a holy priesthood,” 1 Pet. 2:5; “a holy nation,” 2:9.

“It is evident that hagios and its kindred words ... express something more and higher than hieros, sacred, outwardly associated with God; ... something more than semnos, worthy, honorable; something more than hagnos, pure, free from defilement. Hagios is ... more comprehensive.... It is characteristically godlikeness” (G. B. Stevens, in Hastings’ Bib. Dic.).

The adjective is also used of the outer part of the tabernacle, Heb. 9:2 (RV, “the holy place”); of the inner sanctuary, 9:3, RV, “the Holy of Holies”; 9:4, “a holy place,” RV; v. 25 (plural), of the presence of God in heaven, where there are not two compartments as in the tabernacle, all being “the holy place”; 9:8, 12 (neuter plural); 10:19, “the holy place,” RV (KJV, “the holiest,” neut. plural), see SANCTUARY; of the city of Jerusalem. Rev. 11:2; its temple, Acts 6:13; of the faith. Jude 20; of the greetings of saints, 1 Cor. 16:20; of angels, e.g., Mark 8:38; of apostles and prophets, Eph. 3:5; of the future heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:2, 10; 22:19.

2. hosios (ὁσιος, 3741), akin to A, No. 4, signifies “religiously right, holy,” as opposed to what is unrighteous or polluted. It is commonly associated with righteousness (see A, No. 4). It is used “of God, Rev. 15:4; 16:5; and of the body of the Lord Jesus, Acts 2:27; 13:35, citations from Ps. 16:10, Sept.; Heb. 7:26; and of certain promises made to David, which could be fulfilled only in the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, Acts 13:34. In 1 Tim. 2:8 and Titus 1:8, it is used of the character of Christians.... In the Sept., hosios frequently represents the Hebrew word chasid, which varies in meaning between ‘holy’ and ‘gracious,’ or ‘merciful;’ cf. Ps. 16:10 with 145:17.”*

Notes: (1) For Acts 13:34, see the RV and the KJV marg.; the RV in Rev. 16:5, “Thou Holy One,” translates the most authentic mss. (KJV “and shalt be”). (2) For hieros (see No. 1), subserving a sacred purpose, translated “holy” in 2 Tim. 3:15, KJV (of the Scriptures), see SACRED.

C. Adverb.

hosios (ὁσίως, 3743), akin to A, No. 4, and B, No. 2, “holily,” i.e., pure from evil conduct, and observant of God’s will, is used in 1 Thess. 2:10, of the conduct of the apostle and his fellow missionaries.¶

D. Verb.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine p.64.

hagiazō (ἁγιάζω, 37), “to hallow, sanctify,” in the passive voice, “to be made holy, be sanctified,” is translated “let him be made holy” in Rev. 22:11, the aorist or point tense expressing the definiteness and completeness of the divine act; elsewhere it is rendered by the verb “to sanctify.” See HALLOW, SANCTIFY.

For HOLY GHOST see under SPIRIT and HOLY, B, No. 1 (a)

HOLYDAY

heorte (ἑορτή, 1859) denotes “a feast, festival”; it is translated “a holy day” in the KJV of Col. 2:16; RV, “a feast day.” See FEAST.

HOME, AT HOME (to be; workers)

A. Noun and Phrases.

1. oikos (οἶκος, 3624), “a house, dwelling,” is used (a) with the preposition eis, “unto,” with the meaning “to home,” lit., “to a house,” in Mark 8:3, RV, “to (their) home,” KJV, “to (their own) houses”; so 8:26, “to (his) home”; Luke 15:6, “home,” lit., “into the house”; (b) with the preposition en, “in,” 1 Cor. 11:34, “(let him eat) at home”; 14:35, “(let them ask ... ) at home”; (c) with the preposition kata, “down,” Acts 2:46, “(breaking bread) at home,” RV (KJV, “from house to house”); so in 5:42 (KJV, “in every house”).

Notes: (1) In Mark 3:19, the KJV and RV marg., have “home,” for the text “to a house”; the latter seems the more probable. See HOUSE. (2) In 1 Tim. 5:4, the phrase ton idion oikon, is rendered “at home,” of the necessity that children should show piety there; RV, “towards their own family,” the house being put by metonymy for the family.

2. The neuter plural of idios, “one’s own,” with the article, preceded by eis, “unto,” lit., “unto one’s own (things),” is translated “home” in Acts 21:6; in John 19:27, “unto his own home” (“home” being italicized).

Note: In John 16:32, this phrase is rendered “to his own” (of the predicted scattering of the disciples), KJV marg., “his own home”; cf. John 1:11, “His own things,” RV, marg. (i.e., “His possessions”).

For oikia in Matt. 8:6, KJV, “at home,” see HOUSE.

3. In Luke 24:12 the reflexive pronoun hauton (in some mss. heauton), preceded by pros, to, is rendered “to his home,” RV (lit., “to himself”), of the departure of Peter from the Lord’s tomb; in John 20:10, the same construction is used, in the plural, of Peter and John on the same occasion, and rendered “unto their own home.”

B. Adjective.

oikourgos (οἰκουρός, 3626), “working at home” (oikos, and a root of ergon, “work”), is used in Titus 2:5, “workers at home,” RV, in the injunction given to elder women regarding the training of the young women. Some mss. have oikouros, “watching” or “keeping the home” (oikos, and ouros, “a keeper”), KJV, “keepers at home.”¶

C. Verb.

endemeo (ἐνδημέω, 1736), lit., “to be among one’s people” (en, “in,” demos, “people”; endemos, “one who is in his own place or land”), is used metaphorically of the life on earth of believers, 2 Cor. 5:6, “at home (in the body)”; in v. 8 of the life in Heaven of the spirits of believers, after their decease, “at home (with the Lord),” RV (KJV, “present”); in v. 9, “at home” (KJV, “present”) refers again to the life on earth. In each verse the verb is contrasted with ekdemeo, “to be away from home, to be absent”; in v. 6, “we are absent,” i.e., away from “home” (from the Lord); in v. 8, “to be absent” (i.e., away from the “home” of the body); so in v. 9, “absent.” The implication in being “at home with the Lord” after death is a testimony against the doctrine of the unconsciousness of the spirit, when freed from the natural body.¶

HONEST, HONESTLY, HONESTY

A. Adjectives.

1. kalos (καλός, 2570), “good, admirable, becoming,” has also the ethical meaning of what is “fair, right, honorable, of such conduct as deserves esteem”; it is translated “honest” [cf. Latin honestus (from honos, “honor”)], which has the same double meaning as “honest” in the KJV, namely, regarded with honor, honorable, and bringing honor, becoming; in Luke 8:15 (KJV, and RV), “an honest and good (agathos) heart”; Rom. 12:17; 2 Cor. 8:21 and 13:7, RV, “honorable” (KJV, “honest”), of things which are regarded with esteem; in 1 Pet. 2:12, of behavior, RV, “seemly,” KJV, “honest” (i.e., becoming). See GOOD.

Note: In Titus 3:14, the RV and KJV margins give what is probably the accurate meaning, “(to profess) honest occupations” (KJV, “trades”); in the texts “(to maintain) good works.”

2. semnos (σεμνός, 4586), “august, venerable,” is rendered “honest” in Phil. 4:8, KJV (marg., “venerable”), RV, “honorable” (marg., “reverent”). Matthew Arnold suggests “nobly serious.” See GRAVE.

Note: In Acts 6:3, “men of honest (RV, ‘good’) report” translates the passive voice of martureo, lit., “having had witness borne.”

B. Adverbs.

1. kalos (καλῶς, 2573), corresponding to A, No. 1, is used in Heb. 13:18, “honestly,” i.e., honorably. See PLACE, C, Note (4), WELL.

2. euschemonos (εὐσχημόνως, 2156), “becomingly, decently,” is rendered “honestly” in Rom. 13:13, where it is set in contrast with the confusion of gentile social life, and in 1 Thess. 4:12, of the manner of life of believers as a witness to “them that are without”; in 1 Cor. 14:40, “decently,” in contrast with confusion in the churches. See DECENTLY.¶

C. Noun.

semnotes (σεμνότης, 4587) denotes “gravity, dignified seriousness”; it is rendered “honesty” in the KJV of 1 Tim. 2:2, RV, “gravity.” See GRAVITY.

HONEY

meli (μέλι, 3192) occurs with the adjective agrios, “wild,” in Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6; in Rev. 10:9, 10, as an example of sweetness.¶ As “honey” is liable to ferment, it was precluded from offerings to God, Lev. 2:11. The liquid “honey” mentioned in Ps. 19:10 and Prov. 16:24 is regarded as the best; a cruse of it was part of the present brought to Ahijah by Jeroboam’s wife, 1 Kings 14:3.

HONEYCOMB

melissios (μελίσιος, 3193), signifying “made by bees” from melissa, “a bee,” is found, with kerion, “a comb,” in some mss. in Luke 24:42.¶

HONOR (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. time (τιμή, 5092), primarily “a valuing,” hence, objectively, (a) “a price paid or received,” e.g., Matt. 27:6, 9; Acts 4:34; 5:2, 3; 7:16, RV, “price” (KJV, “sum”); 19:19; 1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23; (b) of “the preciousness of Christ” unto believers, 1 Pet. 2:7, RV, i.e., the honor and inestimable value of Christ as appropriated by believers, who are joined, as living stones, to Him the cornerstone; (c) in the sense of value, of human ordinances, valueless against the indulgence of the flesh, or, perhaps of no value in attempts at asceticism, Col. 2:23 (see extended note under INDULGENCE, No. 2); (d) “honor, esteem,” (1) used in ascriptions of worship to God, 1 Tim. 1:17; 6:16; Rev. 4:9, 11; 5:13; 7:12; to Christ, 5:12, 13; (2) bestowed upon Christ by the Father, Heb. 2:9; 2 Pet. 1:17; (3) bestowed upon man, Heb. 2:7; (4) bestowed upon Aaronic priests, Heb. 5:4; (5) to be the reward hereafter of “the proof of faith” on the part of tried saints, 1 Pet. 1:7, RV; (6) used of the believer who as a vessel is “meet for the Master’s use,” 2 Tim. 2:21; (7) to be the reward of patience in well-doing, Rom. 2:7, and of working good (a perfect life to which man cannot attain, so as to be justified before God thereby), 2:10; (8) to be given to all to whom it is due, Rom. 13:7 (see 1 Pet. 2:17, under B, No. 1); (9) as an advantage to be given by believers one to another instead of claiming it for self, Rom. 12:10; (10) to be given to elders that rule well (“double honor”), 1 Tim. 5:17 (here the meaning may be an honorarium); (11) to be given by servants to their master, 1 Tim. 6:1; (12) to be given to wives by husbands, 1 Pet. 3:7; (13) said of the husband’s use of the wife, in contrast to the exercise of the passion of lust, 1 Thess. 4:4 (some regard the “vessel” here as the believer’s body); (14) of that bestowed upon; parts of the body, 1 Cor. 12:23, 24; (15) of that which belongs to the builder of a house in contrast to the house itself, Heb. 3:3; (16) of that which is not enjoyed by a prophet in his own country, John 4:44; (17) of that bestowed by the inhabitants of Melita upon Paul and his fellow-passengers, in gratitude for his benefits of healing, Acts 28:10; (18) of the festive honor to be possessed by nations, and brought into the Holy City, the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:26 (in some mss., v. 24); (19) of honor bestowed upon things inanimate, a potters’ vessel, Rom. 9:21; 2 Tim. 2:20. See PRECIOUSNESS, PRICE, SUM, VALUE.¶

Note: For entimos, “in honor,” see HONORABLE, No. 2.

2. doxa (δόξα, 1391), “glory,” is translated “honor” in the KJV of John 5:41, 44 (twice); 8:54; 2 Cor. 6:8, and Rev. 19:7; the RV keeps to the word “glory,” as the KJV everywhere else. See GLORY.

B. Verbs.

1. timao (τιμάω, 5091), “to honor” (akin to A, No. 1), is used of (a) valuing Christ at a price, Matt. 27:9, cf. A, No. 1, (a); (b) “honoring” a person: (1) the “honor” done by Christ to the Father, John 8:49; (2) “honor” bestowed by the Father upon him who serves Christ, John 12:26; (3) the duty of all to “honor” the Son equally with the Father, 5:23; (4) the duty of children to “honor” their parents, Matt. 15:4; 19:19; Mark 7:10; 10:19; Luke 18:20; Eph. 6:2; (5) the duty of Christians to “honor” the king, and all men, 1 Pet. 2:17; (6) the respect and material assistance to be given to widows “that are widows indeed,” 1 Tim. 5:3; (7) the “honor” done to Paul and his companions by the inhabitants of Melita, Acts 28:10; (8) mere lip profession of “honor” to God, Matt. 15:8; Mark 7:6.¶

2. doxazo (δοξάζω, 1392), “to glorify” (from doxa, A, No. 2), is rendered “honor” and “honoreth” in the KJV of John 8:54; in 1 Cor. 12:26, however, in reference to the members of the body, both KJV and RV have “honored” (RV marg., “glorified”). Everywhere else it is translated by some form of the verb “to glorify,” “have glory,” or “be made glorious,” except in Rom. 11:13, “magnify,” KJV. See GLORIFY.

HONORABLE, WITHOUT HONOR

1. endoxos (ἐνδοξος, 1741) denotes (a) “held in honor” (en, “in,” doxa, “honor”; cf. HONOR, A, No. 2), “of high repute,” 1 Cor. 4:10, KJV “(are) honorable,” RV, “(have) glory,” in contrast to atimos, “without honor” (see No. 6 below). See GLORIOUS, GORGEOUSLY.

2. entimos (ἐντιμος, 1784), lit., “in honor” (en, “in,” time, “honor”: see HONOR, A, No. 1), is used of the centurion’s servant in Luke 7:2. “dear” (RV marg., “precious ... or honorable”): of self-sacrificing servants of the Lord, said of Epaphroditus, Phil. 2:29, RV “(hold such) in honor” (KJV, “in reputation”; marg., “honor such”); of Christ, as a precious stone, 1 Pet. 2:4, 6 (RV marg., “honorable”). Cf. timios in 1:7, 19; see No. 4.¶

The comparative degree, entimoteros, is used (in the best mss.) of degrees of honor attached to persons invited to a feast, a marriage feast, Luke 14:8, “a more honorable man.” See PRECIOUS.¶

3. euschemon (εὐσχήμων, 2158) signifies “elegant, comely, of honorable position,” KJV, “honorable,” RV, “of honorable estate,” Mark 15:43; Acts 13:50; 17:12; for other renderings in 1 Cor. 7:35 and 12:24 see COMELY, B.

4. timios (τίμιος, 5093), “precious, valuable, honorable” (akin to time, “honor”; see No. 2), is used of marriage in Heb. 13:4, KJV, as a statement, “(marriage) is honorable (in all),” RV, as an exhortation, “let (marriage) be had in honor (among all).” See DEAR, PRECIOUS, REPUTATION.

5. kalos (καλός, 2570), “good, fair,” is translated “honorable” in Rom. 12:17; 2 Cor. 8:21; 13:7, RV (KJV, “honest”). See GOOD, HONEST.

6. atimos (ἄτιμος, 820), without honor (a, negative, or privative, time, “honor”), “despised,” is translated “without honor” in Matt. 13:57; Mark 6:4; “dishonor” in 1 Cor. 4:10, RV (KJV, “despised”). See DESPISE.

The comparative degree atimoteros is used in the best mss. in 1 Cor. 12:23, “less honorable.”¶

Note: For semnos, honorable, Phil. 4:8, RV, see GRAVE.

HOOK

ankistron (ἄγκιστρον, 44), “a fish-hook” (from ankos, “a bend”; Lat. angulus; Eng., “anchor” and “angle” are akin), is used in Matt. 17:27.¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 19:28; Job 40:20; Isa. 19:8; Ezek. 32:3; Hab 1:15.¶

HOPE (Noun and Verb), HOPE (for)

A. Noun.

elpis (ἐλπίς, 1680), in the NT, “favorable and confident expectation” (contrast the Sept. in Isa. 28:19, “an evil hope”). It has to do with the unseen and the future, Rom. 8:24, 25. “Hope” describes (a) the happy anticipation of good (the most frequent significance), e.g., Titus 1:2; 1 Pet. 1:21; (b) the ground upon which “hope” is based, Acts 16:19; Col. 1:27, “Christ in you the hope of glory”; (c) the object upon which the “hope” is fixed, e.g., 1 Tim. 1:1.

Various phrases are used with the word “hope,” in Paul’s epistles and speeches: (1) Acts 23:6, “the hope and resurrection of the dead”; this has been regarded as a hendiadys (one by means of two), i.e., the “hope” of the resurrection; but the kai, “and,” is epexegetic, defining the “hope,” namely, the resurrection; (2) Acts 26:6, 7, “the hope of the promise (i.e., the fulfillment of the promise) made unto the fathers”; (3) Gal. 5:5, “the hope of righteousness”; i.e., the believer’s complete conformity to God’s will, at the coming of Christ; (4) Col. 1:23, “the hope of the Gospel,” i.e., the “hope” of the fulfillment of all the promises presented in the gospel; cf. 1:5; (5) Rom. 5:2, “(the) hope of the glory of God,” i.e., as in Titus 2:13, “the blessed hope and appearing of the glory of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ”; cf. Col. 1:27; (6) 1 Thess. 5:8, “the hope of salvation,” i.e., of the rapture of believers, to take place at the opening of the Parousia of Christ; (7) Eph. 1:18, “the hope of His (God’s) calling,” i.e., the prospect before those who respond to His call in the gospel; (8) Eph. 4:4, “the hope of your calling,” the same as (7), but regarded from the point of view of the called; (9) Titus 1:2, and 3:7, “the hope of eternal life,” i.e., the full manifestation and realization of that life which is already the believer’s possession; (10) Acts 28:20, “the hope of Israel,” i.e., the expectation of the coming of the Messiah. See Notes on Galatians by Hogg and Vine, pp. 248, 249.

In Eph. 1:18; 2:12 and 4:4, the “hope” is objective. The objective and subjective use of the word need to be distinguished, in Rom. 15:4, e.g., the use is subjective.

In the NT three adjectives are descriptive of “hope”: “good,” 2 Thess. 2:16; “blessed,” Titus 2:13; “living,” 1 Pet. 1:3. To these may be added Heb. 7:19, “a better hope,” i.e., additional to the commandment, which became disannulled (v. 18), a hope centered in a new priesthood.

In Rom. 15:13 God is spoken of as “the God of hope,” i.e., He is the author, not the subject, of it. “Hope” is a factor in salvation, Rom. 8:24; it finds its expression in endurance under trial, which is the effect of waiting for the coming of Christ, 1 Thess. 1:3; it is “an anchor of the soul,” staying it amidst the storms of this life, Heb. 6:18, 19; it is a purifying power, “every one that hath this hope set on Him (Christ) purifieth himself, even as He is pure,” 1 John 3:3, RV (the apostle John’s one mention of “hope”).

The phrase “fullness of hope,” Heb. 6:11, RV, expresses the completeness of its activity in the soul; cf. “fullness of faith,” 10:22, and “of understanding,” Col. 2:2 (RV, marg.).

B. Verbs.

1. elpizo (ἐλπίζω, 1679), “to hope,” is not infrequently translated in the KJV, by the verb “to trust”; the RV adheres to some form of the verb “to hope,” e.g., John 5:45, “Moses, on whom ye have set your hope”; 2 Cor. 1:10, “on whom we have set our hope”; so in 1 Tim. 4:10; 5:5; 6:17; see also, e.g., Matt. 12:21; Luke 24:21; Rom. 15:12, 24.

The verb is followed by three prepositions: (1) eis, rendered “on” in John 5:45 (as above); the meaning is really “in” as in 1 Pet. 3:5, “who hoped in God”; the “hope” is thus said to be directed to, and to center in, a person; (2) epi, “on,” Rom. 15:12, “On Him shall the Gentiles hope,” RV; so 1 Tim. 4:10; 5:5 (in the best mss.); 6:17, RV; this expresses the ground upon which “hope” rests; (3) en, “in,” 1 Cor. 15:19, “we have hoped in Christ,” RV, more lit., “we are (men) that have hoped in Christ,” the preposition expresses that Christ is not simply the ground upon whom, but the sphere and element in whom, the “hope” is placed. The form of the verb (the perfect participle with the verb to be, lit., “are having hoped”) stresses the character of those who “hope,” more than the action; “hope” characterizes them, showing what sort of persons they are. See TRUST.

2. proelpizo (προελπίζω, 4276), “to hope before” (pro, “before,” and No. 1), is found in Eph. 1:12.¶

3. apelpizo (ἀπελπίζω, 560), lit., “to hope from” (apo, and No. 1): see DESPAIR.

HORN

keras (κέρας, 2768), “a horn,” is used in the plural, as the symbol of strength, (a) in the apocalyptic visions; (1) on the head of the Lamb as symbolic of Christ, Rev. 5:6; (2) on the heads of beasts as symbolic of national potentates, Rev. 12:3; 13:1, 11; 17:3, 7, 12, 16 (cf. Dan. 7:8; 8:9; Zech. 1:18, etc.); (3) at the corners of the golden altar, Rev. 9:13 (cf. Exod. 30:2; the horns were of one piece with the altar, as in the case of the brazen altar, 27:2, and were emblematic of the efficacy of the ministry connected with it); (b) metaphorically, in the singular, “a horn of salvation,” Luke 1:69 (a frequent metaphor in the OT, e.g., Ps. 18:2; cf. 1 Sam. 2:10; Lam. 2:3).¶

HORSE

hippos (ἵππος, 2462), apart from the fifteen occurrences in the Apocalypse, occurs only in Jas. 3:3; in the Apocalypse “horses” are seen in visions in 6:2, 4, 5, 8; 9:7, 9, 17 (twice); 14:20; 19:11, 14, 19, 21; otherwise in 18:13; 19:18.¶

HORSEMEN

1. hippeus (ἵππεύς, 2460), “a horseman,” is used in the plural in Acts 23:23, 32.¶

2. hippikos (ἵππικόν, 2461**), an adjective signifying “of a horse” or “of horsemen, equestrian,” is used as a noun denoting “cavalry,” in Rev. 9:16, “horsemen,” numbering “twice ten thousand times ten thousand,” RV.¶

HOSANNA

hosanna (ὡσαννά, 5614), in the Hebrew, means “save, we pray.” The word seems to have become an utterance of praise rather than of prayer, though originally, probably, a cry for help. The people’s cry at the Lord’s triumphal entry into Jerusalem (Matt. 21:9, 15; Mark 11:9, 10; John 12:13) was taken from Ps. 118, which was recited at the Feast of Tabernacles (see FEAST) in the great Hallel (Psalms 113 to 118) in responses with the priest, accompanied by the waving of palm and willow branches. “The last day of the feast” was called “the great Hosanna”; the boughs also were called “hosannas.”¶

HOSPITALITY

A. Noun.

philoxenia (φιλονεξία, 5381), “love of strangers” (philos, “loving,” xenos, “a stranger”), is used in Rom. 12:13; Heb. 13:2, lit. “(be not forgetful of) hospitality. See ENTERTAIN, Note.¶

B. Adjective.

philoxenos (φιλόξενος, 5382), “hospitable,” occurs in 1 Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:8; 1 Pet. 4:9.¶

Note: For xenodocheo, 1 Tim. 5:10, see STRANGER, B.¶

HOST (of guests)

1. xenos (ξένος, 3581), in addition to the meaning “stranger,” mentioned above under A, denotes one or other of the parties bound by ties of hospitality, (a) “the guest” (not in the NT), (b) “the host,” Rom. 16:23.¶

2. pandocheus (πανδοχεύς, 3830), lit., “one who receives all” (pas, “all,” dechomai, “to receive”), denotes “an innkeeper, host,” Luke 10:35.¶

HOST (of angels, etc.)

stratia (στρατία, 4756), “an army,” is used of angels, Luke 2:13; of stars, Acts 7:42; some mss. have it instead of strateia, in 2 Cor. 10:4 (“warfare”).¶ Cf. strateuma, “an army.”

HOT

zestos (ζεστός, 2200), “boiling hot” (from zeo, “to boil, be hot, fervent”; cf. Eng., “zest”), is used, metaphorically, in Rev. 3:15, 16.¶

HOUR

hora (ώρα, 5610), whence Lat., hora, Eng., “hour,” primarily denoted any time or period, especially a season. In the NT it is used to denote (a) “a part of the day,” especially a twelfth part of day or night, an “hour,” e.g., Matt. 8:13; Acts 10:3, 9; 23:23; Rev. 9:15; in 1 Cor. 15:30, “every hour” stands for “all the time”; in some passages it expresses duration, e.g., Matt. 20:12; 26:40; Luke 22:59; inexactly, in such phrases as “for a season,” John 5:35; 2 Cor. 7:8; “for an hour,” Gal. 2:5; “for a short season,” 1 Thess. 2:17, RV (KJV, “for a short time,” lit., “for the time of an hour”); (b) “a period more or less extended,” e.g., 1 John 2:18, “it is the last hour,” RV; (C) “a definite point of time,” e.g., Matt. 26:45, “the hour is at hand”; Luke 1:10; 10:21; 14:17, lit., “at the hour of supper”; Acts 16:18; 22:13; Rev. 3:3; 11:13; 14:7; a point of time when an appointed action is to begin, Rev. 14:15; in Rom. 13:11, “it is high time,” lit., “it is already an hour,” indicating that a point of time has come later than would have been the case had responsibility been realized. In 1 Cor. 4:11, it indicates a point of time previous to which certain circumstances have existed.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 8:7, KJV, “unto this hour,” the phrase in the original is simply, “until now,” as RV (2) In Rev. 8:1, hemioron, “half an hour” (hemi, “half,” and hora), is used with hos, “about,” of a period of silence in Heaven after the opening of the 7th seal, a period corresponding to the time customarily spent in silent worship in the Temple during the burning of incense.¶

HOUSE

A. Nouns.

1. oikos (οἶκος, 3624) denotes (a) “a house, a dwelling,” e.g., Matt. 9:6, 7; 11:8; it is used of the Tabernacle, as the House of God, Matt. 12:4, and the Temple similarly, e.g., Matt. 21:13; Luke 11:51, KJV, “temple,” RV, “sanctuary”; John 2:16, 17; called by the Lord “your house” in Matt. 23:38 and Luke 13:35 (some take this as the city of Jerusalem); metaphorically of Israel as God’s house, Heb. 3:2, 5, where “his house” is not Moses’, but God’s; of believers, similarly, v. 6, where Christ is spoken of as “over God’s House” (the word “own” is rightly omitted in the RV); Heb. 10:21; 1 Pet. 2:5; 4:17; of the body, Matt. 12:44; Luke 11:24; (b) by metonymy, of the members of a household or family, e.g., Luke 10:5; Acts 7:10; 11:14; 1 Tim. 3:4, 5, 12; 2 Tim. 1:16; 4:19, RV (KJV, “household”); Titus 1:11 (plural); of a local church, 1 Tim. 3:15; of the descendants of Jacob (Israel) and David, e.g., Matt. 10:6; Luke 1:27, 33; Acts 2:36; 7:42. See HOME, A, No. 1. Note (1), HOUSEHOLD.

2. oikia (οἰκία, 3614), is akin to No. 1, and used much in the same way; in Attic law oikos denoted the whole estate, oikia stood for the dwelling only; this distinction was largely lost in later Greek. In the NT it denotes (a) “a house, a dwelling,” e.g., Matt. 2:11; 5:15; 7:24-27; 2 Tim. 2:20; 2 John 10; it is not used of the Tabernacle or the Temple, as in the case of No. 1; (b) metaphorically, the heavenly abode, spoken of by the Lord as “My Father’s house,” John 14:2, the eternal dwelling place of believers; the body as the dwelling place of the soul, 2 Cor. 5:1; similarly the resurrection body of believers (id.); property, e.g., Mark 12:40; by metonymy, the inhabitants of a house, a household, e.g., Matt. 12:25; John 4:53; 1 Cor. 16:15. See HOUSEHOLD.

B. Adverb.

panoikei (πανοικί, 3832) denotes “with all the house,” Acts 16:34, i.e., “the household.”¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 5:2, oiketerion, “a habitation” (see RV) is translated “house” in the KJV, of the resurrection body (cf. oikia in the preceding verse; see above). (2) In 1 Tim. 5:13, “from house to house” is, lit., “the houses.” (3) For “in every house,” Acts 5:42 (cf. 2:46), see HOME. (4) For “them which are of the house,” 1 Cor. 1:11, KJV, see HOUSEHOLD.

For GOODMAN of the HOUSE see HOUSEHOLDER

For MASTER of the HOUSE see HOUSEHOLDER

HOUSEHOLD

A. Nouns.

1. oikos (οἶκος, 3624) is translated “household” in Acts 16:15; 1 Cor. 1:16; in the KJV of 2 Tim. 4:19 (RV, “house”). See HOUSE, No. 1.

2. oikia (οἰκία, 3614) is translated “household” in Phil. 4:22. See HOUSE, No. 2.

3. oiketeia (οἰκέτης, 3610d) denotes “a household of servants,” Matt. 24:45 (some mss. have No. 4 here).¶

4. therapeia (θεραπεία, 2322), “service, care, attention,” is also used in the collective sense of “a household,” in Luke 12:42 (see No. 3). See HEALING.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 16:10, 11, the phrase “those of the household” translates a curtailed phrase in the original, lit., “the (persons) of (ek, ‘consisting of’) the (members of the household of).” (2) In 1 Cor. 1:11, “they which are of the household (KJV, house) of Chloe” is, lit., “the ... of Chloe,” the Eng. translation being necessary to express the idiom.

B. Adjectives.

1. oikeios (οἰκέιος, 3609), akin to A, No. 1, primarily signifies “of, or belonging to, a house,” hence, “of persons, one’s household, or kindred,” as in 1 Tim. 5:8, RV, “household,” KJV “house,” marg., “kindred”; in Eph. 2:19, “the household of God” denotes the company of the redeemed; in Gal. 6:10, it is called “the household of the faith,” RV. In these two cases oikeios is used in the same sense as those mentioned under oikos (A, No. 1).¶

2. oikiakos (οἰκιακός, 3615), from A, No. 2, denotes “belonging to one’s household, one’s own”; it is used in Matt. 10:25, 36.¶

HOUSEHOLDER

A. Noun.

oikodespotes (οἰκοδεσπότης, 3617), “a master of a house” (oikos, “a house,” despotes, “a master”), is rendered “master of the house” in Matt. 10:25; Luke 13:25, and 14:21, where the context shows that the authority of the “householder” is stressed; in Matt. 24:43 and Luke 12:39, the RV “master of the house” (KJV, “goodman of the house,” does not give the exact meaning); “householder” is the rendering in both versions in Matt. 13:27, 52; 20:1; 21:33; so the RV in 20:11 (for KJV, “goodman of the house”); both have “goodman of the house” in Mark 14:14; in Luke 22:11, “goodman.” See GOODMAN.¶

B. Verb.

oikodespoteo (οἰκοδεσποτέω, 3616), corresponding to A, “to rule a house,” is used in 1 Tim. 5:14, RV, “rule the household” (KJV, “guide the house”).¶

HOUSEHOLD-SERVANT

oiketes (οἰκέτης, 3610), “a house-servant,” is translated “household-servants” in Acts 10:7; elsewhere, “servant” or “servants,” Luke 16:13; Rom. 14:4; 1 Pet. 2:18. See SERVANT.¶

HOUSETOP

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

doma (δῶμα, 1430), akin to demo, “to build,” denotes a housetop. The housetop was flat, and guarded by a low parapet wall (see Deut. 22:8). It was much frequented and used for various purposes, e.g., for proclamations, Matt. 10:27; Luke 12:3; for prayer, Acts 10:9. The house was often built round a court, across the top of which cords were fixed from the parapet walls for supporting a covering from the heat. The housetop could be reached by stairs outside the building; the paralytic in Luke 5:19 could be let down into the court or area by rolling back the covering. External flight from the housetop in time or danger is enjoined in Matt. 24:17; Mark 13:15; Luke 17:31.¶

For HOW GREAT see GREAT, Nos. 4, 5, 6

HOWL

ololuzo (ὀλολύζω, 3649), an onomatopoeic verb (expressing its significance in its sound), “to cry aloud” (the Sept. uses it to translate the Heb. ualal, e.g., Isa. 13:6; 15:3; Jer. 4:8; Ezek. 21:12; Lat., ululare, and Eng., howl are akin). was primarily used of crying aloud to the gods; it is found in Jas. 5:1 in an exhortation to the godless rich.¶

HUMBLE (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjectives.

1. tapeinos (ταπεινός, 5011) primarily signifies “low-lying.” It is used always in a good sense in the NT, metaphorically, to denote (a) “of low degree, brought low,” Luke 1:52; Rom. 12:16, KJV, “(men) of low estate,” RV, “(things that are) lowly” (i.e., of low degree); 2 Cor. 7:6, KJV, “cast down,” RV, “lowly”; the preceding context shows that this occurrence belongs to (a); Jas. 1:9, “of low degree”; (b) humble in spirit, Matt. 11:29; 2 Cor. 10:1, RV, “lowly,” KJV “base”; Jas. 4:6; 1 Pet. 5:5. See BASE, CAST, Note (7), DEGREE (Note), LOWLY.¶

2. tapeinophron, “humbleminded” (phren, “the mind”), 1 Pet. 3:8; see COURTEOUS.¶

B. Verb.

tapeinoo (ταπεινῶ, 5013), akin to A, signifies “to make low,” (a) literally, “of mountains and hills,” Luke 3:5 (passive voice); (b) metaphorically, in the active voice, Matt. 18:4; 23:12 (2nd part); Luke 14:11 (2nd part); 18:14 (2nd part); 2 Cor. 11:7 (“abasing”); 12:21; Phil. 2:8; in the passive voice, Matt. 23:12 (1st part), RV, “shall be humbled,” KJV, “shall be abased”; Luke 14:11 (ditto); 18:14 (ditto); Phil. 4:12, “to be abased”; in the passive, with middle voice sense, Jas. 4:10, “humble yourselves”; 1 Pet. 5:6 (ditto). See ABASE, LOW (to bring).¶

HUMBLENESS OF MIND, HUMILITY

tapeinophrosune (ταπεινοφροσύνη, 5012), “lowliness of mind” (tapeinos, see A, above, under HUMBLE, and phren, “the mind”), is rendered “humility of mind” in Acts 20:19, KJV (RV, “lowliness of mind”); in Eph. 4:2, “lowliness”; in Phil. 2:3, “lowliness of mind”; in Col. 2:18, 23, of a false “humility”; in Col. 3:12, KJV, “humbleness of mind,” RV, “humility”; 1 Pet. 5:5, “humility.” See LOWLINESS.¶

HUMILIATION

tapeinosis (ταπεινώσεις, 5014), akin to tapeinos (see above), is rendered “low estate” in Luke 1:48; “humiliation,” Acts 8:33; Phil. 3:21, RV “(the body of our) humiliation,” KJV, “(our) vile (body)”; Jas. 1:10, where “in that he is made low,” is, lit., “in his humiliation.” See ESTATE, LOW.¶

HUNDRED, HUNDREDFOLD

1. hekaton (ἐκατόν, 1540), an indeclinable numeral, denotes “a hundred,” e.g., Matt. 18:12, 28; it also signifies “a hundredfold,” Matt. 13:8, 23, and the RV in the corresponding passage, Mark 4:8, 20 (for KJV, “hundred”), signifying the complete productiveness of sown seed. In the passage in Mark the phrase is, lit., “in thirty and in sixty and in a hundred.” In Mark 6:40 it is used with the preposition kata, in the phrase “by hundreds.” It is followed by other numerals in John 21:11; Acts 1:15; Rev. 7:4; 14:1, 3; 21:17.

2. hekatontaplasion (ἐκατονταπλασίων, 1542), an adjective, denotes “a hundredfold,” Mark 10:30; Luke 8:8; the best mss. have it in Matt. 19:29 for pollaplasion, “many times more.” See the RV margin.¶

For multiples of a hundred, see under the numerals TWO, THREE, etc. For “a hundred years,” see YEARS.

HUNGER (Noun and Verb), HUNGERED, HUNGRY

A. Noun.

limos (λιμός, 3042) has the meanings “famine” and “hunger”; “hunger” in Luke 15:17; 2 Cor. 11:27; in Rev. 6:8, RV “famine” (KJV, “hunger”). See FAMINE.

B. Verb.

peinao (πεινάω, 3983), “to hunger, be hungry, hungered,” is used (a) literally, e.g., Matt. 4:2; 12:1; 21:18; Rom. 12:20; 1 Cor. 11:21, 34; Phil. 4:12; Rev. 7:16; Christ identifies Himself with His saints in speaking of Himself as suffering in their sufferings in this and other respects, Matt. 25:35, 42; (b) metaphorically, Matt. 5:6; Luke 6:21, 25; John 6:35.

C. Adjective.

prospeinos (πρόσπεινος, 4361) signifies “hungry” (pros, “intensive,” peina, “hunger”), Acts 10:10, KJV, “very hungry,” RV, “hungry.”¶

HURT (Noun and Verb), HURTFUL

A. Noun.

hubris (ὑβρις, 5196) is rendered “hurt” in Acts 27:10, KJV only. See HARM.

B. Verbs.

1. adikeo (ἀδικέω, 91) signifies, intransitively, “to do wrong, do hurt, act unjustly” (a, negative, and dike, “justice”), transitively, “to wrong, hurt or injure a person.” It is translated “to hurt” in the following: (a), intransitively, Rev. 9:19; (b) transitively, Luke

10:19; Rev. 2:11 (passive); 6:6; 7:2, 3; 9:4, 10; 11:5. See INJURY, OFFENDER, UNJUST, UNRIGHTEOUSNESS, WRONG, WRONG-DOER.

2. blapto (βλάπτω, 984) signifies “to injure, mar, do damage to,” Mark 16:18, “shall (in no wise) hurt (them)”; Luke 4:35, “having done (him no) hurt,” RV. Adikeo stresses the unrighteousness of the act, blapto stresses the injury done.¶

3. kakoo (κακώω, 2559), “to do evil to anyone”: see HARM.

C. Adjective.

blaberos (βλαβερός, 983), akin to B, No. 2, signifies “hurtful,” 1 Tim. 6:9, said of lusts.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 10:26.¶

HUSBAND

A. Noun.

aner (άνήρ, 435) denotes, in general, “a man, an adult male” (in contrast to anthropos, which generically denotes “a human being, male or female”); it is used of man in various relations, the context deciding the meaning; it signifies “a husband,” e.g., Matt. 1:16, 19; Mark 10:12; Luke 2:36; 16:18; John 4:16, 17, 18; Rom. 7:23. See MAN.

B. Adjectives

1. philandros (φίλανδρος, 5362), primarily, “loving man,” signifies “loving a husband,” Titus 2:4, in instruction to young wives to love their husbands, lit., “(to be) lovers of their husbands.”¶ The word occurs frequently in epitaphs.

2. hupandros (ὑπανδρος, 5220), lit., “under (i.e. subject to) a man,” married, and therefore, according to Roman law under the legal authority of the husband, occurs in Rom. 7:2, “that hath a husband.”¶

georgos (γεωργός, 1092), from ge, “land, ground,” and ergo (or erdo), “to do” (Eng., “George”), denotes (a) “a husbandman,” a tiller of the ground, 2 Tim. 2:6; Jas. 5:7; (b) “a vinedresser,” Matt. 21:33-35, 38, 40, 41; Mark 12:1, 2, 7, 9; Luke 20:9, 10, 14, 16; John 15:1, where Christ speaks of the Father as the “Husbandman,” Himself as the Vine, His disciples as the branches, the object being to bear much fruit, life in Christ producing the fruit of the Spirit, i.e., character and ways in conformity to Christ.¶

HUSBANDRY

georgion (γεώργιον, 1091), akin to the above, denotes “tillage, cultivation, husbandry,” 1 Cor. 3:9, where the local church is described under this metaphor (KJV, marg., “tillage,” RV, marg., “tilled land”), suggestive of the diligent toil of the apostle and his fellow missionaries, both in the ministry of the gospel, and the care of the church at Corinth; suggestive, too, of the effects in spiritual fruitfulness.¶ Cf. georgeomai, “to till the ground,” Heb. 6:7.¶

HUSKS

keration (κεράτιον, 2769), “a little horn” (a diminutive of keras, “a horn”; see HORN), is used in the plural in Luke 15:16, of carob pods, given to swine, and translated “husks.”¶

HYMN (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

hymnos (ὕμνος, 5215) denotes “a song of praise addressed to God” (Eng., “hymn”), Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16, in each of which the punctuation should probably be changed; in the former “speaking to one another” goes with the end of v. 18, and should be followed by a semicolon; similarly in Col. 3:16, the first part of the verse should end with the words “admonishing one another,” where a semicolon should be placed.¶

Note: The psalmos denoted that which had a musical accompaniment; the ode (Eng., “ode”) was the generic term for a song; hence the accompanying adjective “spiritual.”

B. Verb.

humneo (ὕμνέω, 5214), akin to A, is used (a) transitively, Matt. 26:30; Mark 14:26, where the “hymn” was that part of the Hallel consisting of Psalms 113-118; (b) intransitively, where the verb itself is rendered “to sing praises” or “praise,” Acts 16:25; Heb. 2:12. The Psalms are called, in general, “hymns,” by Philo; Josephus calls them “songs and hymns.”¶

HYPOCRISY

hypokrisis (ὕπόκρισις, 5272) primarily denotes “a reply, an answer” (akin to hypokrinomai, “to answer”); then, “play-acting,” as the actors spoke in dialogue; hence, “pretence, hypocrisy”; it is translated “hypocrisy” in Matt. 23:28; Mark 12:15; Luke 12:1; 1 Tim. 4:2; the plural in 1 Pet. 2:1. For Gal. 2:13 and anupokritos, “without hypocrisy,” in Jas. 3:17, see DISSIMULATION.¶

HYPOCRITE

hypokrites (ὕποκριτής, 5273), corresponding to the above, primarily denotes “one who answers”; then, “a stage-actor”; it was a custom for Greek and Roman actors to speak in large masks with mechanical devices for augmenting the force of the voice; hence the word became used metaphorically of “a dissembler, a hypocrite.” It is found only in the Synoptists, and always used by the Lord, fifteen times in Matthew; elsewhere, Mark 7:6; Luke 6:42; 11:44 (in some mss.); 12:56; 13:15.

HYSSOP

hussopos (ὑσσώπος, 5301), a bunch of which was used in ritual sprinklings, is found in Heb. 9:19; in John 19:29 the reference is apparently to a branch or rod of “hyssop,” upon which a sponge was put and offered to the Lord on the cross. The suggestion has been made that the word in the original may have been hussos, “a javelin”; there seems to be no valid reason for the supposition.¶

ego (ἐγώ, 1473) is the nominative case of the first personal pronoun. The pronoun, “I,” however, generally forms a part of the verb itself in Greek; thus luo itself means “I loose,” the pronoun being incorporated in the verb form. Where the pronoun ego is added to the verb, it is almost invariably, if not entirely, emphatic. The emphasis may not be so apparent in some instances, as e.g., Matt. 10:16, but even here it may be taken that something more of stress is present than if the pronoun were omitted. By far the greater number of instances are found in the Gospel of John, and there in the utterances of the Lord concerning Himself, e.g., 4:14, 26, 32, 38; 5:34, 36, 43, 45; 6:35, 40, 41, 48, 51 (twice), 63, 70 instances in the Epistles are Rom. 7:9, 14, 17, 20 (twice), 24, 25; there are more in that chapter than in any other outside the Gospel of John.

In other cases of the pronoun than the nominative, the pronoun is usually more necessary to the meaning, apart from any stress.

For k-ago (i.e., kai ego), see EVEN, Note (6).

IDLE

argos (ἄργός, 692) denotes “inactive, idle, unfruitful, barren” (a, negative, and ergon, “work”; cf. the verb katargeo, “to reduce to inactivity”: see ABOLISH); it is used (a) literally, Matt. 20:3, 6; 1 Tim. 5:13 (twice); Titus 1:12, RV, “idle (gluttons); 2 Pet. 1:8, RV, “idle,” KJV, “barren”; (b) metaphorically in the sense of “ineffective, worthless,” as of a word, Matt. 12:36; of faith unaccompanied by works, Jas. 2:20 (some mss. have nekra, “dead”).¶

For IDLE TALES (Luke 24:11, RV, “idle talk”) see TALK

eidolon (εἶδωλον, 1497), primarily “a phantom or likeness” (from eidōs, “an appearance,” lit., “that which is seen”), or “an idea, fancy,” denotes in the NT (a) “an idol,” an image to represent a false god, Acts 7:41; 1 Cor. 12:2; Rev. 9:20; (b) “the false god” worshipped in an image, Acts 15:20; Rom. 2:22; 1 Cor. 8:4, 7; 10:19; 2 Cor. 6:16; 1 Thess. 1:9; 1 John 5:21.¶

“The corresponding Heb. word denotes ‘vanity,’ Jer. 14:22; 18:15; ‘thing of nought,’ Lev. 19:4, marg., cf. Eph. 4:17. Hence what represented a deity to the Gentiles, was to Paul a ‘vain thing,’ Acts 14:15; ‘nothing in the world,’ 1 Cor. 8:4; 10:19. Jeremiah calls the idol a ‘scarecrow’ (‘pillar in a garden,’ 10:5, marg.), and Isaiah, 44:9-20, etc., and Habakkuk, 2:18, 19 and the Psalmist, 115:4-8, etc., are all equally scathing. It is important to notice, however, that in each case the people of God are addressed. When he speaks to idolaters, Paul, knowing that no man is won by ridicule, adopts a different line, Acts 14:15-18; 17:16, 21-31.”*

IDOLS (full of)

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, pp. 44, 45, by Hogg and Vine.

kateidolos (κατείδωλος, 2712), an adjective denoting “full of idols” (kata, “throughout,” and eidolon), is said of Athens in Acts 17:16, RV, and KJV, marg. (KJV, “wholly given to idolatry”).¶

IDOLS (offered to, sacrificed to)

1. eidolothutos (εἰδωλόθυτον, 1494) is an adjective signifying “sacrificed to idols” (eidolon, as above, and thuo, “to sacrifice”), Acts 15:29; 21:25; 1 Cor. 8:1, 4, 7, 10; 10:19 (in all these the RV substitutes “sacrificed” for the KJV); Rev. 2:14, 20 (in these the RV and KJV both have “sacrificed”). Some inferior mss. have this adjective in 1 Cor. 10:28; see No. 2. The flesh of the victims, after sacrifice, was eaten or sold.¶

2. nierothutos, “offered in sacrifice” (hieros, “sacred,” and thuo, “to sacrifice”), is found in the best mss. in 1 Cor. 10:28 (see No. 1).¶

IDOL’S TEMPLE

eidolion (or eidoleion) (εἰδωλεῖον, 1493), an “idol’s temple,” is mentioned in 1 Cor. 8:10; feasting in the temple usually followed the sacrifice.¶

IDOLATER

eidololatries (εἰδωλολάτρης, 1496), an “idolater” (from eidolon, and latris, “a hireling”), is found in 1 Cor. 5:10, 11; 6:9; 10:7; the warning is to believers against turning away from God to idolatry, whether “openly or secretly, consciously or unconsciously” (Cremer); Eph. 5:5; Rev. 21:8; 22:15.¶

IDOLATRY

eidololatria (or -eia) (εἰδωλολατρεία, 1495), whence Eng., “idolatry,” (from eidolon, and latreia, “service”), is found in 1 Cor. 10:14; Gal. 5:20; Col. 3:5; and, in the plural, in 1 Pet. 4:3.¶

Heathen sacrifices were sacrificed to demons, 1 Cor. 10:19; there was a dire reality in the cup and table of demons and in the involved communion with demons. In Rom. 1:22-25, “idolatry,” the sin of the mind against God (Eph. 2:3), and immorality, sins of the flesh, are associated, and are traced to lack of the acknowledgment of God and of gratitude to Him. An “idolater” is a slave to the depraved ideas his idols represent, Gal. 4:8, 9; and thereby, to divers lusts, Titus 3:3 (see Notes on Thess. by Hogg and Vine, p. 44).

IF: See † p. 1.

IGNORANCE, IGNORANT, IGNORANTLY

A. Nouns.

1. agnoia (ἄγνοια, 52), lit., “want of knowledge or perception” (akin to agnoeo, “to be ignorant”), denotes “ignorance” on the part of the Jews regarding Christ, Acts 3:17; of Gentiles in regard to God, 17:30; Eph. 4:18 (here including the idea of willful blindness:

---

see Rom. 1:28, not the “ignorance” which mitigates guilt); 1 Pet. 1:14, of the former unregenerate condition of those who became believers (RV, “in the time of your ignorance”).¶

2. agnosia (ἄγνοσία, 56) denotes “ignorance” as directly opposed to gnosis, which signifies “knowledge” as a result of observation and experience (a, negative, ginosko, “to know”; cf. Eng., “agnostic”); 1 Cor. 15:34 (“no knowledge”); 1 Pet. 2:15. In both these passages reprehensible “ignorance” is suggested. See KNOWLEDGE.¶

3. agnoema (ἀγνόημα, 51), “a sin of ignorance,” occurs in Heb. 9:7, “errors” (RV marg., “ignorances”).¶ For the corresponding verb in Heb. 5:2 see B, No. 1. What is especially in view in these passages is unwitting error. For Israel a sacrifice was appointed, greater in proportion to the culpability of the guilty, greater, for instance, for a priest or ruler than for a private person. Sins of “ignorance,” being sins, must be expiated. A believer guilty of a sin of “ignorance” needs the efficacy of the expiatory sacrifice of Christ, and finds “grace to help.” Yet, as the conscience of the believer receives enlightenment, what formerly may have been done in “ignorance” becomes a sin against the light and demands a special confession, to receive forgiveness, 1 John 1:8, 9.¶

4. idiotes (ιδιώτης, 2399), primarily “a private person” in contrast to a state official, hence, “a person without professional knowledge, unskilled, uneducated, unlearned,” is translated “unlearned” in 1 Cor. 14:16, 23, 24, of those who have no knowledge of the facts relating to the testimony borne in and by a local church; “rude” in 2 Cor. 11:6, of the apostle’s mode of speech in the estimation of the Corinthians; “ignorant men,” in Acts 4:13, of the speech of the apostle Peter and John in the estimation of the rulers, elders and scribes in Jerusalem.

While agrammatoi (“unlearned”) may refer to their being unacquainted with rabbinical learning, idiotai would signify “laymen,” in contrast with the religious officials. See RUDE, UNLEARNED.¶

B. Verbs.

1. agnoeo (ἄγνοέω, 50), signifies (a) “to be ignorant, not to know,” either intransitively, 1 Cor. 14:38 (in the 2nd occurrence in this verse, the RV text translates the active voice, the margin the passive); 1 Tim. 1:13, lit., “being ignorant (I did it)”; Heb. 5:2, “ignorant”; or transitively, 2 Pet. 2:12, KJV, “understand not,” RV, “are ignorant (of)”; Acts 13:27, “knew (Him) not”; 17:23, RV, “(what ye worship) in ignorance,” for KJV, “(whom ye) ignorantly (worship),” lit., “(what) not knowing (ye worship)”; also rendered by the verb “to be ignorant that,” or “to be ignorant of,” Rom. 1:13; 10:3; 11:25; 1 Cor. 10:1; 12:1; 2 Cor. 1:8; 2:11; 1 Thess. 4:13; to know not, Rom. 2:4; 6:3; 7:1; to be unknown (passive voice), 2 Cor. 6:9; Gal. 1:22; (b) “not to understand,” Mark 9:32; Luke 9:45. See KNOW, UNDERSTAND.¶

2. lanthano (λανθάνω, 2990); for 2 Pet. 3:5, 8, KJV, see FORGET.

Note: For adjectives see UNLEARNED.

ILL

kakos (κακός, 2556), “bad,” is used in the neuter as a noun in Rom. 13:10, and translated “ill.” See BAD.

Note: For phaUlos, John 5:29, RV, see EVIL, A, No. 3.

For ILLUMINATED (Heb. 10:32) see ENLIGHTEN
IMAGE

1. eikon (εἰκών, 1504) denotes “an image”; the word involves the two ideas of representation and manifestation. “The idea of perfection does not lie in the word itself, but must be sought from the context” (Lightfoot); the following instances clearly show any distinction between the imperfect and the perfect likeness.

The word is used (1) of an “image” or a coin (not a mere likeness), Matt. 22:20; Mark 12:16; Luke 20:24; so of a statue or similar representation (more than a resemblance), Rom. 1:23; Rev. 13:14, 15 (thrice); 14:9, 11; 15:2; 16:2; 19:20; 20:4; of the descendants of Adam as bearing his image, 1 Cor. 15:49, each a representation derived from the prototype; (2) of subjects relative to things spiritual, Heb. 10:1, negatively of the Law as having “a shadow of the good things to come, not the very image of the things,” i.e., not the essential and substantial form of them; the contrast has been likened to the difference between a statue and the shadow cast by it; (3) of the relations between God the Father, Christ, and man, (a) of man as he was created as being a visible representation of God, 1 Cor. 11:7, a being corresponding to the original; the condition of man as a fallen creature has not entirely effaced the “image”; he is still suitable to bear responsibility, he still has Godlike qualities, such as love of goodness and beauty, none of which are found in a mere animal; in the Fall man ceased to be a perfect vehicle for the representation of God; God’s grace in Christ will yet accomplish more than what Adam lost; (b) of regenerate persons, in being moral representations of what God is, Col. 3:10; cf. Eph. 4:24; (c) of believers, in their glorified state, not merely as resembling Christ but representing Him, Rom. 8:29; 1 Cor. 15:49; here the perfection is the work of divine grace; believers are yet to represent, not something like Him, but what He is in Himself, both in His spiritual body and in His moral character; (d) of Christ in relation to God, 2 Cor. 4:4, “the image of God,” i.e., essentially and absolutely the perfect expression and representation of the Archetype, God the Father; in Col. 1:15, “the image of the invisible God” gives the additional thought suggested by the word “invisible,” that Christ is the visible representation and manifestation of God to created beings; the likeness expressed in this manifestation is involved in the essential relations in the Godhead, and is therefore unique and perfect; “he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father,” John 14:9. “The epithet ‘invisible’ ... must not be confined to the apprehension of the bodily senses, but will include the cognizance of the inward eye also” (Lightfoot).¶

As to synonymous words, homoïoma, “likeness,” stresses the resemblance to an archetype, though the resemblance may not be derived, whereas eikon is a “derived likeness” (see LIKENESS); eidos, “a shape, form,” is an appearance, “not necessarily based on reality” (see FORM); skia, is “a shadowed resemblance” (see SHADOW); morphe is “the form, as indicative of the inner being” (Abbott-Smith); see FORM. For charakter, see No. 2.

2. charakter (χαρακτήρ, 5481) denotes, firstly, “a tool for graving” (from charasso, “to cut into, to engross”; cf. Eng., “character,” “characteristic”); then, “a stamp” or “impress,” as on a coin or a seal, in which case the seal or die which makes an impression bears the “image” produced by it, and, vice versa, all the features of the “image” correspond respectively with those of the instrument producing it. In the NT it is used metaphorically in Heb. 1:3, of the Son of God as “the very image (marg., ‘the impress’) of His substance.” RV. The phrase expresses the fact that the Son “is both personally distinct from, and yet literally equal to, Him of whose essence He is the adequate imprint” (Liddon). The Son of God is not merely his “image” (His charakter), He is the “image” or impress of His substance, or essence. It is the fact of complete similarity which this word stresses in comparison with those mentioned at the end of No. 1.¶ In the Sept., Lev. 13:28, “the mark (of the inflammation).”¶

“In John 1:1-3, Col. 1:15-17, and Heb. 1:2, 3, the special function of creating and upholding the universe is ascribed to Christ under His titles of Word, Image, and Son, respectively. The kind of Creatorship so predicated of Him is not that of a mere instrument or artificer in the formation of the world, but that of One ‘by whom, in whom, and for whom’ all things are made, and through whom they subsist. This implies the assertion of His true and absolute Godhood” (Laidlaw, in Hastings’ Bib. Dic.).

Note: The similar word charagma, “a mark” (see GRAVEN and MARK), has the narrower meaning of “the thing impressed,” without denoting the special characteristic of that which produces it, e.g., Rev. 13:16, 17. In Acts 17:29 the meaning is not “graven (charagma) by art,” but “an engraved work of art.”

IMAGINATION

1. logismos (λογισμός, 3053), “a reasoning, a thought” (akin to logizomai, “to count, reckon”), is translated “thoughts” in Rom. 2:15, suggestive of evil intent, not of mere reasonings; “imagination” in 2 Cor. 10:5 (RV, marg., “reasonings,” in each place). The word suggests the contemplation of actions as a result of the verdict of conscience. See THOUGHT.¶

2. dialogismos (διαλογισμός, 1261), dia, and No. 1, is rendered “imagination” in Rom. 1:21, carrying with it the idea of evil purposes, RV, “reasonings”; it is most frequently translated thoughts. See DISPUTE.

3. dianoia (διάνοια, 1271), strictly, “a thinking over,” denotes “the faculty of thinking”; then, “of knowing”; hence, “the understanding,” and in general, “the mind,” and so, “the faculty of moral reflection”; it is rendered “imagination” in Luke 1:51, “the imagination of their heart” signifying their thoughts and ideas. See MIND, UNDERSTANDING.

IMAGINE

meletao (μελετάω, 3191) signifies “to care for” (melete, “care”); then, “to attend to,” “be diligent in,” 1 Tim. 4:15, RV, i.e., to practice as the result of devising or planning; thirdly, “to ponder,” “imagine,” Acts 4:25, RV, marg., “meditate.” Some inferior mss. have it in Mark 13:11. See DILIGENT, MEDITATE.¶

IMITATE, IMITATOR

A. Verb.

mimeomai (μιμέομαι, 3401), “a mimic, an actor” (Eng., “mime,” etc.), is always translated “to imitate” in the RV, for KJV, “to follow,” (a) of imitating the conduct of missionaries, 2 Thess. 3:7, 9; the faith of spiritual guides, Heb. 13:7; (b) that which is good, 3 John 11. The verb is always used in exhortations, and always in the continuous tense, suggesting a constant habit or practice. See FOLLOW.

B. Nouns.

1. mimetes (μιμητής, 3402), akin to A, “an imitator,” so the RV for KJV, “follower,” is always used in a good sense in the NT. In 1 Cor. 4:16; 11:1; Eph. 5:1; Heb. 6:12, it is used in exhortations, accompanied by the verb ginomai, “to be, become,” and in the continuous tense (see A) except in Heb. 6:12, where the aorist or momentary tense indicates a decisive act with permanent results; in 1 Thess. 1:6; 2:14, the accompanying verb is in the aorist tense, referring to the definite act of conversion in the past. These instances, coupled with the continuous tenses referred to, teach that what we became at conversion we must diligently continue to be thereafter. See FOLLOW, Note (4).¶

2. summimetes (συνμιμητής, 4831) denotes “a fellow imitator” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), Phil. 3:17, RV, “imitators together” (KJV, “followers together”). See FOLLOW, Note (4).¶

IMMEDIATELY

1. parachrema (παράχρημα, 3916), lit., “with the matter (or business) itself” (para, “with,” chrema, “a business,” or “event”), and so, “immediately,” Matt. 21:19 (KJV, “presently”), 20; Luke 1:64; 4:39; 5:25; 8:44, 47, 55; 13:13; 18:43; 19:11; 22:60; Acts 3:7; 5:10; 12:23; 13:11; 16:26, 33; it is thus used by Luke only, save for the two instances in Matthew. See FORTHWITH. It is also rendered “presently,” “soon,” “straightway.”¶

2. euthus (εὐθύς, 2117): see FORTHWITH.

3. eutheos (εὐθέως, 2112): ditto.

4. exautes (ἐξάυτης, 1824): ditto.

IMMORTAL, IMMORTALITY

athanasia (ἀθανασία, 110), lit., “deathlessness” (a, negative, thanatos, “death”), is rendered “immortality” in 1 Cor. 15:53, 54, of the glorified body of the believer; 1 Tim. 6:16, of the nature of God. Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) show that in early times the word had the wide connotation of freedom from death; they also quote Ramsay (Luke the Physician, p. 273), with reference to the use of the word in sepulchral epitaphs. In a papyrus writing of the sixth century, “a petitioner says that he will send up ‘unceasing (athanatous)’ hymns to the Lord Christ for the life of the man with whom he is pleading.” In the NT, however, athanasia expresses more than deathlessness, it suggests the quality of the life enjoyed, as is clear from 2 Cor. 5:4; for the believer what is mortal is to be “swallowed up of life.”¶

Note: The adjective aphthartos, translated “immortal” in 1 Tim. 1:17, KJV, does not bear that significance, it means “incorruptible.” So with the noun aphtharsia, “incorruption,” translated “immortality,” in the KJV of Rom. 2:7 and 2 Tim. 1:10. See CORRUPT, B, No. 3, and C, No. 2.

IMMUTABLE, IMMUTABILITY

ametathetos (ἀμετάθετος, 276), an adjective signifying “immutable” (a, negative, metatithemi, “to change”), Heb. 6:18, where the “two immutable things” are the promise and the oath. In v. 17 the word is used in the neuter with the article, as a noun, denoting “the immutability,” with reference to God’s counsel. Examples from the papyri show that the word was used as a technical term in connection with wills, “The connotation adds considerably to the force of Heb. 6:17 (and foll.)” (Moulton and Milligan).¶

IMPART

1. prosanatithemi (προσανατίθημι, 4323) is used in the middle voice in the NT, in Gal. 1:16, “conferred,” or “had recourse to,” and 2:6, RV, “imparted.” See CONFER.¶

2. metadidomi (μεταδίδωμι, 3330): see GIVE, No. 4.

IMPEDIMENT

mogilalos (μογιλάλος, 3424) denotes “speaking with difficulty” (mogis, “hardly,” laleo, “to talk”), “stammering,” Mark 7:32; some mss. have moggilalos, “thick-voiced” (from moggos, “with a hoarse, hollow voice”).¶ In the Sept., Isa. 35:6 “(the tongue) of stammerers.”¶

IMPENITENT

ametanoetos (ἀμετανόητος, 279), lit., “without change of mind” (a, negative, metanoeo, “to change one’s mind,” meta, signifying “change,” nous, “the mind”), is used in Rom. 2:5, “impenitent” (or “unrepentant”).¶ Moulton and Milligan show from the papyri writings that the word is also used “in a passive sense, ‘not affected by change of mind,’ like ametameletos in Rom. 11:29,” “without repentance.”

IMPLACABLE

aspondos (ἄσπονδος, 786) lit. denotes “without a libation” (a, negative, sponde, “a libation”), i.e., “without a truce,” as a libation accompanied the making of treaties and compacts; then, “one who cannot be persuaded to enter into a covenant,” “implacable,” 2 Tim. 3:3 (KJV, “truce-breakers”). Some mss. have this word in Rom. 1:31.¶

Note: Trench (Syn. Sec. lii) contrasts aspondos with asunthetos; see Note under COVENANTBREAKERS. Aspondos may signify “untrue to one’s promise,” asunthetos “not abiding by one’s covenant, treacherous.”

For IMPLEAD see ACCUSE, B, No. 2

IMPLANTED

emphutos (ἐμφυτος, 1721), “implanted,” or “rooted” (from emphuo, “to implant”), is used in Jas. 1:21, RV, “implanted,” for KJV, “engrafted,” of the Word of God, as the “rooted word,” i.e., a word whose property it is to root itself like a seed in the heart. “The KJV seems to identify it with emphuteuton, which however would be out of place here, since the word is sown, not grafted, in the heart” (Mayor).¶

anaidia (or anaideia) (ἀναίδεια, 335), denotes “shamelessness, importunity” (a, negative, n, euphonic, and aidos, “shame, modesty”), and is used in the Lord’s illustration concerning the need of earnestness and perseverance in prayer, Luke 11:8. If shameless persistence can obtain a boon from a neighbor, then certainly earnest prayer will receive our Father’s answer.¶

IMPOSED

epikeimai (ἐπικείμεαι, 1945) denotes “to be placed on, to lie on,” (a) literally, as of the stone on the sepulchre of Lazarus, John 11:38; of the fish on the fire of coals, 21:9; (b) figuratively, of a tempest (to press upon), Acts 27:20; of a necessity laid upon the apostle Paul, 1 Cor. 9:16; of the pressure of the multitude upon Christ to hear Him, Luke 5:1, “pressed upon”; of the insistence of the chief priests, rulers and people that Christ should be crucified, Luke 23:23, “were instant”; of carnal ordinances “imposed” under the Law until a time of reformation, brought in through the High Priesthood of Christ, Heb. 9:10. See INSTANT, LIE, PRESS.¶

IMPOSSIBLE

A. Adjectives.

1. adunatos (ἀδύνατος, 102), from a, negative, and dunatos, “able, strong,” is used (a) of persons, Acts 14:8, “impotent”; figuratively, Rom. 15:1, “weak”; (b) of things, “impossible,” Matt. 19:26; Mark 10:27; Luke 18:27; Heb. 6:4, 18; 10:4; 11:6; in Rom. 8:3, “for what the Law could not do,” is, more lit., “the inability of the law”; the meaning may be either “the weakness of the Law,” or “that which was impossible for the Law”; the latter is perhaps preferable; literalism is ruled out here, but the sense is that the Law could neither justify nor impart life.¶

2. anendektos (ἀνένδεκτος, 418) signifies “inadmissible” (a, negative, n, euphonic, and endechomai, “to admit, allow”), Luke 17:1, of occasions of stumbling, where the meaning is “it cannot be but that they will come.”¶

B. Verb.

adunateo (ἀδυνατέω, 101) signifies “to be impossible” (corresponding to A, No. 1), “unable”; in the NT it is used only of things, Matt. 17:20, “(nothing) shall be impossible (unto you)”; Luke 1:37. KJV “(with God nothing) shall be impossible”; RV, “(no word from God—a different construction in the best mss.) shall be void of power”; rhema may mean either “word” or “thing” (i.e., fact).¶ In the Sept. the verb is always used of things and signifies either to be “impossible” or to be impotent, e.g., Gen. 18:14; Lev. 25:35, “he fail”; Deut. 17:8; Job 4:4, “feeble”; 42:2; Dan. 4:6; Zech. 8:6.

IMPOSTORS

goes (γόης, 1114) primarily denotes “a wailer” (goao, “to wail”); hence, from the howl in which spells were chanted, “a wizard, sorcerer, enchanter,” and hence, “a juggler, cheat, impostor,” rendered “impostors” in 2 Tim. 3:13, RV (KJV, “seducers”); possibly the false teachers referred to practiced magical arts; cf. v. 8.¶

IMPOTENT

A. Adjectives.

1. adunatos (ἀδύνατος, 102): see IMPOSSIBLE, A, No. 1.

2. asthenes (ἀσθενής, 772), “without strength” (a, negative, sthenos, strength), is translated “impotent” in Acts 4:9. See FEEBLE, SICK, WEAK.

B. Verb.

astheneo (ἀσθενέω, 770), “to be without strength” (akin to A, No. 2), is translated “impotent folk” in John 5:3, KJV; cf. v. 7 (the present participle, lit., “being impotent”). See DISEASED, SICK, WEAK.

IMPRISON, IMPRISONMENT

A. Verb.

phulakizo (φυλακίζω, 5439), “to imprison,” akin to phulax, “a guard, a keeper,” and phulasso, “to guard,” and B, below, is used in Acts 22:19.¶

B. Noun.

phulake (φυλακή, 5438), besides its other meanings, denotes “imprisonment,” in 2 Cor. 6:5 (plural) and Heb. 11:36. See CAGE.

IMPULSE

horme (ὁρμή, 3730) denotes (a) “an impulse” or “violent motion,” as of the steersman of a vessel, Jas. 3:4, RV, “impulse” (KJV omits); (b) “an assault, onset,” Acts 14:5. See ASSAULT.¶

IMPUTE

1. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049), “to reckon, take into account,” or, metaphorically, “to put down to a person’s account,” is never rendered in the RV by the verb “to impute.” In the following, where the KJV has that rendering, the RV uses the verb “to reckon,” which is far more suitable, Rom. 4:6, 8, 11, 22, 23, 24; 2 Cor. 5:19; Jas. 2:23. See ACCOUNT, and especially, in the above respect, RECKON.

2. ellogao, or -eo (ἐλλογέω, 1677) (the -ao termination is the one found in the Koine, the language covering the NT period), denotes “to charge to one’s account, to lay to one’s charge,” and is translated “imputed” in Rom. 5:13, of sin as not being “imputed when there is no law.” This principle is there applied to the fact that between Adam’s transgression and the giving of the Law at Sinai, sin, though it was in the world, did not partake of the character of transgression; for there was no law. The law of conscience existed, but that is not in view in the passage, which deals with the fact of external commandments given by God. In Philem. 18 the verb is rendered “put (that) to (mine) account.” See ACCOUNT.¶

INASMUCH AS

1. katho (καθό, 2526), lit., “according to what” (kata, “according to,” and ho, the neuter of the relative pronoun), is translated “inasmuch as” in 1 Pet. 4:13, KJV (RV, “insomuch as”); in Rom. 8:26, “as (we ought)”; in 2 Cor. 8:12, RV, “according as” (KJV, “according to that”). See INSOMUCH.¶

2. eph'hoson, lit., “upon how much” (epi, “upon,” hosos, “how much”), is translated “inasmuch as” in Matt. 25:40, 45; Rom. 11:13.¶

3. kathoti (καθότι, 2530): see ACCORDING AS, No. 1.

4. kath' hoson, kata, “according to,” and hosos, “how much,” is translated “inasmuch as” in Heb. 3:3, KJV (RV, “by so much as”); 7:20; 9:27, RV (KJV, “as”).

Note: In Phil. 1:7, the phrase “inasmuch as” translates the present participle of the verb eimi, “to be,” lit., “(ye) being (all partakers).”

INCENSE (burn)

A. Noun.

thumiama (θυμίαμα, 2368) denotes “fragrant stuff for burning, incense” (from thuo, “to offer in sacrifice”), Luke 1:10, 11; in the plural, Rev. 5:8 and 18:13, RV (KJV, “odors”); 8:3, 4, signifying “frankincense” here. In connection with the tabernacle, the “incense” was to be prepared from stacte, onycha, and galbanum, with pure frankincense, an equal weight of each; imitation for private use was forbidden, Exod. 30:34-38. See ODOR.¶ Cf. thumiaterion, “a censer,” Heb. 9:4, and libanos, “frankincense,” Rev. 18:13; see FRANKINCENSE.¶

B. Verb.

thumiao (θυμιάω, 2370), “to burn incense” (see A), is found in Luke 1:9.¶

INCLOSE

sunkleio (συγκλείω, 4788), “to shut together, shut in on all sides” (sun, “with,” kleio, “to shut”), is used of a catch of fish, Luke 5:6; metaphorically in Rom. 11:32, of God’s dealings with Jew and Gentile, in that He has “shut up (KJV, concluded) all unto disobedience, that He might have mercy upon all.” There is no intimation in this of universal salvation. The meaning, from the context, is that God has ordered that all should be convicted of disobedience without escape by human merit, that He might display His mercy, and has offered the gospel without national distinction, and that when Israel is restored, He will, in the resulting Millennium, show His mercy to all nations. The word “all” with reference to Israel, is to be viewed in the light of v. 26, and, in reference to the Gentiles, in the light of vv. 12-25; in Gal. 3:22, 23 (“the Scripture hath shut up all things under sin”), the apostle shows that, by the impossibility of being justified by keeping the Law, all, Jew and Gentile, are under sin, so that righteousness might be reckoned to all who believe. See CONCLUDE, SHUT.¶

INCONTINENCY, INCONTINENT

A. Noun.

akrasia (ἀκρασία, 192) denotes “want of power” (a, negative, kratos, “power”); hence, “want of self-control, incontinency,” 1 Cor. 7:5; in Matt. 23:25, “excess.” See EXCESS.¶

B. Adjective.

akrates (ἀκράτης, 193) denotes “powerless, impotent”; in a moral sense, unrestrained, “without self-control,” 2 Tim. 3:3, RV (KJV, “incontinent”). See SELF-CONTROL.¶

For INCORRUPTIBLE and INCORRUPTION, see under CORRUPT

For the noun INCREASE, see GROW, No. 1, Note

INCREASE (Verb)

1. auxano (αὐξάνω, 837): see GROW, No. 1.

2. perisseo (περισσεύω, 4052), “to be over and above, to abound,” is translated “increased” in Acts 16:5, of churches; “increase” in the KJV of 1 Thess. 4:10 (RV, abound). See ABOUND, under ABUNDANCE, B, No. 1.

3. pleonazo (πλεονάζω, 4121), “to make to abound,” is translated “make (you) to increase” in 1 Thess. 3:12, with No. 2. See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 3.

4. prokopto (προεναίρχομαι, 4278) is translated by the verb “to increase” in Luke 2:52 and in the KJV of 2 Tim. 2:16 (RV, “will proceed further”).

See ADVANCE, PROCEED.

5. prostithemi (προστίθημι, 4369), “to put to, add to,” is translated “increase” in Luke 17:5. See ADD, No. 2.

Note: For “increased in strength” see STRENGTH.

INCREDIBLE

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571) is once rendered “incredible,” Acts 26:8, of the doctrine of resurrection; elsewhere it is used of persons, with the meaning “unbelieving.” See BELIEF, C, Note (3).

INDEBTED (to be)

opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784), “to owe, to be a debtor,” is translated “is indebted” in Luke 11:4. Luke does not draw a parallel between our forgiving and God’s; he speaks of God’s forgiving sins, of our forgiving “debts,” moral debts, probably not excluding material debts. Matthew speaks of our sins as opheilemata, “debts,” and uses parallel terms. Ellicott and others suggest that Luke used a term more adapted to the minds of gentile readers. The inspired language provides us with both, as intended by the Lord.

INDEED

1. men (μέν, 3303), a conjunctive particle (originally a form of men, “verily, truly,” found in Heb. 6:14.¶), usually related to an adversative conjunction or particle, like de, in the following clause, which is placed in opposition to it. Frequently it is untranslatable; sometimes it is rendered “indeed,” e.g., Matt. 3:11; 13:32; 17:11, RV (KJV, “truly”); 20:23; 26:41; (some mss. have it in Mark 1:8); Mark 9:12, RV (KJV, “verily”).

2. alethes (ἀληθής, 227), “true,” is rendered “indeed” in John 6:55 (twice), see RV marg.; some mss. have No. 3 here.

3. alethos (ἀληθώς, 230), “truly” (from No. 2), is translated “indeed” in John 1:47; 4:42; 8:31.

4. ontos (ὅντως, 3689), an adverb from on, the present participle of eimi, “to be,” denotes “really, actually”; it is translated “indeed” in Mark 11:32 (RV, “verily”); Luke 24:34; John 8:36; 1 Cor. 14:25, RV (KJV “of a truth”); 1 Tim. 5:3, 5, 16; 6:15, RV, where some mss. have aionios, “eternal” (KJV); in Gal. 3:21, “verily.”

5. kai gar signifies “and in fact,” “for also” (kai, “and,” or “even,” or “also”; gar, “for”; gar always comes after the first word in the sentence); it is translated “For indeed” in the RV of Acts 19:40; 2 Cor. 5:4; 1 Thess. 4:10 (KJV, “and indeed”); KJV and RV in Phil. 2:27. This phrase has a confirmatory sense, rather than a modifying effect, e.g.,

Matt. 15:27, RV, “for even,” instead of the KJV “yet”; the woman confirms that her own position as a Gentile “dog” brings privilege, “for indeed the dogs, etc.”

6. oude gar “for neither,” is rendered “neither indeed” in Rom. 8:7.

7. alla kai, “but even,” or “but also,” is rendered “nay indeed” in 2 Cor. 11:1, RV (KJV, “and indeed”; RV marg., “but indeed”).

8. kai (καί, 2532), preceded by the particle ge, “at least, ever,” is rendered “indeed” in Gal. 3:4, RV (KJV, “yet”). Kai alone is rendered “indeed” in Phil. 4:10, RV (KJV, “also”).

9. ei meti, “if not indeed,” is rendered “unless indeed” in 2 Cor. 13:5, RV (KJV, “except”).

INDIGNATION

A. Noun.

aganaktesis (ἀγανάκτησις, 24) is rendered “indignation” in 2 Cor. 7:11. See ANGER, A, Note (3).¶

Notes: (1) Orge, “wrath,” is translated “indignation” in Rev. 14:10, KJV; RV, “anger.” See ANGER, A, No. 1. (2) For thumos, see ANGER, A, Notes (1) and (2). (3) In Acts 5:17, the KJV translates zelos by “indignation” (RV “jealousy”); in Heb. 10:27, KJV, “indignation” (RV, “fierceness”; marg., “jealousy”). See JEALOUSY.

B. Verb.

aganakteo (ἀγανακτέω, 23), “to be indignant, to be moved with indignation” (from agan, “much,” achomai, “to grieve”), is translated “were moved with indignation” of the ten disciples against James and John, Matt. 20:24; in Mark 10:41, RV (KJV, “they began to be much displeased”); in Matt. 21:15, of the chief priests and scribes, against Christ and the children, RV, “they were moved with indignation” (KJV, “they were sore displeased”); in 26:8, of the disciples against the woman who anointed Christ’s feet, “they had indignation”; so Mark 14:4; in Mark 10:14, of Christ, against the disciples, for rebuking the children, “He was moved with indignation,” RV (KJV, “he was much displeased”); in Luke 13:14, of the ruler of the synagogue against Christ for healing on the Sabbath, “being moved with indignation,” RV, KJV, “(answered) with indignation.” See ANGER, B, Note (3).¶

INDULGENCE

1. anesis (ἀνεσις, 425), “a loosening, relaxation of strain” (akin to aniemi, “to relax, loosen”), is translated “indulgence” in Acts 24:23, RV (KJV, “liberty”), in the command of Felix to the centurion, to moderate restrictions upon Paul. The papyri and inscriptions illustrate the use of the word as denoting relief (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.) In the NT it always carries the thought of relief from tribulation or persecution; so 2 Thess. 1:7, “rest”; in 2 Cor. 2:13 and 7:5 it is rendered “relief,” RV (KJV, “rest”); in 8:13, “eased.” Josephus speaks of the rest or relief (anesis) from plowing and tillage, given to the land in the Year of Jubilee. See EASE, LIBERTY, RELIEF, REST.¶

2. plesmone (πλησμονή, 4140), “a filling up, satiety” (akin to pimplemi, “to fill”), is translated “indulgence (of the flesh)” in Col. 2:23, RV (KJV, “satisfying”). Lightfoot translates the passage “yet not really of any value to remedy indulgence of the flesh.” A possible meaning is, “of no value in attempts at asceticism.” Some regard it as indicating that the ascetic treatment of the body is not of any honor to the satisfaction of the flesh (the reasonable demands of the body): this interpretation is unlikely. The following paraphrase well presents the contrast between the asceticism which “practically treats the body as an enemy, and the Pauline view which treats it as a potential instrument of a righteous life”: ordinances, “which in fact have a specious look of wisdom (where there is no true wisdom), by the employment of self-chosen acts of religion and humility (and) by treating the body with brutality instead of treating it with due respect, with a view to meeting and providing against over-indulgence of the flesh” (Parry, in the Camb. Greek Test).¶

For INFALLIBLE see PROOF

For INFANT see BABE

INFERIOR

hettaomai, or hessaomai (ἡττάω, 2274), “to be less or inferior,” is used in the passive voice, and translated “ye were made inferior,” in 2 Cor. 12:13, RV, for KJV, “ye were inferior,” i.e., were treated with less consideration than other churches, through his independence in not receiving gifts from them. In 2 Pet. 2:19, 20 it signifies to be overcome, in the sense of being subdued and enslaved. See OVERCOME.¶ Cf. hesson, “less,” 2 Cor. 12:15; in 1 Cor. 11:17, “worse”;¶ hettema, “a loss, a spiritual defect,” Rom. 11:12; 1 Cor. 6:7.¶ Also elattoo, “to decrease, make lower,” John 3:30; Heb. 2:7, 9.¶

For INFIDEL (RV, UNBELIEVER) see BELIEF, C, Note (3)

INFIRMITY

1. ostheneia (ὀσθένεια, 769), lit., “want of strength” (a, negative, sthenos, “strength”), “weakness,” indicating inability to produce results, is most frequently translated “infirmity,” or “infirmities”; in Rom. 8:26, the RV has “infirmity” (KJV, “infirmities”); in 2 Cor. 12:5, 9, 10, “weaknesses” and in 11:30, “weakness” (KJV, “infirmities”); in Luke 13:11 the phrase “a spirit of infirmity” attributes her curvature directly to satanic agency. The connected phraseology is indicative of trained medical knowledge on the part of the writer.

2. asthenema (ἀσθένημα, 771), akin to No. 1, is found in the plural in Rom. 15:1, “infirmities,” i.e., those scruples which arise through weakness of faith. The strong must support the infirmities of the weak (adunatos) by submitting to self-restraint.¶

Note: In Luke 7:21, KJV, nosos, “a disease,” is translated “infirmities” (RV, “diseases”).

INFLICTED

Note: This is inserted in 2 Cor. 2:6 to complete the sentence; there is no corresponding word in the original, which lit. reads “this punishment, the (one) by the majority.”

INFORM

1. emphanizo (ἐμφανίζω, 1718), “to manifest, exhibit,” in the middle and passive voices, “to appear, also signifies to declare, make known,” and is translated “informed” in Acts 24:1; 25:2, 15. For all the occurrences of the word see APPEAR, A, No. 5.

2. katecheo (κατηχέω, 2727) primarily denotes “to resound” (kata, “down,” echos “a sound”); then, “to sound down the ears, to teach by word of mouth, instruct, inform” (Eng., “catechize, catechumen”); it is rendered, in the passive voice, by the verb “to inform,” in Acts 21:21, 24. Here it is used of the large numbers of Jewish believers at Jerusalem whose zeal for the Law had been stirred by information of accusations made against the Apostle Paul, as to certain anti-Mosaic teaching he was supposed to have given the Jews. See INSTRUCT, TEACH.

INHERIT, INHERITANCE

A. Verbs.

1. kleronomeo (κληρονομέω, 2816) strictly means “to receive by lot” (kleros, “a lot,” nemomai, “to possess”); then, in a more general sense, “to possess oneself of, to receive as one’s own, to obtain.” The following list shows how in the NT the idea of inheriting broadens out to include all spiritual good provided through and in Christ, and particularly all that is contained in the hope grounded on the promises of God.

The verb is used of the following objects:

“(a) birthright, that into the possession of which one enters in virtue of sonship, not because of a price paid or of a task accomplished, Gal. 4:30; Heb. 1:4; 12:17:

(b) that which is received as a gift, in contrast with that which is received as the reward of law-keeping, Heb. 1:14; 6:12 (“through,” i.e., “through experiences that called for the exercise of faith and patience,” but not ‘on the ground of the exercise of faith and patience.’):

(c) that which is received on condition of obedience to certain precepts, 1 Pet. 3:9, and of faithfulness to God amidst opposition, Rev. 21:7:

(d) the reward of that condition of soul which forbears retaliation and self-vindication, and expresses itself in gentleness of behavior.... Matt. 5:5. The phrase “inherit the earth,” or “land,” occur several times in OT. See especially Ps. 37:11, 22:

(e) the reward (in the coming age, Mark 10:30) of the acknowledgment of the paramountcy of the claims of Christ, Matt. 19:29. In the three accounts given of this incident, see Mark 10:17-31; Luke 18:18-30, the words of the question put to the Lord are, in Matthew, “that I may have,” in Mark and Luke, “that I may inherit.” In the report of the Lord’s word to Peter in reply to his subsequent question, Matthew has “inherit eternal life,” while Mark and Luke have “receive eternal life.” It seems to follow that the meaning of the word “inherit” is here ruled by the words “receive” and “have,” with which it is interchanged in each of the three Gospels, i.e., the less common word “inherit” is to be regarded as equivalent to the more common words “receive” and “have.” Cf. Luke 10:25:

(f) the reward of those who have shown kindness to the “brethren” of the Lord in their distress, Matt. 25:34:

(g) the kingdom of God, which the morally corrupt cannot “inherit,” 1 Cor. 6:9, 10, the “inheritance” of which is likewise impossible to the present physical constitution of man, 1 Cor. 15:50:

(h) incorruption, impossible of “inheritance” by corruption, 1 Cor. 15:50.”*

See HEIR.¶

Note: In regard to (e), the word clearly signifies entrance into eternal life without any previous title; it will not bear the implication that a child of God may be divested of his “inheritance” by the loss of his right of succession.

2. kleroo (κληρώω, 2820) is used in the passive voice in Eph. 1:11, KJV, “we have obtained an inheritance”; RV, “we were made a heritage.” See HERITAGE.¶

B. Nouns.

1. kleronomia (κληρονομία, 2817), “a lot” (see A), properly “an inherited property, an inheritance.” “It is always rendered inheritance in NT, but only in a few cases in the Gospels has it the meaning ordinarily attached to that word in English, i.e., that into possession of which the heir enters only on the death of an ancestor. The NT usage may be set out as follows: (a) that property in real estate which in ordinary course passes from father to son on the death of the former, Matt. 21:38; Mark 12:7; Luke 12:13; 20:14; (b) a portion of an estate made the substance of a gift, Acts 7:5; Gal. 3:18, which also is to be included under (c); (c) the prospective condition and possessions of the believer in the new order of things to be ushered in at the return of Christ, Acts 20:32; Eph. 1:14; 5:5; Col. 3:24; Heb. 9:15; 1 Pet. 1:4; (d) what the believer will be to God in that age, Eph. 1:18.”†

Note: In Gal. 3:18, “if the inheritance is of the Law,” the word “inheritance” stands for “the title to the inheritance.”

2. kleros (κλῆρος, 2819), (whence Eng., “clergy”), denotes (a) “a lot,” given or cast (the latter as a means of obtaining divine direction), Matt. 27:35; Mark 15:24; Luke 23:24; John 19:24; Acts 1:26; (b) “a person’s share” in anything, Acts 1:17, RV, “portion” (KJV, “part”); 8:21, “lot”; (c) “a charge” (lit., “charges”) “allotted,” to elders, 1 Pet. 5:3, RV [KJV, “(God’s) heritage”]; the figure is from portions of lands allotted to be cultivated; (d) “an inheritance,” as in No. 1 (c); Acts 26:18; Col. 1:12. See CHARGE, A, No. 4, LOT(S), PART, PORTION.¶

INIQUITY

1. anomia (ἀνομία, 458), lit., “lawlessness” (a, negative, nomos, “law”), is used in a way which indicates the meaning as being lawlessness or wickedness. Its usual rendering in the NT is “iniquity,” which lit. means unrighteousness. It occurs very frequently in the Sept., especially in the Psalms, where it is found about 70 times. It is used (a) of iniquity in general, Matt. 7:23; 13:41; 23:28; 24:12; Rom. 6:19 (twice); 2 Cor. 6:14, RV, “iniquity” (KJV, “unrighteousness”); 2 Thess. 2:3, in some mss.; the KJV and RV follow those which have hamartia, “(man of) sin”; 2:7, RV, “lawlessness” (KJV, “iniquity”); Titus 2:14; Heb. 1:9; 1 John 3:4 (twice), RV, “(doeth) ... lawlessness” and “lawlessness” (KJV, “transgresseth the law” and “transgression of the law”); (b) in the plural, of acts or manifestations of lawlessness, Rom. 4:7; Heb. 10:17 (some inferior mss. have it in 8:12, for the word hamartia). See LAWLESSNESS, TRANSGRESSION, UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.¶

Note: In the phrase “man of sin,” 2 Thess. 2:3, the word suggests the idea of contempt of Divine law, since the Antichrist will deny the existence of God.

2. adikia (ἀδικία, 93) denotes “unrighteousness,” lit., “unrightness” (a, negative, dike, “right”), a condition of not being right, whether with God, according to the standard of His holiness and righteousness, or with man, according to the standard of what man knows to be right by his conscience. In Luke 16:8 and 18:6, the phrases lit. are, “the steward of unrighteousness” and “the judge of injustice,” the subjective genitive describing their character; in 18:6 the meaning is “injustice” and so perhaps in Rom. 9:14. The word is usually translated “unrighteousness,” but is rendered “iniquity” in Luke 13:27; Acts 1:18; 8:23; 1 Cor. 13:6, KJV (RV, “unrighteousness”); so in 2 Tim. 2:19; Jas. 3:6.

3. adikema (ἀδίκημα, 92) denotes “a wrong, injury, misdeed” (akin to No. 2; from adikeo, “to do wrong”), the concrete act, in contrast to the general meaning of No. 2, and translated “a matter of wrong,” in Acts 18:14; “wrongdoing,” 24:20 (KJV, “evil-doing”); “iniquities,” Rev. 18:5. See EVIL, WRONG.¶

4. poneria (πονηρία, 4189), akin to poneo, “to toil” (cf. poneros, “bad, worthless”; see BAD), denotes “wickedness,” and is so translated in Matt. 22:18; Mark 7:22 (plural); Luke 11:39; Rom. 1:29; 1 Cor. 5:8; Eph. 6:12; in Acts 3:26, “iniquities.” See WICKEDNESS.¶ Cf. kakia, “evil.”

5. paranomia (παρανομία, 3892), “lawbreaking” (para, “against,” nomos, “law”), denotes “transgression,” so rendered in 2 Pet. 2:16, for KJV, “iniquity.”¶

INJURE, INJURIOUS, INJURY

A. Verb.

adikeo (ἀδικέω, 91), akin to Nos. 2 and 3, under INIQUITY, is usually translated either “to hurt,” or by some form of the verb “to do wrong.” In the KJV of Gal. 4:12, it is rendered “ye have (not) injured me,” which the RV corrects, both in tense and meaning, to “ye did (me no) wrong.” See HURT.

B. Adjective.

hubristes (ὕβριστής, 5197), “a violent, insolent man” (akin to C), is translated “insolent” in Rom. 1:30, RV, for KJV, “despiteful”; in 1 Tim. 1:13, “injurious.” See DESPITEFUL, INSOLENT.¶

C. Noun.

hubris (ὕβρις, 5196): see HARM, A, No. 4.

INK

melan (μέλαν, 3188), the neuter of the adjective melas, “black” (see Matt. 5:36; Rev. 6:5, 12), denotes “ink,” 2 Cor. 3:3; 2 John 12; 3 John 13.¶

INN

1. kataluma (κατάλυμα, 2646): see GUESTCHAMBER.

2. pandocheion (πανδοχείον, 3829), lit., “a place where all are received” (pas, “all,” dechomai, “to receive”), denotes “a house for the reception of strangers,” a caravanserai, translated “inn,” in Luke 10:34, in the parable of the good samaritan. Cattle and beasts of burden could be sheltered there, and this word must thereby be distinguished from No. 1.¶ Cf. pandocheus in the next verse, “(the) host.”¶

INNER

1. eso (ἔσω, 2080), an adverb connected with eis, “into,” is translated “inner” in the KJV of Eph. 3:16 (RV, “inward”); after verbs of motion, it denotes “into,” Mark 15:16; after verbs of rest, “within.” See WITHIN.

2. esoterós (ἐσώτερος, 2082), the comparative degree of No. 1, denotes “inner,” Acts 16:24 (of a prison); Heb. 6:19, with the article, and practically as a noun, “that which is within (the veil),” lit., “the inner (of the veil).”¶ Cf. Eng., esoteric.

Note: For “inner chamber(s)” see CHAMBER, No. 1.

INNOCENT

1. athoos (ἄθωος, 121) primarily denotes “unpunished” (a, negative, thoe, “a penalty”); then, “innocent,” Matt. 27:4, “innocent blood,” i.e., the blood of an “innocent” person, the word “blood” being used both by synecdoche (a part standing for the whole), and by metonymy (one thing standing for another), i.e., for death by execution (some mss. have dikaion, “righteous”); v. 24, where Pilate speaks of himself as “innocent.”¶

2. akakos (ἄκακος, 172), lit., “not bad” (a, negative, kakos, “bad”), denotes “guileless, innocent,” Rom. 16:18, RV, “innocent” (KJV, “simple”); “harmless” in Heb. 7:26. See HARMLESS.¶

INNUMERABLE

1. anarithmetos (ἀναρίθμητος, 382), a, negative, n, euphonic, arithmeo, “to number,” is used in Heb. 11:12.¶

2. urias (μυριάς, 3461) denotes either “ten thousand,” or, “indefinitely, a myriad, a numberless host,” in the plural, Acts 19:19; lit. “five ten-thousands,” Rev. 5:11; 9:16; in the following, used of vast numbers, Luke 12:1, KJV, “an innumerable multitude,” RV, “the many thousands” (RV marg., “the myriads”); Acts 21:20, “thousands”; Heb. 12:22, “innumerable hosts”; Jude 14, “ten thousands” (RV, marg., in each place, “myriads”). See COMPANY, THOUSANDS.¶ Cf. the adjective urios, “ten thousand,” Matt. 18:24; 1 Cor. 4:15; 14:19.¶

INQUIRE, INQUIRY (make)

A. Verbs.

1. punthanomai (πυνθάνομαι, 4441), “to inquire,” is translated “inquired” in Matt. 2:4, and Acts 21:33, RV (KJV, “demanded”); in Luke 15:26; 18:36 and Acts 4:7 (KJV, “asked”); “inquired” (KJV, “inquired”) in John 4:52; “inquire” (KJV, “inquire”) in Acts 23:20; in Acts 23:34 it denotes “to learn by inquiry,” KJV, and RV, “when (he) understood”; elsewhere it is rendered by the verb “to ask,” Acts 10:18, 29; 23:19. See ASK, UNDERSTAND.¶

2. zeteo (ζητέω, 2212), “to seek,” is rendered “inquire” in John 16:19; “inquire ... for” in Acts 9:11. See ABOUT, B, Note, DESIRE, ENDEAVOR, GO, Note (2), a, REQUIRE, SEEK.

3. dierotao (διερωτάω, 1331), “to find by inquiry, to inquire through to the end” (dia, intensive, erotao, “to ask”) is used in Acts 10:17.¶

4. exetazo (ἐξετάζω, 1833), “to examine, seek out, inquire thoroughly,” is translated “inquire” in Matt. 10:11, KJV (RV, “search out”); in John 21:12, “durst inquire,” RV [KJV, “(durst) ask”]; in Matt. 2:8, RV, “search out” (KJV, “search”). See ASK, SEARCH.¶

Notes: (1) Epizeteo, “to seek after or for” (epi, “after,” zeteo, “to seek”), is rendered “inquire” in Acts 19:39, KJV (RV, “seek”). (2) Sunzeteo, “to search” or “examine together,” is rendered “to inquire” in Luke 22:23, KJV (RV, “to question”). (3) Ekzeteo, “to seek out, search after,” is rendered “have inquired” in 1 Pet. 1:10, KJV (RV, “sought”). (4) Diaginosko, “to ascertain exactly,” or “to determine,” is rendered “inquire” in Acts 23:15, KJV (RV, “judge”). (5) Akriboo, “to learn by diligent or exact inquiry,” is rendered “inquired diligently” and “had diligently inquired” respectively, in Matt. 2:7, 16, KJV (RV, “learned carefully,” and “had carefully learned”). (6) In 2 Cor. 8:23, the words “any inquire” are inserted to complete the meaning, lit., “whether about Titus.”

B. Noun.

zetesis (ζήτησις, 2214) primarily denotes “a search”; then, “an inquiry, a questioning, debate”; it forms part of a phrase translated by the verb “to inquire,” in Acts 25:20, RV, “how to inquire,” lit. “(being perplexed as to) the inquiry.” See QUESTION.

INSCRIPTION

epigrapho (ἐπιγράφω, 1924), “to write upon, inscribe” (epi, “upon,” grapho, “to write”), is usually rendered by the verb “to write upon, over, or in,” Mark 15:26; Heb. 8:10; 10:16; Rev. 21:12; it is translated by a noun phrase in Acts 17:23, “(with this) inscription,” lit., “(on which) had been inscribed.”¶ Cf. the noun epigraphē, “a superscription.”

INSIDE

1. entos (ἐντός, 1787), an adverb denoting “within,” or “among,” is once used with the article, as a noun, of “the inside (of the cup and of the platter),” Matt. 23:26, RV (KJV, “that which is within etc.”); elsewhere, Luke 17:21. See WITHIN.¶

2. esothēn (ἐσωθεν, 2081), an adverb denoting “from within,” or “within,” is used with the article, as a noun, of the inner being, the secret intents of the heart, which, the Lord declared, God made, as well as the visible physical frame, Luke 11:40. In v. 39, it is rendered “inward part.” See INWARD, WITHIN.

INSOLENT

hubristes (ὕβριστής, 5197), “violent, injurious, insolent,” is rendered “insolent” in Rom. 1:30, RV (KJV, “despiteful”). See DESPITEFUL, INJURIOUS.

INSOMUCH THAT, or AS

1. hoste (ὥστε, 5620), a consecutive particle, is used with the meaning “insomuch that,” or “so that,” or “that,” to express the effect or result of anything, e.g., Matt. 8:24; 13:54; 15:31; 27:14; Acts 1:19 (KJV, “insomuch as”); 5:15; 19:12 (KJV, “so that”); 2 Cor. 1:8; Gal. 2:13. See WHEREFORE.

2. eis to (καθό, 2526), lit., “unto the,” followed by the infinitive mood, is sometimes used of result, and is rendered “insomuch that” in 2 Cor. 8:6.

3. katho is translated “insomuch as” in 1 Pet. 4:13, RV (KJV, “inasmuch as”). See INASMUCH.

INSPIRATION OF GOD, INSPIRED OF GOD

theopneustos (θεόπνευστος, 2315), “inspired by God” (Theos, “God,” pneo, “to breathe”), is used in 2 Tim. 3:16, of the Scriptures as distinct from non-inspired writings. Wycliffe, Tyndale, Coverdale and the Great Bible have the rendering “inspired of God.”

INSTANT, BE INSTANT, INSTANTLY

A. Verbs.

1. epikeimai (ἐπικείμει, 1945), “to lie” or “press upon,” is rendered “they were instant” in Luke 23:23 (Amer. RV, “they were urgent”). See IMPOSE.

2. ephistemi (ἐφίστημι, 2186), “to set upon or by,” is used in the NT intransitively, either in the middle voice, or in certain tenses of the active, signifying “to stand by, be present, be at hand, come on or upon,” and is translated “be instant” in 2 Tim. 4:2. See ASSAULT, COME, etc.

Note: For proskartereo, in Rom. 12:12, KJV, rendered “continuing instant,” RV, “steadfastly,” see CONTINUE, No. 9.

B. Noun.

Note: The word hora, “an hour,” is translated “instant” in Luke 2:38, KJV; the RV renders it “hour.” See HOUR.

C. Adverb.

spoudaios (σπουδαίως, 4709), “earnestly, diligently,” is rendered “instantly” in Luke 7:4, KJV (RV, “earnestly”). See EARNEST.

Note: For the phrase en ekteneia, rendered “instantly” in Acts 26:7, KJV, see EARNEST, D.

INSTRUCT, INSTRUCTION, INSTRUCTOR

A. Verbs.

1. katecheo (κατηχέω, 2727), “to teach orally, inform, instruct,” is translated by the verb “to instruct” in Luke 1:4; Acts 18:25 (RV marg., “taught by word of mouth”); Rom. 2:18; 1 Cor. 14:19, RV (KJV, “teach”). See INFORM, TEACH.

2. paideuo (παιδεύω, 3811), “to train children, teach,” is rendered “was instructed,” in Acts 7:22, RV (KJV, “learned”); “instructing” in 2 Tim. 2:25, KJV (RV, “correcting”); Titus 2:12, RV, “instructing” (KJV, “teaching”). The verb is used of the family discipline, as in Heb. 12:6, 7, 10; cf. 1 Cor. 11:32; 2 Cor. 6:9; Rev. 3:19. In 1 Tim. 1:20 (passive voice) it is translated “might be taught,” RV (KJV, “may learn”), but, “however the passage is to be understood, it is clear that not the impartation of knowledge but severe discipline is intended. In Luke 23:16, 22, Pilate, since he had declared the Lord guiltless of the charge brought against Him, and hence could not punish Him, weakly offered, as a concession to the Jews, to ‘chastise, paideuo, Him, and let Him go.’”*

This sense of paideuo is confirmed by Heb. 12:6, where it is joined (in a quotation from the Sept. of Prov. 3:12) with “to lash or scourge.” Cf. the scene in the Pilgrims Progress where a shining one with a whip of small cords “chastised sore” the pilgrims foolishly caught in the net of the flatterer and said to them, “As many as I love I rebuke and chasten” (paideuo). See CORRECT, TEACH.¶

3. matheteuo (μαθητεύω, 3100), used transitively, “to make a disciple,” is translated “which is instructed” in Matt. 13:52, KJV (RV, “who hath been made a disciple”). See DISCIPLE.

4. mueo, “to initiate into the mysteries,” is used in the passive voice, in Phil. 4:12, KJV, “I am instructed,” RV, “have I learned the secret.” See LEARN.¶

5. probibazo (προβιβάζω, 4264), “to lead forward, lead on” (the causal of probaino, “to go forward”; pro, “forward,” bibazo, “to lift up”), is used in the passive voice In Matt. 14:8, and translated, KJV, “being before instructed,” RV, “being put forward.” Some mss. have it in Acts 19:33, instead of No. 6.¶

6. sumbibazo (συμβιβάζω, 4822), “to join, knit, unite” (sun, “with”), then, “to compare,” and so, “to prove,” hence, “to teach, instruct,” is so rendered in 1 Cor. 2:16; it is found in the best mss. in Acts 19:33 (RV marg., “instructed”). See COMPACTED, CONCLUDE, KNIT TOGETHER, PROVE.

B. Nouns.

(INSTRUCTION)

paideia (παιδεία, 3809), “training, instruction,” is translated “instruction” in 2 Tim. 3:16. See CHASTEN.

(INSTRUCTOR)

1. paidagogos (παιδαγωγός, 3807), “a guide,” or “guardian” or “trainer of boys,” lit., “a child-leader” (pais, “a boy, or child,” ago, “to lead”), “a tutor,” is translated “instructors” in 1 Cor. 4:15, KJV (RV, “tutors”); here the thought is that of pastors rather than teachers; in Gal. 3:24, 25, KJV, “schoolmaster” (RV, “tutor,”), but here the idea of instruction is absent. “In this and allied words the idea is that of training, discipline, not of impartation of knowledge. The paidagogos was not the instructor of the child; he exercised a general supervision over him and was responsible for his moral and physical well-being. Thus understood, paidagogos is appropriately used with ‘kept in ward’ and ‘shut up,’ whereas to understand it as equivalent to ‘teacher’ introduce, an idea entirely foreign to the passage, and throws the Apostle’s argument into confusion.”*¶ Cf. epitropos, “a steward, guardian, tutor.”

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 163, 164.

2. paideutes (παιδευτής, 3810), akin to A, No. 2, denotes (a) “an instructor, a teacher,” Rom. 2:20, KJV, “an instructor” (RV, “a corrector”); (b) “one who disciplines, corrects, chastens,” Heb. 12:9, RV, “to chasten” [KJV, “which corrected” (lit., “correctors”)]. In (a) the discipline of the school is in view; in (b) that of the family. See CORRECTOR.¶ Cf. epitropos, “a steward, guardian, tutor.”

INSTRUMENTS

hoplon (ὄπλον, 3696), “a tool, instrument, weapon,” is used metaphorically in Rom. 6:13 of the members of the body as “instruments” (marg., “weapons”), negatively, of unrighteousness, positively, of righteousness. The metaphor is probably military (cf. v. 23, “wages,” i.e. soldiers’ pay); Moule renders it “implements”; “weapons” seems to be the meaning. See ARMOR, WEAPONS.

INSURRECTION

A. Nouns.

1. stasis (στάσις, 4714), akin to histemi, “to make to stand,” denotes (a) primarily, “a standing or place,” Heb. 9:8; (b) “an insurrection, sedition,” translated “insurrection” in Mark 15:7; “insurrections” in Acts 24:5, RV (KJV, “sedition”); in Luke 23:19, 25 (KJV “sedition”), “riot,” Acts 19:40, RV (KJV, “uproar”); (c) “a dissension,” Acts 15:2; in Acts 23:7, 10, “dissension.” See DISSENSION.¶

2. stasiastes (συστασιαστής, 4955v) denotes “a rebel, revolutionist, one who stirs up sedition” (from stasiazo, “to stir up sedition”), Mark 15:7, “had made insurrection.”

Some mss. have sustasiastes, a fellow-rioter, a fellow-mover of sedition, KJV, “had made insurrection with (him).”¶

B. Verb.

katephistemi (κατεφίστημι, 2721) signifies “to rise up against” (lit., “to cause to stand forth against,” kata, “against,” epi, “forth,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), Acts 18:12, KJV, “made insurrection” (RV, “rose up against”).¶

INTEND

1. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), “to will, wish, desire, purpose” (expressing a fixed resolve, the deliberate exercise of volition), is translated “intend” in Acts 5:28, and “intending” in 12:4. See DESIRE.

2. thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to will, be willing, desire” (less strong, and more frequent than No. 1), is translated “intending” in Luke 14:28, KJV (RV, “desiring”). See DESIRE.

3. mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about to do a thing,” indicating simply the formation of a design, is translated “intend” in Acts 5:35, KJV (RV, “are about”); “intending,” in Acts 20:7, RV (KJV, “ready”); 20:13 (1st part); in the 2nd part of the v., RV, “intending” (KJV, “minding”).

INTENT

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

1. ennoia (ἐννοια, 1771), primarily “a thinking, idea, consideration,” denotes “purpose, intention, design” (en, in, nous, mind); it is rendered “intents” in Heb. 4:12; “mind,” in 1 Pet. 4:1 (RV, marg., “thought”). See MIND.¶ Cf. Enthumesis, “thought” (see DEVICE).

2. logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word, account, etc.,” sometimes denotes “a reason, cause; intent,” e.g., Matt. 5:32, “cause”; it is rendered “intent” in Acts 10:29. See CAUSE.

Notes: (1) The phrase eis touto, lit., “unto this,” i.e., “for this purpose,” is rendered “for this (KJV, ‘that’) intent” in Acts 9:21, RV (2) The phrase eis to, “unto the,” followed by a verb in the infinitive mood, is translated “to the intent” in 1 Cor. 10:6. (3) The phrase pros ti, lit., “in reference to what,” is rendered “for what intent” in John 13:28. (4) In John 11:15 the conjunction hina, “to the end that,” is translated “to the intent,” and in Eph. 3:10, “to the intent that.”

INTERCESSIONS

A. Noun.

enteuxis (ἐντευξις, 1783) primarily denotes “a lighting upon, meeting with” (akin to B); then, “a conversation”; hence, “a petition,” a meaning frequent in the papyri; it is a technical term for approaching a king, and so for approaching God in “intercession”; it is rendered “prayer” in 1 Tim. 4:5; in the plural in 2:1 (i.e., seeking the presence and hearing of God on behalf of others).¶ For the synonymous words, proseuche, deesis, see PRAYER.

B. Verbs.

1. entunchano (ἐντυγχάνω, 1793), primarily “to fall in with, meet with in order to converse”; then, “to make petition,” especially “to make intercession, plead with a person,” either for or against others; (a) against, Acts 25:24, “made suit to (me),” RV [KJV, “have dealt with (me)”), i.e., against Paul; in Rom. 11:2, of Elijah in “pleading” with God, RV (KJV, “maketh intercession to”), against Israel; (b) for, in Rom. 8:27, of the intercessory work of the Holy Spirit for the saints; v. 34, of the similar intercessory work of Christ; so Heb. 7:25. See DEAL WITH, PLEAD, SUIT.¶

2. hyperentunchano (ὑπερεντυγχάνω, 5241), “to make a petition” or “intercede on behalf of another” (hyper, “on behalf of,” and No. 1), is used in Rom. 8:26 of the work of the Holy Spirit in making “intercession” (see No. 1, v. 27).¶

INTEREST

tokos (τόκος, 5110), primarily “a bringing forth, birth” (from tikto, “to beget”), then, “an offspring,” is used metaphorically of the produce of money lent out, “interest,” usury, Matt. 25:27; Luke 19:23. See USURY.¶

INTERPOSED

mesiteuo (μεσιτεύω, 3315), “to mediate, give surety” (akin to mesites, “a mediator”), is translated “interposed” in Heb. 6:17, RV. See CONFIRM, No. 5.¶

INTERPRET, INTERPRETATION, INTERPRETER

A. Verbs.

1. hermeneuo (ἐρμηνεύω, 2059), (cf. Hermes, the Greek name of the pagan god Mercury, who was regarded as the messenger of the gods), denotes “to explain, interpret” (Eng., “hermeneutics”), and is used of explaining the meaning of words in a different language, John 1:38 (in some mss.), see No. 3; 9:7 (“Siloam,” interpreted as “sent”); Heb. 7:2 (Melchizedec, “by interpretation,” lit., “being interpreted,” King of righteousness).¶

2. diermeneuo (διερμηνεύω, 1329), a strengthened form of No. 1 (dia, “through,” used intensively), signifies “to interpret fully, to explain.” In Luke 24:27, it is used of Christ in interpreting to the two on the way to Emmaus “in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself,” RV, “interpreted” (KJV, “expounded”); in Acts 9:36, it is rendered “is by interpretation,” lit., “being interpreted” (of Tabitha, as meaning Dorcas); in 1 Cor. 12:30 and 14:5, 13, 27, it is used with reference to the temporary gift of tongues in the churches; this gift was inferior in character to that of prophesying unless he who spoke in a “tongue” interpreted his words, 14:5; he was, indeed, to pray that he might interpret, v. 13; only two, or at the most three, were to use the gift in a gathering, and that “in turn” (RV); one was to interpret; in the absence of an interpreter, the gift was not to be exercised, v. 27. See EXPOUND.¶

3. methermeneuo (μεθερμηνεύω, 3177), “to change or translate from one language to another (meto, implying change, and No. 1), to interpret,” is always used in the passive voice in the NT, “being interpreted,” of interpreting the names, Immanuel, Matt. 1:23; Golgotha, Mark 15:22; Barnabas, Acts 4:36; in Acts 13:8, of Elymas, the verb is rendered “is ... by interpretation,” lit., “is interpreted”; it is used of interpreting or translating sentences in Mark 5:41; 15:34; in the best mss., John 1:38 (Rabbi, interpreted as “Master”); v. 41 (Messiah, interpreted as “Christ”); see No. 1.¶

B. Nouns.

(INTERPRETATION)

1. hermeneia (or -ia) (ἐρμηνεία, 2058), akin to A, No. 1, is used in 1 Cor. 12:10; 14:26 (see A, No. 2).¶

2. epilysis (ἐπίλυσις, 1955), from epiluo, “to loose, solve, explain,” denotes “a solution, explanation,” lit., “a release” (epi, “up,” luo, “to loose”), 2 Pet. 1:20, “(of private) interpretation”; i.e., the writers of Scripture did not put their own construction upon the “Godbreathed” words they wrote.¶ Note: For “hard of interpretation,” Heb. 5:11, RV, see UTTER, Note (1).

(INTERPRETER)

diermeneutes (διερμηνευτής, 1328), lit., “a thorough interpreter” (cf. A, No. 2), is used in 1 Cor. 14:28 (some mss. have hermeneutes).¶

INTERROGATION

eperotema (ἐπερώτημα, 1906), primarily a question or inquiry, denotes “a demand or appeal”; it is found in 1 Pet. 3:21, RV, “interrogation” (KJV, “answer”). See ANSWER, Note. Some take the word to indicate that baptism affords a good conscience, an appeal against the accuser.¶

For INTO see †, p. 1

INTREAT, INTREATY

A. Verbs.

1. erotao (ἐρωτάω, 2065), “to ask, beseech,” is rendered “intreat,” e.g., in Phil. 4:3, KJV (RV, “beseech”). See ASK.

2. parakaleo (παρακαλέω, 3870), “to beseech, comfort, exhort,” is rendered by the verb “to intreat” in Luke 8:31, RV, “intreated” (KJV, “besought”); 15:28; Acts 9:38, RV, “intreating” (KJV, “desiring”); 28:20, RV (KJV, “called for”); 1 Cor. 4:13; 2 Cor. 9:5, RV (KJV, “exhort”); 10:1, RV (KJV, “beseech”); 1 Tim. 5:1, KJV (RV, “exhort”). See BESEECH.

3. paraiteomai (παραιτέομαι, 3868), “to ask to be excused, to beg,” etc., is rendered “intreated” in Heb. 12:19, See AVOID.

B. Adjective.

eupeithes (εὐπειθής, 2138), “ready to obey” (eu, “well,” peithomai, “to obey, to be persuaded”), “compliant,” is translated “easy to be intreated” in Jas. 3:17, said of the wisdom that is from above.¶

C. Noun.

paraklesis (παράκλησις, 3874), “an appeal, a comfort, exhortation,” etc., is translated “intreaty” in 2 Cor. 8:4.

For INTRUDE (Col. 2:18) see DWELL, A, No. 11

INTRUST

pisteuo (πιστεύω, 4100), “to believe,” also means “to entrust,” and in the active voice is translated “to commit,” in Luke 16:11; John 2:24; in the passive voice, “to be intrusted with,” Rom. 3:2, RV, “they were intrusted with” (KJV, “unto them were committed”), of Israel and the oracles of God; 1 Cor. 9:17, RV, “I have ... intrusted to me” (KJV, “is committed unto me”), of Paul and the stewardship of the gospel; so Gal. 2:7; Titus 1:3; in 1 Thess. 2:4, where he associates with himself his fellow missionaries, RV, “to be intrusted with” (KJV, “to be put in trust with”). See BELIEVE, COMMIT.

INVENTORS

epheuretes (ἐφευρέτης, 2182), “an inventor, contriver” (akin to epheurisko, “to find out”; epi, “on,” used intensively, heurisko, “to find”), occurs in the plural in Rom. 1:30.¶

INVISIBLE

aoratos (ἀόρατος, 517), lit., “unseen” (a, negative, horao, “to see”), is translated “invisible” in Rom. 1:20, of the power and divinity of God; of God Himself, Col. 1:15; 1 Tim. 1:17; Heb. 11:27; of things unseen, Col. 1:16.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 1:2; Isa. 45:3, “unseen (treasures).” ¶

INWARD (man, part), INWARDLY

1. eso (ἐσω, 2080), “within, inward,” is used adjectivally in Rom. 7:22, “(the) inward (man)”; 2 Cor. 4:16, with “man” expressed in the preceding clause, but not repeated in the original, “(our) inward (man)” (some mss. have esothern, “from within”); Eph. 3:16, RV, “(the) inward (man)” (KJV, “inner”). See INNER, WITHIN.

2. esothēn (ἐσῶθεν, 2081) is used in Luke 11:39, as a noun with the article, “part” being understood, “(your) inward part”; in Matt. 7:15 it has its normal use as an adverb, “inwardly.” See WITHIN.

Note: In Rom. 2:29 the phrase en to krupto, lit., “in (the) secret, or hidden” (“part” being understood) is rendered “inwardly,” said of a spiritual Jew, in contrast to the one who is merely naturally circumcised and so is one outwardly. See HIDE, SECRET.

IRKSOME

okneros (ὀκνηρός, 3636), “shrinking, timid” (from okneo, “to shrink, delay”), is used negatively in Phil. 3:1, RV, “irksome” (KJV, “grievous”), i.e., “I do not hesitate”; in Matt. 25:26, and Rom. 12:11, “slothful.” See GRIEVOUS, SLOTHFUL.¶

IRON

A. Noun.

sideros (σίδηρος, 4604), “iron,” occurs in Rev. 18:12.¶

B. Adjective.

sidereos (σιδήρεος, 4603), “of iron,” occurs in Acts 12:10, of an iron gate; “of iron,” Rev. 2:27; 9:9; 12:5; 19:15.¶

ISLAND, ISLE

1. nesos (νῆσος, 3520), “an island,” occurs in Acts 13:6; 27:26; 28:1, 7, 9, 11; Rev. 1:9; 6:14; 16:20.¶

2. nesion (νησίον, 3519), a diminutive of No. 1, “a small island,” occurs in Acts 27:16, Cauda, RV.¶

ISSUE

A. Nouns.

1. ekbasis (ἐκβασίς, 1545), “a way out,” “way of escape,” 1 Cor. 10:13 (ek, “out,” baino, “to go”), is rendered “issue” in Heb. 13:7, RV, for KJV, “end,” regarding the manner of life of deceased spiritual guides. See END.¶

2. rhusis (ῥύσις, 4511), “a flowing” (akin to rheo, “to flow”), “an issue,” is used in Mark 5:25; Luke 8:43, 44.¶

Note: In Matt. 22:25, KJV, sperma, “seed,” is translated “issue” (RV, “seed”).

B. Verb.

ekporeuo (ἐκπορεύομαι, 1607), “to cause to go forth” (ek, “out,” poreuo, “to cause to go”), is used in the middle voice in Rev. 9:17, 18, of the coming forth of fire, smoke and brimstone from the mouths of the symbolic horses in a vision, KJV, “issued” (the RV renders it by the verb “to proceed”). See COME, DEPART, GO, PROCEED.

IT

Note: The pronouns used are the same, in their neuter forms, as Nos. 1, 2, 3 under HE.

ITCHING

knetho (κνήθω, 2833), “to scratch, tickle,” is used in the passive voice, metaphorically, of an eagerness to hear, in 2 Tim. 4:3, lit., “itched (as to the hearing),” of those who, not enduring sound doctrine, heap to themselves teachers.¶

ITSELF

Note: The pronouns used are the same in their neuter forms, as those under HIMSELF.

IVORY

elephantinos (ἐλεφάντινος, 1661), an adjective from elephas (whence Eng., elephant), signifies “of ivory,” Rev. 18:12.¶

J

JACINTH

A. Noun.

huakinthos (ὕακινθος, 5192) primarily denoted “a hyacinth,” probably the dark blue iris; then, “a precious stone,” most likely the sapphire, Rev. 21:20.¶

B. Adjective.

huakinthinος (ὕακίνθινος, 5191) signifies “hyacinthine,” perhaps primarily having the color of the hyacinth. Some regard its color as that of the martagon lily, a dusky red. According to Swete, the word in Rev. 9:17 is “doubtless meant to describe the blue smoke of a sulphurous flame.”¶

JAILER

desmophulax (δεσμοφύλαξ, 1200), “a prison keeper, jailer” (desmos, “a band,” phulax, “a guard, keeper”), occurs in Acts 16:23, 27, 36.¶

For JANGLING (1 Tim. 1:6, KJV) see TALKING (vain)

JASPER

iaspis (ἰασπις, 2393), a Phoenician word (cf. Heb. uashpneh, e.g., Exod. 28:20; 39:16), seems to have denoted a translucent stone of various colors, especially that of fire, Rev. 4:3; 21:11, 18, 19. The sardius and the jasper, of similar color, were the first and last stones on the breastplate of the high priest, Ex. 28:17, 20.¶

JEALOUS, JEALOUSY

A. Noun.

zelos (ζήλος, 2205), “zeal, jealousy,” is rendered “jealousy” in the RV (KJV, “envying”) in Rom. 13:13; 1 Cor. 3:3; Jas. 3:14, 16; in 2 Cor. 12:20 (KJV, “envyings”); in Gal. 5:20, RV “jealousies” (KJV, “emulations”); in Acts 5:17 (KJV, “indignation”); in 13:45 (KJV, “envy”); in 2 Cor. 11:2 it is used in the phrase “with a godly jealousy,” lit., “with a jealousy of God” (RV, marg.). See ENVY.

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

B. Verbs.

1. zeloo (ζηλόω, 2206), akin to A, “to be jealous, to burn with jealousy” (otherwise, to seek or desire eagerly), is rendered “moved with jealousy,” in Acts 7:9 and 17:5, RV (KJV, “moved with envy”); in 1 Cor. 13:4, “envieth (not),” KJV and RV; in Jas. 4:2, RV marg., “are jealous” (text “covet;” KJV, “desire to have”). See AFFECT, Note, DESIRE.

2. parazeloo (παραζηλόω, 3863), “to provoke to jealousy” (para, “beside,” used intensively, and No. 1), is found in Rom. 10:19 and 11:11, of God’s dealings with Israel through his merciful dealings with Gentiles; in 11:14, RV, “I may provoke to jealousy” (KJV, “... emulation”), of the apostle’s evangelical ministry to Gentiles with a view to stirring his fellow nationals to a sense of their need and responsibilities regarding the gospel; in 1 Cor. 10:22, of the provocation of God on the part of believers who compromise their divine relationship by partaking of the table of demons; in Gal. 5:20, of the works of the flesh.¶

For JEOPARDY see DANGER

JESTING

eutrapelia (εὐτραπεία, 2160) properly denotes “wit, facetiousness, versatility” (lit., “easily turning,” from eu, “well,” trepo, “to turn”). It was used in the literal sense to describe the quick movements of apes and persons. Pericles speaks of the Athenians of his day (430 B.C) as distinguished by a happy and gracious “flexibility.” In the next century Aristotle uses it of “versatility” in the give and take of social intercourse, quick repartee. In the sixth century, B.C, the poet Pindar speaks of one Jason as never using a word of “vain lightness,” a meaning approaching its latest use. Its meaning certainly deteriorated, and it came to denote “coarse jesting, ribaldry,” as in Eph. 5:4, where it follows morologia, “foolish talking.”¶

JESUS

iesous (Ἰησοῦς, 2424) is a transliteration of the Heb. “Joshua,” meaning “Jehovah is salvation,” i.e., “is the Savior,” “a common name among the Jews, e.g., Ex. 17:9; Luke 3:29 (RV); Col. 4:11. It was given to the Son of God in Incarnation as His personal name, in obedience to the command of an angel to Joseph, the husband of His Mother, Mary, shortly before He was born, Matt. 1:21. By it He is spoken of throughout the Gospel narratives generally, but not without exception, as in Mark 16:19, 20; Luke 7:13, and a dozen other places in that Gospel, and a few in John.

“ ‘Jesus Christ’ occurs only in Matt. 1:1, 18; 16:21, marg.; Mark 1:1; John 1:17; 17:3. In Acts the name ‘Jesus’ is found frequently. ‘Lord Jesus’ is the normal usage, as in Acts 8:16; 19:5, 17; see also the reports of the words of Stephen, 7:59, of Ananias, 9:17, and of Paul, 16:31; though both Peter, 10:36, and Paul, 16:18, also used ‘Jesus Christ.’

“In the Epistles of James, Peter, John and Jude, the personal name is not once found alone, but in Rev. eight times (RV), 1:9; 12:17; 14:12; 17:6; 19:10 (twice); 20:4; 22:16.

“In the Epistles of Paul ‘Jesus’ appears alone just thirteen times, and in the Hebrews eight times; in the latter the title ‘Lord’ is added once only, at 13:20. In the Epistles of James, Peter, John, and Jude, men who had companied with the Lord in the days of His flesh, ‘Jesus Christ’ is the invariable order (in the RV) of the Name and Title, for this was the order of their experience; as ‘Jesus’ they knew Him first, that He was Messiah they learnt finally in His resurrection. But Paul came to know Him first in the glory of heaven, Acts 9:1-6, and his experience being thus the reverse of theirs, the reverse order, 'Christ Jesus,' is of frequent occurrence in his letters, but, with the exception of Acts 24:24, does not occur elsewhere in the RV.

"In Paul's letters the order is always in harmony with the context. Thus 'Christ Jesus' describes the Exalted One who emptied Himself, Phil. 2:5, and testifies to His pre-existence; 'Jesus Christ' describes the despised and rejected One Who was afterwards glorified, Phil. 2:11, and testifies to His resurrection. 'Christ Jesus' suggests His grace, 'Jesus Christ' suggests His glory."* * From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 16, 29.

JEW(-S) (live as do the), JEWESS, JEWISH, JEWRY, JEWS' RELIGION

A. Adjectives.

1. ioudaios (Ἰουδαῖος, 2453), is used (a) adjectivally, with the lit. meaning, "Jewish," sometimes with the addition of aner, "a man," Acts 10:28; 22:3; in 21:39 with anthropos, in some mss. (a man in the generic sense); the best mss. omit the phrase here; in 13:6, lit., "a Jewish false-prophet"; in John 3:22, with the word chora, "land" or "country," signifying "Judean," lit., "Judean country"; used by metonymy for the people of the country; (b) as a noun, "a Jew, Jews," e.g., Matt. 2:2; Mark 7:3. The name "Jew" is primarily tribal (from Judah). It is first found in 2 Kings 16:6, as distinct from Israel, of the northern kingdom. After the Captivity it was chiefly used to distinguish the race from Gentiles, e.g., John 2:6; Acts 14:1; Gal. 2:15, where it denotes Christians of "Jewish" race; it distinguishes Jews from Samaritans, in John 4:9; from proselytes, in Acts 2:10. The word is most frequent in John's gospel and the Acts; in the former "it especially denotes the typical representatives of Jewish thought contrasted with believers in Christ ... or with other Jews of less pronounced opinions, e.g., John 3:25; 5:10; 7:13; 9:22" (Lukyn Williams, in Hastings' Bib. Dic.); such representatives were found, generally, in opposition to Christ; in the Acts they are chiefly those who opposed the apostles and the gospel. In Rom. 2:28, 29 the word is used of ideal "Jews," i.e., "Jews" in spiritual reality, believers, whether "Jews" or Gentiles by natural birth. The feminine, "Jewess," is found in Acts 16:1; 24:24.

It also denotes Judea, e.g., Matt. 2:1; Luke 1:5; John 4:3, the word "country" being understood [cf. (a) above]. In Luke 23:5 and John 7:1, where the KJV has "Jewry," the RV translates it as usual, "Judea."

2. ioudaikos (Ἰουδαϊκός, 2451) denotes "Jewish," Titus 1:14.¶

B. Noun.

ioudaismos (Ἰουδαϊσμός, 2454), "Judaism," denotes "the Jews' religion," Gal. 1:13, 14, and stands, not for their religious beliefs, but for their religious practices, not as instituted by God, but as developed and extended from these by the traditions of the Pharisees and scribes. In the Apocrypha it denotes comprehensively "the Government, laws, institutions and religion of the Jews."¶

C. Verb.

ioudaizo (ἰουδαίζω, 2450), lit., “to Judaize,” i.e., to conform to “Jewish” religious practices and manners, is translated “to live as do the Jews,” in Gal. 2:14.¶

D. Adverb.

ioudaikos (ἰουδαϊκώς, 2452), “in Jewish fashion,” is translated “as do the Jews,” in Gal. 2:14.¶

JEWELS

chrusion (χρυσίον, 5553), “gold,” is used of ornaments in 1 Pet. 3:3, RV, “jewels.” See GOLD, No. 2.

JOIN

2. proskollao (προσκολλάω, 4347), “to stick to,” a strengthened form of No. 1, with pros, “to,” intensive, is used in the passive voice, reflexively, in a metaphorical sense, with the meanings (a) “to join oneself to,” in Acts 5:36; (b) “to cleave to,” of the husband with regard to the wife, Matt. 19:5; Mark 10:7; in Eph. 5:31, KJV, “shall cleave to” (KJV, “shall be joined to”). See CLEAVE.¶

3. su(n)zeugnumi (συνεύγνυμι, 4801), “to yoke together” (sun, “with,” zeugos, “a yoke”), is used metaphorically of union in wedlock, in Matt. 19:6; Mark 10:9.¶

4. sunomoreo (συννομορέω, 4927), “to border on,” is used of a house as being contiguous with a synagogue, in Acts 18:7, “joined hard to.”¶

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 1:10, katartizo, “to render complete, to perfect” (kata, “down,” intensive, and artios, “complete, jointed”), “to restore,” is translated “be perfectly joined together,” KJV (RV, “be perfected together”); see FIT. (2) In Eph. 4:16, sunarmologeo, “to fit” or “frame together,” is translated “fitly joined together,” KJV (RV, “fitly framed ... together”); cf. 2:21.¶

JOINT

1. harmos (ἄρμός, 719), “a joining, joint” (akin to harmozo, “to fit, join”), is found in Heb. 4:12, figuratively (with the word “marrow”) of the inward moral and spiritual being of man, as just previously expressed literally in the phrase “soul and spirit.”¶

2. haphe (ἄφή, 860), “a ligature, joint” (akin to hapto, “to fit, to fasten”), occurs in Eph. 4:16 and Col. 2:19.¶

For JOINT-HEIR see HEIR

JOT

iota (ἰώτα, 2503), from the Heb. uod, the smallest Hebrew letter, is mentioned by the Lord in Matt. 5:18 (together with keriaia, “a little horn, a tittle, the point or extremity” which distinguishes certain Hebrew letters from others), to express the fact that not a single item of the Law will pass away or remain unfulfilled.¶

JOURNEY (Noun and Verb), JOURNEYINGS

A. Nouns.

1. hodos (ὁδός, 3598), “a way, path, road,” used of a traveler’s way, a “journey,” is rendered “journey” in Matt. 10:13; Mark 6:8; Luke 2:44, “a day’s journey” (probably to Beeroth, six miles north of Jerusalem); 9:3; 11:6; Acts 1:12, “a Sabbath day’s journey,” i.e., the journey which a Jew was allowed to take on the Sabbath, viz., about 2,000 yards or cubits (estimates vary). The regulation was not a Mosaic enactment, but a rabbinical tradition, based upon an exposition of Exod. 16:29, and a comparison of the width of the suburb of a Levitical city as enjoined in Num. 35:4, 5, and the distance between the ark and the people at the crossing of the Jordan, Josh. 3:4. In regard to Acts 1:12, there is no discrepancy between this and Luke 24:50, where the RV rightly translates by “over against Bethany,” which does not fix the exact spot of the Ascension. See HIGHWAY, WAY.

2. hodoiporia (ὁδοιπορία, 3597), “a wayfaring, journeying” (No. 1, and poros, “a way, a passage”), is used of the Lord’s journey to Samaria, John 4:6, and of Paul’s “journeyings,” 2 Cor. 11:26. Cf. B, No. 3.

Note: In Luke 13:22 the noun poreia, “a journey, a going” (cf. poros, No. 2, above), is used with the verb poieo, “to make,” with the meaning “to journey,” lit., “making (for Himself, middle voice) a way,” “journeying.” In Jas. 1:11, “ways.” See WAY.¶

B. Verbs.

1. poreuomai (πορεύομαι, 4198) is used in the middle voice in the NT, signifying “to go, proceed, go on one’s way”; it is translated by the verb “to journey” in Acts 9:3; 22:6, “as I made (my) journey”; 26:13; Rom. 15:24 (1st part), KJV, “I take my journey,” RV, “I go” (for the 2nd part, “in my journey,” see No. 2). See GO, No. 1.

2. diaporeuo (διαπορεύομαι, 1279), “to carry over,” used in the passive voice with the meaning “to pass by, to journey through,” is translated “in my journey,” in Rom. 15:24, lit., “journeying through”; in Luke 18:36, RV, “going by” (KJV “pass by”). See GO, No. 4.

3. hodoiporeo (ὁδοιπορέω, 3596), “to travel, journey” (akin to A, No. 2), is found in Acts 10:9.¶

4. hodeuo (ὁδεύω, 3593), “to be on the way, journey” (from hodos, “a way”), the simplest form of the verbs denoting “to journey,” is used in the parable of the good samaritan, Luke 10:33.¶

5. sunodeuo (συνοδεύω, 4922), sun, “with,” and No. 4, “to journey with,” occurs in Acts 9:7.¶ In the Sept., Zech. 8:21.¶

6. euodoo (εὐδοόω, 2137), “to help on one’s way” (eu, “well,” and hodos), is used in the passive voice with the meaning “to have a prosperous journey”; so the KJV of Rom. 1:10; the RV. “I may be prospered” rightly expresses the metaphorical use which the verb acquired, without reference to a “journey”; see 1 Cor. 16:2; 3 John 2.¶

7. propempo (προπέμπω, 4311), “to send before or forth” (pro, “before,” pempo, “to send”), also means “to set forward on a journey, to escort”; in 1 Cor. 16:6, “may set (me) forward on my journey,” RV [KJV, “may bring (me) etc.”]; so Titus 3:13, and 3 John 6. See ACCOMPANY, CONDUCT, WAY.

8. apodemeo (ἀποδημέω, 589) denotes “to go on a journey to another country, go abroad,” Matt. 21:33; 25:14, 15; Mark 12:1; Luke 15:13; 20:9. See COUNTRY.¶

Note: For the adjective apodemos, Mark 13:34, KJV, “taking a far journey,” RV, “sojourning in another country,” see COUNTRY.

JOY (Noun and Verb), JOYFULNESS, JOYFULLY, JOYOUS

A. Nouns.

1. chara (χαρά, 5479), “joy, delight” (akin to chairō, “to rejoice”), is found frequently in Matthew and Luke, and especially in John, once in Mark (4:16, RV, “joy,” KJV, “gladness”); it is absent from 1 Cor. (though the verb is used three times), but is frequent in 2 Cor., where the noun is used five times (for 7:4, RV, see Note below), and the verb eight times, suggestive of the apostle’s relief in comparison with the circumstances of the 1st Epistle; in Col. 1:11, KJV, “joyfulness,” RV, “joy.” The word is sometimes used, by metonymy, of the occasion or cause of “joy,” Luke 2:10 (lit., “I announce to you a great joy”); in 2 Cor. 1:15, in some mss., for charis, “benefit”; Phil. 4:1, where the readers are called the apostle’s “joy”; so 1 Thess. 2:19, 20; Heb. 12:2, of the object of Christ’s “joy”; Jas. 1:2, where it is connected with falling into trials; perhaps also in Matt. 25:21, 23, where some regard it as signifying, concretely, the circumstances attending cooperation in the authority of the Lord. See also the Note following No. 3.

Note: In Heb. 12:11, “joyous” represents the phrase meta, “with,” followed by chara, lit., “with joy.” So in 10:34, “joyfully”; in 2 Cor. 7:4 the noun is used with the middle voice of hyperperisseuo, “to abound more exceedingly,” and translated “(I overflow) with joy,” RV (KJV, “I am exceeding joyful”).

2. agalliasis (ἀγαλλίασις, 20), “exultation, exuberant joy.” Cf. B, No. 3, below. See GLADNESS.

3. euphrosune (εὐφροσύνη, 2167) is rendered “joy” in the KJV of Acts 2:28, RV, “gladness,” as in 14:17. See GLADNESS.¶

Note: “Joy” is associated with life, e.g. 1 Thess. 3:8, 9. Experiences of sorrow prepare for, and enlarge, the capacity for “joy,” e.g., John 16:20; Rom. 5:3, 4; 2 Cor. 7:4; 8:2; Heb. 10:34; Jas. 1:2. Persecution for Christ’s sake enhances “joy,” e.g., Matt. 5:11, 12; Acts 5:41. Other sources of “joy” are faith, Rom. 15:13; Phil. 1:25; hope, Rom. 5:2 (kauchaomai, see B, No. 2); 12:12 (chairō, see B, No. 1); the “joy” of others, 12:15, which is distinctive of Christian sympathy. Cf. 1 Thess. 3:9. In the OT and the NT God Himself is the ground and object of the believer’s “joy,” e.g., Ps. 35:9; 43:4; Isa. 61:10; Luke 1:47; Rom. 5:11; Phil. 3:1; 4:4.

B. Verbs.

1. chairō (χαίρω, 5463), “to rejoice, be glad,” is translated “joyfully” in Luke 19:6, lit., “rejoicing”; “we joyed,” 2 Cor. 7:13; “I joy,” Phil. 2:17; “do ye joy,” 2:18; “joying,” Col. 2:5; “we joy,” 1 Thess. 3:9. It is contrasted with weeping and sorrow, e.g., in John 16:20, 22; Rom. 12:15; 1 Cor. 7:30 (cf. Ps. 30:5). See FAREWELL, GLAD, GREETING, HAIL, REJOICE.

2. kauchaomai (καυχάομαι, 2744), “to boast, glory, exult,” is rendered “we joy,” in Rom. 5:11, KJV (RV, “we rejoice”). It would have been an advantage to translate this word distinctively by the verbs “to glory” or “to exult.”

3. agalliao (ἀγαλλιάω, 21), “to exult, rejoice greatly,” is translated “with exceeding joy” in 1 Pet. 4:13 (middle voice), lit., “(ye rejoice, chairō) exulting.” Cf. A, No. 2. See GLAD, REJOICE.

4. oninemi (ὀνίνημι, 3685), “to benefit, profit,” in the middle voice, “to have profit, derive benefit,” is translated “let me have joy” in Philem. 20 (RV marg., “help”); the apostle is doubtless continuing his credit and debit metaphors and using the verb in the sense of “profit.”¶

JUDGE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. krites (κριτής, 2923), “a judge” (from krino, see B, No. 1), is used (a) of God, Heb. 12:23, where the order in the original is “to a Judge who is God of all”; this is really the significance; it suggests that He who is the Judge of His people is at the same time their God; that is the order in 10:30; the word is also used of God in Jas. 4:12, RV; (b) of Christ, Acts 10:42; 2 Tim. 4:8; Jas. 5:9; (c) of a ruler in Israel in the times of the Judges, Acts 13:20; (d) of a Roman procurator, Acts 24:10; (e) of those whose conduct provides a standard of “judging,” Matt. 12:27; Luke 11:19; (f) in the forensic sense, of one who tries and decides a case, Matt. 5:25 (twice); Luke 12:14 (some mss. have No. 2 here); 12:58 (twice); 18:2; 18:6 (lit., “the judge of unrighteousness,” expressing subjectively his character); Acts 18:15; (g) of one who passes, or arrogates to himself, judgment on anything, Jas. 2:4 (see the RV); 4:11.

2. dikastes (δικαστής, 1348) denotes “a judge” (from dike, “right, a judicial hearing, justice”; akin to dikazo, “to judge”), Acts 7:27, 35; some mss. have it in Luke 12:14 (see No. 1); while dikastes is a forensic term, krites “gives prominence to the mental process” (Thayer). At Athens the dikastes acted as a jurymen, the krites being the presiding “judge.”¶

B. Verbs.

1. krino (κρίνω, 2919) primarily denotes “to separate, select, choose”; hence, “to determine,” and so “to judge, pronounce judgment.” “The uses of this verb in the NT may be analyzed as follows: (a) to assume the office of a judge, Matt. 7:1; John 3:17; (b) to undergo process of trial, John 3:18; 16:11; 18:31; Jas. 2:12; (c) to give sentence, Acts 15:19; 16:4; 21:25; (d) to condemn, John 12:48; Acts 13:27; Rom. 2:27; (e) to execute judgment upon, 2 Thess. 2:12; Acts 7:7; (f) to be involved in a lawsuit, whether as plaintiff, Matt. 5:40; 1 Cor. 6:1; or as defendant, Acts 23:6; (g) to administer affairs, to govern, Matt. 19:28; cf. Judg. 3:10; (h) to form an opinion, Luke 7:43; John 7:24; Acts 4:19; Rom. 14:5; (i) to make a resolve, Acts 3:13; 20:16 1 Cor. 2:2” * * From Notes on Thessalonians by Hogg and Vine, p. 267.

See CALL, No. 13, CONCLUDE, CONDEMN, DECREE, DETERMINE, ESTEEM, LAW (go to), ORDAIN, SENTENCE, THINK.

Note: In Acts 21:25, the RV has “giving judgement” (KJV, “concluded”); see JUDGMENT, Note (5).

2. anakrino (ἀνακρίνω, 350), “to examine, investigate, question” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), is rendered “judged” in 1 Cor. 2:14, RV (KJV, “are ... discerned;” RV marg., “examined”), said of the things of the Spirit of God; in v. 15, “judgeth” (RV marg., “examineth”), said of the exercise of a discerning “judgment” of all things as to their true value, by one who is spiritual; in the same verse, “is judged (of no man),” RV marg., “examined,” i.e., the merely natural mind cannot estimate the motives of the spiritual; in 4:3, “I should be judged,” i.e., as to examining and passing sentence on the fulfillment or nonfulfillment of the apostle’s stewardship; so in the same verse, “I judge (not mine own self),” and in v. 4 “(he that) judgeth (me is the Lord)”; in 14:24, “he is judged (of all),” i.e., the light of the heart-searching testimony of the assembly probes the conscience of the unregenerate, sifting him judicially. See ASK, No. 7, DISCERN, A, No. 1.

3. diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252) denotes “to separate throughout” (dia, and No. 1), “discriminate, discern,” and hence “to decide, to judge” (also “to contend, to hesitate, to doubt”); it is rendered “to judge” in 1 Cor. 6:5, in the sense of arbitrating; in 11:31 (1st part), the RV has “(if we) discerned (ourselves),” KJV “(if we would) judge” (krino, No. 1, is used in the 2nd part); so in 14:29, RV, “discern” (KJV, “judge”). See DECIDE, A, DISCERN, A, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 6:2 (last clause) “to judge” represents the noun kriterion, which denotes “a tribunal, a law court,” and the meaning thus is “are ye unworthy of sitting upon tribunals of least importance?” (see RV marg.), i.e., to “judge” matters of smallest importance. Some would render it “cases,” but there is no clear instance elsewhere of this meaning. See JUDGMENT SEAT. (2) In Heb. 11:11, the verb hegeomai, “to consider, think, account,” is rendered “she judged (Him faithful),” KJV (RV, “she counted”). See COUNT, No. 2.

JUDGMENT

1. krisis (κρίσις, 2920) primarily denotes “a separating,” then, “a decision, judgment,” most frequently in a forensic sense, and especially of divine “judgment.” For the variety of its meanings, with references, see CONDEMNATION, B, No. 3.

Notes: (1) The Holy Spirit, the Lord said, would convict the world of (peri, “in respect of”), i.e., of the actuality of, God’s “judgment,” John 16:8, 11. Cf. 2 Thess. 1:5.

(2) In Rom. 2:5 the word dikaiokrisia, “righteous judgment,” combines the adjective dikaios, “righteous,” with krisis, the two words which are used separately in 2 Thess. 1:5.¶

2. krima (κρίμα, 2917) denotes the result of the action signified by the verb krino, “to judge”; for its general significance see CONDEMNATION, B, No. 1: it is used (a) of a decision passed on the faults of others, Matt. 7:2; (b) of “judgment” by man upon Christ, Luke 24:20; (c) of God’s “judgment” upon men, e.g., Rom. 2:2, 3; 3:8; 5:16; 11:33; 13:2;

1 Cor. 11:29; Gal. 5:10; Heb. 6:2; Jas. 3:1; through Christ, e.g., John 9:39; (d) of the right of “judgment,” Rev. 20:4; (e) of a lawsuit, 1 Cor. 6:7.

3. hemera (ἡμέρα, 2250), “a day,” is translated “judgment” in 1 Cor. 4:3, where “man’s judgment” (lit., “man’s day,” marg.) is used of the present period in which man’s mere “judgment” is exercised, a period of human rebellion against God. The adjective anthropinos, “human, belonging to man” (anthropos), is doubtless set in contrast here to kuriakos, “belonging to the Lord” (kurios, “a lord”), which is used in the phrase “the Day of the Lord,” in Rev. 1:10, “The Lord’s Day,” a period of divine judgments. See DAY.

4. gnome (γνώμη, 1106), primarily “a means of knowing” (akin to ginosko, “to know”), came to denote “a mind, understanding”; hence (a) “a purpose,” Acts 20:3, lit., “(it was his) purpose”; (b) “a royal purpose, a decree,” Rev. 17:17, RV, “mind” (KJV, “will”); (c) “judgment, opinion,” 1 Cor. 1:10, “(in the same) judgment”; Rev. 17:13, “mind”; (d) “counsel, advice,” 1 Cor. 7:25, “(I give my) judgment;” 7:40, “(after my) judgment”; Philem. 14, mind. See MIND, PURPOSE, WILL.¶

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 6:4, KJV, kriterion, “a tribunal,” is rendered “judgments” (RV, “to judge,” marg., “tribunals”). See JUDGE, B, No. 3, Note (1). (2) In Rom. 1:32, KJV, dikaïoma, “an ordinance, righteous act,” is translated “judgment” (RV “ordinance”); in Rev. 15:4, “judgments” (RV, “righteous acts”). (3) In Acts 25:15, KJV, katadike, “a sentence, condemnation,” is translated “judgment” (RV, “sentence”). Some mss. have dike. See SENTENCE. (4) In Phil. 1:9, KJV, aisthesis, “perception, discernment,” is translated “judgment” (RV, “discernment”). (5) In Acts 21:25, in the record of the decree from the apostles and elders at Jerusalem to the churches of the Gentiles, the verb krino (see JUDGE, B, No. 1), is translated “giving judgment,” RV (KJV, “concluded”).

B. Adjective.

hupodikos (ὑπόδικος, 5267), “brought to trial, answerable to” (hupo, “under,” dike, “justice”), Rom. 3:19, is translated “under the judgment,” RV (KJV, “guilty”).¶

HALL OF JUDGMENT, JUDGMENT HALL, see HALL JUDGMENT SEAT

1. bema (βῆμα, 968), primarily, “a step, a pace” (akin to baino, “to go”), as in Acts 7:5, translated “to set (his foot) on,” lit., “footroom,” was used to denote a raised place or platform, reached by steps, originally that at Athens in the Pnyx Hill, where was the place of assembly; from the platform orations were made. The word became used for a tribunal, two of which were provided in the law courts of Greece, one for the accuser and one for the defendant; it was applied to the tribunal of a Roman magistrate or ruler, Matt. 27:19; John 19:13; Acts 12:21, translated “throne”; 18:12, 16, 17; 25:6, 10, 17.

In two passages the word is used of the divine tribunal before which all believers are hereafter to stand. In Rom. 14:10 it is called “The judgement seat of God,” RV (KJV, “of Christ”), according to the most authentic mss. The same tribunal is called “the judgment seat of Christ,” 2 Cor. 5:10, to whom the Father has given all judgment, John 5:22, 27. At this bema believers are to be made manifest, that each may “receive the things done in (or through) the body,” according to what he has done, “whether it be good or bad.”

There they will receive rewards for their faithfulness to the Lord. For all that has been contrary in their lives to His will they will suffer loss, 1 Cor. 3:15. This judgment seat is to be distinguished from the premillennial, earthly throne of Christ, Matt. 25:31, and the postmillennial “Great White Throne,” Rev. 20:11, at which only “the dead” will appear. The judgment seat of Christ will be a tribunal held “in His Parousia,” i.e., His presence with His saints after His return to receive them to Himself.¶

2. kriterion (κρίτήριο, 2922) primarily “a means of judging” (akin to krino, “to judge”: Eng., “criterion”), then, a tribunal, law court, or “lawsuit,” 1 Cor. 6:2 (last clause), for which see JUDGE, B, No. 3, Note (1); 6:4, for which see JUDGMENT, Note (1) at end; Jas. 2:6.¶

JURISDICTION

exousia (ἐξουσία, 1849), “power, authority,” is used, by metonymy, to denote “jurisdiction,” in Luke 23:7. For the different meanings of the word and other instances of its use by metonymy, see AUTHORITY, A, No. 1.

JUST, JUSTLY

A. Adjectives.

1. dikaïos (δίκαιος, 1342) was first used of persons observant of dike, “custom, rule, right,” especially in the fulfillment of duties towards gods and men, and of things that were in accordance with right. The Eng. word “righteous” was formerly spelt “rightwise,” i.e., (in a) straight way. In the NT it denotes “righteous,” a state of being right, or right conduct, judged whether by the divine standard, or according to human standards, of what is right. Said of God, it designates the perfect agreement between His nature and His acts (in which He is the standard for all men). See RIGHTEOUSNESS. It is used (1) in the broad sense, of persons: (a) of God, e.g., John 17:25; Rom. 3:26; 1 John 1:9; 2:29; 3:7; (b) of Christ, e.g., Acts 3:14; 7:52; 22:14; 2 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 3:18; 1 John 2:1; (c) of men, Matt. 1:19; Luke 1:6; Rom. 1:17; 2:13; 5:7. (2) of things; blood (metaphorical), Matt. 23:35; Christ’s judgment, John 5:30; any circumstance, fact or deed, Matt. 20:4 (v. 7, in some mss.); Luke 12:57; Acts 4:19; Eph. 6:1; Phil. 1:7; 4:8; Col. 4:1; 2 Thess. 1:6; “the commandment” (the Law), Rom. 7:12; works, 1 John 3:12, the ways of God, Rev. 15:3. See RIGHTEOUS.

2. endikos (ἐνδικος, 1738), “just, righteous” (en, “in,” dike, “right”), is said of the condemnation of those who say “Let us do evil, that good may come,” Rom. 3:8; of the recompense of reward of transgressions under the Law, Heb. 2:2.¶

Note: As to the distinction between No. 1 and No. 2, “dikaïos characterizes the subject so far as he or it is (so to speak) one with dike, right; endikos, so far as he occupies a due relation to dike; ... in Rom. 3:8 endikos presupposes that which has been decided righteously, which leads to the just sentence” (Cremer).

B. Adverb.

dikaïos (δικαίως, 1346), “justly, righteously, in accordance with what is right,” is said (a) of God’s judgment, 1 Pet. 2:23; (b) of men, Luke 23:41, “justly;” 1 Cor. 15:34, RV, “righteously” (KJV, “to righteousness”); 1 Thess. 2:10, RV, “righteously;” Titus 2:12.¶

JUSTICE

dike (δίκη, 1349), primarily “custom, usage,” came to denote “what is right”; then, “a judicial hearing”; hence, “the execution of a sentence,” “punishment,” 2 Thess. 1:9, RV; Jude 7, “punishment,” RV (KJV, “vengeance”). In Acts 28:4 (KJV, “vengeance”) it is personified and denotes the goddess Justice or Nemesis (Lat., Justitia), who the Melita folk supposed was about to inflict the punishment of death upon Paul by means of the viper. See PUNISHMENT, VENGEANCE.¶

JUSTIFICATION, JUSTIFIER, JUSTIFY

A. Nouns.

1. dikaiosis (δικαίωσις, 1347) denotes “the act of pronouncing righteous, justification, acquittal”; its precise meaning is determined by that of the verb dikaioo, “to justify” (see B); it is used twice in the Ep. to the Romans, and there alone in the NT, signifying the establishment of a person as just by acquittal from guilt. In Rom. 4:25 the phrase “for our justification,” is, lit., “because of our justification” (parallel to the preceding clause “for our trespasses,” i.e., because of trespasses committed), and means, not with a view to our “justification,” but because all that was necessary on God’s part for our “justification” had been effected in the death of Christ. On this account He was raised from the dead. The propitiation being perfect and complete, His resurrection was the confirmatory counterpart. In 5:18, “justification of life” means “justification which results in life” (cf. v. 21). That God “justifies” the believing sinner on the ground of Christ’s death, involves His free gift of life. On the distinction between dikaiosis and dikaionoma, see below.¶ In the Sept., Lev. 24:22.¶

2. dikaionoma (δικαίωμα, 1345) has three distinct meanings, and seems best described comprehensively as “a concrete expression of righteousness”; it is a declaration that a person or thing is righteous, and hence, broadly speaking, it represents the expression and effect of dikaiosis (No. 1). It signifies (a) “an ordinance,” Luke 1:6; Rom. 1:32, RV, “ordinance,” i.e., what God has declared to be right, referring to His decree of retribution (KJV, “judgment”); Rom. 2:26, RV, “ordinances of the Law” (i.e., righteous requirements enjoined by the Law); so 8:4, “ordinance of the Law,” i.e., collectively, the precepts of the Law, all that it demands as right; in Heb. 9:1, 10, ordinances connected with the tabernacle ritual; (b) “a sentence of acquittal,” by which God acquits men of their guilt, on the conditions (1) of His grace in Christ, through His expiatory sacrifice, (2) the acceptance of Christ by faith, Rom. 5:16; (c) “a righteous act,” Rom. 5:18, “(through one) act of righteousness,” RV, not the act of “justification,” nor the righteous character of Christ (as suggested by the KJV: dikaionoma does not signify character, as does dikaiosune, righteousness), but the death of Christ, as an act accomplished consistently with God’s character and counsels; this is clear as being in antithesis to the “one trespass” in the preceding statement. Some take the word here as meaning a decree of righteousness, as in v. 16; the death of Christ could indeed be regarded as fulfilling such a decree, but as the apostle’s argument proceeds, the word, as is frequently the case, passes from one shade of meaning to another, and here stands not for a decree, but an act; so in Rev. 15:4, RV, “righteous acts” (KJV, “judgments”), and 19:8, “righteous acts (of the saints)” (KJV, “righteousness”).¶

Note: For dikaioσune, always translated “righteousness,” see RIGHTEOUSNESS.

B. Verb.

dikaioo (δικαίωω, 1344) primarily “to deem to be right,” signifies, in the NT, (a) “to show to be right or righteous”; in the passive voice, to be justified, Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:35; Rom. 3:4; 1 Tim. 3:16; (b) “to declare to be righteous, to pronounce righteous,” (1) by man, concerning God, Luke 7:29 (see Rom. 3:4, above); concerning himself, Luke 10:29; 16:15; (2) by God concerning men, who are declared to be righteous before Him on certain conditions laid down by Him.

Ideally the complete fulfillment of the law of God would provide a basis of “justification” in His sight, Rom. 2:13. But no such case has occurred in mere human experience, and therefore no one can be “justified” on this ground, Rom. 3:9-20; Gal. 2:16; 3:10, 11; 5:4. From this negative presentation in Rom. 3, the apostle proceeds to show that, consistently with God’s own righteous character, and with a view to its manifestation, He is, through Christ, as “a propitiation ... by (en, “instrumental”) His blood,” 3:25, RV, “the Justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus” (v. 26), “justification” being the legal and formal acquittal from guilt by God as Judge, the pronouncement of the sinner as righteous, who believes on the Lord Jesus Christ. In v. 24, “being justified” is in the present continuous tense, indicating the constant process of “justification” in the succession of those who believe and are “justified.” In 5:1, “being justified” is in the aorist, or point, tense, indicating the definite time at which each person, upon the exercise of faith, was justified. In 8:1, “justification” is presented as “no condemnation.” That “justification” is in view here is confirmed by the preceding chapters and by verse 34. In 3:26, the word rendered “Justifier” is the present participle of the verb, lit., “justifying”; similarly in 8:33 (where the artide is used), “God that justifieth,” is, more lit., “God is the (One) justifying,” with stress upon the word “God.”

“Justification” is primarily and gratuitously by faith, subsequently and evidentially by works. In regard to “justification” by works, the so-called contradiction between James and the apostle Paul is only apparent. There is harmony in the different views of the subject. Paul has in mind Abraham’s attitude toward God, his acceptance of God’s word. This was a matter known only to God. The Romans epistle is occupied with the effect of this Godward attitude, not upon Abraham’s character or actions, but upon the contrast between faith and the lack of it, namely, unbelief, cf. Rom. 11:20. James (2:21-26) is occupied with the contrast between faith that is real and faith that is false, a faith barren and dead, which is not faith at all.

Again, the two writers have before them different epochs in Abraham’s life—Paul, the event recorded in Gen. 15, James, that in Gen. 22. Contrast the words “believed” in Gen. 15:6 and “obeyed” in 22:18.

Further, the two writers use the words “faith” and “works” in somewhat different senses. With Paul, faith is acceptance of God’s word; with James, it is acceptance of the truth of certain statements about God, (v. 19), which may fail to affect one’s conduct. Faith, as dealt with by Paul, results in acceptance with God., i.e., “justification,” and is bound to manifest itself. If not, as James says “Can that faith save him?” (v. 14). With Paul, works are dead works, with James they are life works. The works of which Paul speaks could be quite independent of faith: those referred to by James can be wrought only where faith is real, and they will attest its reality. So with righteousness, or “justification”: Paul is occupied with a right relationship with God, James, with right conduct. Paul testifies that the ungodly can be “justified” by faith, James that only the right-doer is “justified.” See also under RIGHTEOUS, RIGHTEOUSNESS.

K

KEEP, KEEPING (Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. tereo (τηρέω, 5083) denotes (a) “to watch over, preserve, keep, watch,” e.g., Acts 12:5, 6; 16:23; in 25:21, RV (1st part), “kept” (KJV, “reserved”); the present participle is translated “keepers” in Matt. 28:4, lit. “the keeping (ones)”; it is used of the “keeping” power of God the Father and Christ, exercised over His people, John 17:11, 12, 15; 1 Thess. 5:23, “preserved”; 1 John 5:18, where “He that was begotten of God,” RV, is said of Christ as the Keeper (“keepeth him,” RV, for KJV, “keepeth himself”); Jude 1, RV, “kept for Jesus Christ” (KJV, “preserved in Jesus Christ”), Rev. 3:10; of their inheritance, 1 Pet. 1:4 (“reserved”); of judicial reservation by God in view of future doom, 2 Pet. 2:4, 9, 17; 3:7; Jude 6, 13; of “keeping” the faith, 2 Tim. 4:7; the unity of the Spirit, Eph. 4:3; oneself, 2 Cor. 11:9; 1 Tim. 5:22; Jas. 1:27; figuratively, one’s garments, Rev. 16:15; (b) “to observe, to give heed to,” as of keeping commandments, etc., e.g., Matt. 19:17; John 14:15; 15:10; 17:6; Jas. 2:10; 1 John 2:3, 4, 5; 3:22, 24; 5:2 (in some mss.), 3; Rev. 1:3; 2:26; 3:8, 10; 12:17; 14:12; 22:7, 9. See RESERVE.

2. diatero (διατηρέω, 1301), “to keep carefully” (dia, intensive, and No. 1), is said of “the mother of Jesus,” in keeping His sayings in her heart, Luke 2:51, and of the command of the apostles and elders in Jerusalem to gentile converts in the churches to “keep” themselves from the evils mentioned in Acts 15:29.¶

3. suntereo (συντηρέω, 4933) denotes “to preserve, keep safe, keep close” (sun, “together with,” used intensively, and No. 1), in Luke 2:19, as in v. 51 (see No. 2, above), of the mother of Jesus in regard to the words of the shepherds; in Mark 6:20 it is used of Herod’s preservation of John the Baptist from Herodias, RV, “kept (him) safe,” KJV, “observed (him)” (marg., “kept”); in Matt. 9:17 (in some mss., Luke 5:38), of the preservation of wineskins. See OBSERVE, PRESERVE.¶

4. phulasso (φυλάσσω, 5442) denotes (a) “to guard, watch, keep watch,” e.g., Luke 2:8; in the passive voice, 8:29; (b) “to keep by way of protection,” e.g., Luke 11:21; John 12:25; 17:12 (2nd part; No. 1 in 1st part and in v. 11); (c) metaphorically, “to keep a law precept,” etc., e.g., Matt. 19:20 and Luke 18:21, “have observed”; Luke 11:28; John 12:47 (in the best mss.); Acts 7:53; 16:4; 21:24; Rom. 2:26; Gal. 6:13; 1 Tim. 5:21 (“observe”); in the middle voice, Mark 10:20 (“have observed”); (d) in the middle voice, “to keep oneself from,” Acts 21:25; elsewhere translated by the verb “to beware.” See BEWARE, No. 3, GUARD, B, No. 1.

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

5. diaphulasso (διαφυλάσσω, 1314), an intensive form of No. 4, “to guard thoroughly”; see GUARD.

6. phroureo (φρουρέω, 5432), “to keep with a military guard,” e.g., Gal. 3:23, RV, “kept in ward”; see GUARD, B, No. 3.

7. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do, make,” signifies “to keep,” in Matt. 26:18, in the Lord’s statement, “I will keep the passover;” so in Acts 18:21, in some mss.; in John 7:19, where the KJV has “keepeth (the law),” the RV adheres to the usual meaning “doeth.”

8. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have, to hold,” is rendered “I kept” in Luke 19:20, RV (KJV, “I have kept”), of “keeping” a pound laid up in a napkin. See HAVE.

9. krateo (κρατέω, 2902), “to be strong, get possession of, hold fast,” is used in Mark 9:10, “(and) they kept (the saying),” i.e., they held fast to the Lord’s command to refrain from telling what they had seen in the mount of Transfiguration. See HOLD.

10. nosphizo (νοσφίζομαι, 3557), “to set apart, remove,” signifies, in the middle voice, “to set apart for oneself, to purloin,” and is rendered “purloining” in Titus 2:10; “kept back” (and “keep”) in Acts 5:2, 3, of the act of Ananias and his wife in “retaining” part of the price of the land.¶

11. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912), “to hold together,” is translated “shall ... keep (thee) in,” in Luke 19:43. See also Note (8), below. See CONSTRAIN.

Notes: (1) In Acts 22:2, KJV, parecho, “to afford, give, cause,” is rendered “kept (the more silence),” RV, “were (the more quiet).” (2) In Matt. 14:6 some mss. have the verb ago, “to lead, hold” (of a feast), of “keeping” Herod’s birthday; the most authentic have ginomai, “to become, take place”; hence the RV, “when Herod’s birthday came.” The verb ago is used in Acts 19:38 of “keeping” certain occasions, as of the holding of law courts, RV “(the courts) are open,” KJV marg., “court days are kept”; Moulton and Milligan illustrate from the papyri the use of the adjective agoraios, in the plural with hemeraí, “days,” understood, in regard to certain market days; certain court days are what are indicated here. The conjecture that the meaning is “courts are now being held” (sunodoi being understood as meetings of the court instead of “days”) is scarcely so appropriate to the circumstances. (3) In Matt. 8:33, bosko, “to feed” (swine, etc.), is translated “(they that) fed,” RV for KJV “(they that) kept.” (4) In Acts 9:33, katakeimai, “to lie down,” is used with epi, “upon,” with the meaning “to keep one’s bed” (see LIE, No. 2). (5) In Rom. 2:25, prasso, “to do” (continuously), “to practice,” is rendered “be a doer of,” RV (KJV, “keep”). (6) In Acts 20:20, hupostello, “to shrink, draw back from,” is translated “I shrank (not)” (middle voice), RV, KJV, “I kept back (nothing).” (7) In Acts 27:43, koluo, “to hinder,” is translated “stayed (them from),” RV, KJV, “kept (them from).” (8) In Luke 8:15 and 1 Cor. 11:2, katecho, “to hold fast” (a strengthened form of echo, No. 8), is translated “hold fast,” RV, KJV, “keep;” in 15:2, RV, “hold fast,” KJV, “keep in memory.” (9) For “keep secret,” see SECRET. (10) For “keep under,” see BUFFET. (11) Paratithemi is rendered “commit the keeping” in 1 Pet. 4:19, KJV, (12) For “keep the feast” see FEAST, B, No. 2.

B. Noun.

teresis (τήρησις, 5084), akin to A, No. 1, denotes (a) “a watching,” and hence, “imprisonment, prison,” Acts 4:3 and 5:18, “ward,” RV (KJV, “hold” and “prison”); (b) “keeping,” 1 Cor. 7:19. See HOLD, PRLSON.¶

KEEPER

phulax (φύλαξ, 5441), akin to A, No. 4, above, “a guard”: see GUARD.

Note: For tereo, in Matt. 28:4, see A, No. 1, above.

KEY

kleis (κλείς, 2807), “a key,” is used metaphorically (a) of “the keys of the kingdom of heaven,” which the Lord committed to Peter, Matt. 16:19, by which he would open the door of faith, as he did to Jews at Pentecost, and to Gentiles in the person of Cornelius, acting as one commissioned by Christ, through the power of the Holy Spirit; he had precedence over his fellow disciples, not in authority, but in the matter of time, on the ground of his confession of Christ (v. 16); equal authority was committed to them (18:18); (b) of “the key of knowledge,” Luke 11:52, i.e., knowledge of the revealed will of God, by which men entered into the life that pleases God; this the religious leaders of the Jews had presumptuously “taken away,” so that they neither entered in themselves, nor permitted their hearers to do so; (c) of “the keys of death and of Hades,” Rev. 1:18, RV (see HADES), indicative of the authority of the Lord over the bodies and souls of men; (d) of “the key of David,” Rev. 3:7, a reference to Isa. 22:22, speaking of the deposition of Shebna and the investiture of Eliakim, in terms evidently messianic, the metaphor being that of the right of entrance upon administrative authority; the mention of David is symbolic of complete sovereignty; (e) of “the key of the pit of the abyss,” Rev. 9:1; here the symbolism is that of competent authority; the pit represents a shaft or deep entrance into the region (see ABYSS), from whence issued smoke, symbolic of blinding delusion; (f) of “the key of the abyss,” Rev. 20:1; this is to be distinguished from (e): the symbolism is that of the complete supremacy of God over the region of the lost, in which, by angelic agency, Satan is destined to be confined for a thousand years.¶

KICK

laktizo (λακτίζω, 2979), “to kick” (from lax, an adverb signifying “with the foot”), is used in Acts 26:14 (some mss. have it in 9:5).

For KID see GOAT

KILL

1. apokteino (ἀποκτείνω, 615), “to kill,” is used (a) physically, e.g., Matt. 10:28; 14:5, “put ... to death,” similarly rendered in John 18:31; often of Christ’s death; in Rev. 2:13, RV “was killed” (KJV, “was slain”); 9:15, RV, “kill” (KJV, “slay”); 11:13, RV, “were killed” (KJV, “were slain”); so in 19:21; (b) metaphorically, Rom. 7:11, of the power of sin, which is personified, as “finding occasion, through the commandment,” and inflicting deception and spiritual death, i.e., separation from God, realized through the presentation of the commandment to conscience, breaking in upon the fancied state of freedom; the argument shows the power of the Law, not to deliver from sin, but to enhance its sinfulness; in 2 Cor. 3:6, “the letter killeth,” signifies not the literal meaning of Scripture as contrasted with the spiritual, but the power of the Law to bring home the knowledge of guilt and its punishment; in Eph. 2:16 “having slain the enmity” describes the work of Christ through His death in annulling the enmity, “the Law” (v. 15), between Jew and Gentile, reconciling regenerate Jew and Gentile to God in spiritual unity “in one body.” See DEATH, C, No. 4, SLAY.

2. anaireo (ἀναίρεω, 337) denotes (a) “to take up” (ana, “up,” haireo, “to take”), said of Pharaoh’s daughter, in “taking up” Moses, Acts 7:21; (b) “to take away” in the sense of removing, Heb. 10:9, of the legal appointment of sacrifices, to bring in the will of God in the sacrificial offering of the death of Christ; (c) “to kill,” used physically only (not metaphorically as in No. 1), e.g., Luke 22:2; in 2 Thess. 2:8, instead of the future tense of this verb, some texts (followed by RV marg.) read the future of analisko, “to consume.” See DEATH, C, No. 2, SLAY.

3. thuo (θύω, 2380) primarily denotes “to offer firstfruits to a god”; then (a) “to sacrifice by slaying a victim,” Acts 14:13, 18, to do sacrifice; 1 Cor. 10:20, to sacrifice; 1 Cor. 5:7, “hath been sacrificed,” of the death of Christ as our Passover; (b) “to slay, kill,” Matt. 22:4; Mark 14:12; Luke 15:23, 27, 30; 22:7; John 10:10; Acts 10:13; 11:7.¶

4. phoneuo (φονεύω, 5407), “to murder,” akin to phoneus, “a murderer,” is always rendered by the verb “to kill” (except in Matt. 19:18, KJV, “do ... murder,” and in Matt. 23:35, KJV and RV, “ye slew”); Matt. 5:21 (twice); 23:31; Mark 10:19; Luke 18:20; Rom. 13:9; Jas. 2:11 (twice); 4:2; 5:6.¶

5. thanatoo (θανατώω, 2289), “to put to death” (from thanatos, “death”), is translated “are killed” in Rom. 8:36; “killed” in 2 Cor. 6:9. See DEATH, C, No. 1.

6. diacheirizo (διαχειρίζομαι, 1315), primarily, “to have in hand, manage” (cheir, “the hand”), is used in the middle voice, in the sense of “laying hands on” with a view to “kill,” or of actually “killing,” Acts 5:30, “ye slew”; 26:21, “to kill.” See SLAY.¶

7. sphazo, or sphatto (σφάζω, 4969), “to slay, to slaughter,” especially victims for sacrifice, is most frequently translated by the verb “to slay”; so the RV in Rev. 6:4 (KJV, “should kill”), in 13:3, RV, “smitten unto death” (KJV, “wounded”). See SLAY, WOUND. Cf. katasphazo, “to kill off,” Luke 19:27;¶ sphage, “slaughter,” e.g., Acts 8:32, and sphagion, “a victim for slaughter,” Acts 7:42.¶

KIN, KINSFOLK, KINSMAN, KINSWOMAN

A. Adjective.

sungenes (συγγενής, 4773), primarily denoting “congenital, natural, innate” (sun, “with,” genos, “a family, race, offspring”), then, “akin to,” is used as a noun, denoting (a) of “family relationship, kin, a kinsman, kinsfolk(s),” Luke 1:58, RV, “kinsfolk” (KJV, “cousins”); 14:12; 21:16; John 18:26; Acts 10:24; (b) of “tribal or racial kinship, fellow nationals,” Rom. 9:3; 16:7, 11, 21.¶

B. Nouns.

1. sunjenis (συγγενής, 4773v), a late feminine form of A (some mss. have sungenes), denotes “a kinswoman,” Luke 1:36, RV, “kinswoman” (KJV, “cousin”). Cf. sungeneia (see KINDRED).¶

2. sungeneus (συγγενής, 4773**), an alternative form of A, is used in Mark 6:4, “kin,” and Luke 2:44, “kinsfolk.”¶

KIND (Noun)

1. genos (γένος, 1085), akin to ginomai, “to become,” denotes (a) “a family,” Acts 4:6, “kindred;” 7:13, RV, “race” (KJV, “kindred”); 13:26, “stock”; (b) “an offspring,” Acts 17:28; Rev. 22:16; (c) “a nation, a race,” Mark 7:26, RV, “race” (KJV, “nation”); Acts 4:36, RV “(a man of Cyprus) by race,” KJV, “of the country (of Cyprus);” genos does not mean “a country;” the word here signifies “parentage” (Jews had settled in Cyprus from, or even before, the reign of Alexander the Great); 7:19, RV, “race” (KJV, “kindred”); 18:2, 24, RV, “by race” (KJV, “born”); 2 Cor. 11:26, “countrymen”; Gal. 1:14, RV, “countrymen” (KJV, “nation”); Phil. 3:5, “stock”; 1 Pet. 2:9, RV, “race” (KJV, “generation”); (d) “a kind, sort, class,” Matt. 13:47, “kind”; in some mss. in 17:21, KJV, “kind;” Mark 9:29, “kind”; 1 Cor. 12:10, 28, “kinds” (KJV, “diversities”); 14:10 (ditto).¶ See BEGET, B.

2. phusis (φύσις, 5449) among its various meanings denotes “the nature, the natural constitution or power of a person or thing,” and is translated “kind” in Jas. 3:7 (twice), “kind” (of beasts etc.), and “(man)kind,” lit., “human kind.” See NATURE, NATURAL.

Notes: (1) The indefinite pronoun tis, “some, a certain, one,” is used adjectively with the noun aparche, “firstfruits,” in Jas. 1:18, “a kind of.” (2) In 1 Cor. 15:37, RV, “some other kind” (KJV, “some other grain”) translates a phrase which, lit. rendered, is “some (one) of the rest (loipos).” (3) In 2 Cor. 6:13, “(for a recompense) in like kind,” RV, (KJV, “in the same”), is, lit., “(as to) the same (recompense).”

KIND (Adjective), KIND (be), KINDLY, KINDNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. chrestos (χρηστός, 5543), “serviceable, good, pleasant” (of things), “good, gracious, kind” (of persons), is translated “kind” in Luke 6:35, of God; in Eph. 4:32, enjoined upon believers. See BETTER, EASY, GOOD, GOODNESS, GRACIOUS.

2. agathos (ἀγαθός, 18), “good,” is translated “kind” in Titus 2:5, RV. See GOOD.

B. Verb.

chresteuomai (χρηστευομαι, 5541), akin to A, No. 1, “to be kind,” is said of love, 1 Cor. 13:4.¶

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

C. Nouns.

1. chrestotes (χρηστότης, 5544), akin to A, No. 1, and B, used of “goodness of heart, kindness,” is translated “kindness” in 2 Cor. 6:6; Gal. 5:22, RV (KJV, “gentleness”); Eph. 2:7; Col. 3:12; Titus 3:4. See GOODNESS.

2. philanthropia (φιλανθρωπία, 5363), from philos, “loving,” anthropos, “man” (Eng., “philanthropy”), denotes “kindness,” and is so translated in Acts 28:2, of that which was shown by the inhabitants of Melita to the shipwrecked voyagers; in Titus 3:4, of the “kindness” of God, translated “(His) love toward man.” See LOVE.¶

D. Adverb.

philanthropos (φιλανθρώπως, 5364), akin to C, No. 2, “humanely, kindly,” is translated “kindly” in Acts 27:3 (KJV, “courteously”). See COURTEOUSLY.¶

KINDLE

1. hapto (ἅπτω, 681), properly, “to fasten to,” is used in Acts 28:2 (in the most authentic mss., some mss. have No. 3), of “kindling a fire.” See No. 2.

Note: Hapto is used of “lighting a lamp,” in Luke 8:16; 11:33; 15:8. For the middle voice see TOUCH.

2. periapto (περί, 4012 and περί, 681), properly, “to tie about, attach” (peri, “around,” and No. 1), is used of “lighting” a fire in the midst of a court in Luke 22:55 (some mss. have No. 1).¶

3. anapto (ἀνάπτω, 381), “to light up” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), is used (a) literally, in Jas. 3:5, “kindleth”; (b) metaphorically, in the passive voice, in Luke 12:49, of the “kindling” of the fire of hostility; see FIRE, A (f). For Acts 28:2, see No. 1, above.¶

KINDRED

1. sungeneia (συγγένεια, 4772) primarily denotes “kinship”; then, “kinsfolk, kindred” (cf. sungenes, “a kinsman”; see KIN), Luke 1:61; Acts. 7:3, 14.¶

2. genos (γένος, 1085); see KIND (Noun), No. 1.

Notes: (1) Phule, “a tribe,” rendered “kindreds” in the KJV of Rev. 1:7; 7:9; 11:9; 13:7, “kindred” in 5:9; 14:6, and elsewhere, “tribe,” “tribes,” is always translated by the latter in the RV. See TRIBE. (2) For patria, rendered “kindreds” Acts 3:25, KJV, see FAMILY.

KING

A. Noun.

basileus (βασιλεύς, 935), “a king” (cf. Eng., “Basil”), e.g., Matt. 1:6, is used of the Roman emperor in 1 Pet. 2:13, 17 (a command of general application); this reference to the emperor is illustrated frequently in the Koine (see Preface to this volume); of Herod the Tetrarch (used by courtesy), Matt. 14:9; of Christ, as the “King” of the Jews, e.g., Matt. 2:2; 27:11, 29, 37; as the “King” of Israel, Mark 15:32; John 1:49; 12:13; as “King of kings,” Rev. 17:14; 19:16; as “the King” in judging nations and men at the establishment of the millennial kingdom, Matt. 25:34, 40; of God, “the great King,” Matt. 5:35; “the King eternal, incorruptible, invisible,” 1 Tim. 1:17; “King of kings,” 1 Tim.

6:15, see Note (2) below; “King of the ages,” Rev. 15:3, RV (KJV, “saints”). Christ’s “kingship” was predicted in the OT, e.g., Ps. 2:6, and in the NT, e.g., Luke 1:32, 33; He came as such e.g., Matt. 2:2; John 18:37; was rejected and died as such, Luke 19:14; Matt. 27:37; is now a “King” Priest, after the order of Melchizedek, Heb. 5:6; 7:1, 17; and will reign for ever and ever, Rev. 11:15.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 1:6 and 5:10, the most authentic mss. have the word basileia, “kingdom,” instead of the plural of basileus, KJV, “kings;” RV, “a kingdom (to be priests),” and “a kingdom (and priests).” The kingdom was conditionally offered by God to Israel, that they should be to Him “a kingdom of priests,” Exod. 19:6, the entire nation fulfilling priestly worship and service. Their failure to fulfill His covenant resulted in the selection of the Aaronic priesthood. The bringing in of the new and better covenant of grace has constituted all believers a spiritual kingdom, a holy and royal priesthood, 1 Pet. 2:5, 9. (2) In 1 Tim. 6:15, the word “kings” translates the present participle of the verb basileuo, “to be king, to have kingship,” lit., “of (those) who are kings.” See REIGN, (3). Deissmann has shown that the title “king of kings” was “in very early eastern history a decoration of great monarchs and also a divine title” (Light from the Ancient East, pp. 367ff.). Moulton and Milligan illustrate the use of the title among the Persians, from documents discovered in Media.

B. Adjectives.

1. basileios (βασιλείος, 934), denoting “royal,” as in 1 Pet. 2:9, is used in the plural, of the courts or palaces of kings, Luke 7:25, “kings’ courts”; a possible meaning is “among royal courtiers or persons.”¶

2. basilikos (βασιλικός, 937), “royal, belonging to a king,” is used in Acts 12:20 with “country” understood, “their country was fed from the king’s,” lit., “the royal (country).” See NOBLEMAN, ROYAL.

KINGDOM

basileia (βασίλεια, 932) is primarily an abstract noun, denoting “sovereignty, royal power, dominion,” e.g., Rev. 17:18, translated “(which) reigneth,” lit., “hath a kingdom” (RV marg.); then, by metonymy, a concrete noun, denoting the territory or people over whom a king rules, e.g., Matt. 4:8; Mark 3:24. It is used especially of the “kingdom” of God and of Christ.

“The Kingdom of God is (a) the sphere of God’s rule, Ps. 22:28; 145:13; Dan. 4:25; Luke 1:52; Rom. 13:1, 2. Since, however, this earth is the scene of universal rebellion against God, e.g., Luke 4:5, 6; 1 John 5:19; Rev. 11:15-18, the “kingdom” of God is (b) the sphere in which, at any given time, His rule is acknowledged. God has not relinquished His sovereignty in the face of rebellion, demoniac and human, but has declared His purpose to establish it, Dan. 2:44; 7:14; 1 Cor. 15:24, 25. Meantime, seeking willing obedience, He gave His law to a nation and appointed kings to administer His “kingdom” over it, 1 Chron. 28:5. Israel, however, though declaring still a nominal allegiance shared in the common rebellion, Isa. 1:2-4, and, after they had rejected the Son of God, John 1:11 (cf. Matt. 21:33-43), were “cast away,” Rom. 11:15, 20, 25. Henceforth God calls upon men everywhere, without distinction of race or nationality, to submit voluntarily to His rule. Thus the “kingdom” is said to be “in mystery” now, Mark

4:11, that is, it does not come within the range of the natural powers of observation, Luke 17:20, but is spiritually discerned, John 3:3 (cf. 1 Cor. 2:14). When, hereafter, God asserts His rule universally, then the “kingdom” will be in glory, that is, it will be manifest to all; cf. Matt. 25:31-34; Phil. 2:9-11; 2 Tim. 4:1, 18.

“Thus, speaking generally, references to the Kingdom fall into two classes, the first, in which it is viewed as present and involving suffering for those who enter it, 2 Thess. 1:5; the second, in which it is viewed as future and is associated with reward, Matt. 25:34, and glory, 13:43. See also Acts 14:22.

“The fundamental principle of the Kingdom is declared in the words of the Lord spoken in the midst of a company of Pharisees, “the Kingdom of God is in the midst of you,” Luke 17:21, marg., that is, where the King is, there is the Kingdom. Thus at the present time and so far as this earth is concerned, where the King is and where His rule is acknowledged, is, first, in the heart of the individual believer, Acts 4:19; Eph. 3:17; 1 Pet. 3:15; and then in the churches of God, 1 Cor. 12:3, 5, 11; 14:37; cf. Col. 1:27, where for “in” read “among.”

“Now, the King and His rule being refused, those who enter the Kingdom of God are brought into conflict with all who disown its allegiance, as well as with the desire for ease, and the dislike of suffering and unpopularity, natural to all. On the other hand, subjects of the Kingdom are the objects of the care of God, Matt. 6:33, and of the rejected King, Heb. 13:5.

“Entrance into the Kingdom of God is by the new birth, Matt. 18:3; John 3:5, for nothing that a man may be by nature, or can attain to by any form of self-culture, avails in the spiritual realm. And as the new nature, received in the new birth, is made evident by obedience, it is further said that only such as do the will of God shall enter into His Kingdom, Matt. 7:21, where, however, the context shows that the reference is to the future, as in 2 Pet. 1:10, 11. Cf. also 1 Cor. 6:9, 10; Gal. 5:21; Eph. 5:5.

“The expression ‘Kingdom of God’ occurs four times in Matthew, ‘Kingdom of the Heavens’ usually taking its place. The latter (cf. Dan. 4:26) does not occur elsewhere in NT, but see 2 Tim. 4:18, “His heavenly Kingdom.” ... This Kingdom is identical with the Kingdom of the Father (cf. Matt. 26:29 with Mark 14:25), and with the Kingdom of the Son (cf. Luke 22:30). Thus there is but one Kingdom, variously described: of the Son of Man, Matt. 13:41; of Jesus, Rev. 1:9; of Christ Jesus, 2 Tim. 4:1; “of Christ and God,” Eph. 5:5; “of our Lord, and of His Christ,” Rev. 11:15; “of our God, and the authority of His Christ,” 12:10; “of the Son of His love,” Col. 1:13.

“Concerning the future, the Lord taught His disciples to pray, “Thy Kingdom come,” Matt. 6:10, where the verb is in the point tense, precluding the notion of gradual progress and development, and implying a sudden catastrophe as declared in 2 Thess. 2:8.

“Concerning the present, that a man is of the Kingdom of God is not shown in the punctilious observance of ordinances, which are external and material, but in the deeper matters of the heart, which are spiritual and essential, viz., “righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit,” Rom. 14:17.”* * From Notes on Thessalonians by Hogg and Vine, pp. 68, 70.

“With regard to the expressions “the Kingdom of God” and the “Kingdom of the Heavens,” while they are often used interchangeably, it does not follow that in every case they mean exactly the same and are quite identical.

“The Apostle Paul often speaks of the Kingdom of God, not dispensationally but morally, e.g., in Rom. 14:17; 1 Cor. 4:20, but never so of the Kingdom of Heaven. ‘God’ is not the equivalent of ‘the heavens.’ He is everywhere and above all dispensations, whereas ‘the heavens’ are distinguished from the earth, until the Kingdom comes in judgment and power and glory (Rev. 11:15, RV) when rule in heaven and on earth will be one.

“While, then, the sphere of the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of Heaven are at times identical, yet the one term cannot be used indiscriminately for the other. In the ‘Kingdom of Heaven’ (32 times in Matt.), heaven is in antithesis to earth, and the phrase is limited to the Kingdom in its earthly aspect for the time being, and is used only dispensationally and in connection with Israel. In the ‘Kingdom of God’, in its broader aspect, God is in antithesis to ‘man’ or ‘the world,’ and the term signifies the entire sphere of God’s rule and action in relation to the world. It has a moral and spiritual force and is a general term for the Kingdom at any time. The Kingdom of Heaven is always the Kingdom of God, but the Kingdom of God is not limited to the Kingdom of Heaven, until in their final form, they become identical, e.g., Rev. 11:15, RV; John 3:5; Rev. 12:10.”

KISS (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

philema (φίλημα, 5370), “a kiss” (akin to B), Luke 7:45; 22:48, was a token of Christian brotherhood, whether by way of welcome or farewell, “a holy kiss,” Rom. 16:16; 1 Cor. 16:20; 2 Cor. 13:12; 1 Thess. 5:26, “holy” (hagios), as free from anything inconsistent with their calling as saints (hagioi); “a kiss of love,” 1 Pet. 5:14. There was to be an absence of formality and hypocrisy, a freedom from prejudice arising from social distinctions, from discrimination against the poor, from partiality towards the well-to-do. In the churches masters and servants would thus salute one another without any attitude of condescension on the one part or disrespect on the other. The “kiss” took place thus between persons of the same sex. In the “Apostolic Constitutions,” a writing compiled in the 4th century, A.D., there is a reference to the custom whereby men sat on one side of the room where a meeting was held and women on the other side of the room (as is frequently the case still in parts of Europe and Asia), and the men are bidden to salute the men, and the women the women, with “the kiss of the Lord.”¶

B. Verbs.

1. phileo (φιλέω, 5368), “to love,” signifies “to kiss,” in Matt. 26:48; Mark 14:44; Luke 22:47.

2. kataphileo (καταφιλέω, 2705) denotes “to kiss fervently” (kata, intensive, and No. 1); the stronger force of this verb has been called in question, but the change from phileo to kataphileo in Matt. 26:49 and Mark 14:45 can scarcely be without significance, and the act of the traitor was almost certainly more demonstrative than the simple kiss of salutation. So with the kiss of genuine devotion, Luke 7:38, 45; 15:20; Acts 20:37, in each of which this verb is used.¶

gonu (γονύ, 1119), “a knee” (Latin, genu), is used (a) metaphorically in Heb. 12:12, where the duty enjoined is that of “courageous self-recovery in God’s strength;” (b) literally, of the attitude of a suppliant, Luke 5:8; Eph. 3:14; of veneration, Rom. 11:4; 14:11; Phil. 2:10; in mockery, Mark 15:19. See KNEEL.

KNEEL

1. gonupeteo (γονυπετέω, 1120) denotes “to bow the knees, kneel,” from gonu (see above) and pipto, “to fall prostrate,” the act of one imploring aid, Matt. 17:14; Mark 1:40; of one expressing reverence and honor, Mark 10:17; in mockery, Matt. 27:29.¶

2. A phrase consisting of tithemi, “to put,” with gonata, the plural of gonu, “the knee” (see above), signifies “to kneel,” and is always used of an attitude of prayer, Luke 22:41 (lit., “placing the knees”); Acts 7:60; 9:40; 20:36; 21:5.¶

sumbibazo (συμβιβάζω, 4822) signifies “to cause to coalesce, to join or knit together,” Eph. 4:16, RV, “knit together” (KJV, “compacted”); Col. 2:2, where some would assign the alternative meaning, “to instruct,” as, e.g., in 1 Cor. 2:16; in Col. 2:19, “knit together,” it is said of the church, as the body of which Christ is the Head. See COMPACTED.

Note: In Acts 10:11 some mss. have the verb deo, “to bind,” translated “knit,” of the four corners of the sheet in Peter’s vision. The RV “let down” translates the verb kathiemai, found in the best texts.

KNOCK

krouo (κρούω, 2925), “to strike, knock,” is used in the NT of “knocking” at a door, (a) literally, Luke 12:36; Acts 12:13, 16; (b) figuratively, Matt. 7:7, 8; Luke 11:9, 10 (of importunity in dealing with God); 13:25; Rev. 3:20.¶

KNOW, KNOWN, KNOWLEDGE, UNKNOWN

A. Verbs.

1. ginosko (γινώσκω, 1097) signifies “to be taking in knowledge, to come to know, recognize, understand,” or “to understand completely,” e.g., Mark 13:28, 29; John 13:12; 15:18; 21:17; 2 Cor. 8:9; Heb. 10:34; 1 John 2:5; 4:2, 6 (twice), 7, 13; 5:2, 20; in its past tenses it frequently means “to know in the sense of realizing,” the aorist or point tense usually indicating definiteness, Matt. 13:11; Mark 7:24; John 7:26; in 10:38 “that ye may know (aorist tense) and understand, (present tense)” 19:4; Acts 1:7; 17:19; Rom. 1:21; 1 Cor. 2:11 (2nd part), 14; 2 Cor. 2:4; Eph. 3:19; 6:22; Phil. 2:19; 3:10; 1 Thess. 3:5; 2 Tim. 2:19; Jas. 2:20; 1 John 2:13 (twice), 14; 3:6; 4:8; 2 John 1; Rev. 2:24; 3:3, 9. In the passive voice, it often signifies “to become known,” e.g., Matt. 10:26; Phil. 4:5. In the sense of complete and absolute understanding on God’s part, it is used, e.g., in Luke 16:15; John 10:15 (of the Son as well as the Father); 1 Cor. 3:20. In Luke 12:46, KJV, it is rendered “he is ... aware.”

In the NT ginosko frequently indicates a relation between the person “knowing” and the object known; in this respect, what is “known” is of value or importance to the one who knows, and hence the establishment of the relationship, e.g., especially of God’s “knowledge,” 1 Cor. 8:3, “if any man love God, the same is known of Him”; Gal. 4:9, “to be known of God”; here the “knowing” suggests approval and bears the meaning “to be approved”; so in 2 Tim. 2:19; cf. John 10:14, 27; Gen. 18:19; Nah. 1:7; the relationship implied may involve remedial chastisement, Amos 3:2. The same idea of appreciation as well as “knowledge” underlies several statements concerning the “knowledge” of God and His truth on the part of believers, e.g., John 8:32; 14:20, 31; 17:3; Gal. 4:9 (1st part); 1 John 2:3-13, 14; 4:6, 8, 16; 5:20; such “knowledge” is obtained, not by mere intellectual activity, but by operation of the Holy Spirit consequent upon acceptance of Christ. Nor is such “knowledge” marked by finality; see e.g., 2 Pet. 3:18; Hos. 6:3, RV.

The verb is also used to convey the thought of connection or union, as between man and woman, Matt. 1:25; Luke 1:34.

2. oida (Perf. of εἶδω, 1492), from the same root as eidon, “to see,” is a perfect tense with a present meaning, signifying, primarily, “to have seen or perceived”; hence, “to know, to have knowledge of,” whether absolutely, as in divine knowledge, e.g., Matt. 6:8, 32; John 6:6, 64; 8:14; 11:42; 13:11; 18:4; 2 Cor. 11:31; 2 Pet. 2:9; Rev. 2:2, 9, 13, 19; 3:1, 8, 15; or in the case of human “knowledge,” to know from observation, e.g., 1 Thess. 1:4, 5; 2:1; 2 Thess. 3:7.

The differences between ginosko (No. 1) and oida demand consideration: (a) ginosko, frequently suggests inception or progress in “knowledge,” while oida suggests fullness of “knowledge,” e.g., John 8:55, “ye have not known Him” (ginosko), i.e., begun to “know,” “but I know Him” (oida), i.e., “know Him perfectly”; 13:7, “What I do thou knowest not now,” i.e. Peter did not yet perceive (oida) its significance, “but thou shalt understand,” i.e., “get to know (ginosko), hereafter”; 14:7, “If ye had known Me” (ginosko), i.e., “had definitely come to know Me,” “ye would have known My Father also” (oida), i.e., “would have had perception of”: “from henceforth ye know Him” (ginosko), i.e., having unconsciously been coming to the Father, as the One who was in Him, they would now consciously be in the constant and progressive experience of “knowing” Him; in Mark 4:13, “Know ye not (oida) this parable? and how shall ye know (ginosko) all the parables?” (RV), i.e., “Do ye not understand this parable? How shall ye come to perceive all ...” the intimation being that the first parable is a leading and testing one; (b) while ginosko frequently implies an active relation between the one who “knows” and the person or thing “known” (see No. 1, above), oida expresses the fact that the object has simply come within the scope of the “knower’s” perception; thus in Matt. 7:23 “I never knew you” (ginosko) suggests “I have never been in approving connection with you,” whereas in 25:12, “I know you not” (oida) suggests “you stand in no relation to Me.”

3. epiginosko (ἐπιγινώσκω, 1921) denotes (a) “to observe, fully perceive, notice attentively, discern, recognize” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1); it suggests generally a directive, a more special, recognition of the object “known” than does No. 1; it also may suggest advanced “knowledge” or special appreciation; thus, in Rom. 1:32, “knowing the ordinance of God” (epiginosko) means “knowing full well,” whereas in verse 21

“knowing God” (ginosko) simply suggests that they could not avoid the perception. Sometimes epiginosko implies a special participation in the object “known,” and gives greater weight to what is stated; thus in John 8:32, “ye shall know the truth,” ginosko is used, whereas in 1 Tim. 4:3, “them that believe and know the truth,” epiginosko lays stress on participation in the truth. Cf. the stronger statement in Col. 1:6 (epiginosko) with that in 2 Cor. 8:9 (ginosko), and the two verbs in 1 Cor. 13:12, “now I know in part (ginosko); but then shall I know (piginosko) even as also I have been known (epiginosko),” “a knowledge” which perfectly unites the subject with the object; (b) “to discover, ascertain, determine,” e.g., Luke 7:37; 23:7; Acts 9:30; 19:34; 22:29; 28:1; in 24:11 the best mss. have this verb instead of No. 1; hence the RV, “take knowledge.” J. Armitage Robinson (on Ephesians) points out that epignosis is “knowledge directed towards a particular object, perceiving, discerning,” whereas gnosis is knowledge in the abstract. See ACKNOWLEDGE.

4. proginosko (προγινώσκω, 4267), “to know beforehand,” is used (a) of the divine “foreknowledge” concerning believers, Rom. 8:29; Israel, 11:2; Christ as the Lamb of God, 1 Pet. 1:20, RV, “foreknown” (KJV, “foreordained”); (b) of human previous “knowledge,” of a person, Acts 26:5, RV, “having knowledge of” (KJV, “which knew”); of facts, 2 Pet. 3:17. See FOREKNOW.¶

5. epistamai (ἐπίσταμαι, 1987), “to know, know of, understand” (probably an old middle voice form of ephistemi, “to set over”), is used in Mark 14:68, “understand,” which follows oida “I (neither) know”; most frequently in the Acts, 10:28; 15:7; 18:25; 19:15, 25; 20:18; 22:19; 24:10; 26:26; elsewhere, 1 Tim. 6:4; Heb. 11:8; Jas. 4:14; Jude 10. See UNDERSTAND.¶

6. sunoida (συνοδία, 4923), sun, “with,” and No. 2, a perfect tense with a present meaning, denotes (a) “to share the knowledge of, be privy to,” Acts 5:2; (b) “to be conscious of,” especially of guilty consciousness, 1 Cor. 4:4, “I know nothing against (KJV, by) myself.” The verb is connected with suneidon, found in Acts 12:12; 14:6 (in the best texts). See CONSIDER, PRIVY, WARE.¶

7. agnoeo (ἄγνοέω, 50), “not to know, to be ignorant”: see IGNORANT.

8. gnorizo (γνωρίζω, 1107) signifies (a) “to come to know, discover, know,” Phil. 1:22, “I wot (not),” i.e., “I know not,” “I have not come to know” (the RV, marg. renders it, as under (b), “I do not make known”); (b) “to make known,” whether (I) communicating things before “unknown,” Luke 2:15, 17; in the latter some mss. have the verb diagnorizo (hence the KJV, “made known abroad”); John 15:15, “I have made known”; 17:26; Acts 2:28; 7:13 (1st part), see Note (3) below; Rom. 9:22, 23; 16:26 (passive voice); 2 Cor. 8:1, “we make known (to you),” RV, KJV, “we do (you) to wit”; Eph. 1:9; 3:3, 5, 10 (all three in the passive voice); 6:19, 21; Col. 1:27; 4:7, 9, “shall make known” (KJV, “shall declare”); 2 Pet. 1:16; or (II), reasserting things already “known,” 1 Cor. 12:3, “I give (you) to understand” (the apostle reaffirms what they knew); 15:1, of the gospel; Gal. 1:11 (he reminds them of what they well knew, the ground of his claim to apostleship); Phil. 4:6 (passive voice), of requests to God. See CERTIFY, DECLARE (Note), UNDERSTAND, WIT, WOT.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 3:10, KJV, parakolouthéo, “to follow closely, follow as a standard of conduct,” is translated “hast fully known” (RV, “didst follow”). See FOLLOW. (2) In 2 Tim. 4:17, KJV, plerophoreo, “to fulfill, accomplish,” is translated “might be fully known” (RV, “might be fully proclaimed”). See FULFILL. (3) In Acts 7:13, some mss. have the verb anagnorizo, “to make oneself known,” “was made known,” instead of No. 8 (which see).¶ (4) In Acts 7:13 (2nd part) the KJV, “was made known” translates the phrase phaneros ginomai, “to become manifest” (RV, “became manifest”). See MANIFEST. (5) For diagnorizo, “to make known,” in Luke 2:17, see No. 8. (6) For diaginosko, in Acts 24:22, “I will know the uttermost of,” see DETERMINE, No. 5.

B. Adjectives.

1. gnostos (γνωστός, 1110), a later form of gnotos (from No. 1), most frequently denotes “known”; it is used ten times in the Acts, always with that meaning (save in 4:16, where it means “notable”); twice in the Gospel of John, 18:15, 16; in Luke 2:44 and 23:49 it denotes “acquaintance”; elsewhere only in Rom. 1:19, “(that which) may be known (of God),” lit., “the knowable of God,” referring to the physical universe, in the creation of which God has made Himself “knowable,” that is, by the exercise of man’s natural faculties, without such supernatural revelations as those given to Israel. See ACQUAINTANCE.

2. phaneros (φανερός, 5318), “visible, manifest,” is translated “known” in Matt. 12:16 and Mark 3:12. See APPEAR, MANIFEST, OPENLY, OUTWARDLY.

3. epistemon (ἐπιστήμων, 1990), akin to A, No. 5, “knowing, skilled,” is used in Jas. 3:13, KJV, “endued with knowledge” (RV “understanding”).¶

4. agnostos (ἄγνωστος, 57), the negative of No. 1, “unknown,” is found in Acts 17:23.¶

C. Nouns.

1. gnosis (γνώσις, 1108), primarily “a seeking to know, an enquiry, investigation” (akin to A, No. 1), denotes, in the NT, “knowledge,” especially of spiritual truth; it is used (a) absolutely, in Luke 11:52; Rom. 2:20; 15:14; 1 Cor. 1:5; 8:1 (twice), 7, 10, 11; 13:2, 8; 14:6; 2 Cor. 6:6; 8:7; 11:6; Eph. 3:19; Col. 2:3; 1 Pet. 3:7; 2 Pet. 1:5, 6; (b) with an object: in respect of (1) God, 2 Cor. 2:14; 10:5; (2) the glory of God, 2 Cor. 4:6; (3) Christ Jesus, Phil. 3:8; 2 Pet. 3:18; (4) salvation, Luke 1:77; (c) subjectively, of God’s “knowledge,” Rom. 11:33; the word of “knowledge,” 1 Cor. 12:8; “knowledge” falsely so called, 1 Tim. 6:20.¶

2. epignosis (ἐπίγνωσις, 1922), akin to A, No. 3, denotes “exact or full knowledge, discernment, recognition,” and is a strengthened form of No. 1, expressing a fuller or a full “knowledge,” a greater participation by the “knower” in the object “known,” thus more powerfully influencing him. It is not found in the Gospels and Acts. Paul uses it 15 times (16 if Heb. 10:26 is included) out of the 20 occurrences; Peter 4 times, all in his 2nd Epistle. Contrast Rom. 1:28 (epignosis) with the simple verb in v. 21. “In all the four Epistles of the first Roman captivity it is an element in the Apostle’s opening prayer for his correspondents’ well-being, Phil. 1:9; Eph. 1:17; Col. 1:9; Philem. 6” (Lightfoot).

It is used with reference to God in Rom. 1:28; 10:2; Eph. 1:17; Col. 1:10; 2 Pet. 1:3; God and Christ, 2 Pet. 1:2; Christ, Eph. 4:13; 2 Pet. 1:8; 2:20; the will of the Lord, Col. 1:9; every good thing, Philem. 6, RV (KJV, “acknowledging”); the truth, 1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Tim. 2:25, RV; 3:7; Titus 1:1, RV; the mystery of God. Col. 2:2, RV, “(that they) may know” (KJV, “to the acknowledgment of”), lit., “into a full knowledge.” It is used without the mention of an object in Phil. 1:9; Col. 3:10, RV, “(renewed) unto knowledge.” See ACKNOWLEDGE.¶

3. agnosia (ἄγνοσία, 56), the negative of No. 1, “ignorance,” is rendered “no knowledge” in 1 Cor. 15:34, RV (KJV, “not the knowledge”); in 1 Pet. 2:15, ignorance. See IGNORANCE.¶

Note: In Eph. 3:4, KJV, sunesis, “understanding,” is translated “knowledge”; RV, “understanding.” For kardiognostes see p. 297.

L

LABOR (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. kopos (κόπος, 2873) primarily denotes “a striking, beating” (akin to kopto, “to strike, cut”), then, “toil resulting in weariness, laborious toil, trouble”; it is translated “labor” or “labors” in John 4:38; 1 Cor. 3:8; 15:58; 2 Cor. 6:5; 10:15; 11:23, 27, RV, “labor” (KJV, “weariness”); 1 Thess. 1:3; 2:9; 3:5; 2 Thess. 3:8; (in some mss., Heb. 6:10); Rev. 2:2 (RV “toil”); 14:13. In the following the noun is used as the object of the verb parecho, “to afford, give, cause,” the phrase being rendered “to trouble,” lit., “to cause toil or trouble,” to embarrass a person by giving occasion for anxiety, as some disciples did to the woman with the ointment, perturbing her spirit by their criticisms, Matt. 26:10; Mark 14:6; or by distracting attention or disturbing a person’s rest, as the importunate friend did, Luke 11:7; 18:5; in Gal. 6:17, “let no man trouble me,” the apostle refuses, in the form of a peremptory prohibition, to allow himself to be distracted further by the Judaizers, through their proclamation of a false gospel and by their malicious attacks upon himself.¶

2. ponos (πόνος, 4192) denotes (a) “labors, toil,” Col. 4:13, in the best mss. (some have zelos, “zeal,” KJV); (b) “the consequence of toil,” viz., distress, suffering, pain, Rev. 16:10, 11; 21:4. See PAIN.¶

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

Notes: (1) In Phil. 1:22, KJV, ergon, “work,” is translated “labor” (RV, “work”); work refers to what is done, and may be easy and pleasant; kopos suggests the doing, and the pains taken therein. (2) A synonymous word is mochthos, “toil, hardship, distress,” 2 Cor. 11:27; 1 Thess. 2:9; 2 Thess. 3:8.¶

B. Verbs.

1. kopiao (κοπιᾶω, 2872), akin to A, No. 1, has the two different meanings (a) “growing weary,” (b) “toiling”; it is sometimes translated “to bestow labor” (see under BESTOW, No. 3). It is translated by the verb “to labor” in Matt. 11:28; John 4:38 (2nd part); Acts 20:35; Rom. 16:12 (twice); 1 Cor. 15:10; 16:16; Eph. 4:28; Phil. 2:16; Col. 1:29; 1 Thess. 5:12; 1 Tim. 4:10; 5:17; 2 Tim. 2:6; Rev. 2:3; 1 Cor. 4:12, RV, “toil” (KJV, “labor”). See TOIL.

2. cheimazo (χειμάζω, 5492), from cheima, “winter cold,” primarily, “to expose to winter cold,” signifies “to drive with a storm”; in the passive voice, “to be driven with storm, to be tempest-tossed,” Acts 27:18, RV, “as (we) labored with the storm” (KJV, “being ... tossed with a tempest”).¶

3. sunathleo (συναθλέω, 4866), “to contend along with a person” (sun, “with,” athleo, “to contend”), is said in Phil. 4:3 of two women who “labored with” the apostle in the gospel; in 1:27, RV, “striving (for),” marg., “with,” KJV, “striving together (for).” See STRIVE.¶

Notes: (1) In John 6:27 and 1 Thess. 2:9, KJV, ergazomai, “to work,” is translated respectively “labor” and “laboring” (RV, “working”). It is used of manual work here and in 4:11 and Eph. 4:28; of work for Christ in general, in 1 Cor. 16:10. See COMMIT. (2) In Heb. 4:11, KJV, spoudazo, “to be diligent,” is translated “let us labor” (RV, “let us give diligence”). (3) In Col. 4:12, KJV, agonizomai, “to strive, wrestle,” is translated “laboring fervently” (RV, and KJV, marg., “striving”). (4) In 2 Cor. 5:9, KJV, philotimeomai, “to seek after honor,” and hence, “to be ambitious,” is translated “we labor,” marg., “endeavor” (RV, “we make it our aim,” marg., “are ambitious”); cf. Rom. 15:20; 1 Thess. 4:11, RV, marg.¶

LABORER, FELLOW LABORER

ergates (ἐργάτης, 2040), akin to ergazomai, “to work,” and ergon, “work,” denotes (a) “a field laborer, a husbandman,” Matt. 9:37, 38; 20:1, 2, 8; Luke 10:2 (twice); Jas. 5:4; (b) “a workman, laborer,” in a general sense, Matt. 10:10; Luke 10:7; Acts 19:25; 1 Tim. 5:18; it is used (c) of false apostles and evil teachers, 2 Cor. 11:13; Phil. 3:2, (d) of a servant of Christ, 2 Tim. 2:15; (e) of evildoers, Luke 13:27.¶

Note: In the KJV of Philem. 1 and 24, sunergos, “a fellow worker,” is translated “fellow laborer,” RV, “fellow worker”; in Phil. 4:3, the plural, RV, “fellow workers,” in Phil. 2:25, KJV, “companion in labor,” RV, “fellow worker”; in 1 Cor. 3:9, KJV, “laborers together (with God),” RV, “God’s fellow workers,” i.e., fellow workers belonging to and serving God; in 3 John 8, KJV, “fellow helpers” (to the truth), RV, “fellow workers (with the truth),” i.e., acting together with the truth as an operating power; in 1 Thess. 3:2, some ancient authorities have the clause “fellow worker (with God),” RV, marg.; it is absent from the most authentic mss. See HELPER.

LACK, LACKING

A. Noun.

husterema (ὕστέρημα, 5303) denotes (a) “that which is lacking, deficiency, shortcoming” (akin to hustereo, “to be behind, in want”), 1 Cor. 16:17; Phil. 2:30; Col. 1:24, RV, “that which is lacking” [KJV, “that which is behind” (of the afflictions of Christ)], where the reference is not to the vicarious sufferings of Christ but to those which He endured previously, and those which must be endured by His faithful servants; 1 Thess. 3:10, where “that which is lacking” means that which Paul had not been able to impart to them, owing to the interruption of his spiritual instruction among them; (b) “need, want, poverty,” Luke 21:4, RV, “want” (KJV, “penury”); 2 Cor. 8:14 (twice) “want;” 9:12, “wants” (KJV, “want”); 11:9, RV, “(the measure of my) want” [KJV, “that which was lacking (to me)”]. See BEHIND, PENURY, WANT.¶

Note: In 1 Thess. 4:12, KJV, chreia, “need,” is translated “lack” (RV, “need”). See NEED.

B. Adjective.

endees (ἐνδεής, 1729), from endeo, “to lack,” signifies “needy, in want,” translated “that lacked” in Acts 4:34.¶

C. Verbs.

1. hustereo (ὕστερέω, 5302), akin to A, “to come or be behind,” is used in the sense of “lacking” certain things, Matt. 19:20; Mark 10:21 (“one thing”; cf. No. 3 in Luke 18:22); Luke 22:35; in the sense of being inferior, 1 Cor. 12:24 (middle voice). Elsewhere it is translated in various ways; see BEHIND, B, No. 1, COME, No. 39, DESTITUTE, FAIL, Note (2), NEED, WANT, WORSE.

2. elattoneo (ἐλαττονέω, 1641), “to be less” (from elattōn, “less”), is translated “had no lack,” 2 Cor. 8:15 (quoted from the Sept. of Exod. 16:18), the circumstance of the gathering of the manna being applied to the equalizing nature of cause and effect in the matter of supplying the wants of the needy.¶

3. leipo (λείπω, 3007), “to leave,” denotes (a) transitively, in the passive voice, “to be left behind, to lack,” Jas. 1:4, “ye may be lacking in (nothing),” RV (KJV, “wanting”); v. 5, “lacketh” (KJV, “lack”); 2:15, RV, “be ... in lack” (KJV, “be ... destitute”); (b) intransitively, active voice, Luke 18:22, “(one thing thou) lackest,” is, lit., “(one thing) is lacking (to thee)”; Titus 1:5, “(the things) that were wanting”; 3:13, “(that nothing) be wanting.” See DESTITUTE, WANTING.¶

Note: In 2 Pet. 1:9, “he that lacketh” translates a phrase the lit. rendering of which is “(he to whom these things) are not present” (pareimi, “to be present”).

For LAD, in John 6:9, see CHILD, A, No. 6

LADE, LADEN

1. soreuo (σωρεύω, 4987) signifies (a) “to heap on” (from soros, “a heap,” not in the NT; in the Sept., e.g., Josh. 7:26; 8:29; 2 Sam. 18:17; 2 Chron. 31:6-9), Rom. 12:20, of coals of fire; 2 Tim. 3:6, said of silly women (“womanlings”) “laden” with sins. See HEAP.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:22.¶

2. gemo (γέμω, 1073), “to be full,” is translated “laden” in Rev. 21:9, RV. See FULL.

3. phortizo (φορτίζω, 5412), “to load” (akin to phero, “to bear”), is used in the active voice in Luke 11:46, “ye lade”; in the passive voice, metaphorically, in Matt. 11:28, “heavy laden.” See BURDEN.¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 16:33.¶

Note: In Acts 28:10, KJV, epitithemi, “to put on” (epi, “on,” tithemi, “to put”), is translated “they laded (us) with,” RV, “they put on (board).”

LADING

phortion (φορτίον, 5413), “a burden, load” (a diminutive of phortos, “a load,” from phero, “to bear”), is used of the cargo of a ship, Acts 27:10, “lading,” (some mss. have phortos). See BURDEN, A, No. 2.

LADY

kuria (Κυρία, 2959) is the person addressed in 2 John 1 and 5. Not improbably it is a proper name (Eng., “Cyria”), in spite of the fact that the full form of address in v. 1 is not quite in accord, in the original, with those in v. 13 and in 3 John 1. The suggestion that the church is addressed is most unlikely. Possibly the person is one who had a special relation with the local church.¶

For LAID see LAY

limne (λίμνη, 3041), “a lake,” is used (a) in the Gospels, only by Luke, of the Sea of Galilee, Luke 5:2; 8:22, 23, 33, called Gennesaret in 5:1 (Matthew and Mark use thalassa, “a sea”); (b) of the “lake” of fire, Rev. 19:20; 20:10, 14, 15; 21:8.¶

LAMA

lama (λαμά, 2982) is the Hebrew word for “Why?” (the variant lema is the Aramaic form), Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34.¶

LAMB

1. aren (ἀρήν, 704), a noun the nominative case of which is found only in early times occurs in Luke 10:3. In normal usage it was replaced by arnion (No. 2), of which it is the equivalent.¶

2. arnion (ἀρνίον, 721) is a diminutive in form, but the diminutive force is not to be pressed (see Note under No. 3). The general tendency in the vernacular was to use nouns in -ion freely, apart from their diminutive significance. It is used only by the apostle John, (a) in the plural, in the Lord’s command to Peter, John 21:15, with symbolic reference to young converts; (b) elsewhere, in the singular, in the Apocalypse, some 28 times, of Christ as the “Lamb” of God, the symbolism having reference to His character and His vicarious Sacrifice, as the basis both of redemption and of divine vengeance. He is seen in the position of sovereign glory and honor, e.g., 7:17, which He shares equally with the Father, 22:1, 3, the center of angelic beings and of the redeemed and the object of their veneration, e.g. 5:6, 8, 12, 13; 15:3, the Leader and Shepherd of His saints, e.g., 7:17; 14:4, the Head of his spiritual bride, e.g., 21:9, the luminary of the heavenly and eternal city, 21:23, the One to whom all judgment is committed, e.g., 6:1, 16; 13:8, the Conqueror of the foes of God and His people, 17:14; the song that celebrates the triumph of those who “gain the victory over the Beast,” is the song of Moses ... and the song of the Lamb 15:3. His sacrifice, the efficacy of which avails for those who accept the salvation thereby provided, forms the ground of the execution of divine wrath for the rejector, and the defier of God, 14:10; (c) in the description of the second “Beast,” Rev. 13:11, seen in the vision “like a lamb,” suggestive of his acting in the capacity of a false messiah, a travesty of the true. For the use in the Sept. see Note under No. 3.

3. amnos (ἄμνός, 286), “a lamb,” is used figuratively of Christ, in John 1:29, 36, with the article, pointing Him out as the expected One, the One to be well known as the personal fulfillment and embodiment of all that had been indicated in the OT, the One by whose sacrifice deliverance from divine judgment was to be obtained; in Acts 8:32 (from the Sept. of Is. 53:7) and 1 Pet. 1:19, the absence of the article stresses the nature and character of His sacrifice as set forth in the symbolism. The reference in each case is to the lamb of God’s providing, Gen. 22:8, and the Paschal lamb of God’s appointment for sacrifice in Israel, e.g., Ex. 12:5, 14, 27 (cf. 1 Cor. 5:7).¶

Note: The contrast between arnion and amnos does not lie in the diminutive character of the former as compared with the latter. As has been pointed out under No. 2, arnion lost its diminutive force. The contrast lies in the manner in which Christ is presented in the two respects. The use of amnos points directly to the fact, the nature and character of His sacrifice; arnion (only in the Apocalypse) presents Him, on the ground, indeed, of His sacrifice, but in His acquired majesty, dignity, honor, authority and power.

In the Sept. arnion is used in Ps. 114:4, 6, in Jer. 11:19, with the adjective akakos, “innocent”; in Jer. 27:45, “lambs.” There is nothing in these passages to suggest a contrast between a “lamb” in the general sense of the term and the diminutive; the contrast is between “lambs” and sheep. Elsewhere in the Sept. amnos is in general used some 100 times in connection with “lambs” for sacrifice.

LAMP

1. lampas (λαμπάς, 2985) denotes “a torch” (akin to lampo, “to shine”), frequently fed, like a “lamp,” with oil from a little vessel used for the purpose (the angeion of Matt. 25:4); they held little oil and would frequently need replenishing. Rutherford (The New Phrynichus) points out that it became used as the equivalent of luchnos (No. 2), as in the parable of the ten virgins, Matt. 25:1, 3, 4, 7, 8; John 18:3, “torches”; Acts 20:8, “lights”; Rev. 4:5; 8:10 (RV, “torch,” KJV, “lamp”). See Note below.¶ Cf. phanos, “a torch,” John 18:3 (translated “lanterns”).¶

2. luchnos (λύχνος, 3088) frequently mistranslated “candle,” is a portable “lamp” usually set on a stand (see LAMPSTAND); the word is used literally, Matt. 5:15; Mark 4:21;

Luke 8:16; 11:33, 36; 15:8; Rev. 18:23; 22:5; (b) metaphorically, of Christ as the Lamb, Rev. 21:23, RV, “lamp” (KJV, “light”); of John the Baptist, John 5:35, RV, “the lamp” (KJV, “a ... light”); of the eye, Matt. 6:22, and Luke 11:34, RV, “lamp”; of spiritual readiness, Luke 12:35, RV, “lamps”; of “the word of prophecy,” 2 Pet. 1:19, RV, “lamp.” See LIGHT.¶

“In rendering luchnos and lampas our translators have scarcely made the most of the words at their command. Had they rendered lampas by ‘torch’ not once only (John 18:3), but always, this would have left ‘lamp,’ now wrongly appropriated by lampas, disengaged. Altogether dismissing ‘candle,’ they might then have rendered luchnos by ‘lamp’ wherever it occurs. At present there are so many occasions where ‘candle’ would manifestly be inappropriate, and where, therefore, they are obliged to fall back on ‘light,’ that the distinction between phos and luchnos nearly, if not quite, disappears in our Version. The advantages of such a re-distribution of the words would be many. In the first place, it would be more accurate. Luchnos is not a ‘candle’ (candela, from candeo, the white wax light, and then any kind of taper), but a hand-lamp, fed with oil. Neither is lampas a ‘lamp,’ but a ‘torch’” (Trench Syn., Sec.xlvi).

Note: There is no mention of a candle in the original either in the OT or in the NT. The figure of that which feeds upon its own substance to provide its light would be utterly inappropriate. A lamp is supplied by oil, which in its symbolism is figurative of the Holy Spirit.

LAMPSTAND

luchnia (λυχνία, 3087) is mistranslated “candlestick” in every occurrence in the KJV and in certain places in the RV; the RV has “stand” in Matt. 5:15; Mark 4:21; Luke 8:16; 11:33; “candlestick” in Heb. 9:2; Rev. 1:12, 13, 20 (twice); 2:1, 5; 11:4; the RV marg., gives “lampstands” in the passages in Rev., but not in Heb. 9:2.¶

LAND

A. Nouns.

1. ge (γῆ, 1093), in one of its usages, denotes (a) “land” as distinct from sea or other water, e.g., Mark 4:1; 6:47; Luke 5:3; John 6:21; (b) “land” as subject to cultivation, e.g., Luke 14:35 (see GROUND); (c) “land” as describing a country or region, e.g., Matt. 2:20, 21; 4:15; Luke 4:25; in 23:44, RV, “(the whole) land,” KJV, “(all the) earth”; Acts 7:29; Heb. 11:9, RV, “a land (not his own),” KJV “a (strange) country;” Jude 5. In Acts 7:11 the KJV follows a reading of the noun with the definite article which necessitates the insertion of “land.” See EARTH.

2. chora (χώρα, 5561) is used with the meaning “land,” (a) of a country, region, e.g., Mark 1:5; Luke 15:14; sometimes translated “region,” e.g., Matt. 4:16; Luke 3:1; Acts 8:1; 13:49; 16:6; (b) of property, Luke 12:16, “ground.” See COUNTRY, A, No. 3.

3. chorion (χωρίον, 5564), a diminutive of No. 2, in form, but not in meaning, is translated “land” in the sense of property, in Acts 4:34; 5:3, 8; 28:7, RV, “lands” (KJV, “possessions”). See FIELD, GROUND, A, No. 4, PLACE, POSSESSION.

4. agros (ἀγρός, 68), “a field,” or “piece of ground,” or “the country” as distinct from the town, is translated “lands” in Matt. 19:29; Mark 10:29, 30; Acts 4:37 (cf. No. 3 in v. 31). See COUNTRY, A, No. 1, FARM, FIELD, GROUND.

B. Adjective.

xeros (ξηρός, 3584), “dry,” “dry land,” Matt. 23:15 (ge, “land,” being understood); Heb. 11:29: see DRY.

Note: In Luke 4:26, the RV, “in the land (of)” and KJV, “a city (of),” represent no word in the original, but give the sense of the phrase.

C. Verb.

katerchomai (κατέρχομαι, 2718), “to come down, or go down, descend,” is used of coming to port by ship, in Acts 18:22, “landed”; 21:3 (ditto); 27:5, “came to.” See COME, No. 7, GO Note (1).

Notes: (1) In Acts 28:12, RV, katago, “to bring down,” used as a nautical term in the passive voice, is translated “touching” (KJV, “landing”). (2) In Acts 21:3, some mss. have the verb katago, with reference to Cyprus. (3) In Acts 20:13, pezeuo, “to travel by land” or “on foot” (pezos, “on foot”; pous, “a foot”), is translated “to go by land,” RV, KJV, “to go afoot,” and RV marg., “to go on foot.”¶

LANE

rhume (ρύμη, 4505) in earlier Greek meant “the force or rush or swing of a moving body” in later times, “a narrow road lane or street”, it is translated “lanes” in Luke 14:21; “streets” in Matt. 6:2; “street” in Acts 9:11; 12:10. See STREET.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 15:3.

LANGUAGE

dialektos (διάλεκτος, 1258), primarily “a conversation, discourse” (akin to dialogomai, “to discourse or discuss”), came to denote “the language or dialect of a country or district”, in the KJV and RV of Acts 2:6 it is translated “language”; in the following the RV retains “language,” for KJV, “tongue,” Acts 1:19; 2:8; 21:40; 22:2; 26:14. See TONGUE.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 9:26.¶

LANTERN

phanos (φάνος, 5322) denotes either “a torch” or “a lantern” (from phaino, “to cause to shine, to give light”), John 18:3, where it is distinguished from lampas (see LAMP, No. 1); it was “a link or torch consisting of strips of resinous wood tied together” (Rutherford). “Torch” would seem to be the meaning.

LARGE

1. megas (μέγας, 3173), “great, large, of physical magnitude,” is translated “large” in Mark 14:15 and Luke 22:12, of the upper room. See GREAT, No. 1.

2. hikanos (ικανός, 2425), of persons, denotes “sufficient, competent, fit”; of things, “sufficient, enough, much, many (so of time)”; it is translated “large” in Matt. 28:12, of money. See ABLE, C No. 2.

3. pelikos (πηλίκος, 4080), how large, is used of letters of the alphabet, characters in writing, Gal. 6:11, “with how large (letters)”; it is said of personal greatness in Heb. 7:4. See GREAT, No. 5.¶

LASCIVIOUS, LASCIVIOUSNESS

aselgeia (ἀσέλγεια, 766) denotes “excess, licentiousness, absence of restraint, indecency, wantonness”; “lasciviousness” in Mark 7:22, one of the evils that proceed from the heart; in 2 Cor. 12:21, one of the evils of which some in the church at Corinth had been guilty; in Gal. 5:19, classed among the works of the flesh; in Eph. 4:19, among the sins of the unregenerate who are “past feeling”; so in 1 Pet. 4:3; in Jude 4, of that into which the grace of God had been turned by ungodly men; it is translated “wantonness” in Rom. 13:13, one of the sins against which believers are warned; in 2 Pet. 2:2, according to the best mss., “lascivious (doings),” RV (the KJV “pernicious ways” follows those texts which have apoleiais); in v. 7, RV, “lascivious (life),” KJV, “filthy (conversation),” of the people of Sodom and Gomorrah; in 2:18, RV, “lasciviousness” (KJV, “wantonness”), practiced by the same persons as mentioned in Jude. The prominent idea is shameless conduct. Some have derived the word from a, negative, and selge, “a city in Pisidia.”

Others, with similar improbability, trace it to a, negative, and selgo, or thelgo, “to charm.” See WANTONNESS.¶

LAST

A. Adjective.

eschatos (ἔσχατος, 2078), “last, utmost, extreme,” is used (a) of place, e.g., Luke 14:9, 10, “lowest;” Acts 1:8 and 13:47, “uttermost part;” (b) of rank, e.g., Mark 9:35; (c) of time, relating either to persons or things, e.g., Matt. 5:26, “the last (farthing),” RV (KJV, “uttermost”); Matt. 20:8, 12, 14; Mark 12:6, 22; 1 Cor. 4:9, of apostles as “last” in the program of a spectacular display; 1 Cor. 15:45, “the last Adam”; Rev. 2:19, of the “last” state of persons, Matt. 12:45, neuter plural, lit., “the last (things);” so Luke 11:26; 2 Pet. 2:20, RV, “the last state” (KJV, “the latter end”); of Christ as the Eternal One, Rev. 1:17 (in some mss. v. 11); 2:8; 22:13; in eschatological phrases as follows: (a) “the last day,” a comprehensive term including both the time of the resurrection of the redeemed, John 6:39, 40, 44, 54 and 11:24, and the ulterior time of the judgment of the unregenerate, at the Great White Throne, John 12:48; (b) “the last days,” Acts 2:17, a period relative to the supernatural manifestation of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost and the resumption of the divine interpositions in the affairs of the world at the end of the present age, before “the great and notable Day of the Lord,” which will usher in the messianic kingdom; (c) in 2 Tim. 3:1, “the last days” refers to the close of the present age of world conditions; (d) in Jas. 5:3, the phrase “in the last days” (RV) refers both to the period preceding the Roman overthrow of the city and the land in A.D. 70, and to the closing part of the age in consummating acts of gentile persecution including “the time of Jacob’s trouble” (cf. verses 7, 8); (e) in 1 Pet. 1:5, “the last time” refers to the time of the Lord’s second advent; (f) in 1 John 2:18, “the last hour” (RV) and, in Jude 18, “the last time” signify the present age previous to the Second Advent.

Notes: (1) In Heb. 1:2, RV, “at the end of these days” (KJV, “in these last days”), the reference is to the close of the period of the testimony of the prophets under the Law, terminating with the presence of Christ and His redemptive sacrifice and its effects, the perfect tense “hath spoken” indicating the continued effects of the message embodied in the risen Christ; so in 1 Pet. 1:20, RV, “at the end of the times” (KJV, “in these last times”).

B. Adverb.

husteron (ὑστερον, 5305), the neuter of the adjective husteros, is used as an adverb signifying “afterwards, later,” see AFTER, No. 5. Cf. the adjective, under LATER.

Note: In Phil. 4:10 the particle pote, “sometime,” used after ede, “now, already,” to signify “now at length,” is so rendered in the RV, KJV, “(now) at the last.”

LATCHET

himas (ἱμάς, 2438) denotes “a thong, strap,” whether for binding prisoners, Acts 22:25, “(the) thongs” (for scourging; see BIND, No. 7), or for fastening sandals, Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; John 1:27. “Among the Orientals everything connected with the feet and shoes is defiled and debasing, and the stooping to unfasten the dusty latchet is the most insignificant in such service” (Mackie, in Hastings' Bib. Dic.).¶

opse (ὀψέ, 3796), an adverb of time, besides its meaning “at evening” or “at eventide,” denotes “late in, or on,” Matt. 28:1, RV, “late on (the Sabbath day)” (KJV, “in the end of”); it came also to denote “late after,” which seems to be the meaning here. See EVENING.

Note: In John 11:8, KJV, “nun, now,” is translated “of late” (RV, “but now”).

LATELY

prosphatos (προσφάτως, 4373) denotes “recently, lately,” from the adjective prosphatos, “new, fresh, recent”; primarily, “newly slain,” Heb. 10:20 (phatos, “slain”), is also found in Acts 18:2.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 24:5; Ezek. 11:3.¶

LATER

husteros (ὑστερος, 5306) denotes “later” or “latter” and is used in 1 Tim. 4:1, RV, “in later (times),” KJV, “in (the) latter (times).” Several mss. have it in Matt. 21:31, “the former,” for protos. “the first.”¶

LATIN

rhomaisti (Ῥωμαϊστί, 4515), an adverb, “in Latin,” occurs in John 19:20, lit., “in Roman.”¶

Note: In Luke 23:38, some mss. have the adjective Rhomaikos, “of Latin,” agreeing with “letters.”

LATTER

opsimos (ὀψιμος, 3797), akin to opse and opsios (see LATE), denotes “late,” or “latter,” and is used of “the latter rain” in Jas. 5:7 (the most authentic mss. omit huetos, “rain”; some have karpos, “fruit”); this rain falls in March and April, just before the harvest, in contrast to the early rain, in October.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 11:14; Prov. 16:15; Jer. 5:24; Hos. 6:3; Joel 2:23; Zech. 10:1.¶

Note: For “latter” (husteros) in the KJV of 1 Tim. 4:1 see LATER, and for 2 Pet. 2:20 see LAST.

For LAUD (Rom. 15:11, KJV) see PRAISE, B, No. 1

LAUGH, LAUGH TO SCORN

1. gelao (γελάω, 1070), “to laugh,” is found in Luke 6:21, 25. This signifies loud laughter in contrast to demonstrative weeping.¶

2. katagelao (καταγελάω, 2606) denotes “to laugh scornfully at,” more emphatic than No. 1 (kata, “down,” used intensively, and No. 1), and signifies derisive laughter, Matt. 9:24; Mark 5:40; Luke 8:53.¶ Cf. ekmukterizo, “to deride.”

Note: The laughter of incredulity, as in Gen. 17:17 and 18:12, is not mentioned in the NT.

LAUGHTER

gelos (γέλως, 1071) denotes “laughter,” Jas. 4:9.¶ This corresponds to the kind of “laughter” mentioned above (see LAUGH, No. 1).

LAUNCH

1. anago (ἀνάγω, 321), “to bring up” (ana, “up,” ago, “to lead”), is used in the middle voice as a nautical term signifying “to put to sea”; it is translated “launch forth” in Luke 8:22; “set sail” in Acts 13:13, RV (KJV, “loosed”); similarly in 16:11; in 18:21, for KJV, “sailed”; similarly in 20:3, 13; in 21:1, RV, “set sail,” (KJV, “launched”), and in v. 2, for KJV, “set forth”; in 27:2 and 4 the RV has the verb “to put to sea,” for KJV “to launch”; in v. 12 for KJV, “depart”; in v. 21, RV, “set sail” (KJV, “loosed”); in 28:10, 11, “sailed” and “set sail” (KJV, “departed”). See BRING, DEPART, LEAD, LOOSE, OFEER, PUT, SAIL, SET.

2. epanago (ἐπανάγω, 1877), “to lead up upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is used as a nautical term with ploion, “a ship,” understood, denoting “to put out to sea,” translated in Luke 5:3, put out, RV (KJV, “thrust out”); in v. 4, for KJV, “launch.” For the nonnautical significance “to return,” see Matt. 21:18. See PUT, RETURN, THRUST.¶ In the Sept., Zech. 4:12, “that communicate with (the golden oil vessels).”

LAW

A. Nouns.

1. nomos (νόμος, 3551), akin to nemo, “to divide out, distribute,” primarily meant “that which is assigned”; hence, “usage, custom,” and then, “law, law as prescribed by custom, or by statute”; the word ethos, “custom,” was retained for unwritten “law,” while nomos became the established name for “law” as decreed by a state and set up as the standard for the administration of justice.

In the NT it is used (a) of “law” in general, e.g., Rom. 2:12, 13, “a law” (RV), expressing a general principle relating to “law”; v. 14, last part; 3:27, “By what manner of law?” i.e., “by what sort of principle (has the glorying been excluded)?”; 4:15 (last part); 5:13, referring to the period between Adam’s trespass and the giving of the Law; 7:1 (1st part, RV marg., “law”); against those graces which constitute the fruit of the Spirit “there is no law,” Gal. 5:23; “the ostensible aim of the law is to restrain the evil tendencies natural to man in his fallen estate, yet in experience law finds itself not merely ineffective, it actually provokes those tendencies to greater activity. The intention of the gift of the Spirit is to constrain the believer to a life in which the natural tendencies shall have no place, and to produce in him their direct contraries. Law, therefore, has nothing to say against the fruit of the Spirit; hence the believer is not only not under law, ver. 18, the law finds no scope in his life, inasmuch as, and in so far as, he is led by the Spirit;”*

(b) of a force or influence impelling to action, Rom. 7:21, 23 (1st part), “a different law,” RV;

(c) of the Mosaic Law, the “law” of Sinai, (1) with the definite article, e.g., Matt. 5:18; John 1:17; Rom. 2:15, 18, 20, 26, 27; 3:19; 4:15; 7:4, 7, 14, 16, 22; 8:3, 4, 7; Gal. 3:10, 12, 19, 21, 24; 5:3; Eph. 2:15; Phil. 3:6; 1 Tim. 1:8; Heb. 7:19; Jas. 2:9; (2) without the article, thus stressing the Mosaic Law in its quality as “law,” e.g., Rom. 2:14 (1st part); 5:20; 7:9, where the stress in the quality lies in this, that “the commandment which was unto (i.e., which he thought would be a means of) life,” he found to be “unto (i.e., to have the effect of revealing his actual state of) death”; 10:4; 1 Cor. 9:20; Gal. 2:16, 19, 21; 3:2, 5, 10 (1st part), 11, 18, 23; 4:4, 5, 21 (1st part); 5:4, 18; 6:13; Phil. 3:5, 9; Heb. 7:16; 9:19; Jas. 2:11; 4:11; (in regard to the statement in Gal. 2:16, that “a man is not justified by the works of the Law,” the absence of the article before nomos indicates the assertion of a principle, “by obedience to law,” but evidently the Mosaic Law is in view. Here the apostle is maintaining that submission to circumcision entails the obligation to do the whole “Law.” Circumcision belongs to the ceremonial part of the “Law,” but, while the Mosaic Law is actually divisible into the ceremonial and the moral, no such distinction is made or even assumed in Scripture. The statement maintains the freedom of the believer from the “law” of Moses in its totality as a means of justification);

(d) by metonymy, of the books which contain the “law,” (1) of the Pentateuch, e.g., Matt. 5:17; 12:5; Luke 16:16; 24:44; John 1:45; Rom. 3:21; Gal. 3:10; (2) of the Psalms, John 10:34; 15:25; of the Psalms, Isaiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, 12:34, the Psalms and Isaiah, Rom. 3:19 (with vv. 10-18); Isaiah, 1 Cor. 14:21; from all this it may be inferred that “the law” in the most comprehensive sense was an alternative title to “The Scriptures.”

The following phrases specify “laws” of various kinds; (a) “the law of Christ,” Gal. 6:2, i.e., either given by Him (as in the Sermon on the Mount and in John 13:14, 15; 15:4), or the “law” or principle by which Christ Himself lived (Matt. 20:28; John 13:1); these are not actual alternatives, for the “law” imposed by Christ was always that by which He Himself lived in the “days of His flesh.” He confirmed the “Law” as being of divine authority (cf. Matt. 5:18); yet He presented a higher standard of life than perfunctory obedience to the current legal rendering of the “Law,” a standard which, without annulling the “Law,” He embodied in His own character and life (see, e.g., Matt. 5:21-48; this breach with legalism is especially seen in regard to the ritual or ceremonial part of the “Law” in its wide scope); He showed Himself superior to all human interpretations of it; (b) “a law of faith,” Rom. 3:27, i.e., a principle which demands only faith on man’s part; (c) “the law of my mind,” Rom. 7:23, that principle which governs the new nature in virtue of the new birth; (d) “the law of sin,” Rom. 7:23, the principle by which sin exerts its influence and power despite the desire to do what is right; “of sin and death,” 8:2, death being the effect; (e) “the law of liberty,” Jas. 1:25; 2:12, a term comprehensive of all the Scriptures, not a “law” of compulsion enforced from without, but meeting with ready obedience through the desire and delight of the renewed being who is subject to it; into it he looks, and in its teaching he delights; he is “under law (ennomos, “in law,” implying union and subjection) to Christ,” 1 Cor. 9:21; cf, e.g., Ps. 119:32, 45, 97; 2 Cor. 3:17; (f) “the royal law,” Jas. 2:8, i.e., the “law” of love, royal in the majesty of its power, the “law” upon which all others hang, Matt. 22:34-40; Rom. 13:8; Gal. 5:14; (g) “the law of the Spirit of life,” Rom. 8:2, i.e., the animating principle by which the Holy Spirit acts as the impartor of life (cf. John 6:63); (h) “a law of righteousness,” Rom. 9:31, i.e., a general principle presenting righteousness as the object and outcome of keeping a “law,” particularly the “Law” of Moses (cf. Gal. 3:21); (i) “the law of a carnal commandment,” Heb. 7:16, i.e., the “law” respecting the Aaronic priesthood, which appointed men conditioned by the circumstances and limitations of the flesh. In the Epistle to the Hebrews the “Law” is treated of especially in regard to the contrast between the Priesthood of Christ and that established under the “law” of Moses, and in regard to access to God and to worship. In these respects the “Law” “made nothing perfect,” 7:19. There was “a disannulling of a foregoing commandment ... and a bringing in of a better hope.” This is established under the “new Covenant,” a covenant instituted on the basis of “better promises,” 8:6.

Notes: (1) In Gal. 5:3, the statement that to receive circumcision constitutes a man a debtor to do “the whole Law,” views the “Law” as made up of separate commands, each essential to the whole, and predicates the unity of the “Law”; in v. 14, the statement that “the whole law” is fulfilled in the one commandment concerning love, views the separate commandments as combined to make a complete “law.” (2) In Rom. 8:3, “what the law could not do,” is lit., “the inability (adunaton, the neuter of the adjective adunatos, ‘unable,’ used as a noun) of the Law”; this may mean either “the weakness of the Law” or “that which was impossible for the Law”; the latter is preferable; the significance is the same in effect; the “Law” could neither give freedom from condemnation nor impart life. (3) For the difference between the teaching of Paul and that of James in regard to the “Law,” see under JUSTIFICATION. (4) For Acts 19:38, KJV, “the law is open” (RV, “courts,” etc.) see COURT, No. 1. (5) For nomodidaskaloi, “doctors of the law”, Luke 5:17, singular in Acts 5:34, “teachers of the law,” 1 Tim. 1:7, see DOCTOR.

2. nomothesia (νομοθεσία, 3548) denotes “legislation, lawgiving” (No. 1, and tithemi, “to place, to put”), Rom. 9:4, “(the) giving of the law.” cf. B, No 1.¶

B. Verbs.

1. nomotheteo (νομοθετέω, 3549), (a) used intransitively, signifies “to make laws” (cf. A, No. 2, above); in the passive voice, “to be furnished with laws,” Heb. 7:11, “received the law,” lit., “was furnished with (the) law”; (b) used transitively, it signifies “to ordain by law, to enact”; in the passive voice, Heb. 8:6. See ENACT.¶

2. krino (κρίνω, 2919), “to esteem, judge,” etc., signifies “to go to law,” and is so used in the middle voice in Matt. 5:40, RV, “go to law” (KJV, “sue ... at the law”); 1 Cor. 6:1, 6. See ESTEEM.

Note: In 1 Cor. 6:7, the KJV, “go to law,” is a rendering of the phrase echo krimata, “to have lawsuits,” as in the RV.

3. paranomeo (παρανομέω, 3891), “to transgress law” (para, “contrary to,” and nomos), is used in the present participle in Acts 23:3, and translated “contrary to the law,” lit., “transgressing the law.”¶

C. Adjectives.

1. nomikos (νομικός, 3544) denotes “relating to law”; in Titus 3:9 it is translated “about the law,” describing “fightings” (KJV, “strivings”); see LAWYER.

2. ennomos (ἐννομος, 1772), (a) “lawful, legal,” lit., “in law” (en, “in,” and nomos), or strictly, “what is within the range of law,” is translated “lawful” in Acts 19:39, KJV (RV, “regular”), of the legal tribunals in Ephesus; (b) “under law” (RV), in relation to Christ, 1 Cor. 9:21, where it is contrasted with anomos (see No. 3 below); the word as used by the apostle suggests not merely the condition of being under “law,” but the intimacy of a relation established in the loyalty of a will devoted to his Master. See LAWFUL.

3. anomos (ἄνομος, 459) signifies “without law” (a, negative) and has this meaning in 1 Cor. 9:21 (four times). See LAWLESS, TRANSGRESSOR, UNLAWFUL, WICKED.

D. Adverb.

anomos (ἀνόμως, 460), “without law” (the adverbial form of C, No. 3), is used in Rom. 2:12 (twice), where “(have sinned) without law” means in the absence of some specifically revealed “law,” like the “law” of Sinai; “(shall perish) without law” predicates that the absence of such a “law” will not prevent their doom; the “law” of conscience is not in view here. The succeeding phrase “under law” is lit., “in law,” not the same as the adjective ennomos (C, No. 2), but two distinct words.¶

LAWFUL, LAWFULLY

A. Verb.

exesti (ἔξεστι, 1832), an impersonal verb, signifying “it is permitted, it is lawful” (or interrogatively, “is it lawful?”), occurs most frequently in the synoptic Gospels and the Acts; elsewhere in John 5:10; 18:31; 1 Cor. 6:12; 10:23; 2 Cor. 12:4; in Acts 2:29, it is rendered “let me (speak),” lit., “it being permitted”; in the KJV of 8:37, “thou mayest,” lit., “it is permitted;” 16:21; in 21:37, “may I,” lit., “is it permitted?” See LET, MAY.

Note: For ennomos, see C, No. 2, (under LAW).

B. Adverb.

nomimos (νομίμως, 3545), “lawfully,” is used in 1 Tim. 1:8, “the Law is good, if a man use it lawfully,” i.e., agreeably to its design; the meaning here is that, while no one can be justified or obtain eternal life through its instrumentality, the believer is to have it in his heart and to fulfill its requirements; walking “not after the flesh but after the spirit,” Rom. 8:4, he will “use it lawfully.” In 2 Tim. 2:5 it is used of contending in the games and adhering to the rules.¶

nomothetes (νομοθέτης, 3550), “a lawgiver” (see LAW, A, No. 2, and B, No. 1), occurs in Jas. 4:12, of God, as the sole “Lawgiver”; therefore, to criticize the Law is to presume to take His place, with the presumption of enacting a better law.¶

LAWLESS, LAWLESSNESS

A. Adjective.

anomos (ἄνομος, 459), “without law,” also denotes “lawless,” and is so rendered in the RV of Acts 2:23, “lawless (men),” marg., “(men) without the law,” KJV, “wicked (hands);” 2 Thess. 2:8, “the lawless one” (KJV, “that wicked”), of the man of sin (2Th 2:4]; in 2 Pet. 2:8, of deeds (KJV, “unlawful”), where the thought is not simply that of doing what is unlawful, but of flagrant defiance of the known will of God. See LAW, C, No. 3.

B. Noun.

anomia (ἀνομία, 458), “lawlessness,” akin to A, is most frequently translated “iniquity;” in 2 Thess. 2:7, RV, “lawlessness” (KJV, “iniquity”); “the mystery of lawlessness” is not recognized by the world, for it does not consist merely in confusion and disorder (see A); the display of “lawlessness” by the “lawless” one (v. 8) will be the effect of the attempt by the powers of darkness to overthrow the divine government. In 1 John 3:4, the RV adheres to the real meaning of the word, “every one that doeth sin (a practice, not the committal of an act) doeth also lawlessness: and sin is lawlessness.” This definition of sin sets forth its essential character as the rejection of the law, or will, of God and the substitution of the will of self. See INIQUITY and synonymous words.

LAWYER

nomikos (νομικός, 3544), an adjective, “learned in the law” (see Titus 3:9, under LAW, C, No. 1), is used as a noun, “a lawyer,” Matt. 22:35; Luke 7:30; 10:25; 11:45, 46, 52 (v. 53 in some mss.); 14:3; Titus 3:13, where Zenos is so named. As there is no evidence that he was one skilled in Roman jurisprudence, the term may be regarded in the usual NT sense as applying to one skilled in the Mosaic Law.¶

The usual name for a scribe is grammateus, a man of letters; for a doctor of the law, nomodidaskalos (see DOCTOR), “A comparison of Luke 5:17 with v. 21 and Mark 2:6 and Matt. 9:3 shows that the three terms were used synonymously, and did not denote three distinct classes. The scribes were originally simply men of letters, students of Scripture, and the name first given to them contains in itself no reference to the law; in course of time, however, they devoted themselves mainly, though by no means exclusively, to the study of the law. They became jurists rather than theologians, and received names which of themselves called attention to that fact. Some would doubtless devote themselves more to one branch of activity than to another; but a ‘lawyer’ might also be a ‘doctor,’ and the case of Gamaliel shows that a ‘doctor’ might also be a member of the Sanhedrin, Acts 5:34” (Eaton, in Hastings’ Bib. Dic.).

LAY

1. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put, place, set,” frequently signifies “to lay,” and is used of (a) “laying” a corpse in a tomb, Matt. 27:60; Mark 6:29; 15:47; 16:6; Luke 23:53, 55; John 11:34; 19:41, 42; 20:2, 13, 15; Acts 7:16; 13:29; Rev. 11:9, RV, “to be laid” (KJV, “to be put”); in an upper chamber, Acts 9:37; (b) “laying” the sick in a place, Mark 6:56; Luke 5:18; Acts 3:2; 5:15; (c) “laying” money at the apostles’ feet, Acts 4:35, 37; 5:2; (d) Christ’s “laying” His hands upon children, Mark 10:16, RV, “laying” (KJV, “put”); upon John, Rev. 1:17 (in the best mss.); (e) “laying” down one’s life, (1) of Christ, John 10:11,

RV, “layeth down” (KJV, “giveth”); vv. 17, 18 (twice); 1 John 3:16; (2) of Peter for Christ’s sake, John 13:37, 38; (3) of Christ’s followers, on behalf of others, 1 John 3:16; (4) of anyone, for his friends, John 15:13; (f) “laying” up sayings in one’s heart, Luke 1:66 (middle voice, in the sense of “for themselves”); in 9:44, of letting Christ’s words “sink” (middle voice, in the sense of “for oneself”; KJV, “sink down”) into the ears; (g) “laying” a foundation (1) literally, Luke 6:48; 14:29; (2) metaphorically, of Christ in relation to an assembly, 1 Cor. 3:10, 11; (h) in “laying” Christ as a “stone of stumbling” for Israel, Rom. 9:33; (i) Christ’s “laying” aside His garments, John 13:4; (j) Christians, in “laying” money in store for the help of the needy, 1 Cor. 16:2 (lit., “let him put”); (k) “depositing” money, Luke 19:21, 22. See APPOINT.

2. katatithemi (κατατίθημι, 2698), “to lay down” (kata), is used in Mark 15:46 of the act of Joseph of Arimathaea in “laying” Christ’s body in the tomb (some mss. have No. 1 here). See DO, Note (4), SHEW.

3. ballo (βάλλω, 906), “to cast, throw, place, put,” is used in the passive voice signifying “to be laid,” e.g., Mark 7:30; Luke 16:20; for Matt. 8:14, RV, “lying” (KJV, “laid”) and 9:2, see LIE, No. (3). See CAST.

4. epiballo (ἐπιβάλλω, 1911), “to lay upon,” is used of seizing men, to imprison them, Acts 4:3. See CAST.

5. kataballo (καταβάλλω, 2598), “to cast down” (kata), is used metaphorically in Heb. 6:1, in the middle voice, negatively, “of laying” a foundation of certain doctrines. See CAST.

6. klino (κλίνω, 2827), “to make to bend, to bow,” or “to make to lean, to rest,” is used in Matt. 8:20 and Luke 9:58, in the Lord’s statement, “the Son of man hath not where to lay His head”; it is significant that this verb is used in John 19:30 of the Lord’s act at the moment of His death in placing His head into a position of rest, not a helpless drooping of the head as in all other cases of crucifixion. He reversed the natural order, by first reclining His head (indicative of His submission to His Father’s will), and then “giving up His spirit.” The rest He found not on earth in contrast to His creatures the foxes and birds, He found in this consummating act on the cross. See BOW.

7. anaklino (ἀνακλίνω, 347), “to lay down, make to recline” (in the passive voice, “to lie back, recline”), is used in Luke 2:7, of the act of the Virgin Mary in “laying” her Child in a manger. See SIT.

8. apotithemi (ἀποτίθημι, 659), “to put off from oneself” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), always in the middle voice in the NT, is used metaphorically in Heb. 12:1, “laying aside (every weight);” in Jas. 1:21, KJV, “lay apart,” RV, “putting away”; in Acts 7:58 of “laying” down garments, after taking them off, for the purpose of stoning Stephen. See CAST, PUT.

9. hupotithemi (ὑποτίθημι, 5294), “to place under, lay down” (hupo, “under,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically in Rom. 16:4, of risking one’s life, “laid down” (their own necks). In the middle voice in 1 Tim. 4:6 it is used of “putting” persons in mind, RV, (KJV, “in remembrance”). See REMEMBRANCE.¶

10. epitithemi (ἐπιτίθημι, 2007), “to add to, lay upon,” etc., is used of “laying” hands on the sick, for healing, Matt. 9:18; 19:13, RV, “lay” (KJV, “put”); 19:15; Mark 5:23; 6:5;

7:32; 8:23, RV, “laid” (KJV, “put”); so in v. 25; 16:18; Luke 4:40; 13:13; Acts 6:6; 8:17, 19; 9:12 and 17, RV, “laying” (KJV, “putting”); 13:3; 19:6; 28:8; in some mss. in Rev. 1:17, see No. 1, (d); of “laying” hands on a person by way of public recognition, 1 Tim. 5:22; of a shepherd’s “laying” a sheep on his shoulders, Luke 15:5; of laying” the cross on Christ’s shoulders, Luke 23:26; of “laying” on stripes, Acts 16:23; wood on a fire, 28:3; metaphorically, of “laying” burden’s on men’s shoulders, Matt. 23:4; similarly of “giving” injunctions, Acts 15:28 (cf. “put ... upon” in v. 10). See LADE, PUT, SET, SURNAME, WOUND.

11. anatithemi (ἀνατίθεμαι, 394), “to put up or before” (ana), is used in the middle voice of “laying” a case before an authority, Acts 25:14, RV, “laid before,” for KJV, “declared unto”; of “setting forth” a matter for consideration, Gal. 2:2, RV, “laid before (them the gospel),” for KJV, “communicated unto.” See COMMUNICATE, DECLARE.¶

12. prostithemi (προστίθημι, 4369), “to put to, add,” is used in the passive voice in Acts 13:36, “was laid” (unto his fathers), of the burial of David. See ADD, No. 2.

13. ekteino (ἐκτείνω, 1614), “to stretch out or forth,” especially of the hand, is used of “laying” out anchors from a vessel, in Acts 27:30, RV, “lay out” (KJV, “cast ... out”). See CAST, Notes, STRETCH.

14. keimai (κείμεναι, 2749), “to be laid, to lie,” is used as the passive voice of tithemi, “to put,” and is translated by some part of the verb “to be laid” in Matt. 3:10 and Luke 3:9, of an axe; Luke 12:19, of goods; John 21:9, where the verb has been omitted from the translation, after the words “a fire of coals” (for epikeimai, of the fish, see No. 15); 1 Cor. 3:11, of Christ, as a foundation. See APPOINT, LIE, MADE (BE), SET.

Notes: (1) In Luke 23:53, the RV has “had lain” (intransitive: see LIE), for KJV, “was laid.” (2) In Luke 24:12, some mss. have the verb, with reference to the linen cloths (the clause is absent in the best mss.); the translation should be “lying,” not as KJV, “laid.” (3) In John 11:41, the verb is not found in the best mss.

15. epikeimai (ἐπικείμεναι, 1945), “to be placed, to lie on” (epi, “upon,” and No. 14), is translated by the verb “to be laid upon,” in John 21:9, of a fish; in 1 Cor. 9:16, of necessity. See IMPOSED, INSTANT, LIE, PRESS.

16. apokeimai (ἀπόκειμαι, 606), “to be laid away, or up,” is used of money in a napkin, Luke 19:20; metaphorically, of a hope, Col. 1:5; the crown of righteousness, 2 Tim. 4:8. In Heb. 9:27, said of physical death, it is translated “it is appointed” (RV marg., “laid up”). See APPOINT.¶

17. thesaurizo (θησαυρίζω, 2343), “to lay up, store up” (akin to thesauros, “a treasury, a storehouse, a treasure”), is used of “laying” up treasures, on earth, Matt. 6:19; in Heaven, v. 20; in the last days, Jas. 5:3, RV, “ye have laid up your treasure” (KJV, “ye have heaped treasure together”); in Luke 12:21, “that layeth up treasure (for himself)”; in 1 Cor. 16:2, of money for needy ones (here the present participle is translated “in store,” lit. “treasuring” or “storing,” the “laying by” translating the preceding verb tithemi, see No. 1); in 2 Cor. 12:14, negatively, of children for parents; metaphorically, of “laying” up wrath, Rom. 2:5, “treasurest up.” In 2 Pet. 3:7 the passive voice is used of the heavens and earth as “stored up” for fire, RV (marg., “stored” with fire), KJV, “kept in store.” See STORE, TREASURE.¶

18. trachelizo (τραχηλίζω, 5136), “to seize and twist the neck” (from trachelos, “the throat”), was used of wrestlers, in the sense of taking by the throat. The word is found in Heb. 4:13, “laid open,” RV (KJV, “opened”). The literal sense of the word seems to be “with the head thrown back and the throat exposed.” Various suggestions have been made as to the precise significance of the word in this passage. Some have considered that the metaphor is from the manner of treating victims about to be sacrificed. Little help, however, can be derived from these considerations. The context serves to explain the meaning and the RV rendering is satisfactory.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 25:7, KJV, phero, “to bear, bring,” is rendered “laid ... (complaints),” RV, “bringing ... (charges).” (2) In Mark 7:8, KJV, aphiemi, “to leave,” is translated “laying aside” (RV, “ye leave”). (3) For epilambano, “to lay hold,” see HOLD, No. 7.

For LAY WAIT see LIE IN WAIT

For LAYING (Acts 9:24) see PLOT

LAY WASTE

lumainomai (λυμαίνομαι, 3075), “to maltreat, to outrage” (from lume, “a brutal outrage”), is translated “laid waste” (the church), in Acts 8:3, RV (KJV, “made havoc of”).¶

epithesis (ἐπίθεσις, 1936), “a laying on” (epi, “on,” tithemi, “to put”), is used in the NT (a) of the “laying” on of hands by the apostles accompanied by the impartation of the Holy Spirit in outward demonstration, in the cases of those in Samaria who had believed, Acts 8:18; such supernatural manifestations were signs especially intended to give witness to Jews as to the facts of Christ and the faith, they were thus temporary; there is no record of their continuance after the time and circumstances narrated in Acts 19 (in v. 6 of which the corresponding verb epitithemi is used; see below), nor was the gift delegated by the apostles to others (see LAY, Nos. 1 and 10); (b) of the similar act by the elders of a church on occasions when a member of a church was set apart for a particular work, having given evidence of qualifications necessary for it, as in the case of Timothy, 1 Tim. 4:14; of the impartation of a spiritual gift through the laying on of the hands of the apostle Paul, 2 Tim. 1:6, RV, “laying” (KJV, “putting”); cf. the verb epitithemi in Acts 6:6, on the appointment of the seven, and in the case of Barnabas and Saul, 13:3, also in 19:6, (c) in Heb. 6:2, the doctrine of the “laying” on of hands refers to the act enjoined upon an Israelite in connection, e.g., with the peace offerings, Lev. 3:2, 8, 13; 4:29, 33; upon the priests in connection with the sin offering, 4:4; 16:21; upon the elders, 4:15; upon a ruler, 4:24.¶

The principle underlying the act was that of identification on the part of him who did it with the animal or person upon whom the hands were laid. In the Sept., 2 Chron. 25:27; Ezek. 23:11.¶

Note: For the “laying” of Christ’s hands on the sick, see LAY, No. 10.

LEAD, LED

1. ago (ἄγω, 71), “to bear, bring, carry, lead,” is translated by the verb “to lead,” e.g., in Mark 13:11; Luke 4:1; 4:9, RV; 4:29; 22:54; 23:1, KJV only; 23:32; John 18:28 (present tense, RV), Acts 8:32; metaphorically in Rom. 2:4, of the goodness of God; 8:14 and Gal. 5:18, of the Spirit of God; 1 Cor. 12:2, of the powers of darkness instigating to idolatry; 2 Tim. 3:6, of divers lusts (in some mss., aichmaloteuo). In Luke 24:21 ago is used of the passing (or spending) of a day, and translated “it is (now the third day)”; here the verb is probably to be taken impersonally, according to idiomatic usage, in the sense “there is passing the third day.” See BRING, No. 10, KEEP, Note (2).

2. anago (ἀνάγω, 321), “to lead up” (ana, “up”), is used of Christ in being “led” up by the Spirit into the wilderness, Matt. 4:1; Luke 4:5 (KJV, “taking up”); by the elders of the people into their council, Luke 22:66, “led away.” See BRING, No. 11.

3. apago (ἀπάγω, 520), “to lead away” (apo, “away”), is used of a way “leading” to destruction, Matt. 7:13, to life, v. 14; of those who “led” Christ away from Gethsemane, Mark 14:44; in some mss., John 18:13, to Annas (the best mss. have No. 1 here); to Caiaphas, Matt. 26:57; Mark 14:53; to Pilate, Matt. 27:2; to the Praetorium, Mark 15:16; to crucifixion, Matt. 27:31; Luke 23:26; in some mss. John 19:16; of “leading” an animal away to watering, Luke 13:15; of being “led” away to idolatry, 1 Cor. 12:2, RV, “led away” (KJV, “carried away”). Some mss. have it in Acts 24:7 (KJV, “took away”). It is translated “bring” in 23:17. In 12:19 it signifies “to put to death.” See BRING, No. 12, DEATH, C, No. 3.¶

4. periago (περιάγω, 4013), used transitively, denotes “to lead about,” 1 Cor. 9:5. For the intransitive use, see GO, No. 9.

5. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear, carry,” is used metaphorically of a gate, as “leading” to a city, Acts 12:10. See BRING, No. 1.

6. hodegeo (ὁδηγέω, 3594), “to lead the way”: see GUIDE, B, No. 1.

7. eisago (εἰσάγω, 1521), “to bring into,” is translated “to be led into” in Acts 21:37, KJV (RV, “to be brought into”). See BRING, A, No. 13.

8. sunapago (συναπάγω, 4879), always in the passive voice, “to be carried or led away with,” is translated “being led away with” in 2 Pet. 3:17, KJV (RV, “being carried away with”). See CARRY.

9. exago (ἐξάγω, 1806), “to lead out,” is rendered by the verb “to lead, out or forth,” in Mark 15:20 (in some mss. in 8:23, the best have ekphero, “to bring out”); Luke 24:50; John 10:3; Acts 7:36, 40 (KJV “brought”), and 13:17, RV; Acts 21:38; Heb. 8:9. See BRING, No. 14.

10. anaphero (ἀναφέρω, 399), “to carry or lead up,” is translated “leadeth ... up” in the KJV of Mark 9:2 (RV “bringeth ... up”). See BRING, No. 2.

11. eisphero (εἰσφέρω, 1533), “to bring in, or into,” is translated “lead (us not) into,” in Matt. 6:13 and Luke 11:4 (RV, “bring ... into”), of temptation. See BRING, No. 4.

12. planao (πλανάω, 4105), “to lead astray” (akin to plane, “a wandering”), is translated “lead ... astray,” metaphorically, in Matt. 24:4, 5, 11 and Mark 13:5, 6 (KJV, “deceive”).

13. apoplanao (ἀποπλανάω, 635), “to cause to go astray” (apo, “away from,” and No. 12), is used metaphorically of “leading into error,” Mark 13:22, RV, “lead astray” (KJV, “seduce”); passive voice in 1 Tim. 6:10 (KJV, “erred”).¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 13:10, some mss. have sunago, “to bring together,” translated “leadeth (into captivity),” KJV and RV marg. (RV text, “is for”). (2) For the verb diago, “to lead a life,” 1 Tim. 2:2, see LIVE, No. 7. (3) For thriambeuo, to “lead in triumph,” 2 Cor. 2:14, RV, see TRIUMPH. (4) See also HAND (lead by the).

For LEADERS (Matt. 15:14) see GUIDE

LEAF

phullon (φύλλον, 5444), “a leaf” (originally phulion, Lat., folium, Eng., “folio,” “foliaceous,” “foliage,” “foliate,” “folious,” etc.), is found in Matt. 21:19; 24:32; Mark 11:13 (twice); 13:28; Rev. 22:2.¶

LEAN

1. anakeimai (ἀνακείμεναι, 345), “to be laid up, to lie,” is used of reclining at table, and translated “leaning (on Jesus’ bosom)” in the KJV of John 13:23, RV, “reclining” (for v. 25 see No. 2). In v. 28, it is translated “at the table,” lit., “of (those) reclining.” See GUEST, RECLINE, SIT, TABLE (AT THE).

2. anapipto (ἀναπίπτω, 377), lit., “to fall back” (ana, “back,” pipto, “to fall”), is used of reclining at a repast and translated “leaning back, (as he was, on Jesus’ breast)” in John 13:25, RV (the KJV follows the mss. which have epipipto, and renders it “lying”); in 21:20, “leaned back,” the apostle’s reminder of the same event in his experience. See SIT.

LEAP

1. hallomai (ἅλλομαι, 242), “to leap” (akin to halma, “a leap”), is used (a) metaphorically, of the “springing” up of water, John 4:14; (b) literally, of the “leaping” of healed cripples, Acts 3:8 (2nd part); 14:10.¶

2. skirtao (σκιρτάω, 4640), “to leap,” is found in Luke 1:41, 44 and 6:23, there translated “leap for joy”; in 1:44 the words “for joy” are expressed separately.¶

3. exallomai (ἐξάλλομαι, 1814), “to leap up” (lit., “out,” ek, and No. 1), is said in Acts 3:8 (1st part) of the cripple healed by Peter (cf. No. 1, above).¶

4. ephallomai (ἐφάλλομαι, 2177), “to leap upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is said of the demoniac in Acts 19:16.¶

LEARN, LEARNED (be)

1. manthano (μανθάνω, 3129) denotes (a) “to learn” (akin to mathetes, “a disciple”), “to increase one’s knowledge,” or “be increased in knowledge,” frequently “to learn by inquiry, or observation,” e.g., Matt. 9:13; 11:29; 24:32; Mark 13:28; John 7:15; Rom. 16:17; 1 Cor. 4:6; 14:35; Phil. 4:9; 2 Tim. 3:14; Rev. 14:3; said of “learning” Christ, Eph. 4:20, not simply the doctrine of Christ, but Christ Himself, a process not merely of getting to know the person but of so applying the knowledge as to walk differently from the rest of the Gentiles; (b) “to ascertain,” Acts 23:27, RV, “learned” (KJV, “understood”); Gal. 3:2, “This only would I learn from you,” perhaps with a tinge of irony in the enquiry, the answer to which would settle the question of the validity of the new Judaistic gospel they were receiving; (c) “to learn by use and practice, to acquire the habit of, be accustomed to,” e.g., Phil. 4:11; 1 Tim. 5:4, 13; Titus 3:14; Heb. 5:8. See UNDERSTAND.

2. ginosko (γινώσκω, 1097), “to know by observation and experience,” is translated “to learn,” in the RV of Mark 15:45; John 12:9. See ALLOW

3. akriboo (ἀκριβόω, 198), “to learn carefully,” is so translated in Matt. 2:7, 16, RV (KJV, “diligently enquired”).¶

4. mueo (μυέω, 3453), “to initiate into mysteries,” is translated “I have learned the secret” (passive voice, perfect tense) in Phil. 4:12, RV (KJV, “I am instructed”). See INSTRUCT.¶

Note: Paideuo, “to teach, instruct, train,” is translated “instructed” in Acts 7:22, RV (KJV, “learned”); in 1 Tim. 1:20, “(that) they might be taught,” KJV, “(that) they may learn.”

LEARNING (Noun)

1. gramma (γράμμα, 1121), “a letter,” is used in the plural in Acts 26:24, with the meaning “learning”: “(thy much) learning (doth turn thee to madness),” RV, possibly an allusion to the Jewish Scriptures, to which the apostle had been appealing; in John 7:15, “(How knoweth this Man) letters” (KJV marg., “learning”), the succeeding phrase “not having learned” is illustrated in the papyri, where it indicates inability to write. See BILL.

2. didaskalia (διδασκαλία, 1319), “teaching, instruction” (akin to didasko, “to teach”), is translated “learning” in Rom. 15:4. See DOCTRINE.

LEAST

1. elachistos (ἐλάχιστος, 1646), “least,” is a superlative degree formed from the word elachus, “little,” the place of which was taken by mikros (the comparative degree being elasson, “less”); it is used of (a) size, Jas. 3:4; (b) amount; of the management of affairs, Luke 16:10 (twice), 19:17, “very little”; (c) importance, 1 Cor. 6:2, “smallest (matters)”; (d) authority: of commandments, Matt. 5:19; (e) estimation, as to persons, Matt. 5:19 (2nd part); 25:40, 45; 1 Cor. 15:9; as to a town, Matt. 2:6; as to activities or operations, Luke 12:26; 1 Cor. 4:3, “a very small thing.”¶

2. elachistoteros (ἐλαχιστότερος, 1647), a comparative degree formed from No. 1, is used in Eph. 3:8, “less than the least.”¶

3. mikros (μικρός, 3398), “small, little,” is translated “the least” in Acts 8:10 and Heb. 8:11, with reference to rank or influence. See LITTLE, A, No. 1.

4. mikroteros (μικρότερος, 3398), the comparative of No. 3, is used of (a) size, Matt. 13:32, KJV, “the least,” RV, “less;” Mark 4:31 [cf. No. 1 (a)]; (b) estimation, Matt. 11:11 and Luke 7:28, KJV, “least,” RV, “but little,” marg., “lesser” (in the kingdom of heaven), those in the kingdom itself being less than John the Baptist [cf. No. 1 (e)]; Luke 9:48. See LESS.¶

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 6:4, KJV, exoutheneo, in the passive voice, “to be of no account,” is translated “is least esteemed” (RV, “are of no account”); see ACCOUNT. (2) In Luke 19:42, the adverbial phrase kai ge, “at least,” is found in some mss.; the RV follows those in which it is absent. (3) In 1 Cor. 9:2, KJV, the phrase alla ge is rendered “doubtless;” RV, “at least.” (4) In Acts 5:15, the phrase k-an (for kai ean, “even if”) denotes “at the least.”

LEATHER, LEATHERN

dermatinos (δερμάτινος, 1193) denotes “of skin, leather” (from derma, “skin, hide of beasts,” akin to dero, “to flay”; whence Eng., “derm,” “dermal,” “dermatology”); it is translated “leather” in Matt. 3:4, of John the Baptist’s girdle; in Mark 1:6, RV (KJV, “of a skin”). See SKIN.¶

LEAVE, LEFT

(a) In the sense of leaving, abandoning forsaking.

1. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), apo, “from,” and hiemi, “to send,” has three chief meanings, (a) “to send forth, let go, forgive”; (b) “to let, suffer, permit”; (c) “to leave, leave alone, forsake, neglect.” It is translated by the verb “to leave” (c), in Matt. 4:11; 4:20, 22, and parallel passages; 5:24; 8:15, and parallel passages; 8:22, RV, “leave (the dead),” KJV, “let,” and the parallel passage; 13:36, RV, “left (the multitude),” KJV, “sent ... away”; 18:12; 19:27, and parallel passages, RV, “we have left” (KJV, “we have forsaken”), so v. 29; 22:22, 25; 23:23, RV, “have left undone” (KJV, “have omitted,” in the 1st part, “leave undone” in the second); 23:38, and the parallel passage; 24:2, 40, 41, and parallel passages; 26:56, RV, “left”; Mark 1:18, “left”; 1:31; 7:8, RV, “ye leave”; 8:13; 10:28, 29; 12:12, 19-22; 13:34; Luke 10:30; 11:42 (in some mss.); Luke 12:39, RV “have left,” KJV “have suffered” (No. 9 in Matt. 24:43); John 4:3, 28, 52; 8:29; 10:12; 14:18, 27; 16:28, 32; Rom. 1:27; 1 Cor. 7:11, RV, “leave” (KJV “put away”); 7:13 (KJV and RV); Heb. 2:8; 6:1; Rev. 2:4. See FORGIVE.

2. aniemi (ἀνίημι, 447), ana, “back” and hiemi, “to send,” denotes “to let go, loosen, forbear”; it is translated “I will (never) leave (thee)” in Heb. 13:5. See FORBEAR.

3. kataleipo (καταλείπω, 2641), “to leave behind” (kata, “down,” leipo, “to leave”), is everywhere rendered by the verb “to leave” except in the following: the KJV of Rom. 11:4, “I have reserved” (RV, “I have left”); Heb. 11:27, “he forsook”; 2 Pet. 2:15, KJV, “have forsaken,” RV, “forsaking.” See FORSAKE, RESERVE.

4. apoleipo (ἀπολείπω, 620), “to leave behind” (apo, “from”), is used (a) in the active voice, of “leaving” behind a cloak, 2 Tim. 4:3; a person, 2 Tim. 4:20; of “abandoning” a principality (by angels), Jude 6, RV; (b) in the passive voice, “to be reserved, to remain,” Heb. 4:6, 9; 10:26. See REMAIN, No. 3.¶ In the papyri it is used as a technical term in wills (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.).

5. enkataleipo (ἐγκαταλείπω, 1459), lit., “to leave behind in” (en, “in,” and No. 3), signifies (a) “to leave behind,” Rom. 9:29, “a seed”; (b) “to abandon, forsake,” translated by the verb “to leave” in Acts 2:27, 31 (in some mss., No. 3) of the soul of Christ; in the following, by the verb “to forsake,” Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34; 2 Cor. 4:9; 2 Tim. 4:10, 16; Heb. 10:25; 13:5 (see No. 2 in the same v.). See FORSAKE.¶

6. hupoleipo (ὑπολείπω, 5275), “to leave remaining”; lit., “to leave under” (hupo), is used in the passive voice in Rom. 1:13, of a survivor.¶

8. pauo (παύω, 3973), “to make to cease,” is used in the middle voice, signifying “to cease, leave off,” and is translated “had left” in Luke 5:4; “left” in Acts 21:32; elsewhere, “to cease.” See CEASE.

9. eao (ἐάω, 1439) signifies (a) “to let, permit, suffer,” e.g., Matt. 24:43; (b) “to leave,” Acts 23:32, of “leaving” horsemen; 27:40, of “leaving” anchors in the sea, RV [KJV, “committed (themselves)"]. See COMMIT, SUFFER.

10. hupolimpano (ὑπολιμπάνω, 5277), limpano being a late form for leipo, “to leave,” is used in 1 Pet. 2:21, “leaving (us an example).”¶

11. perisseuo (περισεύω, 4052), “to be over and above” (the number), hence, “to be or remain over,” is translated “was left,” in Matt. 15:37, KJV (RV, “remained over,” as in 14:20; Luke 9:17; John 6:12 and v. 13, where the KJV adds “and above”), of the broken fragments after the feeding of the multitudes. See ABOUND.

Note: The corresponding noun, perisseuma, “that which is over and above,” is used in the plural in Mark 8:8, RV, “(of broken pieces) that remained over,” KJV, “(of the broken meat) that was left,” lit., “of fragments of broken pieces.” See REMAIN.

12. ekballo (ἐκβάλλω, 1544), “to cast out” (ek, “from,” ballo, “to cast”), “to drive out,” is used in the sense of “rejecting” or “leaving out,” in Rev. 11:2, as to the measuring of the court of the Temple (marg., “cast without”). See CAST, No. 5.

(b) In the sense of giving leave.

epitrepo (ἐπιτρέπω, 2010) lit. denotes “to turn to” (epi, “upon, to,” trepo, “to turn”), and so (a) “to commit, entrust” (not in NT); (b) “to permit, give leave, send,” of Christ’s permission to the unclean spirits to enter the swine, Mark 5:13; in Luke 8:32, RV, “give ... leave,” “gave ... leave” (KJV, “suffer” and “suffered”); in John 19:38, of Pilate’s permission to Joseph to take away the body of the Lord; in Acts 21:39, of Paul’s request to the chief captain to permit him to address the people, RV, “give ... leave” (for KJV, “suffer”); in 21:40, “he had given him leave” (KJV, “... licence”). See LET, LIBERTY, LICENCE, PERMIT, SUFFER.

(c) In the sense of taking leave of, bidding farewell to.

1. apotasso (ἀποτάσσομαι, 657), used in the middle voice in the NT, lit. signifies “to arrange oneself off” (apo, “from,” tasso, “to arrange”); hence, “to take leave of,” Mark 6:46, RV, “had taken leave of” (KJV, “had sent ... away”); Acts 18:18; 18:21, RV, “taking his leave of” (KJV, “bade ... farewell”); 2 Cor. 2:13; in Luke 9:61 “to bid farewell”; in Luke 14:33 it has its other meaning “renouncing” (KJV, “forsaking”). See FAREWELL, FORSAKE, RENOUNCE.¶

2. apaspazomai, “to embrace, salute, take leave of” (apo, “from,” aspazomai, “to salute”), is used in Acts 21:6, KJV, “when we had taken our leave” (RV, “bade ... farewell”). Some mss. have the simple verb aspazomai.¶

LEAVEN (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

zume (ζύμη, 2219), “leaven, sour dough, in a high state of fermentation,” was used in general in making bread. It required time to fulfill the process. Hence, when food was required at short notice, unleavened cakes were used, e.g., Gen. 18:6; 19:3; Exod. 12:8. The Israelites were forbidden to use “leaven” for seven days at the time of Passover, that they might be reminded that the Lord brought them out of Egypt “in haste,” Deut. 16:3, with Exod. 12:11; the unleavened bread, insipid in taste, reminding them, too, of their afflictions, and of the need of self-judgment, is called “the bread of affliction.” “Leaven” was forbidden in all offerings to the Lord by fire, Lev. 2:11; 6:17. Being bred of corruption and spreading through the mass of that in which it is mixed, and therefore symbolizing the pervasive character of evil, “leaven” was utterly inconsistent in offerings which typified the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ.

In the OT “leaven” is not used in a metaphorical sense. In the NT it is used (a) metaphorically (1) of corrupt doctrine, Matt. 13:33 and Luke 13:21, of error as mixed with the truth (there is no valid reason for regarding the symbol here differently from its application elsewhere in the NT); Matt. 16:6, 11; Mark 8:15 (1st part); Luke 12:1; that the kingdom of heaven is likened to “leaven,” does not mean that the kingdom is “leaven.” The same statement, as made in other parables, shows that it is the whole parable which constitutes the similitude of the kingdom; the history of Christendom confirms the fact that the pure meal of the doctrine of Christ has been adulterated with error; (2) of corrupt practices, Mark 8:15 (2nd part), the reference to the Herodians being especially applied to their irreligion; 1 Cor. 5:7, 8; (b) literally in Matt. 16:12, and in the general statements in 1 Cor. 5:6 and Gal. 5:9, where the implied applications are to corrupt practice and corrupt doctrine respectively.¶

B. Verb.

zumoo (ζυμώω, 2220) signifies “to leaven, to act as leaven,” passive voice in Matt. 13:33 and Luke 13:21; active voice in 1 Cor. 5:6 and Gal. 5:9.¶

For LED see LEAD

LEE

Note: This forms part of the RV rendering of two verbs, (1) hupopleo, “to sail under” (i.e., under the lee of), from hupo, “under,” pleo, “to sail,” Acts 27:4, 7 (KJV, “sailed under”);¶ (2) hupotrecho, “to run in under” (in navigation), “to run under the lee of” (hupo, and a form hupodramon, used as an aorist participle of the verb), Acts 27:16, RV, “running under the lee of” (KJV, “running under”). See RUN, SAIL.¶

LEFT (Adjective)

1. aristeros (ἀριστερός, 710), is used (a) of the “left” hand, in Matt. 6:3, the word “hand” being understood; in connection with the armor of righteousness, in 2 Cor. 6:7,

2. euonumos (εὐώνυμος, 2176), lit., “of good name,” or “omen” (eu, “well,” onoma, “a name”), a word adopted to avoid the ill-omen attaching to the “left” (omens from the “left” being unlucky, but a good name being desired for them, cf. aristeros, lit., “better of two,” euphemistic for the ill-omened laios and skaios; cf, too, the Eng., “sinister,” from the Latin word meaning “left”), is used euphemistically for No. 1, either (a) simply as an adjective in Rev. 10:2, of the “left” foot; in Acts 21:3, “on the left” (lit., “left”); or (b) with the preposition ex (for ek), signifying “on the left hand,” Matt. 20:21, 23; 25:33, 41; 27:38; Mark 10:40 (for v. 37, in some mss., see No. 1); 15:27.¶

LEG

skelos (σκέλος, 4628), “the leg from the hip downwards,” is used only of the breaking of the “legs” of the crucified malefactors, to hasten their death, John 19:31-33 (a customary act, not carried out in the case of Christ, in fulfillment of Exod. 12:46; Num. 9:12). The practice was known as skelokopia (from kopto, “to strike”), or, in Latin, crurifragium (from crus, “a leg,” and frango, “to break”).¶

LEGION

legion (λεγεών, 3003), otherwise spelled legeon, “a legion,” occurs in Matt. 26:53, of angels; in Mark 5:9, 15, and Luke 8:30, of demons. Among the Romans a “legion” was primarily a chosen (lego, “to choose”) body of soldiers divided into ten cohorts, and numbering from 4,200 to 6,000 men (Gk. speira, see BAND). In the time of our Lord it formed a complete army of infantry and cavalry, of upwards of 5,000 men. The “legions” were not brought into Judea till the outbreak of the Jewish war (A.D. 66), as they were previously employed in the frontier provinces of the Empire. Accordingly in its NT use the word has its other and more general significance “of a large number.”¶

LEISURE (to have)

eukaireo (εὐκαιρέω, 2119), “to have leisure or opportunity” (eu, “well,” kairos, “a time or season”), is translated “they had ... leisure” in Mark 6:31; in Acts 17:21, “spent their time” (RV, marg., “had leisure for”); in 1 Cor. 16:12, “he shall have opportunity,” RV (KJV, “... convenient time”). See CONVENIENT, OPPORTUNITY, SPEND.¶ This verb differs from scholazo, “to have leisure”; it stresses the opportunity of doing something, whereas scholazo stresses the “leisure” for engaging in it, e.g., 1 Cor. 7:5, “(that) ye may give yourselves to.”

LEND, LENDER

A. Verbs.

1. daneizo (Γολγοθᾶ, 1115v) is translated “to lend” in Luke 6:34, 35: see BORROW.

2. kichremi (χράω, 5531v), or chrao (χράω, 5531), “to lend,” is used in the aorist (or “point”) tense, active voice, in Luke 11:5, in the request, “lend me three loaves.” The radical sense of the verb is “to furnish what is needful” (akin to chreia, which means both “use” and “need,” and to chre, “it is needful”). Hence it is distinct from No. 1, the basic idea of which is to “lend” on security or return.¶

B. Noun.

danistes or daneistes (δανειστής, 1157) denotes a moneylender (akin to A, No. 1), translated “lender” in Luke 7:41, RV (KJV, “creditor”).¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 4:1; Ps. 109:11; Prov. 29:13.¶

LENGTH

mekos (μῆκος, 3372), “length,” from the same root as makros, “long” (see FAR, LONG), occurs in Eph. 3:18 and Rev. 21:16 (twice).¶

LENGTH (at)

pote (ποτέ, 4218) is translated “at length” in Rom. 1:10, where the whole phrase “if by any means now at length” suggests not only ardent desire but the existence of difficulties for a considerable time. See AFORETIME.

LEOPARD

pardalis (πάρδαλις, 3917) denotes “a leopard or a panther,” an animal characterized by swiftness of movement and sudden spring, in Dan. 7:6 symbolic of the activities of Alexander the Great, and the formation of the Grecian kingdom, the third seen in the vision there recorded. In Rev. 13:2 the imperial power, described there also as a “beast,” is seen to concentrate in himself the characteristics of those mentioned in Dan. 7.¶

LEPER

lepros (λεπρός, 3015), an adjective, primarily used of “psoriasis,” characterized by an eruption of rough scaly patches; later, “leprous,” but chiefly used as a noun, “a leper,” Matt. 8:2; 10:8; 11:5; Mark 1:40; Luke 4:27; 7:22; 17:12; especially of Simon. mentioned in Matt. 26:6; Mark 14:3.¶

LEPROSY

lepra (λέπρα, 3014), akin to lepros (above), is mentioned in Matt. 8:3; Mark 1:42; Luke 5:12, 13.¶ In the removal of other maladies the verb “to heal” (iaomai) is used, but in the removal of “leprosy,” the verb “to cleanse” (katharizo), save in the statement concerning the Samaritan, Luke 17:15, “when he saw that he was healed.” Matt. 10:8 and Luke 4:27 indicate that the disease was common in the nation. Only twelve cases are recorded in the NT, but these are especially selected. For the Lord’s commands to the leper mentioned in Matthew 8 and to the ten in Luke 17, see Lev. 14:2-32.

LESS

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

1. elasson (ἐλάσσων, 1640) serves as a comparative degree of mikros, “little” (see LEAST), and denotes “less” in (a) quality, as of wine, John 2:10, “worse;” (b) age, Rom. 9:12, “younger”; 1 Tim. 5:9, “under” neuter, adverbially); (c) rank, Heb. 7:7. See UNDER, WORSE, YOUNG.¶

2. mikroteros (μικρότερος, 3398), the comparative of mikros, is translated “less” in Matt. 13:32, RV (KJV, “least”), and Mark 4:31. See LEAST.

3. hesson (ἥττον, 2276), “inferior,” is used in the neuter adverbially in 2 Cor. 12:15, “the less.” See WORSE.

LEST

1. me (μή, 3361), a negative particle, often used as a conjunction, is frequently translated “lest,” e.g., Mark 13:36 (in v. 5, RV, “that no,” for KJV, “lest”); Acts 13:40; 23:10.

2. hina me, “in order that not,” is rendered “lest,” e.g., in Matt. 17:27; in some instances the RV renders the phrase “that ... not,” e.g., Luke 8:12, or “that ... no,” 1 Cor. 9:12 (KJV, “lest”).

3. mepote or me pote (μήποτε, 3379) denotes “lest ever, lest perhaps, lest at any time,” e.g., Matt. 4:6; “lest haply,” Matt. 7:6, RV (KJV, “lest”), and in 13:15 (KJV, “lest at any time”); in 25:9, RV, “peradventure” (KJV, “lest”). The RV does not translate this simply by “lest,” as in the KJV; see further, e.g., in Matt. 27:64; Mark 14:2; Luke 12:58; the addition of pote requires the fuller rendering.

Note: In Luke 14:29, the conjunctive phrase hina mepote, “lest haply,” is used.

4. mepos, or me pos (μήπως, 3381), used as a conjunction, denotes “lest somehow, lest haply, lest by any means,” e.g., 2 Cor. 2:7, RV, “lest by any means” (KJV, “lest perhaps”); so 12:20 (twice) and Gal. 4:11 (KJV, “lest”); in 1 Thess. 3:5 (KJV, “lest by some means”).

5. mepou, or me pou (μή, 3361) and (μή, 4225), “lest perhaps,” is used in Acts 27:29, RV, “lest haply” (KJV, “lest”).

Note: In 2 Cor. 4:4, KJV, the phrase eis (“unto”) to (“the”) me (“not”), i.e., “in order that ... not,” is rendered “lest (the light) ... should”; RV, “that (the light) ... should not.”

LET (alone, go)

1. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), for the meanings of which see LEAVE, No. 1, frequently denotes “to let, suffer, permit,” e.g., Matt. 5:40 (translated “let ... have”); 7:4; 13:30; 15:14; 27:49 and Mark 15:36, RV, “let be,” probably short for “let us see” (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.); Mark 7:27; 11:6 (“let ... go”); 14:6 (“let ... alone”); so Luke 13:8; John 11:48; in Acts 5:38 (where some mss. have eao, “to permit, let, suffer”); in John 11:44 and 18:8 (“let”); 1 Cor. 7:11, 12, RV, “let ... leave,” KJV, “let ... put away”; 7:13 (“let ... leave”).

2. epitrepo (ἐπιτρέπω, 2010), for the meanings of which see LEAVE (b), is translated “let (me)” in Luke 9:61, KJV, RV, “suffer (me).”

3. apoliuo (ἀπολύω, 630) signifies “to set free, release, loose” (apo, “from,” luo, “to loose”), e.g., Luke 13:12; John 19:10; forgive, Luke 6:37; to release, dismiss, send away, translated “to let go,” e.g., in Luke 14:4; in some mss. 22:68; in Luke 23:22; John 19:12 and Acts 3:13, KJV, “let ... go” (RV, “release”); in Acts 4:21, “they let ... go”; in v. 23 (passive voice), “being let go”; 5:40; in 15:33, KJV, “let go” (RV, “dismissed”); 16:35, 36; 17:9; in 23:22, RV, “let ... go” (KJV, “let ... depart”); in 28:18, KJV, “let ... go” (RV, “set ... at liberty”). See DISMISS.

4. eo (ἐάω, 1439), “to let,” occurs in Acts 27:32. See SUFFER.

Note: In Acts 2:29, the impersonal verb exesti, “it is permitted, it is lawful,” is rendered “let me,” KJV (RV and KJV, marg., “I may”).

For LET (KJV in Rom. 1:13 and 2 Thess. 2:7) see HINDER and RESTAIN
LET DOWN

1. kathiemī (καθίημι, 2524), “to send,” or “let down” (kata, “down,” hiemi, “to send”), is translated “to let down,” with reference to (a) the paralytic in Luke 5:19; (b) Saul of Tarsus, Acts 9:25; (c) the great sheet in Peter’s vision, 10:11 and 11:5.¶

2. chalao (χαλάω, 5465), “to slacken, loosen, let loose,” denotes in the NT, “to let down, to lower”; it is used with reference to (a) the paralytic, in Mark 2:4, cf. No. 1 (a); (b) Saul of Tarsus, Acts 9:25, “lowering” [see also No. 1 (b)]; 2 Cor. 11:33, “was I let down” (passive voice); (c) nets, Luke 5:4, 5 (in the latter, RV, “nets”; KJV, “net”); (d) the gear of a ship, Acts 27:17, RV, “they lowered (the gear),” KJV, “they strake (sail)”; (e) a ship’s boat, v. 30, RV, “lowered” (KJV, “let down”). See LOWER, STRIKE.¶

LET OUT

ekdidomi (ἐκδίδωμι, 1554), primarily, “to give out, give up, surrender” (ek, “out, from,” didomi, “to give”), denotes “to let out for hire”; in the NT it is used, in the middle voice, with the meaning “to let out to one’s advantage,” in the parable of the husbandman and his vineyard, Matt. 21:33, 41; Mark 12:1; Luke 20:9, KJV, “let ... forth”; RV, “let out.”¶

LETTER

1. gramma (γράμμα, 1121) primarily denotes “that which is traced or drawn, a picture”; then, “that which is written,” (a) “a character, letter of the alphabet,” 2 Cor. 3:7; “written,” lit., “(in) letters,” Gal. 6:11; here the reference is not to the length of the epistle (Paul never uses gramma, either in the singular or the plural of his epistles; of these he uses epistole, No. 2), but to the size of the characters written by his own hand (probably from this verse to the end, as the use of the past tense, “I have written,” is, according to Greek idiom, the equivalent of our “I am writing”). Moreover, the word for “letters” is here in the dative case, grammasin, “with (how large) letters”; (b) “a writing, a written document, a bond” (KJV, “bill”) Luke 16:6, 7; (c) “a letter, by way of correspondence,” Acts 28:21; (d) the Scriptures of the OT, 2 Tim. 3:15; (e) “learning,” John 7:15, “letters”; Acts 26:24, “(much) learning” (lit., “many letters”); in the papyri an illiterate person is often spoken of as one who does not know “letters,” “which never means anything else than inability to write” (Moulton and Milligan); (f) “the letter,” the written commandments of the Word of God, in contrast to the inward operation of the Holy Spirit under the New Covenant, Rom. 2:27, 29; 7:6; 2 Cor. 3:6; (g) “the books of Moses,” John 5:47.¶

2. epistole (ἐπιστολή, 1992): see EPISTLE.

LIAR

A. Nouns.

pseustes (ψεύστης, 5583), “a liar,” occurs in John 8:44, 55; Rom. 3:4; 1 Tim. 1:10; Titus 1:12; 1 John 1:10; 2:4, 22; 4:20; 5:10.¶

B. Adjective.

pseudes (ψευδής, 5571), “lying, false” (Eng. “pseudo-”), rendered “false” in Acts 6:13 and in the RV of Rev. 2:2 (KJV, “liars”), is used as a noun, “liars,” in Rev. 21:8; See FALSE.¶

Note: Many compound nouns are formed by the prefix pseudo-: see, e.g., APOSTLES, BRETHREN, CHRISTS, PROPHETS, TEACHERS, WITNESS.

LIBERAL, LIBERALITY, LIBERALLY

A. Noun.

1. haplotēs (ἀπλότης, 572) denotes (a) “simplicity, sincerity, unaffectedness” (from haplous, “single, simple,” in contrast to diplos, “double”), Rom. 12:8, “simplicity”; 2 Cor. 11:3 (in some mss. in 1:12); Eph. 6:5 and Col. 3:22, “singleness”; (b) “simplicity as manifested in generous giving,” “liberality,” 2 Cor. 8:2; 9:11 (KJV, “bountifulness,” RV marg., “singleness”); 9:13 (KJV, “liberal”). See BOUNTY, No. 2.¶

2. charis (χάρις, 5485) is rendered “liberality” in 1 Cor. 16:3, KJV. See BOUNTY, No. 3.

B. Adverb.

haplos (ἀπλῶς, 574), “liberally, with singleness of heart,” is used in Jas. 1:5 of God as the gracious and “liberal” Giver. The word may be taken either (a) in a logical sense, signifying unconditionally, simply, or (b) in a moral sense, generously; for the double meaning compare A, No. 3.¶ On this passage Hort writes as follows: “Later writers comprehend under the one word the whole magnanimous and honorable type of character in which singleness of mind is the central feature.”

LIBERTY

A. Nouns.

1. anesis (ἀνεσις, 425), “a loosening, relaxation,” is translated “liberty” in Acts 24:23, KJV. See INDULGENCE.

2. aphesis (ἄφεσις, 859), “dismissal, release, forgiveness,” is rendered “liberty” in the KJV of Luke 4:18, RV, “release.” See FORGIVENESS.

3. eleutheria (ἐλευθερία, 1657): see FREEDOM.

4. exousia (ἐξουσία, 1849), “authority, right,” is rendered “liberty” in 1 Cor. 8:9 (marg., “power”), “this liberty of yours,” or “this right which you assert.” See AUTHORITY.

B. Adjective.

eleutheros (ἐλεύθερος, 1658) is rendered “at liberty” in 1 Cor. 7:39, KJV (RV “free”). See FREE.

C. Verbs.

1. apoluo (ἀπολύω, 630), for the meanings of which see LET, No. 3, is translated “to set at liberty” in Acts 26:32 and Heb. 13:23. See DISMISS.

2. apostello (ἀποστέλλω, 649), “to send away,” is translated “to set at liberty” in Luke 4:18. See SEND.

Note: In Acts 27:3, KJV, epitrepo is rendered “gave ... liberty” (RV “gave ... leave”). See LEAVE (b).

For LICENCE (in Acts 21:40 and 25:16, KJV) see LEAVE (b) and OPPORTUNITY, A, No. 3

LICK

epileicho (ἐπιλείπω, 1952a), “to lick over” (epi, “over,” leicho, “to lick”), is said of the dogs in Luke 16:21. Some mss. have apoleicho, “to lick off.”¶

LIE (falsehood: Noun and Verb) A. Nouns.

1. pseudos (ψεῦδος, 5579), “a falsehood, lie” (see also under LIAR), is translated “lie” in John 8:44 (lit., “the lie”); Rom. 1:25, where it stands by metonymy for an idol, as, e.g., in Isa. 44:20; Jer. 10:14; 13:25; Amos 2:4 (plural); 2 Thess. 2:11, with special reference to the lie of v. 4, that man is God (cf. Gen. 3:5); 1 John 2:21, 27; Rev. 21:27; 22:15; in Eph. 4:25, KJV “lying,” RV, “falsehood,” the practice; in Rev. 14:5, RV, “lie.” (some mss. have dolos, “guile,” KJV); 2 Thess. 2:9, where “lying wonders” is, lit., “wonders of falsehood,” i.e., wonders calculated to deceive (cf. Rev. 13:13-15), the purpose being to deceive people into the acknowledgement of the spurious claim to deity on the part of the Man of Sin.¶

Note: In Rom. 1:25 the “lie” or idol is the outcome of pagan religion; in 1 John 2:21, 22 the “lie” is the denial that Jesus is the Christ; in 2 Thess. 2:11 the “lie” is the claim of the Man of Sin.

2. pseusma (ψεῦσμα, 5582), “a falsehood,” or “an acted lie,” Rom. 3:7, where “my lie” is not idolatry, but either the universal false attitude of man toward God or that with which his detractors charged the apostle; the former seems to be the meaning.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. pseudologos (ψευδολόγος, 5573) denotes “speaking falsely” (pseudes, “false,” logos, “a word”) in 1 Tim. 4:2, where the adjective is translated “that speak lies,” RV (KJV, “speaking lies”) and is applied to “demons,” the actual utterances being by their human agents.¶

2. apseudes (ἄψευδής, 893) denotes “free from falsehood” (a, negative, pseudes, “false”), truthful, Titus 1:2, of God, “who cannot lie.”¶

C. Verb.

pseudo (ψεύδομαι, 5574), “to deceive by lies” (always in the middle voice in the NT), is used (a) absolutely, in Matt. 5:11, “falsely,” lit., “lying” (v, marg.); Rom. 9:1; 2 Cor. 11:31; Gal. 1:20; Col. 3:9 (where the verb is followed by the preposition eis, “to”); 1 Tim. 2:7; Heb. 6:18; Jas. 3:14 (where it is followed by the preposition kata, “against”); 1 John 1:6; Rev. 3:9; (b) transitively, with a direct object (without a preposition following), Acts 5:3 (with the accusative case) “to lie to (the Holy Ghost),” RV marg., “deceive”; v. 4 (with the dative case) “thou hast (not) lied (unto men, but unto God).”¶

LIE (to lie down, on, upon)

1. keimai (κείμεαι, 2749), “to be laid, to lie,” used as the passive voice of tithemi, “to lay” (see LAY, No. 14), is said (a) of the Child Jesus, Luke 2:12, 16; (b) of the dead body of the Lord, Matt. 28:6; John 20:12; in Luke 23:53, “had ... lain,” RV, KJV, “was laid” [see LAY, No. 14, Note (1)], in the tomb as hitherto empty; (c) of the linen cloths, John 20:5, 6, 7; (d) figuratively of a veil as “lying” upon the hearts of the Jews, 2 Cor. 3:15, RV, “lieth” (KJV, “is”); (e) metaphorically, of the world as “lying” in the evil one, 1 John 5:19, RV; (f) of the heavenly city, Rev. 21:16. For other instances in which the rendering is in the passive voice, see LAY, No. 14. See APPOINT.

2. katakeimai (κατάκειμαι, 2621), “to lie down” (kata, “down,” and No. 1), is used of the sick, Mark 1:30; 2:4; Luke 5:25; John 5:3, 6; Acts 28:8; in Acts 9:33 it is rendered “had kept (his bed),” lit., “lying (on a bed).” See SIT.

3. ballo (βάλλω, 906), “to throw, cast,” is used in the passive voice, with reference to the sick, with the meaning “to be laid, to lie,” in Matt. 8:6, “(my servant) lieth (in the house),” lit., “is laid”; 8:14, “lying,” RV, (KJV, “laid”); 9:2, “lying (on a bed).” See CAST.

4. epikeimai (ἐπείκειμαι, 1945), “to lie upon, be laid upon,” is translated with this meaning, intransitively in John 11:38 and Acts 27:20; transitively, in the passive voice, in John 21:9 and 1 Cor. 9:16. See IMPOSED.

Notes: (1) In Mark 5:40, some mss. have the verb anakeimai, “to be laid up,” translated “was lying,” KJV. In the most authentic the word is absent. (2) In Acts 27:12, KJV, blepo, “to look,” is rendered “lieth,” of the situation of the haven Phoenix (KJV, Phenice); RV, “looketh.” (3) In John 11:17, KJV, the verb echo, “to have, to hold,” used with en, “in,” signifying “to be in a certain condition,” is translated “had lain” (RV, “had been”). (4) In John 13:25, anapipto, lit., to fall back (some mss. have epipipto, lit., “to fall upon,” hence the KJV, “lying”), is used of John’s position at the table, RV, “leaning back ( ... on Jesus’ breast).”

LIE IN WAIT

A. Verb.

enedreuo (ἐνεδρεύω, 1748), “to lie in wait for, to lay wait for” (from en, “in,” and hedra, “a seat,” cf. B), occurs in Luke 11:54, “laying wait for”; Acts 23:21, “there lie in wait for.”¶

Note: In Acts 23:30, the word epiboule, “a plot,” necessitates the RV “(that there would be) a plot.” For Eph. 4:14, KJV, see WILES.

B. Noun.

enedra or enedron (ἐνέδρα, 1747) (ἐνέδρα, 1749), akin to A, “a lying in wait, an ambush,” occurs in Acts 23:16 (where some mss. have the form enedron); 25:3, “laying wait,” lit., “making an ambush.”¶ In the Sept., Josh. 8:7, 9; Ps. 10:8.¶

LIFE, LIVING, LIFETIME, LIFE-GIVING

A. Nouns.

1. zoe (ζωή, 2222) (Eng., “zoo,” “zoology”) is used in the NT “of life as a principle, life in the absolute sense, life as God has it, that which the Father has in Himself, and which He gave to the Incarnate Son to have in Himself, John 5:26, and which the Son manifested in the world, 1 John 1:2. From this life man has become alienated in consequence of the Fall, Eph. 4:18, and of this life men become partakers through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, John 3:15, who becomes its Author to all such as trust in Him, Acts 3:15, and who is therefore said to be ‘the life’ of the believer, Col. 3:4, for the life that He gives He maintains, John 6:35, 63. Eternal life is the present actual possession of the believer because of his relationship with Christ, John 5:24; 1 John 3:14, and that it will one day extend its domain to the sphere of the body is assured by the Resurrection of Christ, 2 Cor. 5:4; 2 Tim. 1:10. This life is not merely a principle of power and mobility, however, for it has moral associations which are inseparable from it, as of holiness and righteousness. Death and sin, life and holiness, are frequently contrasted in the Scriptures.

“Zoe is also used of that which is the common possession of all animals and men by nature, Acts 17:25; 1 John 5:16, and of the present sojourn of man upon the earth with reference to its duration, Luke 16:25; 1 Cor. 15:19; 1 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 3:10. ‘This life’ is a term equivalent to ‘the gospel,’ ‘the faith,’ ‘Christianity,’ Acts 5:20.”*

Death came through sin, Rom. 5:12, which is rebellion against God. Sin thus involved the forfeiting of the “life.” “The life of the flesh is in the blood,” Lev. 17:11. Therefore the impartation of “life” to the sinner must be by a death caused by the shedding of that element which is the life of the flesh. “It is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life” (id. RV). The separation from God caused by the forfeiting of the “life” could be removed only by a sacrifice in which the victim and the offerer became identified. This which was appointed in the typical offerings in Israel received its full accomplishment in the voluntary sacrifice of Christ. The shedding of the blood in the language of Scripture involves the taking or the giving of the “life.” Since Christ had no sins of his own to die for, His death was voluntary and vicarious, John 10:15 with Isa. 53:5, 10, 12; 2 Cor. 5:21. In His sacrifice He endured the divine judgment due to man’s sin. By this means the believer becomes identified with Him in His deathless “life,” through His resurrection, and enjoys conscious and eternal fellowship with God.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine. pp. 324-325.

2. bios (βίος, 979) (cf. Eng. words beginning with bio), is used in three respects (a) of “the period or duration of life,” e.g., in the KJV of 1 Pet. 4:3, “the time past of our life” (the RV follows the mss. which omit “of our life”); Luke 8:14; 2 Tim. 2:4; (b) of “the manner of life, life in regard to its moral conduct,” 1 Tim. 2:2; 1 John 2:16; (c) of “the means of life, livelihood, maintenance, living,” Mark 12:44; Luke 8:43; 15:12, 30; 21:4; 1 John 3:17, “goods,” RV (KJV, “good”). See GOODS.¶

Note: “While zoe is ‘life’ intensive ... bios is ‘life’ extensive.... In bios, used as manner of ‘life,’ there is an ethical sense often inhering which, in classical Greek at least, zoe does not possess.” In Scripture zoe is “the nobler word, expressing as it continually does, all of highest and best which the saints possess in God” (Trench, Syn. Sec.xxvii).

3. psuche (ψυχή, 5590), besides its meanings, “heart, mind, soul,” denotes “life” in two chief respects, (a) “breath of life, the natural life,” e.g., Matt. 2:20; 6:25; Mark 10:45; Luke 12:22; Acts 20:10; Rev. 8:9; 12:11 (cf. Lev. 17:11; Esth. 8:11); (b) “the seat of personality,” e.g., Luke 9:24, explained in v. 25 as “own self” See list under SOUL. See also HEART, MIND.

Notes: (1) “Speaking generally, psuche, is the individual life, the living being, whereas zoe, is the life of that being, cf. Ps. 66:9, ‘God ... which holdeth our soul (psuche in life (zoe),’ and John 10:10, ‘I came that they may have life (zoe),’ with v. 11, ‘The Good Shepherd layeth down His life (psuche) for the sheep.’”† (2) In Rev. 13:15, KJV, pneuma, “breath,” is translated “life” (RV, “breath”). (3) In 2 Cor. 1:8, “we despaired even of life,” the verb zao, “to live,” is used in the infinitive mood, as a noun, and translated “life” (lit., “living”). In Heb. 2:15 the infinitive mood of the same verb is translated “lifetime.”

4. biosis (βίωσις, 981), from bioo, “to spend one’s life, to live,” denotes “a manner of life,” Acts 26:4.¶

5. agoge (ἀγωγή, 72), “a manner of life,” 2 Tim. 3:10; see CONDUCT.

6. anastrophe (ἀναστροφή, 391), “behavior, conduct,” is translated “manner of life” (KJV “conversation”) in the RV of Gal. 1:13; 1 Tim. 4:12; 1 Pet. 1:18; 3:16; “living,” in 1 Pet. 1:15. See BEHAVIOR.

B. Adjectives.

1. biotikos (βιωτικός, 982), “pertaining to life” (bios), is translated “of this life,” in Luke 21:34, with reference to cares; in 1 Cor. 6:3 “(things) that pertain to this life,” and v. 4, “(things) pertaining to this life,” i.e., matters of this world, concerning which Christians at Corinth were engaged in public lawsuits one with another; such matters were to be regarded as relatively unimportant in view of the great tribunals to come under the jurisdiction of saints hereafter. Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) illustrate the word from phrases in the papyri, e.g., “business (documents);” “business concerning my livelihood”; “(stories) of ordinary life.”¶

† From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 325.

2. apsuchos (ἄψυχος, 895) denotes “lifeless inanimate” (a, negative, and psuche, see A, No. 3), “without life,” 1 Cor. 14:7.¶

C. Verb.

zoopoieo (ζωοποιέω, 2227), “to make alive, cause to live, quicken” (from zoe, “life,” and poieo, “to make”), is used as follows:

“(a) of God as the bestower of every kind of life in the universe, 1 Tim. 6:13

(zoogoneo, to preserve alive, is the alternative reading adopted by most editors; see LIVE, No. 6), and, particularly, of resurrection life, John 5:21; Rom. 4:17; (b) of Christ, who also is the bestower of resurrection life, John 5:21 (2nd part); 1 Cor. 15:45; cf. v. 22; (c) of the resurrection of Christ in “the body of His glory,” 1 Pet. 3:18; (d) of the power of reproduction inherent in seed, which presents a certain analogy with resurrection, 1 Cor. 15:36; (e) of the ‘changing,’ or ‘fashioning anew,’ of the bodies of the living, which corresponds with, and takes place at the same time as, the resurrection of the dead in Christ, Rom. 8:11; (f) of the impartation of spiritual life, and the communication of spiritual sustenance generally, John 6:63; 2 Cor. 3:6; Gal. 3:2.¶* See QUICKEN, and cf. sunzoopoieo, “to quicken together with,” Eph. 2:5 and Col. 2:13.¶

Notes: (1) For the verb diago, “to lead a life,” see LIVE, No. 7. (2) For politeuo, in Phil. 1:27, RV, “let your manner of life be,” see LIVE, No. 8.

LIFT

1. egeiro (ἐγείρω, 1453), “to awaken, raise up,” is used in Matt. 12:11, of “lifting” a sheep out of a pit. In the following the RV has “raised” for KJV, “lifted”: Mark 1:31; 9:27; Acts 3:7. See ARISE, AWAKE, RAISE.

2. airo (αἶρω, 142) signifies (a) “to raise take up, lift, draw up,” (b) “to bear, carry,” (c) “to take or carry away.” It is used of “lifting” up the voice, Luke 17:13; Acts 4:24; eyes, John 11:41; hand, Rev. 10:5. See AWAY, BEAR, CARRY, DOUBT, A, No. 6, LOOSE, PUT, No. 17, REMOVE, TAKE.

3. epairo (ἐπαίρω, 1869), “to lift up, raise” (epi, “upon,” and No. 2), is used of “lifting” up the eyes, Matt. 17:8; Luke 6:20; 16:23, 18:13; John 4:35; 6:5; 17:1; the head, Luke 21:28; the hands, Luke 24:50; 1 Tim. 2:8; the voice, Luke 11:27; Acts 2:14; 14:11; 22:22; a foresail, Acts 27:40 (“hoisting,” RV); metaphorically, of the heel, John 13:18, as of one “lifting” up the foot before kicking; the expression indicates contempt and violence; in the passive voice, Acts 1:9, of Christ’s ascension, “was taken up”; 2 Cor. 10:5, “is exalted” (with pride); 11:20, “exalteth himself.” See EXALT, HOIST, TAKE.¶

4. hupsoo (ὑψόω, 5312), “to lift or raise up” (akin to hupsos, “height”), is rendered by the verb “to lift up” in John 3:14, of the brazen serpent; of Christ in crucifixion (id.), and 8:28; 12:32, 34; metaphorically, “to exalt, lift up,” e.g., Jas. 4:10, KJV, “shall lift ... up,” RV, “shall exalt.” See EXALT.

5. anistemi (ἀνίστημι, 450), “to raise up” (ana, “up,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), is translated “lifted (her) up,” in Acts 9:41, KJV; RV, “raised (her) up.” See ARISE, RAISE.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine pp. 154, 155.

6. anorthoo (ἀνορθόω, 461), “to set upright” (ana, “up,” orthos, “straight”), is used of “lifting” up “hands that hang down,” Heb. 12:12; of setting up a building, restoring ruins, Acts 15:16 (cf. e.g., 2 Sam. 7:13, 16; 1 Chron. 17:12; Jer. 10:12; often so used in the papyri); of the healing of the woman with a spirit of infirmity, Luke 13:13, “was made straight” (for v. 11, see No. 7). See SET, STRAIGHT.¶

7. anakupso (ἀνακύπτω, 352), “to lift oneself up,” is used (a) of the body, Luke 13:11; John 8:7, 10; (b) metaphorically, of the mind, to look up, to be elated, Luke 21:28 (followed by No. 3, “lift up”); an instance is found in the papyri in which a person speaks of the impossibility of ever looking up again in a certain place, for very shame (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.).¶ In the Sept., Job 10:15.¶

LIGHT, Noun, and Verb (bring to, give), LIGHTEN

A. Nouns.

1. phos (φῶς, 5457), akin to phao, “to give light” (from roots pha— and phan—, expressing “light as seen by the eye,” and, metaphorically, as “reaching the mind,” whence phaino, “to make to appear,” phaneros, “evident,” etc.); cf. Eng., “phosphorus” (lit., “light-bearing”). “Primarily light is a luminous emanation, probably of force, from certain bodies, which enables the eye to discern form and color. Light requires an organ adapted for its reception (Matt. 6:22). Where the eye is absent, or where it has become impaired from any cause, light is useless. Man, naturally, is incapable of receiving spiritual light inasmuch as he lacks the capacity for spiritual things, 1 Cor. 2:14. Hence believers are called ‘sons of light,’ Luke 16:8, not merely because they have received a revelation from God, but because in the New Birth they have received the spiritual capacity for it.

“Apart from natural phenomena, light is used in Scripture of (a) the glory of God’s dwellingplace, 1 Tim. 6:16; (b) the nature of God, 1 John 1:5; (c) the impartiality of God, Jas. 1:17; (d) the favor of God, Ps. 4:6; of the King, Prov. 16:15; of an influential man, Job 29:24; (e) God, as the illuminator of His people, Isa. 60:19, 20; (f) the Lord Jesus as the illuminator of men, John 1:4, 5, 9; 3:19; 8:12; 9:5; 12:35, 36, 46; Acts 13:47; (g) the illuminating power of the Scriptures, Ps. 119:105; and of the judgments and commandments of God, Isa. 51:4; Prov. 6:23, cf. Ps. 43:3; (h) the guidance of God Job 29:3; Ps. 112:4; Isa. 58:10; and, ironically, of the guidance of man, Rom. 2:19; (i) salvation, 1 Pet. 2:9; (j) righteousness, Rom. 13:12; 2 Cor. 11:14, 15; 1 John 2:9, 10; (k) witness for God, Matt. 5:14, 16; John 5:35; (l) prosperity and general well-being, Esth. 8:16; Job 18:18; Isa. 58:8-10.”*

2. phoster (φωστήρ, 5458) denotes “a luminary, light,” or “light-giver”; it is used figuratively of believers, as shining in the spiritual darkness of the world, Phil. 2:15; in Rev. 21:11 it is used of Christ as the “Light” reflected in and shining through the heavenly city (cf. v. 23).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 1:14, 16.¶

3. photismos (φωτισμός, 5462), “an illumination, light,” is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 4:4, of the “light” of the gospel, and in v. 6, of the knowledge of the glory of God.¶ In the Sept., Job 3:9; Ps. 27:1; 44:3; 78:14; 90:8; 139:11.¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine pp. 159, 160.

4. phengos (φέγγος, 5338), “brightness, luster,” is used of the “light” of the moon, Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:24; of a lamp, Luke 11:33 (some mss. have phos, here).¶

5. luchnos (λύχνος, 3088), “a hand-lamp”: see LAMP.

6. lampas (λαμπάς, 2985), “a torch”: see LAMP.

B. Verbs.

1. photizo (φωτίζω, 5461), used (a) intransitively, signifies “to shine, give light,” Rev. 22:5; (b) transitively, (1) “to illumine, to light, enlighten, to be lightened,” Luke 11:36; Rev. 21:23; in the passive voice, Rev. 18:1; metaphorically, of spiritual enlightenment, John 1:9; Eph. 1:18; 3:9, “to make ... see;” Heb. 6:4; 10:32, “ye were enlightened,” RV (KJV, “... illuminated”); (2) “to bring to light,” 1 Cor. 4:5 (of God’s act in the future); 2 Tim. 1:10 (of God’s act in the past). See ENLIGHTEN, ILLUMINATE.¶

2. epiphausko (ἐπιφάύω, 2017), or possibly epiphauo, “to shine forth,” is rendered “shall give ... light,” in Eph. 5:14, KJV (RV, “shall shine upon”), of the glory of Christ, illumining the believer who fulfills the conditions, so that being guided by His “light” he reflects His character. See SHINE.¶ Cf. epiphosko, “to dawn” (really a variant form of epiphausko).

3. lampo (λάμπω, 2989), “to give the light of a torch,” is rendered “giveth light” in Matt. 5:15, KJV (RV, “shineth”). See SHINE.

4. epiphaino (ἐπιφαίνω, 2014), transitively, “to show forth” (epi, “upon,” phaino, “to cause to shine”), is used intransitively and metaphorically in Luke 1:79, and rendered “to give light,” KJV (RV, “to shine upon”). See APPEAR, SHINE.

5. hapto (ἅπτω, 681), “to kindle a fire” and so give “light”: see KINDLE, No. 1, Note.

6. kaio (καίω, 2545), “to burn,” is translated “do (men) light” in Matt. 5:15. See BURN.

7. astrapto (ἀστράπτω, 797), “to flash forth lighten as lightning” (akin to astrape, “lightning”), occurs in Luke 17:24; 24:4 (KJV “shining”; RV, “dazzling”). See DAZZLING.

Note: In Luke 2:32, KJV, the noun apokalupsis, “an unveiling, revelation,” preceded by eis, “unto, with a view to,” is rendered “to lighten” (RV, “for revelation”; marg., “(the) unveiling”). See REVELATION.

C. Adjective.

photeinos (φωτεινός, 5460), from phos (A No. 1), “bright,” is rendered “full of light” in Matt. 6:22; Luke 11:34, 36 (twice), figuratively, of the single-mindedness of the eye, which acts as the lamp of the body; in Matt. 17:5, “bright,” of a cloud. See BRIGHT.¶

LIGHT (to light upon)

Notes: (1) In Matt. 3:16, KJV, erchomai, “to come,” is translated “lighting”; RV, “coming.” (2) In Rev. 7:16, KJV, pipto, “to fall,” is translated “shall ... light” (RV, “shall ... strike”). See STRIKE. (3) For Acts 27:41, RV, see FALL, B, No. 8.

LIGHT, LIGHTEN (as to weight)

A. Adjective.

elaphros (ἐλαφρός, 1645), “light in weight, easy to bear,” is used of the burden imparted by Christ, Matt. 11:30; of affliction, 2 Cor. 4:17.¶

B. Verb.

kouphizo (κουφίζω, 2893), “to make light, lighten” (the adjective kouphos, not in NT, denotes “slight, light, empty”), is used of “lightening” the ship, in Acts 27:38.

Note: For the phrase in v. 18, KJV, “they lightened the ship,” See FREIGHT.

C. Noun.

elaphria (ἐλαφρία, 1644), “lightness,” 2 Cor. 1:17, KJV: see FICKLENESS.

LIGHT OF (make), LIGHTLY

ameleo (ἀμελέω, 272) denotes “to be careless, not to care” (a, negative, and melei, an impersonal verb, signifying “it is a care”: see CARE), Matt. 22:5, “they made light of (it),” lit. “making light of (it),” aorist participle, indicating the definiteness of their decision. See NEGLECT, NEGLIGENT, REGARD.

Note: In Mark 9:39, KJV, the adverb tachu, “quickly,” is translated “lightly” (RV, “quickly”). See QUICKLY.

LIGHTNING

astrape (ἀστραπή, 796) denotes (a) “lightning” (akin to LIGHT, B, No. 7), Matt. 24:27; 28:3; Luke 10:18; 17:24; in the plural, Rev. 4:5; 8:5; 11:19; 16:18; (b) “bright shining,” or “shining brightness,” Luke 11:36. See SHINING.¶

LIKE, LIKE (as to, unto), (be) LIKE, (make) LIKE, LIKE (things), LIKEN

A. Adjectives.

1. homoios (ὅμοιος, 3664), “like, resembling, such as, the same as,” is used (a) of appearance or form John 9:9; Rev. 1:13, 15; 2:18; 4:3 (twice), 6, 7; 9:7 (twice), 10, 19; 11:1; 13:2, 11; 14:14; (b) of ability, condition, nature, Matt. 22:39; Acts 17:29; Gal. 5:21, “such like,” lit., “and the (things) similar to these”; 1 John 3:2; Rev. 13:4; 18:18; 21:11, 18; (c) of comparison in parables, Matt. 13:31, 33, 44, 45, 47; 20:1; Luke 13:18, 19, 21; (d) of action, thought, etc. Matt. 11:16; 13:52; Luke 6:47, 48, 49; 7:31, 32; 12:36; John 8:55; Jude 7.¶

2. isos (ἴσος, 2470), “equal” (the same in size, quality, etc.), is translated “like,” of the gift of the Spirit, Acts 11:17. See EQUAL, MUCH (AS).

3. paromoios (παρόμοιος, 3946), “much like” (para, “beside,” and No. 1), is used in Mark 7:13, in the neuter plural, “(many such) like things.”¶

B. Verbs.

1. homoioo (ὁμοιόω, 3666), “to make like” (akin to A, No. 1), is used (a) especially in the parables, with the significance of comparing, “likening,” or, in the passive voice, “being likened,” Matt. 7:24, 26; 11:16; 13:24; 18:23; 22:2 (RV, “likened”); 25:1; Mark 4:30; Luke 7:31; 13:18, RV, “liken” (KJV, “resemble”); v. 20; in several of these instances the point of resemblance is not a specific detail, but the whole circumstances of the parable; (b) of making “like,” or, in the passive voice, of being made or becoming “like,” Matt. 6:8; Acts 14:11, “in the likeness of (men),” lit., “being made like” (aorist participle, passive); Rom. 9:29; Heb. 2:17, of Christ in being “made like” unto His brethren, i.e., in partaking of human nature, apart from sin (cf. v. 14).¶

2. eoika (εἶκω, 1503v), a perfect tense with a present meaning (from an obsolete present, eiko), denotes “to be like, to resemble,” Jas. 1:6, 23.¶ In the Sept., Job 6:3, 25.¶

3. paromoiazō (παρομοιάζω, 3945), “to be like” (from para, “by,” and a verbal form from homoios, A, No. 1), is used in Matt. 23:27 (perhaps with intensive force), in the Lord’s comparison of the scribes and Pharisees to whitened sepulchres.¶

4. aphomoioō (ἀφομοιόω, 871), “to make like” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), is used in Heb. 7:3, of Melchizedek as “made like” the Son of God, i.e., in the facts related and withheld in the Genesis record.¶

Note: For the KJV of Rom. 1:23, “made like,” see LIKENESS, No. 1.

C. Adverbs.

1. hos (ὥς, 5613), used as a relative adverb of manner, means “as, like as,” etc. and is translated “like,” e.g., in Matt. 6:29; Mark 4:31; Luke 12:27; in Acts 3:22 and 7:37 (see RV, marg.); in 8:32 (2nd part), RV, “as” (KJV, “like”); Rev. 2:18, RV (the rendering should have been “as” here); 18:21, RV, “as it were” (KJV, “like”); 21:11, 2nd part (ditto).

2. hosper (ὥσπερ, 5618), “just as,” is rendered “like as” in Rom. 6:4.

Notes: (1) In Heb. 4:15, the phrase kath’homoioteta (kata, “according to,” homoiotes, “a likeness,” i.e., “after the similitude”), is rendered “like as,” in the statement that Christ has been tempted in all points “like as we are, yet without sin”; this may mean either “according to the likeness of our temptations,” or “in accordance with His likeness to us.” (2) In the following the most authentic mss. have hos, “as,” for hosei, “like,” in the KJV; Mark 1:10; Luke 3:22; John 1:32; Rev. 1:14. (3) In John 7:46, KJV, the combination of the adverb houtos, thus, with hos, “as,” is translated “like,” RV “(never man) so (spake).” (4) For “in like manner” see MANNER. (5) In 1 Thess. 2:14, KJV, ta auta, “the same (things),” is translated “like (things),” RV, “the same (things).”

For (DID NOT) LIKE, Rom. 1:28, KJV, see REFUSE; No. 3

LIKEMINDED

1. isopsuchos (ἰσόψυχος, 2473), lit., “of equal soul” (isos, “equal,” psuche, “the soul”), is rendered “likeminded” in Phil. 2:20.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 55:13.¶

2. homophron (ὁμόφρων, 3675), (homos, “the same,” phren, “the mind”), occurs in 1 Pet. 3:8, RV, “likeminded” (KJV, “of one mind”).

Note: In Rom. 15:5; Phil. 2:2, phroneo to auto, “to think the same thing,” is translated, KJV, “be likeminded” (RV, “be of the same, mind”).

LIKENESS, LIKENESS OF (in the)

1. homoïoma (ὁμοίωμα, 3667) denotes “that which is made like something, a resemblance,” (a) in the concrete sense, Rev. 9:7, “shapes” (RV, marg., “likenesses”); (b) in the abstract sense, Rom. 1:23, RV, “(for) the likeness (of an image)”; the KJV translates it as a verb, “(into an image) made like to”; the association here of the two words

homoïoma and eikon (see IMAGE) serves to enhance the contrast between the idol and “the glory of the incorruptible God,” and is expressive of contempt; in 5:14, “(the) likeness of Adam’s transgression” (KJV, “similitude”); in 6:5, “(the) likeness (of His death); in 8:3, “(the) likeness (of sinful flesh); in Phil. 2:7, “the likeness of men.” “The expression ‘likeness of men’ does not of itself imply, still less does it exclude or diminish, the reality of the nature which Christ assumed. That ... is declared in the words ‘form of a servant.’ ‘Paul justly says in the likeness of men, because, in fact, Christ, although certainly perfect Man (Rom. 5:15; 1 Cor. 15:21; 1 Tim. 2:5), was, by reason of the Divine nature present in Him, not simply and merely man ... but the Incarnate Son of God” (Gifford, quoting Meyer). See SHAPE.¶ Cf. LIKE, B, (b).

2. homoïosis (ὁμοίωσις, 3669), “a making like,” is translated “likeness” in Jas. 3:9, RV (KJV, “similitude”).¶

3. homoïotes (ὁμοιότης, 3665) is translated “likeness” in Heb. 7:15, RV (KJV, “similitude”).

4. antitupon (ἀντίτυπον, 499) is rendered “after a true likeness,” in 1 Pet. 3:21, RV (marg., “in the antitype”). See FIGURE, No. 2.

LIKEWISE

1. homoïos (ὁμοίως, 3668), “in like manner” (from the adjective homoïos, see LIKE, A, No. 1), is rendered “likewise” in the KJV of Matt. 22:26; 27:41, Luke 10:32; 16:25; John 5:19; Jas. 2:25; 1 Pet. 3:1, 7; Jude 8; Rev. 8:12 (in all these the RV has “in like manner”); in the following, KJV and RV have “likewise”; Matt. 26:35; Luke 5:33; 6:31; 10:37; 17:28, 31; 22:36; John 6:11; 21:13; Rom. 1:27; 1 Pet. 5:5.¶ See MANNER, SO.

2. hosautos (ὡσαύτως, 5615), a strengthened form of hos, “as,” denotes “in like manner, just so, likewise”; it is sometimes translated “likewise,” e.g., Matt. 20:5; 21:30.

3. kai (καί, 2532), “and, even,” is translated “likewise” in the KJV and RV of Matt. 20:10 (last kai in the verse), more lit., “even they”; elsewhere the RV has “also,” for the KJV, “likewise,” Matt. 18:35; 24:33; Luke 3:14; 17:10; 19:19; 21:31; Acts 3:24; 1 Cor. 14:9; Col. 4:16; 1 Pet. 4:1; in Matt. 21:24, the KJV has “in like wise” (RV, “likewise”).

4. paraplesios (παρὰπλησίως, 3898), from para, “beside,” and the adjective plesios, “near” (akin to the adverb pelas, “near, hard by”), is used in Heb. 2:14, KJV, “likewise” (RV, “in like manner”), expressing the true humanity of Christ in partaking of flesh and blood.¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 17:12 and Rom. 6:11, KJV, the adverb houtos, “thus, so,” is translated “likewise” (RV, “so”); in Luke 15:7 and 10, KJV, “likewise,” RV, “even so,” in Luke 14:33, KJV, followed by oun, “therefore,” it is rendered “so likewise” (RV, “so therefore”).

LILY

krinon (κρίνον, 2918) occurs in Matt. 6:28 and Luke 12:27; in the former the Lord speaks of “the lilies of the field”; the “lily” referred to was a flower of rich color, probably including the gladiolus and iris species. The former “grow among the grain, often overtopping it and illuminating the broad fields with their various shades of pinkish purple to deep violet purple and blue.... Anyone who has stood among the wheat fields of Galilee ... will see at once the appropriateness of our Savior's allusion. They all have a reedy stem, which, when dry, would make such fuel as is used in the ovens. The beautiful irises ... have gorgeous flowers, and would suit our Savior's comparison even better than the above. But they are plants of pasture grounds and swamps, and seldom found in grain fields. If, however, we understand by 'lilies of the field' simply wild lilies, these would also be included in the expression. Our Savior's comparison would then be like a 'composite photograph,' a reference to all the splendid colors and beautiful shapes of the numerous wild plants comprehended under the name 'lily'" (G. E. Post, in Hastings' Bib. Dic.).

For LINEAGE in Luke 2:4, KJV, see FAMILY

LINEN, LINEN CLOTH, FINE LINEN

1. sindon (σινδών, 4616) was "a fine linen cloth, an article of domestic manufacture" (Prov. 31:24) used (a) as a garment or wrap, the "linen cloth" of Mark 14:51, 52; (b) as shrouds or winding sheets, Matt. 27:59; Mark 15:46, RV, "linen cloth," for KJV, "linen"; Luke 23:53 (ditto).¶ In the Sept., Judg. 14:2, "(thirty) sheets"; Prov. 31:24 (see above).¶ The Mishna (the great collection of legal decisions by the ancient Rabbis) records that the material was sometimes used for curtains.

2. linon (λίνον, 3043) denotes (a) "flax," Matt. 12:20; (b) "linen," in Rev. 15:6, KJV; the best texts have lithos, "stone," RV. See FLAX.

3. othonion (ὀθόνιον, 3608), "a piece of fine linen," is used in the plural, of the strips of cloth with which the body of the Lord was bound, after being wrapped in the sindon, Luke 24:12; John 19:40; 20:5, 6, 7.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 14:13, "changes of raiment"; Hos. 2:5, 9.¶ The word is a diminutive of othone, "a sheet" (see SHEET).

4. bussos (βύσσος, 1040), "fine linen," made from a special species of flax, a word of Aramean origin, used especially for the Syrian byssus (Arab. bus is still used for native "linen"). Cf. Heb. bus, in all OT passages quoted here, except Ezek. 27:7; Syriac busa In Luke 16:9. It is the material mentioned in 1 Chron. 4:21, wrought by the house of Ashbea; 15:27, bussinos, No. 5 (David's robe); 2 Chron. 3:14, bussos (the veil of the Temple); 5:12, bussinos (the clothing of the Levite singers); Esth. 1:6 (the cords of the hangings in the king's garden); 8:15 (Mordecai's dress); Ezek. 27:7 (bussos, in Syrian trade with Tyre). In the NT, Luke 16:19, the clothing of the "rich man."¶

5. bussinos (βύσσινος, 1039), an adjective formed from No. 4, denoting "made of fine linen." This is used of the clothing of the mystic Babylon, Rev. 18:12; 16, and of the suitable attire of the Lamb's wife, 19:8, 14, figuratively describing "the righteous acts of the saints.” The presumption of Babylon is conspicuous in that she arrays herself in that which alone befits the bride of Christ.¶ For examples of the use in the Sept. see No. 4.

LINGER

argeo (ἀργυπνέω, 69), “to be idle, to linger” (akin to argos, “idle”: see kalargeo, under ABOLISH), is used negatively regarding the judgment of the persons mentioned in 2 Pet. 2:3.¶ In the Sept., Ezra 4:24; Eccles. 12:3.¶

LION

leon (λεών, 3023) occurs in 2 Tim. 4:17, probably figurative of the imminent peril of death, the figure being represented by the whole phrase, not by the word “lion” alone; some suppose the reference to be to the lions of the amphitheater; the Greek commentators regarded the “lion” as Nero; others understand it to be Satan. The language not improbably recalls that of Ps. 22:21, and Dan. 6:20. The word is used metaphorically, too, in Rev. 5:5, where Christ is called “the Lion of the tribe of Judah.” Elsewhere it has the literal meaning, Heb. 11:33; 1 Pet. 5:8; Rev. 4:7; 9:8, 17; 10:3; 13:2.¶ Taking the OT and NT occurrences the allusions are to the three great features of the “lion,” (1) its majesty and strength, indicative of royalty, e.g., Prov. 30:30, (2) its courage, e.g., Prov. 28:1, (3) its cruelty, e.g., Ps. 22:13.

LIP

cheilos (χῆλος, 5491) is used (a) of the organ of speech, Matt. 15:8 and Mark 7:6, where “honoring with the lips,” besides meaning empty words, may have reference to a Jewish custom of putting to the mouth the tassel of the tallith (the woollen scarf wound round the head and neck during prayer), as a sign of acceptance of the Law from the heart; Rom. 3:13; 1 Cor. 14:21 (from Isa. 28:11, 12, speaking of the Assyrian foe as God’s message to disobedient Israel); Heb. 13:15; 1 Pet. 3:10; (b) metaphorically, of “the brink or edge of things,” as of the sea shore, Heb. 11:12, lit., “the shore (of the sea).”¶

LIST (Verb)

1. thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to will, wish,” is translated by the verb “to list” in Matt. 17:12; Mark 9:13; John 3:8. See DESIRE, B, No. 6.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), “to will, be minded,” is translated “listeth” in Jas. 3:4 (RV, “willeth”). See DESIRE, B, No. 7.

LITTLE

A. Adjectives.

1. mikros (μικρός, 3398), “little, small” (the opposite of megos, “great”), is used (a) of persons, with regard to (1) station, or age, in the singular, Mark 15:40, of James “the less” (RV marg., “little”), possibly referring to age; Luke 19:3; in the plural, “little” ones, Matt. 18:6, 10, 14; Mark 9:42; (2) rank or influence, e.g., Matt. 10:42 (see context); Acts 8:10; 26:22, “small,” as in Rev. 11:18; 13:16; 19:5, 18; 20:12; (b) of things, with regard to (1) size, e.g., Jas. 3:5 (some mss. have No. 2 here); (2) quantity, Luke 12:32; 1 Cor. 5:6; Gal. 5:9; Rev. 3:8; (3) time, John 7:33; 12:35; Rev. 6:11; 20:3. See B, No. 1. See LEAST, SMALL.

2. oligos (ὀλίγος, 3641), “little, few” (the opposite of polus, “much”), is translated “short” in Rev. 12:12; in the neut. sing., e.g., 2 Cor. 8:15. For Jas. 3:5, see No. 1. See FEW, SHORT, SMALL.

3. brachus (βραχύς, 1024), “short,” is used to some extent adverbially of (a) time, with the preposition meta, “after,” Luke 22:58, “(after) a little while”; in Acts 5:34, without a preposition, RV, “a little while” (KJV, “a little space”); in Heb. 2:7, 9, “a little” (KJV marg. in v. 7, and RV marg., in both, “a little while”), where the writer transfers to time what the Sept. in Ps. 8:5 says of rank; (b) of quantity, John 6:7; in Heb. 13:22, preceded by the preposition dia, “by means of,” and with logo.¶, “words” (genitive plural) understood, “(in) few words”; (c) of distance, Acts 27:28, RV, “a little space” (KJV, “a little further”). See FEW, FURTHER, SPACE.¶

4. elachistos (ἐλάχιστος, 1646), which serves as the superlative of No. 1, is translated “a very little” in Luke 19:17. See LEAST.

Note: For mikroteros, “but little,” see LEAST, No. 4.

B. Adverbs.

1. mikron (μικρόν, 3397), the neuter of A, No. 1, is used adverbially (a) of distance, Matt. 26:39; Mark 14:35; (b) of quantity, 2 Cor. 11:1, 16; (c) of time, Matt. 26:73, “a while”; Mark 14:70; John 13:33, “a little while”, 14:19; 16:16-9; Heb. 10:37, with the repeated hoson, “how very,” lit., “a little while, how little, how little!” See WHILE.¶

2. oligon (ὀλίγος, 3641**), the neuter of A, No. 2, is used adverbially of (a) time, Mark 6:31, “a while;” 1 Pet. 1:6, RV, “a little while (KJV, “a season”); 5:10, RV, “a little while” (KJV, “a while”); Rev. 17:10, RV, “a little while” (KJV, “a short space”); (b) space, Mark 1:19; Luke 5:3; (c) extent, with the preposition pros, “for,” in 1 Tim. 4:8, RV, “(for) a little” (KJV, and RV marg., “little”), where, while the phrase might refer to duration (as KJV marg.), yet the antithesis “for all things” clearly indicates extent, i.e., “physical training is profitable towards few objects in life.” See BRIEFLY, FEW, SEASON, C, Note.

3. metrios (μετρίως, 3357), moderately, occurs in Acts 20:12, “a little.”¶

For (NO) LITTLE see COMMON, B, Note (3)

LIVE

1. zao (ζάω, 2198), “to live, be alive,” is used in the NT of “(a) God, Matt. 16:16; John 6:57; Rom. 14:11; (b) the Son in Incarnation, John 6:57; (c) the Son in Resurrection, John 14:19; Acts 1:3; Rom. 6:10; 2 Cor. 13:4; Heb. 7:8; (d) spiritual life, John 6:57; Rom. 1:17; 8:13b; Gal. 2:19, 20; Heb. 12:9; (e) the present state of departed saints, Luke 20:38; 1 Pet. 4:6; (f) the hope of resurrection, 1 Pet. 1:3; (g) the resurrection of believers, 1 Thess. 5:10; John 5:25; Rev. 20:4, and of unbelievers, v. 5, cf. v. 13; (h) the way of access to God through the Lord Jesus Christ, Heb. 10:20; (i) the manifestation of divine power in support of divine authority, 2 Cor. 13:4b; cf. 12:10, and 1 Cor. 5:5; (j) bread, figurative of the Lord Jesus, John 6:51; (k) a stone, figurative of the Lord Jesus, 1 Pet. 2:4; (l) water, figurative of the Holy Spirit, John 4:10; 7:38; (m) a sacrifice, figurative of the believer, Rom. 12:1; (n) stones, figurative of the believer, 1 Pet. 2:5; (o) the oracles,

logion, Acts 7:38, and word, logos, Heb. 4:12; 1 Pet. 1:23, of God; (p) the physical life of men, 1 Thess. 4:15; Matt. 27:63; Acts 25:24; Rom. 14:9; Phil. 1:21 (in the infinitive mood used as a noun with the article, ‘living’), 22; 1 Pet. 4:5; (q) the maintenance of physical life, Matt. 4:4; 1 Cor. 9:14; (r) the duration of physical life, Heb. 2:15; (s) the enjoyment of physical life, 1 Thess. 3:8; (t) the recovery of physical life from the power of disease, Mark 5:23; John 4:50; (u) the recovery of physical life from the power of death, Matt. 9:18; Acts 9:41; Rev. 20:5; (v) the course, conduct, and character of men, (1) good, Acts 26:5; 2 Tim. 3:12; Titus 2:12; (2) evil, Luke 15:13; Rom. 6:2; 8:13a; 2 Cor. 5:15b; Col. 3:7; (3) undefined, Rom. 7:9; 14:7; Gal. 2:14; (w) restoration after alienation, Luke 15:32.

Note: In 1 Thess. 5:10, to live means to experience that change, 1 Cor. 15:51, which is to be the portion of all in Christ who will be alive upon the earth at the Parousia of the Lord Jesus, cf. John 11:25, and which corresponds to the resurrection of those who had previously died in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:52-54.

2. sunzao (συνζάω, 4800), “to live together with” (sun, “with,” and zao, “to live”), may be included with zao in the above analysis as follows: (g) Rom. 6:8; 2 Tim. 2:11; (s), 2 Cor. 7:3.¶

3. anazao (ἀναζάω, 326) ana, “again,” and zao, denotes “to live again,” “to revive,” Luke 15:24; cf. (w) in list above, and Rom. 7:9, to manifest activity again.¶*

Note: Zao is translated “quick” (i.e., “living”) in Acts 10:42; 2 Tim. 4:1; 1 Pet. 4:5; in Heb. 4:12, KJV (RV, “living”).

4. bioo (βίωω, 980), “to spend life, to pass one’s life,” is used in 1 Pet. 4:2.¶

5. anastrepho (ἀναστρέφω, 390), used metaphorically, in the middle voice, “to conduct oneself, behave, live,” is translated “to live,” in Heb. 13:18 (“honestly”); in 2 Pet. 2:18 (“in error”). See ABIDE, BEHAVE, etc.

6. zoogoneo (ζωογονέω, 2225) denotes “to preserve alive” (from zoos, “alive,” and ginomai, “to come to be, become, be made”); in Luke 17:33, “shall preserve (it),” i.e., his life, RV marg., “save (it) alive”; cf. the parallels sozo, “to save,” in Matt. 16:25, and phulaso, “to keep,” in John 12:25; in Acts 7:19, “live,” negatively of the efforts of Pharaoh to destroy the babes in Israel; in 1 Tim. 6:13, according to the best mss. (some have zoopoieo, “to cause to live”), “quickeneth” (RV, marg., “preserveth ... alive,” the preferable rendering). See PRESERVE, QUICKEN.¶

7. diago (διάγω, 1236) is used of time in the sense of passing a life, 1 Tim. 2:2, “(that) we may lead (a tranquil and quiet, RV) life”; Tit. 3:3, “living (in malice and envy).”¶

8. politeuo (πολιτεύομαι, 4176), “to be a citizen (polites), to live as a citizen,” is used metaphorically of conduct as in accordance with the characteristics of the heavenly community; in Acts 23:1, “I have lived”; in Phil. 1:27, “let your manner of life (KJV, conversation) be.” See CITIZENSHIP, No. 4, Note.¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 173, 174.

9. huparcho (ὑπάρχω, 5225), “to be in existence, to be,” is translated “live (delicately)” in Luke 7:25. See BEING.

Note: In 1 Cor. 9:13, KJV, esthio, “to eat,” is translated “live of.” In Tim. 5:6 the KJV renders spatalao “liveth in pleasure.”

LIVE LONG

makrochronios (μακροχρόνιος, 3118), an adjective denoting “of long duration, longlived” (makros, “long,” chronos, “time”), is used in Eph. 6:3, “(that thou mayest live long,” lit., “(that thou mayest be) long-lived.”)¶ In the Sept., Ex. 20:12; Deut. 4:40; 5:16; 17:20.¶

LIVELY

Note: This is the KJV translation of the present participle of the verb; zao, “to live,” in three passages, in each of which the RV has “living,” Acts 7:38; 1 Pet. 1:3; 2:5.

For LIVING see BEHAVIOR, B, No. 1, LIFE, Nos. 2, 6, and LIVE, No. 3, Note For LIVING CREATURES see BEAST

LO!

1. ide (ἴδε, 2396), an aorist or point tense, marking a definite point of time, of the imperative mood of eidon, “to see” (taken as part of horao, “to see”), is used as an interjection, addressed either to one or many persons, e.g., Matt. 25:20, 22, 25; John 1:29, 36, 47; Gal. 5:2, the only occurrence outside Matthew, Mark and John. See BEHOLD, SEE.

2. idou (ἰδοὺ, 2400) a similar tense of No. 1, but in the middle voice, e.g., Matt. 1:20, 23; very frequent in the Synoptists and Acts and the Apocalypse.

For LOAF see BREAD

LOCUST

akris (ἀκρίς, 200) occurs in Matt. 3:4 and Mark 1:6, of the animals themselves, as forming part of the diet of John the Baptist; they are used as food; the Arabs stew them with butter, after removing the head, legs and wings. In Rev. 9:3, 7, they appear as monsters representing satanic agencies, let loose by divine judgments inflicted upon men for five months, the time of the natural life of the “locust.” For the character of the judgment see the whole passage.¶

LODGE, LODGING

A. Verbs.

1. aulizomai (αὐλίζομαι, 835), properly, “to lodge in a courtyard” (aule, See COURT, No. 2), then, “to lodge in the open,” denotes, in the NT, “to pass the night, to lodge anywhere,” Matt. 21:17; Luke 21:37, RV, “lodged” (KJV, “abode”).¶ See the metaphorical use in the Sept. and the Heb. of Ps. 30:5, “(weeping) may come in to lodge (at even),” i.e., as a passing stranger. See ABIDE.

2. kataskenoo (κατασκηνόω, 2681) “to pitch one’s tent” (kata, “down,” skene, “a tent”), is rendered “to lodge,” of birds, in Matt. 13:32; Mark 4:32; Luke 13:19. In Acts 2:26, it is used of the body of the Lord in the tomb, as dwelling in hope, RV, “shall dwell”

3. kataluo (καταλύω, 2647), in one of its meanings, signifies “to unloose” (kata, “down,” luo, “to loose”), “unyoke,” as of horses, etc., hence intransitively, “to take up one’s quarters, to lodge,” Luke 9:12; 19:7, RV, “to lodge” (KJV, “to be a guest”). See COME, Note (7) (come to nought), DESTROY, DISSOLVE, OVERTHROW, THROW. Cf. kataluma, “a guest chamber, inn.”

4. xenizo (ξενίζω, 3579), “to receive as a guest” (xenos, “a guest, stranger”), “to entertain, lodge,” is used in the active voice in Acts 10:23; 28:7, RV, “entertained” (KJV, “lodged”); Heb. 13:2, “have entertained”; in the passive voice, Acts 10:6 (lit., “he is entertained”), 18, 32; 21:16. Its other meaning, “to think strange,” is found in 1 Pet. 4:4, 12. See ENTERTAIN, STRANGE.

B. Noun.

xenia (ξενία, 3578), akin to A, No. 4, denotes (a) “hospitality, entertainment,” Philem. 22; (b) by metonymy, “a place of entertainment, a lodging-place,” Acts 28:23 (some put Philem. 22 under this section).¶

For LOFT, Acts 20:9, See STORY

LOINS

osphus (ὀσφύς, 3751) is used (a) in the natural sense in Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6; (b) as “the seat of generative power,” Heb. 7:5, 10; metaphorically in Acts 2:30; (c) metaphorically, (1) of girding the “loins” in readiness for active service for the Lord, Luke 12:35; (2) the same, with truth, Eph. 6:14, i.e., bracing up oneself so as to maintain perfect sincerity and reality as the counteractive in Christian character against hypocrisy and falsehood; (3) of girding the “loins” of the mind, 1 Pet. 1:13, RV, “girding,” suggestive of the alertness necessary for sobriety and for setting one’s hope perfectly on “the grace to be brought ... at the revelation of Jesus Christ” (the present participle, “girding,” is introductory to the rest of the verse).¶

LONG (Adjective and Adverb)

A. Adjectives.

1. makros (μακρός, 3117) is used of “long prayers” (Matt. 23:14, in some mss.), Mark 12:40; Luke 20:47. It denotes “far” in Luke 15:13; 19:12. See FAR.¶

2. hikanos (ικανός, 2425), “sufficient, much, long,” is used with chronos, “time,” in Luke 8:27; in 20:9 and 23:8 (KJV, “season”) the plural is used, lit., “long times”; Acts 8:11; 14:3. See ABLE (ABILITY), C, No. 2, MANY, MUCH.

3. polus (πολύς, 4183), “much,” is used with chronos, “time,” in Matt. 25:19; John 5:6; in Acts 27:21, with asitia, KJV, “long abstinence,” RV, “long without food.” See COMMON, Note (1).

4. tosoutos (τοσοῦτος, 5118), “so long,” is used with chronos in John 14:9 and Heb. 4:7.

5. posos (πόσος, 4214), “how much,” is used with chronos, in Mark 9:21, “how long time,” RV (KJV, “how long ago”).

6. hosos (ὅσος, 3745), “how much, so much,” is used after the preposition epi (eph), and as an adjective qualifying chronos, signifying “for so long time,” in Rom. 7:1; 1 Cor. 7:39; Gal. 4:1; see also B, No. 4.

Notes: (1) In Acts 14:28, KJV, the adjective oligos, “little,” with the negative ou, “not,” and qualifying chronos, is rendered “long time;” RV, “no little (time).” (2) For the comparative adjective, pleion, see LONGER, B.

B. Adverbs.

1. polus (πολύς, 4183), in one or other of its neuter forms, singular or plural, is used (a) of degree, “greatly, much, many,” e.g., Mark 1:45; (b) of time, e.g., Acts 27:14. Cf. A, No. 3. See GREAT, MUCH, OFT, SORE, STRAITLY, WHILE.

2. eph hikanon, lit., “unto much (time),” is rendered “a long while” in Acts 20:11. Cf. A, No. 2.

3. heos pote, lit., “until when?” signifies “how long?” Matt. 17:17 (twice); Mark 9:19 (twice); Luke 9:41; John 10:24; Rev. 6:10.

4. eph hoson signifies “so long as, as long as” (epi, “upon,” hosos, “how much”), Matt. 9:15; Mark 2:19; 2 Pet. 1:13. See INASMUCH, No. 2.

Notes: (1) For the adverb LONGER, see below. (2) In 2 Pet. 2:3, KJV, the adverb ekpalai, “from of old,” RV (ek, “from,” palai, “of old, formerly”), is translated “of a long time.”

LONG (Verb), LONG (after, for), LONGING

A. Verb.

epipotheo (ἐπιποθέω, 1971), “to long for greatly” (a strengthened form of potheo, “to long for,” not found in the NT), is translated “I long,” in Rom. 1:11; in 2 Cor. 5:2, RV, “longing” (KJV, “earnestly desiring”); in 1 Thess. 3:6 and 2 Tim. 1:4, RV, “longing” (KJV, “desiring greatly”); to long after, in 2 Cor. 9:14; Phil. 1:8; 2:26; to long for, in 1 Pet. 2:2, RV (KJV, “desire”); Jas. 4:5, RV, “long.” See DESIRE.¶

B. Adjective.

epipothetos (ἐπιπόθητος, 1973), akin to A, and an intensive form of pothetos, “desired, greatly desired,” “longed for,” is used in Phil. 4:1.¶

C. Nouns.

1. epipothia (ἐπιποθία, 1974), “a longing” (akin to A and B), is found in Rom. 15:23, RV “longing” (KJV, “great desire”). See DESIRE.¶

2. epipothesis (ἐπιπόθησις, 1972), “a longing” (perhaps stressing the process more than No. 1), is found in 2 Cor. 7:7, RV, “longing” (KJV, “earnest desire”); 7:11, RV, “longing” (KJV, “vehement desire”).¶

LONGER

A. Adverbs.

1. eti (ἔτι, 2089), “yet, as yet, still,” is translated “longer” in Luke 16:2 (with separate negative); “any longer” in Rom. 6:2. See ALSO, EVEN, FURTHER, MORE, MOREOVER, STILL, THENCEFORTH, YET.

2. ouketi (οὐκέτι, 3765), “no more, no longer” (ou, “not,” k, euphonic, and No. 1), is rendered “no longer” in the RV of Mark 7:12 (KJV, “no more”); John 15:15, RV (KJV, “henceforth not”), Rom. 14:15, RV (KJV, “now ... not”); Gal. 2:20, RV (KJV, “yet not”), Gal. 3:25; 4:7 (KJV, “no more”); Philem. 16 (KJV, “not now”). See HENCEFORTH, MORE, NOW, YET.

3. meketi (μηκέτι, 3371) also means “no more, no longer,” but generally suggests what is a matter of thought or supposition, whereas No. 1 refers to what is a matter of fact. It is rendered “any longer” in Acts 25:24; “no longer,” in Mark 2:2, RV, “no longer (room),” KJV, “no (room);” 2 Cor. 5:15, RV (KJV, “not henceforth”); Eph. 4:14, RV (KJV, “no more”); 4:17, RV (KJV, “henceforth ... not”); 1 Thess. 3:1, 5; 1 Tim. 5:23; 1 Pet. 4:2. See (negatively) HENCEFORTH, HENCEFORWARD, HEREAFTER, NO MORE.

4. pleion (πλείων, 4119), the neuter of pleion, “more,” the comparative degree of polu, “much,” is rendered “longer” in Acts 20:9, RV (KJV “long”).

B. Adjective.

pleion (πλείων, 4119), “more,” (cf. A, No. 4), is used with chronos, “time,” in Acts 18:20, “a longer time,” RV (KJV, “longer”).

LONGSUFFERING (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

makrothumia (μακροθυμία, 3115), “forbearance, patience, longsuffering” (makros, “long,” thumos, “temper”), is usually rendered “longsuffering,” Rom. 2:4; 9:22; 2 Cor. 6:6; Gal. 5:22; Eph. 4:2; Col. 1:11; 3:12; 1 Tim. 1:16; 2 Tim. 3:10; 4:2; 1 Pet. 3:20; 2 Pet. 3:15; “patience” in Heb. 6:12 and Jas. 5:10. See PATIENCE, and Note under FORBEAR.¶

B. Verb.

makrothumeo (μακροθυμέω, 3114), akin to A, “to be patient, longsuffering, to bear with,” lit., “to be long-tempered,” is rendered by the verb “to be longsuffering” in Luke 18:7, RV (KJV, “bear long”); in 1 Thess. 5:14, RV (KJV, “be patient”); so in Jas. 5:7, 8; in 2 Pet. 3:9, KJV and RV, “is longsuffering.” See BEAR, No. 14, ENDURE, PATIENT, SUFFER.

Note: “Longsuffering is that quality of selfrestraint in the face of provocation which does not hastily retaliate or promptly punish; it is the opposite of anger, and is associated with mercy, and is used of God, Ex. 34:6 (Sept.); Rom. 2:4; 1 Pet. 3:20. Patience is the quality that does not surrender to circumstances or succumb under trial; it is the opposite of despondency and is associated with hope, 1 Thess. 1:3; it is not used of God.”*

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 183, 184.

1. blepo (βλέπω, 991), primarily, “to have sight, to see,” then, “observe, discern, perceive,” frequently implying special contemplation (cf. No. 4), is rendered by the verb “to look” in Luke 9:62, “looking (back)”; John 13:22 “(the disciples) looked (one on another)”; Acts 1:9, RV, “were looking” (KJV, “beheld”); 3:4, “look (on us)”; 27:12, RV, looking,” KJV, “that lieth (towards),” of the haven Phenix; Eph. 5:15, RV, “look (therefore carefully how ye walk),” KJV, “see (that ye walk circumspectly)”; Rev. 11:9 and 18:9, RV, “look upon” (KJV, “shall see”). See BEHOLD.

2. anablepo (ἀναβλέπω, 308), denotes (a) “to look up” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), e.g., Matt. 14:19; Mark 8:24 (in some mss. v. 25); (b) “to recover sight,” e.g., Matt. 11:5; 20:34, RV, “received their sight”; John 9:11. See SIGHT. Cf. anablepsis, “recovering of sight,” Luke 4:18.

3. periblepo (περιβλέπω, 4017), “to look about, or round about, on” (peri, “around,” and No. 1), is used in the middle voice, Mark 3:5, 34, 5:32; 9:8; 10:23; 11:11; Luke 6:10.¶

4. apoblepo (ἀποβλέπω, 578) signifies “to look away from” (apo) all else at one object; hence, “to look steadfastly,” Heb. 11:26, RV, “he looked” (KJV, “he had respect”).¶ Cf. No. 8.

5. emblepo (ἐμβλέπω, 1689), to look at (en, in, and No. 1), is translated “to look upon” in Mark 10:27; 14:67; Luke 22:61; John 1:36. This verb implies a close, penetrating “look,” as distinguished from Nos. 6 and 9. See BEHOLD, No. 3, GAZE, SEE, No. 6.

6. epiblepo (ἐπιβλέπω, 1914), “to look upon” (epi, “upon”), is used in the NT of favorable regard, Luke 1:48, RV, “he hath looked upon” (KJV, “hath regarded”), of the low estate of the Virgin Mary; in 9:38, in a request to the Lord to “look” upon an afflicted son; in Jas. 2:3, RV, “ye have regard” (KJV, “... respect”), of having a partial regard for the well-to-do. See REGARD, RESPECT.¶

7. eidon (ὀράω, 3708), used as the aorist tense of horao, “to see,” in various senses, is translated “to look,” in the KJV of John 7:52, RV, “see;” Rev. 4:1 (RV, “I saw”); so in 6:8; 14:1, 14 (as in KJV of v. 6), and 15:5. See BEHOLD, CONSIDER, HEED, No. 2, PERCEIVE, SEE, SHEW.

8. aphorao (ἀφοράω, 872), “to look away from one thing so as to see another” (apo, “from,” and No. 7), “to concentrate the gaze upon,” occurs in Phil. 2:23, “I shall see;” Heb. 12:2, “looking.”¶

9. epeidon (ἐπεῖδον, 1896) denotes “to look upon” (epi, “upon”), (a) favorably, Luke 1:25 (b) unfavorably, in Acts 4:29.¶

10. parakupto (παράκύπτω, 3879), lit. and primarily, “to stoop sideways” para, “aside,” kupto, “to bend forward”), denotes “to stoop to look into,” Luke 24:12, “stooping and looking in” (KJV, “stooping down”), John 20:5, 11; metaphorically in Jas. 1:25, of “looking” into the perfect law of liberty; in 1 Pet. 1:12 of things which the angels desire “to look into.”¶

11. anakupō (ἀνακύπτω, 352), “to lift oneself up” (ana, “up”), is translated “look up” in Luke 21:28, of being elated in joyous expectation (followed by epairo, “to lift up”). See LIFT.

12. skopeō (σκοπέω, 4648), “to look at, consider” (Eng., “scope”), implying mental consideration, is rendered “while we look ... at” in 2 Cor. 4:18; “looking to” (KJV, “on”) in Phil. 2:4. See HEED, MARK.

13. episkopeō (ἐπισκοπέω, 1983), lit., “to look upon” (epi, and No. 12), is rendered “looking carefully” in Heb. 12:15, RV (KJV, “looking diligently”), epi being probably intensive here; in 1 Pet. 5:2, “to exercise the oversight, to visit, care for.” See OVERSIGHT.¶

14. episkeptomai (ἐπισκέπτομαι, 1980), a later form of No. 13, “to visit,” has the meaning of “seeking out,” and is rendered “look ye out” in Acts 6:3. See VISIT.

15. atenizō (ἀτενίζω, 816), “to look fixedly, gaze,” is translated “looking steadfastly” in Luke 22:56, RV (KJV, “... earnestly”); in Acts 1:10, “looking steadfastly;” in 3:12, KJV, “look ... earnestly” (RV, “fasten ye your eyes,” as in 3:4 and 11:6); so in the RV of 6:15; 10:4; 13:9; 14:9; in 7:55, “looked up steadfastly,” in 23:1, “looking steadfastly on” (KJV, “earnestly beholding”); in 2 Cor. 3:7, RV, “look steadfastly” (KJV, “steadfastly behold”); in 3:13, RV, ditto (KJV, “steadfastly look”). In Luke 4:20, “were fastened” (ophthalmoi, “eyes,” being used separately). See BEHOLD, No. 10.¶

16. theaomai (θεάομαι, 2300), “to behold” (of careful contemplation), is translated “look” in John 4:35, of “looking” on the fields; in 1 John 1:1, KJV (RV, “we beheld”), of the apostles’ personal experiences of Christ in the days of His flesh, and the facts of His Godhood and Manhood. See BEHOLD, No. 8.

17. theoreō (θεωρέω, 2334), “to look at, gaze at, behold,” is translated “looking on” in Mark 15:40, KJV (RV, “beholding”). See BEHOLD, No. 6.

B. Noun.

horasis (ὄρασις, 3706), akin to A, No. 7, denotes (a) a vision (so the associated noun horama, e.g., Acts 7:31; horasis signifies especially the act of seeing, horama that which is seen), Acts 2:17; Rev. 9:17; (b) an appearance, Rev. 4:3, translated “to look upon” (twice in the RV; In the second instance the KJV has “in sight”).¶

LOOK (for), LOOKING (after, for)

A. Verbs.

1. prosdokao (προσδοκάω, 4328), “to await, expect” (pros, “to” or “towards,” dokeo, “to think, be of opinion”), is translated “to look for,” e.g., in Matt. 11:3; 2 Pet. 3:12, 13, 14; the RV renders it by the verb “to expect, to be in expectation,” in some instances, as does the KJV in Luke 3:15; Acts 3:5, See EXPECT.

2. prosdéchomai (προσδέχομαι, 4327), “to receive favorably,” also means “to expect,” and is rendered “to look for,” e.g., in Luke 2:38; 23:51; Acts 24:15, RV (KJV, “allow”); Titus 2:13; Jude 21. See ACCEPT, A, No. 3, ALLOW, No. 4.

3. ekdechomai (ἐκδέχομαι, 1551), primarily “to receive from another,” hence, “to expect, to await,” is translated “he looked for” in Heb. 11:10; in 1 Cor. 16:11, KJV, “I look for” (RV, “I expect”). See EXPECT, No. 1.

Notes: (1) In Phil. 3:20 and Heb. 9:28, KJV, apekdechomai (the verb in the preceding No. extended by apo, “from”), “to await” or “expect eagerly,” is translated “look for” (RV, “wait for”; so KJV everywhere else). See WAIT. (2) In Acts 28:6, KJV, prosdokao, “to expect,” is translated “they looked” (RV, “they expected”), and “they had looked” (RV, “they were long in expectation”).

B. Nouns.

1. prosdokia (προσδοκία, 4329); akin to A, No. 1, is translated “a looking after” in Luke 21:26, KJV (“expectation,” as in Acts 12:11, KJV and RV). See EXPECTATION.¶

2. ekdoche (ἐκδοχή, 1561), akin to A, No. 3, is translated “looking for” in Heb. 10:27, KJV. See EXPECTATION.¶

LOOK (to)

1. blepo (βλέπω, 991), “to look” (see LOOK, No. 1), has the meaning of “taking heed, looking to oneself,” in 2 John 8. See HEED.

2. horao (ὁράω, 3708), “to see” (see LOOK, No. 7), has the meaning of “seeing to” or “caring for a thing” in Matt. 27:4, “see (thou to it);” in Acts 18:15, “look to it (yourselves);” the future (sing. opsei, plural, opsesthe), is used for the tense which is wanting in horao, and stands for the imperative.

LOOSE

A. Verbs.

1. luo (λύω, 3089) denotes (a) “to loose, unbind, release,” (1) of things, e.g., in Acts 7:33, RV, “loose (the shoes),” KJV, “put off”; Mark 1:7; (2) of animals, e.g., Matt. 21:2; (3) of persons, e.g., John 11:44; Acts 22:30; (4) of Satan, Rev. 20:3, 7, and angels, Rev. 9:14, 15; (5) metaphorically, of one diseased, Luke 13:16; of the marriage tie, 1 Cor. 7:27; of release from sins, Rev. 1:5 (in the most authentic mss.); (b) “to loosen, break up, dismiss, dissolve, destroy”; in this sense it is translated “to loose” in Acts 2:24, of the pains of death; in Rev. 5:2, of the seals of a roll. See BREAK, DESTROY, DISSOLVE, MELT, PUT (off), UNLOOSE.

2. apoluo (ἀπολύω, 630), apo, “from,” and No. 1, denotes (a) “to set free, release,” translated “loosed” in Luke 13:12, of deliverance from an infirmity; in Matt. 18:27, KJV, “loosed” (RV, “released”), of a debtor; (b) “to let go, dismiss,” e.g., Matt. 14:15, 22. See DEPART, DISMISS, DIVORCE, FORGIVE, LET (go), LIBERTY, PUT (away), RELEASE, SEND (away).

3. aniemi (ἀνίημι, 447), “to send back” (ana, “back,” hiemi, “to send”), “to leave, forbear,” is translated “to loose,” in Acts 16:26, of the “loosening” of bonds; 27:40, rudder bands. Elsewhere, Eph. 6:9; Heb. 13:5. See FORBEAR, LEAVE.¶

4. anago (ἀνάγω, 321): see LAUNCH.

Notes: (1) In Acts 27:13, KJV, airo, “to lift,” is translated “loosing (thence)” (RV, “they weighed anchor”). (2) For katargeo, translated “she is loosed” in Rom. 7:2, KJV (RV “discharged”), see ABOLISH.

B. Noun.

luisis (λύσις, 3080), “a loosening” (akin to A, No. 1), 1 Cor. 7:27, of divorce, is translated “to be loosed,” lit., “loosing.” In the second part of the verse the verb luo is used.¶ In the Sept., Eccl. 8:1, with the meaning “interpretation.”¶

LORD, LORDSHIP

A. Nouns.

1. kurios (κύριος, 2962), properly an adjective, signifying “having power” (kuros) or “authority,” is used as a noun, variously translated in the NT, “ ‘Lord,’ ‘master,’ ‘Master,’ ‘owner,’ ‘Sir,’ a title of wide significance, occurring in each book of the NT save Titus and the Epistles of John. It is used (a) of an owner, as in Luke 19:33, cf. Matt. 20:8; Acts 16:16; Gal. 4:1; or of one who has the disposal of anything, as the Sabbath, Matt. 12:8; (b) of a master, i.e., one to whom service is due on any ground, Matt. 6:24; 24:50; Eph. 6:5; (c) of an Emperor or King, Acts 25:26; Rev. 17:14; (d) of idols, ironically, 1 Cor. 8:5, cf. Isa. 26:13; (e) as a title of respect addressed to a father, Matt. 21:30, a husband, 1 Pet. 3:6, a master, Matt. 13:27; Luke 13:8, a ruler, Matt. 27:63, an angel, Acts 10:4; Rev. 7:14; (f) as a title of courtesy addressed to a stranger, John 12:21; 20:15; Acts 16:30; from the outset of His ministry this was a common form of address to the Lord Jesus, alike by the people, Matt. 8:2; John 4:11, and by His disciples, Matt. 8:25; Luke 5:8; John 6:68; (g) kurios is the Sept. and NT representative of Heb. Jehovah (‘LORD’ in Eng. versions), see Matt. 4:7; Jas. 5:11, e.g., of adon, Lord, Matt. 22:44, and of Adonay, Lord, 1:22; it also occurs for Elohim, God, 1 Pet. 1:25.

“Thus the usage of the word in the NT follows two main lines: one—a—f, customary and general, the other, g, peculiar to the Jews, and drawn from the Greek translation of the OT.

“Christ Himself assumed the title, Matt. 7:21, 22; 9:38; 22:41-45; Mark 5:19 (cf. Ps. 66:16; the parallel passage, Luke 8:39, has ‘God’); Luke 19:31; John 13:13, apparently intending it in the higher senses of its current use, and at the same time suggesting its OT associations.

“His purpose did not become clear to the disciples until after His resurrection, and the revelation of His Deity consequent thereon. Thomas, when he realized the significance of the presence of a mortal wound in the body of a living man, immediately joined with it the absolute title of Deity, saying, ‘My Lord and my God,’ John 20:28. Thereafter, except in Acts 10:4 and Rev. 7:14, there is no record that kurios was ever again used by believers in addressing any save God and the Lord Jesus; cf Acts 2:47 with 4:29, 30.

“How soon and how completely the lower meaning had been superseded is seen in Peter’s declaration in his first sermon after the resurrection, ‘God hath made Him—Lord,’ Acts 2:36, and that in the house of Cornelius, ‘He is Lord of all,’ 10:36, cf. Deut. 10:14; Matt. 11:25; Acts 17:24. In his writings the implications of his early teaching are confirmed and developed. Thus Ps. 34:8, ‘O taste and see that Jehovah is good,’ is applied to the Lord Jesus, 1 Pet. 2:3, and ‘Jehovah of Hosts, Him shall ye sanctify,’ Isa. 8:13, becomes ‘sanctify in your hearts Christ as Lord,’ 3:15.

“So also James who uses kurios alike of God, 1:7 (cf. v. 5); 3:9; 4:15; 5:4, 10, 11, and of the Lord Jesus, 1:1 (where the possibility that kai is intended epexegetically, i.e. = even, cf. 1 Thess. 3:11, should not be overlooked); 2:1 (lit., ‘our Lord Jesus Christ of glory,’ cf. Ps. 24:7; 29:3; Acts 7:2; 1 Cor. 2:8); 5:7, 8, while the language of 4:10; 5:15, is equally applicable to either.

“Jude, v. 4, speaks of ‘our only—Lord, Jesus Christ,’ and immediately, v. 5, uses ‘Lord’ of God (see the remarkable marg. here), as he does later, vv. 9, 14.

“Paul ordinarily uses kurios of the Lord Jesus, 1 Cor. 1:3, e.g., but also on occasion, of God, in quotations from the OT, 1 Cor. 3:20, e.g., and in his own words, 1 Cor. 3:5, cf. v. 10. It is equally appropriate to either in 1 Cor. 7:25; 2 Cor. 3:16; 8:21; 1 Thess. 4:6, and if 1 Cor. 11:32 is to be interpreted by 10:21, 22, the Lord Jesus is intended, but if by Heb. 12:5-9, then kurios here also = God. 1 Tim. 6:15, 16 is probably to be understood of the Lord Jesus, cf. Rev. 17:14.

“Though John does not use ‘Lord’ in his Epistles, and though, like the other Evangelists, he ordinarily uses the personal Name in his narrative, yet he occasionally speaks of Him as ‘the Lord,’ John 4:1; 6:23; 11:2; 20:20; 21:12.

“The full significance of this association of Jesus with God under the one appellation, ‘Lord,’ is seen when it is remembered that these men belonged to the only monotheistic race in the world. To associate with the Creator one known to be a creature, however exalted, though possible to Pagan philosophers, was quite impossible to a Jew.

“It is not recorded that in the days of His flesh any of His disciples either addressed the Lord, or spoke of Him, by His personal Name. Where Paul has occasion to refer to the facts of the gospel history he speaks of what the Lord Jesus said, Acts 20:35, and did, 1 Cor. 11:23, and suffered, 1 Thess. 2:15; 5:9, 10. It is our Lord Jesus who is coming, 1 Thess. 2:19, etc. In prayer also the title is given, 3:11; Eph. 1:3; the sinner is invited to believe on the Lord Jesus, Acts 16:31; 20:21, and the saint to look to the Lord Jesus for deliverance, Rom. 7:24, 25, and in the few exceptional cases in which the personal Name stands alone a reason is always discernible in the immediate context.

“The title ‘Lord,’ as given to the Savior, in its full significance rests upon the resurrection, Acts 2:36; Rom. 10:9; 14:9, and is realized only in the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. 12:3.”*

2. despotes (δεσπότης, 1203), “a master, lord, one who possesses supreme authority,” is used in personal address to God in Luke 2:29; Acts 4:24; Rev. 6:10; with reference to Christ, 2 Pet. 2:1; Jude 4; elsewhere it is translated “master,” “masters,” 1 Tim. 6:1, 2; 2 Tim. 2:21 (of Christ); Titus 2:9; 1 Pet. 2:18. See MASTER.¶

Note: For rabboni, rendered “Lord” in the KJV of Mark 10:51, see RABBONI.

3. megistan (μεγιστᾶνες, 3175**), akin to megistos, “greatest,” the superlative degree of megas, “great,” denotes “chief men, nobles,” it is rendered “lords” in Mark 6:21, of nobles in Herod’s entourage; “princes” in Rev. 6:15 and 18:23, RV (KJV, “great men”).¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine p.25.

B. Verbs.

1. kurieuo (κυριεύω, 2961) denotes “to be lord of, to exercise lordship over,” Luke 22:25; Rom. 6:9, 14; 7:1; 14:9; 2 Cor. 1:24; 1 Tim. 6:15; see DOMINION, B, No. 1.¶

2. katakurieuo (κατακυριεύω, 2634), a strengthened form of No. 1, is rendered “lording it” in 1 Pet. 5:3, RV: see DOMINION, B, No. 2.

C. Adjective.

kuriakos (κυριακός, 2960), from kurios (A, No. 1), signifies “pertaining to a lord or master”; “lordly” is not a legitimate rendering for its use in the NT, where it is used only of Christ; in 1 Cor. 11:20, of the Lord’s Supper, or the Supper of the Lord (see FEAST); in Rev. 1:10, of the Day of the Lord (see DAY, No. 1).¶

LOSE, (suffer) LOSS, LOST

1. apollumi (ἀπόλλυμι, 622) signifies (I) In the active voice, (a) “to destroy, destroy utterly, kill,” e.g., Matt. 10:28; Mark 1:24; 9:22; (b) “to lose utterly,” e.g., Matt. 10:42, of “losing” a reward; Luke 15:4 (1st part), of “losing” a sheep; Luke 9:25, of “losing” oneself (of the “loss” of well-being hereafter); metaphorically, John 6:39, of failing to save; 18:9, of Christ’s not “losing” His own; (II), in the middle voice (a) “to perish,” of things, e.g., John 6:12 “(that nothing) be lost”; of persons, e.g., Matt. 8:25, “we perish,” of the “loss” of eternal life, usually (always in the RV) translated to perish, John 3:16; 17:12, KJV, “is lost,” RV, “perished”; 2 Cor. 4:3, “are perishing,” KJV, “are lost” (see PERISH); (b) “to be lost,” e.g., Luke 15:4 (2nd part), “which is lost”; metaphorically, from the relation between shepherd and flock, of spiritual destitution and alienation from God, Matt. 10:6, “(the) lost (sheep)” of the house of Israel; Luke 19:10 (the perfect tense translated “lost” is here intransitive). See DESTROY.

2. zemioo (ζημιόω, 2210), “to damage” (akin to zemia, “damage,” e.g., Acts 27:10, 21), is used in the NT, in the passive voice, signifying “to suffer loss, forfeit, lose,” Matt. 16:26; Mark 8:36, of losing one’s soul or life; Luke 9:25, RV, “forfeit (his own self),” KJV, “be cast away” (for the preceding verb see No. 1); 1 Cor. 3:15, “he shall suffer loss,” i.e., at the Judgment-Seat of Christ (see v. 13 with 2 Cor. 5:10); 2 Cor. 7:9, “(that) ye might suffer loss,” RV (KJV, “might receive damage”); though the apostle did regret the necessity of making them sorry by his letter, he rejoiced that they were made sorry after a godly sort, and that they thus suffered no spiritual loss, which they would have done had their sorrow been otherwise than after a godly manner; in Phil. 3:8, “I suffered the loss (of all things),” RV, i.e., of all things which he formerly counted gain (especially those in verses 5 and 6, to which the article before “all things” points). See CAST, FORFEIT.¶

LOSS

1. zemia (ζημία, 2209), akin to No. 2, above, is used in Acts 27:10, RV, “loss” (KJV, “damage”); v. 21, KJV and RV, “loss,” of ship and cargo; in Phil. 3:7, 8 of the apostle’s estimate of the things which he formerly valued, and of all things on account of “the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus.”¶

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

2. apobole (ἀποβολή, 580), lit., “casting away” (apo, “away,” ballo, “to cast”), is translated “loss” in Acts 27:22; in Rom. 11:15, “casting away,” of the temporary exclusion of the nation of Israel from its position of divine favor involving the reconciling of the world (i.e., the provision made through the gospel, which brings the world within the scope of reconciliation).¶

3. hettema (ἥττημα, 2275) denotes “a defect, loss,” Rom. 11:12, RV, “loss,” KJV, “diminishing” (for the meaning of which in regard to Israel see No. 2); 1 Cor. 6:7, RV, “defect” (KJV, “fault”). See DEFECT.

Note: For “suffer loss” see LOSE, No. 2.

LOT, LOTS

A. Noun.

kleros (κληρος, 2819) denotes (a) an object used in casting or drawing lots, which consisted of bits, or small tablets, of wood or stone (the probable derivation is from klao, “to break”); these were sometimes inscribed with the names of persons, and were put into a receptacle or a garment (“a lap,” Prov. 16:33), from which they were cast, after being shaken together; he whose “lot” first fell out was the one chosen. The method was employed in a variety of circumstances, e.g., of dividing or assigning property, Matt. 27:35; Mark 15:24; Luke 23:34; John 19:24 (cf., e.g., Num. 26:55); of appointing to office, Acts 1:26 (cf, e.g., 1 Sam. 10:20); for other occurrences in the OT, see, e.g., Josh. 7:14 (the earliest instance in Scripture), Lev. 16:7-10; Esth. 3:7; 9:24; (b) “what is obtained by lot, an allotted portion,” e.g., of the ministry allotted to the apostles, Acts 1:17, RV, “portion,” marg., “lot” (KJV, “part”); in some mss. v. 25, KJV, “part” (the RV follows those which have topos, “place”); Acts 8:21; it is also used like kleronomia, “an inheritance,” in Acts 26:18, of what God has in grace assigned to the sanctified; so Col. 1:12; in 1 Pet. 5:3 it is used of those the spiritual care of, and charge over, whom is assigned to elders, RV, “the charge allotted to you” (plural, lit., “the charges”), KJV, “(God’s) heritage.” From kleros the word “clergy” is derived (a transposition in the application of the term). See CHARGE, No. 4.¶

B. Verb.

lanchano (λαγχάνω, 2975) denotes (a) “to draw lots,” John 19:24; (b) “to obtain by lot, to obtain,” Luke 1:9, “his lot was,” lit., “he received by lot,” i.e., by divine appointment; Acts 1:17, of the portion “allotted” by the Lord to His apostles in their ministry (cf. A, above); 2 Pet. 1:1, “that have obtained (a like precious faith),” i.e., by its being “allotted” to them, not by acquiring it for themselves, but by divine grace (an act independent of human control, as in the casting of “lots”). See OBTAIN.¶

Note: For divide by lot see DIVIDE.

LOUD

megas (μέγας, 3173), “great,” is used, besides other meanings, of intensity, as, e.g., of the force of a voice, e.g., Matt. 27:46, 50; in the following the RV has “great” for the KJV, “loud,” Rev. 5:2, 12; 6:10; 7:2, 10; 8:13; 10:3; 12:10; 14:7, 9, 15, 18. See GREAT.

LOVE (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. agapao (ἀγαπάω, 25) and the corresponding noun agape (B, No. 1 below) present “the characteristic word of Christianity, and since the Spirit of revelation has used it to express ideas previously unknown, inquiry into its use, whether in Greek literature or in the Septuagint, throws but little light upon its distinctive meaning in the NT. Cf, however, Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:5.

“Agape and agapao are used in the NT (a) to describe the attitude of God toward His Son, John 17:26; the human race, generally, John 3:16; Rom. 5:8, and to such as believe on the Lord Jesus Christ particularly John 14:21; (b) to convey His will to His children concerning their attitude one toward another, John 13:34, and toward all men, 1 Thess. 3:12; 1 Cor. 16:14; 2 Pet. 1:7; (c) to express the essential nature of God, 1 John 4:8.

“Love can be known only from the actions it prompts. God’s love is seen in the gift of His Son, 1 John 4:9, 10. But obviously this is not the love of complacency, or affection, that is, it was not drawn out by any excellency in its objects, Rom. 5:8. It was an exercise of the divine will in deliberate choice, made without assignable cause save that which lies in the nature of God Himself, Cf. Deut. 7:7, 8.

“Love had its perfect expression among men in the Lord Jesus Christ, 2 Cor. 5:14; Eph. 2:4; 3:19; 5:2; Christian love is the fruit of His Spirit in the Christian, Gal. 5:22.

“Christian love has God for its primary object, and expresses itself first of all in implicit obedience to His commandments, John 14:15, 21, 23; 15:10; 1 John 2:5; 5:3; 2 John 6. Selfwill, that is, self-pleasing, is the negation of love to God.

“Christian love, whether exercised toward the brethren, or toward men generally, is not an impulse from the feelings, it does not always run with the natural inclinations, nor does it spend itself only upon those for whom some affinity is discovered. Love seeks the welfare of all, Rom. 15:2, and works no ill to any, 13:8-10; love seeks opportunity to do good to ‘all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith,’ Gal. 6:10. See further 1 Cor. 13 and Col. 3:12-14.”*

In respect of agapao as used of God, it expresses the deep and constant “love” and interest of a perfect Being towards entirely unworthy objects, producing and fostering a reverential “love” in them towards the Giver, and a practical “love” towards those who are partakers of the same, and a desire to help others to seek the Giver. See BELOVED.

2. phileo (φιλέω, 5368) is to be distinguished from agapao in this, that phileo more nearly represents “tender affection.” The two words are used for the “love” of the Father for the Son, John 3:35 (No. 1), and 5:20 (No. 2); for the believer, 14:21 (No. 1) and 16:27 (No. 2); both, of Christ’s “love” for a certain disciple, 13:23 (No. 1), and 20:2 (No. 2). Yet the distinction between the two verbs remains, and they are never used indiscriminately in the same passage; if each is used with reference to the same objects, as just mentioned, each word retains its distinctive and essential character.

Phileo is never used in a command to men to “love” God; it is, however, used as a warning in 1 Cor. 16:22; agapao is used instead, e.g., Matt. 22:37; Luke 10:27; Rom. 8:28; 1 Cor. 8:3; 1 Pet. 1:8; 1 John 4:21. The distinction between the two verbs finds a conspicuous instance in the narrative of John 21:15-17. The context itself indicates that agapao in the first two questions suggests the “love” that values and esteems (cf. Rev.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 105.

12:11). It is an unselfish “love,” ready to serve. The use of phileo in Peter’s answers and the Lord’s third question, conveys the thought of cherishing the Object above all else, of manifesting an affection characterized by constancy, from the motive of the highest veneration. See also Trench, Syn., Sec.xii.

Again, to “love” (phileo) life, from an undue desire to preserve it, forgetful of the real object of living, meets with the Lord’s reproof, John 12:25. On the contrary, to “love” life (agapao) as used in 1 Pet. 3:10, is to consult the true interests of living. Here the word phileo would be quite inappropriate.

Note: In Mark 12:38, KJV, thelo, “to wish,” is translated “love” (RV, “desire”).

B. Nouns.

1. agape (ἀγάπη, 26), the significance of which has been pointed out in connection with A, No. 1, is always rendered “love” in the RV where the KJV has “charity,” a rendering nowhere used in the RV; in Rom. 14:15, where the KJV has “charitably,” the RV, adhering to the translation of the noun, has “in love.”

Note: In the two statements in 1 John 4:8 and 16, “God is love,” both are used to enjoin the exercise of “love” on the part of believers. While the former introduces a declaration of the mode in which God’s love has been manifested (vv. 9, 10), the second introduces a statement of the identification of believers with God in character, and the issue at the Judgment Seat hereafter (v. 17), an identification represented ideally in the sentence “as He is, so are we in this world.”

2. philanthropia (φιλάνθρωπία, 5363) denotes, lit., “love for man” (phileo and anthropos, “man”); hence, “kindness,” Acts 28:2, in Titus 3:4, “(His) love toward man.”¶ Cf. the adverb philanthropos, “humanely, kindly,” Acts 27:3.¶

Note: For philarguria, “love of money,” 1 Tim. 6:10, see MONEY (love of). For philadelphia, see BROTHER, Note (1).

LOVE FEASTS

agape (ἀγάπη, 26) is used in the plural in Jude 12, and in some mss. in 2 Pet. 2:13; RV marg., “many ancient authorities read ‘deceivings,’” (apatais); so the KJV. These love feasts arose from the common meals of the early churches (cf. 1 Cor. 11:21). They may have had this origin in the private meals of Jewish households, with the addition of the observance of the Lord’s Supper. There were, however, similar common meals among the pagan religious brotherhoods. The evil dealt with at Corinth (1.c.) became enhanced by the presence of immoral persons, who degraded the feasts into wanton banquets, as mentioned in 2 Pet. and Jude. In later times the agape became detached from the Lord’s Supper.

LOVELY

prospiles (προσφιλής, 4375), “pleasing, agreeable, lovely” (pros, “toward,” phileo, “to love”), occurs in Phil. 4:8.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 5:1 (3rd sentence).

LOVER

This is combined with other words, forming compound adjectives as follows:

1. philotheos (φιλόθεος, 5377), “a lover of God,” 2 Tim. 3:4.¶

2. philoxenos (φιλόξενος, 5382), “loving strangers” (xenia, “hospitality”), translated “a lover of hospitality” in Titus 1:8, KJV (RV, “given to h.”); elsewhere, in 1 Tim. 3:2; 1 Pet. 4:9. See HOSPITALITY.¶

3. philagathos (φιλάγαθος, 5358), “loving that which is good” (agathos), Titus 1:8, “a lover of good,” RV.¶

Note: The negative aphilagathos is found in 2 Tim. 3:3, “no lovers of good.”¶

4. philarguros (φιλάργυρος, 5366), “loving money” (arguros, “silver”), translated “lovers of money” in Luke 16:14; 2 Tim. 3:2, RV (KJV, “covetous”). See COVETOUS.¶

5. philautos (φίλαυτος, 5367), “loving oneself,” 2 Tim. 3:2, RV.¶

6. philedonos (φιλήδονος, 5369), “loving pleasure” (hedone, “pleasure”), 2 Tim. 3:4, “lovers of pleasure.”¶

Note: For “loving warmly,” Rom. 12:10, see AFFECTION, B, No. 2.¶ For aphilarguros, “no lover of money,” 1 Tim. 3:3, RV, and Heb. 13:5, RV, see COVETOUS.¶

LOW (to bring, to make), LOW (estate, degree)

A. Verb.

tapeinoō (ταπεινῶω, 5013), “to bring low, to humble,” is translated “shall be brought low” in Luke 3:5. See HUMBLE.

B. Adjective.

tapeinos (ταπεινός, 5011) denotes “of low degree or estate,” Rom. 12:16, “things that are lowly,” RV (KJV, “men of low estate”). See BASE, DEGREE, ESTATE, HUMBLE, LOWLY.

C. Noun.

tapeinosis (ταπείνωσις, 5014), “abasement, humiliation, low estate,” is translated “low estate” in Luke 1:48; in Jas. 1:10, “that he is made low,” lit., “in his abasement.” See HUMILIATION.

LOWER (Adjective, and Verb, to make), LOWEST

A. Adjectives.

1. katoteros (κατώτερος, 2737), the comparative degree of kato, “beneath,” is used in Eph. 4:9, of Christ’s descent into “the lower parts of the earth”; two of the various interpretations of this phrase are (1) that the earth is in view in contrast to heaven, (2) that the region is that of hades, the Sheol of the OT. Inasmuch as the passage is describing the effects not merely of the Incarnation but of the death and resurrection of Christ, the second interpretation is to be accepted; cf., e.g., Ps. 16:10; 63:9; where the Sept. has the superlative; 139:15; Acts 2:31. Moreover, as Westcott says, it is most unlikely that the phrase would be used to describe the earth. The word mere (plural of meros), “parts,” would have no force in such a meaning.¶

2. eschatos (ἔσχατος, 2078), “last, utmost, lowest,” is rendered “lowest” in Luke 14:9, 10, of the “lowest” place at a meal. See LAST.

B. Verb.

elattoo (ἐλαττώω, 1642) denotes “to make less” (elattoon, “less”), and is used in the active voice in Heb. 2:7, “Thou madest (Him) ... lower,” and in the passive in v. 9, “was made ... lower,” and John 3:30, “(I must) decrease,” (lit., “be made less”).¶

LOWER (Verb, to let down) See LET DOWN, NO. 2 (d)

LOWLINESS, LOWLY

A. Noun.

tapeinophrosune (ταπεινοφροσύνη, 5012), “lowliness of mind, humbleness,” is translated “lowliness” or “lowliness of mind” in Acts 20:19, RV; Eph. 4:2; Phil. 2:3. See HUMBLENESS OF MIND.

B. Adjective.

tapeinos (ταπεινός, 5011), “low, lowly”: see HUMBLE and LOW, B.

LOWRING (to be) stugnazo (στυγνάζω, 4768), “to have a gloomy, somber appearance” (akin to stugnos, “somber, gloomy,” from a root stug□, “to hate”; cf. stugetos, “hateful,” Titus 3:3), is said of the human countenance, Mark 10:22, RV, “his countenance fell” (KJV, “he was sad”); of the sky, Matt. 16:3, “lowring.” See COUNTENANCE, Note (3).¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 27:35; 28:19; 32:10.¶

LUCRE (filthy)

A. Noun.

kerdos (κέρδος, 2771), “gain” (cf. kerdaino, “to gain, get gain”), is translated “gain” in Phil. 1:21 and 3:7; “lucre” in Titus 1:11 (preceded by aischros, “filthy”). See GAIN.¶

B. Adjective.

aischrokerdes (αἰσχροκερδής, 146) denotes “greedy of base gains” (aischros, and A, as above), 1 Tim. 3:8, “greedy of filthy lucre”; so the RV in Titus 1:7, KJV, “given to filthy lucre.” In some mss. 1 Tim. 3:3.¶

aischrokerdos (αἰσχροκερδῶς, 147) denotes “from eagerness for base gain,” 1 Pet. 5:2, “for filthy lucre.”¶

chliaros (χλιαρός, 5513), “tepid, warm” (akin to chlio, “to become warm,” not found in the NT or Sept.), is used metaphorically in Rev. 3:16, of the state of the Laodicean church, which afforded no refreshment to the Lord, such as is ministered naturally by either cold or hot water.¶

phurama (φύραμα, 5445) denotes “that which is mixed or kneaded” (phurao, “to mix”) hence, “a lump,” either of dough, Rom. 11:16 (cf. Num. 15:21); 1 Cor. 5:6, 7; Gal. 5:9 (see under LEAVEN); of potter’s clay, Rom. 9:21.¶

For LUNATIC see EPILEPTIC

LUST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. epithumia (ἐπιθυμία, 1939) denotes “strong desire” of any kind, the various kinds being frequently specified by some adjective (see below). The word is used of a good desire in Luke 22:15; Phil. 1:23, and 1 Thess. 2:17 only. Everywhere else it has a bad sense. In Rom. 6:12 the injunction against letting sin reign in our mortal body to obey the “lust” thereof, refers to those evil desires which are ready to express themselves in bodily activity. They are equally the “lusts” of the flesh, Rom. 13:14; Gal. 5:16, 24; Eph. 2:3; 2 Pet. 2:18; 1 John 2:16, a phrase which describes the emotions of the soul, the natural tendency towards things evil. Such “lusts” are not necessarily base and immoral, they may be refined in character, but are evil if inconsistent with the will of God.

Other descriptions besides those already mentioned are:—“of the mind,” Eph. 2:3; “evil (desire),” Col. 3:5; “the passion of,” 1 Thess. 4:5, RV; “foolish and hurtful,” 1 Tim. 6:9; “youthful,” 2 Tim. 2:22; “divers,” 2 Tim. 3:6 and Titus 3:3; “their own,” 2 Tim. 4:3; 2 Pet. 3:3; Jude 16; “worldly,” Titus 2:12; “his own,” Jas. 1:14; “your former,” 1 Pet. 1:14, RV; “fleshly,” 2:11; “of men,” 4:2; “of defilement,” 2 Pet. 2:10; “of the eyes,” 1 John 2:16; of the world (“thereof”), v. 17; “their own ungodly,” Jude 18. In Rev. 18:14 “(the fruits) which thy soul lusted after” is, lit., “of thy soul’s lust.” See DESIRE, A, No. 1 (where associated words are noted).

2. orexis (ὄρεξις, 3715), lit., “a reaching” or “stretching after” (akin to oregomai, “to stretch oneself out, reach after”), a general term for every kind of desire, is used in Rom. 1:27, “lust.”¶

3. hedone (ἡδονή, 2237), “pleasure,” is translated “lusts,” in the KJV of Jas. 4:1, 3 (RV, “pleasures”). See PLEASURE.

Note: In 1 Thess. 4:5, KJV, pathos, “passion” (RV, “passion”), is translated “lust,” which is the better rendering of the next word epithumia, rendered “concupiscence.” Pathos is described by Trench as “the diseased condition out of which epithumia springs.” In 1 Cor. 12:6: epithumetes, a luster after, is rendered “to lust.”

B. Verb.

epithumeo (ἐπιθυμέω, 1937), akin to A, No. 1, has the same twofold meaning as the noun, namely (a) “to desire,” used of the Holy Spirit against the flesh, Gal. 5:17 (see below); of the Lord Jesus, Luke 22:15, “I have desired;” of the holy angels, 1 Pet. 1:12; of good men, for good things, Matt. 13:17; 1 Tim. 3:1; Heb. 6:11; of men, for things without moral quality, Luke 15:16; 16:21; 17:22; Rev. 9:6; (b) of “evil desires,” in respect of which it is translated “to lust” in Matt. 5:28; 1 Cor. 10:6; Gal. 5:17 (1st part; see below); Jas. 4:2; to covet, Acts 20:23; Rom. 7:7; 13:9. See COVET, DESIRE, B, No. 2.¶

Notes: (1) In Gal. 5:17, in the statement, “the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh,” the Holy Spirit is intended, as in the preceding verse. To walk by the Spirit involves the opposition here referred to. The verb “lusteth” is not repeated in the second part of the statement, but must in some way be supplied. Since in modern English the word “lust” is used exclusively in a bad sense, it is unsuitable as a translation of epithumeo, where the word is used in a good sense. As the rendering “desire” is used of the Lord Jesus (as mentioned above), it may be best so understood here in respect of the Holy Spirit.

(2) In James 4:5 the RV translates correctly in giving two questions, each of a rhetorical character, asked by way of remonstrance. The first draws attention to the fact that it is impossible for the Scripture to speak in vain; the second to the impossibility that the Holy Spirit, whom God has caused to dwell in the believer, should “long (unto envying),” epipotheo (KJV, “lust”). Here again, not the human spirit is in view, but the Spirit of God; cf. 1 Cor. 6:19. See LONG.

For LYING (falsehood) See LIE, and for LYING (in wait) See LIE IN WAIT

M

MAD, MADNESS

A. Verbs.

1. mainomai (μαίνομαι, 3105), “to rage, be mad,” is translated by the verb “to be mad” in John 10:20; Acts 12:15; 26:24, 25; 1 Cor. 14:23; see BESIDE ONESELF, No. 2.

2. emmainomai (ἐμμαίνομαι, 1693), an intensive form of No. 1, prefixed by en, “in,” implying “fierce rage, to be furious against”; it is rendered “being exceedingly mad” in Acts 26:11 (cf. 9:1).¶

B. Nouns.

1. mania (μανία, 3130), akin to A, and transliterated into English, denotes “frenzy, madness,” Acts 26:24 “(thy much learning doth turn thee to) madness,” RV; KJV, “(doth make thee) mad.”¶

2. anoia (ἄνοια, 454), lit., “without understanding” (a, negative, nous, “mind, understanding”), denotes “folly,” 2 Tim. 3:9, and this finding its expression in violent rage, Luke 6:11. See FOLLY.¶

3. paraphronia (παράφρονία, 3913), “madness” (from para, “contrary to,” and phren, “the mind”), is used in 2 Pet. 2:16.¶ Cf. paraphroneo, 2 Cor. 11:23, “I speak like one distraught.”¶

MADE (be) A. Verbs.

1. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is sometimes translated by the passive voice of the verb to make, e.g., Matt. 9:16; John 1:3 (three times), 10; 8:33; Rom. 11:9; 1 Cor. 1:30; 3:13; 4:9, 13; Eph. 2:13; 3:7; Phil. 2:7 (but RV marg., “becoming”); Col. 1:23, 25; Heb. 5:5; 6:4; 7:12, 16, 21, 26; 11:3; Jas. 3:9; 1 Pet. 2:7. In many places the RV translates otherwise, and chiefly by the verb to become, e.g., Matt. 25:6, “there is”; 27:24, “was arising”; John 1:14, “became”; John 2:9, “become”; Rom. 1:3, “born”; 2:25, “is become”; 10:20, “became”; Gal. 3:13, “having become”; 4:4, “born” (twice); Heb. 3:14, “are become”, 7:22, “hath ... become.”

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

2. keimai (κείμεαι, 2749), “to lie,” is sometimes used as the passive voice of tithemi, “to put”; it is translated “is (not) made” in 1 Tim. 1:9, of the Law, where a suitable rendering would be “is (not) enacted.”

Notes: (1) In 2 Pet. 2:12, KJV, the verb gennao, “to beget,” in the passive voice, to be born, is translated “made” (RV, “born”). (2) In Luke 3:5, KJV (3rd statement), the future tense of eimi, “to be,” is translated “shall be made” (RV, “shall become”); in the next sentence there is nothing in the original representing “shall be made.” (3) In Acts 16:13, KJV, the infinitive mood of eimi, “to be,” is translated “to be made” (of prayer), RV, “there was (a place of prayer).” (4) For the translation of words in which the Eng. “made” forms a part of another verb, see under those words, e.g., CONFESSION, KNOWN, LIKE, LOW, PAYMENT, RICH, SUBJECT.

B. Noun.

poiema (ποίημα, 461), whence Eng., “poem,” denotes “that which is made” (from poieo, “to do, make”), Rom. 1:20, “the things that are made”; Eph. 2:10, “(His) workmanship.”¶

MAGISTRATE

1. strategos (στρατηγός, 4755), besides its application to “the captain of the Temple” (see CAPTAIN), denotes “a magistrate or governor,” Acts 16:20, 22, 35, 36, 38. These were, in Latin terminology, the duumviri or praetores, so called in towns which were Roman colonies. They were attended by lictors or “sergeants,” who executed their orders. In the circumstances of Acts 16 they exceeded their powers, in giving orders for Roman citizens to be scourged; hence they became suppliants. See CAPTAIN.

2. archon (ἄρχων, 758), “a ruler,” denotes, in Luke 12:58, “a local authority, a magistrate,” acting in the capacity of one who received complaints, and possessing higher authority than the judge, to whom the “magistrate” remits the case. See CHIEF, PRINCE, RULER.

Notes: (1) In Luke 12:11, KJV, arche, “a beginning, rule, principality,” is translated “magistrates”; the word, however, denotes “rulers” in general: hence the RV, “rulers.” (2) For the KJV of Titus 3:1, “to obey magistrates,” see OBEY, B, No. 3.

MAGNIFICENCE

megaleiotes (μεγαλειότης, 3168) denotes “splendor, magnificence” (from megaleios, “magnificent,” mighty,” Acts 2:11, megas, “great”), translated “magnificence” in Acts 19:27, of the splendor of the goddess Diana. In Luke 9:43, RV (KJV, “mighty power”); in 2 Pet. 1:16, “majesty.” In the papyri writings it is frequent as a ceremonial title.¶

MAGNIFY

megaluno (μεγαλύνω, 3170), “to make great” (megas), is translated “to magnify” in Luke 1:46; in v. 58, RV, “had magnified (His mercy),” KJV, “had shewed great (mercy)”;

Acts 5:13; 10:46; 19:17; 2 Cor. 10:15, RV (KJV, “we shall be enlarged”), i.e., by their faith in its practical effect he will be so assisted as to enlarge the scope of his gospel ministry and carry its message to regions beyond them; in Phil. 1:20, of the “magnifying” of Christ by him in his body, i.e., in all his activities and ways. In Matt. 23:5, it signifies “to enlarge.” See ENLARGE.¶

Note: In Rom. 11:13, KJV, the verb doxazo, “to glorify,” is translated “I magnify (my office),” RV, “I glorify (my ministry).” See GLORIFY.

MAID, MAIDEN, MAIDSERVANT

1. pais (παῖς, 3816), “a child,” denotes “a maid” or “maiden” in Luke 8:51 and 54, RV, “maiden in both places.” See CHILD, MANSERVANT, SERVANT, SON, YOUNG MAN.

2. paidiske (παιδίσκη, 3814), a diminutive of No. 1, is translated “maid,” “maids,” in the KJV and RV in Mark 14:66, 69; Luke 22:56, in the RV (KJV, “damsel”), in Matt. 26:69; John 18:17; Acts 12:13; 16:16; in Luke 12:45, “maidservants” (KJV “maidens”); in Gal. 4:22, 23, 30, 31, RV, “handmaid” (KJV, “bondmaid” or “bondwoman”). See BONDMAID, DAMSEL.¶

3. korasion (κοράσιον, 2877), a colloquial familiar term, is translated “maid” in Matt. 9:24, 25, KJV (RV, “damsel”). See DAMSEL, No. 1.

MAIMED

1. anaperos, or anapeiros (ἀνάπηρος, 376), “crippled, maimed” (from ana, “up,” and peros, “disabled in a limb”), is found in Luke 14:13, 21.¶

2. kullos (κυλλός, 2948) denotes “crooked crippled” (akin to kulio, “to roll”); in Matt. 15:30, 31, translated “maimed”; so in 18:8, KJV (RV, “halt”) and Mark 9:43 (KJV and RV). See HALT.¶

For MAINSAIL See FORESAIL

MAINTAIN

proistemi (προΐστημι, 4291), “to preside rule,” also means “to maintain,” Titus 3:8 and 14, “to maintain (good works),” RV marg., “profess honest occupations” (KJV, marg.... “trades”). The usage of the phrase kala erga (good works) in the Pastoral Epistles is decisive for the rendering “good works,” here. See OVER (TO BE), RULE.

MAJESTY

1. megaleiotes (μεγαλειότης, 3168): see MAGNIFICENCE.

2. megalosune (μεγαλωσύνη, 3172), from megas, “great,” denotes “greatness, majesty”; it is used of God the Father, signifying His greatness and dignity, in Heb. 1:3, “the Majesty (on high),” and 8:1, “the Majesty (in the Heavens)”; and in an ascription of praise acknowledging the attributes of God in Jude 25.¶

MAKE

1. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do, to make,” is used in the latter sense (a) of constructing or producing anything, of the creative acts of God, e.g., Matt. 19:4 (2nd part); Acts 17:24; of the acts of human beings, e.g., Matt. 17:4; Acts 9:39; (b) with nouns denoting a state or condition, to be the author of, to cause, e.g., peace, Eph. 2:15; Jas. 3:18; stumbling blocks, Rom. 16:17; (c) with nouns involving the idea of action (or of something accomplished by action), so as to express the idea of the verb more forcibly (the middle voice is commonly used in this respect, suggesting the action as being of special interest to the doer); for the active voice see, e.g., Mark 2:23, of “making” one’s way, where the idea is not that the disciples “made” a path through the standing corn, but simply that they went, the phrase being equivalent to going, “(they began) as they went (to pluck the ears)”; other instances of the active are Rev. 13:13, 14; 16:14; 19:20; for the middle voice (the dynamic or subjective middle), see, e.g., John 14:23, “will make Our abode”; in Acts 20:24, “none of these things move me,” lit., “I make account of none of these things”; 25:17, “I made no delay” RV, Rom. 15:26; Eph. 4:16; Heb. 1:2; 2 Pet. 1:10; (d) to “make” ready or prepare, e.g., a dinner, Luke 14:12; a supper, John 12:2; (e) to acquire, provide a thing for oneself, Matt. 25:16; Luke 19:18; (J) to render or “make” one or oneself anything, or cause a person or thing to become something, e.g., Matt. 4:19; 12:16, “make (Him known)”; John 5:11, 15, to “make” whole; 16:2, lit., “they shall make (you put out of the synagogue)”; Eph. 2:14; Heb. 1:7; to change one thing into another, Matt. 21:13; John 2:16; 4:46; 1 Cor. 6:15; (g) to constitute one anything, e.g., Acts 2:36, (h) to declare one or oneself anything, John 5:18, “making (Himself equal with God)”; 8:53; 10:33; 19:7, 12; 1 John 1:10; 5:10; (i) to “make” one do a thing, e.g., Luke 5:34; John 6:10; Rev. 3:9. See DO, No. 1, and other renderings there.

2. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put,” is used in the same way as No. 1 (f), Matt. 22:44, Mark 12:36; Luke 20:43; Acts 2:35; 1 Cor. 9:18 (of making the gospel without charge); Heb. 1:13; 10:13; 2 Pet. 2:6; as No. 1 (g), Acts 20:28; Rom. 4:17. See APPOINT, No. 3.

3. diatithemi (διατίθεμαι, 1303), “to covenant,” is rendered “I will make” (the noun diatheke, “a covenant,” being expressed additionally), in the middle voice, in Acts 3:25; Heb. 8:10 and 10:16, lit., “I will covenant” (see RV, marg.). See APPOINT, No. 4.

4. kathistemi (καθίστημι, 2525), “to set down, set in order, appoint,” is used in the same way as No. 1 (g) in Acts 7:10, 27, 35; Heb. 7:28, KV (RV, “appointeth”), as No. 1 (f) in Rom. 5:19 (twice). See APPOINT, No. 2.

5. sunistemi (συνιστάω, 4921), “to commend, prove, establish,” is used in Gal. 2:18, much as in No. 1 (g), “I make myself (a transgressor),” i.e., “I constitute (or prove) myself, etc.” See APPROVE, No. 2.

6. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is used in 2 Thess. 3:9 in much the same sense as No. 1 (g), “to make (ourselves an ensample)”; in Rev. 3:9 (1st part), RV, “I will give,” the sense is virtually the same as poieo in the 2nd part of the verse, see No. 1 (i). See GIVE.

7. epiteleo (ἐπιτελέω, 2005), “to complete,” is translated “to make” in Heb. 8:5 (1st part), RV marg., “complete” [in the 2nd part No. 1 is used in sense (a)]. See ACCOMPLISH.

8. sunteleo (συντελέω, 4931), “to end, fulfilled” is translated “I will make” in Heb. 8:8, said of the New Covenant. See END.

9. eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” is translated “make” in Mark 12:42, lit., “which is (a farthing).”

10. prosopoieo (προσποιέομαι, 4364), primarily “to claim,” is used in the middle voice with the meaning “to make as if,” in Luke 24:28, of the Lord’s action regarding the two on the way to Emmaus.¶ In the Sept., 1 Sam. 21:13; Job 19:14.¶

11. katecho (κατέχω, 2722), “to hold fast” (kata, “down,” intensive, echo, “to hold”), is used of “making” for a place, in Acts 27:40, RV, “they made for” (KJV, “they made toward”). See HOLD.

12. prokatartizo (προκαταρτίζω, 4294), “to render fit” (“fitted”; artos, “a joint”) “beforehand,” is used in 2 Cor. 9:5, “to make up beforehand.”¶

Notes: (1) In Heb. 9:2, KJV, kataskeuazo, “to prepare,” is translated “made” (RV, “prepared”). (2) In Eph. 2:15, KJV, ktizo, “to create,” is translated “make” (RV, “create”). (3) In Acts 26:16, KJV, procheirizo, “to determine, choose,” is translated “make” (RV, “appoint”). (4) In Gal. 3:16, KJV, ero, “to speak,” is translated “were ... made” (RV, “were ... spoken”). (5) In Luke 14:31, KJV, sumballo, “to meet with,” in hostile sense, is rendered in combination with the phrase eis polemon, “in war,” “to make war”; RV, “to encounter (in war).” (6) In Rom. 14:19 “the things which make for peace” is, lit., “the things of peace.” (7) In Acts 22:1 the verb “I make” represents no word in the original, lit., “hear now my defense unto you.” (8) The Eng. verb “to make” forms with many other verbs a rendering of single Greek verbs which are given under the respective headings. (9) For “made,” Luke 19:16, RV, see GAIN, Note (1).

MAKER

demiourgos (δημιουργός, 1217), lit., “one who works for the people” (from demos, “people,” ergon, “work”; an ancient inscription speaks of the magistrates of Tarsus as demiourgoi: the word was formerly used thus regarding several towns in Greece; it is also found used of an artist), came to denote, in general usage, a builder or “maker,” and is used of God as the “Maker” of the heavenly city, Heb. 11:10. In that passage the first word of the two, technites, denotes “an architect, designer,” the second, demiourgos, is the actual Framer, the city is the archetype of the earthly one which God chose for His earthly people.¶ Cf. ktistes, “creator.”

MALE

arsen or arren (ἄρσεν, 730) is translated “men” in Rom. 1:27 (three times); “man child” in Rev. 12:5 (v. 13 in some mss.); “male” in Matt. 19:4; Mark 10:6; Luke 2:23; Gal. 3:28, “(there can be no) male (and female),” RV, i.e. sex distinction does not obtain in Christ; sex is no barrier either to salvation or the development of Christian graces. See MAN.¶

MALEFACTOR

1. kakourgos (κακοῦργος, 2557), an adjective, lit., “evil-working” (kakos, “evil,” ergon, “work”), is used as a noun, translated “malefactor(-s)” in Luke 23:32, 33, 39, and in the RV in 2 Tim. 2:9 (KJV, “evil doer”). See EVIL, B, Note (1). In the Sept., Prov. 21:15.¶

2. kakopoios (κακοποιός, 2555), an adjective, lit., “doing evil,” is used in 1 Pet. 2:12, 14; 3:16 (in some mss.); 4:15. See EVIL, B, No. 5.¶

MALICE, MALICIOUSNESS, MALICIOUS

kakia (κακία, 2549), “badness in quality” (the opposite of arete, “excellence”), “the vicious character generally” (Lightfoot), is translated “malice” in 1 Cor. 5:8; 14:20; Eph. 4:31; Col. 3:8; Titus 3:3; 1 Pet. 2:1, KJV (RV, “wickedness”; marg., “malice”); “maliciousness” in Rom. 1:29; in 1 Pet. 2:16, KJV (RV, “wickedness”; marg., “malice”). Elsewhere, Matt. 6:34; Acts 8:22; Jas. 1:21 (RV marg., “malice”). See EVIL, B, No. 1.¶

Note: In 2 John 10, KJV, poneros, “evil, wicked” (see EVIL, A, No. 2) is translated “malicious” (RV, “wicked”).

MALIGNITY

kakoetheia (κακοήθεια, 2550), lit., “bad manner or character” (kakos, “bad,” ethos, “manner”), hence, “an evil disposition” that tends to put the worst construction on everything, “malice, malevolence, craftiness,” occurs in Rom. 1:29, as the accompaniment of dolos, “guile.”¶

MAMMON

mamonas (μαμμωνᾶς, 3126), a common Aramaic word for “riches,” akin to a Hebrew word signifying “to be firm, steadfast” (whence “Amen”), hence, “that which is to be trusted”; Gesenius regards it as derived from a Heb. word signifying “treasure” (Gen. 43:23); it is personified in Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:9, 11, 13.¶

MAN (See also MEN)

1. anthropos (ἄνθρωπος, 444) is used (a) generally, of “a human being, male or female,” without reference to sex or nationality, e.g., Matt. 4:4; 12:35; John 2:25; (b) in distinction from God, e.g., Matt. 19:6; John 10:33; Gal. 1:11; Col. 3:23; (c) in distinction from animals, etc., e.g., Luke 5:10; (d) sometimes, in the plural, of “men and women,” people, e.g., Matt. 5:13, 16; in Mark 11:2 and 1 Tim. 6:16, lit., “no one of men”; (e) in some instances with a suggestion of human frailty and imperfection e.g., 1 Cor. 2:5; Acts 14:15 (2nd part); (f) in the phrase translated “after man,” “after the manner of men,” “as a man” (KJV), lit. “according to (kata) man,” is used only by the apostle Paul, of “(1) the practices of fallen humanity 1 Cor. 3:3; (2) anything of human origin, Gal. 1:11; (3) the laws that govern the administration of justice among men, Rom. 3:5; (4) the standard generally accepted among men, Gal. 3:15; (5) an illustration not drawn from Scripture, 1 Cor. 9:8; (6) probably = ‘to use a figurative expression’ (see KJV, marg.), i.e., to speak evil of men with whom he had contended at Ephesus as ‘beasts’ (cf. 1 Cor. 4:6), 1 Cor. 15:32; Lightfoot prefers ‘from worldly motives’; but the other interpretation, No. (4), seems to make better sense. See also Rom. 6:19, where, however, the Greek is slightly different, anthropinos, ‘pertaining to mankind’; the meaning is as Nos. (5) and (6).”*

(g) in the phrase “the inward man,” the regenerate person’s spiritual nature personified, the inner self of the believer, Rom. 7:22, as approving of the law of God; in Eph. 3:16, as the sphere of the renewing power of the Holy Spirit; in 2 Cor. 4:16 (where anthropos is not repeated), in contrast to “the outward man,” the physical frame, the “man” as cognizable by the senses; the “inward” man is identical with “the hidden man of the heart,” 1 Pet. 3:4.

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 139.

(h) in the expressions “the old man,” “the new man,” which are confined to Paul’s epistles, the former standing for the unregenerate nature personified as the former self of a believer, which, having been crucified with Christ, Rom. 6:6, is to be apprehended practically as such, and to be “put off,” Eph. 4:22; Col. 3:9, being the source and seat of sin; the latter, “the new man,” standing for the new nature personified as the believer’s regenerate self, a nature “created in righteousness and holiness of truth,” Eph. 4:24, and having been “put on” at regeneration, Col. 3:10; being “renewed after the image of Him that created him,” it is to be “put on” in practical apprehension of these facts.

(i) often joined with another noun, e.g., Matt. 11:19, lit., “a man, a glutton”; 13:52, lit., “a man, a householder”; 18:23, “a certain king,” lit., “a man, a king.”

(j) as equivalent simply to “a person,” or “one,” whether “man” or woman, e.g., Acts 19:16; Rom. 3:28; Gal. 2:16; Jas. 1:19; 2:24; 3:8 (like the pronoun tis, “someone”; tis is rendered “man” in Matt. 8:28); or, again (as tis sometimes signifies), “a man,” e.g., Matt. 17:14; Luke 13:19.

(k) definitely, with the article, of some particular person, Matt. 12:13; Mark 3:3, 5; or with the demonstrative pronoun and the article, e.g., Matt. 12:45; Luke 14:30. For the phrase “the Son of man” see SON OF MAN. For “the man of sin,” 2 Thess. 2:3, see INIQUITY, No. 1.

(1) in the phrase “the man of God,” 2 Tim. 3:17, not used as an official designation, nor denoting a special class of believers, it specifies what every believer should be, namely, a person whose life and conduct represent the mind of God and fulfill His will; so in 1 Tim. 6:11, “O man of God.” Some regard this in the OT sense as of a prophet acting in a distinctive character, possessed of divine authority; but the context is of such a general character as to confirm the more extended designation here.

Notes: (1) In Gal. 3:28, the RV adds the italicized word “man” (“ye all are one man in Christ Jesus”), in accordance with Eph. 2:15, which speaks of Jew and Gentile as becoming “one new man” in Christ. The figure is closely analogous to that of “the body.” In these two passages “one” is masculine, i.e., “one person”; in John 10:30; 11:52; 17:21, 22, 23, “one” is neuter, “one thing,” as in 1 Cor. 3:8; 11:5. The first two, in Gal. 3 and Eph. 2, express vital union, present and eternal; in John 17 the union is moral, a process in course of accomplishment. (2) For philanthropia, Titus 3:4, “(His) love toward man,” see KIND, C, No. 2.

(3) In Rev. 9:20, the RV translates the genitive plural of anthropos with the article, “mankind” (KJV, “the men”); it might have been rendered “(the rest) of men.”

2. aner (ἀνὴρ, 435) is never used of the female sex; it stands (a) in distinction from a woman, Acts 8:12; 1 Tim. 2:12; as a husband, Matt. 1:16; John 4:16; Rom. 7:2; Titus 1:6; (b) as distinct from a boy or infant, 1 Cor. 13:11; metaphorically in Eph. 4:13; (c) in conjunction with an adjective or noun, e.g., Luke 5:8, lit., “a man, a sinner”; 24:19, lit., “a man, a prophet”; often in terms of address, e.g., Acts 1:16; 13:15, 26; 15:7, 13, lit., “men, brethren”; with gentilic or local names (virtually a title of honor), e.g., Acts 2:14; 22:3, lit., “Judean men,” “a Judean man”; 3:12; 5:35, lit., “Israelite men”; 17:22, “Athenian men”; 19:35, lit., “Ephesian men”; in Acts 14:15 it is used in addressing a company of “men,” without any descriptive term. In this verse, however, the distinction between aner and anthropos (2nd part) is noticeable; the use of the latter comes under No. 1 (e); (d) in general, “a man, a male person” (used like the pronoun tis, No. 3), “a man” (i.e., a certain “man”), e.g., Luke 8:41; in the plural, Acts 6:11.

3. tis (τίς, 5100), “some one, a certain one,” is rendered “a man,” “a certain man,” e.g., in Matt. 22:24; Mark 8:4, KJV (RV, “one”); 12:19; John 3:3, 5; 6:50; 14:23; 15:6, 13; Acts 13:41, KJV (RV, “one”); 1 Cor. 4:2; 1 Tim. 1:8; 2 Tim. 2:5, 21; Jas. 2:14, 18; 1 Pet. 2:19; 1 John 4:20.

4. arren and arsen (ἄρῶν, 730): see MALE.

5. teleios (τέλειος, 5046), perfect, is translated “men” in 1 Cor. 14:20, RV marg., “of full age,” KJV marg., “perfect, or, of a ripe age.” See PERFECT.

Note: In many cases the word “man” is combined with an adjective to translate one word in the original. These will be found under various other headings.

For MAN CHILD see MALE

MAN’S, OF MAN, MANKIND (see also MEN)

anthropinos (ἄνθρωπινος, 442), “human, belonging to man” (from anthropos, see MAN, No. 1), is used (a) of man’s wisdom, in 1 Cor. 2:13 (some mss. have it in v. 4, where indeed it is implied; see, however, the RV); (b) of “man’s judgement,” 1 Cor. 4:3 (marg., “day”: see DAY); (c) of “mankind,” Jas. 3:7, lit., “the human nature,” RV marg. (KJV marg., “nature of man”); (d) of human ordinance, 1 Pet. 2:13; Moulton and Milligan show from the papyri how strongly antithetic to the divine the use of the word is in this respect; (e) of temptation, 1 Cor. 10:13, RV, “such as man can bear” (KJV, “such as is common to man”), i.e., such as must and does come to “men”; (f) of “men’s” hands, Acts 17:25; (g) in the phrase “after the manner of men,” Rom. 6:19.¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 16:12, KJV, allotrios, “belonging to another” (allos, “another”), here used as a pronoun, is translated “another man’s” (RV, “another’s”); so, as an adjective, in Rom. 14:4; 15:20; 2 Cor. 10:15, 16 (in this last the RV omits “man”). (2) In Acts 27:22 there is no word representing “man’s”; the RV has “of life.” (3) In Rom. 5:17, the RV rightly has “the trespass of the one,” for KJV, “one man’s offense.”

MANGER

phatne (φάτνη, 5336), “a manger,” Luke 2:7, 12, 16, also denotes “a stall,” 13:15.¶ So in the Sept., the word denoted not only a “manger” but, by metonymy, the stall or crib (Prov. 14:4) containing the “manger.”

MANIFEST (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjectives.

1. emphanes (ἐμφανής, 1717), manifest (akin to emphaino, “to show in, to exhibit”; en, “in,” phaino, “to cause to shine”), is used (a) literally in Acts 10:40, RV “(gave Him to be made) manifest”; (b) metaphorically in Rom. 10:20, “(I was made) manifest.” See OPENLY.¶ Cf. B, No. 2.

2. phaneros (φανερός, 5318), “open to sight, visible, manifest” (the root phan□, signifying “shining,” exists also in No. 1), is translated “manifest” in Luke 8:17; Acts 4:16; 7:13, RV (KJV, “known”); Rom. 1:19; 1 Cor. 3:13; 11:19; 14:25; Gal. 5:19; Phil.

1:13; 1 Tim. 4:15 (KJV “appear”); 1 John 3:10. See APPEAR, B, Note (2), KNOW, B, No. 2, OPENLY, OUTWARDLY.

3. aphanes (ἀφανής, 852) denotes “unseen, hidden,” Heb. 4:13, “not manifest” (a, negative and phaino).¶ In the Sept., Neh. 4:8; Job 24:20.¶

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 15:27, KJV delos, “evident,” is translated “manifest” (RV, “evident”). (2) So with ekdelos, 2 Tim. 3:9, an intensive form of delos, signifying “quite evident.”¶ (3) In 1 Tim. 5:25, KJV, prodelos, “evident beforehand, clearly evident,” is translated “manifest beforehand” (RV, “evident”); see EVIDENT. (4) For “manifest token,” see TOKEN.

B. Verbs.

1. phaneroo (φανερόω, 5319), “to make visible, clear, manifest,” known (akin to A, No. 2), is used especially in the writings of the apostles John and Paul), occurring 9 times in the Gospel, 9 times in 1 John, 2 in Rev.; in the Pauline Epistles (including Heb.) 24 times; in the other Gospels, only in Mark, 3 times; elsewhere in 1 Pet. 1:20; 5:4.

The true meaning is “to uncover, lay bare reveal.” The following are variations in the rendering, which should be noted: Mark 16:12, 14 (RV, “was manifested,” KJV, “appeared”); John 21:1 (RV, “manifested,” KJV, “shewed”; cf. v. 14); Rom. 1:19 (RV, “manifested,” KJV, “hath shewed”); 2 Cor. 3:3 (RV, “being made manifest,” KJV, “are manifestly declared”); 2 Cor. 5:10; 7:12 and Rev. 3:18 (RV, “be made manifest,” KJV, “appear”); 2 Cor. 11:6 (RV, “we have made it manifest,” KJV, “we have been thoroughly made manifest”); Col. 1:26 (RV “hath it been manifested,” KJV, “is made manifest”); 3:4 (RV, “be manifested,” KJV, “appear”; so 1 Pet. 5:4); 1 Tim. 3:16 (RV, “was manifested,” KJV, “was manifest”); 2 Tim. 1:10 (RV, “hath ... been manifested,” KJV, “is ... made manifest”; cf. Rom. 16:26, 2 Cor. 4:10, 11; 1 Pet. 1:20); Heb. 9:26 (RV, “hath He been manifested,” KJV, “hath He appeared”); 1 John 2:28; 3:2 (RV, “is ... made manifest,” KJV, “doth appear”). See APPEAR, A, No. 4.

2. emphanizo (ἐμφανίζω, 1718), akin to A, No. 1, is translated “to manifest, make manifest,” in John 14:21, 22; Heb. 11:14, RV; see APPEAR, A, No. 5.

Note: For the adverb phaneros, “manifestly,” see EVIDENTLY, OPENLY.

MANIFESTATION

phanerosis (φανέρωσις, 5321), “a manifestation” (akin to phaneros and phaneroo; see MANIFEST), occurs in 1 Cor. 12:7 and 2 Cor. 4:2.¶

Note: In Rom. 8:19, KJV, apokalupsis, “an uncovering, laying bare, revealing, revelation,” is translated “manifestation” (RV, “revealing”). See REVELATION.

MANIFOLD

1. poikilos (ποικίλος, 4164), “varied,” is translated “manifold” in 1 Pet. 1:6; 4:10 and in Jas. 1:2, RV (KJV, “divers”). See DIVERS, A, No. 2.

2. polupoikilos (πολυποίκιλος, 4182), “much varied” (polus, “much,” and No. 1), is said of the wisdom of God, in Eph. 3:10.¶

3. pollaplasion (πολλαπλασίων, 4179), “many times more” (from polus, “much”), occurs in Luke 18:30, “manifold more,” and in many ancient authorities in Matt. 19:29

For MANKIND see MAN, No. 1, Note (3), MAN’S (c), ABUSERS
MANNA

manna (μάννα, 3131), the supernaturally provided food for Israel during their wilderness journey (for details see Exod. 16 and Num. 11). The Hebrew equivalent is given in Exod. 16:15, RV marg., “man hu.” The translations are, RV, “what is it?”; KJV and RV marg., “it is manna.” It is described in Ps. 78:24, 25 as “the corn of heaven” and “the bread of the mighty,” RV text and KJV marg. (“angels’ food,” KJV text), and in 1 Cor. 10:3, as “spiritual meat.” The vessel a pointed to contain it as a perpetual memorial, was of gold, Heb. 9:4, with Exod. 16:33. The Lord speaks of it as being typical of Himself, the true Bread from Heaven, imparting eternal life and sustenance to those who by faith partake spiritually of Him, John 6:31-35. The “hidden manna” is promised as one of the rewards of the overcomer, Rev. 2:17; it is thus suggestive of the moral excellence of Christ in His life on earth, hid from the eyes of men, by whom He was “despised and rejected”; the path of the overcomer is a reflex of His life. None of the natural substances called “manna” is to be identified with that which God provided for Israel.¶

MANNER

A. Nouns.

1. ethos (ἔθος, 1485), “a habit, custom” (akin to the verb etho, “to be accustomed”), is always translated “custom” in the RV (“manner” in the KJV of John 19:40; Acts 15:1; 25:16; Heb. 10:25). See CUSTOM, No. 1.

2. ethos (ἦθος, 2239), primarily “a haunt, abode,” then, “a custom, manner,” occurs in the plural in 1 Cor. 15:33, i.e., ethical conduct, morals.¶

3. tropos (τρόπος, 5158), “a turning, fashion, manner, character, way of life,” is translated “manner” in Acts 1:11, with reference to the Lord’s ascension and return, in Jude 7, of the similarity of the evil of those mentioned in vv. 6 and 7. See CONVERSATION, MEANS, WAY.

Note: In Acts 15:11, the phrase kath’ hon tropon, “according to what manner,” is translated “in like manner as,” RV (KJV, “even as”).

4. tupos (τύπος, 5179), “a mark or impress,” is translated “manner” in Acts 23:25. See FORM, No. 3.

5. akribeia (ἀκρίβεια, 195), “exactness, precision” (akin to akribes, “exact, careful”; see akriboo, “to inquire carefully,” and akribos, “carefully”), occurs in Acts 22:3, RV, “strict manner” (KJV, “perfect manner”).¶

Notes: (1) The verb etho, “to be accustomed,” has a perfect tense eiotha, with a present meaning, the neuter of the participle of which, eiothos, used with the article, signifies “custom,” Luke 4:16. In Acts 17:2 the KJV translates it “manner” (RV, “custom”). See CUSTOM, WONT. (2) For agoge, in 2 Tim. 3:10, KJV, “manner of life” (RV, “conduct”) see CONDUCT. (3) For anastrophe, “manner of life,” see LIFE, A, No. 6; cf.

LIVE, No. 5. Agoge suggests conduct according to one's leading; anastrophe, conduct as one goes about and mingles with others.

B. Adjectives and Pronouns.

1. potapos (ποταπός, 4217), primarily, "from what country," then, "of what sort," is rendered "what manner of man." Matt. 8:27; so 2 Pet. 3:11; Mark 13:1 (twice); Luke 1:29; 7:39; 1 John 3:1.¶

2. poios (ποιός, 4169), "of what sort," is translated "by what manner of (death)" in John 21:19, RV, (KJV, "by what"); in Acts 7:49, "what manner of (house)"; Rom. 3:27, "what manner of law"; 1 Cor. 15:35, "what manner of body."

3. hoios (οἷος, 3634), a relative pronoun, signifying "what sort of or manner of," is translated by the latter phrase in 1 Thess. 1:5; some mss. have it in Luke 9:55, as in KJV; the RV follows those in which it is absent.

4. hopoios (ὁποῖος, 3697) is rendered "what manner of" in 1 Thess. 1:9; Jas. 1:24. See SORT, A.

C. Adverbs.

1. polutropos (πολυτρόπως, 4187), lit., "much turning" (polus, "much," tropos, "a turning"), "in many ways (or manners)," is rendered "in divers manners" in Heb. 1:1.¶

2. houtos or houto (οὕτω, 3779), "thus, in this way," is rendered "after this manner" in Matt. 6:9; 1 Pet. 3:5; Rev. 11:5. See SO, THUS.

3. hosautos (ὡσαύτως, 5615), a strengthened form of hos, "thus," signifies "just so, likewise, in like manner," e.g., 1 Tim. 2:9; in the following the RV has "in like manner," for KJV, "likewise"; Mark 14:31; Luke 22:20; Rom. 8:26; 1 Tim. 3:8; 5:25; in Luke 20:31 the RV has "likewise," KJV, "in like manner." See LIKEWISE.

4. homoios (ὁμοίως, 3668), akin to the adjective homoios, "like," signifies in "like manner, equally"; in the following the RV has "in like manner" for KJV, "likewise"; Matt. 27:41; Mark 4:16; Luke 10:32; 13:3; 16:25; John 5:19; (Heb. 9:21); Jas. 2:25; 1 Pet. 3:1, 7; Rev. 8:12; in Rev. 2:15 the KJV "which thing I hate" translates a variant reading (ho miso). See LIKEWISE, SO.

5. pos (πῶς, 4459), how, is translated "after what manner" in Acts 20:18. See MEANS.

Note: For paraplesios, Heb. 2:14, RV, see LIKEWISE, No. 4.

D. Preposition.

kata (κατά, 2596), "according to," is translated "after the manner" in John 2:6, i.e., "in accordance with"; in Rom. 3:5; 1 Cor. 3:3; 9:8, RV, "after the manner of" (KJV, "as").

E. Verb.

trophoreo (τροποφορέω, 5159), "to bear another's manners," is translated "suffered He (their) manners" in Acts 13:18. For this and the alternative reading see BEAR, No 5.¶

Notes: (1) In the following the phrase kata tauta, or kata ta auta, lit., "according to the same things," is translated "in (the) like (RV, same) manner," Luke 6:23; v. 26, RV (KJV, "so"); 17:30, RV, "after the same manner" (KJV, "even thus"). (2) In Phil. 2:18 the phrase to ... auto, lit., “the same (thing),” used adverbially, is translated “in the same manner,” RV (KJV, “for the same cause”). (3) In Mark 13:29, KJV, kai, “also” (so RV), is translated “in like manner.” (4) In Acts 15:23 some mss. have the demonstrative pronoun tode used adverbially and rendered “after this manner” (KJV). The RV, adhering to the mss. in which it is absent, inserts the word “thus” in italics. (5) In Acts 25:20 a phrase lit. rendered “(as to) the inquiry concerning these things” (or according to some mss. “this person,” whether “Jesus” or “Paul,” v. 19), is translated “of such manner of questions,” KJV (RV, “how to inquire concerning these things”). (6) In Luke 1:66, KJV, ara, “then” (so RV), is rendered freely “(what) manner.” (7) In Luke 24:17, KJV, the pronoun tis, “who, what,” in the plural (RV, “what”) is translated “what manner of”; similarly, in the singular in Mark 4:41; Luke 8:25 (RV, “who”), John 7:36. (8) In Gal. 2:14, KJV, the adverb ethnikos, “in gentile fashion” (ethnos, “a nation”: in the plural, “Gentiles or nations”), is translated “after the manner of Gentiles” (RV, “as do”). (9) In Matt. 12:31; Luke 11:42; Rev. 18:12, KJV, pas, “every” (so RV), is translated “all manner.”

MANSERVANT

pais (παῖς, 3816), “a child, boy, youth,” also means “a servant, attendant”; in Luke 12:45 it is used in the plural “menservants,” in contrast to paidiske, “a maidservant.” See CHILD, No. 4.

MANSIONS

mone (μονή, 3438), primarily “a staying abiding” (akin to meno, “to abide”), denotes an “abode” (Eng., “manor,” “manse,” etc.), translated “mansions” in John 14:2; “abode” in v. 23. There is nothing in the word to indicate separate compartments in heaven; neither does it suggest temporary resting places on the road.¶

MANSLAYERS

androphonos (ἀνδροφόνος, 409), from aner, “a man,” and phoneus, “a murderer,” occurs in the plural in 1 Tim. 5:9.¶

MANTLE

peribolaion (περιβόλαιον, 4018), lit., “that which is thrown around,” is translated “mantle” in Heb. 1:12, RV (KJV, “vesture.”) See COVERING, VEIL.

MANY

1. polus (πολύς, 4183), “much, many great,” is used especially of number when its significance is “many,” e.g., Matt. 8:30; 9:10; 13:17; so the RV of Matt. 12:15, where some mss. follow the word by ochloi, “multitudes”; 1 Cor. 12:12; Rev. 1:15; it is more frequently used as a noun, “many (persons),” e.g., Matt. 3:7; 7:22; 22:14; with the article, “the many,” e.g., Matt. 24:12, RV; Mark 9:26, RV, “the more part” (KJV “many”); Rom. 5:15, 19 (twice), RV; 12:5; 1 Cor. 10:17; v. 33, RV; so 2 Cor. 2:17; in 1 Cor. 11:30, RV, “not a few.” In Luke 12:47 it is translated “many stripes,” the noun being understood. See GREAT, MUCH.

Notes: (1) In Luke 23:8 some mss. have polla, “many things,” though it is absent from the most authentic; see the RV. (2) In Mark 6:20 the RV, following the mss. which have aporeo, “to be perplexed,” translates polla by “much”, some mss. have poieo, “to do”; hence KJV, “did many things.” (3) In Gal. 4:27 the plural of polus, with mallon, “more,” is translated “more” in the RV (KJV, “many more”), lit., “many are the children of the desolate more than of her that, etc.,” the phrase implying that both should have many children, but the desolate more than the other. (4) In John 7:40 there is no word in the original representing “some” or “many.”

2. pleion (πλείων, 4119), “more, greater,” the comparative of No. 1, is translated “many” in Acts 2:40; 13:31; 21:10; 24:17; 25:14; 27:20; 28:23 (KJV; RV, “in great number”); with the article, “most,” RV (or rather, “the more part”) Acts 19:32; 1 Cor. 10:5, and Phil. 1:14 (for KJV, “many,” an important change); in 2 Cor. 2:6, RV, “the many” (marg., “the more”); so 4:15; in 9:2, “very many” (marg., “the more part”); in Heb. 7:23, RV, “many in number” (KJV “many”). See GREATER, MORE.

3. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “sufficient,” when used of number sometimes signifies “many,” suggesting a sufficient number, (a) with nouns, Luke 8:32; 23:9; Acts 9:23, 43; 20:8; 27:7; (b) absolutely, some noun being understood, e.g., Acts 12:12; 14:21; 19:19; 1 Cor. 11:30. See ABLE, C, No. 2.

4. hosos (ὅσος, 3745), “how much, how many, how great, as much as, as many as,” is translated “as many as,” e.g., in Matt. 14:36; Mark 3:10; Luke 9:5, RV (KJV, “whosoever”); Acts 2:39; in 9:16, RV, “how many things” (KJV, “how great things”); in Rom. 6:3 the RV renders it by “all we who” (KJV, “so many of us as”), a necessary alteration, not singling out some believers from others, as if some were not baptized, but implying what was recognized as true of all (see Acts 18:8); in 2 Cor. 1:20, RV, “how many soever be” (KJV, “all”). See ALL, C.

5. posos (πόσος, 4214), “how much, how great, how many,” has the last meaning in Matt. 15:34; 16:9, 10; 27:13 (“how many things”); Mark 6:38; 8:5, 19, 20; 15:4 (“how many things”); Luke 15:17; Acts 21:20. See GREAT.

6. tosoutos (τοσοῦτος, 5118), “so great, so much, so many,” (a) qualifying a noun, is rendered “these many (years)” in Luke 15:29; “so many,” John 12:37; 1 Cor. 14:10; (b) without a noun, John 6:9; 21:11; Gal. 3:4, “so many things.” See GREAT.

Note: In John 17:2, KJV, the neuter of pas, “all,” followed by the neuter of the relative pronoun “what,” and then by the plural of the personal pronoun, is translated “to as many as” (RV, “whatsoever ... to them”).

MARAN-ATHA

maran-atha (μαράν ἄθά, 3134), an expression used in 1 Cor. 16:22, is the Greek spelling for two Aramaic words, formerly supposed by some to be an imprecatory utterance or “a curse reinforced by a prayer,” an idea contrary to the intimations conveyed by its use in early Christian documents, e.g., “The Teaching of the Apostles,” a document of the beginning of the 2nd cent., and in the “Apostolic Constitutions” (vii. 26), where it is used as follows: “Gather us all together into Thy Kingdom which Thou hast prepared. Maranatha, Hosanna to the Son of David; blessed is He that cometh, etc.”

The first part, ending in ‘n,’ signifies “Lord”; as to the second part, the Fathers regarded it as a past tense, “has come.” Modern expositors take it as equivalent to a present, “cometh,” or future, “will come.” Certain Aramaic scholars regard the last part as consisting of tha, and regard the phrase as an ejaculation, “Our Lord, come,” or “O Lord, come.” The character of the context, however, indicates that the apostle is making a statement rather than expressing a desire or uttering a prayer.

As to the reason why it was used, most probably it was a current ejaculation among early Christians, as embodying the consummation of their desires.

“At first the title Marana or Maran, used in speaking to and of Christ was no more than the respectful designation of the Teacher on the part of the disciples.” After His resurrection they used the title of or to Him as applied to God, “but it must here be remembered that the Aramaic-speaking Jews did not, save exceptionally, designate God as ‘Lord’; so that in the ‘Hebraist’ section of the Jewish Christians the expression ‘our Lord’ (Marana) was used in reference to Christ only” (Dalman, The Words of Jesus).¶

MARBLE

marmaros (μάρμαρος, 3139) primarily denoted any “glistening stone” (from maraino, “to glisten”); hence, “marble,” Rev. 18:12.¶

MARINERS

nautes (ναύτης, 3492), “a seaman, mariner, sailor” (from naus, “a ship,” Eng., “nautical”), is translated “sailors” in Acts 27:27, 30, RV (KJV, “shipmen”); in Rev. 18:17, RV, “mariners” (KJV, “sailors”).¶

MARK (Noun)

1. charagma (χάραγμα, 5480) denotes “a stamp, impress,” translated “mark” in Rev. 13:16, 17, etc. See GRAVEN.

2. stigma (στίγμα, 4742) denotes “a tattooed mark” or “a mark burnt in, a brand” (akin to stizo, “to prick”), translated “marks” in Gal. 6:17.¶ “It is probable that the apostle refers to the physical sufferings he had endured since he began to proclaim Jesus as Messiah and Lord [e.g., at Lystra and Philippi]. It is probable, too, that this reference to his scars was intended to set off the insistence of the Judaizers upon a body-mark which cost them nothing. Over against the circumcision they demanded as a proof of obedience to the law he set the indelible tokens, sustained in his own body, of his loyalty to the Lord Jesus. As to the origin of the figure, it was indeed customary for a master to brand his slaves, but this language does not suggest that the apostle had been branded by His Master. Soldiers and criminals also were branded on occasion; but to neither of these is the case of Paul as here described analogous. The religious devotee branded himself with the peculiar mark of the god whose cult he affected; so was Paul branded with the marks of his devotion to the Lord Jesus. It is true such markings were forbidden by the law, Lev. 19:28, but then Paul had not inflicted these on himself

“The marks of Jesus cannot be taken to be the marks which the Lord bears in His body in consequence of the Crucifixion; they were different in character.”*

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 344.

3. skopos (σκοπός, 4649), primarily “a watcher, watchman” (as in the Sept., e.g., Ezek. 3:17), then, “a mark on which to fix the eye” (akin to skopeco, “to look at”), is used metaphorically in Phil. 3:14, of “an aim or object,” RV, “goal.” See GOAL.¶

MARK (Verb)

1. epecho (ἐπέχω, 1907), lit., “to hold upon” (epi, “upon,” echo, “to hold”), signifies (like parecho) “to hold out,” Phil. 2:16, of the word of life; then, “to hold one’s mind towards, to observe,” translated “marked” in Luke 14:7, of the Lord’s observance of those who chose the chief seats. See HEED, HOLD, STAY.

2. skopeco (σκοπέω, 4648), “to look at, behold, watch, contemplate,” (akin to skopos, “a mark,” see Noun above), is used metaphorically of “looking to,” and translated “mark” in Rom. 16:17, of a warning against those who cause divisions, and in Phil. 3:17, of observing those who walked after the example of the apostle and his fellow workers, so as to follow their ways. See HEED, Note (1), LOOK.

MARKET, MARKETPLACE

agora (ἀγορά, 58), primarily “an assembly,” or, in general, “an open space in a town” (akin to ageiro, “to bring together”), became applied, according to papyri evidences, to a variety of things, e.g., “a judicial assembly,” “a market,” or even “supplies, provisions” (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). In the NT it denotes “a place of assembly, a public place or forum, a marketplace.” A variety of circumstances, connected with it as a public gathering place, is mentioned, e.g., business dealings such as the hiring of laborers, Matt. 20:3; the buying and selling of goods, Mark 7:4 (involving risk of pollution); the games of children, Matt. 11:16; Luke 7:32; exchange of greetings, Matt. 23:7; Mark 12:38; Luke 11:43; 20:46; the holding of trials, Acts 16:19; public discussions, Acts 17:17. Mark 6:56 records the bringing of the sick there. The word always carries with it the idea of publicity, in contrast to private circumstances.

The RV always translates it “marketplace” or in the plural. The KJV sometimes changes the rendering to “markets” and translates it “streets” in Mark 6:56. See STREET.

MARRED

Note: In Mark 2:22, apollumi, “to destroy, perish,” is found in the most authentic mss. as applying both to the wine and the wine skins, RV, “perisheth”; the KJV follows the mss. which tell of the wine being “spilled” (ekcheo, “to pour out”), and the skins (KJV, “bottles”) being “marred.” See DESTROY, No. 1.

MARRIAGE (give in), MARRY

A. Noun.

gamos (γάμος, 1062), “a marriage, wedding,” or “wedding feast,” is used to denote (a) the ceremony and its proceedings, including the “marriage feast,” John 2:1, 2; of the “marriage ceremony” only, figuratively, Rev. 19:7, as distinct from the “marriage feast” (v. 9); (b) “the marriage feast,” RV in Matt. 22:2-4, 9; in v. 8, 10, “wedding;” in 25:10, RV “marriage feast;” so Luke 12:36; 14:8; in Matt. 22:11, 12, the “wedding garment” is, lit., “a garment of a wedding.” In Rev. 19, where, under the figure of a “marriage,” the union of Christ, as the Lamb of God, with His heavenly bride is so described, the marriage itself takes place in heaven during the Parousia, v. 7 (the aorist or point tense indicating an accomplished fact; the bride is called “His wife”); the “marriage feast” or supper is to take place on earth, after the Second Advent, v. 9. That Christ is spoken of as the Lamb points to His atoning sacrifice as the ground upon which the spiritual union takes place. The background of the phraseology lies in the OT description of the relation of God to Israel, e.g., Isa. 54:4,ff.; Ezek. 16:7,ff.; Hos. 2:19; (c) “marriage” in general, including the “married” state, which is to be “had in honor,” Heb. 13:4, RV.¶

Note: Among the Jews the “marriage supper” took place in the husband’s house and was the great social event in the family life. Large hospitality, and resentment at the refusal of an invitation, are indicated in Matt. 22:1-14. The “marriage” in Cana exhibits the way in which a “marriage feast” was conducted in humbler homes. Special honor attached to the male friends of the bridegroom, “the sons of the bridechamber,” Matt. 9:15, RV (see BRIDECHAMBER). At the close the parents conducted the bride to the nuptial chamber (cf. Judg. 15:1)

B. Verbs.

1. gameo (γαμέω, 1060), “to marry” (akin to A), is used (a) of “the man,” Matt. 5:32; 19:9, 10; 22:25 (RV; KJV, “married a wife”); v. 30; 24:38; Mark 6:17; 10:11; 12:25; Luke 14:20; 16:18; 17:27, RV, “married” (KV, “married wives”); 20:34, 35; 1 Cor. 7:28 (1st part); v. 33; (b) of “the woman,” in the active voice, Mark 10:12; 1 Cor. 7:28 (last part); ver. 34; 1 Tim. 5:11, 14; in the passive voice, 1 Cor. 7:39; (c) of “both sexes,” 1 Cor. 7:9, 10, 36; 1 Tim. 4:3.¶

2. gamizo (γαμίσκω, 1061v), “to give in marriage,” is used in the passive voice in Matt. 22:30 (2nd clause), some mss. have No. 5 here; Mark 12:25 (No. 3 in some mss.); Luke 17:27 (No. 5 in some mss.); 20:35 (last word), passive (Nos. 3 and 4 in some mss.); in the active voice Matt. 24:38 (Nos. 3 and 5 in some mss.); further, of giving a daughter in “marriage,” 1 Cor. 7:38 (twice), RV (No. 5 in some mss.), which, on the whole, may be taken as the meaning. In this part of the Epistle, the apostle was answering a number of questions on matters about which the church at Corinth had written to him, and in this particular matter the formal transition from “marriage” in general to the subject of giving a daughter in “marriage,” is simple. Eastern customs naturally would involve the inclusion of the latter in the inquiry and the reply.¶

3. gamisko (γαμίσκω, 1061), an alternative for No. 2, Luke 20:34 (some mss. have No. 4); in some mss. in Mark 12:25; Luke 20:35.¶

4. ekgamisko (ἐκγαμίσκω, 1548), “to give out in marriage” (ek, “out,” and No. 3): see Nos. 2 and 3.

5. ekgamizo (ἐκγαμίζω, 1547), an alternative for No. 4: see Nos. 2 and 3.¶

6. epigambreuō (ἐπιγαμβρεύω, 1918), “to take to wife after” (epi, “upon,” gambros, “a connection by marriage”), signifies “to marry” (of a deceased husband’s next of kin, Matt. 22:24).¶ Cf. Gen. 38:8.

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

Note: In Rom. 7:3 (twice) and v. 4, KJV, ginomai, “to become” (here, “to become another man’s”), is translated “be married” (RV, “be joined”).

MARROW

muelos (μυελός, 3452), “marrow,” occurs in Heb. 4:12, where, by a natural metaphor, the phraseology changes from the material to the spiritual.¶

For MARTYR see WITNESS

MARVEL (Noun and Verb), MARVELLOUS

A. Noun.

thauma (θαῦμα, 2295), “a wonder” (akin to theaomai, “to gaze in wonder”), is found in the most authentic mss. in 2 Cor. 11:14 (some mss. have the adjective thaumastos: see C, below), “(no) marvel”; in Rev. 17:6, RV, “wonder” (KJV, “admiration”), said of John’s astonishment at the vision of the woman described as Babylon the Great.¶ In the Sept., Job 17:8; 18:20; in some mss., 20:8 and 21:5.¶ Cf. teras, “a wonder”; semeion, “a sign”; thambos, “wonder”; ekstasis, “amazement.”

B. Verbs.

1. thaumazo (θαυμάζω, 2296) signifies “to wonder at, marvel” (akin to A); the following are RV differences from the KJV: Luke 2:33, “were marveling” for “marveled”; Luke 8:25 and 11:14, “marveled” for “wondered”; 9:43, “were marveling” for “wondered”; 2 Thess. 1:10, “marveled at” for “admired” (of the person of Christ at the time of the shining forth of His Parousia, at the Second Advent). See WONDER.

Note: In Matt. 9:8, KJV translates this verb; RV, phobeo, “were afraid.”

2. ekthaumazo (ἐκ, 1537) and (ἐκ, 2296), a strengthened form of No. 1 (ek, intensive), is found in the best mss. in Mark 12:17, RV, “wondered greatly” (some mss. have No. 1).¶

C. Adjective.

thaumastos (θαυμαστός, 2298), “marvellous” (akin to A and B), is said (a) of the Lord’s doing in making the rejected Stone the Head of the corner, Matt. 21:42; Mark 12:11; (b) of the erstwhile blind man’s astonishment that the Pharisees knew not from whence Christ had come, and yet He had given him sight, John 9:30, RV, “the marvel,” KJV, “a marvellous thing”; (c) of the spiritual light into which believers are brought, 1 Pet. 2:9; (d) of the vision of the seven angels having the seven last plagues, Rev. 15:1; (e) of the works of God, 15:3.¶

MASTER (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. didaskalos (διδάσκαλος, 1320), “a teacher” (from didasko, “to teach”), is frequently rendered “Master” in the four Gospels, as a title of address to Christ, e.g., Matt. 8:19; Mark 4:38 (there are more instances in Luke than in the other Gospels); John 1:38, where it interprets “Rabbi”; 20:16, where it interprets “Rabboni.” It is used by Christ of Himself in Matt. 23:8 (see No. 6) and John 13:13-14; by others concerning Him, Matt. 17:24; 26:18; Mark 5:35; 14:14; Luke 8:49; 22:11; John 11:28. In John 3:10, the Lord uses it in addressing Nicodemus, RV, “the teacher” (KJV, “a master”), where the article does not specify a particular “teacher,” but designates the member of a class; for the class see Luke 2:46, “the doctors” (RV, marg., “teachers”). It is used of the relation of a disciple to his “master,” in Matt. 10:24, 25; Luke 6:40. It is not translated “masters” in the rest of the NT, save in the KJV of Jas. 3:1 “(be not many) masters,” where obviously the RV “teachers” is the meaning. See TEACHER.

2. kurios (κύριος, 2962), “a lord, one who exercises power,” is translated “masters” in Matt. 6:24; 15:27; Mark 13:35; Luke 16:13; Acts 16:16, 19; Rom. 14:4, KJV (RV, “lord”); Eph. 6:5, 9 (twice), the 2nd time of Christ; so in Col. 3:22; 4:1. See LORD.

3. despotes (δεσπότης, 1203), one who has “absolute ownership and uncontrolled power,” is translated “masters” in 1 Tim. 6:1, 2; Titus 2:9; 1 Pet. 2:18; of Christ, 2 Tim. 2:21; 2 Pet. 2:1, RV (for KJV, Lord); in Jude 4, RV, it is applied to Christ “(our only) Master (and Lord, Jesus Christ),” KJV “(the only) Lord (God)” in Rev. 6:10, RV, in an address to God, “O Master” (KJV, “O Lord”). It is rendered “Lord” in Luke 2:29 and Acts 4:24. See LORD.¶

Note: For “master of the house,” see GOODMAN.

4. rabbei (ῥαββί, 4461) was an Aramaic word signifying “my master,” a title of respectful address to Jewish teachers.

“The Aramaic word rabbei, transliterated into Greek, is explicitly recognized as the common form of address to Christ, Matt. 26:25 (cf., however, v. 22, kurios); 26:49; Mark 9:5, but Matt. 17:4, kurios” (Dalman, The Words of Jesus).

In the following the RV has “Rabbi” for KJV “Master”; Matt. 26:25, 49; Mark 9:5; 11:21; 14:45; John 4:31; 9:2; 11:8. In other passages the KJV has “Rabbi,” Matt 23:7-8; John 1:38, 49; 3:2, 26; 6:25.¶

Note: The form Rabbouni (Rabboni), in Mark 10:51, is retained in the RV (for KJV, “Lord”); in John 20:16, in both KJV and RV. This title is said to be Galilean; hence it would be natural in the lips of a woman of Magdala. It does not differ materially from “Rabbi.”¶

5. epistates (ἐπιστάτης, 1988) denotes “a chief, a commander, overseer master.” It is used by the disciples in addressing the Lord, in recognition of His authority rather than His instruction (Nos. 1 and 6); it occurs only in Luke 5:5; 8:24, 45; 9:33, 49; 17:13.¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 25:19; 2 Chron. 31:12; Jer. 36:26; 52:25.¶

Note: “The form epistata ... alongside of the commoner didaskale is ... a Greek synonym for the latter, and both are to be traced back to the Aramaic rabbei.” Christ forbade His disciples to allow themselves to be called rabbi, “on the ground that He alone was their Master, Matt. 23:8. In reference to Himself the designation was expressive of the real relation between them. The form of address ‘Good Master’ He, however, refused to allow, Mark 10:17, 18 ... in the mouth of the speaker it was mere insolent flattery ... the Lord was unwilling that anyone should thoughtlessly deal with such an epithet; and here, as always, the honor due to the Father was the first consideration with Him.... The primitive community never ventured to call Jesus ‘Our Teacher’ after He had been exalted to the Throne of God. The title rabbi, expressing the relation of the disciple to the teacher, vanished from use; and there remained only the designation maran, the servant's appropriate acknowledgement of his Lord" (Dalman).

6. kathegetes (καθηγητής, 2519), properly "a guide" (akin to kathegeomai, "to go before, guide"; kata, "down," hegeomai, "to guide"), denotes "a master, a teacher," Matt. 23:10 (twice); some mss. have it in v. 8, where the most authentic have No. 1.¶

7. kubernetes (κυβερνήτης, 2942), "the pilot or steersman of a ship," or, metaphorically, "a guide or governor" (akin to kubernao, "to guide": Eng., "govern" is connected; cf. kubernesis, "a steering, pilotage," 1 Cor. 12:28, "governments"), is translated "master" in Acts 27:11; "shipmaster" in Rev. 18:17.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 23:34; Ezek. 27:8, 27-28.¶

B. Verb.

katakuriueo (κατακυριεύω, 2634), "to exercise lordship" (kata, "down upon," kurios, "a lord"), is translated "mastered" in Acts 19:16, RV, of the action of the evil spirit on the sons of Sceva (KJV, "overcame"). In translating the word amphoteron by its primary meaning, "both," the RV describes the incident as referring to two only. It has been shown, however, that in the period of the Koine (see Foreword) amphoterai, "both," was no longer restricted to two persons. Ramsay ascribes the abruptness of the word here to the vivid narrative of an eye witness. See DOMINION, LORD, LORDSHIP.

MASTERBUILDER

architekton (ἀρχιτέκτων, 753), from arche, "rule, beginning," and tekton, "an artificer" (whence Eng., "architect"), "a principal artificer," is used figuratively by the apostle in 1 Cor. 3:10, of his work in laying the foundation of the local church in Corinth, inasmuch as the inception of the spiritual work there devolved upon him. The examples from the papyri and from inscriptions, as illustrated by Moulton and Milligan, show that the word had a wider application than our "architect," and confirm the rendering "masterbuilder" in this passage, which is of course borne out by the context.¶

MATTER, MATTERS

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), "a word, speech, discourse, account," hence also "that which is spoken of, a matter, affair, thing," is translated "matter" in Mark 1:45; Acts 8:21; 15:6; 19:38; RV of Phil. 4:15, "in the matter of" (KJV, "concerning"). See ACCOUNT.

2. pragma (πράγμα, 4229), akin to prasso, "to do," denotes (a) "that which has been done, a deed," translated "matters" in Luke 1:1, RV (KJV, "things"); "matter" in 2 Cor. 7:11; (b) "that which is being done, an affair," translated "matter" in Rom. 16:2, RV (KJV, "business"); 1 Cor. 6:1, in a forensic sense, "a lawsuit" (frequently found with this meaning in the papyri); 1 Thess. 4:6, "in the matter," i.e., the "matter" under consideration, which, as the preceding words show, is here the sin of adultery. See BUSINESS, B, Note (1), THING.

3. enklemma (ἐγκλημα, 1462), "an accusation, charge," Acts 25:16, RV, "matter laid against him"; elsewhere, Acts 23:29, "charge"; see ACCUSATION, A, No. 3.¶

Notes: (1) In Gal. 2:6, the statement “it maketh no matter” translates the verb diaphero, “to bear asunder, make a difference,” with ouden, “nothing,” used adverbially, i.e., “it makes no difference (to me)”; his commission from the Lord relieved him of responsibility to the authority of the apostles. (2) In 1 Cor. 9:11, RV, the neuter of the adjective megas, “great,” is translated “a great matter” (KJV, “a great thing”). (3) In Jas. 3:5, KJV, hule, “a wood, forest,” is translated “a matter” (RV, and KJV marg., “wood”). In older English the word “matter” actually meant “wood” (like its Latin original, materia). (4) In Acts 17:32, the KJV adds “matter” to the pronoun “this,” RV, “(concerning) this.” (5) In 2 Cor. 8:19, RV, the phrase, lit., “in this grace” is translated “in the matter of (KJV, with) this grace.” (6) In 2 Cor. 8:20, RV, the phrase, lit., “in this bounty” is translated “in the matter of this bounty” (KJV, “in this abundance”). (7) In 2 Cor. 9:5, the phrase, lit., “as a bounty” is amplified to “as a matter of bounty.” (8) For 1 Pet. 4:15 see BUSYBODY. See also OTHER, THIS, THESE, WEIGHTIER, WRONG.

MAY, MAYEST, MIGHT

1. dunamai (δύναμαι, 1410), “to be able, have power,” whether by personal ability, permission, or opportunity, is sometimes rendered “may” or “might,” e.g., Matt. 26:9; Mark 14:5; Acts 17:19; 1 Thess. 2:6. In the following the RV substitutes “can,” “canst,” “couldst,” for the KJV, e.g., Matt. 26:42; Mark 4:32; 14:7; Luke 16:2; Acts 24:11; 25:11; 27:12; 1 Cor. 7:21; 14:31 (here the alteration is especially important, as not permission for all to prophesy, but ability to do so, is the meaning); Eph. 3:4. In the following the RV substitutes the verb “to be able,” Acts 19:40; 24:8; Rev. 13:17. See ABLE, B, No. 1.

2. exesti (ἔξεστι, 1832), “it is permitted, lawful” (eimi, “to be,” prefixed by ek, “from”), is rendered “(I) may” in Acts 2:29, RV [KJV, “let (me)”]; in Acts 21:37, “may (I),” lit., “is it permitted (me to speak)?” Some mss. have it in 8:37, “thou mayest” (KJV). See LAWFUL.

3. isos (ἴσως, 2481), “equally” (from the adjective isos, “equal”), is translated “it may be” in Luke 20:13 (i.e., “perhaps”).¶

4. tunchano (τυγχάνω, 5177), “to meet with, reach, obtain,” denotes, intransitively, “to happen, chance, befall”; used impersonally with the conjunction ei, “if,” it signifies “it may be,” “perhaps,” e.g., 1 Cor. 14:10; 15:37, “it may chance”; 16:6.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 8:28, KJV, ischuo, “to have strength, be strong, be well able,” is translated “might” (RV, “could”). (2) “May,” “might,” sometimes translate the prepositional phrase eis, “unto,” with the definite article, followed by the infinitive mood of some verb, expressing purpose, e.g., Acts 3:19, “may be blotted out,” lit., “unto the blotting out of”; Rom. 3:26, “that he might be,” lit., “unto his being”; so 8:29; 2 Cor. 1:4, “that we may be able,” lit., “unto our being able”; Eph. 1:18, “that ye may know,” lit., “unto your knowing”; Acts 7:19; Rom. 1:11; 4:16; 12:2; 15:13; Phil. 1:10; 1 Thess. 3:10, 13; 2 Thess. 1:5; 2:6, 10; Heb. 12:10. In Luke 20:20 the best mss. have hoste, “so as to,” RV, as, e.g., in 1 Pet. 1:21. Sometimes the article with the infinitive mood without a preceding preposition, expresses result, e.g., Luke 21:22; Acts 26:18 (twice), “that they may turn,” RV; cf. Rom. 6:6; 11:10; 1 Cor. 10:13; Phil. 3:10, “that I may know”; Jas. 5:17.

(3) The phrases “may be,” “might be,” are frequently the rendering of the verb “to be,” in the subjunctive or optative moods, preceded by a conjunction introducing a condition, or expressing a wish or purpose, e.g., Matt. 6:4; John 14:3; 17:11. Sometimes the phrase translates simply the infinitive mood of the verb eimi, “to be,” e.g., Luke 8:38, lit., “to be (with Him)”; so the RV in 2 Cor. 5:9; in 2 Cor. 9:5, “that (the same) might be,” lit., “(the same) to be.”

(4) In Heb. 7:9 the phrase hos (“so”) epos (“a word”) eipein (“to say”), i.e., lit., “so to say a word” is an idiom, translated in the RV, “so to say” (KJV, “if I may so say”); the Eng. equivalent is “one might almost say.”

ME

Notes: (1) The pronoun, whether alone or with some English preposition, e.g., “of, to, for, in,” translates one or other of the oblique cases of ego, “I.” (2) In Philem. 13 the reflexive pronoun emauton, “myself,” is translated “me,” governed by the preposition pros, with, lit., “with myself” (3) In Titus 1:3, for the KJV, “is committed unto me,” the RV has “I was intrusted.” (4) In Phil. 2:23, “how it will go with me,” is, lit., “the (things) concerning me.” (5) The phrase en emoi, “in me,” is used (a) instrumentally (en, instrumental, “by” or “through”), e.g., 2 Cor. 13:3; (b) subjectively, “within me,” e.g., Gal. 2:20; (c) objectively, “in my case,” e.g., 1 Cor. 9:15; 14:11; Gal. 1:16, 24; 1 Tim. 1:16. (6) In Luke 22:19 the possessive pronoun emos, “my,” is rendered “of Me,” lit., “(into) My (remembrance).”

MEAL

aleuron (ἄλευρον, 224), “meal” (akin to aleuo, “to grind,” and therefore, lit., “what is ground”), occurs in Matt. 13:33; Luke 13:21.¶

MEAN (Adjective)

asemos (ἄσημος, 767), lit., “without mark” (a, negative, sema, “a mark”), i.e., “undistinguished, obscure,” was applied by the apostle Paul negatively, to his native city, Tarsus, Acts 21:39.¶ Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) have a note as follows: “This word occurs perpetually in the papyri to denote a man who is ‘not distinguished’ from his neighbors by the convenient scars on eyebrow or arm or right shin, which identify so many individuals in formal documents.” Deissmann suggests that the word may have been the technical term for “uncircumcised,” among the Greek Egyptians. In another papyrus document a pair of silver bracelets are described as of “unstamped” (asemos) silver.

MEAN (Verb)

1. eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” in certain of its forms, has an explicative force, signifying “to denote, to import,” e.g., Matt. 9:13; 12:7, “(what this) meaneth,” lit. “(what this) is”; Luke 18:36, “meant” (lit., “might be”); Acts 10:17, “might mean,” RV (lit., “might be”); in Luke 15:26 the RV keeps to the verb “to be,” “(what these things) might be” (KJV, “meant”). In Acts 2:12 the verb “to be” is preceded by thelo, “to will,” and the phrase is translated “(what) meaneth (this),” lit., “(what) does (this) will to be?” in 17:20, lit., “(what do these things) will to be?”

2. lego (λέγω, 3004), “to say,” sometimes has the significance of “meaning” something; so the RV in 1 Cor. 1:12; KJV, “(this) I say.”

Notes: (1) In Acts 27:2, KJV, mello, “to be about to,” is translated “meaning” (RV, “was about to”), with reference to the ship (according to the best mss.). (2) In Acts 21:13, KJV, poieo, “to do,” is translated “(what) mean ye (to weep)”; RV, “(what) do ye, (weeping).” (3) The abbreviated original in 2 Cor. 8:13 is rendered by the italicized additions, KJV, “I mean (not),” RV, “I say (not) this.” Cf. the RV italics in Mark 6:2.

MEANING

dunamis (1411), “power, force,” is used of the significance or force of what is spoken, 1 Cor. 14:11. See MIGHT, POWER.

MEANS (by all, by any, etc.)

1. pantos (πάντως, 3843), an adverb from pas, “all,” denoting “wholly, altogether, entirely,” is used in 1 Cor. 9:22, “by all means.” When the apostle says, “I am become all things to all men, that I may by all means save some,” he is simply speaking of his accommodating himself to various human conditions consistently with fidelity to the truth, with no unscriptural compliance with men, but in the exercise of self denial; “by all means” refers to the preceding context from v. 18, and stresses his desire to be used in the salvation of some. It is found in Acts 21:22, RV, “certainly.” Some mss. have the word in this sense in Acts 18:21 (KJV). See ALTOGETHER, B, No. 1.

2. pos (-πώς, 4458), “at all, somehow, in any way,” is used after the conjunction (a) ei, “if,” meaning “if by any means,” e.g., Acts 27:12; Rom. 1:10; 11:14; Phil. 3:11; (b) me, “lest, lest by any means,” e.g., 1 Cor. 8:9; 9:27; 2 Cor. 2:7, RV (KJV, “perhaps”); 9:4, RV (KJV, “haply”); 11:3; 12:20, RV; Gal. 2:2; 4:11, RV (KJV, “lest”); ess. 3:5 (KJV, “lest by some means”).

3. ek (ἐκ, 1537), “out of, from, by,” suggesting “the source from which something is done,” is sometimes rendered “by means of,” e.g., Luke 16:9, RV, “by means of (the mammon of unrighteousness)”; KJV, “of”; 2 Cor. 1:11, “by (the) means of (many).”

4. dia (διά, 1223), “by, by means of,” when followed by the genitive case, is instrumental, e.g., 2 Pet. 3:6, RV, “by which means” (KJV, “whereby”).

5. pos (πώς, 4459), an interrogative adverb (different from No. 2), “how, in what way,” Luke 8:36, KJV, “by what means,” RV, “how”; so John 9:21; cf. Note (4) below.

Notes: (1) In Luke 5:18 the KJV adds the word “means” in italics. (2) The word tropos, “a manner, way,” is sometimes used in a prepositional phrase, e.g., 2 Thess. 2:3, KJV, “by any means,” RV, “in any wise,” lit., “in any manner”; 2 Th 3:16, KJV, “by all means,” RV, “in all ways,” lit., “in every manner.” (3) The double negative ou me, i.e., “no not,” “not at all,” is translated “by no means,” Matt. 5:26; in Luke 10:19, “by any means,” KJV (RV, “in any wise”); Luke 12:59, RV, “by no means” (KJV, “not”). (4) In Acts 4:9, the phrase en, “in” or “by,” with tini (from tis, “who”), lit., “in whom” (RV, marg.), is translated “by what means.” (5) In Heb. 9:15, RV, the verb ginomai, “to come to be, become, take place,” used in its 2nd aorist participle, is rightly translated “(a death) having taken place”; KJV, “by means of (death).” (6) In Rev. 13:14, RV, dia, followed by the accusative case, is rightly translated “by reason of,” i.e., “on account of” (KJV, wrongly, “by the means of”).

MEASURE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. metron (μέτρον, 3358) denotes (I) “that which is used for measuring, a measure,” (a) of “a vessel,” figuratively, Matt. 23:32; Luke 6:38 (twice); in John 3:34, with the preposition ek, “(He giveth not the Spirit) by measure,” RV (which is a necessary correction; the italicized words “unto him,” KJV, detract from the meaning). Not only had Christ the Holy Spirit without “measure,” but God so gives the Spirit through Him to others. It is the ascended Christ who gives the Spirit to those who receive His testimony and set their seal to this, that God is true. The Holy Spirit is imparted neither by degrees, nor in portions, as if He were merely an influence, He is bestowed personally upon each believer, at the time of the New Birth; (b) of “a graduated rod or rule for measuring,” figuratively, Matt. 7:2; Mark 4:24; literally, Rev. 21:15 (in the best mss.; see the RV); v. 17; (II) “that which is measured, a determined extent, a portion measured off,” Rom. 12:3; 2 Cor. 10:13 (twice); Eph. 4:7, “(according to the) measure (of the gift of Christ);” the gift of grace is “measured” and given according to the will of Christ; whatever the endowment, His is the bestowment and the adjustment; v. 13, “the measure (of the stature of the fullness of Christ),” the standard of spiritual stature being the fullness which is essentially Christ’s; v. 16, “(according to the working in due) measure (of each several part),” i.e., according to the effectual working of the ministration rendered in due “measure” by every part.¶

2. meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part, portion,” is used with the preposition apo, “from,” with the meaning “in some measure,” Rom. 15:15, RV (KJV, “... sort”). See COAST, PART.

3. saton (σάτον, 4568) is a Hebrew dry measure (Heb., seah), about a peck and a half, Matt. 13:33; Luke 13:21; “three measures” would be the quantity for a baking (cf. Gen. 18:6; Judg. 6:19; 1 Sam. 1:24; the “ephah” of the last two passages was equal to three sata).¶

4. koros (κόρος, 2884) denotes a cor, the largest Hebrew dry measure (ten ephahs), containing about 11 bushels, Luke 16:7; the hundred “measures” amounted to a very considerable quantity.¶

5. batos (βάτος, 943) denotes a bath, a Jewish liquid measure (the equivalent of an ephah), containing between 8 and 9 gallons, Luke 16:6.¶

6. choenix (χοῖνιξ, 5518), a dry “measure” of rather less than a quart, about “as much as would support a person of moderate appetite for a day,” occurs in Rev. 6:6 (twice). Usually eight choenixes could be bought for a denarius (about 9 1/2d.); this passage predicts circumstances in which the denarius is the price of one choenix.¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 45:10, 11, where it represents the Heb. ephah and bath.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 10:14, KJV, huperekteino, “to stretch out overmuch,” is translated “we stretch (not ourselves) beyond measure,” (RV “... overmuch).” (2) In 2 Cor. 11:9, RV, prosanapleroo, “to fill up by adding to, to supply fully,” is translated “supplied the measure” (KJV, “supplied”). See SUPPLY. (3) For the phrases in the KJV, “beyond measure,” Gal. 1:13; “out of measure,” 2 Cor. 1:8, see ABUNDANCE, A, No. 4, EXCEL, B. (4) In Mark 6:51, some mss. have the phrase ek perissou, “beyond measure” (KJV). (5) For the phrase “be exalted above measure,” 2 Cor. 12:7, KJV, see EXALT, A, No. 4.

B. Adverbs.

1. hyperballontos (ὑπερβαλλόντως, 5234), “beyond measure” (hyper, “over, beyond,” ballo, “to throw”; for the verb hyperballo, see EXCEEDING), is rendered “above measure” in 2 Cor. 11:23.¶

2. perissos (περισσῶς, 4057), Mark 10:26; see EXCEED, B, No. 4.

3. hyperperissos (ὑπερπερισσῶς, 5249), Mark 7:37: see ABUNDANCE D, No. 3.¶

C. Adjective.

ametros (ἄμετρος, 280), “without measure” (a, negative, and A, No. 1), is used in the neuter plural in an adverbial phrase in 2 Cor. 10:13, 15, eis ta ametra, lit., “unto the (things) without measure,” RV, “(we will not glory) beyond our measure,” KJV, “(we will not boast) of things without measure,” referring to the sphere divinely appointed for the apostle as to his gospel ministry; this had reached to Corinth, and by the increase of the faith of the church there, would extend to regions beyond. His opponents had no scruples about intruding into the spheres of other men’s work.¶

D. Verbs.

1. metreo (μετρέω, 3354), “to measure” (akin to A, No. 1), is used (a) of space, number, value, etc., Rev. 11:1, 2; 21:15, 16, 17; metaphorically, 2 Cor. 10:12; (b) in the sense of “measuring” out, giving by “measure,” Matt. 7:2, “ye mete” (some mss. have No. 2); Mark 4:24; in some mss. in Luke 6:38 (see No. 2).¶

2. antimetreo (ἀντιμετρέω, 488), “to measure in return” (anti, “back, in return” and No. 1), is used in the passive voice, and found in some mss. in Matt. 7:2 (the most authentic have No. 1); in Luke 6:38 the most authentic have this verb.¶ It is not found in the Sept.

MEAT

1. broma (βρώμα, 1033), “food” (akin to bibrosko, “to eat,” John 6:13¶), solid food in contrast to milk, is translated “food” in Matt. 14:15, RV (KJV, “victuals”); “meats,” Mark 7:19; 1 Cor. 6:13 (twice); 1 Tim. 4:3; Heb. 9:10; 13:9; “meat,” John 4:34; Rom. 14:15 (twice), 20; 1 Cor. 3:2; 8:8, 13; 10:3; “food,” RV, for KJV, “meat,” Luke 3:11; 9:13.¶

2. bro̓sis (βρώσις, 1035), akin to No. 1, denotes (a) “the act of eating,” 1 Cor. 8:4 (see EAT); (b) “food,” translated “meat” in John 4:32 (for v. 34, see No. 1); 6:27 (twice, the second time metaphorically, of spiritual food); 6:55, RV, marg., “(true) meat”; Rom. 14:17, KJV, “meat,” RV, “eating”; Col. 2:16; in Heb. 12:16, RV, “mess of meat,” KJV, “morsel of meat”; in 2 Cor. 9:10, “food”; in Matt. 6:19, 20, “rust.” See EAT, EATING, B.¶

3. bro̓simos (βρώσιμος, 1034), “eatable,” Luke 24:41, KJV, “any meat” (RV, “anything to eat”). See EAT, C.¶

4. trophē (τροφή, 5160), “nourishment, food,” is translated “meat” in the KJV (RV “food”) except in two instances. See FOOD, No. 1.

5. phagō (φάγω, 5315), “to eat,” is used as a noun, in the infinitive mood, and translated “meat” in Matt. 25:35, 42 (lit., “to eat”); in Luke 8:55 the RV translates it literally, “to eat” (KJV, “meat”). See EAT, No. 2.

6. trapeza (τράπεζα, 5132), “a table” (Eng., “trapeze”), is used, by metonymy, of “the food on the table,” in Acts 16:34 (RV, marg., “a table”) and translated “meat”; cf. “table” in Rom. 11:9; 1 Cor. 10:21. See TABLE.

Notes: (1) For prosp̓hagion, John 21:5, KJV, “any meat,” see EAT, B, No. 2. (2) In Luke 12:42, sitometrion denotes “a measured portion of food” (sitos, “food,” metrios, “within measure”). (3) In Matt. 15:37 and Mark 8:8, the KJV translates the plural of klasma, “a broken piece” (from klao, “to break”), “broken meat” (RV, “broken pieces”). (4) In John 12:2, RV, anakeimai, “to recline at table,” is translated “sat at meat” (KJV, “sat at the table”); in Mark 6:26, RV, according to the best mss., “sat at meat,” some have sunanakeimai (KJV, “sat with him”); in Mark 6:22, RV, sunanakeimai, “to recline at table together,” is translated “that sat at meat with him.” (5) In Acts 15:29, KJV, the neuter plural of eidolothutos, “sacrificed to idols,” is translated “meats offered to idols” (RV, “things ...,” as elsewhere in the KJV). See IDOLS (OFFERED TO). (6) For kataklineo, “to sit down to (recline at) meat,” see SIT, No. 7.

MEDIATOR

mesites (μεσίτης, 3316), lit., “a go-between” (from mesos, “middle,” and eimi, “to go”), is used in two ways in the NT, (a) “one who mediates” between two parties with a view to producing peace, as in 1 Tim. 2:5, though more than mere “mediatorship” is in view, for the salvation of men necessitated that the Mediator should Himself possess the nature and attributes of Him towards whom He acts, and should likewise participate in the nature of those for whom He acts (sin apart); only by being possessed both of deity and humanity could He comprehend the claims of the one and the needs of the other; further, the claims and the needs could be met only by One who, Himself being proved sinless, would offer Himself an expiatory sacrifice on behalf of men; (b) “one who acts as a guarantee” so as to secure something which otherwise would not be obtained. Thus in Heb. 8:6; 9:15; 12:24 Christ is the Surety of “the better covenant,” “the new covenant,” guaranteeing its terms for His people.

In Gal. 3:19 Moses is spoken of as a “mediator,” and the statement is made that “a mediator is not a mediator of one,” v. 20, that is, of one party. Here the contrast is between the promise given to Abraham and the giving of the Law. The Law was a covenant enacted between God and the Jewish people, requiring fulfillment by both parties. But with the promise to Abraham, all the obligations were assumed by God, which is implied in the statement, “but God is one.”¶ In the Sept., Job 9:33, daysman.¶

MEDITATE

1. meletao (μελετάω, 3191), primarily, “to care for” (akin to melete, “care”; cf. melei, “it is a care”), denotes (a) “to attend to, practice,” 1 Tim. 4:15, RV, “be diligent in” (KJV, “meditate upon”); to practice is the prevalent sense of the word, and the context is not against this significance in the RV rendering; some mss. have it in Mark 13:11; (b) “to ponder, imagine,” Acts 4:25. See IMAGINE.¶

2. promeletao (προμελετάω, 4304), “to premeditate,” is used in Luke 21:14.¶ Note: In the corresponding passage in Mark 13:11, the most authentic mss. have the verb promerimnao, “to be anxious beforehand” (RV); see No. 1.

For MEDDLER see BUSYBODY

MEEK, MEEKNESS

A. Adjective.

praus or praos (πραῦς, 4239) denotes “gentle, mild, meek”; for its significance see the corresponding noun, below, B. Christ uses it of His own disposition, Matt. 11:29; He gives it in the third of His Beatitudes, 5:5; it is said of Him as the King Messiah, 21:5, from Zech. 9:9; it is an adornment of the Christian profession, 1 Pet. 3:4.¶ Cf. epios, “gentle, of a soothing disposition,” 1 Thess. 2:7; 2 Tim. 2:24.¶

B. Nouns.

1. prautes, or praotes, an earlier form, (πραῦτης, 4240) denotes “meekness.” In its use in Scripture, in which it has a fuller, deeper significance than in nonscriptural Greek writings, it consists not in a person’s “outward behavior only; nor yet in his relations to his fellow-men; as little in his mere natural disposition. Rather it is an inwrought grace of the soul; and the exercises of it are first and chiefly towards God. It is that temper of spirit in which we accept His dealings with us as good, and therefore without disputing or resisting; it is closely linked with the word tapeinophrosune [humility], and follows directly upon it, Eph. 4:2; Col. 3:12; cf. the adjectives in the Sept. of Zeph. 3:12, “meek and lowly”; ... it is only the humble heart which is also the meek, and which, as such, does not fight against God and more or less struggle and contend with Him. This meekness, however, being first of all a meekness before God, is also such in the face of men, even of evil men, out of a sense that these, with the insults and injuries which they may inflict, are permitted and employed by Him for the chastening and purifying of His elect” (Trench, Syn. Sec.xlii). In Gal. 5:23 it is associated with enkrateia, “self-control.”

The meaning of prautes “is not readily expressed in English, for the terms meekness, mildness, commonly used, suggest weakness and pusillanimity to a greater or less extent, whereas prautes does nothing of the kind. Nevertheless, it is difficult to find a rendering less open to objection than ‘meekness’; ‘gentleness’ has been suggested, but as prautes describes a condition of mind and heart, and as ‘gentleness’ is appropriate rather to actions, this word is no better than that used in both English Versions. It must be clearly understood, therefore, that the meekness manifested by the Lord and commended to the believer is the fruit of power. The common assumption is that when a man is meek it is because he cannot help himself; but the Lord was ‘meek’ because he had the infinite resources of God at His command. Described negatively, meekness is the opposite to self-assertiveness and self-interest; it is equanimity of spirit that is neither elated nor cast down, simply because it is not occupied with self at all.

“In 2 Cor. 10:1 the apostle appeals to the ‘meekness ... of Christ.’ Christians are charged to show ‘all meekness toward all men,’ Titus 3:2, for meekness becomes ‘God’s elect,’ Col. 3:12. To this virtue the ‘man of God’ is urged; he is to ‘follow after meekness’ for his own sake, 1 Tim. 6:11 (the best texts have No. 2 here however), and in his service, and more especially in his dealings with the ‘ignorant and erring,’ he is to exhibit ‘a spirit of meekness,’ 1 Cor. 4:21, and Gal. 6:1; even ‘they that oppose themselves’ are to be corrected in meekness, 2 Tim. 2:25. James exhorts his ‘beloved brethren’ to ‘receive with meekness the implanted word,’ 1:21. Peter enjoins ‘meekness’ in setting forth the grounds of the Christian hope, 3:15.”*¶

2. praupathia, “a meek disposition, meekness” (praus, “meek,” pascho, “to suffer”), is found in the best texts in 1 Tim. 6:11.¶

MEET (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjectives.

1. axios (ἄξιος, 514) has the meaning of being of “weight, value, worth”; also “befitting, becoming, right on the ground of fitness,” e.g., Matt. 3:8, KJV, “meet” (RV, “worthy”); so Acts 26:20; Luke 3:8 (“worthy”); 23:41 (“due reward”). See REWARD, WORTHY.

2. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “sufficient, competent, fit,” is translated “meet” in 1 Cor. 15:9. See ENOUGH, SUFFICIENT.

3. kalos (καλός, 2570), “good,” is translated “meet” in Matt. 15:26 and Mark 7:27. See GOOD.

4. euthetos (εὐθετος, 2111), “well-placed,” is translated “meet” in Heb. 6:7: see FIT.

Note: In Phil. 1:7 and 2 Pet. 1:13, KJV, dikaïos, “just,” is translated “meet” (RV, “right”). For “meet ... for use,” 2 Tim. 2:21, see USE, Note.

B. Verbs.

1. dei (δεῖ, 1163), an impersonal verb, “it is necessary, one must,” is translated “it was meet,” in Luke 15:32; in Rom. 1:27, KJV, “was meet” (RV, “was due”). See DUE, B, No. 2.

2. hikanoo (ἱκανόω, 2427), “to render fit, meet, to make sufficient,” is translated “hath made ... meet” in Col. 1:12; in 2 Cor. 3:6, RV, “made ... sufficient” (KJV, “hath made ... able”). See ABLE.¶

MEET (Verb), MEET WITH, MET

A. Verbs.

---

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine pp. 294

1. apantao (ἀπαντάω, 528), “to go to meet, to meet” (apo, “from,” antao, “to meet with, come face to face with”), is used in Mark 14:13 and Luke 17:12. Some mss. have this verb for No. 3 in Matt. 28:9; Mark 5:2; Luke 14:31; John 4:51; Acts 16:16.¶

2. sunantao (συναντάω, 4876), “to meet with,” lit., “to meet together with” (sun, “with,” and antao, see No. 1), is used in Luke 9:37 (in v. 18, in some mss.); 22:10; Acts 10:25; Heb. 7:1, 10; metaphorically in Acts 20:22 (“shall befall”). See BEFALL.¶

3. hupantao (ὑπαντάω, 5221), “to go to meet, to meet,” has the same meaning as No. 1, and is used in Matt. 8:28; Luke 8:27; John 11:20, 30, and, in the most authentic mss., in Matt. 28:9; Mark 5:2; Luke 14:31 (of meeting in battle); John 4:51; 12:18 and Acts 16:16 (see No. 1).¶

4. paratunchano (παράτυγχάνω, 3909), “to happen to be near or present, to chance to be by” (para, “beside, near,” tunchano, “to happen”), occurs in Acts 17:17, “met with (him).”¶

5. sumballo (συμβάλλω, 4820), “to confer, to fall in with, meet with,” is translated “met” in Acts 20:14, RV (KJV, “met with”), of the apostle Paul’s “meeting” his companions at Assos. See CONFER, No. 3.

B. Nouns.

1. hupantesis (ὑπάντησις, 5222), “a going to meet” (akin to A, No. 3), preceded by the preposition eis, “unto,” lit., “unto a meeting,” translated “to meet,” is found in John 12:13, and in the most authentic mss. in Matt. 8:34 (see No. 3) and 25:1 (see No. 2).¶

2. apantesis (ἀπάντησις, 529), “a meeting” (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in Matt. 25:6 (in some mss. in v. 1, and in 27:32, in some mss.); Acts 28:15; 1 Thess. 4:17. It is used in the papyri of a newly arriving magistrate. “It seems that the special idea of the word was the official welcome of a newly arrived dignitary” (Moulton, Greek Test. Gram. Vol. 1, p. 14).¶

3. sunantesis (συνάντησις, 4877), “a coming to meet with” (akin to A, No. 2), is found in some mss. in Matt. 8:34, of the coming out of all the people of a city to meet the Lord (see No. 1).¶

psallo (ψάλλω, 5567), primarily “to twitch, twang,” then, “to play a stringed instrument with the fingers,” and hence, in the Sept., “to sing with a harp, sing psalms,” denotes, in the NT, “to sing a hymn, sing praise”; in Eph. 5:19, “making melody” (for the preceding word ado, see SING). Elsewhere it is rendered “sing,” Rom. 15:9; 1 Cor. 14:15; in Jas. 5:13, RV, “let him sing praise” (KJV, “let him sing psalms”). See SING.¶

MELT

teko (τήκω, 5080), “to melt, melt down,” is used in the passive voice in 2 Pet. 3:12, “shall melt” (lit., “shall be melted”), of the elements (Eng., “thaw” is etymologically connected).¶

Note: In verse 10, the KJV “shall melt” represents the verb luo, “to loosen, dissolve” (RV, “shall be dissolved,” passive voice); so in vv. 11-12.

MEMBER

melos (μέλος, 3196), “a limb of the body,” is used (a) literally, Matt. 5:29-30; Rom. 6:13 (twice), 19 (twice); 7:5, 23 (twice); 12:4 (twice); 1 Cor. 12:12 (twice), 14, 18-20, 22, 25-26 (twice); Jas. 3:5, 6; 4:1; in Col. 3:5, “mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth”; since our bodies and their “members” belong to the earth, and are the instruments of sin, they are referred to as such (cf. Matt. 5:29-30; Rom. 7:5, 23, mentioned above); the putting to death is not physical, but ethical; as the physical “members” have distinct individualities, so those evils, of which the physical “members” are agents, are by analogy regarded as examples of the way in which the “members” work if not put to death; this is not precisely the same as “the old man,” v. 9, i.e., the old nature, though there is a connection; (b) metaphorically, “of believers as members of Christ,” 1 Cor. 6:15 (1st part); of one another, Rom. 12:5 (as with the natural illustration, so with the spiritual analogy, there is not only vital unity, and harmony in operation, but diversity, all being essential to effectivity; the unity is not due to external organization but to common and vital union in Christ); there is stress in v. 5 upon “many” and “in Christ” and “members;” 1 Cor. 12:27 (of the “members” of a local church as a body); Eph. 4:25 (of the “members” of the whole Church as the mystical body of Christ); in 1 Cor. 6:15 (2nd part), of one who practices fornication.¶

MEMORIAL

mnemosunon (μνημόσυνον, 3422) denotes “a memorial,” that which keeps alive the memory of someone or something (from mnemon, “mindful”), Matt. 26:13; Mark 14:9; Acts 10:4.¶

For MEMORY (keep in) see KEEP, Note (8)

MEN

Notes: (1) For this plural see the nouns under MAN. (2) For anthropinos, e.g., Rom. 6:19, “after the manner of men,” see MAN’S, No. 1. (3) For the phrase kat’ anthropon, “after the manner of men,” see MAN, No. 1 (f). (4) The phrase “quit you like men,” 1 Cor. 16:13, translates the verb andrizo, in the middle voice, “to play the man” (a verb illustrated in the papyri). (5) See also ALL, GOOD, GREAT, LOW (estate), THESE, (of) WAR.

MEN-PLEASERS

anthropareskos (ἄνθρωπάρεσκος, 441), an adjective signifying “studying to please men” (anthropos, “man,” aresko, “to please”), designates, “not simply one who is pleasing to men ... , but one who endeavors to please men and not God” (Cremer). It is used in Eph. 6:6 and Col. 3:22.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 53:5.¶

MENSERVANTS

pais (παῖς, 3816), for the meanings of which see CHILD, No. 4, is translated “menservants” in Luke 12:45.

MEN-STEALERS

andrapodistes (ἀνδραποδιστής, 405), “a slave dealer, kidnapper,” from andrapodon, “a slave captured in war,” a word found in the plural in the papyri, e.g., in a catalogue of property and in combination with tetrapoda, “four-footed things” (andrapodon, aner, “a man,” pous, “a foot”); andrapodon “was never an ordinary word for slave; it was too brutally obvious a reminder of the principle which made quadruped and human chattels differ only in the number of their legs” (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). The verb andrapodizo supplied the noun “with the like odious meaning,” which appears in 1 Tim. 1:10.¶

MEND

katartizo (καταρτίζω, 2675), from kata, “down,” intensive and artios, “fit,” has three meanings, (a) “to mend, repair,” Matt. 4:21; Mark 1:19, of nets; (b) “to complete, furnish completely, equip, prepare,” Luke 6:40; Rom. 9:22; Heb. 11:3 and in the middle voice, Matt. 21:16; Heb. 10:5; (c) “ethically, to prepare, perfect,” Gal. 6:1; 1 Thess. 3:10; 1 Pet. 5:10; Heb. 13:21; and in the passive voice, 1 Cor. 1:10; 2 Cor. 13:11. See FIT, FRAME, JOIN, PERFECT, PREPARE, RESTORE.¶

MENTION (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

mneia (μνεία, 3417), “remembrance, mention” (akin to mimnesko, “to remind, remember”), is always used in connection with prayer, and translated “mention” in Rom. 1:9; Eph. 1:16; 1 Thess. 1:2; Philem. 4, in each of which it is preceded by the verb to make; “remembrance” in Phil. 1:3; 1 Thess. 3:6; 2 Tim. 1:3. Some mss. have it in Rom. 12:13, instead of chreiais, necessities. See REMEMBRANCE.¶ Cf. mneme, “memory, remembrance,” 2 Pet. 1:15.¶

B. Verb.

mnemoneuo (μνημονεύω, 3421), which most usually means “to call to mind, remember,” signifies “to make mention of,” in Heb. 11:22. See REMEMBER.

MERCHANDISE (Noun, and Verb, to make)

A. Nouns.

1. emporía (ἐμπορία, 1711) denotes “commerce, business, trade” [akin to No. 2, and to emporos, “one on a journey” (en, “in,” poros, “a journey”), “a merchant”], occurs in Matt. 22:5.¶

2. emporion (ἐμπόριον, 1712) denotes “a trading place, exchange” (Eng., “emporium”), John 2:16, “(a house) of merchandise.”¶

3. gomos (γόμος, 1117) is translated “merchandise” in Rev. 18:11, 12: see BURDEN, A, No. 3.

B. Verb.

emporeuomai (ἐμπορεύομαι, 1710) primarily signifies “to travel,” especially for business; then, “to traffic, trade,” Jas. 4:13; then, “to make a gain of, make merchandise of,” 2 Pet. 2:3.¶

MERCHANT

emporos (ἐμπορος, 1713) denotes “a person on a journey” (poros, “a journey”), “a passenger on shipboard”; then, “a merchant,” Matt. 13:45; Rev. 18:3, 11, 15, 23.¶
MERCIFUL (Adjective, and Verb, to be), MERCY (Noun, and Verb, to have, etc.)

A. Nouns.

1. eleos (ἐλεος, 1656) “is the outward manifestation of pity; it assumes need on the part of him who receives it, and resources adequate to meet the need on the part of him who shows it. It is used (a) of God, who is rich in mercy, Eph. 2:4, and who has provided salvation for all men, Titus 3:5, for Jews, Luke 1:72, and Gentiles, Rom. 15:9. He is merciful to those who fear him, Luke 1:50, for they also are compassed with infirmity, and He alone can succor them. Hence they are to pray boldly for mercy, Heb. 4:16, and if for themselves, it is seemly that they should ask for mercy for one another, Gal. 6:16; 1 Tim. 1:2. When God brings His salvation to its issue at the Coming of Christ, His people will obtain His mercy, 2 Tim. 1:16; Jude 21; (b) of men; for since God is merciful to them, He would have them show mercy to one another, Matt. 9:13; 12:7; 23:23; Luke 10:37; Jas. 2:13.

“Wherever the words mercy and peace are found together they occur in that order, except in Gal. 6:16. Mercy is the act of God, peace is the resulting experience in the heart of man. Grace describes God’s attitude toward the lawbreaker and the rebel; mercy is His attitude toward those who are in distress.”*

“In the order of the manifestation of God’s purposes of salvation grace must go before mercy ... only the forgiven may be blessed.... From this it follows that in each of the apostolic salutations where these words occur, grace precedes mercy, 1 Tim. 1:2; 2 Tim. 1:2; Titus 1:4 (in some mss.); 2 John 3” (Trench, Syn. Sec.xlvii).

3. splanchnon (σπλάγχνον, 4698), “affections, the heart,” always in the plural in the NT, has reference to “feelings of kindness, goodwill, pity,” Phil. 2:1, RV, “tender mercies;” see AFFECTION, No. 2, and BOWELS.

Note: In Acts. 13:34 the phrase, lit., “the holy things, the faithful things (of David)” is translated, “the holy and sure blessings,” RV; the KJV, following the mss. in which the words “holy and” are absent, has “the sure mercies,” but notices the full phrase in the margin.

B. Verbs.

1. eleeo (ἐλεέω, 1653), akin to A, No. 1, signifies, in general, “to feel sympathy with the misery of another,” and especially sympathy manifested in act, (a) in the active voice,

---

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 340, 341.

“to have pity or mercy on, to show mercy” to, e.g., Matt. 9:27; 15:22; 17:15; 18:33; 20:30, 31 (three times in Mark, four in Luke); Rom. 9:15, 16, 18; 11:32; 12:8; Phil. 2:27; Jude 22, 23; (b) in the passive voice, “to have pity or mercy shown one, to obtain mercy,” Matt. 5:7; Rom. 11:30, 31; 1 Cor. 7:25; 2 Cor. 4:1; 1 Tim. 1:13, 16; 1 Pet. 2:10.

2. oikteiro (οἰκτεῖρω, 3627), akin to A, No. 2, “to have pity on” (from oiktos, “pity”: oi, an exclamation, = oh!), occurs in Rom. 9:15 (twice), where it follows No. 1 (twice); the point established there and in Exod. 33:19, from the Sept. of which it is quoted, is that the “mercy” and compassion shown by God are determined by nothing external to His attributes. Speaking generally oikteiro is a stronger term than eleeo.¶

3. hilaskomai (ἱλάσκομαι, 2433) in profane Greek meant “to conciliate, appease, propitiate, cause the gods to be reconciled”; their goodwill was not regarded as their natural condition, but as something to be earned. The heathen believed their gods to be naturally alienated in feeling from man. In the NT the word never means to conciliate God; it signifies (a) “to be propitious, merciful,” Luke 18:13, in the prayer of the publican; (b) “to expiate, make propitiation for,” Heb. 2:17, “make propitiation.”

That God is not of Himself already alienated from man, see John 3:16. His attitude toward the sinner does not need to be changed by his efforts. With regard to his sin, an expiation is necessary, consistently with God’s holiness and for His righteousness’ sake, and that expiation His grace and love have provided in the atoning sacrifice of His Son; man, himself a sinner, justly exposed to God’s wrath (John 3:36), could never find an expiation. As Lightfoot says, “when the NT writers speak at length on the subject of Divine wrath, the hostility is represented, not as on the part of God, but of men.” Through that which God has accomplished in Christ, by His death, man, on becoming regenerate, escapes the merited wrath of God. The making of this expiation [(b) above], with its effect in the mercy of God (a) is what is expressed in hilaskomai.¶ The Sept. uses the compound verb exilaskomai, e.g., Gen. 32:20; Exod. 30:10, 15, 16; 32:30, and frequently in Lev. and Num. See PROPITIATION.

C. Adjectives.

1. eleemon (ἐλεήμων, 1655), “merciful,” akin to A, No. 1, not simply possessed of pity but actively compassionate, is used of Christ as a High Priest, Heb. 2:17, and of those who are like God, Matt. 5:7 (cf. Luke 6:35, 36, where the RV, “sons” is to be read, as representing characteristics resembling those of their Father).¶

2. oiktirmon (οἰκτίρμων, 3629) “pitiful, compassionate for the ills of others,” a stronger term than No. 1 (akin to A, No. 2), is used twice in Luke 6:36, “merciful” (of the character of God, to be expressed in His people); Jas. 5:11, RV, “merciful,” KJV, “of tender mercy.”¶

3. hileos (ἵλεως, 2436), “propitious, merciful” (akin to B, No. 3), was used in profane Greek just as in the case of the verb (which see). There is nothing of this in the use of the word in Scripture. The quality expressed by it there essentially appertains to God, though man is undeserving of it. It is used only of God, Heb. 8:12; in Matt. 16:22, “Be it far from Thee” (Peter’s word to Christ) may have the meaning given in the RV marg., “(God) have mercy on Thee,” lit., “propitious to Thee” (KJV marg., “Pity Thyself”)¶ Cf. the Sept., 2 Sam. 20:20; 23:17.

4. aneleos or anileos (ἀνίλεως, 448), “unmerciful, merciless” (a, negative, n, euphonic, and A, No. 2, or C, No. 3), occurs in Jas. 2:13, said of judgment on him who shows no mercy.¶

hilasterion (ἱλαστήριον, 2435), “the lid or cover of the ark of the covenant,” signifies the Propitiatory, so called on account of the expiation made once a year on the great Day of Atonement, Heb. 9:5. For the formation see Exod. 25:17-21. The Heb. word is kapporeth, “the cover,” a meaning connected with the covering or removal of sin (Ps. 32:1) by means of expiatory sacrifice. This mercy seat, together with the ark, is spoken of as the footstool of God, 1 Chron. 28:2; cf. Ps. 99:5; 132:7. The Lord promised to be present upon it and to commune with Moses “from above the mercy seat, from between the two cherubim,” Exod. 25:22 (see CHERUBIM). In the Sept. the word epithema, which itself means “a cover,” is added to hilasterion; epithema was simply a translation of kapporeth; accordingly, hilasterion, not having this meaning, and being essentially connected with propitiation, was added. Eventually hilasterion stood for both. In 1 Chron. 28:11 the Holy of Holies is called “the House of the Kapporeth” (see RV, marg.).

Through His voluntary expiatory sacrifice in the shedding of His blood, under divine judgment upon sin, and through His resurrection, Christ has become the Mercy Seat for His people. See Rom. 3:25, and see PROPITIATION, B, No. 1.¶

MERRY (to be, to make)

1. euphraino (εὐφραίνω, 2165), in the active voice, “to cheer, make glad,” 2 Cor. 2:2, is used everywhere else in the passive voice, signifying, “to be happy, rejoice, make merry,” and translated “to be merry” in Luke 12:19; 15:23, 24, 29, 32; in 16:19, “fared (sumptuously)”; in Rev. 11:10, make merry. See FARE, GLAD, REJOICE.

2. euthumeo (εὐθυμέω, 2114), from eu, “well,” and thumos, “the soul,” as the principle of feeling, especially strong feeling, signifies “to make cheerful”; it is used intransitively in the NT, “to be of good cheer,” Acts 27:22, 25; in Jas. 5:13, RV, “is (any) cheerful?” (KJV, “... merry?”). See CHEER.¶

MESS

brosis (βρώσις, 1035), “eating, food,” is translated “mess of meat” in Heb. 12:16, RV (KJV, “morsel of meat”). See FOOD, MEAT, No. 2.

MESSAGE

1. angelia (ἀγγελία, 31), akin to angelo, “to bring a message, proclaim,” denotes a “message, proclamation, news,” 1 John 1:5 [some mss. have epangelia. see Note (1)]; 1 John 3:11, where the word is more precisely defined (by being followed by the conjunction “that,” expressing the purpose that we should love one another) as being virtually equivalent to an order.¶

Notes: (1) Epangelia (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), “a promise,” is found in some mss. in 1 John 1:5, “message” (see No. 1). See PROMISE. (2) In Luke 19:14, KJV, presbeia, is translated “a message”; RV, “an embassy,” as in 14:32. See AMBASSAGE.¶

2. akoe (ἀκοή, 189), “hearing,” also denotes “the thing heard, a message”; in 1 Thess. 2:13, it is associated with logos, “a word,” lit., “the word of hearing” (RV marg.), RV, “the word of the message,” KJV, “the word ... which ye heard”; so in Heb. 4:2, RV, “the word of hearing” (KJV, “the word preached”). See HEARING.

3. kerugma (κήρυγμα, 2782), “that which is proclaimed by a herald, a proclamation, preaching,” is translated “the message” in Titus 1:3, RV (KJV, preaching). See PREACHING.

MESSENGER

1. angelos (ἄγγελος, 32), “a messenger, an angel, one sent,” is translated “messenger,” of John the Baptist, Matt. 11:10; Mark 1:2; Luke 7:27; in the plural, of John’s “messengers,” 7:24; of those whom Christ sent before Him when on His journey to Jerusalem, 9:52; of Paul’s “thorn in the flesh,” “a messenger of Satan,” 2 Cor. 12:7; of the spies as received by Rahab, Jas. 2:25. See ANGEL.

2. apostolos (ἀπόστολος, 652), “an apostle,” is translated “messengers” in 2 Cor. 8:23 regarding Titus and “the other brethren,” whom Paul describes to the church at Corinth as “messengers of the churches,” in respect of offerings from those in Macedonia for the needy in Judea; in Phil. 2:25, of Epaphroditus as the “messenger” of the church at Philippi to the apostle in ministering to his need; RV marg. in each case, “apostle.” See APOSTLE.

For METE see MEASURE

For MID see MIDST

MIDDAY

Note: In Acts 26:13, “at midday” translates the adjective mesos, “middle,” and the noun hemera, “a day,” in a combined adverbial phrase. See MIDST.

For MIDDLE see WALL

MIDNIGHT

mesonuktion (μεσονύκτιον, 3317), an adjective denoting “at, or of, midnight,” is used as a noun in Mark 13:35; Luke 11:5; Acts 16:25; 20:7.¶

Note: In Matt. 25:6 “at midnight” translates the adjective mesos, and noun nux, “night,” in the combined adverbial phrase. In Acts 27:27 “about midnight” translates an adverbial phrase consisting of kata, “towards,” followed by mesos, “middle” and nux, “night,” with the article, lit., “towards (the) middle of the night.” See MIDST.

MIDST

A. Adjective and Adverb.

mesos (μέσος, 3319), an adjective denoting “middle, in the middle or midst,” is used in the following, in which the English requires a phrase, and the adjectival rendering must be avoided: Luke 22:55, “Peter sat in the midst of them,” lit., “a middle one of (them)”; Luke 23:45, of the rending of the veil “in the midst”; here the adjective idiomatically belongs to the verb “was rent,” and is not to be taken literally, as if it meant “the middle veil”; John 1:26, “in the midst of you (standeth One),” RV (lit., “a middle One”); Acts 1:18, where the necessity of avoiding the lit. rendering is obvious. Cf. the phrases “at midday,” “at midnight” (see MIDDAY, MIDNIGHT, above). Notes: Mesos is used adverbially, in prepositional phrases, (a) ana m., e.g., 1 Cor. 6:5, “between”; Matt. 13:25, “among”; Rev. 7:17, “in the midst”; (b) dia m., e.g., Luke 4:30; 17:11, “through the midst”; (c) en m., Luke 10:3, RV, “in the midst,” KJV, “among”; so 22:27; 1 Thess. 2:7; with the article after en, e.g., Matt. 14:6, RV, “in the midst,” KJV, “before”; (d) eis m., Mark 14:60, “in the midst”; with the article, e.g., Mark 3:3, “forth” (lit., “into the midst”); (e) ek m., “out of the way,” lit., “out of the midst,” Col. 2:14; 2 Thess. 2:7, where, however, removal is not necessarily in view; there is no accompanying verb signifying removal, as in each of the other occurrences of the phrase; with the article, e.g., 1 Cor. 5:2; 2 Cor. 6:17; see WAY; (f) kata m., Acts 27:27, “about mid(night).”

(2) The neuter, meson, is used adverbially in Matt. 14:24, in some mss., “in the midst (of the waves)”; in Phil. 2:15 in the best mss. (where some mss. have en m....). (3) For Rev. 8:13, see HEAVEN, A, No. 2.

B. Verb.

mesoo (μεσόω, 3322), “to be in the middle,” is used of time in John 7:14, translated “when it was ... the midst (of the feast),” lit., “(the feast) being in the middle.”¶

MIGHT (Noun), MIGHTY, MIGHTILY, MIGHTIER

A. Nouns.

1. dunamis (δύναμις, 1411), “power,” (a) used relatively, denotes “inherent ability, capability, ability to perform anything,” e.g., Matt. 25:15, “ability”; Acts 3:12, “power”; 2 Thess. 1:7, RV, “(angels) of His power” (KJV, “mighty”); Heb. 11:11, RV, “power” (KJV, “strength”); see ABILITY; (b) used absolutely, denotes (1) “power to work, to carry something into effect,” e.g., Luke 24:49; (2) “power in action,” e.g., Rom. 1:16; 1 Cor. 1:18; it is translated “might” in the KJV of Eph. 1:21 (RV, “power”); so 3:16; Col. 1:11 (1st clause); 2 Pet. 2:11; in Rom. 15:19, KJV, this noun is rendered “mighty”; RV, “(in the power of signs.” The RV consistently avoids the rendering “might” for dunamis; the usual rendering is “power.” Under this heading comes the rendering “mighty works,” e.g., Matt. 7:22, RV (KJV, “wonderful works”); 11:20-23; singular number in Mark 6:5; in Matt. 14:2 and Mark 6:14 the RV has “powers”; in 2 Cor. 12:12, RV, “mighty works” (KJV, “mighty deeds”). See MIRACLE, especially POWER.

Note: Dunamis, “power,” is to be distinguished from exousia, “the right to exercise power.” See DOMINION, Note.

2. ischus (ἰσχός, 2479) denotes “might, strength, power,” (a) inherent and in action as used of God, Eph. 1:19, RV, “(the strength, kratos, of His) might,” KJV, “(His mighty power,” i.e., power (over external things) exercised by strength; Eph. 6:10, “of His might”; 2 Thess. 1:9, RV, “(from the glory) of His might” (KJV “power”); Rev. 5:12, RV, “might” (KJV, “strength”); 7:12, “might”; (b) as an endowment, said (1) of angels, 2 Pet. 2:11; here the order is No. 2 and No. 1, RV, “might and power,” which better expresses the distinction than the KJV, “power and might”; in some mss. in Rev. 18:2 it is said of the voice of an angel [see E, (c)]; the most authentic mss. have the adjective ischuros,

“mighty”; (2) of men, Mark 12:30, 33; Luke 10:27 (RV and KJV, “strength,” in all three verses); 1 Pet. 4:11, RV, “strength” (KJV, “ability”: this belongs rather to No. 1). Either “strength” or “might” expresses the true significance of ischus. See ABILITY, POWER, STRENGTH.¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 9:43, KJV, megaleiotes, “greatness, majesty,” is translated “mighty power” (RV, “majesty”). (2) Cf. kratos (see POWER).

B. Adjectives.

1. dunatos (δυνατός, 1415), “powerful, mighty” (akin to A, No. 1), is used, with that significance, (1) of God, Luke 1:49, “mighty”; Rom. 9:22, “power” (here the neuter of the adjective is used with the article, as a noun, equivalent to dunamis); frequently with the meaning “able” (see ABLE, C, No. 1); (2) of Christ, regarded as a prophet, Luke 24:19 (“in deed and word”); (3) of men: Moses, Acts 7:22 (“in his words and works”); Apollos, 18:24, “in the Scriptures”; of those possessed of natural power, 1 Cor. 1:26; of those possessed of spiritual power, 2 Cor. 10:4. For the shades of meaning in the translation “strong,” see Rom. 15:1; 2 Cor. 12:10; 13:9. For Rev. 6:15, see No. 2, below; see STRONG. See also POSSIBLE.

2. ischuros (ἰσχυρός, 2478), “strong, mighty” (akin to A, No. 2, and with corresponding adjectival significance), is usually translated “strong”; “mighty” in Luke 15:14 (of a famine); Rev. 19:6 (of thunders); 19:18 (of men): in the following, where the KJV has “mighty,” the RV substitutes “strong,” 1 Cor. 1:27; Rev. 6:15 (KJV, “mighty men”); 18:10, 21; Heb. 11:34, RV, “(waxed) mighty” (KJV, “valiant”). See BOISTEROUS, POWERFUL, STRONG (where the word is analyzed).

3. ischuroteros (ἰσχυρότερος, 2478*), “stronger, mightier,” the comparative degree of No. 2, is translated “mightier” in Matt. 3:11; Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; “stronger” in Luke 11:22; 1 Cor. 1:25; 10:22. See STRONG.¶

4. biaios (βίαιος, 972), “violent” (from bia, “force, violence, strength,” found in Acts 5:26; 21:35; 24:7; 27:41¶), occurs in Acts 2:2, of wind.¶

5. krataios (κραταίος, 2900), “strong, mighty” (akin to kratos, “strength,” relative and manifested power: see MIGHTILY, below), is found in 1 Pet. 5:6, of the “mighty” hand of God.¶

6. megaleios (μεγαλῆιος, 3167) is rendered “mighty” in Acts 2:11, RV See WONDERFUL, Note (2).

Notes: (1) In Luke 1:52, KJV, dunastes, “a potentate, prince,” is translated “mighty” (RV, “princes”). (2) In Rev. 6:13, KJV, megas, “great,” is translated “mighty” (RV, “great”), of a wind. (3) In Rev. 16:18, KJV, telikoutos, “so great” (when said of things), is translated “so mighty” (RV, “so great”), of an earthquake.

C. Verb.

dunateo (δυνατέω, 1414), “to be powerful” (akin to A, No. 1 and B, No. 1), is found in the most authentic mss. in Rom. 14:4 (some have dunatos, B, No. 1), RV “(the Lord) hath power,” KJV, “(God) is able”; similarly, as regard mss., in 2 Cor. 9:8, where the RV and KJV have “(God) is able”; in 2 Cor. 13:3, KJV, “is mighty,” RV, “is powerful” (according to the general significance of dunamis).¶

Note: In Gal. 2:8, KJV, energeo, “to work, work in” (en, “in,” ergon, “work”), is first translated “wrought effectually,” then “was mighty in” (RV, “wrought for,” in both places; the probable meaning is “in me”). See EFFECTUAL, WORK.

D. Adverb.

eutonos (εὐτόνως, 2159), “vigorously, vehemently” (eu, “well,” teino, “to stretch”), is translated “mightily” in Acts 18:28, KJV, of the power of Apollos in “confuting” the Jews (RV, “powerfully”); in Luke 23:10 it is rendered “vehemently.” See POWERFUL, VEHEMENTLY.¶ In the Sept., Josh. 6:7, “(let them sound) loudly.”¶

E. Phrases.

The following phrases signify “mightily:” (a) en dunamei, Col. 1:29, of the inward power of God’s working, lit., “in power,” as RV marg. (en, “in,” and A, No. 1); (b) kata kratos, Acts 19:20, of the increase of the word of the Lord in a place, lit., “according to might”; (c) in Rev. 18:2 some mss. have en ischui, lit., “in strength” (en, “in,” and A, No. 2), of the voice of an angel.

MILE

milion (μίλιον, 3400), “a Roman mile,” a word of Latin origin (1680 yards), is used in Matt. 5:41.¶

MILK

gala (γάλα, 1051) is used (a) literally, 1 Cor. 9:7; (b) metaphorically, of rudimentary spiritual teaching, 1 Cor. 3:2; Heb. 5:12, 13; 1 Pet. 2:2; here the meaning largely depends upon the significance of the word logikos, which the KJV renders “of the word,” RV “spiritual.” While logos denotes “a word,” the adjective logikos is never used with the meaning assigned to it in the KJV, nor does the context in 1:23 compel this meaning. While it is true that the Word of God, like “milk,” nourishes the soul, and this is involved in the exhortation, the only other occurrence in the NT is Rom. 12:1, where it is translated “reasonable,” i.e., rational, intelligent (service), in contrast to the offering of an irrational animal; so here the nourishment may be understood as of that spiritually rational nature which, acting through the regenerate mind, develops spiritual growth. God’s Word is not given so that it is impossible to understand it, or that it requires a special class of men to interpret it; its character is such that the Holy Spirit who gave it can unfold its truths even to the young convert. Cf. 1 John 2:27.¶

MILL

mulon (μύλων, 3459) denotes “a mill house,” where the millstone is, Matt. 24:41; some mss. have mulos (see next word).¶ In the Sept., Jer. 52:11, “grinding house” (lit., “house of a mill”).¶

MILLSTONE

A. Noun.

mulos (μύλος, 3458) denotes “a handmill,” consisting of two circular stones, one above the other, the lower being fixed. From the center of the lower a wooden pin passes through a hole in the upper, into which the grain is thrown, escaping as flour between the stones and falling on a prepared material below them. The handle is inserted into the upper stone near the circumference. Small stones could be turned by one woman (millgrinding was a work deemed fit only for women and slaves; cf. Judg. 16:21); larger ones were turned by two (cf. Matt. 24:41, under MILL), or more.

Still larger ones were turned by an ass (onikos), Matt. 18:6, RV, “a great millstone” (marg., “a millstone turned by an ass”), indicating the immediate and overwhelming drowning of one who causes one young believer to stumble; Mark 9:42 (where some mss. have lithos mulikos, “a stone of a mill,” as in Luke 17:2); Rev. 18:22 (some mss. have it in v. 21, see below).¶

B. Adjectives.

1. mulikos (μυλικός, 3457), “of a mill,” occurs in Luke 17:2 (see above).¶

2. mulinos (3458(v)), “made of millstone,” is used with lithos, “a stone”; and with the adjective megas, “great,” in the best mss. in Rev. 18:21 (some have the word mulos; see A).¶

MIND (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. nous (νοῦς, 3563), “mind,” denotes, speaking generally, the seat of reflective consciousness, comprising the faculties of perception and understanding, and those of feeling, judging and determining.

Its use in the NT may be analyzed as follows: it denotes (a) the faculty of knowing, the seat of the understanding, Luke 24:45; Rom. 1:28; 14:5; 1 Cor. 14:15, 19; Eph. 4:17; Phil. 4:7; Col. 2:18; 1 Tim. 6:5; 2 Tim. 3:8; Titus 1:15; Rev. 13:18; 17:9; (b) counsels, purpose, Rom. 11:34 (of the “mind” of God); 12:2; 1 Cor. 1:10; 2:16, twice (1) of the thoughts and counsels of God, (2) of Christ, a testimony to His Godhood; Eph. 4:23; (c) the new nature, which belongs to the believer by reason of the new birth, Rom. 7:23, 25, where it is contrasted with “the flesh,” the principle of evil which dominates fallen man. Under (b) may come 2 Thess. 2:2, where it stands for the determination to be steadfast amidst afflictions, through the confident expectation of the day of rest and recompense mentioned in the first chapter.¶

2. dianoia (διάνοια, 1271), lit. “a thinking through, or over, a meditation, reflecting,” signifies (a) like No. 1, “the faculty of knowing, understanding, or moral reflection,” (1) with an evil significance, a consciousness characterized by a perverted moral impulse, Eph. 2:3 (plural); 4:18; (2) with a good significance, the faculty renewed by the Holy Spirit, Matt. 22:37; Mark 12:30; Luke 10:27; Heb. 8:10; 10:16; 1 Pet. 1:13; 1 John 5:20; (b) “sentiment, disposition” (not as a function but as a product); (1) in an evil sense, Luke 1:51, “imagination”; Col. 1:21; (2) in a good sense, 2 Pet. 3:1.¶

3. ennoia (ἐννοια, 1771), “an idea, notion, intent,” is rendered “mind” in 1 Pet. 4:1; see INTENT.

4. noema (νόημα, 3540), “thought, design,” is rendered “minds” in 2 Cor. 3:14; 4:4; 11:3; Phil. 4:7; see DEVICE, No. 2.

5. gnome (γνώμη, 1106), “a purpose, judgment, opinion,” is translated “mind” in Philem. 14 and Rev. 17:13. See JUDGMENT, No. 4.

6. phronema (φρόνημα, 5427) denotes “what one has in the mind, the thought” (the content of the process expressed in phroneo, “to have in mind, to think”); or “an object of thought”; in Rom. 8:6 (KJV, “to be carnally minded” and “to be spiritually minded”), the RV, adhering to the use of the noun, renders by “the mind of the flesh,” in vv. 6 and 7, and “the mind of the spirit,” in v. 6. In v. 27 the word is used of the “mind” of the Holy Spirit.¶

Notes: (1) This word is to be distinguished from phronesis, which denotes “an understanding, leading to right action, prudence,” Luke 1:17; Eph. 1:8.¶ (2) In three places, Acts 14:2; Phil. 1:27; Heb. 12:3, the KJV translates psuche, “the soul,” by “mind” (RV, “soul”).

B. Verbs.

1. phroneo (φρονέω, 5426) signifies (a) “to think, to be minded in a certain way”; (b) “to think of, be mindful of.” It implies moral interest or reflection, not mere unreasoning opinion. Under (a) it is rendered by the verb “to mind” in the following: Rom. 8:5, “(they that are after the flesh) do mind (the things of the flesh)”; 12:16, “be of (the same) mind,” lit., “minding the same,” and “set (not) your mind on,” RV, KJV, “mind (not)”; 15:5, “to be of (the same) mind,” RV, (KJV, “to be like-minded”); so the RV in 2 Cor. 13:11, KJV, “be of (one) mind”; Gal. 5:10, “ye will be (none otherwise) minded”; Phil. 1:7, RV, “to be (thus) minded,” KJV, “to think (this)”; 2:2, RV, “be of (the same) mind,” KJV, “be likeminded,” and “being ... of (one) mind,” lit., “minding (the one thing)”; 2:5, RV, “have (this) mind,” KJV, “let (this) mind be,” lit., “mind this”; 3:15, “let us ... be (thus) minded,” and “(if) ... ye are (otherwise) minded” (some mss. have the verb in v. 16); 3:19, “(who) mind (earthly things)”; 4:2, “be of (the same) mind”; Col. 3:2, RV and KJV marg., “set your mind,” lit., “mind (the things above),” KJV, “set your affection.” See CAREFUL, B, 6, REGARD, SAVOR, THINK, UNDERSTAND.

2. anamimnesko (ἀναμνησκω, 363), “to remind, call to remembrance” (ana, “up,” mimnesko, “to remind”), is translated “called to mind,” in Mark 14:72 (passive voice). See REMEMBRANCE.

Note: The lengthened form epanamimnesko is used in Rom. 15:15, KJV, “putting (you) in mind”; RV, “putting (you) again (epi) in remembrance.”¶

3. hupomimnesko (ὑπομνήσκω, 5279), “to cause one to remember, put one in mind” (hupo, “under”), is translated “put (them) in mind” in Titus 3:1. See REMEMBER, REMEMBRANCE.

4. hupotithemi (ὑποτίθῃμι, 5294), lit., “to place under” (hupo, “under,” tithemi, “to place”), “to lay down” (of risking the life, Rom. 16:4), also denotes “to suggest, put into one’s mind,” 1 Tim. 4:6, RV, “put ... in mind” (KJV, “put ... in remembrance”). See LAY.¶

5. sophroneo (σωφρονέω, 4993) signifies (a) “to be of sound mind,” or “in one’s right mind, sober-minded” (sozo, “to save,” phren, “the mind”), Mark 5:15 and Luke 8:35, “in his right mind”; 2 Cor. 5:13, RV, “we are of sober mind” (KJV, “we be sober”); (b) “to be temperate, selfcontrolled,” Titus 2:6, “to be sober-minded”; 1 Pet. 4:7, RV, “be ye ... of sound mind” (KJV, “be ye sober”). See also Rom. 12:3. See SOBER.¶

Note: In Acts 20:13, KJV, mello, “to be about to, to intend,” is translated “minding” (RV, “intending”). See INTEND.

C. Adjective.

homophron (ὁμόφρων, 3675), “agreeing, of one mind” (homos, “same,” phren, “the mind”), is used in 1 Pet. 3:8.¶

Notes: (1) For the noun sophronismos, in 2 Tim. 1:7, see DISCIPLINE.¶ (2) In Rom. 15:6, KJV, the adverb homothumadon, “of one accord,” is translated “with one mind” (RV, “of one accord”). See ACCORD. (3) See also CAST, CHANGE, DOUBTFUL, FERVENT, FORWARDNESS, HUMBLENESS, HUMILITY, LOWLINESS, READINESS, READY, WILLING.

MINDED

1. phroneo (φρονέω, 5426): see MIND, B, No. 1.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), “to wish, will, desire, purpose” (akin to boule, “counsel, purpose”), is translated “was minded” in Matt. 1:19; Acts 15:37, RV (KJV, “determined”); 18:27, RV (KJV, “was disposed”); 19:30, RV (KJV, “would have”); 5:33, RV, “were minded” (KJV, “took counsel”); 18:15, RV, “I am (not) minded (to be),” KJV, “I will (be no)”; Heb. 6:17, “being minded,” RV (KJV, “willing”), said of God. See COUNSEL.

3. bouleuo (βουλεύω, 1011), “to take counsel,” is translated “to be minded” in Acts 27:39; 2 Cor. 1:17, middle voice in each case. See COUNSEL, B, No. 1.

Note: For the noun phronema in Rom. 8:6, see MIND, A, No. 6.

MINDFUL OF (to be)

1. mimnesko (Μοινοίμαι, 5403), the tenses of which are from the older verb mnaomai, signifies “to remind”; but in the middle voice, “to remember, to be mindful of,” in the sense of caring for, e.g., Heb. 2:6, “Thou art mindful”; in 13:3, “remember”; in 2 Tim. 1:4, RV, “remembering” (KJV, “being mindful of”); so in 2 Pet. 3:2. See REMEMBER.

2. mnemoneuo (μνημονεύω, 3421), “to call to mind, remember,” is rendered “they had been mindful” in Heb. 11:15. See MENTION, B, REMEMBER.

For MINE, MINE OWN (self), see MY

MINGLE

1. mignumi (μίγνυμι, 3396), “to mix, mingle” (from a root mik; Eng., “mix” is akin), is always in the NT translated “to mingle,” Matt. 27:34; Luke 13:1; Rev. 8:7; 15:2.¶

2. kerannumi (κεράννυμι, 2767), “to mix, to mingle,” chiefly of the diluting of wine, implies “a mixing of two things, so that they are blended and form a compound, as in wine and water, whereas mignumi (No. 1) implies a mixing without such composition, as in two sorts of grain” (Liddell and Scott, Lex.). It is used in Rev. 18:6 (twice); in 14:10, RV, “prepared” (marg., “mingled”; KJV, “poured out”), lit., “mingled,” followed by akratos, “unmixed, pure” (a, negative, and kratos, an adjective, from this verb kerannumi), the two together forming an oxymoron, the combination in one phrase of two terms that are ordinarily contradictory.¶

Note: For the verb smurnizo, “to mingle with myrrh,” Mark 15:23, see MYRRH.¶

MINISTER (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. diakonos (διάκονος, 1249), “a servant, attendant, minister, deacon,” is translated “minister” in Mark 10:43; Rom. 13:4 (twice); 15:8; 1 Cor. 3:5; 2 Cor. 3:6; 6:4; 11:15 (twice); Gal. 2:17; Eph. 6:21; Col. 1:7, 23, 25; 4:7; 1 Thess. 3:2; 1 Tim. 4:6. See DEACON.

2. leitourgos (λειτουργός, 3011) denoted among the Greeks, firstly, “one who discharged a public office at his own expense,” then, in general, “a public servant, minister.” In the NT it is used (a) of Christ, as a “Minister of the sanctuary” (in the Heavens), Heb. 8:2; (b) of angels, Heb. 1:7 (Ps. 104:4); (c) of the apostle Paul, in his evangelical ministry, fulfilling it as a serving priest, Rom. 15:16; that he used it figuratively and not in an ecclesiastical sense, is obvious from the context; (d) of Epaphroditus, as ministering to Paul’s needs on behalf of the church at Philippi, Phil. 2:25; here, representative service is in view; (e) of earthly rulers, who though they do not all act consciously as servants of God, yet discharge functions which are the ordinance of God, Rom. 13:6.¶

3. huperetes (ὑπηρέτης, 5257), properly “an under rower” (hupo, “under,” eretes, “a rower”), as distinguished from nautes, “a seaman” (a meaning which lapsed from the word), hence came to denote “any subordinate acting under another’s direction”; in Luke 4:20, RV, “attendant,” KJV, “minister” it signifies the attendant at the synagogue service; in Acts 13:5, it is said of John Mark, RV, “attendant,” KJV, “minister;” in Acts 26:16, “a minister,” it is said of Paul as a servant of Christ in the gospel; so in 1 Cor. 4:1, where the apostle associates others with himself, as Apollos and Cephas, as “ministers of Christ.” See ATTEND, C, OFFICER.

Note: Other synonymous nouns are doulos, “a bondservant”; oiketēs, “a household servant”; misthios, “a hired servant”; misthotos (ditto); pais, “a boy, a household servant.” For all these see SERVANT. Speaking broadly, diakonos views a servant in relation to his work; doulos, in relation to his master; huperetes, in relation to his superior; leitourgos, in relation to public service.

B. Verbs.

1. diakoneo (διακονέω, 1247), akin to A, No. 1, signifies “to be a servant, attendant, to serve, wait upon, minister.” In the following it is translated “to minister,” except where

“to serve” is mentioned: it is used (a) with a general significance, e.g., Matt. 4:11; 20:28; Mark 1:13; 10:45; John 12:26 (“serve,” twice); Acts 19:22; Philem. 13; (b) of waiting at table, “ministering” to the guests, Matt. 8:15; Luke 4:39; 8:3; 12:37; 17:8, “serve”; 22:26, “serve,” v. 27, “serveth,” twice; the 2nd instance, concerning the Lord, may come under (a); so of women preparing food, etc., Mark 1:31; Luke 10:40, “serve”; John 12:2, “served”; (c) of relieving one’s necessities, supplying the necessities of life, Matt. 25:44; 27:55; Mark 15:41; Acts 6:2, “serve”; Rom. 15:25; Heb. 6:10; more definitely in connection with such service in a local church, 1 Tim. 3:10, 13 [there is nothing in the original representing the word “office”; RV, “let them serve as deacons,” “they that have served (well) as deacons”]; (d) of attending, in a more general way, to anything that may serve another’s interests, as of the work of an amanuensis, 2 Cor. 3:3 (metaphorical): of the conveyance of material gifts for assisting the needy, 2 Cor. 8:19, 20, RV, “is ministered” (KJV, “is administered”); of a variety of forms of service, 2 Tim. 1:18; of the testimony of the OT prophets, 1 Pet. 1:12; of the ministry of believers one to another in various ways, 1 Pet. 4:10, 11 (not here of discharging ecclesiastical functions).¶

Note: In Heb. 1:14, KJV (2nd part), the phrase eis diakonian is translated “to minister,” RV, “to do service,” lit., “for service”; for the noun “ministering” in the 1st part, see MINISTERING, B.

2. leitourgeo (λειτουργέω, 3008), (akin to A, No. 2), in classical Greek, signified at Athens “to supply public offices at one’s own cost, to render public service to the State”; hence, generally, “to do service,” said, e.g., of service to the gods. In the NT (see Note below) it is used (a) of the prophets and teachers in the church at Antioch, who “ministered to the Lord,” Acts 13:2; (b) of the duty of churches of the Gentiles to “minister” in “carnal things” to the poor Jewish saints at Jerusalem, in view of the fact that the former had “been made partakers” of the “spiritual things” of the latter, Rom. 15:27; (c) of the official service of priests and Levites under the Law, Heb. 10:11 (in the Sept., e.g., Exod. 29:30; Num. 16:9).¶

Note: The synonymous verb latreuo (properly, “to serve for hire”), which is used in the Sept. of the service of both priests and people (e.g., Exod. 4:3; Deut. 10:12, and in the NT, e.g., Heb. 8:5), and, in the NT, of Christians in general, e.g., Rev. 22:3, is to be distinguished from leitourgeo, which has to do with the fulfillment of an office, the discharge of a function, something of a representative character (Eng., “liturgy”).

3. hupereteo (ὑπηρετέω, 5256), “to do the service of a huperetes” (see A, No. 3), properly, “to serve as a rower on a ship,” is used (a) of David, as serving the counsel of God in his own generation, Acts 13:36, RV, expressive of the lowly character of his service for God; (b) of Paul’s toil in working with his hands, and his readiness to avoid any pose of ecclesiastical superiority, Acts 20:34; (c) of the service permitted to Paul’s friends to render to him, 24:23.¶

4. hierourgeo (ἱεραουργέω, 2418), “to minister in priestly service” (akin to hierourgos, “a sacrificing priest,” a word not found in the Sept. or NT: from hieros, “sacred,” and ergon, “work”), is used by Paul metaphorically of his ministry of the Gospel, Rom. 15:16; the offering connected with his priestly ministry is “the offering up of the Gentiles,” i.e., the presentation by gentile converts of themselves to God.¶ The apostle uses words proper to the priestly and Levitical ritual, to explain metaphorically his own priestly service. Cf. prosphora, “offering up,” and leitourgos, in the same verse.

5. parecho (παρέχω, 3930), “to furnish, provide, supply,” is translated “minister” in 1 Tim. 1:4, of the effect of “fables and endless genealogies.” See BRING, A, No. 21.

6. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038), “to work, work out, perform,” is translated “minister” in 1 Cor. 9:13; the verb is frequently used of business, or employment, and here the phrase means “those employed in sacred things” or “those who are assiduous in priestly functions.” See COMMIT, A, No. 1.

Notes: (1) The verb choregeo, rendered “minister” in the KJV of 2 Cor. 9:10, and the strengthened form epichoregeo, rendered by the same verb in the KJV of 2 Cor. 9:10; Gal. 3:5; Col. 2:19; 2 Pet. 1:11, in v. 5, “add,” are always translated “to supply” in the RV. Both verbs suggest an abundant supply, and are used of material or of spiritual provision. See SUPPLY. (2) In Eph. 4:29, KJV, didomi, “to give,” is translated “minister” (RV, “give”).

MINISTERING, MINISTRATION, MINISTRY

A. Nouns.

1. diakonua (διακονία, 1248), “the office and work of a diakonos” (see MINISTER, A, No. 1), “service, ministry,” is used (a) of domestic duties, Luke 10:40; (b) of religious and spiritual “ministration,” (1) of apostolic “ministry,” e.g., Acts 1:17, 25; 6:4; 12:25; 21:19; Rom. 11:13, RV (KJV, “office”); (2) of the service of believers, e.g., Acts 6:1; Rom. 12:7; 1 Cor. 12:5, RV, “ministrations” (KJV, “administrations”); 1 Cor. 16:15; 2 Cor. 8:4; 9:1, 12, RV, “ministration”; v. 13; Eph. 4:12, RV, “ministering” (KJV, “the ministry,” not in the sense of an ecclesiastical function); 2 Tim. 4:11, RV, “(for) ministering”; collectively of a local church, Acts 11:29, “relief” (RV marg. “for ministry”); Rev. 2:19, RV, “ministry” (KJV, “service”); of Paul’s service on behalf of poor saints, Rom. 15:31; (3) of the “ministry” of the Holy Spirit in the gospel, 2 Cor. 3:8; (4) of the “ministry” of angels, Heb. 1:14, RV, “to do service” (KJV, “to minister”); (5) of the work of the gospel, in general, e.g., 2 Cor. 3:9, “of righteousness,” 5:18, “of reconciliation”; (6) of the general “ministry” of a servant of the Lord in preaching and teaching, Acts 20:24; 2 Cor. 4:1; 6:3; 11:8; 1 Tim. 1:12, RV, “(to His) service”; 2 Tim. 4:5; undefined in Col. 4:17; (7) of the Law, as a “ministration” of death, 2 Cor. 3:7; of condemnation, 3:9.¶

2. leitourgia (λειτουργία, 3009), akin to leitourgos (see MINISTER, A, No. 2.), to which the meanings of leitourgia correspond, is used in the NT of “sacred ministrations,” (a) priestly, Luke 1:23; Heb. 8:6; 9:21; (b) figuratively, of the practical faith of the members of the church at Philippi regarded as priestly sacrifice, upon which the apostle’s lifeblood might be poured out as a libation, Phil. 2:17; (c) of the “ministration” of believers one to another, regarded as priestly service, 2 Cor. 9:12; Phil. 2:30. See SERVICE.¶

B. Adjective.

leitourgikos (λειτουργικός, 3010), “of or pertaining to service, ministering,” is used in Heb. 1:14, of angels as “ministering spirits” (for the word “do service” in the next clause, see A, No. 1).¶ In the Sept., Exod. 31:10; 39:13; Num. 4:12, 26; 7:5; 2 Chron. 24:14.¶

MINSTREL

mousikos (μουσικός, 3451) is found in Rev. 18:22, RV, “minstrels” (KJV, “musicians”); inasmuch as other instrumentalists are mentioned, some word like “minstrels” is necessary to make the distinction, hence the RV; Bengel and others translate it “singers.” Primarily the word denoted “devoted to the Muses” (the nine goddesses who presided over the principal departments of letters), and was used of anyone devoted to or skilled in arts and sciences, or “learned.”¶

MINT

heduosmon (ἡδύοσμον, 2238), an adjective denoting sweet-smelling (hedus, “sweet,” osme, “a smell”), is used as a neuter noun signifying “mint,” Matt. 23:23; Luke 11:42.¶

MIRACLE

1. dunamis (δύναμις, 1411), “power, inherent ability,” is used of works of a supernatural origin and character, such as could not be produced by natural agents and means. It is translated “miracles” in the RV and KJV in Acts 8:13 (where variant readings give the words in different order); 19:11; 1 Cor. 12:10, 28, 29; Gal. 3:5; KJV only, in Acts 2:22 (RV, “mighty works”); Heb. 2:4 (RV, “powers”). In Gal. 3:5, the word may be taken in its widest sense, to include “miracles” both physical and moral. See MIGHT, A, No. 1, POWER, WORK.

2. semeion (σημεῖον, 4592), “a sign, mark, token” (akin to semaino, “to give a sign”; sema, “a sign”), is used of “miracles” and wonders as signs of divine authority; it is translated “miracles” in the RV and KJV of Luke 23:8; Acts 4:16, 22; most usually it is given its more appropriate meaning “sign,” “signs,” e.g., Matt. 12:38, 39, and in every occurrence in the Synoptists, except Luke 23:8; in the following passages in John’s Gospel the RV substitutes “sign” or “signs” for the KJV “miracle or miracles”; 2:11, 23; 3:2; 4:54; 6:2, 14, 26; 7:31; 9:16; 10:41; 11:47; 12:18, 37; the KJV also has “signs” elsewhere in this Gospel; in Acts, RV, “signs,” KJV, “miracles,” in 6:8; 8:6; 15:12; elsewhere only in Rev. 13:14; 16:14; 19:20. See SIGN, TOKEN, WONDER.

borboros (βόρβορος, 1004), “mud, filth,” occurs in 2 Pet. 2:22.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 38:6 (twice), of the “mire” in the dungeon into which Jeremiah was Cast.¶

MIRROR

esoptron (ἔσοπτρον, 2072), rendered “glass” in the KJV, is used of any surface sufficiently smooth and regular to reflect rays of light uniformly, and thus produce images of objects which actually in front of it appear to the eye as if they were behind it. “Mirrors” in Biblical times were, it seems, metallic; hence the RV adopts the more general term “mirror”; in 1 Cor. 13:12, spiritual knowledge in this life is represented metaphorically as an image dimly perceived in a “mirror”; in Jas. 1:23, the “law of liberty” is figuratively compared to a “mirror”; the hearer who obeys not is like a person who, having looked into the “mirror,” forgets the reflected image after turning away; he who obeys is like one who gazes into the “mirror” and retains in his soul the image of what he should be.¶

Note: For the verb katoptrizo, “to reflect as a mirror” (some regard it as meaning “beholding in a mirror”), in 2 Cor. 3:18, see BEHOLD, No. 12.

For MISCHIEF, Acts 13:10, see VILLANY

MISERABLE, MISERABLY, MISERY

A. Adjectives.

1. eleeinos (ἐλεεινός, 1652), “pitiable, miserable” (from eleos, “mercy, pity”; see MERCY), is used in Rev. 3:17, in the Lord’s description of the church at Laodicea; here the idea is probably that of a combination of “misery” and pitiableness.¶

Note: For the comparative degree eleeinoteros, rendered “most pitiable” in 1 Cor. 15:19, RV (KJV, “most miserable”), see PITIABLE.

2. kakos (κακός, 2556), “bad, evil,” is translated “miserable” in Matt. 21:41, RV (KJV, “wicked”). See BAD.

B. Adverb.

kakos (κακῶς, 2560), “badly, ill,” is translated “miserably” in Matt. 21:41 (see A, No. 2). Adhering to the meaning “evil,” and giving the designed stress, the sentence may be rendered, “evil (as they are) he will evilly destroy them.”

C. Noun.

talaiporia (ταλαιπωρία, 5004), “hardship, suffering, distress” (akin to talaiporos, “wretched,” Rom. 7:24; Rev. 3:17,¶ and to talaiporeo, in the middle voice, “to afflict oneself,” in Jas. 4:9, “be afflicted”¶), is used as an abstract noun, “misery,” in Rom. 3:16; as a concrete noun, “miserics,” in Jas. 5:1.¶

MIST

1. achlus (ἄχλυσ, 887), “a mist,” especially a dimness of the eyes, is used in Acts 13:11. “In the single place of its NT use it attests the accuracy in the selection of words, and not least of medical words, which ‘the beloved physician’ so often displays. For him it expresses the mist of darkness ... which fell on the sorcerer Elymas, being the outward and visible sign of the inward spiritual darkness which would be his portion for a while in punishment for his resistance to the truth” (Trench, Syn., Sec.c).¶

2. homichle (ὄμιλος, 3658a), “a mist” (not so thick as nephos and nephele, “a cloud”), occurs in 2 Pet. 2:17 (1st part), RV, “mists”; some mss. have nephelai, “clouds” (KJV).¶

3. zophos (ζόφος, 2217) is rendered “mist” in the KJV of 2 Pet. 2:17 (2nd part), RV, “blackness”; “murkiness” would be a suitable rendering. For this and other synonymous terms see BLACKNESS, DARKNESS.

MITE

lepton (λεπτόν, 3016), the neuter of the adjective leptos, signifying, firstly, “peeled,” then, “fine, thin, small, light,” became used as a noun, denoting a small copper coin, often mentioned in the Mishna as proverbially the smallest Jewish coin. It was valued at 1/8th of the Roman as, and the 1/128th part of the denarius: its legal value was about one third of an English farthing; Mark 12:42 lit. reads “two lepta, which make a kodrantēs (a quadrans)”; in Luke 12:59 “the last lepton” corresponds in effect to Matt. 5:26, “the uttermost kodrantēs,” “farthing”; elsewhere Luke 21:2; see FARTHING.¶

MIXED (with)

Note: In Heb. 4:2, KJV, sunkerannumi, lit., “to mix with” (sun, “with,” kerannumi, see MINGLE, No. 2), is so translated; RV, “were (not) united (by faith) with” [KJV, “(not) being mixed ... in], as said of persons; in 1 Cor. 12:24 “hath tempered.” See TEMPER TOGETHER.¶

MIXTURE

migma (μίγμα, 3395), “a mixture” (akin to mignumi, “to mix, mingle”: see MINGLE, No. 1), occurs in John 19:39 (some mss. have heligma, “a roll”).¶

Note: In Rev. 14:10, KJV, akratos (a, negative, and kerannumi, “to mingle”) is translated “without mixture” (RV, “unmixed”).¶ In the Sept., Ps. 75:8; Jer. 32:1.¶

MOCK, MOCKER, MOCKING

A. Verbs.

1. empaizo (ἐμπαίζω, 1702), a compound of paizo, “to play like a child” (pais), “to sport, jest,” prefixed by en, “in” or “at,” is used only in the Synoptists, and, in every instance, of the “mockery” of Christ, except in Matt. 2:16 (there in the sense of deluding, or deceiving, of Herod by the wise men) and in Luke 14:29, of ridicule cast upon the one who after laying a foundation of a tower is unable to finish it. The word is used (a) prophetically by the Lord, of His impending sufferings, Matt. 20:19; Mark 10:34; Luke 18:32; (b) of the actual insults inflicted upon Him by the men who had taken Him from Gethsemane, Luke 22:63; by Herod and his soldiers, Luke 23:11; by the soldiers of the governor, Matt. 27:29, 31; Mark 15:20; Luke 23:36; by the chief priests, Matt. 27:41; Mark 15:31.¶

2. mukterizo (μυκτηρίζω, 3456), from mukter, “the nose,” hence, “to turn up the nose at, sneer at, treat with contempt,” is used in the passive voice in Gal. 6:7, where the statement “God is not mocked” does not mean that men do not mock Him (see Prov. 1:30, where the Sept. has the same verb); the apostle vividly contrasts the essential difference between God and man. It is impossible to impose upon Him who discerns the thoughts and intents of the heart.¶

Note: Ekmukterizo, a strengthened form of the above, “to scoff at,” is used in Luke 16:14 and 23:35 (RV, “scoffed at”; KJV, “derided”). See DERIDE, SCOFF.¶

3. chleuazo (χλευάζω, 5512), “to jest, mock, jeer at” (from chleue, “a jest”), is said of the ridicule of some of the Athenian philosophers at the apostle’s testimony concerning the resurrection of the dead, Acts 17:32.¶

4. diachleuazo, an intensive form of No. 3, “to scoff at,” whether by gesture or word, is said of those who jeered at the testimony given on the Day of Pentecost, Acts 2:13 (some mss. have No. 3).¶

B. Nouns.

1. empaiktes (ἐμπαίκτης, 1703), “a mocker” (akin to A, No. 1), is used in 2 Pet. 3:3, RV, “mockers”. (KJV, “scoffers”); Jude 18, RV and KJV, “mockers.”¶ In the Sept., Isa. 3:4.¶

2. empaigmos (ἐμπαιγμός, 1701), the act of the empaiktes, “a mocking,” is used in Heb. 11:36, “mockings.”¶ In the Sept., Ps. 38:7; Ezek. 22:4.¶

3. empaigmone (ἐμπαίζω, 1702d), an abstract noun, “mockery,” is used in 2 Pet. 3:3 (some mss. omit it, as in KJV): (see also No. 1, above).¶

For MODERATION, Phil. 4:5, KJV, see FORBEARANCE, C, No. 2

MODEST

kosmios (κόσμιος, 2887), “orderly, wellarranged, decent, modest” (akin to kosmos, in its primary sense as “harmonious arrangement adornment”; cf. kosmikos, of the world, which is related to kosmos in its secondary sense as the world), is used in 1 Tim. 2:9 of the apparel with which Christian women are to adorn themselves; in 3:2 (RV, “orderly”; KJV, “of good behavior”), of one of the qualifications essential for a bishop or overseer. “The well-ordering is not of dress and demeanor only, but of the inner life, uttering indeed and expressing itself in the outward conversation” (Trench, Syn., Sec.xcii).¶ In the Sept., Eccl. 12:9.¶

MOISTURE

ikmas (ίκμάς, 2429), “moisture” (probably from an Indo-European root sik□ indicating “wet”), is used in Luke 8:6.¶ In the Sept., Job 26:14; Jer. 17:8.¶

MOMENT

A. Nouns.

1. atomos (ἄτομος, 823) lit. means “indivisible” (from a, negative, and temno, “to cut”; Eng., “atom”); hence it denotes “a moment,” 1 Cor. 15:52.¶

2. stigma (στιγμή, 4743), “a prick, a point” (akin to stizo, “to prick”), is used metaphorically in Luke 4:5, of a “moment,” with chronos, “a moment (of time).”¶

Note: It is to be distinguished from stigma, “a mark” or “brand,” Gal. 6:17, which is, however, also connected with stizo.

B. Adverb.

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

parautika (παραυτικά, 3910), the equivalent of parauta, immediately (not in the NT), i.e., para auta, with ta pragmata understood, “at the same circumstances,” is used adjectivally in 2 Cor. 4:17 and translated “which is but for a moment”; the meaning is not, however, simply that of brief duration, but that which is present with us now or immediate (para, “beside with”), in contrast to the future glory; the clause is, lit., “for the present lightness (i.e., ‘light burden,’ the adjective elaphron, ‘light,’ being used as a noun) of (our) affliction.”¶ This meaning is confirmed by its use in the Sept. of Ps. 70:3, “(let them be turned back) immediately,” where the rendering could not be “for a moment.”¶

MONEY

1. argurion (ἀργύριον, 694), properly, “a piece of silver,” denotes (a) “silver,” e.g., Acts 3:6; (b) a “silver coin,” often in the plural, “pieces of silver,” e.g., Matt. 26:15; so 28:12, where the meaning is “many, (hikanos) pieces of silver”; (c) “money”; it has this meaning in Matt. 25:18, 27; 28:15; Mark 14:11; Luke 9:3; 19:15, 23; 22:5; Acts 8:20 (here the RV has “silver”).

Note: In Acts 7:16, for the KJV, “(a sum of) money,” the RV has “(a price in) silver.” See SILVER.

2. chrema (χρῆμα, 5536), lit., “a thing that one uses” (akin to chraomai “to use”), hence, (a) “wealth, riches,” Mark 10:23, 24; Luke 18:24; (b) “money,” Acts 4:37, singular number, “a sum of money”; plural in 8:18, 20; 24:26.¶ See RICHES.

3. chalkos (χαλκός, 5475), “copper,” is used, by metonymy, of “copper coin,” translated “money,” in Mark 6:8; 12:41. See BRASS.

4. kerma (κέρμα, 2772), primarily “a slice” (akin to keiro, “to cut short”), hence, “a small coin, change,” is used in the plural in John 2:15, “the changers’ money,” probably considerable heaps of small Coins.¶

5. nomisma (νόμισμα, 3546), primarily “that which is established by custom” (nomos, “a custom, law”), hence, “the current coin of a state, currency,” is found in Matt. 22:19, “(tribute) money.”¶ In the Sept., Neh. 7:71.¶

Note: In Matt. 17:27, KJV, stater (“a coin,” estimated at a little over three shillings, equivalent to four drachmae, the temple-tax for two persons), is translated “piece of money” (RV, “shekel”). See SHEKEL.¶

For MONEY-CHANGER, CHANGER OF MONEY see CHANGER MONEY (love of)

philarguria (φιλαργυρία, 5365), from phileo, “to love,” and arguros, “silver,” occurs in 1 Tim. 6:10 (cf. philarguros, “covetous, avaricious”). Trench contrasts this with pleonexia, “covetousness.” See under COVET, COVETOUSNESS.¶

MONTH, MONTHS

1. men (μῆν, 3376), connected with mene, “the moon,” akin to a Sanskrit root ma—, “to measure” (the Sanskrit masa denotes both moon and month, cf, e.g., Lat. mensis, Eng., “moon” and “month,” the moon being in early times the measure of the “month”). The interval between the 17th day of the second “month” (Gen. 7:11) and the 17th day of the seventh “month,” is said to be 150 days (8:3, 4), i.e., five months of 30 days each; hence the year would be 360 days (cf. Dan. 7:25; 9:27; 12:7 with Rev. 11:2-3; 12:6, 14; 13:5; whence we conclude that 3 1/2 years or 42 months = 1260 days, i.e., one year = 60 days); this was the length of the old Egyptian year; later, five days were added to correspond to the solar year. The Hebrew year was as nearly solar as was compatible with its commencement, coinciding with the new moon, or first day of the “month.” This was a regular feast day, Num. 10:10; 28:11-14; the Passover coincided with the full moon (the 14th of the month Abib: see PASSOVER).

Except in Gal. 4:10; Jas. 5:17; Rev. 9:5, 10, 15; 11:2; 13:5; 22:2, the word is found only in Luke’s writings, Luke 1:24, 26, 36, 56; 4:25; Acts 7:20; 18:11; 19:8; 20:3; 28:11, examples of Luke’s care as to accuracy of detail.¶

2. trimenos (τρίμηνον, 5150**), an adjective, denoting “of three months” (tri, “for” treis, “three,” and No. 1), is used as a noun, a space of three “months,” in Heb. 11:23.¶

3. tetramenos (τετράμηνον, 5072**), an adjective, denoting of four “months” (tetra, for tessares, “four,” and No. 1), is used as a noun in John 4:35 (where chronos, “time,” may be understood).¶

MOON

1. selene (σελήνη, 4582), from selas, “brightness” (the Heb. words are yareach, “wandering,” and lebanah, “white”), occurs in Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:24; Luke 21:25; Acts 2:20; 1 Cor. 15:41; Rev. 6:12; 8:12; 12:1; 21:23. In Rev. 12:1, “the moon under her feet” is suggestive of derived authority, just as her being clothed with the sun is suggestive of supreme authority, everything in the symbolism of the passage centers in Israel. In 6:12 the similar symbolism of the sun and “moon” is suggestive of the supreme authority over the world, and of derived authority, at the time of the execution of divine judgments upon nations at the close of the present age.¶

2. neomenia (νουμηνία, 3561), or noumeniua, denoting “a new moon” (neos, “new,” men, “a month”: see MONTH), is used in Col. 2:16, of a Jewish festival.¶ Judaistic tradition added special features in the liturgy of the synagogue in connection with the observance of the first day of the month, the new “moon” time.

In the OT the RV has “new moon” for KJV, “month” in Num. 29:6; 1 Sam. 20:27; Hos. 5:7. For the connection with feast days see Lev. 23:24; Num. 10:10; 29:1; Ps. 81:3.

For MOOR see DRAW, B, Note (1)

---

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

A. Adverbs.

1. mallon (μᾶλλον, 3123), the comparative degree of mala, “very, very much,” is used (a) of increase, “more,” with qualifying words, with pollo, “much,” e.g., Mark 10:48, “the more (a great deal)”; Rom. 5:15, 17, “(much) more”; Phil. 2:12 (ditto); with poso, “how much,” e.g., Luke 12:24; Rom. 11:12; with tosouto, “by so much,” Heb. 10:25; (b) without a qualifying word, by way of comparison, “the more,” e.g., Luke 5:15, “so much the more”; John 5:18, “the more”; Acts 5:14 (ditto); Phil. 1:9; 1 Thess. 4:1, 10, “more and more”; 2 Pet. 1:10, RV, “the more” (KJV, “the rather”); in Acts 20:35, by a periphrasis, it is translated “more (blessed)”; in Gal. 4:27, “more (than),” lit., “rather (than)”; (c) with qualifying words, similarly to (a), e.g., Mark 7:36. See RATHER.

2. eti (ἔτι, 2089), “yet, as yet, still,” used of degree is translated “more” in Matt. 18:16, “(one or two) more”; Heb. 8:12 and 10:17, “(will I remember no) more”; 10:2, “(no) more (conscience)”; 11:32, “(what shall I) more (say)?” Rev. 3:12, “(he shall go out thence no) more”; 7:16, “(no) more” and “any more;” 9:12, KJV “more” (RV, “hereafter”); 18:21-23, “(no) more” “any more” (5 times); 20:3, “(no) more”; 21:1, 4 (twice); 22:3. See ALSO, No. 2.

3. ouketi (οὐκέτι, 3765), ouk, “not,” and No. 2, combined in one word, is translated “no more,” e.g., in Matt. 19:6; Luke 15:19, 21; Acts 20:25, 38; Eph. 2:19. See HENCEFORTH, HEREAFTER, LONGER NOW, Note (2).

4. perissoteron (περισσότερον, 4054), the neuter of the comparative degree of perissos, “more abundant,” is used as an adverb, “more,” e.g., Luke 12:4; 2 Cor. 10:8, KJV (RV, “abundantly”); Heb. 7:15, RV, “more abundantly” (KJV, “far more”). See ABUNDANTLY, C, No. 2.

Note: For the corresponding adverbs perissos and perissoteros, see ABUNDANTLY, EXCEEDINGLY.

5. meizon (μεῖζων, 3187), the neuter of meizon, “greater,” the comparative degree of megas, “great,” is used as an adverb, and translated “the more” in Matt. 20:31. See GREATER.

6. huper (ὑπέρ, 5228), a preposition, “over, above,” etc., is used as an adverb in 2 Cor. 11:23, “(I) more.”

7. hoson, neuter of hosos, “how much,” is used adverbially in Mark 7:36 (1st part), “the more.”

B. Adjectives (some with adverbial uses).

1. pleion (πλείων, 4119), the comparative degree of polus, “much,” is used (a) as an adjective, e.g., John 15:2; Acts 24:11, RV, “(not) more (than)” (KJV, “yet but”); Heb. 3:3; (b) as a noun, or with a noun understood, e.g., Matt. 20:10; Mark 12:43; Acts 19:32 and 27:12, “the more part”; 1 Cor. 9:19; (c) as an adverb, Matt. 5:20, “shall exceed,” lit., “(shall abound) more (than)”; 26:53; Luke 9:13. See ABOVE, No. 3, Note, GREATER.

2. perissos (περισσός, 4053), “more than sufficient, over and above, abundant” (a popular substitute for No. 3), is translated “more,” e.g., in Matt. 5:37-47. In John 10:10 the neuter form is rendered “more abundantly,” KJV, RV, “abundantly” (marg., “abundance”).

3. perissoteros (περισσότερος, 4055), the comparative degree of No. 2, is translated “much more (than a prophet)” in Matt. 11:9, RV (KJV, “more”); in Luke 7:26 both RV and KJV have “much more.” See ABUNDANT, C.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 25:20 (2nd part), KJV, allos, “other” (so the RV), is translated “more.” (2) In Jas. 4:6, KJV, the adjective meizon, “greater” (see A, No. 5, above), is translated “more (grace)” (RV marg. “a greater grace”). See GRACE (at end). (3) Various uses of the word “more” occur in connection with other words, especially in the comparative degree. The phrase “more than” translates certain prepositions and particles: in Rom. 1:25, KJV, para, “beside, compared with,” is translated “more than” (RV, “rather than”); cf. Rom. 12:3 hyper, “over, above,” “more than,” in Matt. 10:37 (twice); in Philem. 21, KJV, “more than” (RV, “beyond”). In Mark 14:5, KJV, epano, “above,” is translated “more than” (RV, “above”). In Luke 15:7 the particle e, “than,” is necessarily rendered “more than”; cf. Luke 17:2 and 1 Cor. 14:19, “rather than.” In Mark 8:14, the conjunction ei, “if,” with the negative me, lit., “if not,” signifying “except,” is translated “more than (one loaf).”

MOREOVER

1. eti (ἔτι, 2089), “yet, as yet, still,” is translated “moreover” in Acts 2:26; in 21:28, RV (KJV, “further”); Heb. 11:36. See MORE, A, No. 2.

2. kai (καί, 2532), and, is translated “moreover” in Acts 24:6; in the KJV, where the RV has “and,” Acts 19:26.

3. de (δέ, 1161), a particle signifying “and” or “but,” is translated “moreover” in Matt. 18:15, KJV (RV, “and”); Acts 11:12 (RV, “and”); Rom. 5:20, KJV (RV, “but”); 8:30 (“and”); 1 Cor. 15:1 (RV, “now”); 2 Cor. 1:23 (RV, “but”); 2 Pet. 1:15 (RV, “yea”).

4. alla kai “but also, yea even,” is translated “moreover” in Luke 24:22, RV (KJV, “yea, and”); in 16:21, KJV, “moreover” (RV, “yea, even”).

5. de kai “but also,” is translated “moreover” in 1 Tim. 3:7.

6. kai ... de is translated “moreover” in Heb. 9:21.

7. loipon (λοιπόν, 3063), the neuter of the adjective loipos, “the rest,” used adverbially, most usually rendered “finally,” is translated “moreover” in 1 Cor. 4:2 (some mss. have ho de loipon, lit., “but what is left,” KJV, “moreover,” for hode loipon, “here, moreover,” as in the RV). See FINALLY.

Note: In 1 Cor. 10:1, KJV, gar, “for,” is translated “moreover” (RV, “for”); the RV is important here, as it introduces a reason for what has preceded in ch. 9, whereas “moreover” may indicate that a new subject is being introduced; this incorrect rendering tends somewhat to dissociate the two passages, whereas gar connects them intimately.

MORNING (in the, early in the)

A. Adjectives.

1. proios (πρωῖα, 4405), “early, at early morn” (from pro, “before”), is used as a noun in the feminine form proia, “morning” in Matt. 27:1 and John 21:4 (in some mss. in Matt. 21:18 and John 18:28, for B, No. 1, which see). Its adjectival force is retained by regarding it as qualifying the noun hora, “an hour,” i.e., “at an early hour.”¶

2. proinos (πρωῖνός, 4407), a later form of No. 1, qualifies aster, “star,” in Rev. 2:28 and 22:16 (where some mss. have No. 3). That Christ will give to the overcomer “the morning star” indicates a special interest for such in Himself, as He thus describes Himself in the later passage. For Israel He will appear as “the sun of righteousness”; as the “morning” Star which precedes He will appear for the rapture of the church.¶

3. orthrinos or orthrios (ὀρθριος, 3721), “pertaining to dawn or morning,” in some mss. in Rev. 22:16 (see No. 2); see DAWN, B, Note.

B. Adverb.

proi (πρωί, 4404), “early,” is translated “in the morning” in Matt. 16:3; 20:1 (with hama, “early”); 21:18; Mark 1:35; 11:20; 13:35; 15:1; “early” in Mark 16:2 (with lian, “very”; KJV, “early in the morning”); 16:9; Matt. 21:18 and John 18:28 (in the best texts for A, No. 1); 20:1; Acts 28:23 (with apo, “from”).¶

C. Noun.

orthros (ὀρθρος, 3722) denotes “daybreak, dawn,” Luke 24:1; John 8:2; Acts 5:21; see DAWN, B.¶

D. Verb.

orthrizo (ὀρθρίζω, 3719), “to do anything early in the morning,” is translated “came early in the morning,” in Luke 21:38.¶

MORROW

1. aurion (αὔριον, 839), an adverb denoting “tomorrow,” is used (a) with this meaning in Matt. 6:30; Luke 12:28; 13:32, 33; Acts 23:15 (in some mss.), 20; 25:22; 1 Cor. 15:32; Jas. 4:13, (b) with the word hemera, “day,” understood (occurring thus in the papyri), translated as a noun, “(the) morrow,” Matt. 6:34 (twice); Luke 10:35; Acts 4:3 (KJV, “next day”); 4:5; Jas. 4:14.¶

2. epaurion (ἐπαύριον, 1887), epi, “upon,” and No. 1, is used as in (b) above; the RV always translates it “on (the) morrow”; in the following the KJV has “(the) next day,” Matt. 27:62; John 1:29, 35 (“the next day after”); 12:12; Acts 14:20; 21:8; 25:6; “(the) day following,” John 1:43; 6:22; “the morrow after,” Acts 10:24.

Note: In Acts 25:17, KJV, the adverb hexes, “next, successively, in order,” is translated “on (the) morrow.” See NEXT.

For MORSEL see MEAT, No. 2

MORTAL, MORTALITY

thnetos (θνητός, 2349), “subject or liable to death, mortal” (akin to thnesko, “to die”), occurs in Rom. 6:12, of the body, where it is called “mortal,” not simply because it is liable to death, but because it is the organ in and through which death carries on its death-producing activities; in 8:11, the stress is on the liability to death, and the quickenings is not reinvigoration but the impartation of life at the time of the Rapture, as in 1 Cor. 15:53, 54 and 2 Cor. 5:4 (RV, “what is mortal”; KJV, “mortality”); in 2 Cor. 4:11, it is applied to the flesh, which stands, not simply for the body, but the body as that which consists of the element of decay, and is thereby death-doomed. Christ’s followers are in this life delivered unto death, that His life may be manifested in that which naturally is the seat of decay and death. That which is subject to suffering is that in which the power of Him who suffered here is most manifested.¶

MORTIFY

1. thanatoo (θανατόω, 2289), “to put to death” (from thanatos, “death,” akin to thnetos, “mortal,” see above), is translated “mortify” in Rom. 8:13 (Amer. RV, “put to death”); in 7:4, “ye were made dead” (passive voice), betokens the act of God on the believer, through the death of Christ; here in 8:13 it is the act of the believer himself, as being responsible to answer to God’s act, and to put to death “the deeds of the body. See DEATH, C, No. 1.

2. nekroo (νεκρόω, 3499), “to make dead” (from nekros, see DEAD, A), is used figuratively in Col. 3:5 and translated “mortify” (Amer. RV, “put to death”). See DEAD, B, No. 1.

MOST

1. pleion (πλείων, 4119), the neuter of pleion, “more,” is used adverbially and translated “most” (of degree) in Luke 7:42 (without the article); in v. 43 (with the article, “the most”); 1 Cor. 10:5, RV, “most” (KJV, “many”); Phil. 1:14 (ditto). See MORE.

2. pleistos (πλείστος, 4118), the superlative degree of polus, is used (a) as an adjective in Matt. 11:20; 21:8, RV, “(the) most part of” (KJV, “a very great”); (b) in the neuter, with the article, adverbially, “at the most,” 1 Cor. 14:27; (c) as an elative (i.e., intensively) in Mark 4:1 (in the best mss.; some have polus), “a very great (multitude).”

3. malista (μάλιστα, 3122), an adverb, the superlative of mala, “very,” is translated “most of all” in Acts 20:38. See ESPECIALLY.

Note: For combinations in the translation of other words, see BELIEVE, C, Note (4), EXCELLENT, GLADLY, HIGH, STRAITTEST.

MOTE

karphe (κάρφος, 2595), “a small, dry stalk, a twig, a bit of dried stick” (from karphe, “to dry up”), or “a tiny straw or bit of wool,” such as might fly into the eye, is used metaphorically of a minor fault, Matt. 7:3, 4, 5; Luke 6:41, 42 (twice), in contrast with dokos, “a beam supporting the roof of a building” (see BEAM).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 8:11.¶

MOTH

ses (σής, 4597) denotes “a clothes moth,” Matt. 6:19, 20; Luke 12:33.¶ In Job 4:19 “crushed before the moth” alludes apparently to the fact that woolen materials, riddled by the larvae of “moths,” become so fragile that a touch demolishes them. In Job 27:18 “He buildeth his house as a “moth” alludes to the frail covering which a larval “moth” constructs out of the material which it consumes. The rendering “spider” (marg.) seems an attempt to explain a difficulty.

MOTH-EATEN

setobrotos (σητόβρωτος, 4598), from ses, “a moth,” and bibrosko, “to eat,” is used in Jas. 5:2.¶ In the Sept. Job 13:28.¶

MOTHER

1. meter (μήτηρ, 3384) is used (a) of the natural relationship, e.g., Matt. 1:18; 2 Tim. 1:5; (b) figuratively, (1) of “one who takes the place of a mother,” Matt. 12:49, 50; Mark 3:34, 35; John 19:27; Rom. 16:13; 1 Tim. 5:2; (2) of “the heavenly and spiritual Jerusalem,” Gal. 4:26, which is “free” (not bound by law imposed externally, as under the Law of Moses), “which is our mother” (RV), i.e., of Christians, the metropolis, mother-city, used allegorically, just as the capital of a country is “the seat of its government, the center of its activities, and the place where the national characteristics are most fully expressed”; (3) symbolically, of “Babylon,” Rev. 17:5, as the source from which has proceeded the religious harlotry of mingling pagan rites and doctrines with the Christian faith.

Note: In Mark 16:1 the article, followed by the genitive case of the name “James,” the word “mother” being omitted, is an idiomatic mode of expressing the phrase “the mother of James.”

2. metroloas, or metraloas (μητραλώας, 3389) denotes “a matricide” (No. 1, and aloiao, to smite); 1 Tim. 1:9, “murderers of mothers”; it probably has, however, the broader meaning of “smiters” (RV, marg.), as in instances elsewhere than the NT.¶

3. ameter (ἀμήτωρ, 282), “without a mother” (a, negative, and No. 1), is used in Heb. 7:3, of the Genesis record of Melchizedek, certain details concerning him being purposely omitted, in order to conform the description to facts about Christ as the Son of God. The word has been found in this sense in the writings of Euripides the dramatist and Herodotus the historian. See also under FATHER.¶

MOTHER-IN-LAW

penthera (πενθερά, 3994), the feminine of pentheros (“a father-in-law”), occurs in Matt. 8:14; 10:35; Mark 1:30; Luke 4:38; 12:53 (twice).¶

For MOTION, Rom. 7:5, KJV, see PASSION

MOUNT, MOUNTAIN

oros (ὄρος, 3735) is used (a) without specification, e.g., Luke 3:5 (distinct from bounos, “a hill,” see HILL, No. 3); John 4:20; (b) of “the Mount of Transfiguration,” Matt. 17:1, 9; Mark 9:2, 9; Luke 9:28, 37 (KJV, “hill”); 2 Pet. 1:18; (c) of “Zion,” Heb. 12:22; Rev. 14:1; (d) of “Sinai,” Acts 7:30, 38; Gal. 4:24, 25; Heb. 8:5; 12:20; (e) of “the Mount of Olives,” Matt. 21:1; 24:3; Mark 11:1; 13:3; Luke 19:29, 37; 22:39; John 8:1; Acts 1:12; (f) of “the hill districts as distinct from the lowlands,” especially of the hills above the Sea of Galilee, e.g., Matt. 5:1; 8:1; 18:12; Mark 5:5; (g) of “the mountains on the east of Jordan” and “those in the land of Ammon” and “the region of Petra,” etc., Matt. 24:16; Mark 13:14; Luke 21:21; (h) proverbially, “of overcoming difficulties, or accomplishing great things,” 1 Cor. 13:2; cf. Matt. 17:20; 21:21; Mark 11:23; (i) symbolically, of “a series of the imperial potentates of the Roman dominion, past and future,” Rev. 17:9. See HILL.

MOURN, MOURNING

A. Verbs.

1. kopto (κόπτω, 2875), to cut or beat, used in the middle voice of “beating the breast or head in mourning” (cf. Luke 23:27), is translated “shall mourn” in Matt. 24:30. See BEWAIL, No. 2, CUT, WAIL.

2. pentheo (πενθέω, 3996), “to mourn for, lament,” is used (a) of mourning in general, Matt. 5:4; 9:15; Luke 6:25; (b) of sorrow for the death of a loved one, Mark 16:10; (c) of “mourning” for the overthrow of Babylon and the Babylonish system, Rev. 18:11, 15, RV, “mourning” (KJV, “wailing”); v. 19 (ditto); (d) of sorrow for sin or for condoning it, Jas. 4:9; 1 Cor. 5:2; (e) of grief for those in a local church who show no repentance for evil committed, 2 Cor. 12:21, RV, “mourn” (KJV, “bewail”). See BEWAIL, No. 3.¶

3. threneo (θρηνέω, 2354), “to lament, wail” (akin to threnos, “a lamentation, a dirge”), is used (a) in a general sense, of the disciples during the absence of the Lord, John 16:20, “lament”; (b) of those who sorrowed for the sufferings and the impending crucifixion of the Lord, Luke 23:27, “lamented”; the preceding word is kopto (No. 1); (c) of “mourning” as for the dead, Matt. 11:17, RV, “wailed” (KJV, “have mourned”); Luke 7:32 (ditto). See BEWAIL, Note (1).¶

Notes: (1) Trench points out that pentheo is often joined with klaio, “to weep,” 2 Sam. 19:1; Mark 16:10; Jas. 4:9; Rev. 18:15, indicating that pentheo is used especially of external manifestation of grief (as with kopto and threneo), in contrast to lupeomai which may be used of inward grief (Syn. Sec.xlv); though in Classical Greek pentheo was used of grief without violent manifestations (Grimm-Thayer). (2) Among the well-to-do it was common to hire professional mourners (men and women), who accompanied the dead body to the grave with formal music and the singing of dirges. At the death of Jairus’ daughter male flute players were present, Matt. 9:23 (see, however, Jer. 9:17).

B. Nouns.

1. odurmos (ὄδυρμός, 3602), “lamentation, mourning,” is translated “mourning” in Matt. 2:18 and 2 Cor. 7:7: see BEWAIL, Note (2).¶

2. penthos (πένθος, 3997), akin to A, No. 2, “mourning,” is used in Jas. 4:9; Rev. 18:7 (twice), RV, “mourning” (KJV, “sorrow”); v. 8, “mourning”; 21:4, RV, “mourning” (KJV, “sorrow”). See SORROW.¶

MOUTH

A. Noun.

stoma (στόμα, 4750), akin to stomachos (which originally meant “a throat, gullet”), is used (a) of “the mouth” of man, e.g., Matt. 15:11; of animals, e.g., Matt. 17:27; 2 Tim. 4:17 (figurative); Heb. 11:33; Jas. 3:3; Rev. 13:2 (2nd occurrence); (b) figuratively of “inanimate things,” of the “edge” of a sword, Luke 21:24; Heb. 11:34; of the earth, Rev. 12:16; (c) figuratively, of the “mouth,” as the organ of speech, (1) of Christ’s words, e.g.,

Matt. 13:35; Luke 11:54; Acts 8:32; 22:14; 1 Pet. 2:22; (2) of human, e.g., Matt. 18:16; 21:16; Luke 1:64; Rev. 14:5; as emanating from the heart, Matt. 12:34; Rom. 10:8, 9; of prophetic ministry through the Holy Spirit, Luke 1:70; Acts 1:16; 3:18; 4:25; of the destructive policy of two world potentates at the end of this age, Rev. 13:2, 5, 6; 16:13 (twice); of shameful speaking, Eph. 4:29 and Col. 3:8; (3) of the Devil speaking as a dragon or serpent, Rev. 12:15, 16; 16:13; (d) figuratively, in the phrase “face to face” (lit., “mouth to mouth”), 2 John 12; 3 John 14; (e) metaphorically, of “the utterances of the Lord, in judgment,” 2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 1:16; 2:16; 19:15, 21; of His judgment upon a local church for its lukewarmness, Rev. 3:16; (f) by metonymy, for “speech,” Matt. 18:16; Luke 19:22; 21:15; 2 Cor. 13:1.

Note: In Acts 15:27, logos, “a word,” is translated “word of mouth,” RV (KJV, “mouth,” marg., “word”).

B. Verb.

epistomizo (ἐπιστομίζω, 1993), “to bridle” (epi, “upon,” and A), is used metaphorically of “stopping the mouth, putting to silence,” Titus 1:11.¶ Cf. phrasso, “to stop, close,” said of stopping the “mouths” of men, in Rom. 3:19. See STOP.

MOVE, MOVED, MOVER, MOVING, UNMOVEABLE

A. Verbs.

1. kineo (κινέω, 2795), “to set in motion, move” (hence, e.g., Eng. “kinematics,” “kinetics,” “cinema”), is used (a) of wagging the head, Matt. 27:39; Mark 15:29; (b) of the general activity of the human being, Acts 17:28; (c) of the “moving” of mountains, Rev. 6:14, in the sense of removing, as in Rev. 2:5, of removing a lampstand (there figuratively of causing a local church to be discontinued); (d) figuratively, of exciting, stirring up feelings and passions, Acts 21:30 (passive voice); 24:5, “a mover”; (e) of “moving burdens,” Matt. 23:4. See REMOVE, WAG.¶ Cf. sunkineo, “to stir up,” Acts 6:12.¶

2. metakineo (μετακινέω, 3334), in the active voice, “to move something away” (not in the NT; in the Sept., e.g., Deut. 19:14; Isa. 54:10); in the middle voice, “to remove oneself, shift” translated in the passive in Col. 1:23, “be ... not moved away (from the hope of the gospel).”¶

3. seio (σειώ, 4579), “to shake, move to and fro,” usually of violent concussion (Eng., “seismic,” “seismograph,” “seismology”), is said (a) of the earth as destined to be shaken by God, Heb. 12:26; (b) of a local convulsion of the earth, at the death of Christ, Matt. 27:51, “did quake”; (c) of a fig tree, Rev. 6:13; (d) metaphorically, to stir up with fear or some other emotion, Matt. 21:10, of the people of a city; 28:4, of the keepers or watchers, at the Lord’s tomb, RV, “did quake” (KJV, “did shake”).¶

4. saleuo (σαλεύω, 4531), “to shake,” properly of the action of stormy wind, then, “to render insecure, stir up,” is rendered “I should (not) be moved” in Acts 2:25, in the sense of being cast down or shaken from a sense of security and happiness, said of Christ, in a quotation from Ps. 16:8. See SHAKE, STIR (Up).

5. saino (σαίνω, 4525), properly, of dogs, “to wag the tail, fawn”; hence, metaphorically of persons, “to disturb, disquiet,” 1 Thess. 3:3, passive voice, “(that no man) be moved (by these afflictions).” Some have suggested the primary meaning, “to be wheedled, befooled, by pleasing utterances”; but Greek interpreters regard it as synonymous with No. 3, or with tarasso, “to disturb,” and this is confirmed by the contrast with “establish” in v. 2, and “stand fast” in v. 8. A variant reading gives the verb siainesthai, “to be disheartened, unnerved.”¶

6. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear, carry,” is rendered “being moved” in 2 Pet. 1:21, signifying that they were “borne along,” or impelled, by the Holy Spirit’s power, not acting according to their own wills, or simply expressing their own thoughts, but expressing the mind of God in words provided and ministered by Him.

Notes: (1) In Mark 15:11, KJV, anaseio, “to shake to and fro, stir up,” is translated “moved” (RV, “stirred up,” as in Luke 23:5, KJV and RV).¶ (2) In Acts 20:24 some mss. have a phrase translated “none of these things move me.” The text for which there is most support gives the rendering “but I hold not my life of any account, as dear unto myself.” Field suggests a reading, the translation of which is, “neither make I account of anything, nor think my life dear unto myself.” (3) In 1 Cor. 15:34, for the more literal KJV, “I speak this to your shame,” the RV has “I speak this to move you to shame.” (4) For “moved with godly fear” see FEAR, D, No. 2. (5) See also COMPASSION, ENVY, FEAR, INDIGNATION.

B. Adjectives.

1. asaleutos (ἀσάλευτος, 761), “unmoved, immovable” (from a, negative, and A, No. 4), is translated “unmovable” in Acts 27:41; “which cannot be moved” in Heb. 12:28, KJV (RV, “that cannot be shaken”).¶ In the Sept., Exod. 13:16; Deut. 6:8; 11:18.¶

2. ametakinetos (ἀμετακίνητος, 277), “firm, immovable” (a, negative, and A, No. 2), is used in 1 Cor. 15:55.¶

C. Noun.

kinesis (κίνησις, 2796), “a moving” (akin to A, No. 1), is found in John 5:3 (in many ancient authorities, RV, marg.), of the “moving” of the water at the pool of Bethesda.

MOW

amao (ἀμάω, 270), “to mow,” is translated “mowed” in Jas. 5:4, RV (KJV, “have reaped down”). “The cognate words seem to show that the sense of cutting or mowing was original, and that of gathering-in secondary” (Liddell and Scott, Lex.).¶

MUCH

1. polus (πολύς, 4183), is used (a) as an adjective of degree, e.g., Matt. 13:5, “much (earth)”; Acts 26:24, “much (learning)”; in v. 29, in the answer to Agrippa’s “with but little persuasion,” some texts have pollo (some megalo, “with great”), RV, “(whether with little or) with much”; of number, e.g., Mark 5:24, RV, “a great (multitude),” KJV, “much (people)”; so Luke 7:11; John 12:12; Rev. 19:1, etc.; (b) in the neuter singular form (polu), as a noun, e.g., Luke 16:10 (twice); in the plural (polla), e.g., Rom. 16:6, 12, “(labored) much,” lit., “many things”; (c) adverbially, in the neuter singular, e.g., Acts 18:27; James 5:16; Matt. 26:9 (a genitive of price); in the plural, e.g., Mark 5:43, RV, “much” (KJV, “straitly”); Mark 9:26, RV, “much” (KJV, “sore”); John 14:30; and with the article, Acts 26:24; Rom. 15:22; 1 Cor. 16:19; Rev. 5:4. See GREAT.

2. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “enough, much, many,” is translated “much,” e.g., in Luke 7:12 (in some mss. Acts 5:37; see the RV); Acts 11:24, 26; 19:26; 27:9. See ABLE, ENOUGH, A, No. 2, GREAT, LARGE, MANY, MEET, SECURITY, SORE, SUFFICIENT, WORTHY.

Notes: (1) For “much more,” “so much the more,” see MORE. (2) In John 12:9, the RV has “the common people” for “much people.” (3) In Acts 27:16, KJV, ischuo, “to be able,” with molis, “scarcely,” is translated “had much work” (RV, “were able, with difficulty”). (4) In Luke 19:15, KJV, the pronoun ti, “what” (RV), is translated “how much.” (5) The adjective tosoutos, “so great, so much,” is translated “so much (bread),” in Matt. 15:33, plural, RV, “so many (loaves)”; in the genitive case, of price, in Acts 5:8, “for so much”; in the dative case, of degree, in Heb. 1:4, RV, “by so much” (KJV, “so much”); so in Heb. 10:25; in Heb. 7:22 “by so much” translates the phrase kata tosouto; in Rev. 18:7, “so much.” (6) See DISPLEASED, EXHORTATION, PERPLEX, SPEAKING, WORK. MUCH (AS)

Notes: (1) In Luke 6:34 the phrase ta isa, lit., “the equivalent (things),” is translated “as much” (of lending, to receive back the equivalent). (2) In Rom. 1:15, the phrase to kat' eme, lit., “the (thing) according to me,” signifies “as much as in me is”; cf. the KJV marg. in 1 Pet. 5:2 [lit., “the (extent) in, or among, you”; the text takes the word “flock” as understood, the marg. regards the phrase as adverbially idiomatic]; in Rom. 12:18 “as much as in you lieth” translates a similar phrase, lit., “the (extent) out of you.” (3) In Heb. 12:20, KJV, kai ean (contracted to kan), “if even” (RV), is translated “and if so much as.” (4) The negatives oude and mede, “not even” (RV) are translated “not so much as” in the KJV in Mark 2:2; Luke 6:3 and 1 Cor. 5:1; in the following the RV and KJV translate them “not so much as,” Mark 3:20 (some mss. have mete, with the same meaning); Acts 19:2; in Mark 6:31 “no (leisure) so much as.” (5) In Rom. 3:12, heos, “as far as, even unto,” is translated “so much as” in the RV; the KJV supplies nothing actually corresponding to it. (6) In John 6:11 hosos denotes “as much as.”

MULTIPLY

1. plethuno (πληθύνω, 4129), used (a) transitively, denotes “to cause to increase, to multiply,” 2 Cor. 9:10; Heb. 6:14 (twice); in the passive voice, “to be multiplied,” Matt. 24:12, RV, “(iniquity) shall be multiplied” (KJV, “shall abound”); Acts 6:7; 7:17; 9:31; 12:24; 1 Pet. 1:2; 2 Pet. 1:2; Jude 2; (b) intransitively it denotes “to be multiplying,” Acts 6:1, RV, “was multiplying” (KJV, “was multiplied”). See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 5.¶

2. pleonazo (πλεονάζω, 4121), used intransitively, “to abound,” is translated “being multiplied” in the RV of 2 Cor. 4:15 (KJV, “abundant”); the active voice, aorist tense, here would be more accurately rendered “having superabounded” or “superabounding” or “multiplying.” See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 3.

MULTITUDE

1. ochlos (ὄχλος, 3793) is used frequently in the four Gospels and the Acts; elsewhere only in Rev. 7:9; 17:15; 19:1, 6; it denotes (a) “a crowd or multitude of persons, a throng,” e.g., Matt. 14:14, 15; 15:33; often in the plural, e.g., Matt. 4:25; 5:1; with polus, “much” or “great,” it signifies “a great multitude,” e.g., Matt. 20:29, or “the common people,” Mark 12:37, perhaps preferably “the mass of the people.” Field supports the meaning in the text, but either rendering is suitable. The mass of the people was attracted to Him (for the statement “heard Him gladly” cf. what is said in Mark 6:20 of Herod Antipas concerning John the Baptist); in John 12:9, “the common people,” RV, stands in contrast with their leaders (v. 10); Acts 24:12, RV, “crowd”; (b) “the populace, an unorganized multitude,” in contrast to demos, “the people as a body politic,” e.g., Matt. 14:5; 21:26; John 7:12 (2nd part); (c) in a more general sense, “a multitude or company,” e.g., Luke 6:17, RV, “a (great) multitude (of His disciples),” KJV, “the company”; Acts 1:15, “a multitude (of persons),” RV, KJV, “the number (of names)”; Acts 24:18, RV, “crowd” (KJV, “multitude”). See COMPANY, No. 1, NUMBER.

2. plethos (πλήθος, 4128), lit., “a fullness,” hence, “a large company, a multitude,” is used (a) of things: of fish, Luke 5:6; John 21:6; of sticks (“bundle”), Acts 28:3; of stars and of sand, Heb. 11:12; of sins, Jas. 5:20; 1 Pet. 4:8; (b) of persons, (1) a “multitude”: of people, e.g., Mark 3:7, 8; Luke 6:17; John 5:3; Acts 14:1; of angels, Luke 2:13; (2) with the article, the whole number, the “multitude,” the populace, e.g., Luke 1:10; 8:37; Acts 5:16; 19:9; 23:7; a particular company, e.g., of disciples, Luke 19:37; Acts 4:32; 6:2, 5; 15:30; of elders, priests, and scribes, 23:7; of the apostles and the elders of the Church in Jerusalem, Acts 15:12. See ASSEMBLY, No. 3, BUNDLE, No. 2, COMPANY, No. 5.

Note: In Luke 12:1. KJV, the phrase, lit., “the myriads of the multitude” is translated “an innumerable multitude of people” (where “people” translates No. 1, above), RV, “the many thousands of the multitude” (where “multitude” translates No. 1).

MURDER

phonos (φόνος, 5408) is used (a) of a special act, Mark 15:7; Luke 23:19, 25; (b) in the plural, of “murders” in general, Matt. 15:19; Mark 7:21 (Gal. 5:21, in some inferior mss.); Rev. 9:21; in the singular, Rom. 1:29; (c) in the sense of “slaughter,” Heb. 11:37, “they were slain with the sword,” lit., “(they died by) slaughter (of the sword)”; in Acts 9:1, “slaughter.” See SLAUGHTER.¶

Note: In Matt. 19:18, KJV, phoneuo, “to kill” (akin to phoneus, see below), is translated “thou shalt do (no) murder” (RV, “thou shalt (not) kill”). See KILL, SLAY.

MURDERER

1. phoneus (φονεύς, 5406), akin to phoneuo and phonos (see above), is used (a) in a general sense, in the singular, 1 Pet. 4:15; in the plural, Rev. 21:8; 22:15; (b) of those guilty of particular acts, Matt. 22:7; Acts 3:14, lit. “a man (aner), a murderer”; 7:52; 28:4.¶

2. anthropoktonos (ἄνθρωποκτόνος, 443), an adjective, lit., “manslaying,” used as a noun, “a manslayer, murderer” (anthropos, “a man,” kteino, “to slay”), is used of Satan, John 8:44; of one who hates his brother, and who, being a “murderer,” has not eternal life, 1 John 3:15 (twice).¶

3. patroloas (or patral-) (πατραλώας, 3964) “a murderer of one’s father,” occurs in 1 Tim. 1:9.¶

Note: For sikarios, in the plural, “murderers,” in Acts 21:38, see ASSASSIN.¶ See MOTHER, No. 2.

MURMUR, MURMURING

A. Verbs.

1. gonguzo (γογγύζω, 1111), “to mutter, murmur, grumble, say anything in a low tone” (Eng., “gong”), an onomatopoeic word, representing the significance by the sound of the word, as in the word “murmur” itself, is used of the laborers in the parable of the householder, Matt. 20:11; of the scribes and Pharisees, against Christ, Luke 5:30; of the Jews, John 6:41, 43, of the disciples, 6:61; of the people, 7:32 (of debating secretly); of the Israelites, 1 Cor. 10:10 (twice), where it is also used in a warning to believers.¶ In the papyri it is used of the “murmuring” of a gang of workmen, also in a remark interposed, while the Emperor (late 2nd cent. A.D.) was interviewing a rebel, that the Romans were then “murmuring” (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.).

2. diagonguzo (διαγογγύζω, 1234), lit., “to murmur through” (dia, i.e., “through a whole crowd,” or “among themselves”), is always used of indignant complaining, Luke 15:2; 19:7.¶

3. embrimaomai (ἐμβριμάομαι, 1690) is rendered “murmured against” in Mark 14:5; it expresses indignant displeasure: see CHARGE, C, No. 4.

Note: For stenazo, Jas. 5:9, RV, “murmur,” see GRIEVE, No. 3.

B. Noun.

gongusmos (γογγυσμός, 1112), “a murmuring, muttering” (akin to A, No. 1), is used (a) in the sense of secret debate among people, John 7:12 (as with the verb in v. 32); (b) of displeasure or complaining (more privately than in public), said of Grecian Jewish converts against Hebrews, Acts 6:1; in general admonitions, Phil. 2:14; 1 Pet. 4:9, RV, “murmuring” (KJV “grudging”).¶

MURMURER

gongustes (γογγυστής, 1113), “a murmurer” (akin to A, No. 1, and B, above), “one who complains,” is used in Jude 16, especially perhaps of utterances against God (see v. 15).¶

For MUSING (dialogizomai, in Luke 3:15, KJV) see REASON (Verb)

MUSIC

sumphonua (συμφωνία, 4858), lit., “a sounding together” (Eng., “symphony”), occurs in Luke 15:25.¶ In the Sept., Dan. 3:5, 7, 10, 15, for Aramaic sumponya (not in v. 7), itself a loan word from the Greek; translated “dulcimer” (RV, marg., “bagpipe”).¶

For MUSICIAN, Rev. 18:22, KJV, see MINSTREL

MUST

1. dei (δεῖ, 1163) an impersonal verb, signifying “it is necessary” or “one must,” “one ought,” is found most frequently in the Gospels, Acts and the Apocalypse, and is used (a) of a necessity lying in the nature of the case e.g., John 3:30; 2 Tim. 2:6; (b) of necessity brought about by circumstances, e.g., Matt. 26:35, RV, “must,” KJV, “should”; John 4:4;

Acts 27:21, “should”; 2 Cor. 11:30; in the case of Christ, by reason of the Father’s will, e.g., Luke 2:49; 19:5; (c) of necessity as to what is required that something may be brought about, e.g., Luke 12:12, “ought”; John 3:7; Acts 9:6; 1 Cor. 11:19; Heb. 9:26; (d) of a necessity of law, duty, equity, e.g., Matt. 18:33, “shouldest”; 23:23, “ought”; Luke 15:32, “it was meet”; Acts 15:5, “it is needful” (RV); Rom. 1:27, RV, “was due,” KJV, “was meet” (of a recompense due by the law of God); frequently requiring the rendering “ought,” e.g., Rom. 8:26; 12:3; 1 Cor. 8:2; (e) of necessity arising from the determinate will and counsel of God, e.g., Matt. 17:10; 24:6; 26:54; 1 Cor. 15:53, especially regarding the salvation of men through the death, resurrection and ascension of Christ, e.g., John 3:14; Acts 3:21; 4:12. See BEHOVE, No. 2 (where see the differences in the meanings of synonymous words), MEET, NEED, NEEDFUL, OUGHT, SHOULD.

2. opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784), “to owe,” is rendered “must ... needs” in 1 Cor. 5:10. See BEHOVE, No. 1.

Notes: (1) In Mark 14:49, KJV, the conjunction hina with the subjunctive mood, “in order that,” is represented by “must” (RV, “that ... might”). (2) In Heb. 13:17, KJV, the future participle of apodidomi, “to give,” is translated “they that must give” (RV, “they that shall give”). (3) In 2 Pet. 1:14, KJV, the verb “to be,” with apothesis, “a putting off,” is translated “I must put off,” RV, “(the) putting off ... cometh,” lit., “is (swift).” (4) Sometimes the infinitive mood of a verb, with or without the article, is necessarily rendered by a phrase involving the word “must,” e.g., 1 Pet. 4:17, KJV, “must (begin);” or “should,” Heb. 4:6, RV, “should” (KJV “must”). (5) Sometimes the subjunctive mood of a verb, used as a deliberative, is rendered “must,” etc., John 6:28, “(what) must (we do),” RV (KJV, shall).

MUSTARD

sinapi (σίναπι, 4615), a word of Egyptian origin, is translated “mustard seed” in the NT. “The conditions to be fulfilled by the mustard are that it should be a familiar plant, with a very small seed, Matt. 17:20; Luke 17:6, sown in the earth, growing larger than garden herbs, Matt. 13:31, having large branches, Mark 4:31, ... attractive to birds, Luke 13:19 [RV, ‘(became) a tree’]. The cultivated mustard is sinapis nigra. The seed is well known for its minuteness. The mustards are annuals, reproduced with extraordinary rapidity ... In fat soil they often attain a height of 10 or 12 feet, and have branches which attract passing birds” (A. E. Post, in Hastings Bib. Dic.).¶

The correct RV translation in Matt. 13:32, “greater than the herbs,” for the KJV, “greatest among herbs” (the “mustard” is not a herb), should be noted.

As the parable indicates, Christendom presents a sort of Christianity that has become conformed to the principles and ways of the world, and the world has favored this debased Christianity. Contrast the testimony of the NT, e.g., in John 17:14; Gal. 6:14; 1 Pet. 2:11; 1 John 3:1.

MUTUAL

Note: This is the KJV rendering of the phrase en allelois in Rom. 1:12, translated in the RV, “each of us by the other’s (faith).” See OTHER, No. 5.

MUZZLE

phimoo (φιμώω, 5392), “to close the mouth with a muzzle” (phimos), is used (a) of “muzzling” the ox when it treads out the corn, 1 Cor. 9:9, KJV, “muzzle the mouth of,” RV, “muzzle,” and 1 Tim. 5:18, with the lesson that those upon whom spiritual labor is bestowed should not refrain from ministering to the material needs of those who labor on their behalf; (b) metaphorically, of putting to silence, or subduing to stillness, Matt. 22:12, 34; Mark 1:25; 4:39; Luke 4:35; 1 Pet. 2:15. See PEACE (hold), SILENCE.¶

MY (MINE)

emos (ἐμός, 1699), a possessive adjective of the first person, often used as a possessive pronoun with greater emphasis than the oblique forms of ego (see below), a measure of stress which should always be observed; it denotes (I) subjectively, (a) “what I possess,” e.g., John 4:34; 7:16 (1st part); 13:35; 1 Cor. 16:21; Gal. 6:11; Col. 4:18 (1st clause); as a pronoun, absolutely (i.e., not as an adjective), e.g., Matt. 20:15; 25:27; Luke 15:31, RV, “(all that is) mine,” KJV, “(all that) I have”; John 16:14, 15; 17:10; (b) “proceeding from me,” e.g. Mark 8:38; John 7:16 (2nd part); 8:37 (here the repetition of the article with the pronoun, after the article with the noun, lends special stress to the pronoun; more lit., “the word, that which is mine”); so in John 15:12. Such instances are to be distinguished from the less emphatic order where the pronoun comes between the article and the noun, as in John 7:16, already mentioned; (c) in the phrase “it is mine” (i.e., “it rests with me”), e.g., Matt. 20:23; Mark 10:40; (II), objectively, “pertaining or relating to me”: (a) “appointed for me,” e.g., John 7:6, “My time” (with the repeated article and special stress just referred to); (b) equivalent to an objective genitive (“of me”) e.g., Luke 22:19, “(in remembrance) of Me” (lit., “in My remembrance”); so 1 Cor. 11:24.

Notes: (1) This pronoun frequently translates oblique forms of the first personal pronoun ego, “I,” e.g., “of me, to me.” These instances are usually unemphatic, always less so than those under emos (above). (2) For “my affairs” and “my state” see AFFAIR, Notes. (3) In Matt. 26:12, “for My burial” translates a phrase consisting of the preposition pros (“towards”) governing the article with the infinitive mood, aorist tense, of entaphiazō, “to bury,” followed by the personal pronoun “Me,” as the object, where the infinitive is virtually a noun, lit., “towards the burying (of) Me.” (4) In 1 Tim. 1:11, “was committed to my trust” is, lit., “(with) which I was entrusted” (pisteuo, “to entrust”).

MYRRH

A. Noun.

smurna (σμύρνα, 4666), whence the name “Smyrna,” a word of Semitic origin, Heb., mor, from a root meaning “bitter,” is a gum resin from a shrubby tree, which grows in Yemen and neighboring regions of Africa; the fruit is smooth and somewhat larger than a pea. The color of myrrh varies from pale reddish-yellow to reddish-brown or red. The taste is bitter, and the substance astringent, acting as an antiseptic and a stimulant. It was used as a perfume, Ps. 45:8, where the language is symbolic of the graces of the Messiah; Prov. 7:17; Song of Sol. 1:13; 5:5; it was one of the ingredients of the “holy anointing oil” for the priests, Ex. 30:23 (RV, “flowing myrrh”); it was used also for the purification of women, Esth. 2:12; for embalming, John 19:39; as an anodyne see B), it was one of the gifts of the Magi, Matt. 2:11.¶

B. Verb.

smurnizo (σμυρνίζω, 4669) is used transitively in the NT, with the meaning “to mingle or drug with myrrh,” Mark 15:23; the mixture was doubtless offered to deaden the pain (Matthew’s word “gall” suggests that “myrrh” was not the only ingredient). Christ refused to partake of any such means of alleviation; He would retain all His mental power for the complete fulfillment of the Father’s will.¶

MYSELF

1. emautou (ἐμαυτοῦ, 1683), a reflexive pronoun, of the first person, lit., “of myself,” is used (a) frequently after various prepositions, e.g., hupo, “under,” Matt. 8:9; Luke 7:8; RV, “under myself”; peri, “concerning,” John 5:31; 8:14, 18; Acts 24:10; apo, “from,” John 5:30; 7:17, RV, “from” (KJV, “of,” which is ambiguous); so v. 28; 8:28, 42; 10:18; 14:10 (RV, “from”); pros, “unto,” John 12:32, RV, “unto Myself”; 14:3; Philem. 13, “with me”; eis, “to,” 1 Cor. 4:6; hyper, “on behalf of,” 2 Cor. 12:5; ek (ex), “out of,” or “from,” John 12:49, RV, “from Myself”; (b) as the direct object of a verb, Luke 7:7; John 8:54; 14:21; 17:19; Acts 26:2; 1 Cor. 4:3; 9:19; 2 Cor. 11:7, 9; Gal. 2:18; Phil. 3:13; (c) in other oblique cases of the pronoun, without a preposition, e.g., Acts 20:24, “unto” (or to); 26:9, “with” (or “to”); Rom. 11:4, RV, “for” (KJV, “to”); 1 Cor. 4:4, RV, “against myself” (KJV, inaccurately, “by”); in all these instances the pronoun is in the dative case; in 1 Cor. 10:33, “mine own” (the genitive case); in 1 Cor. 7:7, “I myself” (the accusative case).¶

2. autos (αὐτός, 846), “self” (a) with ego, “I,” “I myself,” Luke 24:39; Acts 10:26; Rom. 7:25; 9:3; 2 Cor. 10:1; 12:13; (b) without the personal pronoun, Acts 24:16 (as the subject of a verb); in the nominative case, Acts 25:22; 1 Cor. 9:27; Phil. 2:24; in the genitive case, Rom. 16:2, RV, “of mine own self” musterion (μυστήριον, 3466), primarily that which is known to the mustes, “the initiated” (from mueo, “to initiate into the mysteries”; cf. Phil. 4:12, mueomai, “I have learned the secret,” RV). In the NT it denotes, not the mysterious (as with the Eng. word), but that which, being outside the range of unassisted natural apprehension, can be made known only by divine revelation, and is made known in a manner and at a time appointed by God, and to those only who are illumined by His Spirit. In the ordinary sense a “mystery” implies knowledge withheld; its Scriptural significance is truth revealed. Hence the terms especially associated with the subject are “made known,” “manifested,” “revealed,” “preached,” “understand,” “dispensation.” The definition given above may be best illustrated by the following passage: “the mystery which hath been hid from all ages and generations: but now hath it been manifested to His saints” (Col. 1:26, RV). “It is used of:

MYSTERY

was not imparted to the uninitiated, and were called ‘the perfected,’ cf. 1 Cor. 2:6-16 where the Apostle has these ‘mysteries’ in mind and presents the gospel in contrast thereto; here ‘the perfected’ are, of course the believers, who alone can perceive the things revealed; (b) Christ, who is God Himself revealed under the conditions of human life, Col. 2:2; 4:3, and submitting even to death, 1 Cor. 2:1 [in some mss., for marturion, testimony], 7, but raised from among the dead, 1 Tim. 3:16, that the will of God to coordinate the universe in Him, and subject it to Him, might in due time be accomplished, Eph. 1:9 (cf. Rev. 10:7), as is declared in the gospel Rom. 16:25; Eph. 6:19; (c) the Church, which is Christ’s Body, i.e., the union of redeemed men with God in Christ, Eph. 5:32 [cf. Col. 1:27]; (d) the rapture into the presence of Christ of those members of the Church which is His Body who shall be alive on the earth at His Parousia, 1 Cor. 15:51; (e) the operation of those hidden forces that either retard or accelerate the Kingdom of Heaven (i.e., of God), Matt. 13:11; Mark 4:11; (f) the cause of the present condition of Israel, Rom. 11:25; (g) the spirit of disobedience to God, 2 Thess. 2:7; Rev. 17:5, 7, cf. Eph. 2:2.”*

To these may be added (h) the seven local churches, and their angels, seen in symbolism, Rev. 1:20; (i) the ways of God in grace, Eph. 3:9. The word is used in a comprehensive way in 1 Cor. 4:1.†

N

NAIL (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

helos (ἥλος, 2247) occurs in the remarks of Thomas regarding the print of the nails used in Christ’s crucifixion, John 20:25.¶

B. Verb.

proseloo (προσηλόω, 4338), “to nail to” (pros, “to,” and a verbal form of A), is used in Col. 2:14, in which the figure of a bond (ordinances of the Law) is first described as cancelled, and then removed; the idea in the verb itself is not that of the cancellation, to which the taking out of the way was subsequent, but of nailing up the removed thing in triumph to the cross. The death of Christ not only rendered the Law useless as a means of salvation, but gave public demonstration that it was so.¶

NAKED (Adjective and Verb), NAKEDNESS

A. Adjective.

gumnos (γυμνός, 1131) signifies (a) “unclothed,” Mark 14:52; in v. 51 it is used as a noun (“his” and “body” being italicized); (b) “scantily or poorly clad,” Matt. 25:36, 38, 43, 44; Acts 19:16 (with torn garments); Jas. 2:15; (c) “clad in the undergarment only”

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

(the outer being laid aside), John 21:7 (see CLOTHING); (d) metaphorically, (1) of “a bare seed,” 1 Cor. 15:37; (2) of “the soul without the body,” 2 Cor. 5:3; (3) of “things exposed to the allseeing eye of God,” Heb. 4:13; (4) of “the carnal condition of a local church,” Rev. 3:17; (5) of “the similar state of an individual,” 16:15; (6) of “the desolation of religious Babylon,” 17:16.¶

B. Verb.

gumniteuo (γυμνητεύω, 1130), “to be naked or scantily clad” (akin to A), is used in 1 Cor. 4:11. In the Koine writings (see Preface to Vol. 1) it is used of being light-armed.

C. Noun.

gumnōtes (γυμνότης, 1132), “nakedness” (akin to A), is used (a) of “want of sufficient clothing,” Rom. 8:35; 2 Cor. 11:27; (b) metaphorically, of “the nakedness of the body,” said of the condition of a local church, Rev. 3:18.¶

NAME

A. Noun.

onoma (ὄνομα, 3686) is used (I) in general of the “name” by which a person or thing is called, e.g., Mark 3:16, 17, “(He) surnamed,” lit., “(He added) the name”; 14:32, lit., “(of which) the name (was)”; Luke 1:63; John 18:10, sometimes translated “named,” e.g., Luke 8:5, “named (Zacharias),” lit., “by name”; in the same verse, “named (Elizabeth),” lit., “the name of her,” an elliptical phrase, with “was” understood; Acts 8:9, RV, “by name,” 10:1; the “name” is put for the reality in Rev. 3:1; in Phil. 2:9, the “Name” represents “the title and dignity” of the Lord, as in Eph. 1:21 and Heb. 1:4;

(II) for all that a “name” implies, of authority, character, rank, majesty, power, excellence, etc., of everything that the “name” covers: (a) of the “Name” of God as expressing His attributes, etc., e.g., Matt. 6:9; Luke 1:49; John 12:28; 17:6, 26; Rom. 15:9; 1 Tim. 6:1; Heb. 13:15; Rev. 13:6; (b) of the “Name” of Christ, e.g., Matt. 10:22; 19:29; John 1:12; 2:23; 3:18; Acts 26:9; Rom. 1:5; Jas. 2:7; 1 John 3:23; 3 John 7; Rev. 2:13; 3:8; also the phrases rendered “in the name”; these may be analyzed as follows: (1) representing the authority of Christ, e.g., Matt. 18:5 (with epi, “on the ground of My authority”); so Matt. 24:5 (falsely) and parallel passages; as substantiated by the Father, John 14:26; 16:23 (last clause), RV; (2) in the power of (with en, “in”), e.g., Mark 16:17; Luke 10:17; Acts 3:6; 4:10; 16:18; Jas. 5:14; (3) in acknowledgement or confession of, e.g., Acts 4:12; 8:16; 9:27, 28; (4) in recognition of the authority of (sometimes combined with the thought of relying or resting on), Matt. 18:20; cf. 28:19; Acts 8:16; 9:2 (eis, “into”); John 14:13; 15:16; Eph. 5:20; Col. 3:17; (5) owing to the fact that one is called by Christ’s “Name” or is identified with Him, e.g. 1 Pet. 4:14 (with en, “in”); with heneken, “for the sake of,” e.g., Matt. 19:29; with dia, “on account of,” Matt. 10:22; 24:9; Mark 13:13; Luke 21:17; John 15:21; 1 John 2:12; Rev. 2:3 (for 1 Pet. 4:16, see Note below);

(III) as standing, by metonymy, for “persons,” Acts 1:15; Rev. 3:4; 11:13 (RV, “persons”).

Note: In Mark 9:41, the use of the phrase en with the dative case of onoma (as in the best mss.) suggests the idea of “by reason of” or “on the ground of” (i.e., “because ye are My disciples”); 1 Pet. 4:16, RV, “in this Name” (KJV, “on this behalf”), may be taken in the same way.

B. Verbs.

1. onomazo (ὀνομάζω, 3687) denotes (a) “to name,” “mention,” or “address by name,” Acts 19:13, RV, “to name” (KJV, “to call”); in the passive voice, Rom. 15:20; Eph. 1:21; 5:3; to make mention of the “Name” of the Lord in praise and worship, 2 Tim. 2:19; (b) “to name, call, give a name to,” Luke 6:13, 14; passive voice, 1 Cor. 5:11, RV, “is named” (KJV, “is called”); Eph. 3:15 (some mss. have the verb in this sense in Mark 3:14 and 1 Cor. 5:1). See CALL, Note (1).¶

2. eponomazo (ἐπονομάζω, 2028), “to call by a name, surname” (epi, “on,” and No. 1), is used in Rom. 2:17, passive voice, RV, “bearest the name of” (KJV, “art called”). See CALL, Note (1).¶

3. prosagoreuo (προσαγορεύω, 4316) primarily denotes “to address, greet, salute”; hence, “to call by name,” Heb. 5:10, RV, “named (of God a High Priest)” (KJV, “called”), expressing the formal ascription of the title to Him whose it is; “called” does not adequately express the significance. Some suggest the meaning “addressed,” but this is doubtful. The reference is to Ps. 110:4, a prophecy confirmed at the Ascension.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 23:6.¶

4. kaleo (καλέω, 2564), “to call,” is translated “named” in Acts 7:58, RV (KJV, “whose name was”). See CALL, No. 1 (b).

Notes: (1) In Luke 19:2, KJV, kaleo, “to call” (with the dative case of onoma, “by name”), is translated “named” (RV, “called by name”); in Luke 2:21, KJV, the verb alone is rendered “named” (RV, “called”). (2) In Matt. 9:9 and Mark 15:7, KJV, the verb lego, “to speak, to call by name,” is rendered “named” (RV, “called”). See CALL, No. 9.

NAMELY

Notes: (1) In Rom. 13:9, the preposition en, “in,” with the article, lit., “in the,” is translated “namely.” (2) In 1 Cor. 7:26 the RV, “namely,” and KJV, “I say,” do not translate anything in the original, but serve to reintroduce the phrase “that this is good.”

NAPKIN

soudarion (σουδάριον, 4676), for which see HANDKERCHIEF, is translated “napkin” in Luke 19:20; John 11:44; 20:7. In Luke 19:20 the reference may be to a towel or any kind of linen cloth or even a sort of headdress, any of which might be used for concealing money.

NARRATIVE

diegesis (διήγησις, 1335), translated “a declaration” in the KJV of Luke 1:1, denotes a “narrative,” RV (akin to diegeomai, “to set out in detail, recount, describe”). See DECLARE, B, Note (1).¶ In the Sept., Judg. 7:15; Hab. 2:6.¶

NARROW

stenos (στενός, 4728), from a root sten-, seen in stenazo, “to groan,” stenagmos, “groaning” (Eng., “stenography,” lit., “narrow writing”), is used figuratively in Matt.

7:13, 14, of the gate which provides the entrance to eternal life, “narrow” because it runs counter to natural inclinations, and “the way” is similarly characterized; so in Luke 13:24 (where the more intensive word agonizomai, “strive,” is used); RV, “narrow” (KJV, “strait”) in each place. Cf. stenochoreo, “to be straitened,” and stenochoria, “narrowness, anguish, distress.”¶

B. Verb.

thlibo (θλίβω, 2346), “to press,” is translated “narrow” in Matt. 7:14, KJV, lit., “narrowed” (RV, “straitened”; the verb is in the perfect participle, passive voice), i.e., hemmed in, like a mountain gorge; the way is rendered “narrow” by the divine conditions, which make it impossible for any to enter who think the entrance depends upon self-merit, or who still incline towards sin, or desire to continue in evil. See AFFLICT, No. 4.

NATION

1. ethnos (ἔθνος, 1484), originally “a multitude,” denotes (a) “a nation” or “people,” e.g., Matt. 24:7; Acts 10:35; the Jewish people, e.g., Luke 7:5; 23:2; John 11:48, 50-52; Acts 10:22; 24:2, 10, 17; in Matt. 21:43, the reference is to Israel in its restored condition, (b) in the plural “the nations” as distinct from Israel. See GENTILES.

2. genos (γένος, 1085), “a race”: see KIND (Noun).

3. allopoulos (ἀλλόφυλος, 246), “foreign, of another race” (allos, “another,” phulon, “a tribe”), is used in Acts 10:28, “one of another nation.”¶

Note: For Phil. 2:15, genea (KJV, “nation,” RV, “generation”), see AGE.

NATURAL, NATURALLY

A. Adjectives.

1. phusikos (φυσικός, 5446) originally signifying “produced by nature, inborn,” from phusis, “nature” (see below), cf. Eng., “physical,” “physics,” etc., denotes (a) “according to nature,” Rom. 1:26, 27; (b) “governed by mere natural instincts,” 2 Pet. 2:12, RV, “(born) mere animals,” KJV and RV marg., “natural (brute beasts).”¶

2. psuchikos (ψυχικός, 5591), “belonging to the psuche, soul” (as the lower part of the immaterial in man), “natural, physical,” describes the man in Adam and what pertains to him (set in contrast to pneumatikos “spiritual”), 1 Cor. 2:14; 15:44 (twice), 46 (in the latter used as a noun); Jas. 3:15, “sensual” (RV marg., “natural” or “animal”), here relating perhaps more especially to the mind, a wisdom in accordance with, or springing from, the corrupt desires and affections; so in Jude 19.¶

genesis (γένεσις, 1078), “birth,” is used in Jas. 1:23, of the “natural face,” lit., “the face of his birth,” “what God made him to be” (Hort). See GENERATION, NATURE, No. 2.

Note: In Rom. 11:21, 24 the preposition kata, “according to,” with the noun phusis, “nature,” is translated “natural,” of branches, metaphorically describing members of the nation of Israel.

C. Adverb.

phusikos (φυσικῶς, 5447), “naturally, by nature” (akin to A, No. 1), is used in Jude 10.¶

Note: In Phil. 2:20, KJV, gnesios, “sincerely, honorably, truly” (from the adjective gnesios, “true, sincere, genuine”; see, e.g., Phil. 4:3), is translated “naturally” (RV, “truly,” marg., “genuinely”).¶

NATURE

1. phusis (φύσις, 5449), from phuo, “to bring forth, produce,” signifies (a) “the nature” (i.e., the natural powers or constitution) of a person or thing, Eph. 2:3; Jas. 3:7 (“kind”); 2 Pet. 1:4; (b) “origin, birth,” Rom. 2:27, one who by birth is a Gentile, uncircumcised, in contrast to one who, though circumcised, has become spiritually uncircumcised by his iniquity; Gal. 2:15; (c) “the regular law or order of nature,” Rom. 1:26, against “nature” (para, “against”); 2:14, adverbially, “by nature” (for 11:21, 24, see NATURAL, Note); 1 Cor. 11:14; Gal. 4:8, “by nature (are no gods),” here “nature” is the emphatic word, and the phrase includes demons, men regarded as deified, and idols; these are gods only in name (the negative, me, denies not simply that they were gods, but the possibility that they could be).¶

2. genesis (γένεσις, 1078) is used in the phrase in Jas. 3:6, “the wheel of nature,” RV (marg., “birth”). Some regard this as the course of birth or of creation, or the course of man’s “nature” according to its original divine purpose; Mayor (on the Ep. of James) regards trochos here as a wheel, “which, catching fire from the glowing axle, is compared to the widespreading mischief done by the tongue,” and shows that “the fully developed meaning” of genesis denotes “the incessant change of life ... the sphere of this earthly life, meaning all that is contained in our life.” The significance, then, would appear to be the whole round of human life and activity. Moulton and Milligan illustrate it in this sense from the papyri. See NATURAL, B.

For NAUGHTINESS, Jas. 1:21, KJV, see WICKEDNESS

NAY

1. ou (οὐ, 3756), “no, not,” expressing a negation absolutely, is rendered “nay,” e.g., in Matt. 5:37; 13:29; John 7:12, KJV (RV, “not so”); Acts 16:37; 2 Cor. 1:17-19; Jas. 5:12.

2. ouchi (οὐχί, 3780), a strengthened form of No. 1, is used, e.g., in Luke 12:51; 13:3, 5; 16:30; Rom. 3:27.

3. alla (ἀλλά, 235), “but,” to mark contrast or opposition, is rendered “nay” in Rom. 3:31, RV, “nay” (KJV, “yea”); in 7:7, RV, “howbeit” (KJV, “nay”); 8:37; 1 Cor. 3:2, RV; 6:8; 12:22; in Heb. 3:16, RV, “nay” (KJV, “howbeit”).

4. menounge (μενοῦνγε, 3304), (i.e., men oun ge), “nay rather,” is rendered “nay but” in Rom. 9:20 (in Rom. 10:18 and Phil. 3:8, “yea verily,” KJV, “yea doubtless”). See YEA.¶

NEAR (Adverb), NEAR (come, draw), NEARER

A. Adverbs.

1. engus (ἐγγύς, 1451), “near, nigh,” is used (a) of place, e.g., Luke 19:11, “nigh”; John 3:23; 11:54, “near”; 6:19, 23, “nigh”; metaphorically in Rom. 10:8; Eph. 2:13, 17, “nigh”; (b) of time, e.g., Matt. 24:32-33, “nigh”; so Luke 21:30-31; as a preposition, Heb. 6:8, “nigh unto (a curse),” and 8:13, “nigh unto (vanishing away).” See HAND (at), NIGH, READY.

2. enguteron (ἐγγύτερον, 1452), the comparative degree of No. 1, and the neuter of the adjective enguteros, used adverbially, occurs in Rom. 13:11.¶

3. plesion (πλησίον, 4139), “near, close by, neighboring” (the neuter of the adjective plesios, used as an adverb), occurs in John 4:5. See NEIGHBOR.

B. Adjective.

anankaïos (ἀναγκάιος, 316), “necessary,” is used, in a secondary sense, of persons connected by bonds of nature or friendship, with the meaning “intimate,” in Acts 10:24, “(his) near (friends)”; it is found in this sense in the papyri. See NECESSARY, NEEDFUL.

C. Verbs.

1. engizo (ἐγγίζω, 1448), transitively, “to bring near” (not in NT; in the Sept., e.g., Gen. 48:10; Isa. 5:8); intransitively, “to draw near,” e.g., Matt. 21:34; Luke 18:40; 19:41, RV, “draw nigh;” see APPROACH, A.

2. proserchomai (προσέρχομαι, 4334), “to come to, go to,” is translated “drew near” in Acts 7:31 and Heb. 10:22. See COME, No. 10.

3. prosago (προσάγω, 4317) is used (a) transitively, “to bring,” Acts 16:20; 1 Pet. 3:18; (b) intransitively, “to draw near,” in the latter sense in Acts 27:27.¶

NECESSARY

1. anankaïos (ἀναγκάιος, 316), “necessary” (from ananke, “necessity”; see below), is so rendered in Acts 13:46; 1 Cor. 12:22; 2 Cor. 9:5; Phil. 2:25; Titus 3:14; Heb. 8:3, RV (KJV, “of necessity”); for Acts 10:24, “near friends,” see NEAR, B.¶

2. ananke (ἀναγκή, 318), “a necessity” (see No. 1), is rendered “(it was) necessary” in Heb. 9:23, lit., “it was a necessity.” See DISTRESS, A, No. 1.

3. epanankes (ἐπάνανκες, 1876), an adjective akin to the preceding, with epi used intensively, found only in the neuter form, is used as an adverb signifying “of necessity” and translated as an adjective in Acts 15:28, “necessary,” lit., “(things) of necessity.”¶

Note: For the KJV of Acts 28:10 see NEED, A, No. 1.

NECESSITY (-TIES)

1. ananke (ἀναγκή, 318) signifies (a) “a necessity,” what must needs be (see NEEDS), translated “necessity” (in some mss. in Luke 23:17) in 1 Cor. 7:37; 9:16; 2 Cor. 9:7 (with ek “out of”); Philem. 14 (with kata, “according to”); Heb. 7:12; 9:16; (b) “distress, pain,” translated “necessities” in 2 Cor. 6:4; 12:10. See DISTRESS, No. 1, and the synonymous words there, and NEEDS, NEEDFUL (also CONSTRAIN, Note).

2. chreia (χρεία, 5532), “a need,” and almost always so translated, is used in the plural in Acts 20:34, “necessities”; Rom. 12:13, RV (KJV, “necessity”); in Phil. 4:16, KJV, “necessity,” RV, “need.” See NEED, NEEDFUL.

NECK

trachelos (τράχηλος, 5137) is used (a) literally, Matt. 18:6; Mark 9:42; Luke 17:2; of “embracing,” Luke 15:20; Acts 20:37; (b) metaphorically, in Acts 15:10, of “putting a yoke upon”: Rom. 16:4, singular in the original, “(laid down their) neck,” indicating the figurative use of the term rather than the literal. Prisca and Aquila in some way had risked their lives for the apostle (the phrase is found with this significance in the papyri).¶

NEED, NEEDS, NEEDFUL

A. Nouns.

1. chreia (χρεία, 5532) denotes “a need,” in such expressions as “there is a need”; or “to have need of” something, e.g., Matt. 3:14; 6:8; 9:12, RV, “(have no) need,” KJV, “need (not),” the RV adheres to the noun form; so in 14:16; Mark 14:63; Luke 5:31; 22:71; Eph. 4:28; 1 Thess. 4:9; in the following, however, both RV and KJV use the verb form, “to need” (whereas the original has the verb echo, “to have,” with the noun chreia as the object, as in the instances just mentioned): Luke 15:7; John 2:25; 13:10; 16:30; 1 Thess. 1:8; 1 John 2:27; Rev. 22:5; in all these the verb “to have” could well have been expressed in the translation.

In Luke 10:42 it is translated “needful,” where the “one thing” is surely not one dish, or one person, but is to be explained according to Matt. 6:33 and 16:26. In Eph. 4:29, for the KJV, “(to) the use (of edifying),” the RV more accurately has “(for edifying) as the need may be,” marg., “the building up of the need,” i.e., “to supply that which needed in each case”; so Westcott, who adds “The need represents a gap in the life which the wise word ‘builds up,’ fills up solidly and surely.” In Phil. 4:19 the RV has “every need of yours” (KJV, “all your need”); in 1 Thess. 4:12, RV, “need” (KJV, “lack”); in Acts 28:10, RV, “(such things) as we needed” (KJV, “as were necessary”), lit., “the things for the needs (plural).” See BUSINESS, A, No. 1, LACK, NECESSITY, USE, WANT.

2. ananke (ἀνάγκη, 318), “a necessity, need,” is translated “it must needs be” in Matt. 18:7, with the verb “to be” understood (according to the best mss.); in Luke 14:18, “I must needs” translates the verb echo, “to have,” with this noun as the object, lit., “I have need”; in Rom. 13:5 “(ye) must needs,” lit., “(it is) necessary (to be subject).” See NECESSARY, No. 2, NECESSITY, No. 1. See also DISTRESS.

B. Verbs.

1. chrezo (χρηζω, 5535), “to need, to have need of” (akin to chre, “it is necessary, fitting”), is used in Matt. 6:32; Luke 11:8; 12:30; Rom. 16:2, RV, “may have need” (KJV, “hath need”); 2 Cor. 3:1.¶

2. dei (δεῖ, 1163), an impersonal verb, signifying “it is necessary,” is rendered “must needs” in Mark 13:7; John 4:4; Acts 1:16, KJV (RV, “it was needful”); 17:3, KJV (RV, “it behoved”); (in some mss. in Acts 21:22); 2 Cor. 11:30; 12:1; in Acts 15:5, “it was needful.”

3. deon (δέϊ, 1163**), the neuter of the present participle of No. 2, is used as a noun, signifying “that which is needful, due, proper,” in 1 Pet. 1:6, with the meaning “need,” “(if) need (be),” with the verb to be understood. See OUGHT.

4. prosdeomai (προσδέομαι, 4326), “to want besides, to need in addition” (pros, “besides,” deomai, “to want”), is used in Acts 17:25, “(as though) He needed (anything)”; the literal sense of pros is not to be stressed.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 12:9, “lacking (bread).”¶

5. opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784), “to owe, be bound, obliged to do something,” is translated “must ye needs,” in 1 Cor. 5:10; in 7:36 it is used impersonally, signifying “it is due,” and followed by the infinitive mood of ginomai, “to become, to occur, come about,” lit. “it is due to become,” translated “(if) need (so) require.” See BEHOVE, BOUND, DEBT, DUE, DUTY, GUILTY, INDEBTED, MUST, OUGHT, OWE.

Note: In Phil. 4:12, KJV, hustereo, “to come short, fail, to be in want,” is translated “to suffer need” (RV, “to be in want”). See BEHIND.

C. Adjectives.

1. anankaioteros (ἀναγκάϊος, 316*), the comparative degree of anankaios, “necessary,” is translated “more needful” in Phil. 1:24. See NECESSARY, No. 1.

2. epitedeios (ἐπιτήδειος, 2006), primarily, “suitable, convenient,” then, “useful, necessary,” is translated “needful” in Jas. 2:16, neuter plural, “necessaries.”¶ In the Sept., 1 Chron. 28:2, “suitable.”¶

Note: In Heb. 4:16 eukairos, “timely, seasonable,” qualifying the noun boetheia, “help,” is translated “time of need,” lit., “for opportune help.” See CONVENIENT.

NEEDLE

1. rhaphis (ῥαφίς, 4476), from rhapto, “to sew,” occurs in Matt. 19:24; Mark 10:25.¶

2. belone (βέλος, 956), akin to belos, “a dart,” denotes a sharp point, hence, “a needle,” Luke 18:25 (some mss. have No. 1).¶

Note: The idea of applying “the needle’s eye” to small gates seems to be a modern one; there is no ancient trace of it. The Lord’s object in the statement is to express human impossibility and there is no need to endeavor to soften the difficulty by taking the needle to mean anything more than the ordinary instrument. Mackie points out (Hastings’ Bib. Dic.) that “an attempt is sometimes made to explain the words as a reference to the small door, a little over 2 feet square, in the large heavy gate of a walled city. This mars the figure without materially altering the meaning, and receives no justification from the language and traditions of Palestine.”

NEGLECT, NEGLIGENT

1. ameleo (ἀμελέω, 272) denotes (a) “to be careless, not to care” (a, negative, melei, “it is a care”; from melo, “to care, to be a care”), Matt. 22:5, “made light of”; (b) “to be careless of, neglect,” 1 Tim. 4:14; Heb. 2:3; 8:9, “I regarded (them) not.” See LIGHT OF (make), REGARD.¶ (In the Sept., Jer. 4:17; 38:32.¶)

2. paratheoreo (παράθεωρέω, 3865), primarily, “to examine side by side, compare” (para, “beside,” theoreo, “to look at”), hence, “to overlook, to neglect,” is used in Acts 6:1, of the “neglect” of widows in the daily ministration in Jerusalem.¶

Note: In 2 Pet. 1:12, some mss. have No. 1, hence the KJV, “I will not be negligent;” the RV follows those which have the future tense of mello, “to be ready.” See READY. For “neglect to hear” see HEAR, No. 7.

For NEGLECTING (Col. 2:23) see SEVERITY

NEIGHBOR

1. geiton (γείτων, 1069), lit., “one living in the same land,” denotes “a neighbor,” always plural in the NT, Luke 14:12; 15:6, 9; John 9:5.¶

2. perioikos (περίοικος, 4040), an adjective, lit., “dwelling around” (peri, “around,” oikos, “a dwelling”), is used as a noun in Luke 1:58, “neighbors”.¶

3. plesion (πλησίον, 4139), the neuter of the adjective plesios (from pelas, “near”), is used as an adverb accompanied by the article, lit., “the (one) near”; hence, one’s “neighbor”; see refs. below.

This and Nos. 1 and 2 have a wider range of meaning than that of the Eng. word “neighbor.” There were no farmhouses scattered over the agricultural areas of Palestine; the populations, gathered in villages, went to and fro to their toil. Hence domestic life was touched at every point by a wide circle of neighborhood. The terms for neighbor were therefore of a very comprehensive scope. This may be seen from the chief characteristics of the privileges and duties of neighborhood as set forth in Scripture, (a) its helpfulness, e.g., Prov. 27:10; Luke 10:36; (b) its intimacy, e.g., Luke 15:6, 9 (see No. 1); Heb. 8:11; (c) its sincerity and sanctity, e.g., Ex. 22:7, 10; Prov. 3:29; 14:21; Rom. 13:10; 15:2; Eph. 4:25; Jas. 4:12. The NT quotes and expands the command in Lev. 19:18, “to love one’s neighbor as oneself”; see, e.g., Matt. 5:43; 19:19; 22:39; Mark 12:31, 33; Luke 10:27; Gal. 5:14; Jas. 2:8. See also Acts 7:27.

Note: In Rom. 13:8, for heteron, “another,” RV has “his neighbor.”

NEIGHBORHOOD

Note: This, in Acts 28:7, RV, translates a phrase consisting of the dative plural of the article followed by peri, “around,” governed by the preposition en, “in,” “in the neighborhood of (that place),” KJV, “in the (same quarters),” lit., “in the (parts) around (that place).”

NEST

kataskenosis (κατασκήνωσις, 2682), properly “an encamping, taking up one’s quarters,” then, “a lodging, abode” (kata, “down over,” skene, “a tent”), is used of birds’ “nests” in Matt. 8:20 and Luke 9:58.¶ In the Sept., 1 Chron. 28:2, “the building”; Ezek. 37:27, “(My) tabernacle.”¶

The word nossia, signifying “a brood,” Luke 13:34, used in the Sept. to denote a “nest,” e.g., in Deut. 22:6; 32:11, signifies the actual receptacle built by birds in which to lay their eggs (having special reference to the prospective brood); but the word kataskenosis, used by the Lord, denotes “a resting or roosting place.” This lends force to His comparison. Not only was He without a home, He had not even a lodging place (cf. kataskenoo, “to lodge,” e.g., Matt. 13:32; Acts 2:26, RV marg., “shall tabernacle”; see LODGE).

NET

1. amphiblestron (ἀμφίβληστρον, 293), lit., “something thrown around” (amphi, “around,” ballo, “to throw”), denotes “a casting net,” a somewhat small “net,” cast over the shoulder, spreading out in a circle and made to sink by weights, Matt. 4:18 (in some mss. in Mark 1:16: the best have the verb amphiballo alone).¶

2. diktuon (δίκτυον, 1350), a general term for a “net” (from an old verb diko, “to cast”: akin to diskos, “a quoit”), occurs in Matt. 4:20-21; Mark 1:18-19; Luke 5:2, 4-6; John 21:6, 8, 11 (twice).¶ In the Sept. it was used for a “net” for catching birds, Prov. 1:17, in other ways, e.g., figuratively of a snare, Job 18:8; Prov. 29:5.

3. sagene (σαγήνη, 4522) denotes “a dragnet, a seine”; two modes were employed with this, either by its being let down into the water and drawn together in a narrowing circle, and then into the boat, or as a semicircle drawn to the shore, Matt. 13:47, where Nos. 1 and 2 would not have suited so well. The Greek historian Herodotus uses the corresponding verb sageneuo of a device by which the Persians are said to have cleared a conquered island of its inhabitants.¶

NEVER

1. oudepote (οὐδέποτε, 3763), from oude, “not even,” and pote, “at any time,” is used in definite negative statements, e.g., Matt. 7:23; 1 Cor. 13:8; Heb. 10:1, 11, or questions, e.g., Matt. 21:16, 42; in Luke 15:29 (1st part), RV, “never” (KJV, “neither ... at any time”); KJV and RV, “never” (2nd part).

---

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

2. medepote (μηδέποτε, 3368), virtually the same as No. 1, the negative me, however, conveying a less strong declarative negation, 2 Tim. 3:7.¶

3. oudepo (οὐδέπω, 3764), “not yet,” is translated “never (man) yet” in John 19:41 (“man” representing the idiomatically used negative pronoun oudeis, “no one”); some mss. have it in Luke 23:53, instead of oupo, “not yet.”

Notes: (1) In Mark 14:21, KJV, the negative particle ouk, “not,” is translated “never” (RV, “not”); the negative particle me, “not” (which suggests nonexistence when the existence was after all possible, or even probable, in contrast to ou, which implies nonexistence absolutely), is translated “never” in John 7:15, KJV and RV (2) The phrase eis ton aiona, “for ever” (not to be rendered literally, “unto the age,” see ETERNAL), preceded by the double negative ou me, denotes “never,” John 4:14; 8:51-52; 10:28; 11:26; 13:8; so, preceded by ouk, “not,” in Mark 3:29. (3) In 2 Pet. 1:10, “never” is the translation of ou me pote, i.e., “by no means ever”; so with the double negative followed by the extended word popote, i.e., “by no means not even at any time,” John 6:35 (2nd part). (4) Popote follows oudeis, “no one,” in the dative case (“to no man”) in John 8:33, RV, “never yet” (KJV, “never”); so in Luke 19:30, where oudeis is in the nominative case, RV, “no man ever yet” (KJV, “yet never man”).

For NEVERTHELESS see †, p. 9

NEW

1. kainos (καινός, 2537) denotes “new,” of that which is unaccustomed or unused, not “new” in time, recent, but “new” as to form or quality, of different nature from what is contrasted as old. “ ‘The new tongues,’ kainos, of Mark 16:17 are the ‘other tongues,’ heteros, of Acts 2:4. These languages, however, were ‘new’ and ‘different,’ not in the sense that they had never been heard before, or that they were new to the hearers, for it is plain from v. 8 that this is not the case; they were new languages to the speakers, different from those in which they were accustomed to speak.

“The new things that the Gospel brings for present obedience and realization are: a new covenant, Matt. 26:28 in some texts; a new commandment, John 13:34; a new creative act, Gal. 6:15; a new creation, 2 Cor. 5:17; a new man, i.e., a new character of manhood, spiritual and moral, after the pattern of Christ, Eph. 4:24; a new man, i.e., ‘the Church which is His (Christ’s) body,’ Eph. 2:15.

“The new things that are to be received and enjoyed hereafter are: a new name, the believer’s, Rev. 2:17; a new name, the Lord’s, Rev. 3:12; a new song, Rev. 5:9; a new Heaven and a new Earth, Rev. 21:1; the new Jerusalem, Rev. 3:12; 21:2; ‘And He that sitteth on the Throne said, Behold, I make all things new,’ Rev. 21:5”*

Kainos is translated “fresh” in the RV of Matt. 9:17; Mark 2:22 (in the best texts) and Luke 5:38, of wineskins. Cf. kainotes, “newness” (below).

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine pp. 337, 338

2. neos (νέος, 3501) signifies “new” in respect of time, that which is recent; it is used of the young, and so translated, especially the comparative degree “younger”; accordingly what is neos may be a reproduction of the old in quality or character. Neos and kainos are sometimes used of the same thing, but there is a difference, as already indicated. Thus the “new man” in Eph. 2:15 (kainos) is “new” in differing in character; so in 4:24 (see No. 1); but the “new man” in Col. 3:10 (neos) stresses the fact of the believer’s “new” experience, recently begun, and still proceeding. “The old man in him ... dates as far back as Adam; a new man has been born, who therefore is fitly so called” [i.e., neos], Trench, Syn. Sec.lx. The “New” Covenant in Heb. 12:24 is “new” (neos) compared with the Mosaic, nearly fifteen hundred years before; it is “new” (kainos) compared with the Mosaic, which is old in character, ineffective, 8:8, 13; 9:15.

The “new” wine of Matt. 9:17; Mark 2:22; Luke 5:37-39, is neos, as being of recent production; the “new” wine of the kingdom, Matt. 26:29; Mark 14:25, is kainos, since it will be of a different character from that of this world. The rendering “new” (neos) is elsewhere used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 5:7, “a new lump.” See YOUNG, YOUNGER.

3. prosphatos (στερεόω, 4732), originally signifying “freshly slain,” acquired the general sense of “new,” as applied to flowers, oil, misfortune, etc. It is used in Heb. 10:20 of the “living way” which Christ “dedicated for us ... through the veil ... His flesh” (which stands for His expiatory death by the offering of His body, v. 10).¶ In the Sept., Num. 6:3; Deut. 32:17; Ps. 81:9; Eccl. 1:9.¶ Cf. the adverb prosphatos, “lately, recently,” Acts 18:2.¶

Note: In Matt. 9:16 and Mark 2:21, KJV, agnaphos is translated “new” (RV, “undressed”). Moulton and Milligan give an instance in the papyri of its use in respect of a “new white shirt. See UNDRESSED.¶

For NEWBORN, 1 Pet. 2:2, see BEGET, C, No. 2

NEWNESS

kainotes (καινότης, 2538), akin to kainos, is used in the phrases (a) “newness of life,” Rom. 6:4, i.e., life of a new quality (see NEW, No. 1); the believer, being a new creation (2 Cor. 5:17), is to behave himself consistently with this in contrast to his former manner of life; (b) “newness of the spirit,” RV, Rom. 7:6, said of the believer’s manner of serving the Lord. While the phrase stands for the new life of the quickened spirit of the believer, it is impossible to dissociate this (in an objective sense) from the operation of the Holy Spirit, by whose power the service is rendered.¶

NEXT

1. hexes (ἐξῆς, 1836), an adverb (akin to echo, “to have”) denoting “in order, successively, next,” is used adjectivally, qualifying the noun “day” in Luke 9:37; Acts 21:1, RV, “next” (KJV, “following”); 25:17, RV, “next” (KJV, “on the morrow”); in 27:18, with hemera, “day,” understood; in Luke 7:11, in the best mss., with the word chronos,

“time,” understood, “soon afterwards” (marg., “on the next day,” according to some ancient authorities). See AFTER, FOLLOW, Note (3), MORROW.

2. metaxu (μεταξύ, 3342) signifies “between, next,” in Acts 13:42. See BETWEEN, No. 2.

3. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have,” in the middle voice, sometimes signifies “to be next to,” said of towns, in Mark 1:38; of a day, Acts 21:26; in 20:15 (2nd part), hemera, “day,” is unexpressed. See HAVE.

4. erchomai (έρχομαι, 2064), “to come,” is used in the present participle in Acts 13:44, “(the) next (sabbath).” See COME.

Note: In Acts 7:26, KJV, epeimi, “to come on or after,” used with hemera, “day,” is translated “next” (RV, “following”); so with hemera, understood, Acts 16:11; 20:15 (1st part); in 21:18, RV and KJV, “following.”

NEXT DAY

Notes: (1) For aurion, “tomorrow,” translated “next day” in Acts 4:3, and epaurion, “on the morrow,” Matt. 27:62; John 1:29, 35; 12:12; Acts 14:20; 25:6, see MORROW. (2) For echo, Acts 20:15, see NEXT, No. 3. (3) For epeimi, without the noun hemera, “day,” see NEXT (end of Note). (4) In Acts 20:15 (mid. of verse) heteros, “other,” signifies “next,” with hemera, understood. (5) In Acts 28:13 (end of v.) the adjective deuteraios, second, is used in the masculine plural adverbially, signifying “the second (day),” RV, KJV, “the next (day).”

NIGH

A. Adverbs.

1. engus (ἐγγύς, 1451), “nigh” or “near,” is translated in both ways in Matt. 24:32-33 and Mark 13:28-29, KJV (RV, “nigh” in both); in Acts 1:12, with echon, present participle neuter of echo, “to have,” RV, “nigh unto ... off” (KJV, from). See NEAR, No. 1.

2. paraplesion (παράπλησιον, 3897), the neuter of the adjective paraplesios, para, “beside,” plesios, “near, nearly resembling,” is translated “nigh unto,” with reference to death, in Phil. 2:27.¶

B. Verb.

engizo (ἐγγίζω, 1448): see APPROACH.

C. Preposition.

para (παρά, 3844), “beside, alongside of,” is translated “nigh unto” in Matt. 15:29; in Mark 5:21, RV, “by” (KJV, “nigh unto”).

Note: In Mark 5:11, KJV, pros, “towards, on the side of,” is translated “nigh unto (the mountain),” RV, “on (the mountain) side”; the swine were not simply “near” the mountain.

NIGHT (by, in the)

nux (νόξ, 3571) is used (1) literally, (a) of “the alternating natural period to that of the day,” e.g., Matt. 4:2; 12:40; 2 Tim. 1:3; Rev. 4:8; (b) of “the period of the absence of light,” the time in which something takes place, e.g., Matt. 2:14 (27:64), in some mss.); Luke 2:8; John 3:2 (7:50, in some mss.); Acts 5:19; 9:25; (c) of “point of time,” e.g., Matt. 14:27 (in some mss.), 30; Luke 12:20; Acts 27:23; (d) of “duration of time,” e.g., Luke 2:37; 5:5; Acts 20:31; 26:7 (note the difference in the phrase in Mark 4:27); (II) metaphorically, (a) of “the period of man’s alienation from God,” Rom. 13:12; 1 Thess. 5:5, lit., “not of night,” where “of” means ‘belonging to;’ cf. “of the Way,” Acts 9:2; “of shrinking back” and “of faith,” Heb. 10:39, marg.; (b) of “death,” as the time when work ceases, John 9:4.

NIGHT AND A DAY (A)

nuchthemeros (νυχθήμερον, 3574), an adjective denoting “lasting a night and a day” (from nux, “night,” and hemera, “a day”), is used in 2 Cor. 11:25, in the neuter gender, as a noun, the object of the verb poieo, to do, lit., ‘I have done a night-and-a-day.’¶

NINE

ennea (ἐννέα, 1767) is found in Luke 17:17, and in connection with “ninety” (see below).¶

NINETY

enenekonta, or ennen (ἐννέα, 1767d) is found in Matt. 18:12-13; Luke 15:4, 7.¶

NINTH

enatos, or enn (ἐννατος, 1766) is found in reference (a) to “the ninth hour” (3 o’clock, p.m.) in Matt. 20:5; 27:45-46; Mark 15:33-34; Luke 23:44; Acts 3:1; 10:3, 30; (b) to “the topaz” as the “ninth” foundation of the city wall in the symbolic vision in Rev. 21 (v. 20).¶

NO LONGER, NO MORE

1. ouketi (οὐκέτι, 3765), a negative adverb of time, signifies “no longer, no more” (ou, “not,” k, euphonic, eti “longer”), denying absolutely and directly, e.g., Matt. 19:6; John 4:42, “now ... not”; 6:66; Acts 20:25, 38; 2 Cor. 1:23, KJV, “not as yet”; Eph. 2:19; with another negative, to strengthen the negation, e.g., Matt. 22:46; Mark 14:25; 15:5, RV, “no more (anything),” KJV, “yet ... no (thing);” Acts 8:39; Rev. 18:11, 14.

2. meketi (μηκέτι, 3371), with the same meaning as No. 1, but generally expressing a prohibition, e.g., Matt. 21:19; John 5:14; Rom. 14:13; Eph. 4:28; 1 Tim. 5:23; 1 Pet. 4:2; indicating some condition expressed or implied e.g., 1 Thess. 3:5; or nonexistence, when the existence might have been possible under certain conditions, e.g., Mark 1:45; 2:2, RV, “no longer” (KJV, “no”). See HENCEFORTH.

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

Notes: (1) The double negative ou me, “by no means, in no wise,” followed by eti, “longer, still, yet,” is rendered “no more” in Heb. 8:12; 10:17; Rev. 3:12. (2) In John 15:4, KJV, houtos, “so,” followed by oude, “neither,” is translated “no more” (RV, “so neither”).

NO MAN, NO ONE, NEITHER ANY MAN

Note: Oudeis and medeis, “no one, no man,” are related to one another in much the same way as indicated above under ouketi and meketi. Instances of oudeis are Matt. 6:24; 9:16; 24:36 (RV, “no one”); John 1:18; 3:2, 13, 32; 14:6 and 16:22 (RV, “no one”); 2 Cor. 7:2 (thrice); Heb. 12:14; 1 John 4:12; Rev. 2:17, RV, “no one”; so 5:3-4; 19:12; in 3:7-8 and 15:8 (RV, “none”); in 7:9 and 14:3, “no man.” In all these cases “man” stands for “person.” The spelling outheis occurs occasionally in the mss.; Westcott and Hort adopt it in 2 Cor. 11:8, in the genitive case outhenos.

Instances of medeis are Matt. 8:4 (almost all those in the Synoptists are cases of prohibition or admonition); Acts 9:7; Rom. 12:17; 1 Cor. 3:18, 21; Gal. 6:17; Eph. 5:6; Col. 2:18; 1 Thess. 3:3; 1 Tim. 4:12; Rev. 3:11, RV, “no one.”

Notes: (1) In some mss. the negative me and the indefinite pronoun tis, “some one, anyone,” appear as one word, metis (always separated in the best mss.), e.g., Matt. 8:28, “no man”; so in 1 Cor. 16:11; 2 Cor. 11:16; 2 Thess. 2:3. The words are separated also in Matt. 24:4; 2 Cor. 8:20 (RV, “any man,” after “avoiding”); Rev. 13:17. These instances represent either impossibility or prohibition (see under NO LONGER, No. 2); contrast ouch (i.e., ou) ... tis in Heb. 5:4, “no man (taketh),” where a direct negative statement is made. (2) In 2 Cor. 11:10 the negative ou, “not,” is translated “no man” (KJV marg. “not”); in 1 Cor. 4:6, e.g., the negative me is translated “no one”; in Rom. 14:13, the negative me, used in an admonition, is translated “no man.”

NO WISE (in), ANYWISE (in)

1. ou me, a double negative, strongly expressing a negation, is translated “in no wise” in Matt. 5:18, 20, RV (KJV, “in no case”); 10:42; Luke 18:17; John 6:37; Acts 13:41; Rev. 21:27; in Matt. 13:14 (twice, RV; KJV, “not”); so in Mark 9:1; Luke 9:27; John 4:48; Acts 28:26 (twice); 1 Thess. 4:15; in Luke 10:19, RV “(nothing) ... in any wise” (KJV, “by any means”).

Note: In 2 Thess. 2:3, RV, “(no man) ... in any wise” (KJV, “by any means”), the double negative is me □ medena.

2. oudamos (οὐδαμῶς, 3760), akin to the adjective oudamos, “not even one” (not in the NT), denotes “by no means, in no wise,” Matt. 2:6.¶

3. ou pantos lit., “not altogether,” i.e., “wholly not” (from pas, “all”), is rendered “in no wise” in Rom. 3:9.

Note: In Luke 13:11 the phrase eis to panteles, lit., “unto the complete end” (pas, “all,” telos, “an end”), i.e., “completely, utterly,” preceded by the negative me, is translated “in no wise” (“who was utterly unable to lift herself up”). Cf. Heb. 7:25, where the same phrase is used without a negative, signifying “to the uttermost.”

For ON THIS WISE see THUS (b)

NOBLE

1. eugenes (εὐγένης, 2104), an adjective, lit., “well born” (eu, “well,” and genos, “a family, race”), (a) signifies “noble,” 1 Cor. 1:26; (b) is used with anthropos, “a man,” i.e., “a nobleman,” in Luke 19:12.¶ In the Sept., Job 1:3.¶

2. eugenesteros (εὐγενής, 2104*), the comparative degree of No. 1, occurs in Acts 17:11, “more noble,” i.e., “more noble-minded.”¶

3. kratistos (κράτιστος, 2903) is translated “most noble” in the KJV of Acts 24:3 and 26:25 (RV, most excellent), See EXCELLENT.

NOBLEMAN

basilikos (βασιλικός, 937), an adjective, “royal, belonging to a king” (basileus), is used of the command, “thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself,” “the royal law,” Jas. 2:8; this may mean a law which covers or governs other laws and therefore has a specially regal character (as Hort suggests), or because it is made by a King (a meaning which Deissmann assigns) with whom there is no respect of persons; it is used with the pronoun tis, “a certain one,” in John 4:46, 49, of a courtier, one in the service of a king, “a nobleman” (some mss. have the noun basiliskos, “a petty king,” in these two verses). It is used of a country in Acts 12:20, “the king’s (country),” and of royal apparel in v. 21. See KING, ROYAL.¶

Note: For eugenes in Luke 19:12, see NOBLE, No. 1.

NOISE

A. Adverb.

rhoizedon (ροιζιζδόν, 4500), from rhoizos, “the whistling of an arrow,” signifies “with rushing sound,” as of roaring flames, and is used in 2 Pet. 3:10, of the future passing away of the heavens.¶

B. Verbs.

1. akouo (ἀκούω, 191), “to hear,” is translated “it was noised” in Mark 2:1 (passive voice), of the rapid spread of the information that Christ was “in the house” in Capernaum. See HEAR.

2. dialaleo (διαλαλέω, 1255), lit., “to speak through,” is rendered “were noised abroad” in Luke 1:65. See COMMUNE.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 6:1, KJV, phone, “a voice” or “sound,” is translated “noise” (RV, “voice”) it is used with ginomai in Acts 2:6, KJV, “(this) was noised abroad,” RV, “(this) sound was heard.” (2) In Matt. 9:23, KJV, thorubeo, “to make a tumult or uproar,” in the middle voice as in Mark 5:39 and Acts 20:10, is translated “making a noise” (RV, “making a tumult”). See ADO, TROUBLE, TUMULT, UPROAR.

NOISOME

kakos (κακός, 2556), “evil,” is translated “noisome” in Rev. 16:2. See BAD.

For NONE see NO MAN

NOON

mesembria (μεσημβρία, 3314), lit., “middleday” (mesos, “middle,” and hemera, “a day”), signifies (a) “noon,” Acts 22:6; (b) “the south,” Acts 8:26.¶

borras (βορρᾶς, 1005), primarily Boreas, the North Wind, came to denote the “north” (cf. “Borealis”), Luke 13:29; Rev. 21:13.¶

NORTH EAST, NORTH WEST

choros (χώρος, 5566), Lat., corus, the Latin name for “the north-west wind,” hence, “the north-west,” occurs in Acts 27:12, KJV, RV, “(north-east and) south-east,” as the N.W. wind blows towards the S.E.¶

Note: In the same v., lips, “the south-west (lit., ‘Libyan’) wind,” hence, “the south-west” (so KJV), is rendered “north-east” in RV, as the S.W. wind blows towards the N.E. The difficulty is that Lutro (commonly identified with Phoenix) faces E., not W. But there is a harbor opposite Lutro which does look S.W. and N.W., bearing the name Phineka (RV marg. renders the whole phrase literally). This seems the best solution.

For NOT see †, p. 1

NOTABLE, OF NOTE

1. gnostos (γνωστός, 1110), an adjective, signifying “known” (from ginosko, “to know”), is used (a) as an adjective, most usually translated “known,” whether of facts, e.g., Acts 1:19; 2:14; 4:10; or persons, John 18:15-16; it denotes “notable” in Acts 4:16, of a miracle; (b) as a noun, “acquaintance,” Luke 2:44 and 23:49. See ACQUAINTANCE, KNOWN.

2. episemos (ἐπίσημος, 1978), primarily meant “bearing a mark,” e.g., of money “stamped, coined,” (from epi, “upon,” and sema, “a mark, a sign”; cf. semaino, “to give a sign, signify, indicate,” and semeioo, “to note”; see below); it is used in the NT, metaphorically, (a) in a good sense, Rom. 16:7, “of note, illustrious,” said of Andronicus and Junias; (b) in a bad sense, Matt. 27:16, “notable,” of the prisoner Barabbas.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 30:42; Esth. 5:4; 8:13, toward the end of the verse, “a distinct (day).”¶

3. epiphanes (ἐπιφανής, 2016), “illustrious, renowned, notable” (akin to epiphaino, “to show forth, appear”; Eng., “epiphany”), is translated “notable” in Acts 2:20, of the great Day of the Lord. The appropriateness of this word (compared with Nos. 1 and 2) to that future occasion is obvious.¶

NOTE (Verb)

semeioo (σημειόω, 4593), from semeion, “a sign, token,” signifies “to mark, to note,” in the middle voice, “to note for oneself,” and is so used in 2 Thess. 3:14, in an injunction to take cautionary note of one who refuses obedience to the apostle’s word by the Epistle.¶ In the Sept. Ps. 5:6.¶

NOTHING

1. ouden (οὐδείς, 3762), the neuter of oudeis, “no one,” occurs, e.g., in Matt. 5:13; 10:26; 23:16; adverbially, e.g., in Matt. 27:24; 2 Cor. 12:11 (1st part), “in nothing”; 1 Tim. 4:4; in the dative case, after en, “in,” Phil. 1:20. Westcott and Hort adopt the spelling outhen in Luke 22:35; 23:14; Acts 15:9; 19:27; 26:26; 1 Cor. 13:2.

2. meden (μηδείς, 3367), the neuter of medeis, “no one,” is related to No. 1, in the same way as the masculine genders are; so with the negatives ou and me, “not,” in all their usage and connections (see under NO MAN). Thus it is found, not in direct negative statements, as with No. 1, but in warnings, prohibitions, etc., e.g., Matt. 27:19; Acts 19:36; in expressions conveying certain impossibilities, e.g., Acts 4:21; comparisons, e.g., 2 Cor. 6:10; intimating a supposition to the contrary, 1 Tim. 6:4; adverbially, e.g., 2 Cor. 11:5, “not a whit.” Westcott and Hort adopt the spelling methen in Acts 27:33.

3. ou (οὐ, 3756), “not,” is translated “nothing” in Luke 8:17; 11:6; 1 Cor. 9:16; 2 Cor. 8:15 (in each case, an absolute and direct negative).

4. me (μή, 3361), “not,” is translated “nothing” in John 6:39 in a clause expressing purpose; in the KJV of Luke 7:42 (RV, “not”), in a temporal clause.

5. ou ... ti, followed by the subjunctive mood, “(have) nothing (to eat),” lit., “(they have) not what (they should eat),” in Matt. 15:32 (in some mss. in Mark 6:36); Mark 8:2; the phrase conveys more stress than the simple negative (No. 3).

6. me ... ti, followed by the subjunctive mood, “(they had) nothing (to eat),” RV, “(having) nothing (to eat),” KJV, lit., “not (having) what (they should eat),” in Mark 8:1; the negative is me here because it is attached to a participle, “having”; whereas in No. 5 the negative ou is attached to the indicative mood, “they have.”

7. me ti, lit., “not anything,” not used in simple, direct negations (see under NO MAN), occurs in John 6:12 in a clause of purpose; in 1 Cor. 4:5, in a prohibition.

8. oude ti, “not even anything,” is found in 1 Tim. 6:7 (2nd part); it is a more forceful expression than the simple ouden in the 1st part of the verse, as if to say, “it is a fact that we brought nothing into the world, and most certainly we can carry out not even the slightest thing, whatever we may have possessed.”

Notes: (1) For “nothing” in Luke 1:37, KJV see WORD, No. 2 (RV). (2) In John 11:49 the double negative ouk (“not”) ... ouden (“nothing”) is translated “nothing at all.” (3) In Acts 11:8 pan, “everything,” with oudepote, “not even ever,” is rendered “nothing ... ever,” RV, KJV, “nothing ... at any time.” (4) In 1 Cor. 1:19, KJV, atheteo, “to set aside, make void, reject,” is translated “I will bring to nothing” (RV, “will I reject”).

For NOTICE BEFORE, 2 Cor. 9:5, KJV, see AFOREPROMISED

NOTWITHSTANDING

Note: This is the KJV rendering of (1) alla, “but,” in Rev. 2:20 (RV, “but”), (2) plen, “howbeit, yet, except that,” in Luke 10:11, 20, and Phil. 1:18 (RV, “only that”); in 4:14, KJV, “notwithstanding” (RV, “howbeit”).

NOUGHT (for, bring to, come to, set at)

A. Pronoun.

ouden (οὐδείς, 3762), “nothing” (the neuter of oudeis, no one), is translated “nought” in Acts 5:36. See NOTHING.

B. Adverb.

dorean (δωρεάν, 1432), “freely, as a gift,” is translated “for nought” in Gal. 2:21, RV (KJV, “in vain”); in 2 Thess. 3:8, in a denial by the apostle that he lived on the hospitality of others at Thessalonica. See FREELY.

C. Verbs.

1. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673) is used in 1 Cor. 1:28, “(that) He might bring to nought”; 1 Cor. 2:6 (passive voice in the original); 1 Cor. 6:13, RV, “will bring to nought” (KJV “will destroy”); so 2 Thess. 2:8 and Heb. 2:14. See ABOLISH.

2. exoutheneo (ἐξουθενέω, 1848), “to set at nought, treat with utter contempt, despise,” is translated “set at nought” in Luke 18:9, RV (KJV, “despised”); in 23:11, “set (Him) at nought”; “was set at nought” in Acts 4:11; in Rom. 14:3, RV, “set at nought” (KJV, “despise”); v. 10, “set at nought.” See ACCOUNT, DESPISE.

3. exoudenoo or exoudenoo (ἐξουθενόω, 1847) has the same meaning as No. 2, and is virtually the same word (outhen being another form of ouden, “nothing”), i.e., “to treat as nothing” (ex, intensive), and is translated “be set at nought” in Mark 9:12.¶

4. ekpipto (ἐκπίπτω, 1601), “to fall out,” is used in Rom. 9:6 in the sense of falling from its place, failing, of the word of God, RV, “hath come to nought” (KJV, “hath taken none effect”). See FALL.

5. atheteo (ἀθετέω, 114), “to set aside, reject,” is translated “set at nought” in Heb. 10:28, RV (KJV, “despised”); so Jude 8. See NOTHING, Note (4).

Notes: (1) In Acts 5:38, KJV, kataluo, lit., “to loosen down,” hence, “to overthrow,” is translated “it will come to nought” (RV, “it will be overthrown”). See DESTROY. (2) In Rev. 18:17, KJV, eremoo, “to make desolate,” is translated “is come to nought” (RV, “is made desolate”). See DESOLATE. (3) In Acts 19:27, KJV, the accusative case of apelegmos, “confutation, disrepute,” preceded by the verb erchomai, “to come,” and eis, “unto” or “into,” is translated “be set at nought” (RV, “come into disrepute”). See DISREPUTE.¶

NOURISH, NOURISHMENT

1. trephe (τρέφω, 5142), “to rear, feed, nourish,” is translated by the verb “to nourish” in Jas. 5:5 (of luxurious living); Rev. 12:14 (of God’s care for Israel against its enemies); so v. 6, RV (KJV, feed); in Acts 12:20, RV, “was fed” (KJV, “was nourished”). See FEED.

2. anatrepho (ἀνατρέφω, 397), “to nurse, bring up” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), is translated “nourished” in Acts 7:20 (KJV, “nourished up”); in 21, “nourished,” KJV and RV. See BRING.

3. ektrephe (ἐκτρέφω, 1625), ek, “from, out of,” and No. 1, primarily used of children, “to nurture, rear,” is translated “nurture” of the care of one’s own flesh, Eph. 5:29, and in Eph. 6:4, RV (KJV, “bring ... up”). See BRING.¶

4. entrepho (ἐντρέφω, 1789), “to train up, nurture,” is used metaphorically, in the passive voice, in 1 Tim. 4:6, of being “nourished” in the faith.¶

For NOURISHMENT MINISTERED, Col. 2:19, see SUPPLY

NOVICE

neophutos (νεόφυτος, 3504), an adjective, lit., “newly-planted” (from neos, “new,” and phuo, “to bring forth, produce”), denotes “a new convert, neophyte, novice,” 1 Tim. 3:6, of one who by inexperience is unfitted to act as a bishop or overseer in a church.¶ In the Sept., Job 14:9; Ps. 128:3; 144:12; Isa. 5:7.¶

NOW

A. Adverbs.

1. nun (νῦν, 3568) is used (a) of time, the immediate present, whether in contrast to the past, e.g., John 4:18; Acts 7:52, or to the future, e.g., John 12:27; Rom. 11:31; sometimes with the article, singular or plural, e.g., Acts 4:29; 5:38; (b) of logical sequence, often partaking also of the character of (a), “now therefore, now however,” as it is, e.g., Luke 11:39; John 8:40; 9:41; 15:22, 24; 1 Cor. 5:11, RV marg., “as it is.”

Note: Under (a) comes the phrase in 2 Cor. 8:14, with kairos, “a time,” all governed by en, “in,” or “at,” KJV, “now at this time” (RV, “at this present time”).

2. nuni (νυνί, 3570), a strengthened form of No. 1, is used (a) of time, e.g., Acts 22:1 (in the best mss.); 24:13; Rom. 6:22; 15:23, 25; (b) with logical import, e.g., Rom. 7:17; 1 Cor. 13:13, which some regard as temporal (a); but if this is the significance, “the clause” means, ‘but faith, hope, love, are our abiding possession now in this present life.’ The objection to this rendering is that the whole course of thought has been to contrast the things which last only for the present time with the things which survive. And the main contrast so far has been between love and the special [then] present activity of prophecy, tongues, knowledge. There is something of disappointment, and even of bathos, in putting as a climax to these contrasts the statement that in this present state faith, hope, love abide; that is no more than can be said of [the then existing] prophecies, tongues and knowledge. If there is to be a true climax the ‘abiding’ must cover the future as well as the present state. And that involves as a consequence that nuni must be taken in its logical meaning, i.e., ‘as things are,’ ‘taking all into account’ ... This logical sense of nuni ... is enforced by the dominant note of the whole passage” (R. St. John Parry, in the Camb. Greek Test.).

It is certain that love will continue eternally; and hope will not cease at the Parousia of Christ, for hope will ever look forward to the accomplishment of God’s eternal purposes, a hope characterized by absolute assurance; and where hope is in exercise faith is its concomitant. Faith will not be lost in sight.

3. ede (ἤδη, 2235) denotes “already, now already,” “the subjective present, with a suggested reference to some other time, or to some expectation” (Thayer), e.g., Matt. 3:10; 14:24; Luke 11:7; John 6:17; Rom. 1:10; 4:19; 13:11; Phil. 4:10.

4. arti (ἄρτι, 737), expressing “coincidence,” and denoting “strictly present time,” signifies “just now, this moment,” in contrast (a) to the past, e.g., Matt. 11:12; John 2:10; 9:19, 25; 13:33; Gal. 1:9-10; (b) to the future, e.g., John 13:37; 16:12, 31; 1 Cor. 13:12 (cf. No. 2 in v. 13); 2 Thess. 2:7; 1 Pet. 1:6, 8; (c) sometimes without necessary reference to either, e.g., Matt. 3:15; 9:18; 26:53; Gal. 4:20; Rev. 12:10.

5. aparti (ἀπάρτι, 534), sometimes written separately, ap>arti, i.e., apo, “from,” and No. 4, denotes “from now, henceforth,” John 13:19; 14:7; Rev. 14:13. See HENCEFORTH.¶

6. loipon (λοιπόν, 3063), the neuter of loipos, “the rest, from now,” is used adverbially with the article and translated “now” in Mark 14:41.

B. Conjunctions and Particles.

1. oun (οὖν, 3767), “therefore, so then,” is sometimes used in continuing a narrative, e.g. Acts 1:18; 1 Cor. 9:25; or resuming it after a digression, usually rendered “therefore,” e.g., Acts 11:19; 25:1, RV (KJV, now). In the following it is absent from the best mss., Mark 12:20; Luke 10:36; John 16:19; 18:24; 19:29.

Note: In 2 Cor. 5:20 oun is simply “therefore,” as in RV (KJV, “now then”).

2. de (δέ, 1161), “but, and, now,” often implying an antithesis, is rendered “now” in John 19:23; 1 Cor. 10:11; 15:50; Gal. 1:20; Eph. 4:9; in Acts 27:9 (1st part), RV, “and” (KJV, “now”); in Gal. 4:1, RV, “but” (KJV “now”).

3. de (δή, 1211), a consecutive particle, giving stress to the word or words to which it is attached, sometimes with hardly any exact Eng. equivalent, is translated “now” in Luke 2:15, in the words of the shepherds; in Acts 15:36, RV (KJV, “and”). Some mss. have it in 2 Cor. 12:1; see RV marg.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 4:7, KJV, B, No. 2, followed by kai, and, is translated “now” (RV, “but”). (2) In Rom. 14:15 and Philem. 16, KJV, ouketi, “no longer,” is translated “now ... not” and “not now” (RV, “no longer”); cf. John 4:42 and 21:6, “now ... not.” (3) The particle ara, “then,” expressing a more informal inference than oun (B, No. 1 above), is often in Paul’s epistles coupled with oun, the phrase meaning “so then,” as KJV and RV in Rom. 7:3, 25; 9:16; 14:12, in RV only (KJV, “therefore”), Rom. 5:18; 8:12; 9:18; 14:19; Gal. 6:10; 1 Thess. 5:6; 2 Thess. 2:15. In Eph. 2:19 the KJV renders it “now therefore.” (4) In 1 Tim. 1:4, the RV “so do I now” (KJV, “so do”) is added to complete the sentence. (5) In Heb. 9:9, RV, the perfect participle of enistemi, “to be present,” is translated “(the time) now present” (KJV, “then present,” which misses the meaning). See COME, (AT) HAND, PRESENT.

NUMBER

A. Nouns.

1. arithmos (ἀριθμός, 706), number, “a number” (Eng., “arithmetic,” etc.), occurs in Luke 22:3; John 6:10; Rom. 9:27; elsewhere five times in Acts, ten times in the Apocalypse.

2. ochlos (ὄχλος, 3793), “a multitude,” is translated “number” in Luke 6:17, RV (KJV, “multitude”); in Mark 10:46 and Acts 1:15 the renderings are reversed. See COMMON, COMPANY, CROWD MULTITUDE, PEOPLE.

B. Verbs.

1. arithmeo (ἀριθμέω, 705), akin to A, is found in Matt. 10:30; Luke 12:7; Rev. 7:9.¶

2. katarithmeo (καταριθμέω, 2674), “to number” or “count among” (kata, and No. 1), is used in Acts 1:17.¶

3. enkrino (ἐγκρίνω, 1469), “to reckon among” (en, “in,” krino, “to judge or reckon”), is translated “to number ... (ourselves) with” in 2 Cor. 10:12 (RV marg., “to judge ourselves among or ... with”), of the apostle’s dissociation of himself and his fellow missionaries from those who commended themselves.

4. sunkatapsephizo (συγκαταψηφίζω, 4785), “to vote or reckon (one) a place among” (sun, “with” or “among,” kata, “down,” and psephizo, “to count or vote,” originally with pebbles, psephos, “a pebble”), is used of the “numbering” of Matthias with the eleven apostles, Acts 1:26.¶

Notes: (1) Some mss. have verse Mk 15:28 in Mark 15 (KJV), where logizomai, “to reckon,” is translated “He was numbered.” (2) For katalego 1 Tim. 5:9 (KJV, “let ... be taken into the number”), see TAKE, Note (18). (3) In Mark 5:13 see the italicized words in RV. (4) In Heb. 7:23, RV, the adjective pleion, “more, many,” is translated “many in number” (KJV, “many”); in Acts 28:23, RV, “a great number” (KJV, “many”).

NURSE

trophos (τροφός, 5162), translated “nurse” in 1 Thess. 2:7, there denotes a “nursing” mother, as is clear from the statement “cherisheth her own children”; this is also confirmed by the word epios, “gentle” (in the same verse), which was commonly used of the kindness of parents towards children. Cf. trepho, “to bring up” (see NOURISH).

For NURTURE (Eph. 6:4) see CHASTENING

O

OATH

1. horkos (ὄρκος, 3727) is primarily equivalent to herkos, “a fence, an enclosure, that which restrains a person”; hence, “an oath.” The Lord’s command in Matt. 5:33 was a condemnation of the minute and arbitrary restrictions imposed by the scribes and Pharisees in the matter of adjurations, by which God's Name was profaned. The injunction is repeated in Jas. 5:12. The language of the apostle Paul, e.g., in Gal. 1:20 and 1 Thess. 5:27 was not inconsistent with Christ's prohibition, read in the light of its context. Contrast the "oaths" mentioned in Matt. 14:7, 9; 26:72; Mark 6:26.

Heb. 6:16 refers to the confirmation of a compact among men, guaranteeing the discharge of liabilities; in their disputes "the oath is final for confirmation." This is referred to in order to illustrate the greater subject of God's "oath" to Abraham, confirming His promise; cf. Luke 1:73; Acts 2:30.¶ Cf. the verbs horkizo, and exorkizo, under ADJURE.

2. horkomosis (ὀρκωμοσία, 3728) denotes "an affirmation on oath" (from No. 1 and omnumi, "to swear"). This is used in Heb. 7:20-21 (twice), 28, of the establishment of the Priesthood of Christ, the Son of God, appointed a Priest after the order of Melchizedek, and "perfected for evermore."¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 17:18, 19.¶

Note: For anathematizo in Acts 23:21, KJV, "have bound (themselves) with an oath," see CURSE.

OBEDIENCE, OBEDIENT, OBEY

A. Nouns.

1. hupakoe (ὕπακοή, 5218), "obedience" (hupo, "under," akouo, "to hear"), is used (a) in general, Rom. 6:16 (1st part), RV, "(unto) obedience," KJV, "(to) obey"; here "obedience" is not personified, as in the next part of the verse, "servants ... of obedience" [see (c)], but is simply shown to be the effect of the presentation mentioned; (b) of the fulfillment of apostolic counsels, 2 Cor. 7:15; 10:6; Philem. 21; (c) of the fulfillment of God's claims or commands, Rom. 1:5 and 16:26, "obedience of faith," which grammatically might be objective, to the faith (marg.), or subjective, as in the text. Since faith is one of the main subjects of the Epistle, and is the initial act of obedience in the new life, as well as an essential characteristic thereof, the text rendering is to be preferred; Rom. 6:16 (2nd part); 15:18, RV "(for) the obedience," KJV, "(to make) obedient"; 16:19; 1 Pet. 1:2, 14, RV, "(children of) obedience," i.e., characterized by "obedience," KJV, "obedient (children)"; v. 22, RV, "obedience (to the truth)," KJV, "obeying (the truth)"; (d) of "obedience" to Christ (objective), 2 Cor. 10:5; (e) of Christ's "obedience," Rom. 5:19 (referring to His death; cf. Phil. 2:8); Heb. 5:8, which refers to His delighted experience in constant "obedience" to the Father's will (not to be understood in the sense that He learned to obey).¶

2. hupotage (ὑποταγή, 5292), subjection (hupo, "under," tasso, "to order"), is translated "obedience" in 2 Cor. 9:13, RV (KJV, "subjection"). See SUBJECTION.

B. Verbs.

1. hupakouo (ὕπακούω, 5219), "to listen, attend" (as in Acts 12:13), and so, "to submit, to obey," is used of "obedience" (a) to God, Heb. 5:9; 11:8; (b) to Christ, by natural elements, Matt. 8:27; Mark 1:27; 4:41; Luke 8:25; (c) to disciples of Christ, Luke

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

17:6; (d) to the faith, Acts 6:7; the gospel, Rom. 10:16; 2 Thess. 1:8; Christian doctrine, Rom. 6:17 (as to a form or mold of teaching); (e) to apostolic injunctions, Phil. 2:12; 2 Thess. 3:14; (f) to Abraham by Sarah, 1 Pet. 3:6; (g) to parents by children, Eph. 6:1; Col. 3:20; (h) to masters by servants, Eph. 6:5; Col. 3:22; (i) to sin, Rom. 6:12; (j) in general, Rom. 6:16.¶

2. peitho (πείθω, 3982), “to persuade, to win over,” in the passive and middle voices, “to be persuaded, to listen to, to obey,” is so used with this meaning, in the middle voice, e.g., in Acts 5:36-37 (in v. 40, passive voice, “they agreed”); Rom. 2:8; Gal. 5:7; Heb. 13:17; Jas. 3:3. The “obedience” suggested is not by submission to authority, but resulting from persuasion.

“Peitho and pisteuo, ‘to trust,’ are closely related etymologically; the difference in meaning is that the former implies the obedience that is produced by the latter, cf. Heb. 3:18-19, where the disobedience of the Israelites is said to be the evidence of their unbelief. Faith is of the heart, invisible to men; obedience is of the conduct and may be observed. When a man obeys God he gives the only possible evidence that in his heart he believes God. Of course it is persuasion of the truth that results in faith (we believe because we are persuaded that the thing is true, a thing does not become true because it is believed), but peitho, in NT suggests an actual and outward result of the inward persuasion and consequent faith.”* See ASSURANCE, B, No. 3.

3. peitharcheo (πειθαρχέω, 3980), “to obey one in authority” (No. 2, and arche, “rule”), is translated “obey” in Acts 5:29, 32; “to be obedient,” Titus 3:1, RV (KJV, “to obey magistrates”); in Acts 27:21, “hearkened.” See HEARKEN.¶

4. apeitheo (ἁπειθέω, 544), “to disobey, be disobedient” (a, negative, and No. 2), is translated “obey not” in Rom. 2:8; 1 Pet. 3:1; 4:17. See DISOBEDIENT.

Note: In 1 Cor. 14:34, KJV, hupotasso, “to be in subjection” (RV), is translated “to be under obedience”; so Titus 2:5, RV, “being in subjection” (KJV, “obedient”); and v. 9, RV (KJV, “to be obedient”). See SUBJECTION.

C. Adjective.

hupokoos (ὑπήκοος, 5255), “obedient” (akin to A, No. 1), “giving ear, subject,” occurs in Acts 7:39, RV, “(would not be) obedient,” KJV, “(would not) obey”; 2 Cor. 2:9; Phil. 2:8, where the RV “even” is useful as making clear that the “obedience” was not to death but to the Father.¶

For the verb OBJECT, Acts 24:19, see ACCUSATION, B, No. 4

For OBJECTS, RV, in Acts 17:23, see WORSHIP

OBSERVATION, OBSERVE

A. Noun.

parateresis (παρατήρησις, 3907), “attentive watching” (akin to paratereo, “to observe”), is used in Luke 17:20, of the manner in which the kingdom of God (i.e., the operation of the spiritual kingdom in the hearts of men) does not come, “in such a manner that it can be watched with the eyes” (Grimm-Thayer), or, as KJV marg., “with outward show.”

---

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 254, 255.

B. Verbs.

1. anatheoreo (ἀναθεωρέω, 333), “to observe carefully, consider well” (ana, “up,” intensive, and theoreo, “to behold”), is used in Acts 17:23, RV, “observed” (of Paul’s notice of the objects of Athenian worship), and Heb. 13:7, “considering.” See BEHOLD.¶

2. tereo (τηρέω, 5083): see KEEP, No. 1.

3. suntereo (συντηρέω, 4933): see KEEP, No. 3.

4. paratereo (παρατηρέω, 3906), “to watch closely, observe narrowly” (para, used intensively, and No. 2), is translated “ye observe” in Gal. 4:10, where the middle voice suggests that their religious observance of days, etc. was not from disinterested motives, but with a view to their own advantage. See WATCH. Cf. phroneo (“to think”), “regardeth” in Rom. 14:6, where the subject is connected with the above, though the motive differs.

5. phulasso (φυλάσσω, 5442): see KEEP, No. 4.

6. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” is translated “to observe” in Acts 16:21. See DO.

OBTAIN, OBTAINING

A. Verbs.

1. tunchano (τυγχάνω, 5177), “to meet with, light upon,” also signifies “to obtain, attain to, reach, get” (with regard to things), translated “to obtain” in Acts 26:22, of “the help that is from God”; 2 Tim. 2:10, of “the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory”; Heb. 8:6, of the ministry obtained by Christ; 11:35, of “a better resurrection.” See CHANCE.

2. epitunchano (ἐπιτυγχάνω, 2013), primarily, “to light upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), denotes “to obtain,” Rom. 11:7 (twice); Heb. 6:15; 11:33; Jas. 4:2.¶

3. lanchano (λαγχάνω, 2975), “to obtain by lot,” is translated “that have obtained” in 2 Pet. 1:1; in Acts 1:17, KJV, “had obtained” (RV, “received”), with kleros, “a lot” or “portion.” See LOTS.

4. ptaomai (κτάομαι, 2932), “to procure for oneself, get, gain, acquire,” is translated “obtained” in Acts 1:18, RV (KJV, “purchased”); 8:20, RV (KJV, “may be purchased”); 22:28. See POSSESS, PROVIDE, PURCHASE.

5. krateo (κρατέω, 2902), “to be strong,” also means “to get possession of, obtain,” e.g., in Acts 27:13, “they had obtained (their purpose).” See HOLD.

6. lambano (λαμβάνω, 2983), “to take, to receive,” is translated by the verb “to obtain” in 1 Cor. 9:25; Phil. 3:12, RV, “(not that) I have (already) obtained” (contrast katantao, “to attain,” v. 11); Moule translates it “not that I have already received,” i.e., the prize; the verb does not signify “to attain”; Heb. 4:16, KJV, “obtain.” See ACCEPT, No. 4.

7. heurisko (εὕρισκω, 2147) denotes “to find”; in the middle voice, “to find for oneself, to procure, get, obtain,” with the suggestion of accomplishing the end which had been in view; so in Heb. 9:12, “having obtained (eternal redemption).”

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 9:24, KJV, katalambano, a strengthened form of No. 6 (kata, used intensively), is translated “obtain” (RV, “attain”). (2) In Heb. 11:2, 4, 39, KJV, martureo, “to bear witness,” and in the passive voice, “to have witness borne to one,” is translated “to obtain” a good report, or “to obtain” witness (RV, “had witness borne”). See WITNESS. (3) For the KJV of Heb. 1:4, “He hath by inheritance obtained” (RV, “He hath inherited”), and of Eph. 1:11, see INHERIT. (4) For the phrase “to obtain mercy,” the passive voice of eleo in Matt. 5:7; Rom. 11:30-31; 1 Cor. 7:25; 2 Cor. 4:1 (RV); 1 Tim. 1:13, 16; 1 Pet. 2:10 (twice), see MERCY.

B. Noun.

peripoiesis (περιποίησις, 4047), lit., “a making around” (peri, “around,” poieo, “to do or make”), denotes (a) “the act of obtaining” anything, as of salvation in its completeness 1 Thess. 5:9; 2 Thess. 2:14; (b) “a thing acquired, an acquisition, possession,” Eph. 1:14, RV, “(God’s own) possession” [some would put this under (a)]; so 1 Pet. 2:9, RV, KJV, “a peculiar (people);” cf. Isa. 43:21; (c) preservation, this may be the meaning in Heb. 10:39, “saving” (RV marg., “gaining”); cf. the corresponding verb in Luke 17:33 (in the best texts), “preserve.”¶ In the Sept. the noun has the meaning (b) in Hag. 2:10 and Mal. 3:17, (c) in 2 Chron. 14:13.¶

OCCASION

aphorme (ἀφορμή, 874), properly “a starting point,” was used to denote “a base of operations in war.” In the NT it occurs as follows: “(a) the Law provided sin with a base of operations for its attack upon the soul, Rom. 7:8, 11; (b) the irreproachable conduct of the Apostle provided his friends with a base of operations against his detractors, 2 Cor. 5:12; (c) by refusing temporal support at Corinth he deprived these detractors of their base of operations against him, 2 Cor. 11:12; (d) Christian freedom is not to provide a base of operations for the flesh, Gal. 5:13; (e) unguarded behavior on the part of young widows (and the same is true of all believers) would provide Satan with a base of operations against the faith, 1 Tim. 5:14.”*¶

The word is found frequently in the papyri with meanings which illustrate those in the NT. In the Sept., Prov. 9:9; Ezek. 5:7.¶

Notes: (1) For the RV renderings “occasion (or ‘occasions’) of stumbling,” “occasion of falling,” see FALLING, B, Note (3), OFFENSE. (2) In 2 Cor. 8:8, KJV, the phrase “by occasion of” translates the preposition dia, “through, by means of” (RV, “through”).

For OCCUPATION, Acts 18:3, KJV, see TRADE

Notes: The phrase “of like occupation” in Acts 19:25 translates the phrase peri (“about”) ta (“the”) toiauta (“such things”), i.e., lit., “(occupied) about such things.”

OCCUPY

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, on p. 269.

peripateo (περιπατέω, 4043), “to walk,” is sometimes used of the state in which one is living, or of that to which a person is given, e.g., Heb. 13:9, “(meats, wherein they that) occupied themselves,” RV (marg., “walked”; KJV, “have been occupied”), i.e., exercising themselves about different kinds of food, regarding some as lawful, others as unlawful (referring especially to matters of the ceremonial details of the law).

Notes: (1) For “occupy,” in the KJV of Luke 19:13, see TRADE. (2) For “occupieth,” in the KJV of 1 Cor. 14:16, see FILL, No. 2.

ODOR

osme (ὀσμή, 3744), “a smell, an odor” (akin to ozo, “to smell”), is translated “odor” in John 12:3; it is used metaphorically in Eph. 5:2, RV, “an odor (of a sweet smell),” KJV, “(a sweet smelling) savor,” of the effects Godward of the sacrifice of Christ; in Phil. 4:18 of the effect of sacrifice, on the part of those in the church at Philippi, who sent material assistance to the apostle in his imprisonment. The word is translated “savor” in 2 Cor. 2:14, 16 (twice).¶

Note: For thumiama, “incense,” translated “odors” in the KJV of Rev. 5:8 (RV, “incense”), see INCENSE. For amomon (quoted in RV marg. in the Latinized form amomum) in Rev. 18:13, see SPICE.

OF

Note: (1) In addition to the rendering of a number of prepositions, “of” translates the genitive case of nouns, with various shades of meaning. Of these the subjective and objective are mentioned here, which need careful distinction. Thus the phrase “the love of God,” e.g., in 1 John 2:5 and 3:16, is subjective, signifying “God’s love”; in 1 John 5:3, it is objective, signifying our love to God. Again, “the witness of God,” e.g., 1 John 5:9, is subjective, signifying the witness which God Himself has given; in Rev. 1:2, 9, and 19:10, e.g., “the testimony of Jesus” is objective, signifying the testimony borne to Him. In the KJV “the faith of” is sometimes ambiguous; with reference to Christ it is objective, i.e., faith in Him, not His own faith, in the following passages in which the RV, “in” gives the correct meaning; Rom. 3:22; Gal. 2:16 (twice), 20, RV, “I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God”; 3:22; Eph. 3:12; Phil. 3:9 (cf. Col. 2:12, “faith in the working of God”). In Eph. 2:20, “the foundation of the apostles and prophets” is subjective, i.e., the foundation laid by the apostles and prophets (“other foundation can no man lay than ... Jesus Christ,” 1 Cor. 3:11). (2) In the KJV of John 16:13, “He shall not speak of Himself,” the preposition is apo, “from,” as in the RV; the Spirit of God often speaks of Himself in Scripture, the Lord’s assurance was that the Holy Spirit would not be the source of His utterances. So with regard to Christ’s utterances, John 7:17, RV, “I speak from (apo) Myself”: and 14:10. (3) In John 6:46; 15:15; 17:7; Acts 17:9, the RV, “from” is to be observed, as rightly translating para (KJV, “of”). (4) The following are instances in which “of” translates ek, or ex, “out of, from,” Matt. 21:25 (RV, “from”); 1 Cor. 1:30; 15:6; 2 Cor. 5:1 (RV, “from”); Jas. 4:1. (5) In the following, peri, “concerning,” is so translated in the RV (for KJV, “of”), e.g., Acts 5:24; 1 Cor. 1:11; 1 John 1:1 (the RV is important); cf. John 16:8. (6) Epi, “over,” is so translated in Matt. 18:13, RV; “concerning” in Acts 4:9.

(7) Huper, “on behalf of,” is so rendered in 2 Cor. 7:4, RV (KJV, “of”); (8) For hupo, “by,” see the RV of Matt. 1:22; 2:16; 11:27; Luke 9:7; Acts 15:4; 1 Cor. 14:24; 2 Cor. 8:19; Phil. 3:12. (9) For other prepositions, etc., see †, p. 1.

OFFENCE (OFFENSE)

A. Nouns.

1. skandalon (σκάνδαλον, 4625) originally was “the name of the part of a trap to which the bait is attached, hence, the trap or snare itself, as in Rom. 11:9, RV, ‘stumblingblock,’ quoted from Psa. 69:22, and in Rev. 2:14, for Balaam’s device was rather a trap for Israel than a stumblingblock to them, and in Matt. 16:23, for in Peter’s words the Lord perceived a snare laid for Him by Satan.

“In NT skandalon is always used metaphorically, and ordinarily of anything that arouses prejudice, or becomes a hindrance to others, or causes them to fall by the way. Sometimes the hindrance is in itself good, and those stumbled by it are the wicked.”*

Thus it is used (a) of Christ in Rom. 9:33, “(a rock) of offense”; so 1 Pet. 2:8; 1 Cor. 1:23 (KJV and RV, “stumblingblock”), and of His cross, Gal. 5:11 (RV, ditto); of the “table” provided by God for Israel, Rom. 11:9 (see above); (b) of that which is evil, e.g., Matt. 13:41, RV, “things that cause stumbling” (KJV, “things that offend”), lit., “all stumblingblocks”; 18:7, RV, “occasions of stumbling” and “occasion”; Luke 17:1 (ditto); Rom. 14:13, RV, “an occasion of falling” (KJV, “an occasion to fall”), said of such a use of Christian liberty as proves a hindrance to another; 16:17, RV, “occasions of stumbling,” said of the teaching of things contrary to sound doctrine; 1 John 2:10, “occasion of stumbling,” of the absence of this in the case of one who loves his brother and thereby abides in the light. Love, then, is the best safeguard against the woes pronounced by the Lord upon those who cause others to stumble. See FALL, B, Note (3).¶ Cf. the Sept. in Hos. 4:17, “Ephraim partaking with idols hath laid stumblingblocks in his own path.”

2. proskomma (πρόσκομμα, 4348), “an obstacle against which one may dash his foot” (akin to proskopto, “to stumble” or “cause to stumble”; pros, “to or against,” kopto, “to strike”), is translated “offense” in Rom. 14:20, in v. 13, “a stumblingblock,” of the spiritual hindrance to another by a selfish use of liberty (cf. No. 1 in the same verse); so in 1 Cor. 8:9. It is used of Christ, in Rom. 9:32-33, RV, “(a stone) of stumbling,” and 1 Pet. 2:8, where the KJV also has this rendering.¶ Cf. the Sept. in Ex. 23:33, “these (the gods of the Canaanites) will be an offense (stumblingblock) unto thee.”

3. proskope (προσκοπή, 4349), like No. 2, and formed from the same combination, occurs in 2 Cor. 6:3, RV, “occasion of stumbling” (KJV, “offense”), something which leads others into error or sin.¶ Cf. the Sept. in Prov. 16:18, “a haughty spirit (becomes) a stumblingblock” (i.e., to oneself).

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

* From Notes on Galations, by Hogg and Vine, p. 262.

Notes: (1) In the KJV of Rom. 4:25; 5:15 (twice), 16-18, 20, paraptoma, “a trespass,” is translated “offense.” See TRESPASS. (2) In 2 Cor. 11:7, KJV, hamartia, a sin, is translated “an offense.” See SIN.

B. Adjective.

aproskopos (ἀπρόσκοπος, 677), akin to A, No. 3, with a, negative, prefixed, is used (a) in the active sense, “not causing to stumble,” in 1 Cor. 10:32, metaphorically of “refraining from doing anything to lead astray” either Jews or Greeks or the church of God (i.e., the local church), RV, “no occasion of stumbling” (KJV, “none offense”); (b) in the passive sense, “blameless, without stumbling,” Acts 24:16, “(a conscience) void of offense;” Phil. 1:10, “void of (KJV, without) offense.” The adjective is found occasionally in the papyri writings.¶

OFFEND

skandalizo (σκανδαλίζω, 4624), from skandalon (OFFENSE, No. 1), signifies “to put a snare or stumblingblock in the way,” always metaphorically in the NT, in the same ways as the noun, which see. It is used 14 times in Matthew, 8 in Mark, twice in Luke, twice in John; elsewhere in 1 Cor. 8:13 (twice) and 2 Cor. 11:29. It is absent in the most authentic mss. in Rom. 14:21. The RV renders it by the verb “to stumble,” or “cause to stumble,” in every place save the following, where it uses the verb “to offend,” Matt. 13:57; 15:12; 26:31, 33; Mark 6:3; 14:27, 29.

Notes: (1) In Jas. 2:10; 3:2 (twice), KJV, ptaio, “to stumble,” is translated “offend;” see FALL, STUMBLE. (2) In Acts 25:8, KJV, hamartano, to sin,” is translated “have I offended;” see SIN.

OFFENDER

opheiletes (ὀφειλέτης, 3781), “a debtor,” is translated “offenders” in Luke 13:4, RV (RV and KJV marg., “debtors;” KJV, “sinners”). See DEBTOR.

Note: In Acts 25:11, KJV, adikeo, “to do wrong,” is translated “be an offender” (RV, “am a wrong-doer”).

OFFER, OFFERING

A. Verbs.

1. prosphero (προσφέρω, 4374), primarily, “to bring to” (pros, “to,” phero, “to bring”), also denotes “to offer,” (a) of the sacrifice of Christ Himself, Heb. 8:3; of Christ in virtue of his High Priesthood (RV, “this high priest”; KJV, “this man”); 9:14, 25 (negative), 28; 10:12; (b) of offerings under, or according to, the Law, e.g., Matt. 8:4; Mark 1:44; Acts 7:42; 21:26; Heb. 5:1, 3; 8:3; 9:7, 9; 10:1-2, 8, 11; (c) of “offerings” previous to the Law, Heb. 11:4, 17 (of Isaac by Abraham); (d) of gifts “offered” to Christ, Matt. 2:11, RV, “offered” (KJV, “presented unto”); (e) of prayers “offered” by Christ, Heb. 5:7; (f) of the vinegar “offered” to Him in mockery by the soldiers at the cross, Luke 23:36; (g) of the slaughter of disciples by persecutors, who think they are “offering” service to God, John 16:2, RV (KJV, “doeth”); (h) of money “offered” by Simon the sorcerer, Acts 8:18. See BRING, A, No. 8, DEAL WITH, No. 2.

2. anaphero (ἀναφέρω, 399), primarily, “to lead” or “carry up” (ana), also denotes “to offer,” (a) of Christ’s sacrifice, Heb. 7:27; (b) of sacrifices under the Law, Heb. 7:27; (c) of such previous to the Law, Jas. 2:21 (of Isaac by Abraham); (d) of praise, Heb. 13:15; (e) of spiritual sacrifices in general, 1 Pet. 2:5. See BEAR, No. 3, BRING, A, No. 2.

3. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), to give, is translated “to offer” in Luke 2:24; in Rev. 8:3, KJV, “offer” (RV, “add;” marg., “give”). See GIVE.

4. parecho (παρέχω, 3930), “to furnish, offer, present, supply,” is used in Luke 6:29, of “offering” the other cheek to be smitten after receiving a similar insult; for the KJV marg., in Acts 17:31, see ASSURANCE, A, No. 1. See BRING, A, No. 21.

5. spendo (σπένδω, 4689), “to pour out as a drink offering, make a libation,” is used figuratively in the passive voice in Phil. 2:17, “offered” (RV marg., “poured out as a drink offering”; KJV marg., “poured forth”). In 2 Tim. 4:6, “I am already being offered,” RV (marg., “poured out as a drink-offering”), the apostle is referring to his approaching death, upon the sacrifice of his ministry.¶ This use of the word is exemplified in the papyri writings.

Notes: (1) In Luke 11:12, KJV epididomi, “to give” (epi, “over,” in the sense of “instead of,” and No. 3), is translated “will he offer” (RV, and KJV marg., “will he give”). (2) In Acts 7:41, KJV, anago, “to lead up” or “bring up,” is rendered “offered” (RV, “brought”). (3) In Acts 15:29; 21:25 and 1 Cor. 8:1, 4, 10; 10:19, KJV, eidolothutos, “sacrificed to idols,” is translated “offered to idols” (thuo denotes “to sacrifice”). See SACRIFICE.

B. Nouns.

1. prosphora (προσφορά, 4376), lit., “a bringing to” (akin to A, No. 1), hence an “offering,” in the NT a sacrificial “offering,” (a) of Christ’s sacrifice, Eph. 5:2; Heb. 10:10 (of His body); 10:14; negatively, of there being no repetition, 10:18; (b) of “offerings” under, or according to, the Law, Acts 21:26; Heb. 10:5, 8; (c) of gifts in kind conveyed to needy Jews, Acts 24:17; (d) of the presentation of believers themselves (saved from among the Gentiles) to God, Rom. 15:16.¶

2. holokautoma (ὁλοκαύτωμα, 3646), “a burnt offering”: see BURNT.

3. anathema (ἀνάθημα, 334) denotes “a gift set up in a temple, a votive offering” (ana, “up,” tithemi, “to place”), Luke 21:5, RV “offerings” (KJV, “gifts”)¶ Cf. anathema (see CURSE).

Notes: (1) In Luke 21:4, KJV, the plural of doron, “a gift,” is translated “offerings” (RV, “gifts”). (2) In Rom. 8:3 and Heb. 13:11, the RV, “as an offering” is added to complete the sacrificial meaning of peri.

OFFICE

A. Nouns.

1. praxis (πραξις, 4234), “a doing, deed” (akin to prasso, “to do or practice”), also denotes “an acting” or “function,” translated “office” in Rom. 12:4. See DEED.

2. hieroteia (ἱερατεία, 2405), or hieratia, denotes “a priests’ office,” Luke 1:9; Heb. 7:5, RV, “priest’s office” (KJV “office of the priesthood”).¶

B. Verb.

hierateuo (ἱερατεύω, 2407), “to officiate as a priest” (akin to A, No. 2), is translated “he executed the priest’s office” in Luke 1:8. The word is frequent in inscriptions.¶

Notes: (1) In Rom. 11:13, KJV, diakonia, “a ministry,” is translated “office” (RV, “ministry”). (2) In Acts 1:20, RV, episkope, “an overseership,” is translated “office” (marg., “overseership”; KJV, “bishopric”). (3) In 1 Tim. 3:1, the word “office,” in the phrase “the office of a bishop,” has nothing to represent it in the original; the RV marg. gives “overseer” for “bishop,” and the phrase lit. is “overseership”; so in vv. 10, 13, where the KJV has “use (and ‘used’) the office of a deacon,” the RV rightly omits “office,” and translates the verb diakoneo, “to serve,” “let them serve as deacons” and “(they that) have served (well) as deacons.”

OFFICER

1. huperetes (ὑπηρέτης, 5257), for the original of which see MINISTER, A, No. 3, is translated “officer,” with the following applications, (a) to a magistrate’s attendant, Matt. 5:25; (b) to officers of the synagogue, or officers or bailiffs of the Sanhedrin, Matt. 26:58; Mark 14:54, 65; John 7:32, 45-46; 18:3, 12, 18, 22; 19:6; Acts 5:22, 26. See MINISTER, SERVANT.

2. praktor (πράκτωρ, 4233), lit., “one who does,” or “accomplishes” (akin to prasso, “to do”), was used in Athens of one who exacts payment, a collector (the word is frequently used in the papyri of a public accountant); hence, in general, a court “officer,” an attendant in a court of justice (so Deissmann); the word is used in Luke 12:58 (twice).¶ In the Sept., Isa. 3:12.¶

peripsema (περίψωμα, 4067), “that which is wiped off” (akin to peripsao, “to wipe off all round”; peri, “around,” psao, “to wipe”), hence, “offscouring,” is used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 4:13. This and the synonymous word perikatharma, “refuse, rubbish,” “were used especially of condemned criminals of the lowest classes, who were sacrificed as expiatory offerings ... because of their degraded life” (Lightfoot).

OFFSPRING

1. gennema (γέννημα, 1081), akin to gennao, “to beget,” denotes “the offspring of men and animals,” Matt. 3:7; 12:34; 23:33; Luke 3:7, RV, “offspring” (KJV, “generation”). See FRUIT.¶

2. genos (γένος, 1085), “a race, family” (akin to ginomai, “to become”), denotes “an offspring,” Acts 17:28, 29; Rev. 22:16. See GENERATION, KIND.

OFT, OFTEN, OFTENER, OFTENTIMES, OFT-TIMES

A. Adverbs.

1. pollakis (πολλάκις, 4178), akin to polus, “much, many,” is variously translated, e.g., “ofttimes,” Matt. 17:15 (KJV, “oft,” 2nd part); “many times,” 2 Cor. 8:22, RV (KJV, “oftentimes”); “oft,” 2 Cor. 11:23; “often” (v. 26).

2. polla (πολύς, 4183**), the neuter plural of polus, is translated “oft” in Matt. 9:14; some ancient authorities omit it here (see RV marg.); in Rom. 15:22, with the article, RV, “these many times” (KJV, “much”).

3. posakis (ποσάκις, 4212), an interrogative numeral adverb, “how many times, how oft (or often)?” occurs in Matt. 18:21; 23:37; Luke 13:34.¶

4. hosakis (ὁσάκις, 3740), a relative adverb, “as often” (or oft) as, 1 Cor. 11:25-26; Rev. 11:6.¶

5. pukna (πυκνός, 4437), the neuter plural of puknos (see B), used adverbially, is translated “often” in Luke 5:33.

6. puknoteron (πυκνός, 4437*), the neuter singular of the comparative degree of puknos (cf. No. 5, and see B), “very often,” or “so much the oftener,” Acts 24:26, “the oftener.”¶

Notes: (1) In Luke 8:29, the phrase pollois chronois, lit., “many times,” is translated “oftentimes” (RV marg., “of a long time”). (2) For the rendering “oft” in Mark 7:3, see DILIGENTLY, D, No. 2.

B. Adjective.

puknos (πυκνός, 4437) primarily signifies “dose, compact, solid”; hence, “frequent, often,” 1 Tim. 5:23. Cf. A, Nos. 5 and 6.

OIL

elaion (ἐλαίον, 1637), “olive oil,” is mentioned over 200 times in the Bible. Different kinds were known in Palestine. The “pure,” RV (KJV, beaten), mentioned in Exod. 27:20; 29:40; Lev. 24:2; Num. 28:5 (now known as virgin oil), extracted by pressure, without heat, is called “golden” in Zech. 4:12. There were also inferior kinds. In the NT the uses mentioned were (a) for lamps, in which the “oil” is a symbol of the Holy Spirit, Matt. 25:3-4, 8; (b) as a medicinal agent, for healing, Luke 10:34; (c) for anointing at feasts, Luke 7:46; (d) on festive occasions, Heb. 1:9, where the reference is probably to the consecration of kings; (e) as an accompaniment of miraculous power, Mark 6:13, or of the prayer of faith, Jas. 5:14. For its general use in commerce, see Luke 16:6; Rev. 6:6; 18:13.¶

OINTMENT

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

muron (μύρον, 3464), a word derived by the ancients from muro, “to flow,” or from murra, “myrrh-oil” (it is probably of foreign origin; see MYRRH). The “ointment” is mentioned in the NT in connection with the anointing of the Lord on the occasions recorded in Matt. 26:7, 9, 12; Mark 14:3-4; Luke 7:37-38, 46; John 11:2; 12:3 (twice), 5. The alabaster cruse mentioned in the passages in Matthew, Mark and Luke was the best of its kind, and the spikenard was one of the costliest of perfumes. “Ointments” were used in preparing a body for burial, Luke 23:56 (“ointments”). Of the act of the woman mentioned in Matt. 26:6-13, the Lord said, “she did it to prepare Me for burial”; her devotion led her to antedate the customary ritual after death, by showing both her affection and her understanding of what was impending. For the use of the various kinds of “ointments” as articles of commerce, see Rev. 18:13.¶

OLD

A. Adjectives.

1. archaios (ἀρχαῖος, 744), “original, ancient” (from arche, “a beginning”: Eng., “archaic,” “archaeology,” etc.), is used (a) of persons belonging to a former age, “(to) them of old time,” Matt. 5:21, 33, RV; in some mss. v. 27; the RV rendering is right; not ancient teachers are in view; what was said to them of old time was “to be both recognized in its significance and estimated in its temporary limitations, Christ intending His words to be regarded not as an abrogation, but a deepening and fulfilling” (Cremer); of prophets, Luke 9:8, 19; (b) of time long gone by, Acts 15:21; (c) of days gone by in a person’s experience, Acts 15:7, “a good while ago,” lit., “from old (days),” i.e., from the first days onward in the sense of originality, not age; (d) of Mnason, “an early disciple,” Acts 21:16, RV, not referring to age, but to his being one of the first who had accepted the gospel from the beginning of its proclamation; (e) of things which are “old” in relation to the new, earlier things in contrast to things present, 2 Cor. 5:17, i.e., of what characterized and conditioned the time previous to conversion in a believer’s experience, RV, “they are become new,” i.e., they have taken on a new complexion and are viewed in an entirely different way; (f) of the world (i.e., the inhabitants of the world) just previous to the Flood, 2 Pet. 2:5; (g) of the Devil, as “that old serpent,” Rev. 12:9; 20:2, “old,” not in age, but as characterized for a long period by the evils indicated.¶

Note: For the difference between this and No. 2, see below.

2. palaaios (παλαιός, 3820), akin to C, No. 1 (Eng., “paleontology,” etc.), “of what is of long duration, old in years,” etc., a garment, wine (in contrast to neos; see NEW), Matt. 9:16:17; Mark 2:21-22 (twice); Luke 5:36-37, 39 (twice); of the treasures of divine truth, Matt. 13:52 (compared with kainos: see NEW); of what belongs to the past, e.g., the believer’s former self before his conversion, his “old man,” “old” because it has been superseded by that which is new, Rom. 6:6; Eph. 4:22 (in contrast to kainos); Col. 3:9 (in contrast to neos); of the covenant in connection with the Law, 2 Cor. 3:14; of leaven, metaphorical of moral evil, 1 Cor. 5:7, 8 (in contrast to neos); of that which was given long ago and remains in force, an “old” commandment, 1 John 2:7 (twice), that which was familiar and well known in contrast to that which is fresh (kainos).¶

Note: Palaios denotes “old,” “without the reference to beginning and origin contained in archaios” (Abbott-Smith), a distinction observed in the papyri (Moulton and Milligan). While sometimes any difference seems almost indistinguishable, yet “it is evident that wherever an emphasis is desired to be laid on the reaching back to a beginning, whatever that beginning may be, archaios will be preferred (e.g., of Satan, Rev. 12:9; 20:2, see No. 1). That which ... is old in the sense of more or less worn out ... is always palaaios” (Trench).

3. presbuteros (πρεσβύτερος, 4245), “older, elder,” is used in the plural, as a noun, in Acts 2:17, “old men.” See ELDER.

B. Nouns.

1. geron (γέρων, 1088) denotes “an old man” (from the same root comes Eng., “gray”), John 3:4.¶

2. presbutes (πρεσβύτερος, 4246), “an old man,” Luke 1:18, is translated “aged” in Titus 2:2; Philem. 9 (for this, however, see the RV marg.) See AGED.

3. geras (γῆρας, 1094), “old age,” occurs in Luke 1:36.¶

Note: Augustine (quoted by Trench, Sec.cvii, 2) speaks of the distinction observed among Greeks, that presbutes conveys the suggestion of gravity.

C. Adverbs.

1. palai (πάλαι, 3819) denotes “long ago, of old,” Heb. 1:1, RV, “of old time” (KJV, “in time past”); in Jude 4, “of old”; it is used as an adjective in 2 Pet. 1:9, “(his) old (sins),” lit., “his sins of old.” See WHILE.

2. ekpalai (ἐκπάλαι, 1597), “from of old, for a long time” (ek, “from,” and No. 1), occurs in 2 Pet. 2:3, RV, “from of old” (KJV, “of a long time”); 3:5. See LONG, B, Note (2).

Note: In 1 Pet. 3:5, KJV, the particle pote, “once, formerly, ever, sometime,” is translated “in the old time” (RV, “aforetime”); in 2 Pet. 1:21, “in old time” (RV, “ever”), KJV marg., “at any time.”

D. Verbs.

1. palaioo (παλαιόω, 3822), akin to A, No. 2, denotes, in the active voice, “to make or declare old,” Heb. 8:13 (1st part); in the passive voice, “to become old,” of things worn out by time and use, Luke 12:33; Heb. 1:11, “shall wax old,” lit., “shall be made old,” i.e., worn out; in 8:13 (2nd part), RV, “is becoming old” (KJV “decayeth”); here and in the 1st part of the verse, the verb may have the meaning “to abrogate”; for the next verb in the verse, see No. 2.¶

2. gerasko (ἀκρίβεια, 1095), from geras, “old age” (akin to B, No. 1), “to grow old,” is translated “thou shalt be old,” in John 21:18; “waxeth aged,” Heb. 8:13, RV (KJV, “waxeth old”).¶

Notes: (1) In John 8:57, echo, “to have,” is used with “fifty years” as the object, signifying, “Thou art (not yet fifty years) old,” lit., “Thou hast not yet fifty years.” (2) In Mark 5:42, RV, the verb eimi, “to be,” with the phrase “of twelve years” is translated “was ... old” (KJV, “was of the age of”).

OLDNESS

palaiotes (παλαιότης, 3821), from palaios (see A, No. 2, above), occurs in Rom. 7:6, of “the letter,” i.e., “the law,” with its rules of conduct, mere outward conformity to which has yielded place in the believer’s service to a response to the inward operation of the Holy Spirit. The word is contrasted with kainotes, “newness.”¶

OLD WIVES’

graodes (γραώδης, 1126), an adjective, signifying “old-womanish” (from graus, “an old woman”), is said of fables, in 1 Tim. 4:7.¶

OLIVES (OLIVE BERRIES), OLIVE TREE

1. elaia (ἐλαία, 1636) denotes (a) “an olive tree,” Rom. 11:17, 24; Rev. 11:4 (plural); the Mount of Olives was so called from the numerous olive trees there, and indicates the importance attached to such; the Mount is mentioned in the NT in connection only with the Lord’s life on earth, Matt. 21:1; 24:3; 26:30; Mark 11:1; 13:3; 14:26; Luke 19:37; 22:39; John 8:1; (b) “an olive,” Jas. 3:12, RV (KJV, “olive berries”).¶

2. elaion (ἐλαιών, 1638), “an olive grove” or “olive garden,” the ending on, as in this class of noun, here indicates “a place set with trees of the kind designated by the primitive” (Thayer); hence it is applied to the Mount of Olives, Luke 19:29; 21:37; Acts 1:12 (“Olivet”): in the first two of these and in Mark 11:1, some mss. have the form of the noun as in No. 1.

3. kallielaios (καλλιέλαιος, 2565), “the garden olive” (from kallos, “beauty,” and No. 1), occurs in Rom. 11:24, “a good olive tree.”¶

4. agrielaos (ἀγριέλαιος, 65), an adjective (from agrios, “growing in the fields, wild,” and No. 1), denoting “of the wild olive,” is used as a noun in Rom. 11:17, 24, “a wild olive tree” (RV, in the latter Verse).¶

For OMNIPOTENT (Rev. 19:6) see ALMIGHTY

For ON see †, p. 1

ONCE (at; for all)

1. hapax (ἅπαξ, 530) denotes (a) “once, one time,” 2 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 9:7, 26-27; 12:26-27; in the phrase “once and again,” lit., “once and twice,” Phil. 4:16; 1 Thess. 2:18; (b) “once for all,” of what is of perpetual validity, not requiring repetition, Heb. 6:4; 9:28; 10:2; 1 Pet. 3:18; Jude 3, RV, “once for all” (KJV, “once”); v. 5 (ditto); in some mss. 1 Pet. 3:20 (so the KJV).¶

2. ephapax (ἐφάπαξ, 2178), a strengthened form of No. 1 (epi, “upon”), signifies (a) “once for all,” Rom. 6:10; Heb. 7:27, RV (KJV, “once”); 9:12 (ditto); 10:10; (b) “at once,” 1 Cor. 15:6.¶

3. pote (ποτέ, 4218) denotes “once upon a time, formerly, sometime,” e.g., Rom. 7:9; Gal. 1:23, 1st part, RV, “once” (KJV, “in times past”); 2nd part, KJV and RV, “once”; Gal.

2:6, RV marg., “what they once were” (to be preferred to the text, “whatsoever they were”), the reference probably being to the association of the twelve apostles with the Lord during His ministry on earth; upon this their partisans based their claim for the exclusive authority of these apostles, which Paul vigorously repudiated; in Eph. 5:8, RV, “once” (KJV, “sometimes”). See AFORETIME, LAST LENGTH (at), TIME (past).

Note: In Luke 23:18, KJV, pamphlethei, denoting “with the whole multitude” (pas, “all,” plethos, “a multitude”), is rendered “all at once,” RV, “all together”).¶

ONE

A. Numeral.

heis (εἷς, 1520), the first cardinal numeral, masculine (feminine and neuter nominative forms are mia and hen, respectively), is used to signify (1) (a) “one” in contrast to many, e.g., Matt. 25:15; Rom. 5:18, RV, “(through) one (trespass),” i.e., Adam’s transgression, in contrast to the “one act of righteousness,” i.e., the death of Christ (not as KJV, “the offense of one,” and “the righteousness of one”); (b) metaphorically, “union” and “concord,” e.g., John 10:30; 11:52; 17:11, 21-22; Rom. 12:4-5; Phil. 1:27; (2) emphatically, (a) a single (“one”), to the exclusion of others, e.g., Matt. 21:24; Rom. 3:10; 1 Cor. 9:24; 1 Tim. 2:5 (twice); (b) “one, alone,” e.g., Mark 2:7, RV (KJV, “only”); 10:18; Luke 18:19; (c) “one and the same,” e.g., Rom. 3:30, RV, “God is one,” i.e., there is not “one” God for the Jew and one for the Gentile; cf. Gal. 3:20, which means that in a promise there is no other party; 1 Cor. 3:8; 11:5; 12:11; 1 John 5:8 (lit., “and the three are into one,” i.e., united in “one” and the same witness); (3) a certain “one,” in the same sense as the indefinite pronoun tis (see B, No. 1), e.g., Matt. 8:19, RV, “a (scribe),” marg., “one (scribe),” KJV, “a certain (scribe)”;
19:16, “one;” in Rev. 8:13, RV marg., “one (eagle)”;
heis tis are used together in Luke 22:50; John 11:49; this occurs frequently in the papyri (Moulton, Prol., p. 96); (4) distributively, with hekastos, “each,” i.e., “every one,” e.g., Luke 4:40; Acts 2:6, “every man” (lit., “every one”); in the sense of “one ... and one,” e.g., John 20:12; or “one” ... followed by allos or heteros, “the other,” e.g., Matt. 6:24; or by a second heis, e.g., Matt. 24:40, RV, “one”; John 20:12; in Rom. 12:5 heis is preceded by kata (kath in the sense of “severally (members) one (of another),” RV (KJV, “every one ... one”); cf. Mark 14:19; in 1 Thess. 5:11 the phrase in the 2nd part, “each other,” RV (KJV, “one another”), is, lit., “one the one”; (5) as an ordinal number, equivalent to protos, “first,” in the phrase “the first day of the week,” lit. and idiomatically, “one of sabbaths,” signifying “the first day after the sabbath,” e.g., Matt. 28:1; Mark 16:2; Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2. Moulton remarks on the tendency for certain cardinal numerals to replace ordinals (Prol., p. 96).

B. Pronouns.

1. tis (τίς, 5100), an indefinite pronoun signifying “a certain one, some one, any one, one” (the neuter form ti denotes “a certain thing”), is used (a) like a noun, e.g., Acts 5:25; 19:32; 21:34; 1 Cor. 3:4; or with the meaning “someone,” e.g., Acts 8:31, RV, “some one” (KJV, “some man”); Rom. 5:7; (b) as an adjective; see CERTAIN, Note (3), SOME.

2. hos (ὅς, 3739), as a relative pronoun, signifies “who”; as a demonstrative pronoun, “this,” or “the one” in contrast with “the other,” or “another,” e.g., Rom. 14:2, KJV (RV, “one man”); 1 Cor. 12:8.

Notes: (1) The RV often substitutes “one” for “man,” e.g., Matt. 17:8 (oudeis, “no one”); 1 Cor. 3:21 (i.e., “no person”); 1 Cor. 15:35; 1 Thess. 5:15; 2 Tim. 4:16; 1 John 2:27; 3:3. (2) The pronoun houtos is sometimes translated “this one,” e.g., Luke 7:8. (3) In 1 Pet. 3:8, KJV, homophron, “likeminded” (RV), is translated “of one mind” (lit., “of the same mind”). (4) In Acts 7:26, “at one,” is, lit., “unto peace” (see PEACE). (5) For “every one” in Acts 5:16 see EVERY, No. 2. (6) In Mark 9:26 nekros, “dead,” is translated “one dead.” (7) In Acts 2:1 “in one place” translates epi to auto, lit., “to the same,” which may mean “for the same (purpose)””; in 1 Cor. 11:20 and 14:23, the RV translates it “together.” (8) In Mark 1:7, KJV, the article ho, “the,” is rendered “one” (RV, “he that”). (9) In Mark 7:14, KJV, the plural of pas, “all” (so RV), is translated “every one”; in Matt. 5:28, KJV, pas, with the article, is translated “whosoever” (RV “every one who”). (10) In Acts 1:24, KJV, “whether” is, lit., and as the RV, “the one whom.” (11), In 2 Thess. 2:7, the article is rendered “one that,” RV (KJV, “he who”).

ONE ANOTHER or ONE ... ANOTHER, ONE ... THE OTHER

Notes: (1) This translates a number of words and phrases, (a) allelon, a reciprocal pronoun in the genitive plural, signifying “of, or from, one another” (akin to allos, “another”), e.g., Matt. 25:32; John 13:22; Acts 15:39; 19:38; 1 Cor. 7:5; Gal. 5:17; the accusative allelous denotes “one another,” e.g., Acts 7:26, lit., “why do ye wrong one another?”; 2 Thess. 1:3, RV; in Eph. 4:32 and Col. 3:13, e.g., RV, “each other”; in 1 Thess. 5:15, “one (toward) another,” RV; the dative allelois denotes “one to another,” e.g., Luke 7:32; (b) different forms of the plural of heautou, “of himself,” used as a reciprocal pronoun, e.g., Eph. 5:19, RV, “one to another” (KJV, and RV marg., “to yourselves”); see also Note (5); (c) allos pros allon, “one to another,” Acts 2:12; (d) allos ... heteros, 1 Cor. 12:8 (for the difference between allos and heteros, see ANOTHER); (e) hos men ... hos de (in various forms of the pronoun), lit., “this indeed ... but that,” e.g., Luke 23:33; Rom. 9:21; 14:5; 1 Cor. 11:21; 2 Cor. 2:16; Phil. 1:16-17; (f) heteros ... heteros, “one ... another,” 1 Cor. 15:40. (2) In Matt. 24:2; Mark 13:2; Luke 19:44, and 21:6, “one (stone upon) another” is, lit., “stone upon stone.” (3) In Heb. 10:25, “one another” is necessarily added in English to complete the sense of parakaleo, “to exhort.” (4) In 1 Pet. 3:8, KJV, “one of another” represents nothing in the original (the RV, “compassionate” sufficiently translates the adjective sumpathes: see COMPASSION, C.). (5) In Mark 9:10, KJV, pros heautous, “among yourselves” (RV), is translated “one with another.” (6) In 1

Tim. 5:21, KJV, the accusative case of prosklisis, “partiality,” preceded by kata, “according to,” is translated “preferring one before another” (RV, “prejudice”; marg., “preference,” lit., “according to partiality”).

ONLY

A. Adjectives.

1. monos (μόνος, 3441), “alone, solitary,” is translated “only,” e.g., in Matt. 4:10; 12:4; 17:8; 1 Cor. 9:6; 14:36; Phil. 4:15; Col. 4:11; 2 John 1; it is used as an attribute of God in John 5:44; 17:3; Rom. 16:27; 1 Tim. 1:17; 1 Tim. 6:15-16; Jude 4, 25; Rev. 15:4. See ALONE, A.

2. monogenes (μονογενής, 3439), “only begotten” (No. 1 and genos, “offspring”), has the meaning “only,” of human offspring, in Luke 7:12; 8:42; 9:38; the term is one of endearment, as well as of singleness. For Heb. 11:17 see ONLY BEGOTTEN.

B. Adverbs.

1. monon (μόνον, 3441), the neuter of A, No. 1, “only, exclusively,” is translated “only,” e.g., in Matt. 5:47; 8:8; John 5:18; 11:52; 12:9; 13:9; frequently in Acts, Romans and Galatians. See ALONE, B, No. 1.

2. plen (πλήν, 4133), “howbeit, except that,” is translated “only that” in the RV of Phil. 1:18 (KJV, “notwithstanding”); “only” in 3:16 (KJV, “nevertheless”).

Notes: (1) In Mark 2:7, KJV, heis, “one” (so RV), is translated “only”; in Jas. 4:12, RV, “one only” (KJV, “one”). (2) For “only that” in Acts 21:25, KJV, see the RV. (3) The conjunction ei, “if,” with the negative me, “not,” is translated “but only” in Luke 4:26, RV (KJV, “save”); 4:27 (KJV, “saving”); “only” in 1 Cor. 7:17 (KJV, “but”); in some mss. in Acts 21:25 (KJV “save only”).

ONLY BEGOTTEN

monogenes (μονογενής, 3439) is used five times, all in the writings of the apostle John, of Christ as the Son of God; it is translated “only begotten” in Heb. 11:17 of the relationship of Isaac to Abraham.

With reference to Christ, the phrase “the only begotten from the Father,” John 1:14, RV (see also the marg.), indicates that as the Son of God He was the sole representative of the Being and character of the One who sent Him. In the original the definite article is omitted both before “only begotten” and before “Father,” and its absence in each case serves to lay stress upon the characteristics referred to in the terms used. The apostle’s object is to demonstrate what sort of glory it was that he and his fellow apostles had seen. That he is not merely making a comparison with earthly relationships is indicated by para, “from.” The glory was that of a unique relationship and the word “begotten” does not imply a beginning of His Sonship. It suggests relationship indeed, but must be distinguished from generation as applied to man.

We can only rightly understand the term “the only begotten” when used of the Son, in the sense of unoriginated relationship. “The begetting is not an event of time, however remote, but a fact irrespective of time. The Christ did not become, but necessarily and eternally is the Son. He, a Person, possesses every attribute of pure Godhood. This necessitates eternity, absolute being; in this respect He is not ‘after’ the Father” (Moule). The expression also suggests the thought of the deepest affection, as in the case of the OT word yachid, variously rendered, “only one,” Gen. 22:2, 12; “only son,” Jer. 6:26; Amos 8:10; Zech. 12:10; “only beloved,” Prov. 4:3, and “darling,” Ps. 22:20; 35:17.

In John 1:18 the clause “the only begotten son, which is in the bosom of the Father,” expresses both His eternal union with the Father in the Godhead and the ineffable intimacy and love between them, the Son sharing all the Father’s counsels and enjoying all His affections. Another reading is monogenes Theos, “God only-begotten.” In John 3:16 the statement, “God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son,” must not be taken to mean that Christ became the only begotten son by incarnation. The value and the greatness of the gift lay in the Sonship of Him who was given. His Sonship was not the effect of His being given. In John 3:18 the phrase “the name of the only begotten son of God” lays stress upon the full revelation of God’s character and will, His love and grace, as conveyed in the name of One who, being in a unique relationship to Him, was provided by Him as the object of faith. In 1 John 4:9 the statement “God hath sent His only begotten son into the world” does not mean that God sent out into the world one who at His birth in Bethlehem had become His Son. Cf. the parallel statement, “God sent forth the Spirit of His Son,” Gal. 4:6, RV, which could not mean that God sent forth One who became His Spirit when He sent Him.¶

A. Verbs.

1. anoigo (ἀνοίγω, 455) is used (1) transitively, (a) literally, of “a door or gate,” e.g., Acts 5:19; graves, Matt. 27:52; a sepulchre, Rom. 3:13; a book, e.g., Luke 4:17 (some mss. have No. 4); Rev. 5:2-5; 10:8; the seals of a roll, e.g., Rev. 5:9; 6:1; the eyes, Acts 9:40; the mouth of a fish, Matt. 17:27; “the pit of the abyss,” Rev. 9:2, RV; heaven and the heavens, Matt. 3:16; Luke 3:21; Acts 10:11 (for 7:56, see No. 2); Rev. 19:11; “the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven,” Rev. 15:5; by metonymy, for that which contained treasures, Matt. 2:11; (b) metaphorically, e.g., Matt. 7:7-8; 25:11; Rev. 3:7; Hebraistically, “to open the mouth,” of beginning to speak, e.g., Matt. 5:2; 13:35; Acts 8:32, 35; 10:34; 18:14; Rev. 13:6 (cf., e.g., Num. 22:28; Job. 3:1; Isa. 50:5); and of recovering speech, Luke 1:64; of the earth “opening,” Rev. 12:16; of the “opening” of the eyes, Acts 26:18; the ears, Mark 7:35 (in the best mss.; some have No. 2); (2) intransitively (perfect tense, active, in the Greek), (a) literally, of “the heaven,” John 1:51, RV, “opened;” (b) metaphorically, of “speaking freely,” 2 Cor. 6:11.

2. dianoigo (διανοίγω, 1272), “to open up completely” (dia, “through,” intensive, and No. 1), is used (a) literally, Luke 2:23; Acts 7:56, in the best mss.; (b) metaphorically, of the eyes, Mark 7:34; Luke 24:31; of the Scriptures, v. 32 and Acts 17:3; of the mind, Luke 24:45, RV (KJV, “understanding”); of the heart, Acts 16:14.¶

3. ago (ἄγω, 71), “to lead,” or “to keep or spend a day,” is so used in Acts 19:38: see KEEP, Note (2).

4. anaptusso (ἀναπτύσσω, 380), “to unroll” (ana, “back,” ptusso, “to roll”), is found in some mss. in Luke 4:17 (of the roll of Isaiah), and translated “He had opened” (KJV); see No. 1.¶

Notes: (1) For Heb. 4:13, “laid open,” RV (KJV, “opened”) see LAY, No. 18. (2) In 2 Cor. 3:18, KJV, anakalupto, “to unveil,” is translated “open” (RV, “unveiled,” which consistently continues the metaphor of the veil upon the heart of Israel). (3) In Mark 1:10, KJV, schizo, “to rend” or “split,” is translated “opened,” of the heavens, RV, “rent asunder,” KJV marg., “cloven, or, rent.” (4) For prodelos, in 1 Tim. 5:24, KJV, open beforehand, see EVIDENT, A, No. 3. (5) For be opened See EPHPHATHA. (6) For “open (your hearts),” 2 Cor. 7:2, RV, see RECEIVE, No. 18.

B. Nouns.

1. anoixis (ἄνοιξις, 457), “an opening” (akin to A, No. 1), is used in Eph. 6:19, metaphorically of the “opening” of the mouth as in A, No. 1 (2), (b).¶

2. ope (ὀπή, 3692), “an opening, a hole,” is used in Jas. 3:11, of the orifice of a fountain: see CAVE, HOLE, PLACE.

OPENLY

1. parrhesia (παρρησία, 3954), “freedom of speech, boldness,” is used adverbially in the dative case and translated “openly” in Mark 8:32, of a saying of Christ; in John 7:13, of a public statement; in 11:54, of Christ’s public appearance; in 7:26 and 18:20, of His public testimony; preceded by the preposition en, “in,” John 7:4, lit., “in boldness” (cf. v. 10, RV, “publicly”). See BOLD, B.

2. phaneros (φανερός, 5318), manifestly, openly: see EVIDENT, B.

Notes: (1) In Gal. 3:1, “openly set forth” translates the verb prographo, lit., “to write before,” as of the OT, Rom. 15:4 (cf. Jude 4), and of a previous letter, Eph. 3:3. In Gal. 3:1, however, “it is probably used in another sense, unexampled in the Scriptures but not uncommon in the language of the day, = ‘proclaimed,’ ‘placarded,’ as a magistrate proclaimed the fact that an execution had been carried out, placarding his proclamation in a public place. The Apostle carries on his metaphor of the ‘evil eye;’ as a preventive of such mischief it was common to post up charms on the walls of houses, a glance at which was supposed to counteract any evil influence to which a person may have been subjected. ‘Notwithstanding,’ he says, in effect, ‘that the fact that Christ had been crucified was placarded before your very eyes in our preaching, you have allowed yourselves to be ... fascinated by the enemies of the Cross of Christ, when you had only to look at Him to escape their malignant influence;’ cf. the interesting and instructive parallel in Num. 21:9.”* (2) In some mss. in Matt. 6:4, 6, 18, the phrase en to phanero, lit., “in the manifest,” is found (KJV, “openly”); see the RV (3) For emphanes, rendered “openly” in Acts 10:40, KJV, see MANIFEST. (4) In Acts 16:37, KJV, the dative case of the adjective demosios, “belonging to the people” (demos, “a people”), “public” (so RV),

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 106, 107.

used adverbially, is translated “openly”; in 18:28 and 20:20, “publicly.” For the adjective itself, “public,” see Acts 5:18. See PUBLIC.¶

For OPERATION see WORKING

OPPORTUNITY (lack)

A. Nouns.

1. kairos (καιρός, 2540), primarily, “a due measure,” is used of “a fixed and definite period, a time, season,” and is translated “opportunity” in Gal. 6:10 and Heb. 11:15. See SEASON, TIME, WHILE.

2. eukairia (εὐκαιρία, 2120), “a fitting time, opportunity” (eu, “well,” and No. 1), occurs in Matt. 26:16 and Luke 22:6.¶ Cf. eukairos, “seasonable”; see CONVENIENT.

3. topos (τόπος, 5117), “a place,” is translated “opportunity” in Acts 25:16, RV (KJV, “licence”). See PLACE, ROOM.

B. Verbs.

1. eukaireo (εὐκαιρέω, 2119), “to have time or leisure” (akin to A, No. 2), is translated “he shall have opportunity” in 1 Cor. 16:12, RV (KJV, “convenient time”). See LEISURE.

2. akaireomai (ἀκαιρέομαι, 170), “to have no opportunity” (a, negative, and kairos, “season”), occurs in Phil. 4:10.¶

OPPOSE

1. antikeimai (ἀντίκειμαι, 480): see ADVERSARY, B.

2. antitasso (ἀντιτάσσομαι, 498) is used in the middle voice in the sense of setting oneself against (anti, “against,” tasso, “to order, set”), “opposing oneself to,” Acts 18:6; elsewhere rendered by the verb “to resist,” Rom. 13:2; Jas. 4:6; 5:6; 1 Pet. 5:5. See RESIST.¶

3. antidiatithemi (ἀντιδιατίθεμαι, 475) signifies “to place oneself in opposition, oppose” (anti, “against,” dia, “through,” intensive, tithemi, “to place”), 2 Tim. 2:25. The KJV and RV translate this as a middle voice, “them (KJV, ‘those’) that oppose themselves.” Field (Notes on the Trans. of the NT) points out that in the only other known instance of the verb it is passive. The sense is practically the same if it is rendered “those who are opposed.”¶

OPPOSITIONS

antithesis (ἀντίθεσις, 477), “a contrary position” (anti, “against,” tithemi, “to place”; Eng., “antithesis”), occurs in 1 Tim. 6:20.¶

OPPRESS

1. katadunasteuo (καταδυναστεύω, 2616), “to exercise power over” (kata, “down,” dunastes, “a potentate”: dunamai “to have power”), “to oppress,” is used, in the passive voice, in Acts 10:38; in the active, in Jas. 2:6.¶

2. kataponeo (καταπονέω, 2669): see DISTRESS, B, No. 4.

For OR see †, p. 1

logion (λόγιον, 3051), a diminutive of logos, “a word, narrative, statement,” denotes “a divine response or utterance, an oracle”; it is used of (a) the contents of the Mosaic Law, Acts 7:38; (b) all the written utterances of God through OT writers, Rom. 3:2; (c) the substance of Christian doctrine, Heb. 5:12; (d) the utterances of God through Christian teachers, 1 Pet. 4:11.¶

Note: Divine “oracles” were given by means of the breastplate of the high priest, in connection with the service of the tabernacle, and the Sept. uses the associated word logeion in Exod. 28:15, to describe the breastplate.

ORATION

demegoreo (δημηγορέω, 1215), from demos, “the people” and agoreuo, “to speak in the public assembly, to deliver an oration,” occurs in Acts 12:21.¶

ORATOR

rhetor (ρήτωρ, 4489), from an obsolete present tense, rheo, “to say” (cf. Eng., “rhetoric”), denotes “a public speaker, an orator,” Acts 24:1, of Tertullus. Such a person, distinct from the professional lawyer, was hired, as a professional speaker, to make a skillful presentation of a case in court. His training was not legal but rhetorical.¶

ORDAIN

1. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), to put: see APPOINT, No. 3.

2. kathistemi (καθίστημι, 2525), from kata, “down,” or “over against,” and histemi, “to cause to stand, to set,” is translated “to ordain” in the KJV of Titus 1:5; Heb. 5:1; 8:3. See APPOINT, No. 2.

3. tasso (τάσσω, 5021) is translated “to ordain,” in Acts 13:48 and Rom. 13:1. See APPOINT, No. 5.

4. diatasso (διατάσσω, 1299) is translated “to ordain” in 1 Cor. 7:17; 9:14; Gal. 3:19, the last in the sense of “administered.” Cf. diatage, under DISPOSITION. See APPOINT, No. 6.

5. horizo (ὀρίζω, 3724) is twice used of Christ as divinely “ordained” to be the Judge of men, Acts 10:42; 17:31. See DETERMINE, No. 2.

6. krino (κρίνω, 2919), “to divide, separate, decide, judge,” is translated “ordained” in Acts 16:4, of the decrees by the apostles and elders in Jerusalem. See JUDGE.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 2:7, KJV, proorizo, “to foreordain” (see RV) is translated “ordained.” See DETERMINE, No. 3. (2) In Mark 3:14, KJV, poieo, “to make,” is translated “ordained” (RV, “appointed”). (3) In Heb. 9:6, KJV, kataskeuazo, “to prepare” (so RV), is translated “were ... ordained. See PREPARE. (4) In Acts 14:23, KJV, cheirotoneo, “to appoint” (RV), is translated “they had ordained.” See APPOINT, No. 11. (5) In Eph. 2:10, KJV, proetoimazo, “to prepare before,” is translated “hath before ordained” (RV, “afore prepared”); see PREPARE. (6) In Jude 4, KJV, prographo, lit., “to write before,” is translated “were before ... ordained” (RV, “were ... set forth”). See SET (forth). (7) In Acts 1:22, KJV, ginomai “to become,” is translated “be ordained” (RV, “become”). (8) In Rom. 7:10, KJV, “ordained” represents no word in the original (see RV).

ORDER (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. taxis (τάξις, 5010), “an arranging, arrangement, order” (akin to tasso, “to arrange, draw up in order”), is used in Luke 1:8 of the fixed succession of the course of the priests; of due “order,” in contrast to confusion, in the gatherings of a local church, 1 Cor. 14:40; of the general condition of such, Col. 2:5 (some give it a military significance here); of the divinely appointed character or nature of a priesthood, of Melchizedek, as foreshadowing that of Christ, Heb. 5:6, 10; 6:20; 7:11 (where also the character of the Aaronic priesthood is set in contrast); 7:17 (in some mss, v. 21).¶

2. tagma (τάγμα, 5001), a more concrete form of No. 1, signifying “that which has been arranged in order,” was especially a military term, denoting “a company”; it is used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 15:23 of the various classes of those who have part in the first resurrection.¶

B. Verbs.

1. anatassomai (ἀνατάσσομαι, 392), “to arrange in order” (ana, “up,” and the middle voice of tasso, “to arrange”), is used in Luke 1:1, KJV, “to set forth in order” (RV, “to draw up”); the probable meaning is to bring together and so arrange details in “order.”¶

2. diatasso (διατάσσω, 1299), “to appoint, arrange, charge, give orders to,” is used, in the middle voice, in Acts 24:23, “gave order” (RV); 1 Cor. 11:34, “will I set in order”; in the active voice, in 1 Cor. 16:1, “I gave order” (RV). See COMMAND, No. 1.

3. epidiorthoo (ἐπιδιορθόω, 1930), “to set in order” (epi “upon,” dia, “through, intensive,” and orthos, “straight”), is used in Titus 1:5, in the sense of setting right again what was defective, a commission to Titus, not to add to what the apostle himself had done, but to restore what had fallen into disorder since the apostle had labored in Crete; this is suggested by the epi.¶

C. Adverb.

kathexes (καθεξῆς, 2517) is translated “in order” in Luke 1:3; Acts 11:4, RV (KJV, “by order”); Acts 18:23. See AFTERWARD, No. 3.

Note: In 2 Cor. 11:32, RV, the phrase “in order to” (as with the KJV, “desirous to”) represents nothing in the original: the infinitive mood of the verb piazō expresses the purpose, viz., “to take.”

ORDERLY

kosmios (κόσμιος, 2887), an adjective signifying “decent, modest, orderly” (akin to kosmos, “order, adornment”), is translated “modest” in 1 Tim. 2:9; “orderly” in 3:2, RV (KJV, “of good behavior”). See MODEST.¶

Note: For stoicheo, in Acts 21:24, “thou walkest orderly,” see WALK.

ORDINANCE

A. Nouns.

1. dikaïoma (δικαίωμα, 1345): see JUSTIFICATION, No. 2.
2. diatage (διαταγή, 1296) is translated “ordinances,” in Rom. 13:2. See DISPOSITION.
3. dogma (δόγμα, 1378) is translated “ordinances” in Eph. 2:15 and Col. 2:14. See DECREE.
4. ktisis (κτίσις, 2937), “a creation, creature,” is translated “ordinance” in 1 Pet. 2:13. See CREATE, B, No. 1. NOTE: In 1 Cor. 11:2, KJV, paradosis, “a tradition” (marg., and RV, “traditions”), is translated “ordinances.” See TRADITION.

B. Verb.

dogmatizo (δογματίζω, 1379), akin to A, No. 3, “to decree,” signifies, in the middle voice, “to subject oneself to an ordinance,” Col. 2:20.¶ In the Sept., Esth. 3:9; in some texts, Dan. 2:13, 15.¶

OTHER

1. allos (ἄλλος, 243) indicates numeral distinction of objects of similar character, and is used (a) absolutely, e.g., Matt. 20:3 (plural); (b) attached to a noun, e.g., Matt. 21:36; (c) with the article, e.g., Matt. 5:39; 1 Cor. 14:29 (plural, RV); in Matt. 13:5; Luke 9:19; John 9:9, e.g., RV, “others” (KJV, “some”); in Matt. 25:20, RV, “other” (KJV, “beside them ... more”). See ANOTHER, MORE, B, Note (1), SOME.

2. heteros (ἕτερος, 2087) indicates either numerical distinction, e.g., Luke 4:43; 5:7; or generic distinction, different in character, etc., e.g., Luke 9:29, “(the fashion of His countenance) was altered,” lit., “became other”; 23:32, “two others, (malefactors),” RV, where the plural serves to make the necessary distinction between them and Christ; Acts 2:4; 19:39 (“other matters”); 1 Cor. 14:21, KJV, “other” (RV, “strange”); 2 Cor. 11:4 (2nd and 3rd parts, RV, “different”; in the 1st clause, allos, “another”). For the distinction between this and No. 1, see under ANOTHER.

3. loipos (λοιποί, 3062**) signifies “remaining, the rest.” It is translated “other,” or “others,” e.g., in Matt. 25:11; Mark 4:19; Luke 18:9; 24:10 (in v. 9, “the rest”); but in Luke 8:10; Acts 28:9; Rom. 1:13; 1 Cor. 9:5; Eph. 2:3; 1 Thess. 4:13; 5:6; 1 Tim. 5:20, e.g., the RV renders this word “the rest” (KJV, “other” or “others”); in Eph. 4:17, some mss. have loipa, neuter plural, KJV, “other (Gentiles)”; see the RV See REMNANT, REST (the).

4. allotrios (ἄλλότριος, 245), “belonging to another, not one’s own,” is translated “other men’s” in 2 Cor. 10:15; 1 Tim. 5:22; in Heb. 9:25, RV, “not his own” (KJV, “of others”). See ALIEN, MAN’S, Note (1), STRANGE, STRANGER.

5. allelon (ἀλλήλων, 240), in Rom. 1:12, used in the dative case, is translated in the RV “(each of us by the) other’s” (KJV, “mutual”); the accusative is translated “other” in Phil. 2:3. See MUTUAL and ONE ANOTHER.

6. heis (εἷς, 1520), “one,” is sometimes translated “other” when expressing the second of a pair, e.g., Matt. 24:40, KJV (RV, “one”), See ONE, A (4).

7. ekeinos (ἐκεῖνος, 1565), signifying “that one,” implying remoteness as compared with houtos, “this,” is translated “the other,” e.g., in Matt. 23:23; Luke 11:42; 18:14.

Notes: (1) In Acts 26:22, KJV, ouden ektos, lit., “nothing besides” is translated “none other things” (RV, “nothing but”). (2) The plural of the definite article is translated “others” in Acts 17:32; in Jude 23, KJV, “others” (RV, “some”). (3) In Luke 24:1, the plural of tis, “a certain one,” is found in some mss., and translated “certain others” in the KJV.

For OTHER SIDE and OTHER WAY see SIDE and WAY
OTHERWISE

1. allos (ἄλλος, 243) is used, in its neuter form, allo, in Gal. 5:10, lit., “another thing,” with the meaning “otherwise.” See OTHER, No. 1.

2. allos (ἄλλως, 247), the adverb corresponding to No. 1, is translated “otherwise” in 1 Tim. 5:25; the contrast is not with works that are not good (No. 3 would signify that), but with good works which are not evident.¶

3. heteros (ἑτέρως, 2088) is used in Phil. 3:15, “otherwise (minded),” i.e., “differently minded.”¶ Contrast No. 2, and for the corresponding difference between the adjectives allos and heteros, see ANOTHER.

4. epei (ἐπεί, 1893), when used of time, means “since” or “when”; used of cause, it means “since, because”; used elliptically it means “otherwise” or “else”; “otherwise” in Rom. 11:6 (the 2nd part of the v. is absent from the most authentic mss.); v. 22; in Heb. 9:17, KJV, “otherwise (it is of no strength at all),” RV, “for (doth it ever avail?).” See ELSE.

Note: The phrase ei, “if,” de, “but,” mege, “not indeed,” i.e., “but if not indeed,” is translated “otherwise” in the KJV of Matt. 6:1; Luke 5:36 (RV, “else,” in each place); in 2 Cor. 11:16, KJV, “if otherwise” (RV, “but if ye do”). See also TEACH.

For the pronoun OUGHT (KJV) see AUGHT
OUGHT (Verb)

1. dei (δεῖ, 1163) denotes “it is necessary,” “one must”; in Luke 24:26, KJV, “ought” (RV “behoved it”); the neuter of the present participle, used as a noun, is translated “things which they ought (not)” in 1 Tim. 5:13; in Acts 19:36, “ye ought” (see NEED). See MUST, No. 1.

2. opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784), “to owe,” is translated “ought,” with various personal pronouns, in John 13:14; 19:7; Acts 17:29; Rom. 15:1; Heb. 5:3, KJV (RV, “he is bound”); 5:12; 1 John 3:16; 4:11; 3 John 8; with other subjects in 1 Cor. 11:7, 10; 2 Cor. 12:14; Eph. 5:28; 1 John 2:6. See BEHOVE, OWE, etc.

3. chre (χρή, 5534), an impersonal verb (akin to chraomai, “to use”), occurs in Jas. 3:10, “(these things) ought (not so to be),” lit., “it is not befitting, these things so to be.”¶

OUR, OURS

Notes: (1) This usually translates hemon, the genitive of hemeis, “we,” lit., “of us,” e.g., Matt. 6:9, 11-12. It is translated “ours,” e.g., in Mark 12:7; Luke 20:14; 1 Cor. 1:2; 2 Cor. 1:14. (2) In 1 John 4:17, the phrase meta hemon, rendered “our (love)” in the KJV, is accurately translated in the RV “(herein is love made perfect) with us,” i.e., divine love in Christ finds its expression in “our” manifestation of it to others. (3) In Luke 17:5, “increase our faith” is, lit., “add faith to us.” (4) In Luke 24:22, “of our company” is, lit., “from among us.” (S) Hemeteros, a possessive pronoun, more emphatic than hemeis, is used in Luke 16:12, in the best mss. (some have humeteros, “your own”); Acts 2:11; 24:6, in some mss.; 26:5; 2 Tim. 4:15; Titus 3:14, “ours”; 1 John 1:3; 2:2, “ours.” (6) In Luke 23:41, “of our deeds,” is, lit., “of what things we practiced.” (7) In 1 Cor. 9:10, “for our sake,” RV (twice), is, lit., “on account of us.”

OUR OWN

1. heauton (ἑαυτοῦ, 1438) is sometimes used as a reflexive pronoun of the 1st person plural, signifying “our own selves,” translated “our own” in 1 Thess. 2:8, lit., “(the souls) of ourselves.”

2. idios (ἴδιος, 2398), “one’s own,” signifies “our own” in Acts 3:12; 1 Cor. 4:12; in Acts 2:8, with hemon, forming a strong possessive, lit., “each in his own language of us.”

OURSELVES

Notes: (1) This translates (a) autoi, the plural of autos, “self,” used emphatically either alone, e.g., John 4:42; Rom. 8:23 (1st part); 2 Cor. 1:4 (last part); 1:9, RV, “we ourselves” (1st part); or joined with the plural pronouns, e.g., hemeis, “we,” Rom. 8:23 (2nd part); (b) the plural hemeis alone, e.g., Titus 3:3; in 2 Cor. 4:7, RV, ex hemon, is translated “from ourselves” (KJV, “of us”); (c) heauton, governed by the preposition apo, “from,” e.g., 2 Cor. 3:5 (1st part), lit., “from ourselves” (“of ourselves,” in the text); (d) heautis, the dative case of (c), e.g., Rom. 15:1; governed by en, “in,” 2 Cor. 1:9 (1st part); by epi, “on” (2nd part). (e) heautous, the accusative case, e.g., Acts 23:14; 2 Cor. 3:1; 4:2, 5. (2) In Acts 6:4, KJV, proskartereo, “to continue steadfastly” (RV), is translated “give ourselves continually.” (3) In 2 Cor. 10:12, KJV, enkrino, “to number” (RV), is translated “to make ourselves of the number.”

OUT, OUT OF

Notes: (1) The preposition ek (or ex), which frequently signifies “out of” or “from the midst of,” has a variety of meanings, among which is “from,” as virtually equivalent to apo, “away from,” e.g., 2 Cor. 1:10, “who delivered us out of so great a death, and will deliver”; since death was not actually experienced, but was impending, ek here does not signify “out of the midst of” In Acts 12:7 it is used in the statement “his chains fell off from his hands.” In Matt. 17:9 it is used of descending from a mountain, not “out of”; “we are not to suppose that they had been in a cave” (Dr. A. T. Robertson, Gram. of the Greek NT). In 1 Thess. 1:10, “even Jesus, which delivereth us from the wrath to come,” RV, the question whether ek here means “out of the midst of” or “away from,” is to be determined by some statement of Scripture where the subject is specifically mentioned; this is provided, e.g., in 5:9, the context of which makes clear that believers are to be delivered from (not “out of”) the divine wrath to be executed on the nations at the end of the present age. (2) For the phrase ek mesou, “out of the way,” see MIDST, Note (1), (e). (3) In Luke 8:4, KJV, the phrase kata polin is translated “out of every city” (RV, “of every city,” to be taken in connection with “they”). (4) Ektos, “outside of,” is translated “out of” in 2 Cor. 12:2; in 12:3 the best mss. have choris, “apart from,” RV (KJV, ektos, “out of”). (4) For other prepositions, and adverbs, see † p. 1.

OUTER

exoteros (ἐξώτερος, 1857), the comparative degree of exo, “without,” is used of the “outer” darkness, Matt. 8:12; 22:13; 25:30.¶

OUTGO

proerchomai (προέρχομαι, 4281), “to go forward, go in advance, outgo,” is used of time in Mark 6:33, “outwent,” of the people who in their eagerness reached a spot earlier than Christ and His disciples. See GO, No. 17.

OUTRUN

protrecho (προτρέχω, 4390), primarily, “to run forward” (pro, “forward” or “before,” trecho, “to run”), is used with tachion, “more quickly,” in John 20:4, “outran,” RV (KJV, “did outrun”), lit., “ran forward more quickly”; in Luke 19:4, “he ran on before,” RV (KJV, “ran before”). See RUN.¶ In the Sept., 1 Sam. 8:11; in some texts, Job 41:13, “destruction runneth before him,” in the Eng. versions, v. 22.¶

OUTSIDE

1. exothēn (ἐξωθεν, 1855), an adverb formed from exo, “without,” properly signifies “from without,” Mark 7:18 (in v. 15 it is used as a preposition); with the article it is equivalent to a noun, “the outside,” Matt. 23:25 (for v. 27, see OUTWARD, No. 2); Luke 11:39; in v. 40, RV, “the outside” (KJV, “that which is without”). See OUTWARD, OUTWARDLY, WITHOUT.

2. ektos (ἐκτός, 1622) is once used with the article, “the outside,” Matt. 23:26. See EXCEPT, No. 1.

OUTWARD, OUTWARDLY

1. exo (ἐξω, 1854), “without,” is used metaphorically of the physical frame, “the outward man,” 2 Cor. 4:16. See WITHOUT.

2. exothēn (ἐξωθεν, 1855) is translated “outward” in Matt. 23:27 (RV, “outwardly”); it is used with the article, adjectivally, in 1 Pet. 3:3, of “outward” adorning. See OUTSIDE, No. 1.

Notes: (1) The phrase en to phanero, lit., “in the open” (“manifest”), is rendered “outwardly” in Rom. 2:28. (2) For “with outward show,” KJV, marg., Luke 17:20, see OBSERVATION. (3) For the KJV, of 2 Cor. 10:7, “outward appearance,” see FACE, No. 1.

OVEN

klibanos (κλίβανος, 2823) is mentioned in Matt. 6:30 and Luke 12:28. The form of “oven” commonly in use in the east indicates the kind in use as mentioned in Scripture. A hole is sunk in the ground about 3 feet deep and somewhat less in diameter. The walls are plastered with cement. A fire is kindled inside, the fuel being grass, or dry twigs, which heat the oven rapidly and blacken it with smoke and soot (see Lam. 5:10). When sufficiently heated the surface is wiped, and the dough is molded into broad thin loaves, placed one at a time on the wall of the “oven” to fit its concave inner circle. The baking takes a few seconds. Such ovens are usually outside the home, and often the same “oven” serves for several families (Lev. 26:26). An “oven” of this sort is doubtless referred to in Ex. 8:3 (see Hastings, Bib. Dic.).¶

For OVER, OVER AGAINST see Note †, p. 1

OVER (to be, to have)

1. proistemi (προΐστημι, 4291), lit., “to stand before,” hence “to lead, to direct, attend to,” is translated “rule,” with reference to the family, in 1 Tim. 3:4-5, 12; with reference to the church, in Rom. 12:8; 1 Thess. 5:12, “are over;” 1 Tim. 5:17, In Titus 3:8, 14, it signifies “to maintain.” See MAINTAIN.¶

2. pleonazo (πλεονάζω, 4121), used intransitively, signifies “to abound, to superabound”; in 2 Cor. 8:15 it is med with the negative ou, “had nothing over,” lit., “had not more” (pleon, the comparative degree of polus, “much”).

For OVERBOARD, Acts 27:18, RV, see FREIGHT, and, in 27:43, RV, see CAST, No. 11.

OVERCHARGE

1. bareo (βαρέω, 916), or baruno, is rendered “overcharged” in Luke 21:34. See BURDEN, B, No. 1.

2. epibareo (ἐπιβαρέω, 1912) is rendered “overcharge” in 2 Cor. 2:5, KJV. See BURDEN, B, No. 2, and PRESS.

OVERCOME

1. nikao (νικάω, 3528), is used (a) of God, Rom. 3:4 (a law term), RV, “mightest prevail”; (b) of Christ, John 16:33; Rev. 3:21; 5:5; 17:14; (c) of His followers, Rom. 12:21 (2nd part); 1 John 2:13-14; 4:4; 5:4-5; Rev. 2:7, 11, 17, 26; 3:5, 12, 21; 12:11; 15:2; 21:7; (d) of faith, 1 John 5:4; (e) of evil (passive voice), Rom. 12:21; (f) of predicted human potentates, Rev. 6:2; 11:7; 13:7.¶

2. hettaomai (ἡττάω, 2274), “to be made inferior, be enslaved,” is rendered “is (are) overcome,” in 2 Pet. 2:19-20. See INFERIOR.

3. katakuriueo (κατακυριεύω, 2634) is translated “overcome” in Acts 19:16; see MASTER, B.

OVERFLOW, OVERFLOWING

A. Verbs.

1. hyperperisseuo (ὑπερπερισσεύω, 5248), “to abound more exceedingly,” Rom. 5:20, is med in the middle voice in 2 Cor. 7:4, RV, “I overflow (with joy),” KJV, “I am exceeding (joyful).” See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 2.

2. katakluzo (κατακλύζω, 2626), “to inundate, deluge” (kata, “down,” kluzo, “to wash” or “dash over,” said, e.g., of the sea), is used in the passive voice in 2 Pet. 3:6, of the Flood.¶

B. Noun.

perisseia (περισσεία, 4050) is translated “overflowing” in Jas. 1:21, RV. See ABUNDANCE, A, No. 2.

OVERLAY

perikalupto (περικαλύπτω, 4028) denotes “to cover around, cover up or over”; it is translated “overlaid” in Heb. 9:4. See BLINDFOLD, COVER.

OVERLOOK

hupereidon (ὑπερίδω, 5237), “to overlook” (an aorist form), is used in Acts 17:30, RV (KJV, “winked at”), i.e., God bore with them without interposing by way of punishment, though the debasing tendencies of idolatry necessarily developed themselves.¶

OVERMUCH

perissoteros (περισσότερος, 4055), the comparative degree of perissos, “abundant,” is translated “overmuch” in 2 Cor. 2:7. See ABUNDANCE, C, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 10:14, RV, the verb huperekteino, “to stretch out over,” is translated “we stretch (not ourselves) overmuch” (KJV, “... beyond our measure”). See STRETCH.¶ (2) In 2 Cor. 12:7 (twice), RV, huperairo, in the middle voice, “to uplift oneself,” is translated “I should (not) be exalted overmuch,” KJV, “... above measure.” See EXALT.

OVERRIPE

xeraino (ξηραίνω, 3583) denotes “to dry up, wither,” translated in Rev. 14:15, “overripe,” RV (KJV, “ripe”), said figuratively of the harvest of the earth, symbolizing the condition of the world, political, especially connected with Israel (Joel 3:9, 14), and religious, comprehensive of the whole scene of Christendom (Matt. 13:38). See DRY.

For OVERSEER see BISHOP

OVERSHADOW

1. episkiazo (ἐπισκιάζω, 1982), “to throw a shadow upon” (epi, “over,” skia, “a shadow”), “to overshadow,” is used (a) of the bright cloud at the Transfiguration, Matt. 17:5; Mark 9:7; Luke 9:34; (b) metaphorically of the power of “the Most High” upon the Virgin Mary, Luke 1:35; (c) of the apostle Peter’s shadow upon the sick, Acts 5:15.¶

2. kataskiazo (κατασκιάζω, 2683), lit., “to shadow down,” is used of the “overshadowing” (RV) of the cherubim of glory above the mercy seat, Heb. 9:5 (KJV, “shadowing”).¶

OVERSIGHT (exercise, take)

episkopeo (ἐπισκοπέω, 1983), lit., “to look upon” (epi, “upon,” skopeo, “to look at, contemplate”), is found in 1 Pet. 5:2 (some ancient authorities omit it), “exercising the oversight,” RV (KJV, “taking ...”); “exercising” is the right rendering; the word does not imply the entrance upon such responsibility, but the fulfillment of it. It is not a matter of assuming a position, but of the discharge of the duties. The word is found elsewhere in Heb. 12:15, “looking carefully,” RV. See LOOK.¶ Cf. episkope in 1 Tim. 3:1 (see BISHOP, No. 2).

OVERTAKE

1. katalambano (καταλαμβάνω, 2638), “to lay hold of,” has the significance of “overtaking,” metaphorically, in John 12:35 (RV, “overtake,” KJV, “come upon”) and 1 Thess. 5:4. See APPREHEND, No. 1.

2. prolambano (προλαμβάνω, 4301), “to anticipate” (pro, “before,” lambano, “to take”), is used of the act of Mary, in Mark 14:8 [see COME, Note (2)]; of forestalling the less favored at a social meal, 1 Cor. 11:21; of being “overtaken” in any trespass, Gal. 6:1, where the meaning is not that of detecting a person in the act, but of his being caught by the trespass, through his being off his guard (see 5:21 and contrast the premeditated practice of evil in 5:26). The modern Greek version is “even if a man, through lack of circumspection, should fall into any sin.” See TAKE.¶

OVERTHROW (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

katastrophe (καταστροφή, 2692), lit., “a turning down” (kata, “down,” strophe, “a turning”; Eng., “catastrophe”), is used (a) literally, 2 Pet. 2:6; (b) metaphorically, 2 Tim. 2:14 “subverting,” i.e., the “overthrowing” of faith.¶ Cf. kathairesis, “a pulling down,” 2 Cor. 10:4, 8; 13:10.¶

B. Verbs.

1. katastrepho (καταστρέφω, 2690), akin to A, lit. and primarily, “to turn down” or “turn over,” as, e.g., the soil, denotes to “overturn, overthrow,” Matt. 21:12; Mark 11:15; in Acts 15:16, passive voice, “ruins,” lit., “the overthrown (things) of it” (some mss. have kataskapto, “to dig down”). See RUIN.¶

2. anastrepho (ἀναστρέφω, 390) is found in some mss. in John 2:15 (see No. 3). See ABIDE, No. 8.

3. anatrepo (ἀνατρέπω, 396), lit., “to turn up or over” (ana, “up,” trepo, “to turn”), “to upset,” is used (a) literally, in the most authentic mss., in John 2:15 (see No. 2); (b) metaphorically, in 2 Tim. 2:18, “overthrow (the faith of some);” in Titus 1:11, RV, “overthrow (whole homes),” KJV, “subvert . . .,” i.e., households. Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) give an apt illustration from a 2nd cent. papyrus, of the complete upsetting of a family by the riotous conduct of a member.¶

4. kataluo (καταλύω, 2647), lit., “to loosen down,” signifies “to overthrow” in Acts 5:38, RV, “it will be overthrown” (KJV, “it will come to nought”); Rom. 14:20, RV, “overthrow” (KJV, “destroy”). See DESTROY.

5. katastronnumi (καταλαμβάνω, 2638), primarily, “to strew” or “spread over” (kata, “down,” stronnumi, or stronnuo, “to spread”), then, “to overthrow,” has this meaning in 1 Cor. 10:5, “they were overthrown.”¶ In the Sept., Num. 14:16; Job 12:23.¶

OWE

A. Verbs.

1. opheilo (ὀφείλω, 3784), “to owe, to be a debtor” (in the passive voice, “to be owed, to be due”), is translated by the verb “to owe” in Matt. 18:28 (twice); Luke 7:41; 16:5, 7; Rom. 13:8; in 15:27, RV, “they (gentile converts) owe it” (KJV, “it is their duty”); Philem. 18. See BEHOVE, DEBT, DUE, DUTY, GUILTY, INDEBTED, MUST, NEED, OUGHT.

2. prosopheilo (προσοφείλω, 4359), “to owe besides” (pros, “in addition,” and No. 1), is used in Philem. 19, “thou owest (to me even thine own self) besides,” i.e., “thou owest me already as much as Onesimus” debt, and in addition even thyself” (not “thou owest me much more”).

B. Noun.

opheiletes (ὀφειλέτης, 3781), “a debtor” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “which owed” in Matt. 18:24, lit., “a debtor (of ten thousand talents).” See DEBTOR.

OWN (Adjective)

Notes: (1) Gnesios, primarily, “lawfully begotten,” and hence “true, genuine,” is translated “own” in the KJV of 1 Tim. 1:2 and Titus 1:4 (RV, “true”). See SINCERITY, TRUE. (2) In Acts 5:4, “was it not thine own?” is, lit., “did it not remain (meno) to thee?” (3) In Jude 6 (1st part), KJV, heauton, “of themselves,” “their own” (RV), is rendered “their”; in the 2nd part, RV, idios, one’s own, is translated “their proper” (KJV, “their own”). (4) In Gal. 1:14, RV, sunelikiotes, is rendered “of mine own age” (KJV, “my equals”; marg., “equals in years”).¶ (5) For “its own” in 1 Tim. 2:6, RV, see DUE, A. (6) For association with other words see ACCORD, BUSINESS, COMPANY, CONCEITS, COUNTRY.

OWNER

1. kurios (κύριος, 2962), “one having power” (kuros) or “authority, a lord, master,” signifies “an owner” in Luke 19:33. See LORD, MASTER, SIR.

2. naukleros (ναύκληρος, 3490), “a ship owner” (naus, “a ship,” kleros, “a lot”), “a shipmaster,” occurs in Acts 27:11, “(the) owner of the ship.”¶

OWNETH

Note: In Acts 21:11, “that owneth this girdle,” is lit., “whose is (esti) this girdle.”

OX

1. bous (βοῦς, 1016) denotes an “ox” or “a cow,” Luke 13:15; 14:5, 19; John 2:14-15; 1 Cor. 9:9 (twice); 1 Tim. 5:18.¶

2. tauros (ταῦρος, 5022), Latin taurus, is translated “oxen” in Matt. 22:4 and Acts 14:13; “bulls” in Heb. 9:13 and 10:4.¶

PAIN (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. ponos (πόνος, 4192) is translated “pain” in Rev. 16:10; 21:4; “pains” in 16:11. See LABOR.

2. odin (ὄδιν, 5604), “a birth pang, travail pain,” is rendered “travail,” metaphorically, in Matt. 24:8 and Mark 13:8, RV (KJV, “sorrows”); by way of comparison, in 1 Thess. 5:3; translated “pains (of death),” Acts 2:24 (RV, “pangs”). See SORROW, TRAVAIL.¶ Cf. odino, “to travail in birth.”

B. Verb.

bosanizo (βασανίζω, 928) primarily signifies “to rub on the touchstone, to put to the test” (from basanos, “a touchstone,” a dark stone used in testing metals); hence, “to examine by torture,” and, in general, “to distress”; in Rev. 12:2, “in pain,” RV (KJV, “pained”), in connection with parturition. See TORMENT. (In the Sept., 1 Sam. 5:3.¶).

Note: For Rom. 8:22, “travaileth in pain together,” see TRAVAIL.

For PAINFULNESS (2 Cor. 11:27, KJV) see TRAVAIL

PAIR

zeugos (ζεύγος, 2201), “a yoke” (akin to zeugnumi, “to yoke”), is used (a) of beasts, Luke 14:19; (b) of a pair of anything; in Luke 2:24, of turtledoves. See YOKE.¶

Note: In Rev. 6:5, KJV, zugos, a yoke (akin to zeugos), is translated “a pair of balances” (RV, “a balance”). See BALANCE, YOKE.

PALACE

1. aule (αὐλή, 833), “a court, dwelling, palace”: see COURT.

2. praitorion (πραιτώριον, 4232) signified originally “a general’s (praetor’s) tent.” Then it was applied to “the council of army officers”; then to “the official residence of the governor of a province”; finally, to “the imperial bodyguard.” In the KJV the word appears only once, Mark 15:16, “the hall, called Praetorium” (RV, “within the court which is the Praetorium,” marg., “palace”); in the Greek of the NT it also occurs in Matt. 27:27, KJV, “the common hall,” marg., “the governor’s house”; RV, “palace,” see marg.; John 18:28 (twice), KJV, “the hall of judgment”; and “judgment hall,” marg., “Pilate’s house,” RV, “palace”; 18:33 and 19:9, KJV, “judgment hall,” RV, “palace,” see marg.; so in Acts 23:35; in Phil. 1:13, KJV, “in all the palace,” marg., “Caesar’s court,” RV, “throughout the whole praetorian guard,” marg., “in the whole Praetorium.”

“In the Gospels the term denotes the official residence in Jerusalem of the Roman governor, and the various translations of it in our versions arose from a desire either to indicate the special purpose for which that residence was used on the occasion in question, or to explain what particular building was intended. But whatever building the governor occupied was the Praetorium. It is most probable that in Jerusalem he resided in the well-known palace of Herod... Pilate's residence has been identified with the castle of Antonia, which was occupied by the regular garrison. The probability is that it was the same as Herod's palace. Herod's palace in Caesarea was used as the Praetorium there, and the expression in Acts 23:35, marg., 'Herod's praetorium,' is abbreviated from 'the praetorium of Herod's palace.'" (Hastings Bib. Dic.).

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

In Phil. 1:13, marg., "the whole Praetorium" has been variously explained. It has been spoken of as "the palace," in connection with 4:22, where allusion is made to believers who belong to Caesar's household. Others have understood it of the barracks of the "praetorian" guard, but Lightfoot shows that this use of the word cannot be established, neither can it be regarded as referring to the barracks of the "palace" guard. The phrase "and to all the rest" in 1:13 indicates that persons are meant. Mommsen, followed by Ramsay (St. Paul the Traveller, p. 357) regards it as improbable that the apostle was committed to the "praetorian" guard and holds the view that Julius the centurion, who brought Paul to Rome, belonged to a corps drafted from legions in the provinces, whose duty it was to supervise the corn supply and perform police service, and that Julius probably delivered his prisoners to the commander of his corps. Eventually Paul's case came before the praetorian council, which is the "praetorium" alluded to by the apostle, and the phrase "to all the rest" refers to the audience of the trial.¶

Note: Some scholars, believing that this epistle was written during an Ephesian imprisonment, take the "Praetorium" here to be the residence in Ephesus of the proconsul of the province of Asia, and "Caesar's household" to be the local imperial civil service (Deissmann etc.).

PALE

chloros (χλωρός, 5515), "pale green," is translated "pale" (of a horse) in Rev. 6:8, symbolizing death. See GREEN.

PALM (of the hand)

Note: For rhapizo, "to strike with a rod or with the palm of the hand," Matt. 26:67 (cf. 5:39), see SMITE.¶ For rhapisma, "a blow," with didomi, "to give," translated "did strike (and, struck) ... with the palm of his hand" (KJV, in Mark 14:65; John 18:22), see BLOW.

PALM (palm tree)

phoinix (φοῖνιξ, 5404) denotes "the date palm"; it is used of "palm" trees in John 12:13, from which branches were taken; of the branches themselves in Rev. 7:9.¶ The "palm" gave its name to Phoenicia and to Phoenix in Crete, Acts 27:12, RV. Jericho was the city of "palm trees," Deut. 34:3; Judg. 1:16; 3:13; 2 Chron. 28:15. They were plentiful there in the time of Christ.

PALSY (sick of)

A. Adjective.

paralutikos (παρालυτικός, 3885), "paralytic, sick of the palsy," is found in Matt. 4:24 (RV, "palsied"); 8:6; 9:2 (twice), 6; Mark 2:3, 4, 5, 9, 10; in some mss. Luke 5:24 (see B).¶

B. Verb

paraluo (παράλῳ, 3886), lit., “to loose from the side,” hence, “to set free,” is used in the passive voice of “being enfeebled by a paralytic stroke, palsied,” Luke 5:18, RV, “palsied” (KJV, “taken with a palsy”); 5:24 (ditto), in the best mss.; Acts 8:7 (ditto); 9:33, RV, “he was palsied” (KJV, “was sick of the palsy”); Heb. 12:12, RV, “palsied (knees),” KJV, “feeble.” See FEEBLE.¶

For PANGS, Acts 2:24, RV, see PAIN

For PAPS see BREAST

PAPER

chartes (χάρτης, 5489), “a sheet of paper made of strips of papyrus” (whence Eng., “paper”), Eng., “chart,” “charter,” etc.; the word is used in 2 John 12.¶ The papyrus reed grew in ancient times in great profusion in the Nile and was used as a material for writing. From Egypt its use spread to other countries and it was the universal material for writing in general in Greece and Italy during the most flourishing periods of their literature.

The pith of the stem of the plant was cut into thin strips, placed side by side to form a sheath. Another layer was laid upon this at right angles to it. The two layers were united by moisture and pressure and frequently with the addition of glue. The sheets, after being dried and polished, were ready for use. Normally, the writing is on that side of the papyrus on which the fibers lie horizontally, parallel to the length of the roll, but where the material was scarce the writer used the other side also (cf. Rev. 5:1). Papyrus continued to be used until the seventh cent., A.D., when the conquest of Egypt by the Arabs led to the disuse of the material for literary purposes and the use of vellum till the 12th century.

PARABLE

1. parabole (παραβολή, 3850) lit. denotes “a placing beside” (akin to paraballo, “to throw” or “lay beside, to compare”). It signifies “a placing of one thing beside another” with a view to comparison (some consider that the thought of comparison is not necessarily contained in the word). In the NT it is found outside the gospels, only in Heb. 9:9 and 11:19. It is generally used of a somewhat lengthy utterance or narrative drawn from nature or human circumstances, the object of which is to set forth a spiritual lesson, e.g., those in Matt. 13 and Synoptic parallels; sometimes it is used of a short saying or proverb, e.g., Matt. 15:15; Mark 3:23; 7:17; Luke 4:23; 5:36; 6:39. It is the lesson that is of value; the hearer must catch the analogy if he is to be instructed (this is true also of a proverb). Such a narrative or saying, dealing with earthly things with a spiritual meaning, is distinct from a fable, which attributes to things what does not belong to them in nature.

Christ’s “parables” most frequently convey truths connected with the subject of the kingdom of God. His withholding the meaning from His hearers as He did from the multitudes, Matt. 13:34, was a divine judgment upon the unworthy.

Two dangers are to be avoided in seeking to interpret the “parables” in Scripture, that of ignoring the important features, and that of trying to make all the details mean something.

2. paroimia (παροιμία, 3942) denotes “a wayside saying” (from paroimos, “by the way”), “a byword,” “maxim,” or “problem,” 2 Pet. 2:22. The word is sometimes spoken of as a “parable,” John 10:6, i.e., a figurative discourse (RV marg., “proverb”); see also 16:25, 29, where the word is rendered “proverbs” (marg. “parables”) and “proverb.”¶

PARADISE

paradeisos (παράδεισος, 3857) is an Oriental word, first used by the historian Xenophon, denoting “the parks of Persian kings and nobles.” It is of Persian origin (Old Pers. pairidaeza, akin to Gk. peri, “around,” and teichos, “a wall”) whence it passed into Greek. See the Sept., e.g., in Neh. 2:8; Eccl. 2:5; Song of Sol. 4:13. The Sept. translators used it of the garden of Eden, Gen. 2:8, and in other respects, e.g., Num. 24:6; Isa. 1:30; Jer. 29:5; Ezek. 31:8-9.

In Luke 23:43, the promise of the Lord to the repentant robber was fulfilled the same day; Christ, at His death, having committed His spirit to the Father, went in spirit immediately into Heaven itself, the dwelling place of God (the Lord’s mention of the place as “paradise” must have been a great comfort to the malefactor; to the oriental mind it expressed the sum total of blessedness). Thither the apostle Paul was caught up, 2 Cor. 12:4, spoken of as “the third heaven” (v. 3 does not introduce a different vision), beyond the heavens of the natural creation (see Heb. 4:14, RV, with reference to the Ascension). The same region is mentioned in Rev. 2:7, where the “tree of life,” the figurative antitype of that in Eden, held out to the overcomer, is spoken of as being in “the Paradise of God” (RV), marg., “garden,” as in Gen. 2:8.¶

For PARCEL see GROUND, No. 4

PARCHMENT

membrana (μεμβράνα, 3200) is a Latin word, properly an adjective, from membrum, “a limb,” but denoting “skin, parchment.” The Eng. word “parchment” is a form of pergamena, an adjective signifying “of Pergamum,” the city in Asia Minor where “parchment” was either invented or brought into use. The word membrana is found in 2 Tim. 4:13, where Timothy is asked to bring to the apostle “the books, especially the parchments.” The writing material was prepared from the skin of the sheep or goat. The skins were first soaked in lime for the purpose of removing the hair, and then shaved, washed, dried, stretched and ground or smoothed with fine chalk or lime and pumice stone. The finest kind is called “vellum,” and is made from the skins of calves or kids.¶

PARENTS

1. goneus (γονεύς, 1118), “a begetter, a father” (akin to ginomai, “to come into being, become”), is used in the plural in the NT, Matt. 10:21; Mark 13:12; six times in Luke (in Luke 2:43, RV, “His parents,” KJV, “Joseph and His mother”); six in John; elsewhere, Rom. 1:30; 2 Cor. 12:14 (twice); Eph. 6:1; Col. 3:20; 2 Tim. 3:2.¶

2. progonos (πρόγονος, 4269), an adjective signifying “born before” (pro, before, and ginomai, see No. 1), is used as a noun, in the plural, (a) of ancestors, “forefathers,” 2 Tim. 1:3; (b) of living “parents,” 1 Tim. 5:4. See FOREFATHER.¶

3. pater (πατήρ, 3962), “a father,” is used in Heb. 11:23, in the plural, of both father and mother, the “parents” of Moses. See FATHER.

PART (Noun, a portion; Verb, to give or divide, partake)

A. Nouns.

1. meros (μέρος, 3313) denotes (a) “a part, portion,” of the whole, e.g., John 13:8; Rev. 20:6; 22:19; hence, “a lot” or “destiny,” e.g., Rev. 21:8; in Matt. 24:51 and Luke 12:46, “portion”; (b) “a part” as opposite to the whole, e.g., Luke 11:36; John 19:23; 21:6, “side”; Acts 5:2; 23:6; Eph. 4:16; Rev. 16:19; a party, Acts 23:9; the divisions of a province, e.g., Matt. 2:22; Acts 2:10; the regions belonging to a city, e.g., Matt. 15:21, RV, “parts” (KJV, “coasts”); 16:13 (ditto); Mark 8:10, KJV and RV, “parts”; “the lower parts of the earth,” Eph. 4:9; this phrase means the regions beneath the earth (see LOWER, A, No. 1); (c) “a class,” or “category” (with en, in, “in respect of”), Col. 2:16; “in this respect,” 2 Cor. 3:10; 9:3, RV (KJV, “in this behalf”). See BEHALF, COAST, CRAFT, PIECE, PORTION, RESPECT.

2. meris (μερίς, 3310) denotes (a) “a part” or “portion,” Luke 10:42; Acts 8:21; 2 Cor. 6:15 (RV, “portion”); in Col. 1:12, “partakers,” lit., “unto the part of”; (b) “a district” or “division,” Acts 16:12, RV, “district” (KJV, “part”). See DISTRICT, PARTAKER.¶

3. klima (κλίμα, 2824), primarily “an incline, slope” (Eng., “clime, climate”), is used of “a region,” Rom. 15:23, KJV, “parts” (RV, “regions”); 2 Cor. 11:10, KJV and RV, “regions”; Gal. 1:21 (ditto). See REGION.¶

4. eschatos (ἔσχατος, 2078), an adjective signifying “last, utmost, extreme,” is often used as a noun; in Acts 13:47, RV, “uttermost part” (KJV, “ends”). See END, LAST, LOWEST, UTTERMOST.

5. topos (τόπος, 5117), “a place,” is translated “parts” in Acts 16:3, RV (KJV, “quarters”). See PLACE, etc.

6. The plural of the article, followed first by the particle men, “indeed,” and then by de, “but,” is translated “part ... and part” in Acts 14:4.

7. peras (πέρας, 4009), “an end, boundary,” is translated “utmost parts” in the KJV of Matt. 12:42 and Luke 11:31. See END, A, No. 3.

Notes: (1) Meros is used with certain prepositions in adverbial phrases, (a) with ana, used distributively, 1 Cor. 14:27, “in turn,” RV, KJV, “by course”; (b) with kata, “according to,” Heb. 9:5, RV, “severally” (KJV, “particularly”); (c) with apo, “from,” “in part,” Rom. 11:25; 2 Cor. 1:14; 2:5 (see ALSO MEASURE); (d) with ek, “from,” 1 Cor. 13:9, 10, 12; in 1 Cor. 12:27, RV, “severally,” marg., “each in his part” (KJV, “in particular”). (2) In Mark 4:38 and Acts 27:41, KJV, prumna, “a stern”, is translated “hinder part” (RV, “stern”). (3) In Acts 1:17, KJV, kleros, “a lot,” is translated “part” (RV, “portion”; marg., “lot”), of that portion allotted to Judas in the ministry of the Twelve. See INHERITANCE, LOT. (4) In Acts 1:25, where the best mss. have topos, “a place,” RV, “(to take) the place (in this ministry),” some texts have kleros, which the KJV translates “part.” (5) In Mark 9:40, KJV, the preposition huper, “on behalf of,” is translated “on (our) part,” RV, “for (us).” (6) In 1 Pet. 4:14, KJV, “on (their) part,” “on (your) part,” represents the preposition kata, “according to,” followed by the personal pronouns; the statements are not found in the most authentic mss. (7) In Acts 9:32, KJV, the phrase dia panton, lit., “through all,” is rendered “throughout all quarters” (RV, “throughout all parts”). (8) In 1 Cor. 12:23, the RV has “parts” for “members”; KJV and RV have “parts” in the end of the verse; see also v. 24. (9) In 2 Cor. 10:16, the RV translates the neuter plural of the article “the parts” (KJV, “the regions”). (10) For “inward part” see INWARD.

B. Verbs.

1. merizo (μερίζω, 3307), “to divide, to distribute” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “divided (KJV, gave) a ... part” in Heb. 7:2, RV. See DEAL.

2. metecho (μετέχω, 3348), “to partake of, share in,” Heb. 2:14: see PARTAKE.

3. paraginomai (παραγίνομαι, 3854), “to be beside, support” (para, “beside,” ginomai, “to become”), is rendered “took (my) part” in 2 Tim. 4:16 (KJV, “stood with”); some mss. have sunparaginomai. See COME, No. 13, GO, PRESENT (to be).

Notes: (1) In Rev. 6:8, tetartos, “a fourth,” is rendered “the fourth part.” (2) See GREATER, HINDER, INWARD, MORE, TENTH, THIRD, UTMOST, UTMOST.

PART (Verb, to separate)

1. diamerizo (διαμερίζω, 1266), “to part among, to distribute,” is translated by the verb “to part” (a) in the middle voice, with reference to the Lord’s garments, Matt. 27:35, 1st part (in some mss., 2nd part); Mark 15:24; Luke 23:34; John 19:24; (b) in the active voice, of “the proceeds of the sale of possessions and goods,” Acts 2:45; (c) in the passive voice in Acts 2:3, of the “parting asunder” (RV) of tongues like fire (KJV, “cloven”). See CLOVEN, DIVIDE, No. 7.

2. diistemi (διίστημι, 1339), “to set apart, separate” (dia, “apart,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), is used in the active voice in Luke 24:51, RV, “He parted (from them),” KJV, “was parted.” See GO, SPACE.

3. apospao (ἀποσπάω, 645), “to draw off” or “tear away,” is used in the passive voice in Luke 22:41, RV, “He was parted” (KJV, “was withdrawn”), lit. “He was torn away,” indicating the reluctance with which Christ parted from the loving sympathy of the disciples. Moulton and Milligan suggest that the ordinary use of the verb does not encourage this stronger meaning, but since the simpler meaning is not found in the NT, except in Acts 21:1, and since the idea of withdrawal is expressed in Matt. by anachoreo, Luke may have used apospao here in the stronger sense. See DRAW, A, No. 6.

4. chorizo (χωρίζω, 5563), in Philem. 15, RV, “parted”: see DEPART, No. 13.

5. apochorizo (ἀποχωρίζω, 673), “to part from,” Acts 15:39, RV; see DEPART, No. 14.

PARTAKE, PARTAKER

A. Nouns.

1. koinonos (κοινωνός, 2844), an adjective, signifying “having in common” (koinos, “common”), is used as a noun, denoting “a companion, partner, partaker,” translated “partakers” in Matt. 23:30; 1 Cor. 10:18, KJV (see COMMUNION, B); 2 Cor. 1:7; Heb. 10:33, RV (see COMPANION, No. 2); 2 Pet. 1:4; “partaker” in 1 Pet. 5:1. See PARTNER.

2. sunkoinonos (συγκοινωνός, 4791) denotes “partaking jointly with” (sun, and No. 1), Rom. 11:17, RV, “(didst become) partaker with them” (KJV, “partakest”); 1 Cor. 9:23, RV, “a joint partaker,” i.e., with the gospel, as cooperating in its activity; the KJV misplaces the “with” by attaching it to the superfluous italicized pronoun “you”; Phil. 1:7, “partakers with (me of grace),” RV, and KJV marg.; not as KJV text, “partakers (of my grace)”; Rev. 1:9, “partaker with (you in the tribulation, etc.),” KJV, “companion.” See COMPANION.¶

3. metochos (μέτοχος, 3353): see FELLOW, No. 3, PARTNER.

4. summetochos (συμμέτοχος, 4830), “partaking together with” (sun, “with,” and No. 3), is used as a noun, a joint partaker, Eph. 3:6, RV, “fellow partakers” (KJV, “partakers”); in 5:7, RV and KJV, “partakers.”¶

Notes: (1) For antilambano, “to partake of,” rendered “partakers” in 1 Tim. 6:2, KJV, see B, No. 4. (2) For the phrase “to be partakers,” Col. 1:12, see PART, A, No. 2.

B. Verbs.

1. koinoneo (κοινωνέω, 2841), “to have a share of, to share with, take part in” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “to be partaker of” in 1 Tim. 5:22; Heb. 2:14 (1st part), KJV, “are partakers of,” RV, “are sharers in” (for the 2nd part see No. 3); 1 Pet. 4:13; 2 John 11, RV, “partaketh in” (KJV, “is partaker of”); in the passive voice in Rom. 15:27. See COMMUNICATE, DISTRIBUTE.

2. sunkoinoneo (συγκοινωνέω, 4790): see FELLOWSHIP, B, No. 2.

3. metecho (μετέχω, 3348), “to partake of, share in” (meta, “with,” echo, “to have”), akin to A, No. 3, is translated “of partaking” in 1 Cor. 9:10, RV (KJV, “be partaker of”); “partake of” in 9:12, RV (KJV, “be partakers of”); so in 10:17, 21: in v. 30 “partake”; in Heb. 2:14, the KJV “took part of” is awkward; Christ “partook of” flesh and blood, RV; cf. No. 1 in this verse; in Heb. 5:13, metaphorically, of receiving elementary spiritual teaching, RV, “partaketh of (milk),” KJV, “useth”; in Heb. 7:13, it is said of Christ (the antitype of Melchizedek) as “belonging to” (so RV) or “partaking of” (RV marg.) another tribe than that of Levi (KJV, “pertaineth to”). See PERTAIN, USE.¶ See PARTNER, Note.

4. antilambano (ἀντιλαμβάνομαι, 482), “to take hold of, to lay hold of” something before one, has the meaning “to partake of” in 1 Tim. 6:2, RV, “partake of,” marg., “lay hold of,” KJV, “are ... partakers of” (anti, “in return for,” lambano, “to take or receive”); the benefit mentioned as “partaken” of by the masters would seem to be the improved quality of the service rendered; the benefit of redemption is not in view here. See HELP.

5. metalambano (μεταλαμβάνω, 3335), “to have, or get, a share of,” is translated “to be partaker (or partakers) of” in 2 Tim. 2:6 and Heb. 12:10. See EAT, HAVE, RECEIVE, TAKE.

6. summerizo (συμμερίζομαι, 4829), primarily, “to distribute in shares” (sun, “with,” meros, “a part”), in the middle voice, “to have a share in,” is used in 1 Cor. 9:13, KJV, “are partakers with (the altar),” RV, “have their portion with,” i.e., they feed with others on that which, having been sacrificed, has been placed upon an altar; so the believer feeds upon Christ (who is the altar in Heb. 13:10).¶

PARTIAL, PARTIALITY

A. Verb.

diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252), “to separate, distinguish, discern, judge, decide” (dia, “asunder,” krino, “to judge”), also came to mean “to be divided in one’s mind, to hesitate, doubt,” and had this significance in Hellenistic Greek (though not so found in the Sept.). For the KJV, “are ye (not) partial” in Jas. 2:4, see DIVIDE, No. 4. “ ‘This meaning seems to have had its beginning in near proximity to Christianity.’ It arises very naturally out of the general sense of making distinctions” (Moulton and Milligan).

B. Noun.

prosklisis (πρόσκλησις, 4346) denotes “inclination” (pros, “towards,” klino, “to lean”); it is used with kata in 1 Tim. 5:21, lit., “according to partiality.”¶

C. Adjective.

adiakritos (ἀδιάκριτος, 87) primarily signifies “not to be parted” (a, negative, and an adjectival form akin to A), hence, “without uncertainty,” or “indecision,” Jas. 3:17, KJV, “without partiality” (marg. “wrangling”), RV, “without variance” (marg., “Or, doubtfulness Or, partiality”). See VARIANCE.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:1.¶

For PARTICULAR and PARTICULARLY see EVERY, No. 3, SEVERALLY

Note: In Acts 21:19, for the KJV “particularly” the RV has “one by one,” translating the phrase. lit., “according to each one.”

For PARTING see HIGHWAY

PARTITION

phragmos (φραγμός, 5418), primarily “a fencing” in (akin to phrasso, “to fence in, stop, close”), is used metaphorically in Eph. 2:14, of “the middle wall of partition”; “the partition” is expegetical of “the middle wall,” namely, the “partition” between Jew and Gentile. J. A. Robinson suggests that Paul had in mind the barrier between the outer and inner courts of the Temple, notices fixed to which warned Gentiles not to proceed further on pain of death (see Josephus, Antiq. xv. 11. 5; B. J. v. 5. 2; vi. 2. 4; cf. Acts 21:29). See HEDGE.

PARTLY

Notes: (1) In the statement “I partly believe it,” 1 Cor. 11:18, “partly” represents the phrase “meros (part) ti (some),” used adverbially, i.e., “in some part,” “in some measure,” (2) In Heb. 10:33, “partly ... partly” is a translation of the antithetic phrases “touto men,” (“this indeed,”) and “touto de,” (“but this,”), i.e., “on the one hand ... and on the other hand.”

PARTNER

1. koinonos (κοινωνός, 2844), an adjective, signifying “having in common” (koinos), is used as a noun, “partners” in Luke 5:10, “partner” in 2 Cor. 8:23; Philem. 17 (in spiritual life and business). See COMMUNION, B, COMPANION, No. 2, PARTAKER.

2. metochos (μέτοχος, 3353), an adjective, signifying “having with, sharing,” is used as a noun, “partners” in Luke 5:7. See FELLOW, PARTAKER.

Note: Koinonos stresses the fact of having something in common, metochos, “the fact of sharing”; the latter is less thorough in effect than the former.

PASS, COME TO PASS (see Notes below)

1. parerchomai (παρέρχομαι, 3928), from para, “by,” erchomai, “to come” or “go,” denotes (I), literally, “to pass, pass by,” (a) of persons, Matt. 8:28; Mark 6:48; Luke 18:37; Acts 16:8; (b) of things, Matt. 26:39, 42; of time, Matt. 14:15; Mark 14:35; Acts 27:9, KJV, “past” (RV, “gone by”); 1 Pet. 4:3; (II), metaphorically, (a) “to pass away, to perish,” Matt. 5:18; 24:34, 35; Mark 13:30, 31; Luke 16:17; 21:32, 33; 2 Cor. 5:17; Jas. 1:10; 2 Pet. 3:10; (b) “to pass by, disregard, neglect, pass over,” Luke 11:42; 15:29, “transgressed.” For the meaning “to come forth or come,” see Luke 12:37; 17:7, RV (Acts 24:7 in some mss.). See COME, No. 9.¶

2. dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330) denotes “to pass through or over,” (a) of persons, e.g., Matt. 12:43, RV, “passeth (KJV, walketh) through”; Mark 4:35, KJV, “pass (RV, go) over”; Luke 19:1, 4; Heb. 4:14, RV, “passed through” (KJV “into”); Christ “passed through” the created heavens to the throne of God; (b) of things, e.g., Matt. 19:24, “to go through”; Luke 2:35, “shall pierce through” (metaphorically of a sword). See COME, No. 5.

3. aperchomai (ἀπέρχομαι, 565), “to go away,” is rendered “to pass” in Rev. 9:12; 11:14; “passed away” in Rev. 21:4. See DEPART, No. 4.

4. proerchomai (προέρχομαι, 4281), “to go forward,” is translated “passed on” in Acts 12:10. See GO.

5. antiparerchomai (ἀντιπαρέρχομαι, 492), denotes “to pass by opposite to” (anti, “over against,” and No. 1), Luke 10:31, 32.¶

6. diabaino (διαβαίνω, 1224), “to step across, cross over,” is translated “to pass” in Luke 16:26 (of “passing” across the fixed gulf: for the KJV in the 2nd part of the v., see No. 13); in Heb. 11:29, “passed through.” See COME, No. 18.

7. metabaino (μεταβαίνω, 3327), “to pass over from one place to another” (meta, implying change), is translated “we have passed out of” (KJV, “from”) in 1 John 3:14, RV, as to the change from death to life. See REMOVE, No. 1.

8. anastrepho (ἀναστρέφω, 390), lit., “to turn back” (ana, “back,” strephe, “to turn”), in the middle voice, “to conduct oneself, behave, live,” is translated “pass (the time)” in 1 Pet. 1:17. See ABIDE, No. 8.

9. parago (παράγω, 3855), “to pass by, pass away,” in Matt. 9:9, RV, “passed by” (KJV, “forth”), is used in the middle voice in 1 John 2:8, RV, “is passing away” (KJV, “is past”), of the “passing” of spiritual darkness through the light of the gospel, and in v. 17 of the world. See DEPART, No. 2.

10. paraporeuomai (παραπορεύομαι, 3899), primarily, “to go beside, accompany” (para, “beside,” poreuomai, “to proceed”), denotes “to go past, pass by,” Matt. 27:39; Mark 9:30, “passed through” (some mss. have poreuomai); 11:20; 15:29; in Mark 2:23, “going ... through.” See GO.¶

11. diaporeuomai (διαπορεύομαι, 1279), “to pass across, journey through,” is used in the middle voice, translated “pass by” in Luke 18:36, KJV, RV, “going by.” See GO.

12. huperballo (ὑπερβάλλω, 5235), in Eph. 3:19, “passeth”: see EXCEED, A, No. 1.

13. huperecho (ὑπερέχω, 5242), “passeth” in Phil. 4:7: see BETTER (be), No. 4.

14. diaperao (διαπεράω, 1276), “to pass over, cross over” (used in Luke 16:26, 2nd part: see No. 6): see CROSS.

15. diodeuo (διοδεύω, 1353), “to travel through, or along” (dia, “through,” hodos “a way”), is translated “they had passed through” in Acts 17:1, lit., “having passed through”; in Luke 8:1, “He went about,” RV (KJV, “throughout”).¶

16. choreo (χωρέω, 5562), used intransitively, signifies “to make room, retire, pass”; in Matt. 15:17, RV, “passeth (into the belly),” KJV, “goeth.” See COME, No. 24.

17. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673) is translated “was passing away” in 2 Cor. 3:7 (KJV, “was to be done away”); “passeth away” in 3:11, RV (KJV, “is done away”). See ABOLISH.

18. paroichomai (παροίχομαι, 3944), “to have passed by, to be gone by,” is used in Acts 14:16, of past generations, KJV, “(in times) past,” RV, “(in the generations) gone by.”¶

Notes: (1) Ginomai, “to become, take place,” is often translated “to come to pass”; frequently in the Synoptic Gospels and Acts (note the RV of Luke 24:21); elsewhere in John 13:19; 14:22, RV, “(what) is come to pass ...?” KJV, “(how) is it ...?”; 14:29 (twice); 1 Thess. 3:4; Rev. 1:1. (2) In Acts 2:17, 21; 3:23 and Rom. 9:26, the KJV translates the future of eimi, “to be,” “it shall come to pass” (RV, “it shall be”). (3) In Acts 5:15, KJV, erchomai, “to come,” is translated “passing by” (RV, “came by”). (4) For the KJV, “passing” in Acts 27:8, see COASTING, C. (5) In Mark 6:35; KJV, “the time is far passed” (RV, “the day is.. far spent”) is, lit., “the hour is much (polus).” (6) For huperakmos in 1 Cor. 7:36, RV, “past the flower of her age,” see FLOWER.

PASSING OVER

pareisis (πάρεσις, 3929), primarily “a letting go, dismissal” (akin to pariemi, “to let alone, loosen”), denotes “a passing by” or “praetermission (of sin),” “a suspension of judgment,” or “withholding of punishment,” Rom. 3:25, RV, “passing over” (KJV, “remission”), with reference to sins committed previously to the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ, the “passing by” not being a matter of divine disregard but of forbearance.¶

PASSION

A. Nouns.

1. pathema (πάθημα, 3804), “a suffering” or “a passive emotion,” is translated “passions” in Rom. 7:5, RV, “(sinful) passions,” KJV, “motions,” and Gal. 5:24, RV; see AFFECTION, A, No. 3, AFFLICT, B, No. 3.

2. pathos (πάθος, 3806): see AFFECTION, A, No. 1.

B. Verb.

pascho (πάσχω, 3958), “to suffer,” is used as a noun, in the aorist infinitive with the article, and translated “passion” in Acts 1:3, of the suffering of Christ at Calvary. See SUFFER.

C. Adjective.

homoioopathes (ὁμοιοπαθής, 3663), “of like feelings or affections” (homoios, “like,” and A, No. 2; Eng., “homeopathy”), is rendered “of like passions” in Acts 14:15 (RV marg., “nature”); in Jas. 5:17, RV, ditto (KJV, “subject to like passions”).¶

PASSOVER

pascha (πάσχα, 3957), the Greek spelling of the Aramaic word for the Passover, from the Hebrew pasach, “to pass over, to spare,” a feast instituted by God in commemoration of the deliverance of Israel from Egypt, and anticipatory of the expiatory sacrifice of Christ. The word signifies (I) “the Passover Feast,” e.g., Matt. 26:2; John 2:13, 23; 6:4; 11:55; 12:1; 13:1; 18:39; 19:14; Acts 12:4; Heb. 11:28; (II), by metonymy, (a) “the Paschal Supper,” Matt. 26:18, 19; Mark 14:16; Luke 22:8, 13; (b) “the Paschal lamb,” e.g., Mark 14:12 (cf. Exod. 12:21); Luke 22:7; (c) “Christ Himself,” 1 Cor. 5:7.

PAST

A. Verbs.

1. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, come to pass,” is translated “was past” in Luke 9:36, KJV, and RV marg. (RV, “came”), of the voice of God the Father at the Transfiguration; “is past,” 2 Tim. 2:18.

2. diaginomai (διαγίνομαι, 1230), dia, “through,” a stronger form than No. 1, used of time, denotes “to intervene, elapse, pass,” Mark 16:1, “was past”; Acts 25:13, RV, “were passed”; 27:9, “was spent.”¶

3. proginomai (προγίνομαι, 4266), “to happen before” (pro, before, and No. 1), is used in Rom. 3:25, KJV, “that are past” (RV, “done aforetime”), of sins committed in times previous to the atoning sacrifice of Christ (see PASSING OVER).¶

Note: For the past tense of the verb “to pass,” see PASS, e.g., Nos. 1 and 17.

B. Participle.

pote (ποτέ, 4218), “once, formerly, sometime,” is translated “in time (or times) past,” in Rom. 11:30; Gal. 1:13; Ga 1:23, KJV (RV, “once”); Eph. 2:2, 11 (RV, “aforetime”); v. 3 (RV, “once”); Philem. 11 (RV, “aforetime”); 1 Pet. 2:10.

PASTOR

poimen (ποιμήν, 4166), “a shepherd, one who tends herds or flocks” (not merely one who feeds them), is used metaphorically of Christian “pastors,” Eph. 4:11. “Pastors” guide as well as feed the flock, cf. Acts 20:28, which with v. 17, indicates that this was the service committed to elders (overseers or bishops); so also in 1 Pet. 5:1, 2, “tend the flock ... exercising the oversight,” RV; this involves tender care and vigilant superintendence. See SHEPHERD.

PASTURE

nome (νομή, 3542) denotes (a) “pasture, pasturage,” figuratively in John 10:9; (b) “grazing, feeding,” figuratively in 2 Tim. 2:17, of the doctrines of false teachers, lit., “their word will have feeding as a gangrene.” See EAT.¶

PATH

1. tribos (τρίβος, 5147), “a beaten track” (akin to tribo, “to rub, wear down”), “a path,” is used in Matt. 3:3; Mark 1:3; Luke 3:4.¶

2. trochia (τροχιά, 5163), “the track of a wheel” (trochos, “a wheel”; trecho, “to run”) hence, “a track, path,” is used figuratively in Heb. 12:13.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 2:15; 4:11, 26, 27; 5:6, 21; in some texts, Ezek. 27:19.¶

PATIENCE, PATIENT, PATIENTLY

A. Nouns.

1. hupomone (ὑπομονή, 5281), lit., “an abiding under” (hupo, “under,” meno, “to abide”), is almost invariably rendered “patience.” “Patience, which grows only in trial, Jas. 1:3 may be passive, i.e., = “endurance,” as, (a) in trials, generally, Luke 21:19 (which is to be understood by Matt. 24:13), cf. Rom. 12:12; Jas. 1:12; (b) in trials incident to service in the gospel, 2 Cor. 6:4; 12:12; 2 Tim. 3:10; (c) under chastisement, which is trial viewed as coming from the hand of God our Father, Heb. 12:7; (d) under undeserved affliction, 1 Pet. 2:20; or active, i.e. = “persistence, perseverance,” as (e) in well doing, Rom. 2:7 (KJV, “patient continuance”); (f) in fruit bearing, Luke 8:15; (g) in running the appointed race, Heb. 12:1.

“Patience perfects Christian character, Jas. 1:4, and fellowship in the patience of Christ is therefore the condition upon which believers are to be admitted to reign with Him, 2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 1:9. For this patience believers are ‘strengthened with all power,’ Col. 1:11, ‘through His Spirit in the inward man,’ Eph. 3:16.

In Rev. 3:10, “the word of My patience” is the word which tells of Christ’s patience, and its effects in producing “patience” on the part of those who are His (see above on 2 Thess. 3:5).

2. makrothumia (μακροθυμία, 3115), “longsuffering” (see B, No. 2), is rendered “patience” in Heb. 6:12; Jas. 5:10; see LONGSUFFERING.

B. Verbs.

1. hupomeno (ὑπομένω, 5278), akin to A, No. 1, (a) used intransitively, means “to tarry behind, still abide,” Luke 2:43; Acts 17:14; (b) transitively, “to wait for,” Rom. 8:24 (in some mss.), “to bear patiently, endure,” translated “patient” (present participle) in Rom. 12:12; “ye take it patiently,” 1 Pet. 2:20 (twice). See also under A, No. 1.

2. makrothumeo (μακροθυμέω, 3114), akin to A, No. 2, “to be long-tempered,” is translated “to have patience,” or “to be patient,” in Matt. 18:26, 29; 1 Thess. 5:14, KJV (RV, “be longsuffering”); Jas. 5:7 (1st part, “be patient”; 2nd part, RV, “being patient,”

* From Notes on Thessalonians by Hogg and Vine pp. 222, 285.

KJV, “hath long patience”); in Heb. 6:15, RV, “having (KJV, after he had) patiently endured.” See LONGSUFFERING.

C. Adjectives.

Notes: (1) For epieikes, translated “patient” in 1 Tim. 3:3, KJV, see GENTLE. (2) For anexikakos, translated “patient” in 2 Tim. 2:24, KJV, see FORBEAR.¶

D. Adverb.

makrothumos (μακροθυμώς, 3116), akin to A, No. 2, and B, No. 2, denotes “patiently,” Acts 26:3.¶

PATRIARCH

patriarches (πατριάρχης, 3966), from patria, “a family,” and archo, “to rule,” is found in Acts 2:29; 7:8, 9; Heb. 7:4.¶ In the Sept., 1 Chron. 24:31; 27:22; 2 Chron. 19:8; 23:20; 26:12.¶

PATTERN

A. Nouns.

1. typos (τύπος, 5179) is translated “pattern” in Titus 2:7, KJV; Heb. 8:5 (KJV and RV). See ENSAMPLE.

2. hupotuposis (ὑποτύπωσις, 5296) is translated “pattern” in 1 Tim. 1:16, KJV; 2 Tim. 1:13, RV. See ENSAMPLE, FORM.¶

3. hupodeigma (ὑπόδειγμα, 5262) is translated “patterns” in Heb. 9:23, KJV. See COPY.

B. Adjective.

antitypos (ἀντίτυπον, 499) is translated “like in pattern” in Heb. 9:24, RV. See FIGURE, No. 2.

PAVEMENT

lithostrotos (λιθόστρωτος, 3038), an adjective, denoting “paved with stones” (lithos, “a stone,” and stronnuo, “to spread”), especially of tessellated work, is used as a noun in John 19:13, of a place near the Praetorium in Jerusalem, called Gabbatha, a Greek transliteration of an Aramaic word.¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 7:3; Esth. 1:6; Song of Sol. 3:10.¶

PAY (Verb), PAYMENT

1. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give back, to render what is due, to pay,” used of various obligations in this respect, is translated “to pay, to make payment,” in Matt. 5:26; 18:25 (twice), 26, 28, 29, 30, 34; 20:8, RV (KJV, “give”). See DELIVER.

2. teleo (τελέω, 5055), “to bring to an end, complete, fulfill,” has the meaning “to pay” in Matt. 17:24 and Rom. 13:6. See ACCOMPLISH.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 23:23, KJV, apodekatoo, “to tithe,” is translated “ye pay tithe” (RV, “ye tithe”). (2) In Heb. 7:9, dekatoos (passive voice), “to pay tithe,” is translated “hath paid tithes,” RV (perfect tense). See TITHE.

PEACE, PEACEABLE, PEACEABLY

N. Noun.

eirene (εἰρήνη, 1515) “occurs in each of the books of the NT, save 1 John and save in Acts 7:26 [(at) one again] it is translated “peace” in the RV. It describes (a) harmonious relationships between men, Matt. 10:34; Rom. 14:19; (b) between nations, Luke 14:32; Acts 12:20; Rev. 6:4; (c) friendliness, Acts 15:33; 1 Cor. 16:11; Heb. 11:31; (d) freedom from molestation, Luke 11:21; 19:42; Acts 9:31 (RV, ‘peace,’ KJV, ‘rest’); 16:36; (e) order, in the State, Acts 24:2 (RV, ‘peace,’ KJV, ‘quietness’); in the churches, 1 Cor. 14:33; (f) the harmonized relationships between God and man, accomplished through the gospel, Acts 10:36; Eph. 2:17; (g) the sense of rest and contentment consequent thereon, Matt. 10:13; Mark 5:34; Luke 1:79; 2:29; John 14:27; Rom. 1:7; 3:17; 8:6; in certain passages this idea is not distinguishable from the last, Rom. 5:1.”*

“The God of peace” is a title used in Rom. 15:33; 16:20; Phil. 4:9; 1 Thess. 5:23; Heb. 13:20; cf. 1 Cor. 14:33; 2 Cor. 13:11. The corresponding Heb. word shalom primarily signifies “wholeness”: see its use in Josh. 8:31, “unhewn”; Ruth 2:12, “full”; Neh. 6:15, “finished”; Isa. 42:19, marg., “made perfect.” Hence there is a close connection between the title in 1 Thess. 5:23 and the word holokleros, “entire,” in that verse. In the Sept. shalom is often rendered by soteria, “salvation, e.g., Gen. 26:31; 41:16; hence the “peace-offering” is called the “salvation offering.” Cf. Luke 7:50; 8:48. In 2 Thess. 3:16, the title “the Lord of peace” is best understood as referring to the Lord Jesus. In Acts 7:26, “would have set them at one” is, lit., “was reconciling them (conative imperfect tense, expressing an earnest effort) into peace.”

B. Verbs.

1. eireneuo (εἰρηνεύω, 1514), primarily, “to bring to peace, reconcile,” denotes in the NT, “to keep peace or to be at peace”: in Mark 9:50, RV, the Lord bids the disciples “be at peace” with one another, gently rebuking their ambitious desires; in Rom. 12:18 (RV, “be at peace,” KJV, “live peaceably”) the limitation “if it be possible, as much as in you lieth,” seems due to the phrase “with all men,” but is not intended to excuse any evasion of the obligation imposed by the command; in 2 Cor. 13:11 it is rendered “live in peace,” a general exhortation to believers; in 1 Thess. 5:13, “be at peace (among yourselves).”¶

2. eirenopoieo (εἰρηνοποιέω, 1517), “to make peace” (eirene, and poieo, “to make”), is used in Col. 1:20.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 10:10.¶

C. Adjective.

eirenikos (εἰρηνικός, 1516), akin to A, denotes “peaceful.” It is used (a) of the fruit of righteousness, Heb. 12:11, “peaceable” (or “peaceful”) because it is produced in communion with God the Father, through His chastening; (b) of “the wisdom that is from above,” Jas. 3:17.¶

Note: In 1 Tim. 2:2, KJV, hesuchios, “quiet,” is translated “peaceable” (RV, “quiet”).

PEACE (hold one’s)

1. sigao (σιγάω, 4601) signifies (a), used intransitively, “to be silent” (from sige, “silence”), translated “to hold one’s peace,” in Luke 9:36; 18:39; 20:26; Acts 12:17; 15:13 (in v. 12, “kept silence”; similarly rendered in 1 Cor. 14:28, 30, KJV, “hold his peace,” 34); (b) used transitively, “to keep secret”; in the passive voice, “to be kept secret,” Rom. 16:25, RV, “hath been kept in silence.” See SECRET, SILENCE.

2. siopao (σιωπάω, 4623), “to be silent or still, to keep silence” (from siope, “silence”), is translated “to hold one’s peace,” in Matt. 20:31; 26:63; Mark 3:4; 9:34; 10:48; 14:61; Luke 19:40; Acts 18:9; in the Lord’s command to the sea, in Mark 4:39, it is translated “peace” (for the next word “be still” see No. 4); in Luke 1:20, RV, “thou shalt be silent” (KJV, “dumb”). See DUMB, B.¶

3. hesuchazo (ἡσυχάζω, 2270) signifies “to be still”; it is used of holding one’s “peace,” being silent, Luke 14:4; Acts 11:18; 21:14, “we ceased. See CEASE, A, No. 3, QUIET.

4. phimoo (φιμώω, 5392), “to muzzle,” is used metaphorically in the passive voice, in Mark 1:25 and Luke 4:35, “hold thy peace”; in Mark 4:39, “be still.” See MUZZLE.

PEACEMAKER

eirenopoios (εἰρηνοποιός, 1518), an adjective signifying peace making (eirene, and poieo, “to make”), is used in Matt. 5:9, “peacemakers.” Cf. PEACE, B, No. 2.¶

PEARL

margarites (μαργαρίτης, 3135), “a pearl” (Eng., Margaret), occurs in Matt. 7:6 (proverbially and figuratively); 13:45, 46; 1 Tim. 2:9; Rev. 17:4; 18:12, 16; 21:21 (twice).¶

For PECULIAR see POSSESSION, B, No. 3, and C

PEN

kalamos (κάλαμος, 2563), “a reed, reed pipe, flute, staff, measuring rod,” is used of a “writing-reed” or “pen” in 3 John 13. This was used on papyrus. Different instruments were used on different materials; the kalamos may have been used also on leather. “Metal pens in the form of a reed or quill have been found in the so-called Grave of Aristotle at Eretria.” See REED.

PENCE, PENNY, PENNYWORTH

denarion (δηνάριον, 1220), a Roman coin, a denarius, a little less than the value of the Greek drachme (see PIECE), now estimated as amounting to about 9 1/2d. in the time of our Lord, occurs in the singular, e.g., Matt. 20:2; 22:19; Mark 12:15; Rev. 6:6; in the plural, e.g., Matt. 18:28; Mark 14:5; Luke 7:41; 10:35; John 12:5; “pennyworth” in Mark 6:37 and John 6:7, lit., “(loaves of two hundred) pence.” Considering the actual value, “shilling” would have been a more accurate translation, as proposed by the American translators, retaining “penny” for the as, and “farthing” for the quadrans.

PENTECOST

pentekostos (πεντηκοστή, 4005), an adjective denoting “fiftieth,” is used as a noun, with “day” understood, i.e., the “fiftieth” day after the Passover, counting from the second day of the Feast, Acts 2:1; 20:16; 1 Cor. 16:8.¶ For the divine instructions to Israel see Exod. 23:16; 34:22; Lev. 23:15-21; Num. 28:26-31; Deut. 16:9-11.

For PENURY (Luke 21:4, KJV, RV, “want”) see LACK

PEOPLE

1. laos (λαός, 2992) is used of (a) “the people at large,” especially of people assembled, e.g., Matt. 27:25; Luke 1:21; 3:15; Acts 4:27; (b) “a people of the same race and language,” e.g., Rev. 5:9; in the plural, e.g., Luke 2:31; Rom. 15:11; Rev. 7:9; 11:9; especially of Israel, e.g., Matt. 2:6; 4:23; John 11:50; Acts 4:8; Heb. 2:17; in distinction from their rulers and priests, e.g., Matt. 26:5; Luke 20:19; Heb. 5:3; in distinction from Gentiles, e.g., Acts 26:17, 23; Rom. 15:10; (c) of Christians as the people of God, e.g., Acts 15:14; Titus 2:14; Heb. 4:9; 1 Pet. 2:9.

2. ochlos (ὄχλος, 3793), “a crowd, throng”: see CROWD, MULTITUDE.

3. demos (δῆμος, 1218), “the common people, the people generally” (Eng., “demagogue,” “democracy,” etc.), especially the mass of the “people” assembled in a public place, Acts 12:22; 17:5; 19:30, 33.¶

4. ethnos (ἔθνος, 1484) denotes (a) “a nation,” e.g., Matt. 24:7; Acts 10:35; “the Jewish people,” e.g., Luke 7:5; Acts 10:22; 28:19; (b) in the plural, “the rest of mankind” in distinction from Israel or the Jews, e.g., Matt. 4:15; Acts 28:28; (c) “the people of a city,” Acts 8:9; (d) gentile Christians, e.g., Rom. 10:19; 11:13; 15:27; Gal. 2:14. See GENTILES, NATION.

5. anthropos (ἄνθρωπος, 444), “man,” without distinction of sex (cf. aner, “a male”), is translated “people” in John 6:10, RV (KJV, “men”).

PERADVENTURE

A. Adverb.

tacha (τάχα, 5029), primarily “quickly” (from tachus, “quick”), signifies “peradventure” in Rom. 5:7; in Philem. 15, “perhaps.” See PERHAPS.¶

B. Conjunction.

mepote (μήποτε, 3379), often written as two words, usually signifies “lest ever, lest haply, haply”; in indirect questions, “if haply” or “whether haply,” e.g., Luke 3:15, RV; in Matt. 25:9, RV, “peradventure” (KJV, “lest”); “if peradventure,” in 2 Tim. 2:25. See HAPLY.

PERCEIVE

1. ginosko (γινώσκω, 1097), “to know by experience and observation,” is translated “to perceive” in Matt. 12:15, RV (KJV, “knew”); 16:8; 21:45; 22:18; 26:10, RV, (KJV, “understood”); Mark 8:17; 12:12 and 15:10, RV (KJV, “knew”); so Luke 9:11; 18:34; in Luke 7:39, RV (KJV, “known”); 20:19 (cf. No. 7 in v. 23); John 6:15; 8:27, RV (KJV, “understood”); 16:19, RV (KJV, “knew”); Acts 23:6; Gal. 2:9; in 1 John 3:16, KJV, “perceive” (RV, “know,” perfect tense, lit., “we have perceived,” and therefore “know”). See KNOW.

2. epiginosko (ἐπιγινώσκω, 1921), a strengthened form of No. 1, “to gain a full knowledge of, to become fully acquainted with,” is translated “to perceive” in Mark 5:30, RV (KJV, “knowing”); Luke 1:22; 5:22; Acts 19:34, RV (KJV, knew). See ACKNOWLEDGE, KNOW.

3. eidon (ὁράω, 3708) (akin to oida, “to know”), an aorist form used to supply that tense of horao, “to see,” is translated “to perceive” in Matt. 13:14; Mark 4:12; Acts 28:26; in Luke 9:47, KJV (RV, “saw”); in Acts 14:9, KJV, “perceiving” (RV, “seeing”). See BEHOLD, No. 1.

4. theoreo (θεωρέω, 2334), “to be a spectator of, look at, discern,” is translated “to perceive” in John 4:19 (indicating the woman’s earnest contemplation of the Lord); so Acts 17:22; in John 12:19, RV, “behold” (KJV, “perceive ye”). See BEHOLD, No. 6.

5. aisthanomai (αἰσθάνομαι, 143), “to perceive, to notice, understand,” is used in Luke 9:45, RV, “(that they should not) perceive,” KJV, “(that) they perceived ... (not).”¶

6. noeo (νοιέω, 3539), “to perceive with the mind, to understand,” is translated “to perceive” in Matt. 15:17, RV (KJV, “understand”); so 16:9, 11; John 12:40; Rom. 1:20; Eph. 3:4; in Mark 7:18 and 8:17, KJV and RV, “perceive.” See CONSIDER, No. 4.

7. katanoeo (κατανοέω, 2657), a strengthened form of No. 6, “to take note of, consider carefully,” is translated “to perceive” in Luke 6:41, KJV (RV, “considerest”); 20:23; Acts 27:39, RV (KJV, “discovered”). See BEHOLD, No. 11.

8. katalambano (καταλαμβάνω, 2638), “to lay hold of, apprehend, comprehend,” is translated “to perceive” in Acts 4:13; 10:34. See APPREHEND, No. 1.

Notes: (1) In Mark 12:28 the best mss. have oida, “to know” (so RV), for eidon, “to see, perceive” (KJV). (2) In Acts 8:23, KJV, horao, “to see,” is translated “I perceive” (RV, “I see”). (3) In 2 Cor. 7:8, KJV, blepo, “to look at, consider, see,” is translated “I perceive” (RV, “I see”). (4) In Acts 23:29, KJV, heurisko, “to find,” is translated “perceived” (RV, “found”).

For PERDITION see DESTRUCTION, No. 1

PERFECT (Adjective and Verb), PERFECTLY

A. Adjectives.

1. teleios (τελείως, 5049) signifies “having reached its end” (telos), “finished, complete perfect.” It is used (I) of persons, (a) primarily of physical development, then, with ethical import, “fully grown, mature,” 1 Cor. 2:6; 14:20 (“men”; marg., “of full age”); Eph. 4:13; Phil. 3:15; Col. 1:28; 4:12; in Heb. 5:14, RV, “fullgrown” (marg., “perfect”), KJV, “of full age” (marg., “perfect”); (b) “complete,” conveying the idea of goodness without necessary reference to maturity or what is expressed under (a) Matt. 5:48; 19:21; Jas. 1:4 (2nd part); 3:2. It is used thus of God in Matt. 5:48; (II), of “things, complete, perfect,” Rom. 12:2; 1 Cor. 13:10 (referring to the complete revelation of God’s will and ways, whether in the completed Scriptures or in the hereafter); Jas. 1:4 (of the work of patience); v. 25; 1 John 4:18.¶

2. teleiotos (τέλειος, 5046*), the comparative degree of No. 1, is used in Heb. 9:11, of the very presence of God.¶

3. artios (ἄρτιος, 739) is translated “perfect” in 2 Tim. 3:17: see COMPLETE, B.

B. Verbs.

1. teleioo (τελειόω, 5048), “to bring to an end by completing or perfecting,” is used (I) of “accomplishing” (see FINISH, FULFILL); (II), of “bringing to completeness,” (a) of persons: of Christ’s assured completion of His earthly course, in the accomplishment of the Father’s will, the successive stages culminating in His death, Luke 13:32; Heb. 2:10, to make Him “perfect,” legally and officially, for all that He would be to His people on the ground of His sacrifice; cf. 5:9; 7:28, RV, “perfected” (KJV, “consecrated”); of His saints, John 17:23, RV, “perfected” (KJV, “made perfect”); Phil. 3:12; Heb. 10:14; 11:40 (of resurrection glory); 12:23 (of the departed saints); 1 John 4:18, of former priests (negatively), Heb. 9:9; similarly of Israelites under the Aaronic priesthood, 10:1; (b) of things, Heb. 7:19 (of the ineffectiveness of the Law); Jas. 2:22 (of faith made “perfect” by works); 1 John 2:5, of the love of God operating through him who keeps His word; 4:12, of the love of God in the case of those who love one another; 4:17, of the love of God as “made perfect with” (RV) those who abide in God, giving them to be possessed of the very character of God, by reason of which “as He is, even so are they in this world.”

2. epiteleo (ἐπιτελέω, 2005), “to bring through to the end” (epi, intensive, in the sense of “fully,” and teleo, “to complete”), is used in the middle voice in Gal. 3:3, “are ye (now) perfected,” continuous present tense, indicating a process, lit., “are ye now perfecting yourselves”; in 2 Cor. 7:1, “perfecting (holiness)”; in Phil. 1:6, RV, “will perfect (it),” KJV, “will perform.” See ACCOMPLISH, No. 4.

3. katartizo (καταρτίζω, 2675), “to render fit, complete” (artios), “is used of mending nets, Matt. 4:21; Mark 1:19, and is translated ‘restore’ in Gal. 6:1. It does not necessarily imply, however, that that to which it is applied has been damaged, though it may do so, as in these passages; it signifies, rather, right ordering and arrangement, Heb. 11:3, ‘framed;’ it points out the path of progress, as in Matt. 21:16; Luke 6:40; cf. 2 Cor. 13:9; Eph. 4:12, where corresponding nouns occur. It indicates the close relationship between character and destiny, Rom. 9:22, ‘fitted.’ It expresses the pastor’s desire for the flock, in prayer, Heb. 13:21, and in exhortation, 1 Cor. 1:10, RV, ‘perfected’ (KJV, ‘perfectly joined’); 2 Cor. 13:11, as well as his conviction of God’s purpose for them, 1 Pet. 5:10. It is used of the Incarnation of the Word in Heb. 10:5, ‘prepare,’ quoted from Ps. 40:6 (Sept.), where it is apparently intended to describe the unique creative act involved in the Virgin Birth, Luke 1:35. In 1 Thess. 3:10 it means to supply what is necessary, as the succeeding words show.”* See FIT, B, No. 3.¶

* Intensives, diminutives, comparatives, or similar forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a single asterisk (for instance, eleeinoteros, from eleeinos is 1652*).

* From Notes on Thessalonians by Hogg and Vine, p. 101.

C. Adverbs.

1. akribos (ἀκριβῶς, 199), accurately, is translated “perfectly” in 1 Thess. 5:2, where it suggests that Paul and his companions were careful ministers of the Word. See ACCURATELY, and see Note (2) below.

2. akribesteron (ἀκριβέστερον, 197), the comparative degree of No. 1, Acts 18:26; 23:15: see CAREFULLY, EXACTLY.

3. teleios (τελείως, 5049), “perfectly,” is so translated in 1 Pet. 1:13, RV (KJV, “to the end”), of setting one’s hope on coming grace. See END.¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 3:2, KJV, pleroo, “to fulfill,” is translated “perfect” (RV, “fulfilled”). (2) For the adverb akribos in Luke 1:3, KJV, see ACCURATELY; in Acts 24:22, KJV, see EXACT. (3) For the noun akribeia in Acts 22:3, see MANNER.

PERFECTION, PERFECTING (noun), PERFECTNESS

A. Nouns.

1. katartisis (κατάρτισις, 2676), “a making fit,” is used figuratively in an ethical sense in 2 Cor. 13:9, RV, “perfecting” (KJV, “perfection”), implying a process leading to consummation (akin to katartizo, see PERFECT, B, No. 3).¶

2. katartismos (καταρτισμός, 2677) denotes, in much the same way as No. 1, “a fitting or preparing fully,” Eph. 4:12.¶

3. teleiosis (τελείωσις, 5050) denotes “a fulfillment, completion, perfection, an end accomplished as the effect of a process,” Heb. 7:11; in Luke 1:45, RV, “fulfillment” (KJV, “performance”).¶

4. teleiotes (τελειότης, 5047) denotes much the same as No. 3, but stressing perhaps the actual accomplishment of the end in view, Col. 3:14, “perfectness”; Heb. 6:1, “perfection.”¶ In the Sept., Judg. 9:16, 19; Prov. 11:3; Jer. 2:2.¶

B. Verb.

telesphoreo (τελεσφορέω, 5052), “to bring to a completion” or “an end in view” (telos, “an end,” phero, “to bear”), is said of plants, Luke 8:14.¶

PERFORM, PERFORMANCE

1. teleo (τελέω, 5055), “to finish,” is translated “performed” in Luke 2:39, KJV: see ACCOMPLISH, No. 3.

2. apoteleo (ἀποτελέω, 658), “to bring to an end, accomplish,” is translated “I perform” in Luke 13:32, RV (KJV, “I do”); some mss. have No. 3; in Jas. 1:15, it is used of sin, “fullgrown” RV (KJV, “finished”). See FINISH, Note 2.¶

3. epiteleo (ἐπιτελέω, 2005), Rom. 15:28, KJV, “performed” (RV, “accomplished”); 2 Cor. 8:11, KJV, “perform” (RV, “complete”); Phil. 1:6, KJV, “perform” (RV, “perfect”): see ACCOMPLISH, No. 4.

4. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” is translated “to perform” in Rom. 4:21; in Luke 1:72, KJV (RV, “to show”). See SHEW.

5. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give back, or in full,” is translated “thou ... shalt perform” in Matt. 5:33. See DELIVER. No. 3.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 7:18, KJV, katergazomai, “to work,” is translated “to perform” (RV, “to do”; marg., “work”). (2) In Luke 1:20, KJV, ginomai “to come to pass” (RV), is translated “shall be performed.” (3) For “performance” in Luke 1:45, see FULFILLMENT.

PERHAPS

1. tacha (τάχα, 5029) is translated “perhaps” in Philem. 15. See PERADVENTURE.

2. ara (ἄρα, 686), a particle, “then,” sometimes marking a result about which some uncertainty is felt, is translated “perhaps” in Acts 8:22.

Note: In 2 Cor. 2:7, KJV, pos, “anyhow,” “by any means” (RV), is translated “perhaps.”

For PERIL, see DANGER, Note: PERILOUS see GRIEVOUS

PERISH

1. apollumi (ἀπόλλυμι, 622), “to destroy,” signifies, in the middle voice, “to perish,” and is thus used (a) of things, e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; Luke 5:37; Acts 27:34, RV, “perish” (in some texts pipto, “to fall,” as KJV); Heb. 1:11; 2 Pet. 3:6; Rev. 18:14 (2nd part), RV, “perished” (in some texts aperchomai, “to depart,” as KJV); (b) of persons, e.g., Matt. 8:25; John 3:15), 16; 10:28; 17:12, RV, “perished” (KJV, “is lost”); Rom. 2:12; 1 Cor. 1:18, lit., “the perishing,” where the perfective force of the verb implies the completion of the process of destruction (Moulton, Proleg., p. 114); 8:11; 15:18; 2 Pet. 3:9; Jude 11. For the meaning of the word see DESTROY, No. 1.

2. sunapollumi (συναπόλλυμι, 4881), in the middle voice, denotes “to perish together” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), Heb. 11:31.¶

3. apothnesko (ἀποθνήσκω, 599), “to die”; in Matt. 8:32 “perished.” See DIE, No. 2.

4. aphanizo (ἀφανίζω, 853), “to make unseen” (a, negative, phaino, “to cause to appear”), in the passive voice, is translated “perish” in Acts 13:41 (RV, marg., “vanish away”). See DISFIGURE.

5. diaphtheiro (διαφθείρω, 1311), “to corrupt,” is rendered “perish” in 2 Cor. 4:16, KJV (RV, “is decaying”). See CORRUPT, No. 3, DECAY.

Notes: (I) In Acts 8:20, “(thy money) perish” is a translation of a phrase, lit., “be unto destruction,” apoleia, see DESTRUCTION, B, (II), No. 1. (2) In Col. 2:22, “to perish” is a translation of the phrase eis pthoran, lit., “unto corruption”; see CORRUPT, B, No. 1. (3) For “shall utterly perish,” in 2 Pet. 2:12, KJV, see CORRUPT, B, No. 1 (b).

For PERJURED PERSON see FORSWEAR

PERMISSION

sungnome (συγγνώμη, 4774), lit., “a joint opinion, mind or understanding” (sun, “with,” gnome, “an opinion”), “a fellow feeling,” hence, “a concession, allowance,” is translated “permission,” in contrast to “commandment,” in 1 Cor. 7:6.¶

PERMIT

epitrepo (ἐπιτρέπω, 2010), lit., “to turn to” (epi, “to,” trepo, “to turn”), “to entrust,” signifies “to permit,” Acts 26:1; 1 Cor. 14:34; 1 Cor. 16:7; 1 Tim. 2:12, RV “permit” (KJV, “suffer”); Heb. 6:3. See LEAVE.

For PERNICIOUS, 2 Pet. 2:2, KJV, see LASCIVIOUS

PERPLEX, PERPLEXITY

A. Verbs

1. aporeo (ἀπορέω, 639) is rendered “perplexed” in 2 Cor. 4:8, and in the most authentic mss. in Luke 24:4; see DOUBT, A, No. 1.

2. diaporeo (διαπορέω, 1280), “was much perplexed” in Luke 9:7; see DOUBT, A, No. 2.

B. Noun.

aporia (ἀπορία, 640), akin to A, No. 1, is translated “perplexity” in Luke 21:25 (lit., “at a loss for a way,” a, negative, poros, “a way, resource”), of the distress of nations, finding no solution to their embarrassments; papyri illustrations are in the sense of being at one’s wit’s end, at a loss how to proceed, without resources.¶

PERSECUTE, PERSECUTION

A. Verbs.

1. dioko (διώκω, 1377) has the meanings (a) “to put to flight, drive away,” (b) “to pursue,” whence the meaning “to persecute,” Matt. 5:10-12, 44; 10:23; 23:34; Luke 11:49 (No. 2 in some mss.); 21:12; John 5:16; 15:20 (twice); Acts 7:52; 9:4, 5, and similar passages; Rom. 12:14; 1 Cor. 4:12; 15:9; 2 Cor. 4:9, KJV (RV, “pursued”); Gal. 1:13, 23; 4:29; Gal. 5:11, RV, “am ... persecuted” (KJV, “suffer persecution”); so 6:12; Phil. 3:6; 2 Tim. 3:12, “shall suffer persecution”; Rev. 12:13. See FOLLOW, PURSUE.

2. ekdioko (ἐκδιώκω, 1559), ek, “out,” and No. 1, is used in 1 Thess. 2:15, KJV, “persecuted” (RV, “drove out”). See also No. 1. See DRIVE, No. 2.¶

B. Noun.

diogmos (διωγμός, 1375), akin to A, No. 1 occurs in Matt. 13:21; Mark 4:17; 10:30; Acts 8:1; 13:50; Rom. 8:35; 2 Cor. 12:10; 2 Thess. 1:4; 2 Tim. 3:11, twice (for v. 12, see A, No. 1.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 11:19; Lam. 3:19.¶

Note: In Acts 11:19, KJV, thlipsis, “tribulation” (RV), is translated “persecution.”

PERSECUTOR

dioktes (διώκτης, 1376), akin to dioko (see above), occurs in 1 Tim. 1:13.¶

PERSEVERANCE

proskarteresis (προσκαρτέρησις, 4343) occurs in Eph. 6:18. Cf. the verb (and the formation) under ATTEND, No 2.¶

PERSON

1. prosopon (πρόσωπον, 4383), for the meaning of which see APPEARANCE, No. 2, is translated “person” or “persons” in Matt. 22:16; Mark 12:14; Luke 20:21; 2 Cor. 1:11; 2 Cor. 2:10; Gal. 2:6; Jude 16, lit., “(admiring, or showing respect of, RV) persons.”

2. anthropos (ἄνθρωπος, 444), a generic name for man, is translated “persons” in Rev. 11:13, RV (KJV, “men”).

Notes: (1) In Heb. 1:3, KJV, hupostasis, “substance,” is translated “person”; see SUBSTANCE. (2) In Matt. 27:24, RV, toutou, “of this ... (man),” is translated “of this ... person” (KJV). (3) In Philem. 12, the pronoun autos, “he,” placed in a position of strong emphasis, is translated “in his own person,” RV, stressing the fact that in spite of the apostle’s inclination to retain Onesimus, he has sent him, as being, so to speak, “his very heart,” instead of adopting some other method. (4) In 1 Cor. 5:13, KJV, the adjective poneros, “wicked,” used as a noun, is translated “wicked person” (RV, “... man”). (5) In 2 Pet. 2:5, KJV, ogdoos, “eighth,” is translated “the (lit., ‘an’) eighth person” (RV, “with seven others”). (b) Various adjectives are used with the word “persons,” e.g., “devout, perjured, profane.”

PERSONS (respect of)

A. Nouns.

1. prosopolemptes (προσωπολήπτης, 4381) denotes “a respecter of persons” (prosopon, “a face” or “person,” lambano, “to lay hold of”), Acts 10:34.¶

2. prosopolempsia (in inferior texts without the letter m) (προσωποληψία, 4382) denotes “respect of persons, partiality” (akin to No. 1), the fault of one who, when responsible to give judgment, has respect to the position, rank, popularity, or circumstances of men, instead of their intrinsic conditions, preferring the rich and powerful to those who are not so, Rom. 2:11; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25; Jas. 2:1.¶

B. Verb.

prosopolempteo (προσωποληπτέω, 4380), “to have respect of persons” (see above), occurs in Jas. 2:9.¶

C. Adverb. aprosopolempptos (ἀπροσωπολήπτως, 678), “without respect of persons, impartially” (a, negative), occurs in 1 Pet. 1:17.¶

PERSUADE

1. peitho (πείθω, 3982) in the active voice, signifies “to apply persuasion, to prevail upon or win over, to persuade,” bringing about a change of mind by the influence of reason or moral considerations, e.g., in Matt. 27:20; 28:14; Acts 13:43; 19:8; in the passive voice, “to be persuaded, believe” (see BELIEVE, No. 2, and OBEY), e.g., Luke 16:31; 20:6; Acts 17:4, RV (KJV, “believed”); 21:14; 26:26; Rom. 8:38; 14:14; 15:14; 2 Tim. 1:5, 12; Heb. 6:9; 11:13, in some mss.; 13:18, RV (KJV, “trust”). See ASSURANCE, B, No. 3.

Note: For Acts 26:28, KJV, “thou persuadest,” see FAIN, Note.

2. anapeitho (ἀναπείθω, 374), “to persuade, induce,” in an evil sense (ana, “back,” and No. 1), is used in Acts 18:13.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 29:8.¶

Note: For plerophoreo, rendered “being fully persuaded,” in Rom. 4:21 and 14:5, KJV, see ASSURANCE, B, No. 2.

PERSUASIVE, PERSUASIVENESS

A. Adjective.

peithos (πειθός, 3981), an adjective (akin to peitho), not found elsewhere, is translated “persuasive” in 1 Cor. 2:4, RV (KJV, “enticing”); see ENTICE, B.¶

B. Noun.

pithanologia (πιθανολογία, 4086), “persuasiveness of speech,” is used in Col. 2:4, RV. See ENTICE, B, Note.¶

PERSUASION

peismone (πεισμονή, 3988), akin to peitho, is used in Gal. 5:8, where the meaning is “this influence that has won you over, or that seems likely to do so”; the use of peitho, in the sense of “to obey,” in v. 7, suggests a play upon words here.¶

PERTAIN TO

metecho (μετέχω, 3348), Heb. 7:13, KJV; see BELONG, Note (c), PARTAKE, B, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 15:17, the phrase ta pros, lit., “the (things) towards” is translated “things pertaining to,” RV (KJV, “those things which pertain to”), in Heb. 2:17 and 5:1, RV and KJV, “things pertaining to.” (2) In Acts 1:3, KJV, the phrase ta peri, “the (things) concerning” (RV), is translated “the things pertaining to.” (3) In Rom. 9:4, the RV rightly translates the relative pronoun hon, lit., “of whom” from hos, “who”) by “whose is” (KJV, “to whom pertaineth”). (4) In Rom. 4:1, KJV, kata, “according to” (RV), is translated “as pertaining to.” (5) For 1 Cor. 6:3, 4, see LIFE, B, No. 1.

PERVERSE, PERVERT

1. apostrepho (ἀποστρέφω, 654), “to turn away” (apo, “from,” strepho, “to turn”), is used metaphorically in the sense of “perverting” in Luke 23:14 (cf. No. 2 in Lu 23:2). See BRING, No. 22.

2. diastrepho (διαστρέφω, 1294), “to distort, twist” (dia, “through,” and strepho), is translated “to pervert” in Luke 23:2 (cf. No. 1 in v. 14); Acts 13:10 [in v. 8, “to turn aside” (KJV, “away”)]; in the perfect participle, passive voice, it is translated “perverse,” lit., “turned aside, corrupted,” in Matt. 17:17; Luke 9:41; Acts 20:30; Phil. 2:15.¶

3. metastrepho (μεταστρέφω, 3344), “to transform into something of an opposite character” (meta, signifying “a change,” and strepho), as the Judaizers sought to “pervert the gospel of Christ,” Gal. 1:7; cf. “the sun shall be turned into darkness,” Acts 2:20; laughter into mourning and joy to heaviness, Jas. 4:9. See TURN.¶

4. ekstrepho (ἐκστρέφω, 1612), “to turn inside out” (ek, “out”), “to change entirely,” is used metaphorically in Titus 3:11, RV, “is perverted” (KJV, “is subverted”). See SUBVERT.¶

Note: For “perverse disputings,” 1 Tim. 6:5, KJV, see DISPUTE, A, No. 3.

PESTILENCE, PESTILENT FELLOW

loimos (λοιμός, 3061), “a pestilence, any deadly infectious malady,” is used in the plural in Luke 21:11 (in some mss., Matt. 24:7); in Acts 24:5, metaphorically, “a pestilent fellow.” See FELLOW.¶

PETITION

aitema (αἴτημα, 155), from aiteo, “to ask” is rendered “petitions” in 1 John 5:15: see ASK, B, and cf. the distinction between A, Nos. 1 and 2.¶ Cf. deesis (see PRAYER).

PHARISEES

pharisaïos (Φαρισαῖος, 5330), from an Aramaic word peras (found in Dan. 5:28), signifying “to separate,” owing to a different manner of life from that of the general public. The “Pharisees” and Sadducees appear as distinct parties in the latter half of the 2nd cent. B.C., though they represent tendencies traceable much earlier in Jewish history, tendencies which became pronounced after the return from Babylon (537), B.C.). The immediate progenitors of the two parties were, respectively, the Hasidaeans and the Hellenizers; the latter, the antecedents of the Sadducees, aimed at removing Judaism from its narrowness and sharing in the advantages of Greek life and culture. The Hasidaeans, a transcription of the Hebrew chasidim, i.e., “pious ones,” were a society of men zealous for religion, who acted under the guidance of the scribes, in opposition to the godless Hellenizing party; they scrupled to oppose the legitimate high priest even when he was on the Greek side. Thus the Hellenizers were a political sect, while the Hasidaeans, whose fundamental principle was complete separation from non-Jewish elements, were the strictly legal party among the Jews, and were ultimately the more popular and influential party. In their zeal for the Law they almost deified it and their attitude became merely external, formal, and mechanical. They laid stress, not upon the righteousness of an action, but upon its formal correctness. Consequently their opposition to Christ was inevitable; His manner of life and teaching was essentially a condemnation of theirs; hence His denunciation of them, e.g., Matt. 6:2, 5, 16; 15:7 and chapter 23.

While the Jews continued to be divided into these two parties, the spread of the testimony of the gospel must have produced what in the public eye seemed to be a new sect, and in the extensive development which took place at Antioch, Acts 11:19-26, the name “Christians” seems to have become a popular term applied to the disciples as a sect, the primary cause, however, being their witness to Christ (see CALL, A, No. 11). The opposition of both “Pharisees” and Sadducees (still mutually antagonistic, Acts 23:6-10) against the new “sect” continued unabated during apostolic times.

PHILOSOPHER

philosophos (φιλόσοφος, 5386), lit., “loving wisdom” (philos, “loving,” sophia, “wisdom”), occurs in Acts 17:18.¶

PHILOSOPHY

philosophia (φιλοσοφία, 5385) denotes “the love and pursuit of wisdom,” hence, “philosophy,” the investigation of truth and nature; in Col. 2:8, the so-called “philosophy” of false teachers. “Though essentially Greek as a name and as an idea, it had found its way into Jewish circles ... Josephus speaks of the three Jewish sects as three ‘philosophies’ ... It is worth observing that this word, which to the Greeks denoted the highest effort of the intellect, occurs here alone in Paul’s writings ... the Gospel had deposed the term as inadequate to the higher standard whether of knowledge or of practice, which it had introduced (Lightfoot).

PHYLACTERY

phulakterion (φυλακτήριον, 5440), primarily “an outpost,” or “fortification” (phulax, “a guard”), then, “any kind of safeguard,” became used especially to denote “an amulet.” In the NT it denotes a prayer fillet, “a phylactery,” a small strip of parchment, with portions of the Law written on it; it was fastened by a leather strap either to the forehead or to the left arm over against the heart, to remind the wearer of the duty of keeping the commandments of God in the head and in the heart; cf. Ex. 13:16; Deut. 6:8; 11:18. It was supposed to have potency as a charm against evils and demons. The Pharisees broadened their “phylacteries” to render conspicuous their superior eagerness to be mindful of God’s Law, Matt. 23:5.¶

PHYSICIAN

iatros (ιατρός, 2395), akin to iaomai, “to heal,” “a physician,” occurs in Matt. 9:12; Mark 2:17; 5:26; Luke 4:23; 5:31 (in some mss., 8:43); Col. 4:14.¶

PIECE

1. epiblema (ἐπίβλημα, 1915) primarily denotes “that which is thrown over, a cover” (epi, “over,” ballo, “to throw”); then, “that which is put on, or sewed on, to cover a rent, a patch,” Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21; in the next sentence, RV, “that which should fill” (KJV, “the new piece that filled”), there is no word representing “piece” (lit., “the filling,” pleroma); see FILL, B; Luke 5:36.¶

2. drachme (δραχμή, 1406), a drachma, firstly, “an Attic weight,” as much as one can hold in the hand (connected with drassomai, “to grasp with the hand, lay hold of,” 1 Cor. 3:19), then, “a coin,” nearly equal to the Roman denarius (see PENNY), is translated “pieces of silver” in Luke 15:8, 1st part; “piece,” 2nd part and v. 9.¶

3. meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part,” is translated “a piece (of a broiled fish)” in Luke 24:42. See BEHALF, PART.

4. klasma (κλάσμα, 2801), “a broken piece” (from klao, “to break”) is used of the broken pieces from the feeding of the multitudes, RV, “broken pieces,” KJV, “fragments,” Matt. 14:20; Mark 6:43; 8:19, 20; Luke 9:17; John 6:12, 13; in Matt. 15:37 and Mark 8:8, RV, “broken pieces” (KJV, “broken meat”).¶

5. argurion (ἀργύριον, 694), which frequently denotes “money,” also represents “a silver coin,” of the value of a shekel or tetradrachmon (four times the drachme, see No. 2); it is used in the plural in Matt. 26:15; 27:3-9. In Acts 19:19, “fifty thousand pieces of silver,” is, lit., “fifty thousand of silver” (probably drachmas). See MONEY, SILVER.

Notes: (1) In Acts 27:44, for KJV, “broken pieces,” the RV translates epi (“on”) tinon (“certain things”) ton (“the,” i.e., “those namely”) by “on other things”; there is no word in the original representing “pieces.” (2) For the phrase “to break to (in) pieces,” Matt. 21:44, RV, and Mark 5:4, see BREAK, A, Nos. 10 and 5 respectively. (3) In Luke 14:18,

KJV, agros, “a field” (RV), is translated “a piece of ground.” (4) In Matt. 17:27, KJV, stater, “a shekel” (RV), a tetradrachmon (see No. 5, above), is translated “a piece of money.”

PIERCE

1. diikneomai (διϊκνέομαι, 1338), “to go through, penetrate” (dia, “through,” ikneomai, “to go”), is used of the power of the Word of God, in Heb. 4:12, “piercing.”¶ In the Sept., Ex. 26:28.¶

2. dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), “to go through,” is translated “shall pierce through” in Luke 2:35. See COME, No. 5.

3. ekkenteo (ἐκκεντέω, 1574), primarily, “to prick out” (ek, “out,” kenteo, “to prick”), signifies “to pierce,” John 19:37; Rev. 1:7.¶

4. nusso (νύσσω, 3572), “to pierce” or “pierce through,” often of inflicting severe or deadly wounds, is used of the piercing of the side of Christ, John 19:34 (in some mss., Matt. 27:49).¶

5. peripeiro (περιπείρω, 4044), “to put on a spit,” hence, “to pierce,” is used metaphorically in 1 Tim. 6:10, of torturing one’s soul with many sorrows, “have pierced (themselves) through.”¶

PIETY (to shew)

eusebeo (εὐσεβέω, 2151), “to reverence, to show piety” towards any to whom dutiful regard is due (akin to eusebes, “pious, godly, devout”), is used in 1 Tim. 5:4 of the obligation on the part of children and grandchildren (RV) to express in a practical way their dutifulness “towards their own family”; in Acts 17:23 of worshipping God. See WORSHIP.¶

For PIGEON see DOVE, No. 1

PILGRIM

parepidemos (παρεπίδημος, 3927), an adjective signifying “sojourning in a strange place, away from one’s own people” (para, “from,” expressing a contrary condition, and epidemeo, “to sojourn”; demos, “a people”), is used of OT saints, Heb. 11:13, “pilgrims” (coupled with xenos, “a foreigner”); of Christians, 1 Pet. 1:1, “sojourners (of the Dispersion),” RV; 2:11, “pilgrims” (coupled with paroikos, “an alien, sojourner”); the word is thus used metaphorically of those to whom Heaven is their own country, and who are sojourners on earth.¶

PILLAR

stulos (στύλος, 4769), “a column supporting the weight of a building,” is used (a) metaphorically, of those who bear responsibility in the churches, as of the elders in the church at Jerusalem, Gal. 2:9; of a local church as to its responsibility, in a collective capacity, to maintain the doctrines of the faith by teaching and practice, 1 Tim. 3:15; some would attach this and the next words to the statement in v. 16; the connection in the Eng. versions seems preferable; (b) figuratively in Rev. 3:12, indicating a firm and permanent position in the spiritual, heavenly and eternal Temple of God; (c) illustratively, of the feet of the angel in the vision in Rev. 10:1, seen as flames rising like columns of fire indicative of holiness and consuming power, and thus reflecting the glory of Christ as depicted in 1:15; cf. Ezek. 1:7.¶

PILLOW

proskephalaion (προσκεφάλαιον, 4344) denotes “a pillow, a cushion for the head” (pros, “to, kephale, “a head”), Mark 4:38 (RV, “cushion”).¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 13:18.¶

PINE AWAY

xeraino (ξηραίνω, 3583), “to dry up, wither,” is rendered “pineth away” in Mark 9:18. See DRY.

PINNACLE

pterygion (πτερύγιον, 4419) denotes (a) “a little wing” (diminutive of pterox, “a wing”); (b) “anything like a wing, a turret, battlement,” of the temple in Jerusalem, Matt. 4:5 and Luke 4:9 (of the hieron, “the entire precincts,” or parts of the main building, as distinct from the naos, “the sanctuary”). This “wing” has been regarded (1) as the apex of the sanctuary, (2) the top of Solomon’s porch, (3) the top of the Royal Portico, which Josephus describes as of tremendous height (Antig. xv. 11.5).¶ It is used in the Sept. of the fins of fishes, e.g., Lev. 11:9-12; of the part of a dress, hanging down in the form of a wing, Ruth 3:9; 1 Sam. 24:5.

PIPE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

aulos (αὐλός, 836), “a wind instrument,” e.g., “a flute” (connected with aemi, “to blow”), occurs in 1 Cor. 14:7.¶

B. Verb.

auleo (αὐλέω, 832), “to play on an aulos,” is used in Matt. 11:17; Luke 7:32; 1 Cor. 14:7 (2nd part).¶

For PIPERS, Rev. 18:22, KJV, see FLUTE PLAYERS

PIT

1. phrear (φρέαρ, 5421), “a well, dug for water” (distinct from pege, “a fountain”), denotes “a pit” in Rev. 9:1, 2, RV, “the pit (of the abyss),” “the pit,” i.e., the shaft leading down to the abyss, KJV, “(bottomless) pit”; in Luke 14:5, RV, well (KJV, “pit”); in John 4:11, 12, “well.” See WELL.¶

2. bothunos (βόθυνος, 999) is rendered “pit” in Matt. 12:11: see DITCH.

3. abussos (ἄβυσσος, 12): see BOTTOMLESS, B.

4. hupolenion (ὑπολήγιον, 5276) denotes “a vessel or trough beneath a winepress,” to receive the juice, Mark 12:1, RV, “a pit for the winepress” (KJV, “a place for ... the wine-fat”).¶

Note: For pits, 2 Pet. 2:4, RV, see CHAIN Note (1).

PITCH (Verb)

pegnumi (πήγνυμι, 4078), “to make fast, to fix” (cf. prospegnumi, Acts 2:23, of crucifixion), is used of “pitching” a tent; in Heb. 8:2, of the “true tabernacle,” the heavenly and spiritual, which “the Lord pitched.”

PITCHER

keramion (κεράμιον, 2765), “an earthen vessel” (keramos, “potter’s clay”), “a jar” or “jug,” occurs in Mark 14:13; Luke 22:10.

PITIABLE (most)

eleeinoeros (ἐλεεινός, 1652*), the comparative degree of eleeinos, “miserable, pitiable” (eleos, “pity”), is used in 1 Cor. 15:19, “most pitiable” (RV), lit., “more pitiable than all men.” See MISERABLE.

PITIFUL, PITY

1. polusplanchnos (πολύσπλαγχνος, 4184) denotes “very pitiful” or “full of pity” (polus, “much,” splanchnon, “the heart”; in the plural, “the affections”), occurs in Jas. 5:11, RV, “full of pity.”

2. eusplanchnos (εὐσπλαγχνος, 2155), “compassionate, tenderhearted,” lit., “of good heartedness” (eu, “well,” and splanchnon), is translated “pitiful” in 1 Pet. 3:8, KJV, RV, “tenderhearted,” as in Eph. 4:32.

PLACE (Noun, Verb, Adverb)

A. Nouns.

1. topos (τόπος, 5117), (Eng., “topic,” “topography,” etc.) is used of “a region” or “locality,” frequently in the Gospels and Acts, in Luke 2:7 and 14:22, “room”; of a place which a person or thing occupies, a couch at table, e.g., Luke 14:9, 10, RV, “place” (KJV, “room”); of the destiny of Judas Iscariot, Acts 1:25; of the condition of the “unlearned” or nongifted in a church gathering, 1 Cor. 14:16, RV, “place”; the sheath of a sword, Matt. 26:52; a place in a book, Luke 4:17; see also Rev. 2:5; 6:14; 12:8; metaphorically, of “condition, occasion, opportunity” Acts 25:16, RV, “opportunity” (KJV, “license”); Rom. 12:19; Eph. 4:27. See OPPORTUNITY, ROOM.

PLEAD

entunchano (ἐντυγχάνω, 1793), “to make petition,” is used of the “pleading” of Elijah against Israel, Rom. 11:2, RV, “pleadeth with” (KJV, “maketh intercession to”). See DEAL WITH, INTERCESSIONS.

PLEASE, PLEASING (Noun), WELL-PLEASING, PLEASURE

A. Verbs.

1. aresko (ἀρέσκω, 700) signifies (a) “to be pleasing to, be acceptable to,” Matt. 14:6; Mark 6:22; Acts 6:5; Rom. 8:8; 15:2; 1 Cor. 7:32-34; Gal. 1:10; 1 Thess. 2:15; 4:1 (where the preceding kai, “and,” is expegetical, “even,” explaining the “walking,” i.e., Christian manner of life as “pleasing” God; in Gen. 5:22, where the Hebrew has “Enoch walked with God,” the Sept. has “Enoch pleased God”; cf. Mic. 6:8; Heb. 11:5); 2 Tim. 2:4; (b) “to endeavor to please,” and so, “to render service,” doing so evilly in one’s own interests, Rom. 15:1, which Christ did not, v. 3; or unselfishly, 1 Cor. 10:33; 1 Thess. 2:4. This sense of the word is illustrated by Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) from numerous inscriptions, especially describing “those who have proved themselves of use to the commonwealth.”¶

2. euaresteo (εὐαρεστέω, 2100) signifies “to be well-pleasing” (eu, “well,” and a form akin to No. 1); in the active voice, Heb. 11:5, RV, “he had been “well-pleasing” (unto God),” KJV, “he pleased”; so v. 6; in the passive voice Heb. 13:16.¶

3. eudokeo (εὐδοκέω, 2106) signifies (a) “to be well pleased, to think it good” [eu, “well,” and dokeo, see Note (1) below], not merely an understanding of what is right and good as in dokeo, but stressing the willingness and freedom of an intention or resolve regarding what is good, e.g., Luke 12:32, “it is (your Father’s) good pleasure”; so Rom. 15:26, 27, RV; 1 Cor. 1:21; Gal. 1:15; Col. 1:19; 1 Thess. 2:8, RV, “we were well pleased” (KJV, “we were willing”); this meaning is frequently found in the papyri in legal documents; (b) “to be well pleased with,” or “take pleasure in,” e.g., Matt. 3:17; 12:18; 17:5; 1 Cor. 10:5; 2 Cor. 12:10; 2 Thess. 2:12; Heb. 10:6, 8, 38; 2 Pet. 1:17.

4. thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to will, wish, desire,” is translated “it pleased (Him)” in 1 Cor. 12:18; 15:38, RV. See DESIRE, B, No. 6.

5. spatalao (σπαταλάω, 4684), “to live riotously,” is translated “giveth herself to pleasure” in 1 Tim. 5:6, RV (KJV, “liveth in pleasure”); “taken your pleasure” in Jas. 5:5, KJV, “been wanton.”¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 15:22, KJV, dokeo, “to seem good to” (RV), is translated “it pleased” (in some mss., v. 34); in Heb. 12:10, KJV, “(after their own) pleasure,” RV, “(as) seemed good (to them).” (2) For suneudokeo, rendered “have pleasure in” in Rom. 1:32, KJV, see CONSENT, No. 6. (3) For truphao, rendered “lived in pleasure” in Jas. 5:5 KJV, see DELICATELY.

B. Adjectives.

1. arestos (ἀρεστός, 701) denotes “pleasing, agreeable,” John 8:29, RV, “(the things that are) pleasing,” KJV, “(those things that) please,” KJV and RV in 1 John 3:22; in Acts 6:2, “fit” (RV marg., “pleasing”); 12:3, “it pleased,” lit., “it was pleasing.” See FIT.¶

2. euarestos (εὐάρεστος, 2101), eu, “well,” and No. 1, is translated “well-pleasing” in the RV except in Rom. 12:1, 2 (see marg., however). See ACCEPT, B, No. 4.

C. Noun.

areskeia (or -ia) (ἀρέσκεια, 699), a “pleasing,” a giving pleasure, Col. 1:10, of the purpose Godward of a walk worthy of the Lord (cf. 1 Thess. 4:1). It was used frequently in a bad sense in classical writers. Moulton and Milligan illustrate from the papyri its use in a favorable sense, and Deissmann (Bible Studies) from an inscription.¶ In the Sept, Prov. 31:30.¶

PLEASURE

A. Nouns.

1. hedone (ἡδονή, 2237), “pleasure,” is used of the gratification of the natural desire or sinful desires (akin to hedormai, “to be glad,” and hedeos, “gladly”), Luke 8:14; Titus 3:3; Jas. 4:1, 3, RV, “pleasures” (KJV, “lusts”); in the singular, 2 Pet. 2:13. See LUST.¶

2. eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107), “good pleasure” (akin to eudokeo, PLEASE, No. 3), Eph. 1:5, 9; Phil. 2:13; 2 Thess. 1:11. See DESIRE, A, No. 2.

3. apolausis (ἀπόλαυσις, 619), “enjoyment,” is used with echo, “to have,” and rendered “enjoy the pleasures” (lit., “pleasure”) in Heb. 11:25. See ENJOY.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 4:11, KJV, thelema, “a will,” is translated “(for Thy) pleasure,” RV, “(because of Thy) will.” (2) For charis, translated “pleasure” in the KJV of Acts 24:27 and 25:9, see FAVOR, A.

B. Adjective.

philedonos (φιλήδονος, 5369), “loving pleasure” (philos, “loving,” and A, No. 1), occurs in 2 Tim. 3:4, RV, “lovers of pleasure” (KJV, “... pleasures”). See LOVER.¶

Note: In 1 Tim. 5:6 the RV renders spatalao “giveth herself to pleasure.”

PLENTEOUS

polus (πολύς, 4183), “much,” is rendered “plenteous” in Matt. 9:37, of a harvest of souls, and Luke 10:2, RV (KJV, “great”). See GREAT.

PLENTIFULLY

Note: This translates the prefix eu (“well”) of the verb euphoreo, “to produce well,” in Luke 12:16, “brought forth plentifully.”¶

PLOT

epiboule (ἐπιβουλή, 1917), lit., “a plan against” (epi, “against,” boule, “a counsel, plan”), is translated “plot” in the RV (KJV, “laying await” and “lying in wait”) in Acts 9:24; 20:3, 19; 23:30.¶

PLOUGH, PLOW

arotron (ἄροτρον, 723), from aroo, “to plough,” occurs in Luke 9:62.¶

B. Verb.

arotriao (ἀροτριόω, 722), akin to A, a later form of aroo, “to plow,” occurs in Luke 17:7 and 1 Cor. 9:10.¶

PLUCK (out)

1. tillo (τίλλω, 5089) is used of “plucking off ears of corn,” Matt. 12:1; Mark 2:23; Luke 6:1.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 18:7.¶

2. harpazo (ἁρπάζω, 726), “to seize, snatch,” is rendered “pluck” in John 10:28, 29, KJV, RV, “snatch.” For the meaning, see CATCH, No. 1.

3. exaireo (ἐξαίρῶ, 1807), “to take out” (ex for ek, “out,” haireo, “to take”), is translated “pluck out,” of the eye as the occasion of sin, in Matt. 5:29; 18:9, indicating that, with determination and promptitude, we are to strike at the root of unholy inclinations, ridding ourselves of whatever would stimulate them. Cf. Note (2) below. See DELIVER, No. 8.

4. exorusso (αὐτόρῳ, 846), “to dig out or up,” is rendered “ye would have plucked out (your eyes)” in Gal. 4:15, an indication of their feelings of gratitude to, and love for, the apostle. The metaphor affords no real ground for the supposition of a reference to some weakness of his sight, and certainly not to the result of his temporary blindness at his conversion, the recovery from which must have been as complete as the infliction. There would be some reason for such an inference had the pronoun “ye” been stressed; but the stress is on the word “eyes”; their devotion prompted a readiness to part with their most treasured possession on his behalf. For Mark 2:4 see BREAK, No. 14, DIG, No. 1, Note (2).¶ In the Sept., 1 Sam. 11:2; Prov. 29:22.¶

5. ekrizoo (ἐκρίζω, 1610), “to pluck up by the roots” (ek, “out,” rhiza, “a root”), is so translated in Jude 12 (figuratively), and in the KJV in Luke 17:6, RV, “rooted up”; “root up,” Matt. 13:29; “shall be rooted up,” 15:13. See ROOT.¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 5:4, KJV, diaspao, “to rend asunder” (RV), is translated “plucked asunder,” said of chains. (2) In Mark 9:47, KJV, ekballo, “to cast out” (RV), is translated “pluck ... out.” Cf. No. 3, above.

POET

poietes (ποιητής, 4163), primarily “a maker,” later “a doer” (poieo “to make, to do”), was used, in classical Greek, of “an author,” especially a “poet”; so Acts 17:28. See DOER.

POINT, POINTS

A. Phrases.

Notes: (1) In Heb. 4:15, “in all points” represents the phrase kata with the neuter plural of pas, “all,” lit., “according to all (things).” (2) “To be at the point of death” is a translation (a) of the verb mello, “to be about,” with teleutao, “to end one’s life, die,” Luke 7:2; see DIE, No. 4; (b) of mello with apothnesko, “to die,” John 4:47; (c) of the phrase mentioned under DEATH, C, Note. (3) In Jas. 2:10, en heni (the dative case of heis, “one”), lit., “in one,” is rendered “in one point.”

B. Noun.

kephalaion (κεφάλαιον, 2774), the neuter of the adjective kephalaios, “of the head,” is used as a noun, signifying (a) “a sum, amount, of money,” Acts 22:28; (b) “a chief point,” Heb. 8:1, not the summing up of the subject, as the KJV suggests, for the subject was far from being finished in the Epistle; on the contrary, in all that was being set forth by the writer “the chief point” consisted in the fact that believers have “a High Priest” of the character already described. See SUM.¶

C. Verb.

deloo (δηλόω, 1213), “to make plain” (delos, “evident”), is translated “did point unto” in 1 Pet. 1:11, RV (KJV, “did signify”), of the operation of “the Spirit of Christ” in the prophets of the Old Testament in “pointing” on to the time and its characteristics, of the sufferings of Christ and subsequent glories. See SHEW, SIGNIFY.

POISON

ios (ῖός, 2447) denotes “something active” as (a) “rust,” as acting on metals, affecting their nature, Jas. 5:3; (b) “poison,” as of asps, acting destructively on living tissues, figuratively of the evil use of the lips as the organs of speech, Rom. 3:13; so of the tongue, Jas. 3:8.¶

For POLLUTE see DEFILE, A, No. 1

POLLUTION

alisgema (ἀλίσγεμα, 234), akin to a late verb alisgeo, “to pollute,” denotes “a pollution, contamination,” Acts 15:20, “pollutions of idols,” i.e., all the contaminating associations connected with idolatry including meats from sacrifices offered to idols.¶

Note: For miasma, KJV, “pollutions,” in 2 Pet. 2:20. see DEFILEMENT, B, No. 1.¶

POMP

phantasia (φαντασία, 5325), as a philosophic term, denoted “an imagination”; then, “an appearance,” like phantasma, “an apparition”; later, “a show, display, pomp” (Eng., “phantasy”), Acts 25:23.¶ In the Sept., Hab. 2:18; 3:10; Zech. 10:1.¶

PONDER

sumballo (συμβάλλω, 4820), “to throw together, confer,” etc., has the meaning “to ponder,” i.e., “to put one thing with another in considering circumstances,” in Luke 2:19. See CONFER.

POOL

kolumbethra (κολυμβήθρα, 2861) denotes “a swimming pool” (akin to kolumbao, “to swim,” Acts 27:43), John 5:2 (v. 4 in some mss.), 7; 9:7 (v. 11 in some mss.).¶

POOR

A. Adjectives.

1. ptochos (πτωχός, 4434), for which see BEG, B, has the broad sense of “poor,” (a) literally, e.g., Matt. 11:5; 26:9, 11; Luke 21:3 (with stress on the word, “a conspicuously poor widow”); John 12:5, 6, 8; 13:29; Jas. 2:2, 3, 6; the “poor” are constantly the subjects of injunctions to assist them, Matt. 19:21; Mark 10:21; Luke 14:13, 21; 18:22; Rom. 15:26; Gal. 2:10; (b) metaphorically, Matt. 5:3; Luke 6:20; Rev. 3:17.

2. penichros (πενιχρός, 3998), akin to B, “needy, poor,” is used of the widow in Luke 21:2 (cf. No. 1, of the same woman, in v. 3); it is used frequently in the papyri.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 22:25; Prov. 28:15; 29:7.¶

B. Noun.

penes (πέννης, 3993), “a laborer” (akin to penomai, “to work for one’s daily bread”), is translated “poor” in 2 Cor. 9:9.¶

C. Verb.

ptocheuo (ἀνήκω, 433), “to be poor as a beggar” (akin to A, No. 1), “to be destitute,” is said of Christ in 2 Cor. 8:9.¶

PORCH

1. stoa (στοά, 4745), “a portico,” is used (a) of the “porches” at the pool of Bethesda, John 5:2; (b) of the covered colonnade in the Temple, called Solomon’s “porch,” John 10:23; Acts 3:11; 5:12 a portico on the eastern side of the temple; this and the other “porches” existent in the time of Christ were almost certainly due to Herod’s restoration. Cf. Stoics (Acts 17:18), “philosophers of the porch.”¶

2. pulon (ἄνθραξ, 440), akin to pule, “a gate” (Eng., “pylon”), is used of “a doorway, porch or vestibule” of a house or palace, Matt. 26:71. In the parallel passage Mark 14:68, No. 3 is used, and pulon doubtless stands in Matt. 26 for proaulion. See GATE, No. 2.

3. proaulion (προαύλιον, 4259), “the exterior court” or “vestibule,” between the door and the street, in the houses of well-to-do folk, Mark 14:68, “porch” (RV marg., “forecourt”).¶

PORTER

thuroros (θυρωρός, 2377), “a door-keeper” (thura, “a door,” ouros, “a guardian”), is translated “porter” in Mark 13:34; John 10:3; it is used of a female in John 18:16, 17, translated “(her) that kept the door.”¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 4:6; 2 Kings 7:11; Ezek. 44:11.¶

PORTION

A. Nouns.

1. meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part,” is translated “portion” in Matt. 24:51; Luke 12:46; 15:12. See PART.

2. kleros (κληρος, 2819), “a lot,” is translated “portion” in Acts 1:17, RV. See CHARGE, INHERITANCE, LOT.

3. meris (μερίς, 3310), “a part,” is translated “portion” in 2 Cor. 6:15, RV. See PART.

Note: For “portion of food,” Luke 12:42, RV, see FOOD, No. 4.

B. Verb.

summerizo (συμμερίζομαι, 4829), “to have a part with” (akin to A, No. 3), is translated “have their portion with” in 1 Cor. 9:13. RV. See PARTAKER.¶

C. Adverb

polumeros (πολυμέρως, 4181) signifies “in many parts” or “portions” (polus, “many,” and A, No. 1), Heb. 1:1, RV (KJV, “at sundry times”).¶

POSSESS, POSSESSION

A. Verbs.

1. katecho (κατέχω, 2722), “to hold fast, hold back,” signifies “to possess,” in 1 Cor. 7:30 and 2 Cor. 6:10. See HOLD.

2. ктаομαι (κτάομαι, 2932), “to procure for oneself, acquire, obtain,” hence, “to possess” (akin to B, No. 1), has this meaning in Luke 18:12 and 1 Thess. 4:4; in Luke 21:19, RV, “ye shall win” (KJV, “possess ye”), where the probable meaning is “ye shall gain the mastery over your souls,” i.e., instead of giving way to adverse circumstances. See OBTAIN.

3. huparcho (ὑπάρχω, 5225), “to be in existence,” and, in a secondary sense, “to belong to,” is used with this meaning in the neuter plural of the present participle with the article signifying one’s “possessions,” “the things which he possesseth,” Luke 12:15; Acts 4:32; in Heb. 10:34, RV, “possessions” (KJV, “goods”); cf. B, No. 4. See GOODS.

4. daimonizomai (δαιμονίζομαι, 1139), “to be possessed of a demon or demons”: see DEMON, B.

Note: In Acts 8:7 and 16:16, KJV, echo, “have,” is translated “to be possessed of,” in the sense of No. 4, above, RV, “had” and “having.”

B. Nouns.

1. ktema (κτῆμα, 2933), akin to A, No. 2, denotes “a possession, property,” Matt. 19:22; Mark 10:22; Acts 2:45; 5:1.¶

2. kataschesis (κατάσχεσις, 2697), primarily “a holding back” (akin to A, No. 1), then, “a holding fast,” denotes “a possession,” Acts 7:5, or “taking possession,” v. 45, with the article, lit., “in the (i.e., their) taking possession.”¶

3. peripoiesis (περιποίησις, 4047), “an obtaining, an acquisition,” is translated “(God’s own) possession” in Eph. 1:14, RV, which may mean “acquisition,” KJV, “purchased possession,” 1 Pet. 2:9, RV, “God’s own possession,” KJV, “a peculiar (people).” See OBTAIN.

4. huparxis (ὑπαρξις, 5223), primarily “subsistence” (akin to A, No. 3), later denoted “substance, property, possession” in Heb. 10:34, RV (KJV, substance). See GOODS, SUBSTANCE.

Note: In Acts 28:7, KJV, choria, “lands” (RV), is translated “possessions.”

C. Adjective.

periousios (περιούσιος, 4041), “of one’s own possession, one’s own,” qualifies the noun laos, “people,” in Titus 2:14, KJV, “peculiar,” see RV.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 19:5; 23:22; Deut. 7:6; 14:2; 26:18.¶

POSSESSOR

ktetor (κτῆτωρ, 2935), “a possessor, an owner” (akin to κταομαι, see POSSESS, No. 2), occurs in Acts 4:34.¶

POSSIBLE

A. Adjective.

dunatos (δυνατός, 1415), “strong, mighty, powerful, able (to do),” in its neuter form signifies “possible,” Matt. 19:26; 24:24; 26:39; Mark 9:23; 10:27; 13:22; 14:35, 36; Luke 18:27; Acts 2:24; 20:16 (27:39, in some mss; dunamai, “to be able,” in the most authentic, RV, “they could”); Rom. 12:18; Gal. 4:15. See ABLE.

B. Verb.

eimi (εἶμι, 1510), “to be,” is used in the third person singular, impersonally, with the meaning “it is possible,” negatively in 1 Cor. 11:20, RV, (KJV, “it is not”), and Heb. 9:5, “we cannot,” lit., “it is not possible.”

Note: For Heb. 10:4, KJV, “it is not possible,” see IMPOSSIBLE.

POT

1. xestes (ξέστης, 3582) was a Sicilian corruption of the Latin liquid measure sextarius, about a pint; in Mark 7:4 (v. 8 also in some mss.) it denotes “a pitcher,” of wood or stone.¶

2. stamnos (στάμνος, 4713), primarily “an earthen jar” for racking off wine, hence, “any kind of jar,” occurs in Heb. 9:4.¶

For POTENTATE, used of God, 1 Tim. 6:15, see AUTHORITY, No. 4

POTTER

A. Noun.

kerameus (κεραμεύς, 2763), “a potter” (from kerannumi, “to mix,” akin to keramos, “potter’s clay”), is used (a) in connection with the “potter’s field,” Matt. 27:7, 10; (b) illustratively of the “potter’s” right over the clay, Rom. 9:21, where the introductory “or” suggests the alternatives that either there must be a recognition of the absolute discretion and power of God, or a denial that the “potter” has power over the clay. There is no suggestion of the creation of sinful beings, or of the creation of any simply in order to punish them. What the passage sets forth is God’s right to deal with sinful beings according to His own counsel.¶

B. Adjective.

keramikos (κεραμικός, 2764) denotes “of (or made by) a potter” (Eng., “ceramic”), “earthen,” Rev. 2:27.¶

POUND

1. litra (λίτρα, 3046) was a Sicilian coin, the equivalent of a Latin libra or as (whence the metric unit, “liter”); in the NT it is used as a measure of weight, a pound, John 12:3; 19:39.¶

2. mna (μνᾶ, 3414), a Semitic word, both “a weight” and “a sum of money,” 100 shekels (cf. 1 Kings 10:17, maneh; Dan. 5:25, 26, mene), in Attic Greek 100 drachmai, in weight about 15 oz., in value near about L/4 Is. 3d. (see PIECE), occurs in Luke 19:13, 16 (twice), 18 (twice), 20, 24 (twice), 25.¶

POUR

1. ballo (βάλλω, 906), “to throw,” is used of “pouring” liquids, Matt. 26:12, RV, marg., “cast” (of ointment); John 13:5 (of water). See CAST, No. 1.

2. katacheo (καταχέω, 2708), “to pour down upon” (kata, “down,” cheo, “to pour”), is used in Matt. 26:7 (cf. No. 1 in v. 12) and Mark 14:3, of ointment.¶

3. ekcheo (ἐκχέω, 1632), “to pour out” (ek, “out”), is used (a) of Christ’s act as to the changers’ money, John 2:15; (b) of the Holy Spirit, Acts 2:17, 18, 33, RV, “He hath poured forth” (KJV, “... shed forth”); Titus 3:6, RV, “poured out” (KJV, “shed”); (c) of the emptying of the contents of the bowls (KJV, “vials”) of divine wrath, Rev. 16:1-4, 8, 10, 12, 17; (d) of the shedding of the blood of saints by the foes of God, Rev. 16:6, RV, “poured out” (KJV, “shed”); some mss. have it in Acts 22:20. See RUN, SHED, SPILL.

4. ekchuno (ἐκχέω, 1632) or ekchunno, a Hellenistic form of No. 3, is used of the blood of Christ, Luke 22:20, RV “is poured out” (KJV, “is shed”); of the Holy Spirit, Acts 10:45. See GUSH OUT, RUN, SHED, SPILL.

5. epicheo (ἐπιχέω, 2022), “to pour upon” (epi), is used in Luke 10:34, of the oil and wine used by the good Samaritan on the wounds of him who had fallen among robbers.¶

Note: For the KJV, “poured out” in Rev. 14:10 (RV, “prepared”), see MINGLE, No. 2.

POVERTY

ptochēia (πτωχεία, 4432), “destitution” (akin to ptochēuo, see POOR), is used of the “poverty” which Christ voluntarily experienced on our behalf, 2 Cor. 8:9; of the destitute condition of saints in Judea, v. 2; of the condition of the church in Smyrna, Rev. 2:9, where the word is used in a general sense. Cf. synonymous words under POOR.¶

For POWDER see GRIND

POWER (Noun, and Verb, to have, bring under)

A. Nouns.

1. dunamis (δύναμις, 1411), for the different meanings of which see ABILITY, MIGHT, is sometimes used, by metonymy, of persons and things, e.g., (a) of God, Matt. 26:64; Mark 14:62; (b) of angels, e.g., perhaps in Eph. 1:21, RV, “power,” KJV, “might” (cf. Rom. 8:38; 1 Pet. 3:22); (c) of that which manifests God’s “power”: Christ, 1 Cor. 1:24; the gospel, Rom. 1:16; (d) of mighty works (RV, marg., “power” or “powers”), e.g., Mark 6:5, “mighty work”; so 9:39, RV (KJV, “miracle”); Acts 2:22 (ditto); 8:13, “miracles”; 2 Cor. 12:12, RV, “mighty works” (KJV, “mighty deeds”).

Note: For different meanings of synonymous terms, see Note under DOMINION, A, No. 1.

2. exousia (ἐξουσία, 1849) denotes “freedom of action, right to act”; used of God, it is absolute, unrestricted, e.g., Luke 12:5 (RV marg., “authority”); in Acts 1:7 “right of disposal” is what is indicated; used of men, authority is delegated. Angelic beings are called “powers” in Eph. 3:10 (cf. 1:21); 6:12; Col. 1:16; 2:15 (cf. 2:10). See AUTHORITY, No. 1, see also PRINCIPALITY.

3. ischus (ἰσχὺς, 2479), “ability force, strength,” is nowhere translated “power” in the RV (KJV in 2 Thess. 1:9). See ABILITY, No. 2.

4. kratos (κράτος, 2904) is translated “power” in the RV and KJV in 1 Tim. 6:16; Heb. 2:14; in Eph. 1:19 (last part); 6:10, KJV, “power” (RV, “strength”): see DOMINION, A, No. 1, STRENGTH, A, No. 3.

5. dunaton (δυνατός, 1415**), the neuter of the adjective dunatos, “powerful” (akin to No. 1), is used as a noun with the article in Rom. 9:22, “(to make His) power (known).” See ABLE.

6. arche (ἀρχή, 746), “a beginning, rule,” is translated “power” in Luke 20:20, KJV (RV, “rule”). See BEGINNING, B.

B. Verb.

exousiazō (ἐξουσιάζω, 1850), “to exercise authority” (akin to A, No. 2), is used (a) in the active voice, Luke 22:25, RV, “have authority” (KJV, “exercise authority”), of the “power” of rulers; 1 Cor. 7:4 (twice), of marital relations and conditions; (b) in the passive voice, 1 Cor. 6:12, to be brought under the “power” of a thing; here, this verb and the preceding one connected with it, exesti, present a paronomasia, which Lightfoot brings out as follows: “All are within my power; but I will not put myself under the power of any one of all things.” See AUTHORITY, B, No. 1.¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 13:14, 15, KJV, didomi, “to give,” is translated “(he) had power”; RV, “it was given (him)” and “it was given unto him”; the KJV misses the force of the permissive will of God in the actings of the Beast. (2) In Rom. 16:25, KJV, dunamai, “to be able,” is translated “that is of power” (RV, “that is able”). See ABLE. (3) The subject of power in Scripture may be viewed under the following heads: (a) its original source, in the Persons in the Godhead; (b) its exercise by God in creation, its preservation and its government; (c) special manifestations of divine “power,” past, present and future; (d) “power” existent in created beings, other than man, and in inanimate nature; (e) committed to man, and misused by him; (f) committed to those who, on becoming believers, were “empowered” by the Spirit of God, are indwelt by Him, and will exercise it hereafter for God’s glory.

POWERFUL, POWERFULLY

A. Adjectives.

1. energes (ἐνεργής, 1756): see ACTIVE.

2. ischuros (ἰσχυρός, 2478), “strong, mighty,” akin to ischus (see POWER, A, No. 3), is translated “powerful” in 2 Cor. 10:10, KJV (RV, “strong”). See STRONG.

B. Adverb.

eutonōs (εὐτόνως, 2159) signifies “vigorously, vehemently” (eu, “well,” teino, “to stretch”), Luke 23:10, “vehemently,” of the accusation of the chief priests and scribes against Christ; Acts 18:28, RV, “powerfully” (KJV, “mightily”), of Apollos in confuting Jews.¶ In the Sept., Josh. 6:8.¶

Note: For “is powerful,” 2 Cor. 13:3, RV, see MIGHTY, C.

For PRACTICES see COVETOUS, B, No. 3

PRACTICE

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

prasso (πράσσω, 4238) is translated by the verb “to practice” in the RV in the following passages (the KJV nowhere renders the verb thus): John 3:20 (marg.); 5:29 (marg.); Acts 19:19; Rom. 1:32 (twice); 2:1, 2, 3; 7:15, 19; Gal. 5:21. See DO, No. 2.

For PRAETORIUM and PRAETORIAN GUARD see PALACE

PRAISE

A. Nouns.

1. ainos (αἶνος, 136), primarily “a tale, narration,” came to denote “praise”; in the NT only of praise to God, Matt. 21:16; Luke 18:43.¶

2. epainos (ἐπαινος, 1868), a strengthened form of No. 1 (epi upon), denotes “approbation, commendation, praise”; it is used (a) of those on account of, and by reason of, whom as God’s heritage, “praise” is to be ascribed to God, in respect of His glory (the exhibition of His character and operations), Eph. 1:12 in v. 14, of the whole company, the church, viewed as “God’s own possession” (RV); in v. 6, with particular reference to the glory of His grace towards them; in Phil. 1:11, as the result of “the fruits of righteousness” manifested in them through the power of Christ; (b) of “praise” bestowed by God, upon the Jew spiritually (Judah = “praise”), Rom. 2:29; bestowed upon believers hereafter at the judgment seat of Christ, 1 Cor. 4:5 (where the definite article indicates that the “praise” will be exactly in accordance with each person’s actions); as the issue of present trials, “at the revelation of Jesus Christ,” 1 Pet. 1:7; (c) of whatsoever is “praiseworthy,” Phil. 4:8; (d) of the approbation by churches of those who labor faithfully in the ministry of the gospel, 2 Cor. 8:18; (e) of the approbation of well-doers by human rulers, Rom. 13:3; 1 Pet. 2:14.¶

3. ainesis (αἴνεσις, 133), “praise” (akin to No. 1), is found in Heb. 13:15, where it is metaphorically represented as a sacrificial offering.¶

Notes: (1) In 1 Pet. 2:9, KJV, arete, “virtue, excellence,” is translated “praises” (RV, “excellencies”). (2) In the following the KJV translates doxa, “glory,” by “praise” (RV, “glory”); John 9:24, where “give glory to God” signifies “confess thy sins” (cf. Josh. 7:19, indicating the genuine confession of facts in one’s life which gives glory to God); 12:43 (twice); 1 Pet. 4:11.

B. Verbs

1. aineo (αἰνέω, 134), “to speak in praise of, to praise” (akin to A, No. 1), is always used of “praise” to God, (a) by angels, Luke 2:13; (b) by men, Luke 2:?: 19:37; 24:53; Acts 2:20, 47; 3:8, 9; Rom. 15:11 (No. 2 In some texts); Rev. 19:5.¶

2. epaineo (ἐπαινέω, 1867), akin to A, No. 2, is rendered “praise,” 1 Cor. 11:2, 17, 22: see COMMEND, No. 1.

3. humneo (ὑμνέω, 5214) denotes (a) transitively, “to sing, to laud, sing to the praise of” (Eng., “hymn”), Acts 16:25, KJV, “sang praises” (RV, “singing hymns”); Heb. 2:12, RV, “will I sing (Thy) praise,” KJV, “will I sing praise (unto Thee),” lit., “I will hymn Thee”; (b) intransitively, “to sing,” Matt. 26:30; Mark 14:26, in both places of the singing of the paschal hymns (Ps. 113-118, and 136), called by Jews the Great Hallel.¶

4. psallo (ψάλλω, 5567), primarily, “to twitch” or “twang” (as a bowstring, etc.), then, “to play” (a stringed instrument with the fingers), in the Sept., to sing psalms, denotes, in the NT, to sing a hymn, sing “praise”; in Jas. 5:13, RV, “sing praise” (KJV, “sing psalms”). See MELODY, SING.

5. exomologeō (ἐξομολογέω, 1843) in Rom. 15:9, RV, “will I give praise” (KJV, and RV marg., “I will confess”): see CONFESS, A, No. 2 (c).

Note: In Luke 1:64, KJV, eulogeo, “to bless,” is translated “praised” (RV, “blessing”).

PRATE

phluareo (φλυαρέω, 5396) signifies “to talk nonsense” (from phluo, “to babble”; cf. the adjective phluaros, “babbling, garrulous, tattlers,” 1 Tim. 5:13), “to raise false accusations,” 3 John 10.¶

PRAY, PRAYER

A. Verbs.

1. euchomai (εὐχομαι, 2172), “to pray (to God),” is used with this meaning in 2 Cor. 13:7; v. 9, RV, “pray” (KJV, “wish”); Jas. 5:16; 3 John 2, RV, “pray” (KJV, wish). Even when the RV and KJV translate by “I would,” Acts 26:29, or “wished for,” Acts 27:29 (RV, marg., “prayed”), or “could wish,” Rom. 9:3 (RV, marg., “could pray”), the indication is that “prayer” is involved.¶

2. proseuchomai (προσεύχομαι, 4336), “to pray,” is always used of “prayer” to God, and is the most frequent word in this respect, especially in the Synoptists and Acts, once in Romans, 8:26; in Ephesians, 6:18; in Philippians, 1:9; in 1 Timothy, 2:8; in Hebrews, 13:18; in Jude, v. 20. For the injunction in 1 Thess. 5:17, see CEASE, C.

3. erotao (ἐρωτάω, 2065), “to ask,” is translated by the verb to pray in Luke 14:18, 19; 16:27; John 4:31; 14:16; 16:26; 17:9, 15, 20; in Acts 23:18, RV, “asked” (KJV “prayed”); in 1 John 5:16, RV, “should make request” (KJV “shall pray”). See ASK, A, No. 2.

4. deomai (δέομαι, 1189), “to desire,” in 2 Cor. 5:20; 8:4, RV, “beseech” (KJV, “pray”): see BESEECH, No. 3.

Notes: (1) Parakaleo, “to call to one’s aid,” is rendered by the verb “to pray” in the KJV in the following: Matt. 26:53 (RV, “beseech”); so Mark 5:17, 18; Acts 16:9; in 24:4, RV, “intreat”; in 27:34, RV, “beseech.” See BESEECH, No. 1. (2) In 1 Thess. 5:23 and 2 Tim. 4:16, there is no word in the original for “I pray,” see the RV.

B. Nouns.

1. euche (εὐχή, 2171), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “a prayer,” Jas. 5:15; “a vow,” Acts 18:18 and 21:23. See VOW.¶

2. proseuche (προσευχή, 4335), akin to A, No. 2, denotes (a) “prayer” (to God), the most frequent term, e.g., Matt. 21:22; Luke 6:12, where the phrase is not to be taken literally as if it meant, “the prayer of God” (subjective genitive), but objectively, “prayer to God.” In Jas. 5:17, “He prayed fervently,” RV, is, lit., “he prayed with prayer” (a Hebraistic form); in the following the word is used with No. 3: Eph. 6:18; Phil. 4:6; 1 Tim. 2:1; 5:5; (b) “a place of prayer,” Acts 16:13, 16, a place outside the city wall, RV.

3. deesis (δέησις, 1162), primarily “a wanting, a need” (akin to A, No. 4), then, “an asking, entreaty, supplication,” in the NT is always addressed to God and always rendered “supplication” or “supplications” in the RV; in the KJV “prayer,” or “prayers,” in Luke 1:13; 2:37; 5:33; Rom. 10:1; 2 Cor. 1:11; 9:14; Phil. 1:4 (in the 2nd part, “request”); 1:19; 2 Tim. 1:3; Heb. 5:7; Jas. 5:16; 1 Pet. 3:12.

4. enteuxis (ἐντευξις, 1783) is translated “prayer” in 1 Tim. 4:5; see INTERCESSION.

Notes: (1) Proseuche is used of “prayer” in general; deesis stresses the sense of need; it is used sometimes of request from man to man.

(2) In the papyri enteuxis is the regular word for a petition to a superior. For the synonymous word aitema see PETITION; for hiketeria, Heb. 5:7, see SUPPLICATION.

(3) “Prayer is properly addressed to God the Father Matt. 6:6; John 16:23; Eph. 1:17; 3:14, and the Son, Acts 7:59; 2 Cor. 12:8; but in no instance in the NT is prayer addressed to the Holy Spirit distinctively, for whereas the Father is in Heaven, Matt. 6:9, and the Son is at His right hand, Rom. 8:34, the Holy Spirit is in and with the believers, John 14:16, 17.

“Prayer is to be offered in the Name of the Lord Jesus, John 14:13, that is, the prayer must accord with His character, and must be presented in the same spirit of dependence and submission that marked Him, Matt. 11:26; Luke 22:42.

“The Holy Spirit, being the sole interpreter of the needs of the human heart, makes His intercession therein; and inasmuch as prayer is impossible to man apart from His help, Rom. 8:26, believers are exhorted to pray at all seasons in the Spirit, Eph. 6:18; cf. Jude 20, and Jas. 5:16, the last clause of which should probably be read ‘the inwrought [i.e., by the Holy Spirit] supplication of righteous man availeth much’ (or ‘greatly prevails’ ischuo, as in Acts 19:16, 20).

“None the less on this account is the understanding to be engaged in prayer, 1 Cor. 14:15, and the will, Col. 4:12; Acts 12:5 (where ‘earnestly’ is, lit., ‘stretched out’) and so in Luke 22:44.

“Faith is essential to prayer, Matt. 21:22; Mark 11:24; Jas. 1:5-8, for faith is the recognition of, and the committal of ourselves and our matters to, the faithfulness of God.

“Where the Jews were numerous, as at Thessalonica, they had usually a Synagogue, Acts 17:1; where they were few, as at Philippi, they had merely a proseuche, or ‘place of prayer,’ of much smaller dimensions, and commonly built by a river for the sake of the water necessary to the preliminary ablutions prescribed by Rabbinic tradition, Acts 16:13, 16.”*

PREACH, PREACHING

A. Verbs.

1. euangelizo (εὐαγγελίζω, 2097) is almost always used of “the good news” concerning the Son of God as proclaimed in the gospel [exceptions are e.g., Luke 1:19; 1 Thess. 3:6, in which the phrase “to bring (or show) good (or glad) tidings” does not refer to the gospel]; Gal. 1:8 (2nd part). With reference to the gospel the phrase “to bring, or declare, good, or glad, tidings” is used in Acts 13:32; Rom. 10:15; Heb. 4:2.

---

* From Notes on Thessalonians by Hogg and Vine, pp. 189, 190.

In Luke 4:18 the RV “to preach good tidings” gives the correct quotation from Isaiah, rather than the KJV “to preach the Gospel.” In the Sept. the verb is used of any message intended to cheer the hearers, e.g. 1 Sam. 31:9; 2 Sam. 1:20. See GOSPEL, B, No. 1.

2. kerusso (κηρύσσω, 2784) signifies (a) “to be a herald,” or, in general, “to proclaim,” e.g., Matt. 3:1; Mark 1:45, “publish”; in Luke 4:18, RV, “to proclaim,” KJV, “to preach”; so verse 19; Luke 12:3; Acts 10:37; Rom. 2:21; Rev. 5:2. In 1 Pet. 3:19 the probable reference is, not to glad tidings (which there is no real evidence that Noah preached, nor is there evidence that the spirits of antediluvian people are actually “in prison”), but to the act of Christ after His resurrection in proclaiming His victory to fallen angelic spirits; (b) “to preach the gospel as a herald,” e.g., Matt. 24:14; Mark 13:10, RV, “be preached” (KJV, “be published”); 14:9; 16:15, 20; Luke 8:1; 9:2; 24:47; Acts 8:5; 19:13; 28:31; Rom. 10:14, present participle, lit., “(one) preaching,” “a preacher”; 10:15 (1st part); 1 Cor. 1:23; 15:11, 12; 2 Cor. 1:19; 4:5; 11:4; Gal. 2:2; Phil. 1:15; Col. 1:23; 1 Thess. 2:9; 1 Tim. 3:16; (c) “to preach the word,” 2 Tim. 4:2 (of the ministry of the Scriptures, with special reference to the gospel). See PROCLAIM, PUBLISH.

3. proeuangelizomai (προευαγγελίζομαι, 4283): see GOSPEL, B, No. 2.

4. prokerusso (προκηρύσσω, 4296), lit., “to proclaim as a herald” (pro, before, and No. 2), is used in Acts 13:24, “had first preached.” Some mss. have the verb in Acts 3:20; for the best see APPOINT, No. 12.¶

5. parrhesiazomai (παρρησιάζομαι, 3955), “to be bold in speech,” is translated “to preach boldly” in Acts 9:27 (2nd part); in v. 29, RV (KJV, “he spake boldly”). See BOLD, A, No. 2.

Notes: (1) For diangelo, translated “preach” in Luke 9:60, see DECLARE, A, No. 3.

(2) Katangello, “to proclaim,” is always so translated in the RV; the KJV renders it by “to preach” in Acts 4:2; 13:5, 38; 15:36; 17:3, 13; 1 Cor. 9:14; Col. 1:28. (3) Laleo, “to speak,” is translated “preached,” Mark 2:2, KJV, “preached” (RV, “spake”); in Acts 8:25, 1st part, KJV (RV, “spoken”); so in 13:42 and 14:25; “preaching” in Acts 11:19, KJV, but what is indicated here is not a formal “preaching” by the believers scattered from Jerusalem, but a general testimony to all with whom they came into contact; in 16:6, RV, “to speak” (KJV, “to preach”). (4) For dialegomai, in KJV of Acts 20:7, 9, see DISCOURSE. (5) For KJV, “preached” in Heb. 4:2 (2nd part), see HEARING. (6) In Rom. 15:19 pleroo, “to fulfill” (RV, marg.), is rendered “I have fully preached.”

B. Nouns.

kerugma (κήρυγμα, 2782), “a proclamation by a herald” (akin to A, No. 2), denotes “a message, a preaching” (the substance of what is “preached” as distinct from the act of “preaching”), Matt. 12:41; Luke 11:32; Rom. 16:25; 1 Cor. 1:21; 2:4; 15:14; in 2 Tim. 4:17 and Titus 1:3, RV, “message,” marg., “proclamation,” KJV, “preaching.” See MESSAGE.¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 30:5; Prov. 9:3; Jonah 3:2.¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 1:18, KJV, logos, “a word,” is translated “preaching,” RV, “the word (of the Cross),” i.e., not the act of “preaching,” but the substance of the testimony, all that God has made known concerning the subject. For Heb. 4:2, KJV, see HEAR, B, No. 1.

PREACHER

kerux (κήρυξ, 2783), “a herald” (akin to A, No. 2 and B, above), is used (a) of the “preacher” of the gospel, 1 Tim. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:11; (b) of Noah, as a “preacher” of righteousness, 2 Pet. 2:5.¶

Notes: (1) For “a preacher,” in Rom. 10:14, where the verb kerusso is used, see PREACH, A, No. 2. (2) Kerux indicates the “preacher” as giving a proclamation; euangelistes points to his message as glad tidings; apostolos suggests his relationship to Him by whom he is sent.

PRECEDE

phthano (φθάνω, 5348), “to anticipate, to come sooner,” is translated “shall (in no wise) precede” in 1 Thess. 4:15, RV (KJV, “prevent”), i.e., “shall in no wise obtain any advantage over” (the verb does not convey the thought of a mere succession of one event after another); the apostle, in reassuring the bereaved concerning their departed fellow believers, declares that, as to any advantage, the dead in Christ will “rise first.” See ATTAIN, No. 3, COME, No. 32.

PRECEPT

1. entole (ἐντολή, 1785), “a commandment,” is translated “precept” in Mark 10:5 (RV, “commandment”); so Heb. 9:19. See COMMANDMENT, No. 2.

2. entalma (ἐνταλμα, 1778) is always translated “precepts” in the RV; see COMMANDMENT, No. 3.

PRECIOUS, PRECIOUSNESS

1. timios (τίμιος, 5093), translated “precious,” e.g., in Jas. 5:7; 1 Pet. 1:19; 2 Pet. 1:4; in 1 Cor. 3:12, KJV (RV, “costly”); see COSTLY, B, No. 1, DEAR, No. 1.

2. entimos (1784), “precious,” 1 Pet. 2:4, 6: see DEAR, No. 2.

3. poluteles (πολυτελής, 4185), “very expensive,” translated “very precious” in Mark 14:3, KJV (RV, “very costly”); see COSTLY, B, No. 2.

4. polutimos (πολύτιμος, 4186), “of great value”; comparative degree in 1 Pet. 1:7; see COSTLY, B, No. 3, DEAR, No. 1 (for a less authentic reading).

5. barutimos (βαρύτιμος, 927), “of great value, exceeding precious” (barus, “weighty,” time, value), is used in Matt. 26:7.¶

6. isotimos (ἰσότιμος, 2472), “of equal value, held in equal honor” (isos, “equal,” and time, is used in 2 Pet. 1:1, “a like precious (faith),” RV (marg., “an equally precious”).¶

Note: In 1 Pet. 2:7, KJV, the noun time, is translated “precious” (RV, “preciousness”). See HONOR, No. 1.

PREDESTINATE

proorizo (προορίζω, 4309): see DETERMINE.

Note: This verb is to be distinguished from proginosko, “to foreknow”; the latter has special reference to the persons foreknown by God; proorizo has special reference to that to which the subjects of His foreknowledge are “predestinated.” See FOREKNOW, A and B.

PREEMINENCE (to have the)

1. proteuo (πρωτεύω, 4409), “to be first” (protos), “to be preeminent,” is used of Christ in relation to the Church, Col. 1:18.¶

2. philoproteuo (φιλοπρωτεύω, 5383), lit., “to love to be preeminent” (philos, “loving”), “to strive to be first,” is said of Diotrephes, 3 John 9.¶

PREFER, PREFERRING

proegeomai (προηγέομαι, 4285), “to go before and lead,” is used in Rom. 12:10, in the sense of taking the lead in showing deference one to another, “(in honor) preferring one another.”¶

Notes: (1) In John 1:15, 30, KJV, ginomai, “to become,” is translated “is preferred” (RV, “is become”); some mss. have it again in v. 27. (2) For prokrima, 1 Tim. 5:21 (KJV, “preferring one before another”), see PREJUDICE.

PREJUDICE

prokrima (πρόκριμα, 4299) denotes “prejudging” (akin to prokrino, “to judge beforehand”), 1 Tim. 5:21, RV, “prejudice” (marg., “preference”), preferring one person, another being put aside, by unfavorable judgment due to partiality.¶

PREMEDITATE

Note: This is the KJV rendering of meletao, “to care for,” which occurs in some mss. in Mark 13:11, “(neither) do ye premeditate.” It is absent from the best mss. See IMAGINE.

PREPARATION, PREPARE, PREPARED

A. Nouns.

1. hetoimasia (ἑτοιμασία, 2091) denotes (a) “readiness,” (b) “preparation”; it is found in Eph. 6:15, of having the feet shod with the “preparation” of the gospel of peace; it also has the meaning of firm footing (foundation), as in the Sept. of Ps. 89:14 (RV, “foundation”); if that is the meaning in Eph. 6:15, the gospel itself is to be the firm footing of the believer, his walk being worthy of it and therefore a testimony in regard to it. See READY.¶

2. paraskeue (παρασκευή, 3904) denotes “preparation, equipment.” The day on which Christ died is called “the Preparation” in Mark 15:42 and John 19:31; in John 19:42 “the Jews’ Preparation,” RV; in 19:14 it is described as “the Preparation of the Passover”; in Luke 23:54, RV, “the day of the Preparation (and the Sabbath drew on).” The same day is in view in Matt. 27:62, where the events recorded took place on “the day after the Preparation” (RV). The reference would be to the 6th day of the week. The title arose from the need of preparing food etc. for the Sabbath. Apparently it was first applied only to the afternoon of the 6th day; later, to the whole day. In regard to the phraseology in John 19:14, many hold this to indicate the “preparation” for the paschal feast. It probably means “the Preparation day,” and thus falls in line with the Synoptic Gospels. In modern Greek and ecclesiastical Latin, Parasceve = Friday.¶

B. Verbs.

1. hetoimazo (ἐτοιμάζω, 2090), “to prepare, make ready,” is used (I) absolutely, e.g., Mark 14:15; Luke 9:52; (II), with an object, e.g., (a) of those things which are ordained (1) by God, such as future positions of authority, Matt. 20:23; the coming Kingdom, 25:34; salvation personified in Christ, Luke 2:31; future blessings, 1 Cor. 2:9; a city, Heb. 11:16; a place of refuge for the Jewish remnant, Rev. 12:6; Divine judgments on the world, Rev. 8:6; 9:7, 15; 16:12; eternal fire, for the Devil and his angels, Matt. 25:41; (2) by Christ: a place in Heaven for His followers, John 14:2, 3; (b) of human “preparation” for the Lord, e.g., Matt. 3:3; 26:17, 19; Luke 1:17 (“make ready”), 76; 3:4, KJV (RV, “make ye ready”); 9:52 (“to make ready”); 23:56; Rev. 19:7; 21:2; in 2 Tim. 2:21, of “preparation” of oneself for “every good work”; (c) of human “preparations” for human objects, e.g., Luke 12:20, RV, “thou hast prepared” (KJV, “provided”); Acts 23:23; Philem. 22.

2. katartizo (καταρτίζω, 2675), “to furnish completely, prepare,” is translated “didst Thou prepare” in Heb. 10:5 (KJV, “hast Thou prepared”), of the body of the Lord Jesus. See FIT, B, No. 3.

3. kataskeuazo (κατασκευάζω, 2680), “to prepare, make ready” (kata, used intensively, skeue, “equipment”), is so translated in Matt. 11:10; Mark 1:2; Luke 1:17; 7:27; Heb. 9:2, RV (KJV, “made”); 9:6, RV (KJV, “were ... ordained”); 11:7; 1 Pet. 3:20. See BUILD, No. 5.

4. paraskeuazo (παρασκευάζω, 3903), “to prepare, make ready” (para, “beside”), is used of making ready a meal, Acts 10:10: in the middle voice, of “preparing” oneself for war, 1 Cor. 14:8, RV; in the passive voice, of “preparing” an offering for the needy, 2 Cor. 9:2, “hath been prepared,” RV (KJV, “was ready”); v. 3, “ye may be prepared,” RV (KJV, “ye may be ready”). See READY.¶

5. proetoimazo (προετοιμάζω, 4282), “to prepare beforehand” (pro, “before,” and No. 1), is used of good works which God “afore prepared,” for fulfillment by believers, Eph. 2:10, RV (KJV, “hath before ordained,” marg., “prepared”); of “vessels of mercy,” as “afore prepared” by God “unto glory,” Rom. 9:23. See ORDAIN.¶

Notes: (1) Etymologically, the difference between hetoimazo and paraskeuazo, is that the former is connected with what is real (etumos) or ready, the latter with skeuos, an article ready to hand, an implement, vessel. (2) In Mark 14:15, KJV, hetoimos, “ready,” is translated “prepared” (RV, “ready”). It is absent in some mss. See READY.

PRESENCE

A. Nouns.

1. prosopon (πρόσωπον, 4383): see FACE, No. 1 (also APPEARANCE, No. 2).

2. parousi (παρουσία, 3952): see COMING (Noun), No. 3.

B. Adverbs and Prepositions.

1. emprosthen (ἐμπροσθεν, 1715): see BEFORE, A, No. 4.

2. enopion (ἐνώπιον, 1799) is translated “in the presence of” in Luke 1:19; 13:26; 14:10; 15:10; John 20:30; Rev. 14:10 (twice); in 1 Cor. 1:29 KJV, “in His presence” (RV, “before God”): see BEFORE, A, No. 9.

3. katenopion (κατενώπιον, 2714), kata, “down,” and No. 2, “in the very presence of,” is translated “before the presence of” in Jude 24. See BEFORE, A, No. 10.

4. apenanti (ἀπέναντι, 561), “over against, opposite to,” is translated “in the presence of” in Acts 3:16. See BEFORE, A, No. 7.

PRESENT (to be)

A. Verbs.

1. pareimi (πάρεμι, 3918) signifies (a) “to be by, at hand or present,” of persons, e.g., Luke 13:1; Acts 10:33; 24:19; 1 Cor. 5:3; 2 Cor. 10:2, 11; Gal. 4:18, 20; of things, John 7:6, of a particular season in the Lord’s life on earth, “is (not yet) come,” or “is not yet at hand”; Heb. 12:11, of chastening “(for the) present” (the neuter of the present participle, used as a noun); in 13:5 “such things as ye have” is, lit., “the things that are present”; 2 Pet. 1:12, of the truth “(which) is with (you)” (not as KJV, “the present truth,” as if of special doctrines applicable to a particular time); in v. 9 “he that lacketh” is lit., “to whom are not present”; (b) “to have arrived or come,” Matt. 26:50, “thou art come,” RV; John 11:28; Acts 10:21; Col. 1:6.

3. ephistemi (ἐφίστημι, 2186), “to set over, stand over,” is translated “present” in Acts 28:2. See ASSAULT, A, COME, No. 27.

4. paraginomai (παράγινομαι, 3854), “to be beside” (para, “by,” ginomai, “to become”), is translated “were present” in Acts 21:18. See COME, No. 13.

5. parakeimai (παράκειμαι, 3873), “to lie beside” (para, and keimai, “to lie”), “to be near,” is translated “is present” in Rom. 7:18, 21.¶

6. sumpareimi (συνπάρεμι, 4840), “to be present with” (sun, with, and No. 1), is used in Acts 25:24.¶

B. Adverbs.

1. arti (ἄρτι, 737), “just, just now, this moment,” is rendered “(this) present (hour)” in 1 Cor. 4:11; in 1 Cor. 15:6, RV, “now” (KJV, “this present”). See NOW.

2. nun (νῦν, 3568), “now,” is translated “present,” with reference to this age or period (“world”), in Rom. 8:18; 11:5; 2 Tim. 4:10; Titus 2:12. See HENCEFORTH, NOW.

Notes: (1) Endemeo, “to be at home,” is so rendered in 2 Cor. 5:6 (KJV and RV); in vv. 8, 9, RV, “at home” (KJV, “present”). See HOME. (2) In John 14:25, KJV, meno, “to abide,” is translated “being present” (RV, “abiding”). (3) In Luke 5:17 the RV has “with Him,” for KJV, italicized, “present.”

PRESENT (Verb)

1. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936) denotes, when used transitively, “to place beside” (para, “by,” histemi, “to set”), “to present,” e.g., Luke 2:22; Acts 1:3, “He shewed (Himself)”;
9:41; 23:33; Rom. 6:13 (2nd part), RV, “present,” KJV “yield”; so 6:19 (twice); 12:1; 2 Cor. 4:14; 11:2; Eph. 5:27; Col. 1:22, 28; 2 Tim. 2:15, RV (KJV, “shew”). See SHEW.

2. paristano (παρίστημι, 3936), a late present form of No. 1, is used in Rom. 6:13 (1st part) and v. 16, RV, “present” (KJV, “yield”).

Notes: (1) In Jude 24, KJV, histemi, “to cause to stand, to set,” is translated “to present” (RV, “to set”). (2) In Matt. 2:11, KJV, prosphero, “to offer,” is translated “presented” (RV, “offered”).

For PRESENTLY see FORTHWITH, No. 1, and IMMEDIATELY, No. 1
PRESERVE

1. tereo (τηρέω, 5083) is translated “to preserve” in 1 Thess. 5:23, where the verb is in the singular number, as the threefold subject, “spirit and soul and body,” is regarded as the unit, constituting the person. The aorist or “point” tense regards the continuous “preservation” of the believer as a single, complete act, without reference to the time occupied in its accomplishment; in Jude 1, KJV (RV, “kept”). See KEEP, No. 1.

2. suntereo (συντηρέω, 4933): see KEEP, No. 3.

3. zoogoneo (ζωογονέω, 2225), “to preserve alive”: see LIVE, No. 6.

4. phulasso (φυλάσσω, 5442), “to guard, protect, preserve,” is translated “preserved” in 2 Pet. 2:5, RV (KJV, “saved”). See GUARD.

Note: In 2 Tim. 4:18, KJV, sozo, “to save,” is translated “will preserve” (RV, “will save”).

For PRESS (Noun) see CROWD, A

PRESS (Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. thlibo (θλίβω, 2346), “to press, distress, trouble,” is translated “pressed” in 2 Cor. 4:8, RV (KJV, “troubled”). See AFFLICT, No. 4.

2. apothlibo (ἀποθλίβω, 598), translated “press” in Luke 8:45 (end): see CRUSH.

3. biazo (βιάζω, 971), in the middle voice, “to press violently” or “force one’s way into,” is translated “presseth” in Luke 16:16, KJV, RV, “entereth violently,” a meaning confirmed by the papyri. Moulton and Milligan also quote a passage from D. S. Sharp’s

Epictetus and the NT, speaking of “those who (try to) force their way in”; the verb suggests forceful endeavor. See ENTER, Note (3), VIOLENCE, B, No. 2.

4. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912): for the significance of this in Acts 18:5, “was constrained by the word,” RV, i.e., Paul felt the urge of the word of his testimony to the Jews in Corinth, see CONSTRAIN, No. 3. It is used with No. 1 in Luke 8:45, RV, “press” (KJV, “throng”).

5. enecho (ἐνέχω, 1758), lit., “to hold in,” also signifies “to set oneself against, be urgent against,” as the scribes and Pharisees were regarding Christ, Luke 11:53, RV, “to press upon,” marg., “set themselves vehemently against” (KJV, “to urge”). See ENTANGLE, No. 3.

6. epikeimai (ἐπίκειμαι, 1945), “to lie upon, press upon,” is rendered “pressed upon” in Luke 5:1. See IMPOSED.

7. epiipto (ἐπιπίπτω, 1968), “to fall upon,” is rendered “pressed upon” in Mark 3:10. See FALL, B, No. 5.

8. bareo (βαρέω, 916), “to weigh down, burden,” is rendered “we were pressed” in 2 Cor. 1:8, KJV (RV, “we were weighed down”). See BURDEN, B, No. 1A.

9. epibareo (ἐπιβαρέω, 1912), 2 Cor. 2:5, RV, “I press (not) too heavily” (KJV, “overcharge”). See BURDEN, B, No. 2, OVERCHARGE.

10. piezo (πιέζω, 4085), “to press down together,” is used in Luke 6:38, “pressed down,” of the character of the measure given in return for giving.¶ In the Sept., Mic. 6:15.¶

11. dioko (διώκω, 1377), “to pursue,” is used as a metaphor from the footrace, in Phil. 3:12, 14, of “speeding on earnestly,” RV, “I press on.” See FOLLOW, No. 7.

12. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear, carry,” is used in the passive voice in Heb. 6:1, “let us ... press on,” RV, lit., “let us be borne on” (KJV, “go on”). See GO, Note (2), (h).

B. Noun.

epistasis (ἐπισύστασις, 1999v), primarily “a stopping, halting” (as of soldiers), then, “an incursion, onset, rush, pressure” (akin to ephistemi, “to set upon”), is so used in 2 Cor. 11:28, “(that which) presseth upon (me),” KJV, “cometh upon,” lit., “(the daily) pressure (upon me)”; some have taken the word in its other meaning “attention,” which perhaps is accounted for by the variant reading of the pronoun (mou, “my”, instead of moi, “to me, upon me”), but that does not adequately describe the “pressure” or onset due to the constant call upon the apostle for all kinds of help, advice, counsel, exhortation, decisions as to difficulties, disputes, etc. Cf. the other occurrence of the word in Acts

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

24:12, “stirring up,” RV (KJV, “raising”), lit. “making a stir” (in some mss., episustasis).

See COME, Notes at end (9).¶

PRETENSE

prophasis (πρόφασις, 4392): see CLOKE (Pretense), No. 2.

PREVAIL

1. ischuo (ἰσχύω, 2480), “to be strong, powerful,” is translated “to prevail” in Acts 19:16, 20; Rev. 12:8. See ABLE, B, No. 4.

2. katischuo (κατισχύω, 2729), “to be strong against” (kata, “against,” and No. 1), is used in Matt. 16:18, negatively of the gates of hades; in Luke 21:36 (in the most authentic mss., some have kataxioo, “to count worthy”; see KJV), of “prevailing” to escape judgments at the close of this age; in Luke 23:23, of the voices of the chief priests, rulers and people against Pilate regarding the crucifixion of Christ.¶

3. opheleo (ὠφελέω, 5623), “to benefit, do good, profit,” is translated “prevailed” in Matt. 27:24, RV (KJV, “could prevail”), of the conclusion formed by Pilate concerning the determination of the chief priests, elders and people. The meaning of the verb with the negative is better expressed by the phrase “he would do no good”; so in John 12:19, “ye prevail (nothing),” lit., “ye are doing no good.” See ADVANTAGE, BETTERED, PROFIT.

4. nikao (νικάω, 3528), “to conquer, prevail,” is used as a law term in Rom. 3:4, “(that) Thou ... mightest prevail [KJV, ‘overcome’] (when Thou comest into judgment)”; that the righteousness of the judge’s verdict compels an acknowledgement on the part of the accused, is inevitable where God is the judge. God’s promises to Israel provided no guarantee that an unrepentant Jew would escape doom. In Rev. 5:5, KJV, “hath prevailed” (RV, “hath overcome”). See CONQUER, No. 1.

For PREVENT, 1 Thess. 4:15, KJV, see PRECEDE: Matt. 17:25, KJV, see SPEAK, No. 11

PRICE

A. Noun.

time (τιμή, 5092) denotes “a valuing,” hence, objectively, (a) “price paid or received,” Matt. 27:6, 9; Acts 4:34 (plural); 5:2, 3; 7:16, RV, “price (in silver),” KJV, “sum (of money)”; 19:19 (plural); 1 Cor. 6:20; 7:23; (b) “value, honor, preciousness.” See HONOR, PRECIOUSNESS.

B. Verb.

timao (τιμάω, 5091), “to fix the value, to price,” is translated “was priced” and “did price” in the RV of Matt. 27:9 (KJV, “was valued” and “did value”). See HONOR.

C. Adjectives

1. poluteles (πολυτελής, 4185), “of great price,” 1 Pet. 3:4: see COST, B, No. 2.

2. polutimos (πολύτιμος, 4186), “of great price,” Matt. 13:46: see COST, B, No. 3.

For PRICK (Noun) see GOAD

PRICK (Verb)

katanusso (κατανύσσω, 2660), primarily, “to strike or prick violently, to stun,” is used of strong emotion, in Acts 2:37 (passive voice), “they were pricked (in their heart).”¶ Cf. katanuxis, “stupor, torpor of mind,” Rom. 11:8.¶

PRIDE

A. Nouns.

1. alazonia (or —eia) (ἀλαζονεία, 212) is translated “pride” in 1 John 2:16, KJV. See BOAST, B, No. 2, VAINGLORY.

2. huperephania (ὑπερηφανία, 5243), “pride,” Mark 7:22: see HAUGHTY.¶

B. Verb.

tuphoo (τυφώω, 5187), “lifted up with pride,” 1 Tim. 3:6, KJV (RV, “puffed up”). See HIGH-MINDED.

PRIEST

1. hiereus (ἱερεύς, 2409), “one who offers sacrifice and has the charge of things pertaining thereto,” is used (a) of a “priest” of the pagan god Zeus, Acts 14:13; (b) of Jewish “priests,” e.g., Matt. 8:4; 12:4, 5; Luke 1:5, where allusion is made to the 24 courses of “priests” appointed for service in the Temple (cf. 1 Chron. 24:4ff.); John 1:19; Heb. 8:4; (c) of believers, Rev. 1:6; 5:10; 20:6. Israel was primarily designed as a nation to be a kingdom of “priests,” offering service to God, e.g., Ex. 19:6, the Israelites having renounced their obligations, Ex. 20:19, the Aaronic priesthood was selected for the purpose, till Christ came to fulfil His ministry in offering up Himself; since then the Jewish priesthood has been abrogated, to be resumed nationally, on behalf of Gentiles, in the millennial kingdom, Is. 61:6; 66:21. Meanwhile all believers, from Jews and Gentiles, are constituted “a kingdom of priests,” Rev. 1:6 (see above), “a holy priesthood,” 1 Pet. 2:5, and “royal,” v. 9. The NT knows nothing of a sacerdotal class in contrast to the laity; all believers are commanded to offer the sacrifices mentioned in Rom. 12:1; Phil. 2:17; 4:18; Heb. 13:15, 16; 1 Pet. 2:5; (d) of Christ, Heb. 5:6; 7:11, 15, 17, 21; 8:4 (negatively); (e) of Melchizedek, as the foreshadower of Christ, Heb. 7:1, 3.

2. archiereus (ἀρχιερεύς, 749) designates (a) “the high priests” of the Levitical order, frequently called “chief priests” in the NT, and including “ex-high priests” and members of “high priestly” families, e.g., Matt. 2:4; 16:21; 20:18; 21:15; in the singular, a “high priest,” e.g., Abiathar, Mark 2:26; Annas and Caiaphas, Luke 3:2, where the RV rightly has “in the high priesthood of A. and C.” (cf. Acts 4:6). As to the combination of the two in this respect, Annas was the “high priest” from A.D. 7-14, and, by the time referred to, had been deposed for some years; his son-in-law, Caiaphas, the fourth “high priest” since his deposition, was appointed about A.D. 24. That Annas was still called the “high priest” is explained by the facts (1) that by the Mosaic law the high priesthood was held for life, Num. 35:25; his deposition was the capricious act of the Roman procurator, but he would still be regarded legally and religiously as “high priest” by the Jews; (2) that he probably still held the office of deputy-president of the Sanhedrin (cf. 2 Kings 25:18); (3) that he was a man whose age, wealth and family connections gave him a preponderant influence, by which he held the real sacerdotal power; indeed at this time the high priesthood was in the hands of a clique of some half dozen families; the language of the writers of the gospels is in accordance with this, in attributing the high priesthood rather to a caste than a person; (4) the “high priests” were at that period mere puppets of Roman authorities who deposed them at will, with the result that the title was used more loosely than in former days.

The divine institution of the priesthood culminated in the “high priest,” it being his duty to represent the whole people, e.g., Lev. 4:15, 16; ch. 16. The characteristics of the Aaronic “high priests” are enumerated in Heb. 5:1-4; 8:3; 9:7, 25; in some mss., 10:11 (RV, marg.); 13:11.

(b) Christ is set forth in this respect in the Ep. to the Hebrews, where He is spoken of as “a high priest,” 4:15; 5:5, 10; 6:20; 7:26; 8:1, 3 (RV); 9:11; “a great high priest,” 4:14; “a great priest,” 10:21; “a merciful and faithful high priest,” 2:17; “the Apostle and high priest of our confession,” 3:1, RV; “a high priest after the order of Melchizedek,” 5:10. One of the great objects of this Epistle is to set forth the superiority of Christ’s High Priesthood as being of an order different from and higher than the Aaronic, in that He is the Son of God (see especially 7:28), with a priesthood of the Melchizedek order. Seven outstanding features of His priesthood are stressed, (1) its character, 5:6, 10; (2) His commission, 5:4, 5; (3) His preparation, 2:17; 10:5; (4) His sacrifice, 8:3; 9:12, 14, 27, 28; 10:4-12; (5) His sanctuary, 4:14; 8:2; 9:11, 12, 24; 10:12, 19; (6) His ministry, 2:18; 4:15; 7:25; 8:6; 9:15, 24; (7) its effects, 2:15; 4:16; 6:19, 20; 7:16, 25; 9:14, 28; 10:14-17, 22, 29; 12:1; 13:13-17.

Note: In Acts 4:6 the adjective hieratikos, “high priestly,” is translated “of the high priest.”

PRIESTHOOD, PRIEST’S OFFICE

A. Nouns.

1. hierateuma (ἱεράτευμα, 2406) denotes “a priesthood” (akin to hierateuo, see below), “a body of priests,” consisting of all believers, the whole church (not a special order from among them), called “a holy priesthood,” 1 Pet. 2:5; “a royal priesthood,” v. 9; the former term is associated with offering spiritual sacrifices, the latter with the royal dignity of showing forth the Lord’s excellencies (RV).¶ In the Sept., Exod. 19:6; 23:22.¶

2. hierosune (ἱερωσύνη, 2420), “a priesthood,” signifies the office, quality, rank and ministry of “a priest,” Heb. 7:11, 12, 24, where the contrasts between the Levitical “priesthood” and that of Christ are set forth.¶ In the Sept., 1 Chron. 29:22.¶

3. hierateia (ἱερατεία, 2405), “a priesthood,” denotes the priest’s office, Luke 1:9; Heb. 7:5, RV, “priest’s office.”¶

B. Verb.

hierateuo (ἱερατεύω, 2407) signifies “to officiate as a priest,” Luke 1:8, “he executed the priest’s office.”¶

PRINCE

1. archegos (ἀρχηγός, 747), primarily an adjective signifying “originating, beginning,” is used as a noun, denoting “a founder, author, prince or leader,” Acts 3:15, “Prince” (marg., “Author”); 5:31; see AUTHOR, No. 2.

2. archon (ἄρχων, 758), the present participle of the verb archo, “to rule”; denotes “a ruler, a prince.” It is used as follows (“p” denoting “prince,” or “princes”; “r,” “ruler” or “rulers”): (a) of Christ, as “the Ruler (KJV, Prince) of the kings of the earth,” Rev. 1:5; (b) of rulers of nations, Matt. 20:25, RV, “r,” KJV, “p”; Acts 4:26, “r”; 7:27, “r”; 7:35, “r” (twice); (c) of judges and magistrates, Acts 16:19, “r”; Rom. 13:3, “r”; (d) of members of the Sanhedrin, Luke 14:1, RV, “r” (KJV, “chief”); 23:13, 35, “r”; so 24:20, John 3:1; 7:26, 48; 12:42, RV, “r” (KJV, “chief r.”); “r” in Acts 3:17; 4:5, 8; 13:27; 14:5; (e) of rulers of synagogues, Matt. 9:18, 23, “r”; so Luke 8:41; 18:18; (f) of the Devil, as “prince” of this world, John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; of the power of the air, Eph. 2:2, “the air” being that sphere in which the inhabitants of the world live and which, through the rebellious and godless condition of humanity, constitutes the seat of his authority; (g) of Beelzebub, the “prince” of the demons, Matt. 9:24; 12:24; Mark 3:22; Luke 11:15. See CHIEF, B, No. 10.¶

3. hegemon (ἡγεμών, 2232), “a leader, ruler,” is translated “princes” (i.e., leaders) in Matt. 2:6: see GOVERNOR, A, No. 1.

Note: For megistan, Rev. 6:15; 18:23, RV, “princes,” see LORD, No. 3.

PRINCIPAL

protos (πρῶτος, 4413), “first,” is translated “principal men” in the RV of Luke 19:47 and Acts 25:2. See CHIEF, A.

Note: In Acts 25:23 the phrase kat' exochen, lit., “according to eminence,” is translated “principal (men)”; exochē, primarily a projection (akin to execho, “to stand out”), is used here metaphorically of eminence.¶ In the Sept., Job 39:28.¶

PRINCIPALITY

arche (ἀρχή, 746), “beginning, government, rule,” is used of supramundane beings who exercise rule, called “principalities”; (a) of holy angels, Eph. 3:10, the church in its formation being to them the great expression of “the manifold (or “much-varied”) wisdom of God”; Col. 1:16; (b) of evil angels, Rom. 8:38; Col. 2:15, some would put this under (a), but see SPOIL B, No. 4; (a) and (b) are indicated in Col. 2:10. In Eph. 1:21, the RV renders it “rule” (KJV, “principality”) and in Titus 3:1, “rulers” (KJV, “principalities”). In Jude 6, RV, it signifies, not the first estate of fallen angels (as KJV), but their authoritative power, “their own” indicating that which had been assigned to them by God, which they left, aspiring to prohibited conditions. See BEGIN, B.

PRINCIPLES

1. arche (ἀρχή, 746), “beginning,” is used in Heb. 6:1, in its relative significance, of the beginning of the thing spoken of; here “the first principles of Christ,” lit., “the account (or word) of the beginning of Christ,” denotes the teaching relating to the elementary facts concerning Christ. See BEGIN, B.

2. stoicheion (στοιχείον, 4747) is translated “principles” in Heb. 5:12. See ELEMENTS.

PRINT

typos (τύπος, 5179), for which see ENSAMPLE, No. 1, is translated “print” in John 20:25 (twice), of the marks made by the nails in the hands of Christ.

PRISON, PRISON-HOUSE

1. desmoterion (δεσμοτήριον, 1201), “a place of bonds” (from desmos, “a bond,” deo, “to bind”), “a prison,” occurs in Matt. 11:2, in Acts 5:21, 23 and 16:26, RV, “prison house” (KJV, “prison”).¶

2. phulake (φυλακή, 5438), for the various meanings of which see CAGE, denotes a “prison,” e.g., Matt. 14:10; Mark 6:17; Acts 5:19; 2 Cor. 11:23; in 2 Cor. 6:5 and Heb. 11:36 it stands for the condition of imprisonment; in Rev. 2:10; 18:2, “hold” (twice, RV, marg., “prison”; in the 2nd case, KJV, “cage”); 20:7.

3. teresis (τήρησις, 5084), “a watching, keeping,” then “a place of keeping” is translated “prison” in Acts 5:18 KJV (RV “ward”). See KEEPING, B.

Notes: (1) For oikema in Acts 12:7, KJV “prison,” see CELL. (2) In Matt. 4:12, KJV, paradidomi, “to betray, deliver up,” is translated “was cast into prison” (RV, “was delivered up”); see BETRAY. In Mark 1:14, KJV, “was put in prison,” RV, as in Matt. 4:12; see PUT, No. 12.

For PRISON KEEPER see JAILOR

PRISONER

1. desmios (δέσμιος, 1198), an adjective, primarily denotes “binding, bound,” then, as a noun, “the person bound, a captive, prisoner” (akin to deo, “to bind”), Matt. 27:15, 16; Mark 15:6; Acts 16:25, 27; 23:18; 25:14, RV (KJV, “in bonds”), 27; 28:16, 17; Eph. 3:1; 4:1; 2 Tim. 1:8; Philem. 1, 9; in Heb. 10:34 and 13:3, “in bonds.” See BOND, No. 2.¶

Note: The prison at Jerusalem (Acts 5) was controlled by the priests and probably attached to the high priest’s palace, or the Temple. Paul was imprisoned at Jerusalem in the fort Antonia, Acts 23:10; at Caesarea, in Herod’s Praetorium, 23:35; probably his final imprisonment in Rome was in the Tullianum dungeon.

2. desmotes (δεσμώτης, 1202), akin to No. 1, occurs in Acts 27:1, 42.¶

3. sunaiχmalotos (συναιχμάλωτος, 4869), “a fellow prisoner,” primarily “one of fellow captives in war” (from aichme, “a spear,” and haliskomai, “to be taken”), is used by Paul of Andronicus and Junias, Rom. 16:7 of Epaphras, Philem. 23; of Aristarchus, Col. 4:10, on which Lightfoot remarks that probably his relations with the apostle in Rome excited suspicion and led to a temporary confinement, or that he voluntarily shared his captivity by living with him.¶

PRIVATE, PRIVATELY

A. Adjective.

idios (ἴδιος, 2398), one’s own, is translated “private” in 2 Pet. 1:20 (see under INTERPRETATION). See BUSINESS, B.

B. Adverbial Phrase.

kat'idian is translated “privately” in Matt. 24:3; Mark 4:34, RV (KJV, “when they were alone”); 6:32 (KJV only); 7:33, RV; 9:28; 13:3; Luke 10:23; Acts 23:19; Gal. 2:2. Contrast 2:14.

PRIVILY

lathra (λάθρα, 2977), “secretly, covertly” (from a root lath indicating “unnoticed, unknown,” seen in lanthano, “to escape notice,” lethe, “forgetfulness”), is translated “privily” in Matt. 1:19; 2:7; Acts 16:37; “secretly” in John 11:28 (in some mss., Mark 5:33). See SECRETLY.¶

Note: In Gal. 2:4, pareisaktos, an adjective (akin to pareisago, lit., “to bring in beside,” i.e., “secretly,” from para, “by the side,” eis, “into,” ago, “to bring”), is used, “privily brought in,” RV (KJV, “unawares, etc.”), i.e., as spies or traitors. Strabo, a Greek historian contemporary with Paul, uses the word of enemies introduced secretly into a city by traitors within.¶ In the same verse the verb pareiserchomai (see COME, No. 8) is translated “came in privily,” of the same Judaizers, brought in by the circumcision party to fulfill the design of establishing the ceremonial law, and thus to accomplish the overthrow of the faith; cf. in Jude 4 the verb pareisduo (or —duno), “to slip in secretly, steal in,” RV, “crept in privily” (KJV, “... unawares”). See CREEP, No. 2.

PRIVY

sunoida (σύν, 4862 and Perf. of σύν, 1492): see KNOW, No. 6.

PRIZE

1. brabeion (βραβεῖον, 1017), “a prize bestowed in connection with the games” (akin to brabeus, “an umpire,” and brabeuo, “to decide, arbitrate,” “rule,” Col. 3:15), 1 Cor. 9:24, is used metaphorically of “the reward” to be obtained hereafter by the faithful believer, Phil. 3:14; the preposition eis, “unto,” indicates the position of the goal. The “prize” is not “the high calling,” but will be bestowed in virtue of, and relation to, it, the heavenly calling, Heb. 3:1, which belongs to all believers and directs their minds and aspirations heavenward; for the “prize” see especially 2 Tim. 4:7, 8.¶

2. harpagmos (ἄρπαγμός, 725), akin to harpazo, “to seize, carry off by force,” is found in Phil. 2:6, “(counted it not) a prize,” RV (marg., “a thing to be grasped”), KJV, “(thought it not) robbery”; it may have two meanings, (a) in the active sense, “the act of seizing, robbery,” a meaning in accordance with a rule connected with its formation, (b) in the passive sense, “a thing held as a prize.” The subject is capably treated by Gifford in “The Incarnation,” pp. 28, 36, from which the following is quoted:

“In order to express the meaning of the clause quite clearly, a slight alteration is required in the RV, ‘Counted it not a prize to be on an equality with God.’ The form ‘to be’ is ambiguous and easily lends itself to the erroneous notion that to be on equality with God was something to be acquired in the future. The rendering ‘counted it not a prize that He was on an equality with God,’ is quite as accurate and more free from ambiguity.... Assuming, as we now may, that the equality was something which Christ possessed prior to His Incarnation, and then for a time resigned we have ... to choose between two meanings of the word harpagmos (1) with the active sense ‘robbery’ or ‘usurpation’ we get the following meaning: ‘Who because He was subsisting in the essential form of God, did not regard it as any usurpation that He was on an equality of glory and majesty with God, but yet emptied Himself of that coequal glory....’ (2) The passive sense gives a different meaning to the passage: “Who though He was subsisting in the essential form of God, yet did not regard His being on an equality of glory and majesty with God as a prize and a treasure to be held fast, but emptied himself thereof.”

After reviewing the arguments pro and con Gifford takes the latter to be the right meaning, as conveying the purpose of the passage “to set forth Christ as the supreme example of humility and self-renunciation.”

Note: For katabrabeuo (kata, “down,” and brabeuo, see No. 1), translated “rob (you) of your prize,” Col. 2:18, see BEGUILE, Note.

For PROBATION, RV in Rom. 5:4, see EXPERIENCE, No. 2

PROCEED

1. ekporeuomai (ἐκπορεύομαι, 1607), “to go forth,” is translated “to proceed out of” in Matt. 4:4; 15:11, RV; 15:18; Mark 7:15, RV; 7:20, RV; 7:21; 7:23, RV; Luke 4:22; John 15:26; Eph. 4:29; Rev. 1:16, RV; 4:5; 9:17, 18, RV (KJV, “issued”); 11:5; 19:15, RV; 19:21, KJV (RV, “came forth”); 22:1. See COME, No. 33, GO, Note (1).

2. exerchomai (ἐξέρχομαι, 1831) is translated “proceed” in Matt. 15:19, KJV (RV, “come forth”); John 8:42, RV, “came forth”; Jas. 3:10. The verb “to proceed” is not so suitable. See COME, No. 3.

3. prokopto (προκόπτω, 4298), lit., “to cut forward (a way),” is translated “will proceed” in 2 Tim. 2:16, RV (KJV, “will increase”) and “shall proceed” (both versions) in 3:9. See INCREASE.

4. prostithemi (προστίθημι, 4369), “to put to, to add,” is translated “proceeded” in Acts 12:3 (a Hebraism). See ADD, No. 2.

PROCLAIM

1. kerusso (κηρύσσω, 2784) is translated “to proclaim” in the RV, for KJV, “to preach,” in Matt. 10:27; Luke 4:19; Acts 8:5; 9:20. See PREACH, No. 2.

2. katangelo (καταγγέλλω, 2605), “to declare, proclaim,” is translated “to proclaim” in the RV, for KJV, to “show,” in Acts 16:17; 26:23; 1 Cor. 11:26, where the verb makes clear that the partaking of the elements at the Lord’s Supper is a “proclamation” (an evangel) of the Lord’s death; in Rom. 1:8, for KJV, “spoken of”; in 1 Cor. 2:1, for KJV, “declaring.” See also PREACH, Note (2), and DECLARE, A, No. 4.

3. plerophoreo (πληροφορέω, 4135), “to bring in full measure” (pleres, “full,” phero, “to bring”), hence, “to fulfill, accomplish,” is translated “might be fully proclaimed,” in 2 Tim. 4:17, RV, with kerugma, marg., “proclamation” (KJV “... known”). See ASSURE, B, No. 2, BELIEVE, C, Note (4), FULFILL, No. 6, KNOW, Note (2), PERSUADE, No. 2, Note, PROOF.

anthupatos (ἀνθύπατος, 446), from anti, “instead of,” and hupatos, “supreme,” denotes “a consul, one acting in place of a consul, a proconsul, the governor of a senatorial province” (i.e., one which had no standing army). The “proconsuls” were of two classes, (a) exconsuls, the rulers of the provinces of Asia and Africa, who were therefore “proconsuls” (b) those who were ex-pretors or “proconsuls” of other senatorial provinces (a pretor being virtually the same as a consul). To the former belonged the “proconsuls” at Ephesus, Acts 19:38 (KJV, “deputies”); to the latter, Sergius Paulus in Cyprus, Acts 13:7, 8, 12, and Gallio at Corinth, 18:12. In the NT times Egypt was governed by a prefect. Provinces in which a standing army was kept were governed by an imperial legate (e.g., Quirinius in Syria, Luke 2:2): see GOVERNOR, A, No 1.¶

Note: Anthupateo, “to be proconsul,” is in some texts in Acts 18:12.

PROFANE (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjective.

bebelos (βέβηλος, 952), primarily, “permitted to be trodden, accessible” (from baino, “to go,” whence belos, “a threshold”), hence, “unhallowed, profane” (opposite to hieros, “sacred”), is used of (a) persons, 1 Tim. 1:9; Heb. 12:16; (b) things, 1 Tim. 4:7; 6:20; 2 Tim. 2:16. “The natural antagonism between the profane and the holy or divine grew into a moral antagonism.... Accordingly bebelos is that which lacks all relationship or affinity to God” (Cremer, who compares koinos, “common,” in the sense of ritual uncleanness).¶

B. Verb.

bebeloo (βεβηλόω, 953), primarily, “to cross the threshold” (akin to A, which see), hence, “to profane, pollute,” occurs in Matt. 12:5 and Acts 24:6 (the latter as in 21:28, 29: cf. DEFILE A, No. 1, PARTITION).¶

PROFESS, PROFESSION

A. Verbs.

1. epangello (ἐπαγγέλλω, 1861), “to announce, proclaim, profess,” is rendered “to profess” in 1 Tim. 2:10, of godliness, and 6:21, of “the knowledge ... falsely so called.” See PROMISE.

2. homologeo (ὁμολογέω, 3670) is translated “to profess” in Matt. 7:23 and Titus 1:16; in 1 Tim. 6:12, KJV (RV, “confess”). See CONFESS.

3. phasko (φάσκω, 5335), “to affirm, assert”: see AFFIRM, No. 3.

B. Noun.

homologia (ὁμολογία, 3671), akin to A, No. 2, “confession,” is translated “profession” and “professed” in the KJV only. See CONFESS.

PROFIT (Noun and Verb), PROFITABLE, PROFITING

A. Nouns.

1. opheleia (ὠφέλεια, 5622) primarily denotes “assistance”; then, “advantage, benefit,”; profit,” in Rom. 3:1. See ADVANTAGE, No. 3.

2. ophelos (ὄφελος, 3786), “profit” in Jas. 2:14, 16: see ADVANTAGE, No. 2.

3. sumpheron (συμφέρω, 4851d), the neuter form of the present participle of sumphero (see B, No. 1), is used as a noun with the article in Heb. 12:10, “(for our)

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

profit”; in some mss. in 1 Cor. 7:35 and 10:33 (see No. 4); in 1 Cor. 12:7, preceded by pros, “with a view to, towards,” translated “to profit withal,” lit., “towards the profiting.”¶

4. sumphoros (συμφέρω, 4851d), akin to No. 3, an adjective, signifying “profitable, useful, expedient,” is used as a noun, and found in the best texts, with the article, in 1 Cor. 7:35 (see No. 3) and 10:33 (1st part), the word being understood in the 2nd part.¶

5. prokope (προκοπή, 4297), translated “profiting” in 1 Tim. 4:15, KJV (RV, “progress”); see FURTHERANCE.

B. Verbs.

1. sumphero (συμφέρω, 4851), “to be profitable,” Matt. 5:29, 30; Acts 20:20: see EXPEDIENT.

2. opheleo (ὀφελέω, 5623), akin to A, No. 1, is translated “to profit” in Matt. 15:5; 16:26; Mark 7:11; 8:36; Luke 9:25, RV; John 6:63; Rom. 2:25; 1 Cor. 13:3; 14:6; Gal. 5:2; Heb. 4:2; 13:9. See ADVANTAGE, BETTERED, PREVAIL.

3. prokopto (προκόπτω, 4298) is translated “I profited” in Gal. 1:14, KJV. See ADVANCE.

C. Adjectives.

1. chresimos (χρήσιμος, 5539), “useful” (akin to chraomai, “to use”), is translated as a noun in 2 Tim. 2:14, “to (no) profit,” lit., “to (nothing) profitable.”¶

2. euchrestos (εὐχρηστος, 2173), “useful, serviceable” (eu, “well,” chrestos, “serviceable,” akin to chraomai, see No. 1), is used in Philem. 11, “profitable,” in contrast to achrestos, “unprofitable” (a, negative), with a delightful play upon the name “Onesimus,” signifying “profitable” (from onesis, “profit”), a common name among slaves. Perhaps the prefix eu should have been brought out by some rendering like “very profitable,” “very serviceable,” the suggestion being that whereas the runaway slave had done great disservice to Philemon, now after his conversion, in devotedly serving the apostle in his confinement, he had thereby already become particularly serviceable to Philemon himself, considering that the latter would have most willingly rendered service to Paul, had it been possible. Onesimus, who had belied his name, was now true to it on behalf of his erstwhile master, who also owed his conversion to the apostle.

It is translated “meet for (the master’s) use” in 2 Tim. 2:21; “useful” in 4:11, RV (KJV, “profitable”). See USEFUL.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 31:13.¶

3. ophelimos (ὀφέλιμος, 5624), “useful, profitable” (akin to B, No. 2), is translated “profitable” in 1 Tim. 4:8, both times in the RV (KJV, “profiteth” in the 1st part), of physical exercise, and of godliness; in 2 Tim. 3:16 of the Godbreathed Scriptures; in Titus 3:8, of maintaining good works.¶

PROGRESS

prokope (προκοπή, 4297) is translated “progress” in Phil. 1:12, 25 and 1 Tim. 4:15: see FURTHERANCE.¶

PROLONG

parateino (παρτείνω, 3905), “to stretch out along” (para, “along,” teino, “to stretch”), is translated “prolonged” in Acts 20:7, RV, of Paul’s discourse: see CONTINUE, Note (1).¶

PROMISE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

1. epangelia (ἐπαγγελία, 1860), primarily a law term, denoting “a summons” (epi, “upon,” angelo, “to proclaim, announce”), also meant “an undertaking to do or give something, a promise.” Except in Acts 23:21 it is used only of the “promises” of God. It frequently stands for the thing “promised,” and so signifies a gift graciously bestowed, not a pledge secured by negotiation; thus, in Gal. 3:14, “the promise of the Spirit” denotes “the promised Spirit”: cf. Luke 24:49; Acts 2:33 and Eph. 1:13; so in Heb. 9:15, “the promise of the eternal inheritance” is “the promised eternal inheritance.” On the other hand, in Acts 1:4, “the promise of the Father,” is the “promise” made by the Father.

In Gal. 3:16, the plural “promises” is used because the one “promise” to Abraham was variously repeated (Gen. 12:1-3; 13:14-17; 15:18; 17:1-14; 22:15-18), and because it contained the germ of all subsequent “promises”; cf. Rom. 9:4; Heb. 6:12; 7:6; 8:6; 11:17; Gal. 3 is occupied with showing that the “promise” was conditional upon faith and not upon the fulfillment of the Law. The Law was later than, and inferior to, the “promise,” and did not annul it, v. 21; cf. 4:23, 28. Again, in Eph. 2:12, “the covenants of the promise” does not indicate different covenants, but a covenant often renewed, all centering in Christ as the “promised” Messiah-Redeemer, and comprising the blessings to be bestowed through Him.

In 2 Cor. 1:20 the plural is used of every “promise” made by God: cf. Heb. 11:33; in 7:6, of special “promises” mentioned. For other applications of the word, see, e.g., Eph. 6:2; 1 Tim. 4:8; 2 Tim. 1:1; Heb. 4:1; 2 Pet. 3:4, 9; in 1 John 1:5 some mss. have this word, instead of angelia, “message.”

The occurrences of the word in relation to Christ and what centers in Him, may be arranged under the headings (1) the contents of the “promise,” e.g., Acts 26:6; Rom. 4:20; 1 John 2:25; (2) the heirs, e.g., Rom. 9:8; 15:8; Gal. 3:29; Heb. 11:9; (3) the conditions, e.g., Rom. 4:13, 14; Gal. 3:14-22; Heb. 10:36.

2. epangelma (ἐπάγγελμα, 1862) denotes “a promise made,” 2 Pet. 1:4; 3:13.¶

B. Verbs.

1. epangello (ἐπαγγέλλω, 1861), “to announce, proclaim,” has in the NT the two meanings “to profess” and “to promise,” each used in the middle voice; “to promise” (a) of “promises” of God, Acts 7:5; Rom. 4:21; in Gal. 3:19, passive voice; Titus 1:2; Heb. 6:13; 10:23; 11:11; 12:26; Jas. 1:12; 2:5; 1 John 2:25; (b) made by men, Mark 14:11; 2 Pet. 2:19. See PROFESS.

2. proepangello (προεπαγγέλλομαι, 4279), in the middle voice, “to promise before” pro, and No. 1), occurs in Rom. 1:2; 2 Cor. 9:5. See AFOREPROMISED.¶

3. homologeō (ὁμολογέω, 3670), “to agree, confess,” signifies “to promise” in Matt. 14:7. See CONFESS.

Note: For exomologeō in Luke 22:6, see CONSENT, No. 1.

PRONOUNCE

lego (λέγω, 3004), “to say, declare,” is rendered “pronounceth (blessing)” in Rom. 4:6, RV, which necessarily repeats the verb in v. 9 (it is absent from the original), for KJV, “cometh” (italicized). See ASK, A, No. 6, DESCRIBE, No. 2, SAY.

PROOF

1. dokime (δοκιμή, 1382): see EXPERIENCE, No. 2.

2. dokimion (δοκίμιον, 1383), “a test, a proof,” is rendered “proof” in Jas. 1:3, RV (KJV, “trying”); it is regarded by some as equivalent to dokimeion, “a crucible, a test”; it is the neuter form of the adjective dokimios, used as a noun, which has been taken to denote the means by which a man is tested and “proved” (Mayor), in the same sense as dokime (No. 1) in 2 Cor. 8:2; the same phrase is used in 1 Pet. 1:7, RV, “the proof (of your faith),” KJV, “the trial”; where the meaning probably is “that which is approved [i.e., as genuine] in your faith”; this interpretation, which was suggested by Hort, and may hold good for Jas. 1:3, has been confirmed from the papyri by Deissmann (Bible Studies, p. 259ff.). Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) give additional instances.¶

3. endeixis (ἐνδειξις, 1732): see DECLARE, B. Cf. the synonymous word endeigma, “a token,” 2 Thess. 1:5, which refers rather to the thing “proved,” while endeixis points to the act of “proving.”

4. tekmerion (τεκμήριον, 5039), “a sure sign, a positive proof” (from tekmar, “a mark, sign”), occurs in Acts 1:3, RV, “proofs” (KJV, “infallible proofs”; a “proof” does not require to be described as infallible, the adjective is superfluous).¶

Note: For the KJV in 2 Tim. 4:5, “make full proof,” RV, “fulfill” (plerophoreo), see FULFILL.

PROPER

1. asteios (ἄστειος, 791) is translated “proper” in Heb. 11:23, RV, “goodly”: see BEAUTIFUL, No. 2.

2. idios (ἴδιος, 2398), “one’s own,” is found in some mss. in Acts 1:19, KJV, “proper”; in 1 Cor. 7:7, RV, “own” (KJV, “proper”); in Jude 6, RV, “their proper (habitation),” KJV, “their own.”

PROPHECY, PROPHECY, PROPHECYING

A. Noun.

propheteia (προφητεία, 4394) signifies “the speaking forth of the mind and counsel of God” (pro, “forth,” phemi, “to speak”: see PROPHET); in the NT it is used (a) of the gift, e.g., Rom. 12:6; 1 Cor. 12:10; 13:2; (b) either of the exercise of the gift or of that which is “prophesied,” e.g., Matt. 13:14; 1 Cor. 13:8; 14:6, 22 and 1 Thess. 5:20, “prophesying (s)”; 1 Tim. 1:18; 4:14; 2 Pet. 1:20, 21; Rev. 1:3; 11:6; 19:10; 22:7, 10, 18, 19.¶

“Though much of OT prophecy was purely predictive, see Micah 5:2, e.g., and cf. John 11:51, prophecy is not necessarily, nor even primarily, fore-telling. It is the declaration of that which cannot be known by natural means, Matt. 26:68, it is the forth-telling of the will of God, whether with reference to the past, the present, or the future, see Gen. 20:7; Deut. 18:18; Rev. 10:11; 11:3....

“In such passages as 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 2:20, the ‘prophets’ are placed after the ‘Apostles,’ since not the prophets of Israel are intended, but the ‘gifts’ of the ascended Lord, Eph. 4:8, 11; cf. Acts 13:1; ... ; the purpose of their ministry was to edify, to comfort, and to encourage the believers, 1 Cor. 14:3, while its effect upon unbelievers was to show that the secrets of a man’s heart are known to God, to convict of sin, and to constrain to worship, vv. 24, 25.

“With the completion of the canon of Scripture prophecy apparently passed away, 1 Cor. 13:8, 9. In his measure the teacher has taken the place of the prophet, cf. the significant change in 2 Pet. 2:1. The difference is that, whereas the message of the prophet was a direct revelation of the mind of God for the occasion, the message of the teacher is gathered from the completed revelation contained in the Scriptures.”*

B. Adjective.

prophetikos (προφητικός, 4397), “of or relating to prophecy,” or “proceeding from a prophet, prophetic,” is used of the OT Scriptures, Rom. 16:26, “of the prophets,” lit., “(by) prophetic (Scriptures)”; 2 Pet. 1:19, “the word of prophecy (made more sure),” i.e., confirmed by the person and work of Christ (KJV, “a more sure, etc.”), lit., “the prophetic word.”¶

C. Verb.

propheteuo (προφητεύω, 4395), “to be a prophet, to prophesy,” is used (a) with the primary meaning of telling forth the divine counsels, e.g., Matt. 7:22; 26:68; 1 Cor. 11:4, 5; 13:9; 14:1, 3-5, 24, 31, 39; Rev. 11:3; (b) of foretelling the future, e.g., Matt. 15:7; John 11:51; 1 Pet. 1:10; Jude 14.

PROPHET

1. prophetes (προφήτης, 4396), “one who speaks forth or openly” (see PROPHECY, A), “a proclaimer of a divine message,” denoted among the Greeks an interpreter of the oracles of the gods.

In the Sept. it is the translation of the word roeh, “a seer”; 1 Sam. 9:9, indicating that the “prophet” was one who had immediate intercourse with God. It also translates the word nabhi, meaning “either one in whom the message from God springs forth” or “one to whom anything is secretly communicated.” Hence, in general, “the prophet” was one upon whom the Spirit of God rested, Num. 11:17-29, one, to whom and through whom God speaks, Num. 12:2; Amos 3:7, 8. In the case of the OT prophets their messages were very largely the proclamation of the divine purposes of salvation and glory to be accomplished in the future; the “prophesying” of the NT “prophets” was both a preaching of the divine counsels of grace already accomplished and the foretelling of the purposes of God in the future.

In the NT the word is used (a) of “the OT prophets,” e.g., Matt. 5:12; Mark 6:15; Luke 4:27; John 8:52; Rom. 11:3; (b) of “prophets in general,” e.g., Matt. 10:41; 21:46; Mark 6:4; (c) of “John the Baptist,” Matt. 21:26; Luke 1:76; (d) of “prophets in the churches,” e.g., Acts 13:1; 15:32; 21:10; 1 Cor. 12:28, 29; 14:29, 32, 37; Eph. 2:20; 3:5; 4:11; (e) of “Christ, as the aforepromised Prophet,” e.g., John 1:21; 6:14; 7:40; Acts 3:22; 7:37, or, without the article, and, without reference to the Old Testament, Mark 6:15; Luke 7:16; in Luke 24:19 it is used with aner, “a man”; John 4:19; 9:17; (f) of “two witnesses” yet to be raised up for special purposes, Rev. 11:10, 18; (g) of “the Cretan poet Epimenides,” Titus 1:12; (h) by metonymy, of “the writings of prophets,” e.g., Luke 24:27; Acts 8:28.

2. pseudoprophetes (ψευδοπροφήτης, 5578), “a false prophet,” is used of such (a) in OT times, Luke 6:26; 2 Pet. 2:1; (b) in the present period since Pentecost, Matt. 7:15; 24:11, 24; Mark 13:22; Acts 13:6; 1 John 4:1; (c) with reference to a false “prophet” destined to arise as the supporter of the “Beast” at the close of this age, Rev. 16:13; 19:20; 20:10 (himself described as “another beast,” 13:11).¶

PROPHETESS

prophetis (προφήτις, 4398), the feminine of prophetes (see above), is used of Anna, Luke 2:36; of the self-assumed title of “the woman Jezebel” in Rev. 2:20.¶

PROPITIATION

A. Verb.

hilaskomai (ἱλάσκομαι, 2433) was used amongst the Greeks with the significance “to make the gods propitious, to appease, propitiate,” inasmuch as their good will was not conceived as their natural attitude, but something to be earned first. This use of the word is foreign to the Greek Bible, with respect to God whether in the Sept. or in the NT. It is never used of any act whereby man brings God into a favorable attitude or gracious disposition. It is God who is “propitiated” by the vindication of His holy and righteous character, whereby through the provision He has made in the vicarious and expiatory sacrifice of Christ, He has so dealt with sin that He can show mercy to the believing sinner in the removal of his guilt and the remission of his sins.

Thus in Luke 18:13 it signifies “to be propitious” or “merciful to” (with the person as the object of the verb), and in Heb. 2:17 “to expiate, to make propitiation for” (the object of the verb being sins); here the RV, “to make propitiation” is an important correction of the KJV “to make reconciliation.” Through the “propitiatory” sacrifice of Christ, he who believes upon Him is by God’s own act delivered from justly deserved wrath, and comes under the covenant of grace. Never is God said to be reconciled, a fact itself indicative that the enmity exists on man’s part alone, and that it is man who needs to be reconciled to God, and not God to man. God is always the same and, since He is Himself immutable, His relative attitude does change towards those who change. He can act differently towards those who come to Him by faith, and solely on the ground of the “propitiatory” sacrifice of Christ, not because He has changed, but because He ever acts according to His unchanging righteousness.

The expiatory work of the Cross is therefore the means whereby the barrier which sin interposes between God and man is broken down. By the giving up of His sinless life sacrificially, Christ annuls the power of sin to separate between God and the believer.

In the OT the Hebrew verb kaphar is connected with kopher, “a covering” (see MERCY SEAT), and is used in connection with the burnt offering, e.g., Lev. 1:4; 14:20; 16:24, the guilt offering, e.g., Lev. 5:16, 18, the sin offering, e.g., Lev. 4:20, 26, 31, 35, the sin offering and burnt offering together, e.g., Lev. 5:10; 9:7, the meal offering and peace offering, e.g., Ezek. 45:15, 17, as well as in other respects. It is used of the ram offered at the consecration of the high priest, Ex. 29:33, and of the blood which God gave upon the altar to make “propitiation” for the souls of the people, and that because “the life of the flesh is in the blood,” Lev. 17:11, and “it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life” (RV). Man has forfeited his life on account of sin and God has provided the one and only way whereby eternal life could be bestowed, namely, by the voluntary laying down of His life by His Son, under divine retribution. Of this the former sacrifices appointed by God were foreshadowings.

B. Nouns.

1. hilasterion (ἱλαστήριον, 2435), akin to A, is regarded as the neuter of an adjective signifying “propitiatory.” In the Sept. it is used adjectivally in connection with epithema, “a cover,” in Exod. 25:17 and 37:6, of the lid of the ark (see MERCY SEAT), but it is used as a noun (without epithema), of locality, in Exod. 25:18, 19, 20, 21, 22; 31:7; 35:12; 37:7, 8, 9; Lev. 16:2, 13, 14, 15; Num. 7:89, and this is its use in Heb. 9:5.

Elsewhere in the NT it occurs in Rom. 3:25, where it is used of Christ Himself; the RV text and punctuation in this verse are important: “whom God set forth to be a propitiation, through faith, by His blood.” The phrase “by His blood” is to be taken in immediate connection with “propitiation.” Christ, through His expiatory death, is the personal means by whom God shows the mercy of His justifying grace to the sinner who believes. His “blood” stands for the voluntary giving up of His life, by the shedding of His blood in expiatory sacrifice under divine judgment righteously due to us as sinners, faith being the sole condition on man’s part.

Note: “By metonymy, ‘blood’ is sometimes put for ‘death,’ inasmuch as, blood being essential to life, Lev. 17:11, when the blood is shed life is given up, that is, death takes place. The fundamental principle on which God deals with sinners is expressed in the words ‘apart from shedding of blood,’ i.e., unless a death takes place, ‘there is no remission’ of sins, Heb. 9:22.

“But whereas the essential of the type lay in the fact that blood was shed, the essential of the antitype lies in this, that the blood shed was that of Christ. Hence, in connection with Jewish sacrifices, ‘the blood’ is mentioned without reference to the victim from which it flowed, but in connection with the great antitypical sacrifice of the NT the words ‘the blood’ never stand alone; the One Who shed the blood is invariably specified, for it is the Person that gives value to the work; the saving efficacy of the Death depends entirely upon the fact that He Who died was the Son of God.”*

2. hilasmos (ἱλασμός, 2434), akin to hileos (“merciful, propitious”), signifies “an expiation, a means whereby sin is covered and remitted.” It is used in the NT of Christ Himself as “the propitiation,” in 1 John 2:2 and 4:10, signifying that He Himself, through the expiatory sacrifice of His death, is the personal means by whom God shows mercy to the sinner who believes on Christ as the One thus provided. In the former passage He is described as “the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world.” The italicized addition in the KJV, “the sins of,” gives a wrong interpretation.

* From Notes on Thessalonians by Hogg and Vine, p. 168.

What is indicated is that provision is made for the whole world, so that no one is, by divine predetermination, excluded from the scope of God's mercy; the efficacy of the "propitiation," however, is made actual for those who believe. In 4:10, the fact that God "sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins," is shown to be the great expression of God's love toward man, and the reason why Christians should love one another.¶ In the Sept., Lev. 25:9; Num. 5:8; 1 Chron. 28:20; Ps. 130:4; Ezek. 44:27; Amos 8:14.¶

PROPORTION

analogia (ἀναλογία, 356), Cf. Eng., "analogy," signified in classical Greek "the right relation, the coincidence or agreement existing or demanded according to the standard of the several relations, not agreement as equality" (Cremer). It is used in Rom. 12:6, where "let us prophesy according to the proportion of our faith," RV, recalls v. 3. It is a warning against going beyond what God has given and faith receives. This meaning, rather than the other rendering, "according to the analogy of the faith," is in keeping with the context. The word analogia is not to be rendered literally. "Proportion" here represents its true meaning. The fact that there is a definite article before "faith" in the original does not necessarily afford an intimation that the faith, the body of Christian doctrine, is here in view. The presence of the definite article is due to the fact that faith is an abstract noun. The meaning "the faith" is not relevant to the Context.¶

PROSELYTE

proselutos (προσήλυτος, 4339), akin to proserchomai, "to come to," primarily signifies "one who has arrived, a stranger"; in the NT it is used of converts to Judaism, or foreign converts to the Jewish religion, Matt. 23:15; Acts 2:10; 6:5; 13:43.¶ There seems to be no connection necessarily with Palestine, for in Acts 2:10 and 13:43 it is used of those who lived abroad. Cf. the Sept., e.g., in Exod. 22:21; 23:9; Deut. 10:19, of the "stranger" living among the children of Israel.

PROSPER

euodoo (εὐοδῶ, 2137), "to help on one's way" (eu, "well," hodos, "a way or journey"), is used in the passive voice signifying "to have a prosperous journey," Rom. 1:10; metaphorically, "to prosper, be prospered," 1 Cor. 16:2, RV, "(as) he may prosper," KJV, "(as God) hath prospered (him)," lit., "in whatever he may be prospered," i.e., in material things; the continuous tense suggests the successive circumstances of varying prosperity as week follows week; in 3 John 2, of the "prosperity" of physical and spiritual health.¶

PROTEST

Note: In 1 Cor. 15:31, "I protest by" is a rendering of ne, a particle of strong affirmation used in oaths.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 42:15, 16.¶

PROUD

huperephanos (ὑπερήφανος, 5244) signifies "showing oneself above others, preeminent" (huper, "above," phainomai, "to appear, be manifest"); it is always used in Scripture in the bad sense of "arrogant, disdainful, proud," Luke 1:51; Rom. 1:30; 2 Tim. 3:2; Jas. 4:6; 1 Pet. 5:5.¶

Note: For the KJV renderings of the verb tuphoo, in 1 Tim. 3:6; 6:4; 2 Tim. 3:4, see HIGHMINDED.

PROVE

A. Verbs.

1. dokimazo (δοκιμάζω, 1381), “to test, prove,” with the expectation of approving, is translated “to prove” in Luke 14:19; Rom. 12:2; 1 Cor. 3:13, RV (KJV, “shall try”); 11:28, RV (KJV, “examine”); 2 Cor. 8:8, 22; 13:5; Gal. 6:4; Eph. 5:10; 1 Thess. 2:4 (2nd part), RV (KJV, “trieth”); 5:21; 1 Tim. 3:10; in some mss., Heb. 3:9 (the most authentic have the noun dokimasia, “a proving”¶); 1 Pet. 1:7, RV (KJV, “tried”); 1 John 4:1, RV (KJV, “try”). See APPROVE.

2. apodeiknumi (ἀποδείκνυμι, 584), “to show forth,” signifies “to prove” in Acts 25:7. See APPROVE, No. 3.

3. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936), “to present,” signifies “to prove” in Acts 24:13. See COMMEND, No. 4.

4. peirazo (πειράζω, 3985), “to try,” either in the sense of attempting, e.g., Acts 16:7, or of testing, is rendered “to prove” in John 6:6. See EXAMINE, TEMPT.

5. sumbibazo (συμβιβάζω, 4822), “to join together,” signifies “to prove” in Acts 9:22. See COMPACTED, No. 2.

6. sunistemi or sunistano (συνιστάω, 4921), “to commend, to prove,” is translated “I prove (myself a transgressor)” in Gal. 2:18 (KJV, “I make”). See COMMEND.

B. Noun.

peirasmos (πειρασμός, 3986), (a) “a trying, testing,” (b) “a temptation,” is used in sense (a) in 1 Pet. 4:12, with the preposition pros, “towards” or “with a view to,” RV, “to prove” (KJV, “to try”), lit., “for a testing.” See TEMPTATION.

Notes: (1) In Luke 10:36, RV, ginomai, “to become, come to be,” is translated “proved (neighbor),” KJV, “was ...”; so in Heb. 2:2. (2) In Rom. 3:9, KJV, proaitiaomai, “to accuse beforehand,” is translated “we have before proved” (marg., “charged”); for the RV, see CHARGE, C, No. 9.

For PROVERB see PARABLE, No. 2

PROVIDE, PROVIDENCE, PROVISION

A. Verbs.

1. hetoimazo (ἐτοιμάζω, 2090), “to prepare,” is translated “hast provided” in Luke 12:20, KJV. See PREPARE.

2. ptaomai (κτάομαι, 2932), “to get, to gain,” is rendered “provide” in Matt. 10:9. See OBTAIN, POSSESS.

3. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936), “to present,” signifies “to provide” in Acts 23:24. See COMMEND, PROVE, No. 3.

4. problepo (προβλέπω, 4265), “to foresee,” is translated “having provided” in Heb. 11:40. See FORESEE.¶

5. pronoëo (προνοέω, 4306), “to take thought for, provide,” is translated “provide ... for” in 1 Tim. 5:8; in Rom. 12:17 and 2 Cor. 8:21, RV, to take thought for (KJV, “to provide”).¶

Note: In Luke 12:33, KJV, poieo, “to make” (RV), is translated “provide.”

B. Noun.

pronoia (πρόνοια, 4307), “forethought” (pro, “before,” noeo, “to think”), is translated “providence” in Acts 24:2; “provision” in Rom. 13:14.¶

PROVINCE

1. eparcheia, or -ia (ἐπαρχία, 1885) was a technical term for the administrative divisions of the Roman Empire. The original meaning was the district within which a magistrate, whether consul or pretor, exercised supreme authority. The word provincia acquired its later meaning when Sardinia and Sicily were added to the Roman territories, 227 B.C. On the establishment of the empire the proconsular power over all “provinces” was vested in the emperor. Two “provinces,” Asia and Africa, were consular, i.e., held by ex-consuls; the rest were praetorian. Certain small “provinces,” e.g. Judea and Cappadocia, were governed by procurators. They were usually districts recently added to the empire and not thoroughly Romanized. Judea was so governed in the intervals between the rule of native kings; ultimately it was incorporated in the “province” of Syria. The “province” mentioned in Acts 23:34 and 25:1 was assigned to the jurisdiction of an eparchos, “a prefect or governor” (cf. GOVERNOR, PROCONSUL).¶ In the Sept., Esth. 4:11.¶

2. kanon (κανών, 2583) originally denoted “a straight rod,” used as a ruler or measuring instrument, or, in rare instances, “the beam of a balance,” the secondary notion being either (a) of keeping anything straight, as of a rod used in weaving, or (b) of testing straightness, as a carpenter’s rule; hence its metaphorical use to express what serves “to measure or determine” anything. By a common transition in the meaning of words, “that which measures,” was used for “what was measured”; thus a certain space at Olympia was called a kanon. So in music, a canon is a composition in which a given melody is the model for the formation of all the parts. In general the word thus came to serve for anything regulating the actions of men, as a standard or principle. In Gal. 6:16, those who “walk by this rule (kanon)” are those who make what is stated in vv. 14 and 15 their guiding line in the matter of salvation through faith in Christ alone, apart from works, whether following the principle themselves or teaching it to others. In 2 Cor. 10:13, 15, 16, it is translated “province,” RV (KJV, “rule” and “line of things”; marg., “line”; RV marg., “limit” or “measuring rod.”) Here it signifies the limits of the responsibility in gospel service as measured and appointed by God.¶

PROVOCATION, PROVOKE

A. Nouns.

1. parapikrasmos (παραπικρασμός, 3894), from para, “amiss” or “from,” used intensively, and pikraino, “to make bitter” (pikros, “sharp, bitter”), “provocation,” occurs in Heb. 3:8, 15.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 95:8.¶

2. paroxusmos (παροξυσμός, 3948) denotes “a stimulation” (Eng., “paroxysm”), (cf. B, No. 2): in Heb. 10:24, “to provoke,” lit., “unto a stimulation (of love).” See CONTENTION, No. 2.

B. Verbs.

1. parapikraino (παραπικραίνω, 3893), “to embitter, provoke” (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in Heb. 3:16.¶

2. paroxuno (παροξύνω, 3947), primarily, “to sharpen” (akin to A, No. 2), is used metaphorically, signifying “to rouse to anger, to provoke,” in the passive voice, in Acts 17:16, RV, “was provoked” (KJV, “was stirred”); in 1 Cor. 13:5, RV, “is not provoked” (the word “easily” in KJV, represents no word in the original). See STIR.¶

3. erethizo (ἐρεθίζω, 2042), “to excite, stir up, provoke,” is used (a) in a good sense in 2 Cor. 9:2, KJV, “hath provoked,” RV, “hath stirred up;” (b) in an evil sense in Col. 3:21, “provoke.” See STIR.¶

4. parorgizo (παροργίζω, 3949), “to provoke to wrath”: see ANGER, B, No. 2.

5. parazeloo (παραζηλόω, 3863), “to provoke to jealousy”: see JEALOUSY.

6. apostomatizo (ἀποστοματίζω, 653) in classical Greek meant “to speak from memory, to dictate to a pupil” (apo, “from,” stoma, “a mouth”); in later Greek, “to catechize”; in Luke 11:53, “to provoke (Him) to speak.”¶

7. prokaleo (προκαλέομαι, 4292), “to call forth,” as to a contest, hence “to stir up what is evil in another,” occurs in the middle voice in Gal. 5:26.¶

PRUDENCE, PRUDENT

A. Nouns.

1. phronesis (φρόνησις, 5428), akin to phroneo, “to have understanding” (phren, “the mind”), denotes “practical wisdom, prudence in the management of affairs.” It is translated “wisdom” in Luke 1:17; “prudence” in Eph. 1:8. See WISDOM.¶

2. sunesis (σύνεσις, 4907), “understanding,” is rendered “prudence” in 1 Cor. 1:19, RV (KJV, “understanding”); it suggests quickness of apprehension, the penetrating consideration which precedes action. Cf. B, in the same verse. See KNOWLEDGE, UNDERSTANDING.

B. Adjective.

sunetos (συνετός, 4908) signifies “intelligent, sagacious, understanding” (akin to sunieimi, “to perceive”), translated “prudent” in Matt. 11:25, KJV (RV, “understanding”); Luke 10:21 (ditto); Acts 13:7, RV, “(a man) of understanding”; in 1 Cor. 1:19, “prudent,” RV and KJV.¶ Cf. asunetos, “without understanding.”

PSALM

psalmos (ψαλμός, 5568) primarily denoted “a striking or twitching with the fingers (on musical strings)”; then, “a sacred song, sung to musical accompaniment, a psalm.” It is used (a) of the OT book of “Psalms,” Luke 20:42; 24:44; Acts 1:20; (b) of a particular “psalm,” Acts 13:33 (cf. v. 35); (c) of “psalms” in general, 1 Cor. 14:26; Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16.¶

Note: For psallo, rendered “let him sing psalms” in Jas. 5:13, see MELODY, SING.

PUBLIC, PUBLICLY

A. Adjective.

demosios (δημόσιος, 1219), “belonging to the people” (demos, “the people”), is translated “public” in Acts 5:18, RV, “public (ward)”, KJV, “common (prison).”

B. Adverbs.

phaneros (φανερῶς, 5320): see OPENLY, No. 2.

Note: For a form of demosios used as an adverb, “publicly,” see OPENLY, Note (4).

PUBLICAN

telones (τελώνης, 5057) primarily denoted “a farmer of the tax” (from telos, “toll, custom, tax”), then, as in the NT, a subsequent subordinate of such, who collected taxes in some district, “a tax gatherer”; such were naturally hated intensely by the people; they are classed with “sinners,” Matt. 9:10, 11; 11:9; Mark 2:15, 16; Luke 5:30; 7:34; 15:1; with harlots, Matt. 21:31, 32; with “the Gentile,” Matt. 18:17; some mss. have it in Matt. 5:47, the best have ethnikoi, “Gentiles.” See also Matt. 5:46; 10:3; Luke 3:12; 5:27, 29; 7:29; 18:10, 11, 13.¶

Note: For architelones, “a chief publican,” see CHIEF, B, No. 4.

PUBLISH

1. kerusso (κηρύσσω, 2784), “to be a herald, to proclaim, preach,” is translated “to publish” in Mark 1:45; 5:20; 7:36; 13:10, KJV (RV, “preached”); Luke 8:39. See PREACH, PROCLAIM.

2. diaphero (διαφέρω, 1308), “to bear through,” is translated “was published” in Acts 13:49, KJV (RV, “was spread abroad”). See BETTER (be), No. 1.

3. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, come to be,” is translated “was published” in Acts 10:37, lit., “came to be.”

4. diangello (διαγγέλλω, 1229), “to publish abroad,” is so translated in Luke 9:60, RV (KJV, “preach”), and Rom. 9:17. See DECLARE, A, No. 3.

PUFF (up)

1. phusioo (φυσιόω, 5448), “to puff up, blow up, inflate” (from phusa, “bellows”), is used metaphorically in the NT, in the sense of being “puffed” up with pride, 1 Cor. 4:6, 18, 19; 5:2; 8:1; 13:4; Col. 2:18.¶

2. tuphoo (τυφώω, 5187) is always rendered “to puff up” in the RV. See HIGH-MINDED, PROUD.

PULL (down)

kathaireo (καθαίρω, 2507), “to take down,” is translated “I will pull down” in Luke 12:18. See DESTROY, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In Jude 23, KJV, harpazo, “to seize, snatch away,” is rendered “pulling ... out.” See SNATCH. (2) In Acts 23:10, KJV, diaspao, “to rend or tear asunder,” is translated “should have been pulled in pieces” (RV, “should be torn in pieces”). (3) Ekballo, “to cast out,” is translated “to pull out” in Matt. 7:4 and Luke 6:42 (twice), KJV (RV, “cast out”). See CAST, No. 5. (4) For anaspao, rendered “pull out” in Luke 14:5, KJV, see DRAW, No. 5. (5) For kathairesis, “a casting down,” 2 Cor. 10:4, see CAST, A, No. 14, Note.

PUNISH

1. kolazo (κολάζω, 2849) primarily denotes “to curtail, prune, dock” (from kolos, “docked”); then, “to check, restrain, punish”; it is used in the middle voice in Acts 4:21; passive voice in 2 Pet. 2:9, KJV, “to be punished” (RV, “under punishment,” lit., “being punished”), a futurative present tense.¶

2. timoreo (τιμωρέω, 5097), primarily, “to help,” then, “to avenge” (from time, “value, honor,” and ouros, “a guardian”), i.e., “to help” by redressing injuries, is used in the active voice in Acts 26:11, RV, “punishing” (KJV, “I punished”); passive voice in 22:5, lit., “(that) they may be punished.” Cf. No. 5, below.¶

Note: For 2 Thess. 1:9, “shall suffer punishment,” RV, see JUSTICE. See SUFFER, Note (10).

PUNISHMENT

1. ekdikesis (ἐκδίκησις, 1557): for 1 Pet. 2:14, KJV, “punishment” (RV, “vengeance”), see AVENGE, B, No. 2.

2. epitimia (ἐπιτιμία, 2009) in the NT denotes “penalty, punishment,” 2 Cor. 2:6.¶ Originally it signified the enjoyment of the rights and privileges of citizenship; then it became used of the estimate (time) fixed by a judge on the infringement of such rights, and hence, in general, a “penalty.”

3. kolasis (κόλασις, 2851), akin to kolazo (PUNISH, No. 1), “punishment,” is used in Matt. 25:46, “(eternal) punishment,” and 1 John 4:18, “(fear hath) punishment,” RV (KJV, “torment”), which there describes a process, not merely an effect; this kind of fear is expelled by perfect love; where God’s love is being perfected in us, it gives no room for the fear of meeting with His reprobation; the “punishment” referred to is the immediate consequence of the sense of sin, not a holy awe but a slavish fear, the negation of the enjoyment of love.¶

4. dike (δίκη, 1349), “justice,” or “the execution of a sentence,” is translated “punishment” in Jude 7, RV (KJV, “vengeance”). See JUSTICE.

5. timoria (τιμωρία, 5098), primarily “help” (see PUNISH, No. 2), denotes “vengeance, punishment,” Heb. 10:29.¶

Note: The distinction, sometimes suggested, between No. 3 as being disciplinary, with special reference to the sufferer, and No. 5, as being penal, with reference to the satisfaction of him who inflicts it, cannot be maintained in the Koine Greek of NT times.

PURCHASE

1. ктаομαι (κτάομαι, 2932): see OBTAIN, A, No. 4.

2. peripoieo (περιποιέομαι, 4046) signifies “to gain” or “get for oneself, purchase”; middle voice in Acts 20:28 and 1 Tim. 3:13 (RV “gain”); see GAIN.

3. agorazo (ἀγοράζω, 59) is rendered “to purchase” in the RV of Rev. 5:9; 14:3, 4. See BUY, No. 1.

Note: For peripoiesis, “purchased possession,” Eph. 1:14, see POSSESSION.

PURE, PURENESS, PURITY

A. Adjectives.

1. hagnos (ἁγνός, 53), “pure from defilement, not contaminated” (from the same root as hagios, “holy”), is rendered “pure” in Phil. 4:8; 1 Tim. 5:22; Jas. 3:17; 1 John 3:3; see CHASTE.

2. katharos (καθαρός, 2513), “pure,” as being cleansed, e.g., Matt. 5:8; 1 Tim. 1:5; 3:9; 2 Tim. 1:3; 2:22; Titus 1:15; Heb. 10:22; Jas. 1:27; 1 Pet. 1:22; Rev. 15:6; 21:18; 22:1 (in some mss.). See CHASTE, Note, CLEAN, A.

Note: In 1 Pet. 1:22 the KJV, “with a pure heart,” follows those mss. which have this adjective (RV, “from the heart”).

3. eilikrines (εἰλικρινής, 1506) signifies “unalloyed, pure”; (a) it was used of unmixed substances; (b) in the NT it is used of moral and ethical “purity,” Phil. 1:10, “sincere”; so the RV in 2 Pet. 3:1 (KJV, “pure”). Some regard the etymological meaning as “tested by the sunlight” (Cremer).¶ See CHASTE, Note, SINCERE.

Note: Wine mixed with water may be hagnos, “not being contaminated”; it is not katharos, when there is the admixture of any element even though the latter is “pure” in itself.

B. Nouns.

1. hagnotes (ἁγνότης, 54), the state of being hagnos (A, No. 1), occurs in 2 Cor. 6:6, “pureness”; 11:3, in the best mss., “(and the) purity,” RV.¶

2. hagneia (ἁγνεία, 47), synonymous with No. 1, “purity,” occurs in 1 Tim. 4:12; 5:2, where it denotes the chastity which excludes all impurity of spirit, manner, or act.¶

PURGE

1. kathairo (καθαίρω, 2508), akin to katharos (see PURE, A, No. 2), “to cleanse,” is used of pruning, John 15:2, KJV, “purgeth” (RV, “cleanseth”).¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 4:6; Isa. 28:27; Jer. 38:28.¶

2. ekkathairo (ἐκκαθαίρω, 1571), “to cleanse out, cleanse thoroughly,” is said of “purging” out leaven, 1 Cor. 5:7; in 2 Tim. 2:21, of “purging” oneself from those who utter “profane babblings,” vv. 16-18.¶

3. diakathairo (διά, 1223 and διά, 2508), “to cleanse thoroughly,” is translated “will thoroughly purge” in Luke 3:17, KJV (RV, “thoroughly to cleanse”; less authentic mss. have No. 5).¶

4. kathakizo (καθαρίζω, 2511), “to cleanse, make clean,” is translated “purging (all meats),” in Mark 7:19, KJV, RV, “making (all meats) clean”; Heb. 9:14, KJV, “purge” (RV, “cleanse”); so 9:22 (for v. 23, see PURIFY) and 10:2. See CLEAN, B, No. 1.

5. diakatharizo (διακαθαρίζω, 1245), “to cleanse thoroughly,” is translated “will thoroughly purge” in Matt. 3:12, KJV. See CLEAN, B, No. 2. Cf. the synonymous verb No. 3.¶

Notes: (1) For Heb. 1:3, KJV, “had purged,” see PURIFICATION. (2) For the KJV rendering of the noun katharismos, “cleansing,” “that he was purged,” see CLEAN, C, No. 1.

PURIFICATION, PURIFY, PURIFYING

A. Nouns.

1. katharismos (καθαρισμός, 2512) is rendered “a cleansing” (akin to No. 4, above), Mark 1:44; Luke 5:14; in Heb. 1:3, RV, “purification.”

2. katharotes (καθαρότης, 2514), “cleansing,” Heb. 9:13. See CLEAN, C, No. 2.¶

3. hagnismos (ἁγνισμός, 49) denotes “a ceremonial purification,” Acts 21:26, for the circumstances of which with reference to the vow of a Nazirite (RV), see Num. 6:9-13.¶

B. Verbs.

1. hagnizo (ἁγνίζω, 48), akin to hagnos, “pure” (see CHASTE), “to purify, cleanse from defilement,” is used of “purifying” (a) ceremonially, John 11:55; Acts 21:24, 26 (cf. No. 3 above); 24:18; (b) morally, the heart, Jas. 4:8; the soul, 1 Pet. 1:22; oneself, 1 John 3:3.¶

2. katharizo (καθαρίζω, 2511), “to cleanse, make free from admixture,” is translated “to purify” in Acts 15:9, KJV (RV, “cleansing”); Titus 2:14; Heb. 9:23, KJV (RV, “cleansed”). See CLEAN, B, No. 1.

PURLOIN

nosphizo (νοσφίζομαι, 3557) is translated “purloining” in Titus 2:10. See KEEP, A, No. 10.

PURPLE

A. Noun.

porphura (πορφύρα, 4209) originally denoted the “purple-fish,” then, “purple dye” (extracted from certain shell fish): hence, “a purple garment,” Mark 15:17, 20; Luke 16:19; Rev. 18:12.¶

B. Adjective.

porphureos (πορφυροῦς, 4210), “purple, a reddish purple,” is used of the robe put in mockery on Christ, John 19:2, 5; in Rev. 17:4 (in the best texts; some have No. 1); 18:16, as a noun (with himation, “a garment,” understood).¶

PURPLE (seller of)

porphuropolis (πορφυρόπωλις, 4211) denotes “a seller of purple fabrics” (from porphura, and poleo, “to sell”), Acts 16:14.¶

PURPOSE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. boulema (βούλημα, 1013), “a purpose or will” (akin to boulomai, “to will, wish, purpose”), “a deliberate intention,” occurs in Acts 27:43, “purpose”; Rom. 9:19, “will”; 1 Pet. 4:3, in the best mss. (some have thelema), KJV, “will,” RV, “desire.” See WILL.¶

2. prothesis (πρόθεσις, 4286), “a setting forth” (used of the “showbread”), “a purpose” (akin to B, No. 3), is used (a) of the “purposes of God,” Rom. 8:28; 9:11; Eph. 1:11; 3:11; 2 Tim. 1:9; (b) of “human purposes,” as to things material, Acts 27:13; spiritual, Acts 11:23; 2 Tim. 3:10. See SHEWBREAD.

3. gnome (γνώμη, 1106), “an opinion, purpose, judgment,” is used in the genitive case with ginomai, “to come to be,” in Acts 20:3, “he purposed,” KJV (RV, “he determined”), lit., “he came to be of purpose.”

Notes: The following phrases are translated with the word “purpose”: (a) eis auto touto, “for this same (or very) purpose,” lit., “unto this same (thing),” Rom. 9:17; Eph. 6:22; Col. 4:8; (b) eis touto, “for this purpose,” Acts 26:16, KJV (RV, “to this end”), lit., “unto this”; so 1 John 3:8; (c) eis ti, “to what purpose,” Matt. 26:8, lit., “unto what”; Mark 14:4, RV, “to what purpose” (KJV, “why”).

B. Verbs.

1. bouleuo (βουλεύω, 1011), “to take counsel, resolve,” always in the middle voice in the NT, “to take counsel with oneself,” to determine with oneself, is translated “I purpose” in 2 Cor. 1:17 (twice). See COUNSEL, B, No. 1.

2. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put, place,” is used in the middle voice in Acts 19:21, “purposed,” in the sense of resolving.

3. protithemi (προτίθεμαι, 4388), “to set before, set forth” (pro, “before,” and No. 2, akin to A, No. 2), is used in Rom. 3:25, “set forth,” RV marg., “purposed,” KJV marg., “foreordained,” middle voice, which lays stress upon the personal interest which God had in so doing; either meaning, “to set forth” or “to purpose,” would convey a scriptural view, but the context bears out the former as being intended here; in Rom. 1:13, “I purposed”; Eph. 1:9, “He purposed (in Him),” RV. See SET.¶

4. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to make,” is translated “He purposed” in Eph. 3:11 (for the noun prothesis, in the same verse, see A, No. 2). See DO, No. 1.

5. proaireo (προαίρέομαι, 4255), “to bring forth or forward,” or, in the middle voice, “to take by choice, prefer, purpose,” is translated “He hath purposed” in 2 Cor. 9:7, RV (KJV, “he purposed”).¶

For PURSE see BAG, No. 2 and Note

PURSUE

dioko (διώκω, 1377), “to put to flight, pursue, persecute,” is rendered “to pursue” in 2 Cor. 4:9, RV (KJV, “persecute”), and is used metaphorically of “seeking eagerly” after peace in 1 Pet. 3:11, RV (KJV, “ensue”). See FOLLOW.

PUT

1. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to place, lay, set, put,” is translated “to put” in Matt. 5:15; 12:18; in Matt. 22:44, RV, “put (underneath Thy feet)”; Mark 4:21 (1st part), in the 2nd part, RV, “put” (in some texts, No. 4, KJV, “set”); 10:16, KJV (RV, “laying”); Luke 8:16 (1st part); 2nd part, RV (KJV, “setteth”); 11:33; John 19:19; Acts 1:7, KJV (RV, “set”); 4:3; 5:18, 25; 12:4; Rom. 14:13; 1 Cor. 15:25; 2 Cor. 3:13; 1 Tim. 1:12, KJV (RV, “appointing”); Rev. 11:9, KJV (RV, “laid”). See APPOINT, No. 3.

2. peritithemi (περιτίθημι, 4060), “to put around or on” (peri, “around,” and No. 1), is so used in Matt. 27:28; Mark 15:17, RV, “put on” (KJV, “... about”); 15:36; John 19:29. See BESTOW, No. 5.

3. paratithemi (παράτιθημι, 3908), “to set before” (para, “beside” or “before”), is rendered “to put forth” (of a parable) in Matt. 13:24, 31, KJV (RV, “set before”). See SET.

4. epitithemi (ἐπιτίθημι, 2007), “to put on, upon,” is so rendered in Matt. 19:13, KJV (RV, “lay”); so Mark 7:32; 8:25 (some mss. have No. 1, here); Matt. 21:7; 27:29; John 9:15; 19:2 (1st part); Acts 9:12 (RV, “laying ... on”); 15:10. See ADD, No. 1.

QUARTER

pantothēn (παντόθεν, 3840), “from all sides,” is translated “from every quarter” in Mark 1:45. See EVERY SIDE, ROUND ABOUT.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 20:8, KJV, gonia, “an angle, corner,” is rendered “quarter” (RV, “corner”). (2) In Acts 16:3, KJV, topois, “parts” (RV) is translated “quarters.” (3) In Acts 9:32 the phrase dia panton, lit., “throughout all,” is rendered “throughout all parts,” RV (meros, “a part,” being understood), KJV, “throughout all quarters.” (4) For “quarters” in Acts 28:7, KJV, see NEIGHBORHOOD.

QUATERNION

tetradion (τετράδιον, 5069), “a group of four” (tetra—“four”), occurs in Acts 12:4. A “quaternion” was a set of four men occupied in the work of a guard, two soldiers being chained to the prisoner and two keeping watch; alternatively one of the four watched while the other three slept. The night was divided into four watches of three hours each; there would be one “quaternion” for each watch by day and by night.¶ Cf. the “guard” in Matt. 27:65 and 28:11.

QUEEN

basilissa (βασίλισσα, 938), the feminine of basileus, “a king,” is used (a) of the “Queen of Sheba,” Matt. 12:42; Luke 11:31; of “Candace,” Acts 8:27; (b) metaphorically, of “Babylon,” Rev. 18:7.¶

QUENCH, UNQUENCHABLE

A. Verb.

sbennumi (σβέννυμι, 4570) is used (a) of “quenching” fire or things on fire, Matt. 12:20, quoted from Isa. 42:3, figurative of the condition of the feeble; Heb. 11:34; in the passive voice, Matt. 25:8, of torches (see LAMP), RV, “are going out,” lit., “are being quenched”; of the retributive doom hereafter of sin unrepented of and unremitted in this life, Mark 9:48 (in some mss. in vv. 44, 46); (b) metaphorically, of “quenching” the fire-tipped darts of the evil one, Eph. 6:16; of “quenching” the Spirit, by hindering His operations in oral testimony in the church gatherings of believers, 1 Thess. 5:19. “The peace, order, and edification of the saints were evidence of the ministry of the Spirit among them, 1 Cor. 14:26, 32, 33, 40, but if, through ignorance of His ways, or through failure to recognize, or refusal to submit to, them, or through impatience with the ignorance or self-will of others, the Spirit were quenched, these happy results would be absent. For there was always the danger that the impulses of the flesh might usurp the place of the energy of the Spirit in the assembly, and the endeavor to restrain this evil by natural means would have the effect of hindering His ministry also. Apparently then, this injunction was intended to warn believers against the substitution of a mechanical order for the restraints of the Spirit.”*¶ Cf. Song of Sol. 8:7.

B. Adjective.

asbestos (ἄσβεστος, 762), “not quenched” (a, negative, and A), is used of the doom of persons described figuratively as “chaff,” Matt. 3:12 and Luke 3:17, “unquenchable”; of the fire of Gehenna (see HELL), Mark 9:43, RV, “unquenchable fire” (in some mss. v. 45).¶ In the Sept., Job 20:26.¶

QUESTION (Noun and Verb), QUESTIONING

A. Nouns.

1. zetesis (ζήτησις, 2214), primarily “a seeking, search” (zeteo, “to seek”), for which see DISPUTATION, is used in John 3:25; Acts 25:20, RV, “(being perplexed) how to inquire (concerning these things),” KJV “(because I doubted of such manner) of questions,” lit., “being perplexed as to the inquiry (or discussion) concerning these things”; in 1 Tim. 1:4 (in some mss.); 6:4; 2 Tim. 2:23; Titus 3:9. See INQUIRY.

2. zetema (ζήτημα, 2213), synonymous with No. 1, but, generally speaking, suggesting in a more concrete form the subject of an inquiry, occurs in Acts 15:2; 18:15; 23:29; 25:19; 26:3.¶

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 196.

3. logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word,” is translated “question” in Matt. 21:24 (KJV, “thing”); in Mark 11:29 (RV, marg., “word”) and Luke 20:3, KJV, “one thing:” there is no word in the original for “one,” hence the RV, “a question.”

4. ekzetesis (ἐκ, 1537, and ἐκ, 2214), “a questioning,” is found in the best texts in 1 Tim. 1:4 (see RV); cf. No 1.¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 22:41, there is no word in the original for “question.” (2) For suzetesis or sunzetesis, “a questioning together” (sun, “with”), see DISPUTATION. (3) In Acts 19:40, KJV, enkaleo, “to bring a charge against,” is translated “to be called in question” (RV, “to be accused”).

B. Verbs.

1. suzeteo (συζητέω, 4802) or sunzeteo, “to search together” (cf. Note, above), “to discuss, dispute,” is translated “to question” (or “question with or together”) in Mark 1:27; 8:11; 9:10, 14, 16; 12:28, RV (KJV, “reasoning together”); Luke 22:23, RV (KJV, “inquire”); 24:15, RV (KJV, “reasoned”). See DISPUTE, B, No. 3, INQUIRE, REASON.

2. eperotao (ἐπερωτάω, 1905), “to ask,” is translated “asked ... a question,” in Matt. 22:35, 41; in Luke 2:46, “asking ... questions”; “questioned” in Luke 23:9. See ASK, A, No. 3.

For QUICK, see DISCERN, C, LIVE, No. 3, Note

QUICKEN

1. zoopoieo (ζωοποιέω, 2227), “to make alive”: see LIFE, C.

2. zoogoneo (ζωογονέω, 2225), “to endue with life, produce alive, preserve alive”: see LIFE, No. 6.

3. suzoopoieo (συζωοποιέω, 4806) or sunzoopoieo, “to quicken together with, make alive with” (sun, “with” and No. 1), is used in Eph. 2:5; Col. 2:13, of the spiritual life with Christ, imparted to believers at their conversion.¶

QUICKLY

1. tachu (ταχύ, 5035), the neuter of tachus, “swift, quick,” signifies “quickly,” Matt. 5:25; 28:7, 8; Mark 9:39, RV (KJV, “lightly”); Luke 15:22; John 11:29; Rev. 2:16 (v. 5 in some mss.); 3:11; 11:14; 22:7, 12, 20. See LIGHTLY.¶

2. tacheion (τάχιον, 5032), the comparative degree of No. 1, is translated “quickly” in John 13:27; “out(ran)” in 20:4, RV, lit., “(ran before) more quickly (than Peter)”;

“shortly” in 1 Tim. 3:14 and Heb. 13:23; in 13:19, “(the) sooner.” See SHORTLY.¶

3. tacheos (ταχέως, 5030), akin to No. 1, is translated “quickly” in Luke 14:21; 16:6; John 11:31, RV; “shortly” in 1 Cor. 4:19; Phil. 2:19, 24; 2 Tim. 4:9; with a suggestion of rashness in the following, Gal. 1:6, RV, “quickly” (KJV, “soon”); 2 Thess. 2:2; and 1 Tim. 5:22, “hastily,” (KJV, “suddenly”). See HASTILY, C.¶

4. en tachei, lit., “in, or with, swiftness, with speed” (en, “in,” and the dative case of tachos, “speed”), is translated “quickly” in Acts 12:7; 22:18; “speedily” in Luke 18:8; “shortly” in Acts 25:4; Rom. 16:20; 1 Tim. 3:14 in some texts; Rev. 1:1; 22:6. In the last two places, “with speed” is probably the meaning. See SHORTLY, SPEEDILY.¶

QUICKSANDS

Note: This is the KJV rendering in Acts 27:17 of Surtis, “Syrtis” (RV). The Syrtes, Major and Minor, lie on the north coast of Africa, between the headlands of Tunis and Barca. They have been regarded as dangerous to mariners from very early times, both from the character of the sands and from the crosscurrents of the adjoining waters. In the voyage described in this chapter the vessel had left the shelter of the island of Cauda and was drifting before the N.E. wind Euraquilo. The mariners might well fear that they would be driven on the Syrtes on the leeward of their course. The changing character of the tempest, however, drove them into the sea of Adria.¶

QUIET, QUIETNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. eremos (ἥρεμος, 2263), “quiet, tranquil,” occurs in 1 Tim. 2:2, RV, “tranquil” (KJV, “quiet”); it indicates tranquillity arising from without.¶

2. hesuchios (ἡσύχιος, 2272) has much the same meaning as No. 1, but indicates “tranquillity arising from within,” causing no disturbance to others. It is translated “quiet” in 1 Tim. 2:2, RV (KJV, “peaceable”); “quiet” in 1 Pet. 3:4, where it is associated with “meek,” and is to characterize the spirit or disposition. See PEACEABLE.¶

B. Verbs.

1. hesuchazo (ἡσυχάζω, 2270), akin to A, No. 2, “to be still, to live quietly”: see CEASE, A, No. 3.¶

2. katastellō (καταστέλλω, 2687) denotes “to quiet”: see APPEASE.

B. Verbs.

1. hesuchazo (ἡσυχάζω, 2270), akin to A, No. 2, “to be still, to live quietly”: see CEASE, A, No. 3.¶

2. katastellō (καταστέλλω, 2687) denotes to quiet: see APPEASE.

C. Nouns.

1. eirene (εἰρήνη, 1515), “peace,” is translated “quietness” in Acts 24:2, KJV (RV, “peace”). See PEACE (e).

2. hesuchia (ἡσυχία, 2271), akin to A, No. 2, and B. No. 1, denotes “quietness,” 2 Thess. 3:12; it is so translated in the RV of 1 Tim. 2:11, 12 (KJV, “silence”); in Acts 22:2, RV, “(they were the more) quiet,” KJV, “(they kept the more) silence,” lit., “they kept quietness the more.”¶

QUIT

1. apallasso (ἀπαλλάσσω, 525), “to free from,” is used in the passive voice in Luke 12:58, RV, “to be quit” (KJV, “to be delivered”). See DELIVER, A, No. 6.

2. andrizo (ἀνδρίζομαι, 407) signifies “to make a man of” (aner, “a man”); in the middle voice, in 1 Cor. 16:13, “to play the man,” “quit you like men.”¶

R

RABBI

rabbei or rabbi (ῥαββί, 4461), from a word rab, primarily denoting “master” in contrast to a slave; this with the added pronominal suffix signified “my master” and was a title of respect by which teachers were addressed. The suffix soon lost its specific force, and in the NT the word is used as courteous title of address. It is applied to Christ in Matt. 26:25, 49; Mark 9:5; 11:21; 14:45; John 1:38 (where it is interpreted as didaskalos, “master,” marg., “teacher” (see also “Rabboni” in John 20:16); v. 49; 3:2; 4:31; 6:25; 9:2; 11:8; to John the Baptist in John 3:26. In Matt. 23:7, 8 Christ forbids his disciples to covet or use it. In the latter verse it is again explained as didaskalos, “master” (some mss. have kathegetes, “a guide”).¶

RABBONI

rabbouni or rabboni (ῥαββονί, 4462), formed in a similar way to the above, was an Aramaic form of a title almost entirely applied to the president of the Sanhedrin, if such was a descendant of Hillel. It was even more respectful than Rabbi, and signified “My great master”; in its use in the NT the pronominal force of the suffix is apparently retained (contrast Rabbi above); it is found in Mark 10:51 in the best texts, RV, “Rabboni” (KJV, “Lord”), addressed to Christ by blind Bartimaeus, and in John 20:16 by Mary Magdalene, where it is interpreted by didaskalos, “Master” (marg., “Teacher”).¶

For RABBLE see COURT, No. 1

RACA

raka (ῥακά, 4469) is an Aramaic word akin to the Heb. req, “empty,” the first a being due to a Galilean change. In the KJV of 1611 it was spelled racha; in the edition of 1638, raca. It was a word of utter contempt, signifying “empty,” intellectually rather than morally, “empty-headed,” like Abimelech’s hirelings, Judg. 9:4, and the “vain” man of Jas. 2:20. As condemned by Christ, Matt. 5:22, it was worse than being angry, inasmuch as an outrageous utterance is worse than a feeling unexpressed or somewhat controlled in expression; it does not indicate such a loss of self-control as the word rendered “fool,” a godless, moral reprobate.¶

For RACE (kindred) see KIND

RACE (contest)

1. agon (ἄγών, 73) is translated “race” in Heb. 12:1, one of the modes of athletic contest, this being the secondary meaning of the word. See CONFLICT.

2. stadion (στάδιον, 4712), “a stadium,” denotes a “racecourse,” 1 Cor. 9:24. The stadium (about 600 Greek feet or 1/8 of a Roman mile) was the length of the Olympic course. See FURLONG.

Note: No. 1 signifies the “race” itself; No. 2 the “course.”

RAGE, RAGING

A. Verb.

phruasso (φρυάσσω, 5433) was primarily used of “the snorting, neighing and prancing of horses”; hence, metaphorically, of “the haughtiness and insolence of men,” Acts 4:25.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 2:1.¶

B. Noun.

kludon (κλύδων, 2830), “a billow, surge” (akin to kluzo, “to wash over,” said of the sea; cf. kludonizomai, “to be tossed by the waves,” Eph. 4:14), is translated “raging” in Luke 8:24; in Jas. 1:6, RV, “surge” (KJV, “wave”).¶

Note: In Jude 13, KJV, the adjective agrios, “wild,” is translated “raging” (RV, “wild”). See WILD.

RAIL, RAILER, RAILING

A. Verb.

blasphemeo (βλασφημέω, 987), “to blaspheme, rail, revile” (for the meanings of which see BLASPHEME), is translated “to rail at, or on,” in Matt. 27:39, RV (KJV, “reviled”); Mark 15:29; Luke 23:39; 2 Pet. 2:10, RV (KJV, “to speak evil of”); 2:12, RV (KJV, “speak evil of”). Cf. loidoreo, “to revile” (see REVILE), and B, No. 2 and C, No. 2.

B. Nouns.

1. blasphemia (βλασφημία, 988) is translated “railings” in Matt. 15:19, RV; 1 Tim. 6:4, KJV and RV; “railing” in Mark 7:22, RV; Col. 3:8, RV; Jude 9, KJV and RV, lit., “judgment of railing”; in Eph. 4:31, RV (KJV, “evil speaking”). See BLASPHEMY.

2. loidoria (λοιδορία, 3059), “abuse, railing, reviling,” is rendered “reviling” in the RV, 1 Pet. 3:9 (twice); in 1 Tim. 5:14, KJV marg., “for their reviling.” See REVILE, C.¶

C. Adjectives.

1. blasphemos (βλάσφημος, 989), akin to A, and B, No. 1; see BLASPHEME, C.

2. loidoros (λοίδορος, 3060), an adjective denoting “reviling, railing” (akin to B, No. 2), is used as a noun, “a railer,” 1 Cor. 5:11. See REVILE.

RAIMENT

Notes: (1) For himation, rendered “raiment” in Matt. 17:2, KJV (RV, “garments”), so Matt. 27:31; Mark 9:3; Luke 23:34; John 19:24; Acts 22:20; Rev. 3:5, 18; 4:4; KJV and RV, Acts 18:6, see CLOTHING, No. 2 and ROBE. Himatismos is rendered “raiment” in Luke 9:29; enduma in Matt. 3:4; 6:25, 28; 28:3 and Luke 12:23. For esthes, translated “raiment” in Jas. 2:2 (2nd part), KJV, see APPAREL. (2) For skepasma, “a covering,” rendered “raiment” in 1 Tim. 6:8, KJV, see COVER, B, No. 2.

RAIN (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. huetos (ὕετός, 5205), from huo, “to rain,” is used especially, but not entirely, of “showers,” and is found in Acts 14:17; 28:2; Heb. 6:7; Jas. 5:7 (see EARLY and LATTER); 5:18; Rev. 11:6 (see B).¶

2. broche (βροχή, 1028), akin to B, below, lit., “a wetting,” hence, “rain,” is used in Matt. 7:25, 27.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 68:9; 105:32.¶ It is found in the papyri in connection with irrigation in Egypt (Deissmann, Light from the Ancient East).

B. Verb.

brecho (βρέχω, 1026), akin to A, No. 2, signifies (a) “to wet,” Luke 7:38, 44, RV (KJV, to wash); (b) “to send rain,” Matt. 5:45; to rain, Luke 17:29 (of fire and brimstone); Jas. 5:17, used impersonally (twice); Rev. 11:6, where huetos (A, No. 1) is used as the subject, lit., “(that) rain rain (not).”¶

RAINBOW

iris (ἶρις, 2463), whence Eng., “iris,” the flower, describes the “rainbow” seen in the heavenly vision, “round about the throne, like an emerald to look upon,” Rev. 4:3, emblematic of the fact that, in the exercise of God’s absolute sovereignty and perfect counsels, He will remember His covenant concerning the earth (Gen. 9:9-17); in Rev. 10:1, “the rainbow,” RV, the definite article suggests a connection with the scene in 4:3; here it rests upon the head of an angel who declares that “there shall be delay no longer” (v. 6, RV marg., the actual meaning); the mercy to be shown to the earth must be preceded by the execution of divine judgments upon the nations who defy God and His Christ. Cf. Ezek. 1:28.¶

RAISE (up)

1. egeiro (ἐγείρω, 1453), for the various meanings of which see ARISE, No. 3, is used (a) of “raising” the dead, active and passive voices, e.g. of the resurrection of Christ, Matt. 16:21; 17:23; 20:19, RV; 26:32, RV, “(after) I am raised up” (KJV, “... risen again”); Luke 9:22; 20:37; John 2:19; Acts 3:15; 4:10 [not 5:30, see (c) below]; 10:40 [not 13:23 in the best texts, see (c) below]; 13:30, 37; Rom. 4:24, 25; 6:4, 9; 7:4; 8:11 (twice); 8:34, RV; 10:9; 1 Cor. 6:14 (1st part); 15:13, 14, RV; 15:15 (twice), 16, 17; 15:20, RV; 2 Cor. 4:14; Gal. 1:1; Eph. 1:20; Col. 2:12; 1 Thess. 1:10; 1 Pet. 1:21; in 2 Tim. 2:8, RV, “risen”; (b) of the resurrection of human beings, Matt. 10:8; 11:5; Matt. 27:52. RV (KJV, “arose”); Mark 12:26, RV; Luke 7:22; John 5:21; 12:1, 9, 17; Acts 26:8; 1 Cor. 15:29 and 32, RV; 15:35, 42, 43 (twice), 44, 52; 2 Cor. 1:9; 4:14; Heb. 11:19; (c) of “raising” up a person to occupy a place in the midst of a people, said of Christ, Acts 5:30; in 13:23, KJV only (the best texts have ago, to bring, RV, “hath ... brought”); of David, Acts 13:22 (for v. 33 see No. 2); (d) metaphorically, of a horn of salvation, Luke 1:69; (e) of children, from stones, by creative power, Luke 3:8; (f) of the Temple, as the Jews thought, John 2:20, RV, “wilt Thou raise (it) Up” (KJV, “rear”); (g) of “lifting” up a person, from physical infirmity, Mark 1:31, RV, “raised ... up” (KJV, “lifted”); so 9:27; Acts 3:7; 10:26, RV (KJV, “took”); Jas. 5:15, “shall raise ... up”; (h) metaphorically, of “raising” up affliction, Phil. 1:17, RV (in the best texts; the KJV, v. 16, following those which have epiphero, has “to add”). See AWAKE, No. 1.

2. anistemi (ἀνίστημι, 450), for the various applications of which see ARISE, No. 1, is translated “to raise or raise up,” (a) of the resurrection of the dead by Christ, John 6:39, 40, 44, 54; (b) of the resurrection of Christ from the dead, Acts 2:24 (for v. 30 see RV, kathizo, “to set,” as in the best texts); 2:32; 13:34, see (c) below; Acts 17:31; (c) of “raising” up a person to occupy a place in the midst of a nation, said of Christ, Acts 3:26; 7:37; 13:33, RV, “raised up Jesus,” not here by resurrection from the dead, as the superfluous “again” of the KJV would suggest; this is confirmed by the latter part of the verse, which explains the “raising” up as being by way of His incarnation, and by the contrast in v. 34, where stress is laid upon His being “raised” from the dead, the same verb being used: (d) of “raising” up seed, Matt. 22:24; (e) of being “raised” from natural sleep, Matt. 1:24, KJV, “being raised” (RV, “arose”); here some mss. have diegeiro, “to arouse completely”; see ARISE, No. 4.

Note: For the contrast between No. 1 and No. 2 see ARISE, No. 3 (parag. 2).

3. exegeiro (ἐξεγείρω, 1825), ek, “out of,” and No. 1, is used (a) of the “resurrection” of believers, 1 Cor. 6:14 [2nd part; see No. 1 (a) for the 1st part]; (b) of “raising” a person to public position, Rom. 9:17, “did I raise thee up,” RV, said of Pharaoh.¶

4. exanistemi (ἐξανίστημι, 1817), ek, “out of,” and No. 2, is used of “raising” up seed, Mark 12:19; Luke 20:28; elsewhere, Acts 15:5, “to rise up.” See RISE.¶

5. sunegairo (συνεγείρω, 4891), “to raise together” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is used of the believer’s spiritual resurrection with Christ. Eph. 2:6; passive voice in Col. 2:12, RV, “ye were ... raised (with Him),” KJV, “ye are risen”; so 3:1. See RISE.

Notes: (1) In Acts 13:50, KJV, epegeiro, “to rouse up, excite,” is translated “raised” (RV, “stirred up,” as in KJV and RV in 14:2). (2) In Acts 24:12, poieo, to make, is used With epistasis, a collection of people, and translated “stirring up (a crowd),” RV, lit., ‘making a collection (of a crowd)’; some mss. have episustasis, a riotous throng, KJV, “raising up (the people).” (3) In Heb. 11:35, KJV, the noun anastasis, a resurrection, preceded by ex (i.e., ek), “out of, or by,” instrumental, is translated “raised to life again” (a paraphrase), RV, “by a resurrection.”

For RAN see RUN

RANKS

prasia (πρασιά, 4237), “a garden bed or plot” (probably from prason, “a leek”), is used metaphorically in Mark 6:40 of “ranks” of persons arranged in orderly groups.

RANSOM

1. lutron (λύτρε, 3383), lit., “a means of loosing” (from luo, “to loose”), occurs frequently in the Sept., where it is always used to signify “equivalence.” Thus it is used of the “ransom” for a life, e.g., Exod. 21:30, of the redemption price of a slave, e.g., Lev. 19:20, of land, 25:24, of the price of a captive, Isa. 45:13. In the NT it occurs in Matt. 20:28 and Mark 10:45, where it is used of Christ’s gift of Himself as “a ransom for many.” Some interpreters have regarded the “ransom” price as being paid to Satan; others, to an impersonal power such as death, or evil, or “that ultimate necessity which has made the whole course of things what it has been.” Such ideas are largely conjectural, the result of an attempt to press the details of certain Old Testament illustrations beyond the actual statements of New Testament doctrines.

That Christ gave up His life in expiatory sacrifice under God’s judgment upon sin and thus provided a “ransom” whereby those who receive Him on this ground obtain deliverance from the penalty due to sin, is what Scripture teaches. What the Lord states in the two passages mentioned involves this essential character of His death. In these passages the preposition is anti, which has a vicarious significance, indicating that the “ransom” holds good for those who, accepting it as such, no longer remain in death since Christ suffered death in their stead. The change of preposition in 1 Tim. 2:6, where the word antilutron, a substitutionary “ransom,” is used, is significant. There the preposition is hyper, “on behalf of,” and the statement is made that He “gave Himself a ransom for all,” indicating that the “ransom” was provisionally universal, while being of a vicarious character. Thus the three passages consistently show that while the provision was universal, for Christ died for all men, yet it is actual for those only who accept God’s conditions, and who are described in the Gospel statements as “the many.” The giving of His life was the giving of His entire person, and while His death under divine judgment was alone expiatory, it cannot be dissociated from the character of His life which, being sinless, gave virtue to His death and was a testimony to the fact that His death must be of a vicarious nature.¶

2. antilutron (ἀντίλυτρον, 487), 1 Tim. 2:6. See under No 1.¶

A. Adverb.

mallon (μᾶλλον, 3123), the comparative degree of mala, “very, very much,” is frequently translated “rather,” e.g., Matt. 10:6, 28; 1 Cor. 14:1, 5; sometimes followed by “than,” with a connecting particle, e.g., Matt. 18:13 (“more than”); or without, e.g., John 3:19; Acts 4:19, RV (KJV, “more”); in 1 Cor. 9:12, KJV, “rather” (RV, “yet more”); 12:22, RV, “rather” (KJV, “more”); 2 Cor. 3:9 (ditto); Philem. 16 (ditto); in 2 Pet. 1:10, KJV, “the rather” (RV, “the more”). See MORE.

B. Verb.

thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to will, wish,” is translated “I had rather” in 1 Cor. 14:19. See DESIRE, B, No. 6.

C. Preposition.

para (παρά, 3844), “beyond, in comparison with,” is translated “rather than” in Rom. 1:25, RV (KJV, “more than”; marg., “rather”).

D. Conjunction.

alla (ἀλλά, 235), “but, on the contrary,” is translated “and rather” in Luke 17:8.

Notes: (1) In Heb. 13:19, KJV, perissoteros, “the more exceedingly” (RV), is translated “the rather.” (2) In Luke 11:41 and 12:31, KJV, plen, an adverb signifying “yet, howbeit,” is translated “rather” (RV, “howbeit”). (3) In Rom. 3:8, KJV, the negative particle me, “not,” is translated with “rather” in italics (RV, “why not”). (4) In Luke 10:20, KJV, “rather rejoice,” there is no word in the original for “rather” (see the RV).

korax (κόραξ, 2876), “a raven” (perhaps onomatopoeic, representing the sound), occurs in the plural in Luke 12:24. The Heb. oreb and the Arabic ghurab are from roots meaning “to be black”; the Arabic root also has the idea of leaving home. Hence the evil omen attached to the bird. It is the first bird mentioned in the Bible, Gen. 8:7. Christ used the “ravens” to illustrate and enforce the lesson of God’s provision and care.¶

RAVENING

harpax (ἄρπαξ, 727), an adjective signifying “rapacious,” is translated “ravening” (of wolves) in Matt. 7:15: see EXTORT, C.

B. Noun.

harpagē (ἄρπαγή, 724) is translated “ravening” in Luke 11:39, KJV: see EXTORT, B, No. 1.

REACH

1. akoloutheo (ἀκολουθέω, 190), “to follow,” is translated “have reached,” in Rev. 18:5, of the sins of Babylon. Some mss. have the verb kollaomai, “to cleave together,” RV, marg.; see FOLLOW.

2. orego (ὀρέγομαι, 3713), “to reach or stretch out,” is rendered “reached after” in 1 Tim. 6:10, RV; see DESIRE, B, No. 5.

3. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear, carry,” is used of “reaching” forth the hand in John 20:27 (twice). See BEAR, No. 2.

4. ephikneomai (ἐφικνέομαι, 2185), “to come to, reach,” is used in 2 Cor. 10:13, 14.¶

5. katantao (κατακολουθέω, 2628), “to come to a place,” is translated “reach” in Acts 27:12, RV (KJV, “attain to”). See COME, No. 28.

Note: In Phil. 3:13, KJV, epekteinō, in the middle voice, “to stretch forward,” is translated “reaching forth” (RV, “stretching forward”).

READ, READING

A. Verb.

anaginosko (ἀναγινώσκω, 314), primarily, “to know certainly, to know again, recognize” (ana, “again,” ginosko, “to know”), is used of “reading” written characters, e.g., Matt. 12:3, 5; 21:16; 24:15; of the private “reading” of Scripture, Acts 8:28, 30, 32; of the public “reading” of Scripture, Luke 4:16; Acts 13:27; 15:21; 2 Cor. 3:15; Col. 4:16 (thrice); 1 Thess. 5:27; Rev. 1:3. In 2 Cor. 1:13 there is a purposive play upon words; firstly, “we write none other things unto you, than what ye read (anaginosko)” signifies that there is no hidden or mysterious meaning in his epistles; whatever doubts may have arisen and been expressed in this respect, he means what he says; then follows the similar verb epiginosko, “to acknowledge,” “or even acknowledge, and I hope ye will acknowledge unto the end.” The paronomasia can hardly be reproduced in English. Similarly, in 3:2 the verb ginosko, “to know,” and anaginosko, “to read,” are put in that order, and metaphorically applied to the church at Corinth as being an epistle, a message to the world, written by the apostle and his fellow missionaries, through their ministry of the gospel and the consequent change in the lives of the converts, an epistle “known and read of all men.” For other instances of paronomasia see, e.g., Rom. 12:3, phroneo, hyperphroneo, sophroneo; 1 Cor. 2:13, 14, sunkrino, anahrino; 2 Thess. 3:11, ergazomai, and periergazomai; 1 Cor. 7:31, chraomai and katachraomai; 11:31, diahrino and krino; 12:2, ago and apago; Phil. 3:2, 3, katatome and peritome.

B. Noun.

anagnosis (ἀνάγνωσις, 320) in nonbiblical Greek denoted “recognition” or “a survey” (the latter found in the papyri); then, “reading”; in the NT the public “reading” of Scripture, Acts 13:15; 2 Cor. 3:14; 1 Tim. 4:13, where the context makes clear that the reference is to the care required in reading the Scriptures to a company, a duty ever requiring the exhortation “take heed.” Later, readers in churches were called anagnostai.¶ In the Sept, Neh. 8:8.¶

READINESS

1. prothumia (προθυμία, 4288), “eagerness, willingness, readiness” (pro, “forward,” thumos, “mind, disposition,” akin to prothumos, READY, A, No. 2), is translated “readiness of mind” in Acts 17:11, “readiness” in 2 Cor. 8:11; in v. 12, RV (KJV, “a willing mind”); in v. 19, RV “(our) readiness,” KJV, “(your) ready mind”; in 9:2, RV, “readiness” (KJV, “forwardness of ... mind”; see FORWARDNESS, Note (4)).¶

2. hetoimos (ἔτοιμος, 2092), an adjective (see READY, A, No. 1), is used with echo, “to have,” and en, “in,” idiomatically, as a noun in 2 Cor. 10:6, RV, “being in readiness” (KJV, “having in readiness”), of the apostle’s aim for the church to be obedient to Christ. Cf. READY, C.

READY

A. Adjectives.

1. hetoimos (ἔτοιμος, 2092), “prepared, ready” (akin to hetoimasia, “preparation”), is used (a) of persons, Matt. 24:44; 25:10; Luke 12:40; 22:33; Acts 23:15, 21 (for 2 Cor. 10:6, see above); Titus 3:1; 1 Pet. 3:15; (b) of things, Matt. 22:4 (2nd part), 8; Mark 14:15, RV, “ready” (KJV, “prepared”); Luke 14:17; John 7:6; 2 Cor. 9:5; 10:16, RV, “things ready” (KJV, “things made ready”); 1 Pet. 1:5. See PREPARE, No. 5, Note (2).¶

2. prothumos (πρόθυμος, 4289), “predisposed, willing” (akin to prothumia, see READINESS), is translated “ready” in Rom. 1:15, expressive of willingness, eagerness: in Mark 14:38, RV, “willing” (KJV, “ready”); in Matt. 26:41. “willing.” See WILLING.¶

B. Verbs.

1. mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about to,” is translated “to be ready” in 2 Pet. 1:12, RV, where the future indicates that the apostle will be prepared, as in the past and the present, to remind his readers of the truths they know (some mss. have ouk amelezo, “I will not be negligent,” KJV; cf., however, v. 15. Field, in Notes on the Translation of the NT, suggests that the true reading is meleso, the future of melo, “to be a care, or an object of care”); in Rev. 3:2, RV, “were ready” (some texts have the present tense, as in the KJV). Elsewhere, where the KJV has the rendering to be ready, the RV gives renderings in accordance with the usual significance as follows: Luke 7:2, “was ... at the point of”; Acts 20:7, “intending”; Rev. 12:4, “about (to).”

2. hetoimazo (ἐτοιμάζω, 2090), “make ready”: see PREPARE, B, No. 1.

3. paraskeuazo (παρασκευάζω, 3903), “to prepare, make ready”: see PREPARE, B, No.

4.

Note: On the difference between No. 2 and No. 3, see PREPARE, Note (1) under No. 5.

C. Adverb.

hetoimos (ἐτοίμως, 2093) “readily” (akin to A, No. 1), is used with echo, “to have,” lit., “to have readily,” ie, “to be in readiness, to be ready,” Acts 21:13; 2 Cor. 12:14; 1 Pet. 4:5.¶

Notes: (1) In Heb. 8:13, KJV, engus, “near,” is translated “ready” (RV, “nigh”). See NIGH. (2) For “ready to distribute,” 1 Tim. 6:18, see DISTRIBUTE, B. (3) In 2 Tim. 4:6, KV, spendomai, “I am being offered,” RV, with ede, “already,” is translated “I am now ready to be offered.” See OFFER. (4) In 1 Pet. 5:2 prothumos, “willingly, with alacrity,” is rendered “of a ready mind.”¶

REAP

therizo (θερίζω, 2325), “to reap” (akin to theros, “summer, harvest”), is used (a) literally, Matt. 6:26; 25:24, 26; Luke 12:24; 19:21, 22; Jas. 5:4 (2nd part), KJV, “have reaped”; (b) figuratively or in proverbial expressions, John 4:36 (twice), 37, 38, with immediate reference to bringing Samaritans into the kingdom of God, in regard to which the disciples would enjoy the fruits of what Christ Himself had been doing in Samaria; the Lord’s words are, however, of a general application in respect of such service; in 1 Cor. 9:11, with reference to the right of the apostle and his fellow missionaries to receive material assistance from the church, a right which he forbore to exercise; in 2 Cor. 9:6 (twice), with reference to rendering material help to the needy, either “sparingly” or “bountifully,” the “reaping” being proportionate to the sowing; in Gal. 6:7, 8 (twice), of “reaping” corruption, with special reference, according to the context, to that which is naturally shortlived transient (though the statement applies to every form of sowing to the flesh), and of “reaping” eternal life (characteristics and moral qualities being in view), as a result of sowing “to the Spirit,” the reference probably being to the new nature of the believer, which is, however, under the controlling power of the Holy Spirit, v. 9, the “reaping” (the effect of well doing) being accomplished, to a limited extent, in this life, but in complete fulfillment at and beyond the judgment seat of Christ; diligence or laxity here will then produce proportionate results; in Rev. 14:15 (twice), 16, figurative of the discriminating judgment divinely to be fulfilled at the close of this age, when the wheat will be separated from the tares (see Matt. 13:30).¶

For REAP DOWN, Jas. 5:4, see MOW

theristes (θεριστής, 2327), “a reaper” (akin to therizo, see above), is used of angels in Matt. 13:30, 39.¶

For REAR UP, John 2:20, see RAISE, No. 1 (f)

REASON (Noun)

logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word,” etc., has also the significance of “the inward thought itself, a reckoning, a regard, a reason,” translated “reason” in Acts 18:14, in the phrase “reason would,” kata logon, lit., “according to reason (I would bear with you)”; in 1 Pet. 3:15, “a reason (concerning the hope that is in you).” See WORD.

Note: In Acts 6:2, KJV, the adjective arestos, “pleasing, agreeable,” is translated “reason” (RV, “fit,” marg., “pleasing”). See FIT, No. 2.

For the prepositions rendered BY REASON OF see †, p. 1

REASON (Verb)

1. dialogizomai (διαλογίζομαι, 1260), “to bring together different reasons and reckon them up, to reason,” is used in the NT (a) chiefly of thoughts and considerations which are more or less objectionable, e.g., of the disciples who “reasoned” together, through a mistaken view of Christ’s teaching regarding leaven, Matt. 16:7, 8 and Mark 8:16, 17; of their “reasoning” as to who was the greatest among them, Mark 9:33, RV, “were ye reasoning,” KJV, “ye disputed” (for v. 34, see DISPUTE); of the scribes and Pharisees in criticizing Christ’s claim to forgive sins, Mark 2:6, 8 (twice) and Luke 5:21, 22; of the chief priests and elders in considering how to answer Christ’s question regarding John’s baptism, Matt. 21:25; Mark 11:31 (some mss. have logizomai, here, which is nowhere else rendered “to reason”); of the wicked husbandmen, and their purpose to murder the heir and seize his inheritance, Luke 20:14; of the rich man who “reasoned” within himself, RV (KJV, “thought”), as to where to bestow his fruits, Luke 12:17 (some mss. have it in John 11:50, the best have logizomai; see ACCOUNT, No. 4); (b) of considerations not objectionable, Luke 1:29, “cast in (her) mind”; 3:15, RV, and KJV, marg., “reasoned” (KJV, “mused”). See CAST, No. 15, DISPUTE, B, No. 2.¶

2. dialegomai (διαλέγομαι, 1256), “to think different things with oneself, to ponder,” then, “to dispute with others,” is translated “to reason in Acts 17:2, KJV and RV; 17:17, RV; 18:4, 19, KJV and RV; 19:8, 9, RV; 24:25, KJV and RV; Heb. 12:5, RV, “reasoneth (with you),” KJV, “speaketh (unto you). See DISPUTE, B, No. 1.

3. sullogizomai (συλλογίζομαι, 4817), “to compute” (sun, “with,” and logizomai, cf. Eng., “syllogism”), also denotes “to reason,” and is so rendered in Luke 20:5.¶

4. suzeteo (4802), “to seek or examine together” (sun, “with,” zeteo, “to seek”), “to discuss,” is translated “reasoning” in Mark 12:28, KJV (RV, “questioning”); similarly in Luke 24:15. See DISPUTE, B, No. 3.

REASONABLE

logikos (λογικός, 3050), pertaining to “the reasoning faculty, reasonable, rational,” is used in Rom. 12:1, of the service (latreia) to be rendered by believers in presenting their bodies “a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God.” The sacrifice is to be intelligent, in contrast to those offered by ritual and compulsion; the presentation is to be in accordance with the spiritual intelligence of those who are new creatures in Christ and are mindful of “the mercies of God.” For the significance of the word in 1 Pet. 2:2, see under MILK.¶

dialogismos (ἀδῖος, 126), “a thought, reasoning, inward questioning” [akin to dializomai, see REASON (Verb), No. 1], is translated “reasoning” or “reasonings” in Luke 5:22, RV (KJV, “thoughts”); 9:46; v. 47, RV (KJV, “thoughts”); 24:38 (KJV, “thoughts”); Rom. 1:21 (KJV, “imaginations”); 1 Cor. 3:20 (KJV, “thoughts”). See DISPUTE, A, No. 1.

Note: In those mss. which contain Acts 28:29, occurs suzetesis, “a disputation,” which is translated “reasoning” (KJV).¶

REBUKE (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. epitimao (ἐπιτιμάω, 2008), primarily, “to put honor upon,” then, “to adjudge,” hence signifies “to rebuke.” Except for 2 Tim. 4:2 and Jude 9, it is confined in the NT to the Synoptic Gospels, where it is frequently used of the Lord’s rebukes to (a) evil spirits, e.g., Matt. 17:18; Mark 1:25; 9:25; Luke 4:35, 41; 9:42; (b) winds, Matt. 8:26; Mark 4:39; Luke 8:24; (c) fever, Luke 4:39; (d) disciples, Mark 8:33; Luke 9:55; contrast Luke 19:39. For rebukes by others see Matt. 16:22; 19:13; 20:31; Mark 8:32; 10:13; 10:48, RV, “rebuked” (KJV, “charged”); Luke 17:3; 18:15, 39; 23:40. See CHARGE, C, No. 7.

2. elencho (ἐλέγχω, 1651), “to convict, refute, reprove,” is translated “to rebuke” in the KJV of the following (the RV always has the verb “to reprove”): 1 Tim. 5:20; Titus 1:13; 2:15; Heb. 12:5; Rev. 3:19. See CONVICT, No. 1.

Note: While epitimao signifies simply “a rebuke” which may be either undeserved, Matt. 16:22, or ineffectual, Luke 23:40, elencho implies a “rebuke” which carries conviction.

3. epiplesso (ἐπιπλήσσω, 1969), “to strike at” (epi, “upon” or “at,” plesso, “to strike, smite”), hence, “to rebuke,” is used in the injunction against “rebuking” an elder, 1 Tim. 5:1.¶

Note: In Phil. 2:15, the best texts have amomos, “without blemish” (a, negative, mos, “a blemish, a moral disgrace”), RV, “without blemish”; some mss. have amometos (a, negative, and momaomai, “to blame”), KJV, “without rebuke.” Contrast amemptos in the same verse, “blameless on account of absence of inconsistency” or “ground of reproof,” whereas amomos indicates “absence of stain or blemish.” We may have blemish, with freedom from blame.

B. Noun.

elenxis (ἐλεγχίς, 1649), akin to A, No. 2, denotes “rebuke”; in 2 Pet. 2:16, it is used with echo, “to have,” and translated “he was rebuked,” lit., “he had rebuke.”¶ In the Sept., Job 21:4, “reproof”; 23:2, “pleading.”¶

For RECEIPT see CUSTOM (Toll), No. 2

RECEIVE, RECEIVING

A. Verbs.

1. lambano (λαμβάνω, 2983) denotes either “to take” or “to receive,” (I) literally, (a) without an object, in contrast to asking, e.g., Matt. 7:8; Mark 11:24, RV, “have received” (the original has no object); (b) in contrast to giving, e.g., Matt. 10:8; Acts 20:35; (c) with objects, whether things, e.g., Mark 10:30; Luke 18:30, in the best mss. (some have No. 4); John 13:30; Acts 9:19, RV, “took” (KJV, “received”); 1 Cor. 9:25, RV, “receive” (KJV, “obtain”); or persons, e.g., John 6:21; 13:20; 16:14, RV, “take”; 2 John 10; in Mark 14:65, RV, “received (Him with blows of their hands)”; this has been styled a vulgarism; (II), metaphorically, of the word of God, Matt. 13:20; Mark 4:16; the sayings of Christ, John 12:48; the witness of Christ, John 3:11; a hundredfold in this life, and eternal life in the world to come, Mark 10:30; mercy, Heb. 4:16, RV, “may receive” (KJV, “may obtain”); a person (prosopon, see FACE), Luke 20:21, “acceptest,” and Gal. 2:6, “accepteth,” an expression used in the OT either in the sense of being gracious or kind to a person, e.g., Gen. 19:21; 32:20, or (negatively) in the sense of being impartial, e.g., Lev. 19:15; Deut. 10:17; this latter is the meaning in the two NT passages just mentioned. See ACCEPT, A, No. 4, TAKE, etc.

Lambano and prosopon are combined in the nouns prosopolempsia, “respect of persons,” and prosopolempetes, “respector of persons,” and in the verb prosopolempito, “to have respect of persons”: see PERSON.

2. paralambano (παραλαμβάνω, 3880), “to receive from another” (para, “from beside”), or “to take,” signifies “to receive,” e.g., in Mark 7:4; John 1:11; 14:3; 1 Cor. 11:23; 15:1, 3; Gal. 1:9, 12; Phil. 4:9; Col. 2:6; 4:17; 1 Thess. 2:13 (1st part); 4:1; 2 Thess. 3:6; Heb. 12:28. See TAKE.

3. analambano (ἀναλαμβάνω, 353), “to take up” (ana), “to take to oneself, receive,” is rendered “to receive” in Mark 16:19; Acts 1:2, 11, 22, RV, “He was received up” (KJV, “taken”); 10:16; 1 Tim. 3:16. See TAKE.

4. apolambano (ἀπολαμβάνω, 618) signifies “to receive from another,” (a) to “receive” as one’s due (for Luke 18:30, see No. 1); Luke 23:41; Rom. 1:27; Col. 3:24; 2 John 8; (b) without the indication of what is due, Luke 16:25; Gal. 4:5 (in some mss. 3 John 8, for No. 7); (c) to receive back, Luke 6:34 (twice); 15:27. For its other meaning, “to take apart,” Mark 7:33, see TAKE.¶

5. proslambano (προσλαμβάνω, 4355) denotes “to take to oneself” (pros, “to”) or “to receive,” always in the middle voice, signifying a special interest on the part of the receiver, suggesting a welcome, Acts 28:2; Rom. 14:1, 3; 15:7; Philem. 12 (in some mss.; the best omit it); v. 17. See TAKE.

6. metalambano (μεταλαμβάνω, 3335), “to have or get a share of, partake of” (meta, with), is rendered “receiveth” in Heb. 6:7. See EAT, HAVE, PARTAKE, TAKE. In the Sept., Esth. 5:1.¶

7. hupolambano (ὑπολαμβάνω, 5274), “to take or bear up” (hupo, “under”), “to receive,” is rendered “received” in Acts 1:9, of the cloud at the Ascension; in 3 John 8, RV, “welcome” (KJV, “receive”). See ANSWER, B, No. 3, SUPPOSE, WELCOME.

8. dechomai (δέχομαι, 1209), “to receive by deliberate and ready reception of what is offered,” is used of (a) taking with the hand, taking hold, taking hold of or up, e.g., Luke 2:28, RV, “he received (Him),” KJV, “took he (Him) up”; 16:6, 7; 22:17; Eph. 6:17; (b) “receiving,” said of a place “receiving” a person, of Christ into the Heavens, Acts 3:21; or of persons in giving access to someone as a visitor, e.g., John 4:45; 2 Cor. 7:15; Gal. 4:14; Col. 4:10; by way of giving hospitality, etc., e.g., Matt. 10:14, 40 (four times), 41 (twice); 18:5; Mark 6:11; 9:37; Luke 9:5, 48, 53; 10:8, 10; 16:4; v. 9, of reception, “into the eternal tabernacles,” said of followers of Christ who have used “the mammon of unrighteousness” to render assistance to (“make ... friends of”) others; of Rahab’s reception of the spies, Heb. 11:31; of the reception, by the Lord, of the spirit of a departing believer, Acts 7:59; of “receiving” a gift, 2 Cor. 8:4 (in some mss.; RV follows those which omit it); of the favorable reception of testimony and teaching, etc., Luke 8:13; Acts 8:14; 11:1; 17:11; 1 Cor. 2:14; 2 Cor. 8:17; 1 Thess. 1:6; 2:13, where paralambano (No. 2) is used in the 1st part, “ye received,” dechomai in the 2nd part, “ye accepted,” RV (KJV, “received”), the former refers to the ear, the latter, adding the idea of appropriation, to the heart; Jas. 1:21; in 2 Thess. 2:10, “the love of the truth, :” i.e., love for the truth; cf. Matt. 11:14, “if ye are willing to receive it,” an elliptical construction frequent in Greek writings; of “receiving,” by way of bearing with, enduring, 2 Cor. 11:16; of “receiving” by way of getting, Acts 22:5; 28:21, of becoming partaker of benefits, Mark 10:15; Luke 18:17; Acts 7:38; 2 Cor. 6:1; 11:4 (last clause “did accept”: cf. lambano in previous clauses); Phil. 4:18.¶

Note: There is a certain distinction between lambano and dechomai (more pronounced in the earlier, classical use), in that in many instances lambano suggests a self-prompted taking, whereas dechomai more frequently indicates “a welcoming or an appropriating reception” (Grimm-Thayer).

9. anadechomai (ἀναδέχομαι, 324), “to receive gladly,” is used in Acts 28:7, of the reception by Publius of the shipwrecked company in Melita; in Heb. 11:17, of Abraham’s reception of God’s promises, RV, “gladly (ana, “up,” regarded as intensive) received.” Moulton and Milligan point out the frequency of this verb in the papyri in the legal sense of taking the responsibility of something, becoming security for, undertaking, and say “The predominance of this meaning suggests its application in Heb. 11:17. The statement that Abraham had ‘undertaken,’ ‘assumed the responsibility of,’ the promises, would not perhaps be alien to the thought.” The responsibility would surely be that of his faith in “receiving” the promises. In Classical Greek it had the meaning of “receiving,” and it is a little difficult to attach any other sense to the circumstances, save perhaps that Abraham’s faith undertook to exercise the assurance of the fulfillment of the promises.¶

10. apodechomai (ἀποδέχομαι, 588), “to welcome, to accept gladly” (apo, “from”), “to receive without reserve,” is used (a) literally, Luke 8:40, RV, “welcomed”; 9:11 (in the best texts, some have No. 8); Acts 18:27; 21:17; 28:30; (b) metaphorically, Acts 2:41; 24:3, “we accept,” in the sense of acknowledging, the term being used in a tone of respect. See ACCEPT, A No. 2.¶

11. eisdechomai (εἰσδέχομαι, 1523), “to receive into” (eis), is used only in 2 Cor. 6:17, where the verb does not signify “to accept,” but “to admit” (as antithetic to “come ye out,” and combining Isa. 52:11 with Zeph. 3:20).¶

12. epidechomai (ἐπιδέχομαι, 1926), lit., “to accept besides” (epi, “upon”), “to accept” (found in the papyri, of accepting the terms of a lease), is used in the sense of accepting in 3 John 9; in v. 10, in the sense of “receiving” with hospitality, in each verse said negatively concerning Diotrephes.¶

13. paradechomai (παραδέχομαι, 3858), “to receive or admit with approval” (para, “beside”), is used (a) of persons, Acts 15:4 (in some texts, No. 10); Heb. 12:6; (b) of things, Mark 4:20, KJV, “receive” (RV, “accept”); Acts 16:21; 22:18; 1 Tim. 5:9.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 23:1; Prov. 3:12.¶

14. prosdechomai (προσδέχομαι, 4327), “to receive to oneself, to receive favorably,” also “to look for, wait for,” is used of “receiving” in Luke 15:2; Rom. 16:2; Phil. 2:29. See ACCEPT, A, No. 3, ALLOW, LOOK (for), TAKE, WAIT.

15. hupodechomai (ὑποδέχομαι, 5264) denotes “to receive under one’s roof” (hupo, “under”), “receive as a guest, entertain hospitably,” Luke 10:38; 19:6; Acts 17:7; Jas. 2:25.¶

16. komizo (κομίζω, 2865) denotes “to bear, carry,” e.g., Luke 7:37; in the middle voice, “to bear for oneself,” hence (a) “to receive,” Heb. 10:36; 11:13 (in the best texts; some have lambano, No. 1), 39; 1 Pet. 1:9; 5:4; in some texts in 2 Pet. 2:13 (in the best mss. adikeomai, “suffering wrong,” RV); (b) “to receive back, recover,” Matt. 25:27; Heb. 11:19; metaphorically, of requital, 2 Cor. 5:10; Col. 3:25, of “receiving back again” by the believer at the judgment seat of Christ hereafter, for wrong done in this life; Eph. 6:8, of “receiving,” on the same occasion, “whatsoever good thing each one doeth, RV; see BRING, No. 20.¶

17. apecho (ἄπέχω, 568) denotes (a) transitively, “to have in full, to have received”; so the RV in Matt. 6:2, 5, 16 (for KJV, “they have”); Luke 6:24, KJV, and RV; in all these instances the present tense (to which the KJV incorrectly adheres in the Matt. 6 verses) has a perfective force, consequent upon the combination with the prefix apo (“from”), not that it stands for the perfect tense, but that it views the action in its accomplished result; so in Phil. 4:18, where the KJV and RV translate it “I have”; in Philem. 15, “(that) thou shouldest have (him for ever),” KJV, “shouldest receive”; see HAVE, No. 2, and the reference to illustrations from the papyri of the use of the verb in receipts; (b) intransitively, “to be away, distant,” used with porro, “far,” Matt. 15:8; Mark 7:6; with makran, “far off, afar,” Luke 7:6; 15:20; without an accompanying adverb, Luke 24:13, “which was from.” See ABSTAIN, ENOUGH, HAVE.

18. choreo (χωρέω, 5562), “to give space, make room for” (chora, “a place”), is used metaphorically, of “receiving” with the mind, Matt. 19:11, 12; into the heart, 2 Cor. 7:2, RV, “open your hearts,” marg., “make room” (KJV, receive). See COME, No. 24, CONTAIN, No. 1, COURSE, B.

19. lanchano (λαγχάνω, 2975), “to obtain by lot,” is translated “received” in Acts 1:17. RV (KJV, “had obtained”). See LOT.

Notes: (1) In Mark 2:2, KJV, choreo is translated “there was (no) room to receive” [RV, “there was (no longer) room (for).” (2) In Rev. 13:16, KJV, didomi is translated “to receive” (marg., “to give them”), RV, “(that) there be given (them).” (3) In 2 Cor. 7:9, KJV, zemioo, “to suffer loss” (RV), is translated “ye might receive damage.” (4) In Luke 7:22, RV, anablepo, “to recover sight,” is translated “receive their sight” (KJV, “see”). (5) For “received (RV, ‘hath taken’) tithes,” Heb. 7:6, see TITHE. (6) For eleeo, in the passive voice, 2 Cor. 4:1, KJV, “having received mercy” (RV, “obtained”), see MERCY. (7) For patroparadotos, in 1 Pet. 1:18, KJV, “received by tradition from your fathers,” see HANDED DOWN. (8) In the KJV of Matt. 13:19, 20, 22, 23, speiro, “to sow seed,” is translated “received seed”; see SOW.

B. Nouns

1. lepsi or lempsis (λήψις, 3028), “a receiving” (akin to lambano, A, No. 1), is used in Phil. 4:15.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 15:27, 29.¶

2. anale(m)psis (ἀνάληψις, 354), “a taking up” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), is used in Luke 9:51 with reference to Christ’s ascension; “that He should be received up” is, lit., “of the receiving up (of Him).”¶

3. metale(m)psis (μετάληψις, 3336), “a participation, taking, receiving,” is used in 1 Tim. 4:3, in connection with food, “to be received,” lit., “with a view to (eis) reception.”¶

4. prose(m)psis (πρόσληψις, 4356), pros, “to,” and No. 1, is used in Rom. 11:15, of the restoration of Israel.¶

RECKON, RECKONING

1. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049) is properly used (a) of “numerical calculation,” e.g., Luke 22:37; (b) metaphorically, “by a reckoning of characteristics or reasons, to take into account,” Rom. 2:26, “shall ... be reckoned,” RV (KJV, “counted”), of “reckoning” uncircumcision for circumcision by God’s estimate in contrast to that of the Jew regarding his own condition (v. 3); in 4:3, 5, 6, 9, 11, 22, 23, 24, of “reckoning” faith for righteousness, or “reckoning” righteousness to persons, in all of which the RV uses the verb “to reckon” instead of the KJV “to count or to impute”; in v. 4 the subject is treated by way of contrast between grace and debt, which latter involves the “reckoning” of a reward for works; what is owed as a debt cannot be “reckoned” as a favor, but the faith of Abraham and his spiritual children sets them outside the category of those who seek to be justified by self-effort, and, vice versa, the latter are excluded from the grace of righteousness bestowed on the sole condition of faith; so in Gal. 3:6 (RV, “was reckoned,” KJV, “was accounted”); since Abraham, like all the natural descendants of Adam, was a sinner, he was destitute of righteousness in the sight of God; if, then, his relationship with God was to be rectified (i.e., if he was to be justified before God), the rectification could not be brought about by works of merit on his part; in Jas. 2:23, RV, “reckoned,” the subject is viewed from a different standpoint (see under JUSTIFICATION, B, last four paragraphs); for other instances of “reckoning” in this respect see Rom. 9:8, RV, “are reckoned” (KJV, “are counted”); 2 Cor. 5:19, RV, “(not) reckoning (trespasses),” KJV, “imputing”; (c) “to consider, calculate,” translated “to reckon” in Rom. 6:11; 8:36; 2 Cor. 10:11, RV, “let (such a one) reckon (this)”; (d) “to suppose, judge, deem,” translated “to reckon” in Rom. 2:3, “reckonest thou (this),” RV (KJV, “thinkest”); 3:28 (KJV, “we conclude”); 8:18; 2 Cor. 11:5 (KJV, “I suppose”); see ACCOUNT, A, No. 4, CONSIDER, No. 6, COUNT, No. 3, SUPPOSE; (e) “to purpose, decide,” 2 Cor. 10:2, RV, “count” (KJV, “think”); see COUNT, No. 3.

2. legō (λέγω, 3004), “to say, speak,” also has the meaning “to gather, reckon, account,” used in this sense in Heb. 7:11, RV, “be reckoned” (KJV, “be called”). See ASK, A, No. 6.

3. sunairo (συναίρω, 4868), “to take up together” (sun, “with,” airo, “to take”), is used with the noun logos, “an account,” signifying “to settle accounts,” Matt. 18:23, RV, “make a reckoning” (KV, “take account”); v. 24, KJV and RV, “to reckon” (logos being understood); 25:19, RV, “maketh a reckoning” (KJV, “reckoneth”). This phrase occurs not infrequently in the papyri in the sense of settling accounts (see Deissmann, Light from the Ancient East, 118).¶ In the Sept. the verb occurs in its literal sense in Exod. 23:5, “thou shalt help to raise” (lit., “raise with”).¶

RECLINE

anakeimai (ἀνακείμεναι, 345), lit., and in classical usage, “to be laid up, laid,” denotes, in the NT, “to recline at table”; it is translated “reclining” in John 13:23, RV (KJV, “leaning”); cf. anapipto in v. 25, RV, “leaning back.” See also v. 12, marg. See LEAN, SIT, TABLE (AT THE).

For RECOMMEND, Acts 14:26; 15:40, KJV, see COMMEND, No. 2

RECOMPENCE, RECOMPENSE

A. Nouns.

1. antapodoma (ἀνταπόδομα, 468), akin to antapodidomi, “to recompense” (see below), lit., “a giving back in return” (anti, “in return,” apo, back, didomi, “to give”), a requital, recompence, is used (a) in a favorable sense, Luke 14:12; (b) in an unfavorable sense, Rom. 11:9, indicating that the present condition of the Jewish nation is the retributive effect of their transgressions, on account of which that which was designed as a blessing (“their table”) has become a means of judgment.¶

2. antapodosis (ἀνταπόδοσις, 469), derived, like No. 1, from antapodidomi, is rendered “recompense” in Col. 3:24, RV (KJV, “reward”).¶

3. antimisthia (ἀντιμισθία, 489), “a reward, requital” (anti, “in return,” misthos, “wages, hire”), is used (a) in a good sense, 2 Cor. 6:13; (b) in a bad sense, Rom. 1:27.¶ 4. misthapodosia (μισθαποδοσία, 3405), “a payment of wages” (from misthos, see No. 3, and apodidomi, B, No. 2), “a recompence,” is used (a) of reward, Heb. 10:35; 11:26; (b) of punishment, Heb. 2:2.¶ Cf. misthapodotes, “a rewarder,” Heb. 11:6.¶

B. Verbs.

1. antapodidomi (ἀνταποδίδωμι, 467), akin to A, No. 1 and No. 2, “to give back as an equivalent, to requite, recompense” (the anti expressing the idea of a complete return), is translated “render” in 1 Thess. 3:9, here only in the NT of thanksgiving to God (cf. the Sept. of Ps. 116:12); elsewhere it is used of “recompense,” “whether between men (but in that case only of good, not of evil, see No. 2 in 1 Thess. 5:15), Luke 14:14 a, cf. the corresponding noun in v. 12; or between God and evil-doers, Rom. 12:19, RV (KJV, “repay”); Heb. 10:30, cf. the noun in Rom. 11:9; or between God and those who do well, Luke 14:14 b; Rom. 11:35, cf. the noun in Col. 3:24; in 2 Thess. 1:6 both reward and retribution are in view.”*¶

2. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give up or back, restore, return,” is translated “shall recompense” in the RV of Matt. 6:4, 6, 18 (KJV, “shall reward”); in Rom. 12:17, KJV, “recompense” (RV, “render”); in 1 Thess. 5:15, “render,” See DELIVER, GIVE, PAY, PERFORM, RENDER, REPAY, REQUITE, RESTORE, REWARD, SELL, YIELD.

RECONCILE, RECONCILIATION

A. Verbs.

1. katallasso (καταλλάσσω, 2644) properly denotes “to change, exchange” (especially of money); hence, of persons, “to change from enmity to friendship, to reconcile.” With regard to the relationship between God and man, the use of this and connected words shows that primarily “reconciliation” is what God accomplishes, exercising His grace towards sinful man on the ground of the death of Christ in propitiatory sacrifice under the judgment due to sin, 2 Cor. 5:19, where both the verb and the noun are used (cf. No. 2, in Col. 1:21). By reason of this men in their sinful condition and alienation from God are invited to be “reconciled” to Him; that is to say, to change their attitude, and accept the provision God has made, whereby their sins can be remitted and they themselves be justified in His sight in Christ.

Rom. 5:10 expresses this in another way: “For if, while we were enemies, we were reconciled to God through the death of His Son ...”; that we were “enemies” not only expresses man’s hostile attitude to God but signifies that until this change of attitude takes place men are under condemnation, exposed to God’s wrath. The death of His Son is the means of the removal of this, and thus we “receive the reconciliation,” v. 11, RV. This stresses the attitude of God’s favor toward us. The KJV rendering “atonement” is incorrect. Atonement is the offering itself of Christ under divine judgment upon sin. We do not receive atonement. What we do receive is the result, namely, “reconciliation.”

The removal of God’s wrath does not contravene His immutability. He always acts according to His unchanging righteousness and lovingkindness, and it is because He changes not that His relative attitude does change towards those who change. All His acts show that He is Light and Love. Anger, where there is no personal element, is a sign of moral health if, and if only, it is accompanied by grief. There can be truest love along with righteous indignation, Mark 3:5, but love and enmity cannot exist together. It is important to distinguish “wrath” and “hostility.” The change in God’s relative attitude toward those who receive the “reconciliation” only proves His real unchangeableness.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, p. 225.

Not once is God said to be “reconciled.” The enmity is alone on our part. It was we who needed to be “reconciled” to God, not God to us, and it is propitiation, which His righteousness and mercy have provided, that makes the “reconciliation” possible to those who receive it.

When the writers of the NT speak upon the subject of the wrath of God, “the hostility is represented not as on the part of God, but of man. And this is the reason why the apostle never uses diallasso [a word used only in Matt. 5:24, in the NT] in this connection, but always katallasso, because the former word denotes mutual concession after mutual hostility [frequently exemplified in the Sept.], an idea absent from katallasso” (Lightfoot, Notes on the Epistles of Paul, p. 288).

The subject finds its great unfolding in 2 Cor. 5:18-20, which states that God “reconciled us (believers) to Himself through Christ,” and that “the ministry of reconciliation” consists in this, “that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself.” The insertion of a comma in the KJV after the word “Christ” is misleading; the doctrine stated here is not that God was in Christ (the unity of the Godhead is not here in view), but that what God has done in the matter of reconciliation He has done in Christ, and this is based upon the fact that “Him who knew no sin He made to be sin on our behalf; that we might become the righteousness of God in Him.” On this ground the command to men is “be ye reconciled to God.”

The verb is used elsewhere in 1 Cor. 7:11, of a woman returning to her husband.¶

2. apokatallasso (ἀποκαταλλάσσω, 604), “to reconcile completely” (apo, from, and No. 1), a stronger form of No. 1, “to change from one condition to another,” so as to remove all enmity and leave no impediment to unity and peace, is used in Eph. 2:16, of the “reconciliation” of believing Jew and Gentile “in one body unto God through the Cross”; in Col. 1:21 not the union of Jew and Gentile is in view, but the change wrought in the individual believer from alienation and enmity, on account of evil works, to “reconciliation” with God; in v. 20 the word is used of the divine purpose to “reconcile” through Christ “all things unto Himself ... whether things upon the earth, or things in the heavens,” the basis of the change being the peace effected “through the blood of His Cross.” It is the divine purpose, on the ground of the work of Christ accomplished on the cross, to bring the whole universe, except rebellious angels and unbelieving man, into full accord with the mind of God, Eph. 1:10. Things “under the earth,” Phil. 2:10, are subdued, not “reconciled.”¶

3. diallasso (διαλλάσσω, 1259), “to effect an alteration, to exchange,” and hence, “to reconcile,” in cases of mutual hostility yielding to mutual concession, and thus differing from No. 1 (under which see Lightfoot’s remarks), is used in the passive voice in Matt. 5:24, which illustrates the point. There is no such idea as “making it up” where God and man are concerned.¶

B. Noun.

katallage (καταλλαγή, 2643), akin to A, No. 1, primarily “an exchange,” denotes “reconciliation,” a change on the part of one party, induced by an action on the part of another; in the NT, the “reconciliation” of men to God by His grace and love in Christ. The word is used in Rom. 5:11 and 11:15. The occasioning cause of the world-wide proclamation of “reconciliation” through the gospel, was the casting away (partially and temporarily) of Israel. A new relationship Godward is offered to the Gentiles in the gospel. The word also occurs in 2 Cor. 5:18, 19, where “the ministry of reconciliation” and “the word of reconciliation” are not the ministry of teaching the doctrine of expiation, but that of beseeching men to be “reconciled” to God on the ground of what God has wrought in Christ. See No. 1, above.¶

Note: In the OT in some passages the KJV incorrectly has “reconciliation,” the RV rightly changes the translation to “atonement,” e.g., Lev. 8:15; Ezek. 45:20, RV, “make atonement for” (KJV, “reconcile”).

For RECONCILIATION (MAKE), Heb. 2:17, KJV, see PROPITIATION

For RECORD (KJV) see TESTIFY, No. 3, TESTIMONY, No. 2

RECOVER

1. sozo (σώζω, 4982), “to save,” is sometimes used of “healing” or “restoration to health,” the latter in John 11:12, RV, “he will recover,” marg., “be saved” (KJV, “he shall do well”). See HEAL, PRESERVE, SAVE, WHOLE

2. ananepho (ἀνανήφω, 366), “to return to soberness,” as from a state of delirium or drunkenness (ana, “back,” or “again,” nepho, “to be sober, to be wary”), is used in 2 Tim. 2:26, “may recover themselves” (RV marg., “return to soberness,” KJV marg., “awake”), said of those who, opposing the truth through accepting perversions of it, fall into the snare of the Devil, becoming intoxicated with error; for these “recovery” is possible only by “repentance unto the knowledge of the truth.” For a translation of the verse see CAPTIVE, B, No. 3.¶

Notes: (1) For “recovering of sight,” Luke 4:18, see SIGHT. (2) In Mark 16:18, the phrase echo kalos, lit., “to have well,” i.e., “to be well,” is rendered “they shall recover.”

RED

A. Adjectives.

1. purrhos (πυρρός, 4450) denotes “firecolored” (pur, “fire”), hence, “fiery red,” Rev. 6:4; 12:3, in the latter passage said of the Dragon, indicative of the cruelty of the Devil.¶

2. eruthros (ἐρυθρός, 2063) denotes “red” (the ordinary color); the root rudh—is seen, e.g., in the Latin rufus, Eng., “ruby,” “ruddy,” “rust,” etc. It is applied to the Red Sea, Acts 7:36; Heb. 11:29.¶ The origin of the name is uncertain; it has been regarded as due, e.g., to the color of the corals which cover the Red Sea bed or line its shores, or to the tinge of the mountains which border it, or to the light of the sky upon its waters.

B. Verb.

purrhazo (πυρράζω, 4449), “to be fiery red” (akin to A, No. 1), is used of the sky, Matt. 16:2, 3.¶ In the Sept., purrhizo, Lev. 13:19, 42, 43, 49; 14:37.¶

REDEEM, REDEMPTION

A. Verbs.

1. exagorazo (ἐξαγοράζω, 1805), a strengthened form of agorazo, “to buy” (see BUY, No. 1), denotes “to buy out” (ex for ek), especially of purchasing a slave with a view to his freedom. It is used metaphorically (a) in Gal. 3:13 and 4:5, of the deliverance by Christ of Christian Jews from the Law and its curse; what is said of lutron (RANSOM,

No. 1) is true of this verb and of agorazo, as to the death of Christ, that Scripture does not say to whom the price was paid; the various suggestions made are purely speculative; (b) in the middle voice, “to buy up for oneself,” Eph. 5:16 and Col. 4:5, of “buying up the opportunity” (RV marg.; text, “redeeming the time,” where “time” is kairos, “a season,” a time in which something is seasonable), i.e., making the most of every opportunity, turning each to the best advantage since none can be recalled if missed.¶

Note: In Rev. 5:9; 14:3, 4, KJV, agorazo, “to purchase” (RV) is translated “redeemed.” See PURCHASE.

2. lutroo (λυτρόω, 3084), “to release on receipt of ransom” (akin to lutron, “a ransom”), is used in the middle voice, signifying “to release by paying a ransom price, to redeem” (a) in the natural sense of delivering, Luke 24:21, of setting Israel free from the Roman yoke; (b) in a spiritual sense, Titus 2:14, of the work of Christ in “redeeming” men “from all iniquity” (anomia, “lawlessness,” the bondage of self-will which rejects the will of God); 1 Pet. 1:18 (passive voice), “ye were redeemed,” from a vain manner of life, i.e., from bondage to tradition. In both instances the death of Christ is stated as the means of “redemption.”¶

Note: While both No. 1 and No. 2 are translated “to redeem,” exagorazo does not signify the actual “redemption,” but the price paid with a view to it, lutroo signifies the actual “deliverance,” the setting at liberty.

B. Nouns.

1. lutrosis (ἀγγέλιον, 30), “a redemption” (akin to A, No. 2), is used (a) in the general sense of “deliverance,” of the nation of Israel, Luke 1:68 RV, “wrought redemption”; 2:38; (b) of “the redemptive work” of Christ, Heb. 9:12, bringing deliverance through His death, from the guilt and power of sin.¶ In the Sept., Lev. 25:29, 48; Num. 18:16; Judg. 1:15; Ps. 49:8; 111:9; 130:7; Isa. 63:4.¶

2. apolutrosis (ἀπολύτρωσις, 629), a strengthened form of No. 1, lit., “a releasing, for (i.e., on payment of) a ransom.” It is used of (a) “deliverance” from physical torture, Heb. 11:35, see DELIVER, B, No. 1; (b) the deliverance of the people of God at the coming of Christ with His glorified saints, “in a cloud with power and great glory,” Luke 21:28, a “redemption” to be accomplished at the “outshining of His Parousia,” 2 Thess. 2:8, i.e., at His second advent; (c) forgiveness and justification, “redemption” as the result of expiation, deliverance from the guilt of sins, Rom. 3:24, “through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus”; Eph. 1:7, defined as “the forgiveness of our trespasses,” RV; so Col. 1:14, “the forgiveness of our sins,” indicating both the liberation from the guilt and doom of sin and the introduction into a life of liberty, “newness of life” (Rom. 6:4); Heb. 9:15, “for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first covenant,” RV, here “redemption of” is equivalent to “redemption from,” the genitive case being used of the object from which the “redemption” is effected, not from the consequence of the transgressions, but from the transgressions themselves; (d) the deliverance of the believer from the presence and power of sin, and of his body from bondage to corruption, at the coming (the Parousia in its inception) of the Lord Jesus, Rom. 8:23; 1 Cor. 1:30; Eph. 1:4; 4:30.¶ See also PROPITIATION.

For REDOUND, 2 Cor. 4:15 (RV, “abound”), see ABUNDANCE, B, No. 1 (c)

kalamos (κάλαμος, 2563) denotes (a) “the reed” mentioned in Matt. 11:7; 12:20; Luke 7:24, the same as the Heb., qaneh (among the various reeds in the OT), e.g., Isa. 42:3, from which Matt. 12:20 is quoted (cf. Job 40:21; Ezek. 29:6, “a reed with jointed, hollow stalk”); (b) “a reed staff, staff,” Matt. 27:29, 30, 48; Mark 15:19, 36 (cf. rhabdos, “a rod”; in 2 Kings 18:21, rhabdos kalamine); (c) “a measuring reed or rod,” Rev. 11:1; 21:15, 16; (d) “a writing reed, a pen,” 3 John 13; see PEN.¶

REFINED

puroomai (πυρόω, 4448), “to burn,” is translated “refined,” as of metals, in Rev. 1:15 and 3:18, RV (KJV, “burned,” and “tried”). See BURN, No. 4.

For REFLECTING, 2 Cor. 3:18, RV, see BEHOLD, No. 12

REFORMATION

diorthosis (διόρθωσις, 1357), properly, “a making straight” (dia, “through,” orthos, “straight”; cf. diorthoma in Acts 24:2; see CORRECTION, No. 1), denotes a “reformation” or reforming, Heb. 9:10; the word has the meaning either (a) of a right arrangement, right ordering, or, more usually, (b) of restoration, amendment, bringing right again; what is here indicated is a time when the imperfect, the inadequate, would be superseded by a better order of things, and hence the meaning (a) seems to be the right one; it is thus to be distinguished from that of Acts 24:2, mentioned above.¶ The word is used in the papyri in the other sense of the rectification of things, whether by payments or manner of life.

REFRAIN

1. pauo (παύω, 3973), “to stop,” is used in the active voice in the sense of “making to cease, restraining” in 1 Pet. 3:10, of causing the tongue to refrain from evil; elsewhere in the middle voice, see CEASE, No. 1.

2. aphistemi (ἀφίστημι, 868), “to cause to depart,” is used intransitively, in the sense of “departing from, refraining from,” Acts 5:38. See DEPART, No. 20.

REFRESH, REFRESHING

A. Verbs.

1. anapauo (ἀναπαύω, 373), “to give intermission from labor, to give rest, refresh” (ana, “back,” pauo, “to cause to cease”), is translated “to refresh” in 1 Cor. 16:18; 2 Cor. 7:13; Philem. 7, 20. See REST.

2. sunanapauomai (συναναπαύομαι, 4875), “to lie down, to rest with” (sun, “with,” and No. 1 in the middle voice), is used metaphorically of being “refreshed” in spirit with others, in Rom. 15:32, KJV, “may with (you) be refreshed” (RV, “... find rest”).¶ In the Sept., Isa. 11:6.¶

3. anapsucho (ἀναψύχω, 404), “to make cool, refresh” (ana, “back,” psucho, “to cool”), is used in 2 Tim. 1:16 (cf. B).¶ In the papyri it is used of “taking relaxation.”

Note: In Acts 27:3, the verb tunchano, “to obtain or receive,” with the object epimeleia, “care,” is translated “to refresh himself” (RV, marg., “to receive attention,” i.e., to enjoy the kind attention of his friends).

B. Noun.

anapsuxis (ἀνάψυξις, 403), “a refreshing” (akin to A, No. 3), occurs in Acts 3:19.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 8:15.¶ In the papyri it is used of “obtaining relief.”

For REFUGE see FLEE, No. 3

REFUSE (Verb)

1. arneomai (ἀρνέομαι, 720), “to deny, renounce, reject,” in late Greek came to signify “to refuse to acknowledge, to disown,” and is translated “to refuse” in Acts 7:35; Heb. 11:24. See DENY, No. 1.

2. paraiteo mai (παραιτέομαι, 3868), for the various meanings of which see AVOID, No. 3, denotes “to refuse” in Acts 25:11; 1 Tim. 4:7; 5:11; 2 Tim. 2:23, RV (KJV, “avoid”); Titus 3:10, RV (marg., “avoid”; KJV, “reject”); Heb. 12:25 (twice), perhaps in the sense of “begging off.” See EXCUSE, INTREAT, REJECT.

3. dokimazo (δοκιμάζω, 1381), “to prove, to approve,” used with a negative in Rom. 1:28, is translated “they refused,” RV (KJV, “they did not like”); RV marg., “did not approve.” See APPROVE, No. 1.

Notes: (1) For parakouo, “to refuse to hear,” RV in Matt. 18:17 (twice), see HEAR, A, No. 7. (2) In 1 Tim. 4:4, KJV, apobletos, “rejected” (RV), is translated “refused.” See REJECT.

REGARD

1. blepo (βλέπω, 991), “to behold, look, perceive, see,” has the sense of “regarding” by way of partiality, in Matt. 22:16 and Mark 12:14. See BEHOLD, No. 2.

2. entrepo (ἐντρέπω, 1788), “to turn about” (en, “in,” trepo, “to turn”), is metaphorically used of “putting to shame,” e.g., 1 Cor. 4:14; in the middle voice, “to reverence, regard,” translated “regard” in Luke 18:2, 4. See ASHAMED, REVERENCE, SHAME.

3. phroneo (φρονέω, 5426), “to think, set the mind on,” implying moral interest and reflection, is translated “to regard” in Rom. 14:6 (twice); the second part in the KJV represents an interpolation and is not part of the original. The Scripture does not speak of not “regarding” a day. See CARE, B, No. 6, MIND, SAVOR, THINK, UNDERSTAND.

4. epiblepo (ἐπιβλέπω, 1914), “to look upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), in the NT “to look on with favor,” is used in Luke 1:48, KJV, “hath regarded” (RV, “hath looked upon”); in Jas. 2:3, RV, “ye have regard to” (KJV, “ye have respect to”). See LOOK, No. 6, RESPECT.

5. oligoreo (ὀλιγωρέω, 3643) denotes “to think little of” (oligos, “little,” ora, “care”), “to regard lightly,” Heb. 12:5, RV (KJV, “despise”). See DESPISE, Note (3).¶ In the Sept. Prov. 3:11.¶

6. prosecho (προσέχω, 4337), “to take or give heed,” is translated “they had regard” in Acts 8:11, KJV (RV, “they gave heed”). See ATTEND, No. 1.

7. ameleo (ἀμελέω, 272), “not to care,” is translated “I regarded ... not” in Heb. 8:9. See NEGLECT.

Notes: (1) In Gal. 6:4, RV, eis, “into,” is translated “in regard of (himself),” KJV, “in”; so in 2 Cor. 10:16; Eph. 5:32. (2) In Rom. 6:20, the dative case of dikaiosune, “righteousness,” signifies, not “from righteousness,” KJV, but “in regard of righteousness,” RV, lit., “free to righteousness”; i.e., righteousness laid no sort of bond upon them, they had no relation to it in any way. (3) In 2 Cor. 8:4 the accusative case of charis and koinonia is, in the best texts, used absolutely, i.e., not as the objects of an expressed verb; hence the RV, “in regard to” (KJV, “that we would receive,” where the verb is the result of a supplementary gloss). (4) For “not regarding” in Phil. 2:30, KJV (RV, “hazarding”), see HAZARD, No. 2.

REGENERATION

palingenesia (παλιγγενεσία, 3824), “new birth” (palin, “again,” genesis, “birth”), is used of “spiritual regeneration,” Titus 3:5, involving the communication of a new life, the two operating powers to produce which are “the word of truth,” Jas. 1:18; 1 Pet. 1:23, and the Holy Spirit, John 3:5, 6; the loutron, “the laver, the washing,” is explained in Eph. 5:26, “having cleansed it by the washing (loutron) of water with the word.”

The new birth and “regeneration” do not represent successive stages in spiritual experience, they refer to the same event but view it in different aspects. The new birth stresses the communication of spiritual life in contrast to antecedent spiritual death; “regeneration” stresses the inception of a new state of things in contrast with the old; hence the connection of the use of the word with its application to Israel, in Matt. 19:28. Some regard the kai in Titus 3:5 as epexegetic, “even”; but, as Scripture marks two distinct yet associated operating powers, there is not sufficient ground for this interpretation. See under EVEN.

In Matt. 19:28 the word is used, in the Lord’s discourse, in the wider sense, of the “restoration of all things” (Acts 3:21, RV), when, as a result of the second advent of Christ, Jehovah “sets His King upon His holy hill of Zion” (Ps. 2:6), and Israel, now in apostasy, is restored to its destined status, in the recognition and under the benign sovereignty of its Messiah. Thereby will be accomplished the deliverance of the world from the power and deception of Satan and from the despotic and antichristian rulers of the nations. This restitution will not in the coming millennial age be universally a return to the pristine condition of Edenic innocence previous to the Fall, but it will fulfill the establishment of God’s covenant with Abraham concerning his descendants, a veritable rebirth of the nation, involving the peace and prosperity of the Gentiles. That the worldwide subjection to the authority of Christ will not mean the entire banishment of evil, is clear from Rev. 20:7, 8. Only in the new heavens and earth, “wherein dwelleth righteousness,” will sin and evil be entirely absent.

REGION

1. chora (χώρα, 5561), “a space lying between two limits, a country, land,” is translated “region” in Matt. 4:16; Luke 3:1; Acts 8:1; 13:49; 16:6; 18:23, RV. In the last three passages it has the technical sense of a subdivision of a Roman province, Lat. regio; as also No. 2 in Acts 14:6. See COUNTRY, No. 3.

2. perichoros (περίχωρος, 4066), “a country or region round about” (peri), is translated “region round about” in Matt. 3:5; 14:35, RV; Mark 1:28 (in some mss. Mark 6:55); Luke 3:3, RV; 4:14; 4:37, RV; 7:17; Acts 14:6 (see No. 1). See COUNTRY, No. 4.

3. klima (κλίμα, 2824), “an inclination, slope,” is translated “regions” in Rom. 15:23 RV; 2 Cor. 11:10; Gal. 1:21. See PART, A, No. 3.¶

Note: For “regions beyond,” 2 Cor. 10:16, KJV, see PART, A. Note (9).

REGRET

A. Verb.

metamelomai (μεταμέλλομαι, 3338), “to regret, to repent one,” is translated “to regret” in 2 Cor. 7:8, RV (twice), KJV, “repent.” See REPENT.

B. Adjective.

ametameletos (ἀμεταμέλητος, 278), “not repented of” (a, negative, and A), is translated “which bringeth no regret” in 2 Cor. 7:10, RV, said of repentance (KJV, “not to be repented of”); elsewhere, in Rom. 11:29. See REPENT.¶

For REGULAR, Acts 19:39, RV, see LAW, C, No. 2

REHEARSE

1. anangello (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), “to bring back word” (ana, “back,” angello, “to announce”), is translated “to rehearse” in Acts 14:27; 15:4, RV. See ANNOUNCE.

2. exegeomai (ἐξηγέομαι, 1834), primarily, “to lead, show the way,” is used metaphorically with the meaning “to unfold, declare, narrate,” and is translated “to rehearse” in the RV of Luke 24:35; Acts 10:8; 15:12, and 14, RV. See DECLARE, No. 8.

Note: In Acts 11:4, the KJV translates the middle voice of archo, “to begin,” “rehearsed ... from the beginning,” RV, “began, (and).”

REIGN (Verb and Noun)

1. basileuo (βασιλεύω, 936), “to reign,” is used (I) literally, (a) of God, Rev. 11:17; 19:6, in each of which the aorist tense (in the latter, translated “reigneth”) is “ingressive,” stressing the point of entrance; (b) of Christ, Luke 1:33; 1 Cor. 15:25; Rev. 11:15; as rejected by the Jews, Luke 19:14, 27; (c) of the saints, hereafter, 1 Cor. 4:8 (2nd part), where the apostle, casting a reflection upon the untimely exercise of authority on the part of the church at Corinth, anticipates the due time for it in the future (see No. 2); Rev. 5:10; 20:4, where the aorist tense is not simply of a “point” character, but “constative,” that is, regarding a whole action as having occurred, without distinguishing any steps in its progress (in this instance the aspect is future); v. 6; 22:5; (d) of earthly potentates, Matt. 2:22; 1 Tim. 6:15, where “kings” is, lit., “them that reign”; (II), metaphorically, (a) of believers, Rom. 5:17, where “shall reign in life” indicates the activity of life in fellowship with Christ in His sovereign power, reaching its fullness hereafter; 1 Cor. 4:8 (1st part), of the carnal pride that laid claim to a power not to be exercised until hereafter; (b) of divine grace, Rom. 5:21; (c) of sin, Rom. 5:21; 6:12; (d) of death, Rom. 5:14, 17.¶

2. sunbasileuo (συνβασιλεύω, 4821), “to reign together with” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is used of the future “reign” of believers together and with Christ in the kingdom of God in manifestation, 1 Cor. 4:8 (3rd part); of those who endure 2 Tim. 2:12. cf. Rev. 20:6.¶

Notes: (1) In Rom. 15:12, KJV, archo, “to rule” (RV, is translated “to reign.”) (2) In Rev. 17:18, echo, “to have,” with basileia, “a kingdom,” is translated “reigneth,” lit., “hath a kingdom,” suggestive of a distinction between the sovereignty of mystic Babylon and that of ordinary sovereigns.

(3) In Luke 3:1, hegemonia, “rule,” is rendered “reign.”¶

REINS

nephros (νεφρός, 3510), “a kidney” (Eng., “nephritis,” etc.), usually in the plural, is used metaphorically of “the will and the affections,” Rev. 2:23, “reins” (cf. Ps. 7:9; Jer. 11:20; 17:10; 20:12). The feelings and emotions were regarded as having their seat in the “kidneys.”¶

REJECT

A. Verbs.

1. apodokimazo (ἀποδοκιμάζω, 593), “to reject” as the result of examination and disapproval (apo, “away from,” dokimazo, “to approve”), is used (a) of the “rejection” of Christ by the elders and chief priests of the Jews, Matt. 21:42; Mark 8:31; 12:10; Luke 9:22; 20:17; 1 Pet. 2:4, 7 (KJV, “disallowed”); by the Jewish people, Luke 17:25; (b) of the “rejection” of Esau from inheriting “the blessing,” Heb. 12:17. See DISALLOW.¶ Cf. and contrast exoutheneo, Acts 4:11. See DESPISE.

2. atheteo (ἀθετέω, 114), properly, “to do away” with what has been laid down, to make atheton (i.e., “without place,” a, negative, tithemi, “to place”), hence, besides its meanings “to set aside, make void, nullify, disannul,” signifies “to reject”; in Mark 6:26, regarding Herod’s pledge to Salome, it almost certainly has the meaning “to break faith with” (cf. the Sept. of Jer. 12:6, and Lam. 1:2, “dealt treacherously”). Moulton and Milligan illustrate this meaning from the papyri. Field suggests “disappoint.” In Mark 7:9 “ye reject (the commandment)” means “ye set aside”; in Luke 7:30, “ye reject” may have the meaning of “nullifying or making void the counsel of God”; in Luke 10:16 (four times), “rejecteth,” RV (KJV, “despiseth”); “rejecteth” in John 12:48; “reject” in 1 Cor. 1:19 (KJV, “bring to nothing”); 1 Thess. 4:8, “to despise,” where the reference is to the charges in v. 2; in 1 Tim. 5:12 RV, “have rejected” (KJV, “have cast off”). See DESPISE, Notes (1), DISANNUL, No. 1.

3. ekptuo (ἐκπτύω, 1609), “to spit out” (ek, “out,” and ptuo, “to spit”), i.e., “to abominate, loathe,” is used in Gal. 4:14, “rejected” (marg., “spat out”), where the sentence is elliptical: “although my disease repelled you, you did not refuse to hear my message.”¶

4. paraiteomai (παραιτέομαι, 3868), besides the meanings “to beg from another,” Mark 15:6 (in the best texts); “to entreat that ... not,” Heb. 12:19; “to beg off, ask to be excused,” Luke 14:18, 19; 12:25 (see REFUSE, No. 2), is translated to reject in Titus 3:10, KJV. See EXCUSE, INTREAT, REFUSE.

B. Adjectives.

1. adokimos (ἀδόκιμος, 96), “not standing the test” (see CAST, C), is translated “rejected” in 1 Cor. 9:27, RV; Heb. 6:8, KJV and RV. See REPROBATE.

2. apobletos (ἀπόβλητος, 579), lit., “cast away” (apo, “from,” ballo, “to throw”), occurs in 1 Tim. 4:4, RV, “rejected” (KJV, “refused”). See REFUSE.¶

REJOICE

1. chairo (χαίρω, 5463), “to rejoice,” is most frequently so translated. As to this verb, the following are grounds and occasions for “rejoicing,” on the part of believers: in the Lord, Phil. 3:1; 4:4; His incarnation, Luke 1:14; His power, Luke 13:17; His presence with the Father, John 14:28; His presence with them, John 16:22; 20:20; His ultimate triumph, 8:56; hearing the gospel, Acts 13:48; their salvation, Acts 8:39; receiving the Lord, Luke 19:6; their enrollment in Heaven, Luke 10:20; their liberty in Christ, Acts 15:31; their hope, Rom. 12:12 (cf. Rom. 5:2; Rev. 19:7); their prospect of reward, Matt. 5:12; the obedience and godly conduct of fellow believers, Rom. 16:19, RV, “I rejoice” (KJV, “I am glad”); 2 Cor. 7:7, 9; 13:9; Col. 2:5; 1 Thess. 3:9; 2 John 4; 3 John 3; the proclamation of Christ, Phil. 1:18; the gospel harvest, John 4:36; suffering with Christ, Acts 5:41; 1 Pet. 4:13; suffering in the cause of the gospel, 2 Cor. 13:9 (1st part); Phil. 2:17 (1st part); Col. 1:24; in persecutions, trials and afflictions, Matt. 5:12; Luke 6:23; 2 Cor. 6:10; the manifestation of grace, Acts 11:23; meeting with fellow believers, 1 Cor. 16:17, RV, “I rejoice”; Phil. 2:28; receiving tokens of love and fellowship, Phil. 4:10; the “rejoicing” of others, Rom. 12:15; 2 Cor. 7:13; learning of the well-being of others, 2 Cor. 7:16. See FAREWELL, GLAD, GREETING etc.

2. sunchairo (συγχαίρω, 4796), “to rejoice with” (sun, and No. 1), is used of “rejoicing” together in the recovery of what was lost, Luke 15:6, 9; in suffering in the cause of the gospel, Phil. 2:17 (2nd part), 18; in the joy of another, Luke 1:58; in the honor of fellow believers, 1 Cor. 12:26; in the triumph of the truth, 1 Cor. 13:6, RV, “rejoiceth with.”¶

3. agalliao (ἀγαλλιάω, 21), “to rejoice greatly, to exult,” is used, (I) in the active voice, of “rejoicing” in God, Luke 1:47; in faith in Christ, 1 Pet. 1:8, RV (middle voice in some mss.), “ye rejoice greatly”; in the event of the marriage of the Lamb, Rev. 19:7, “be exceeding glad,” RV; (II), in the middle voice, (a) of “rejoicing” in persecutions, Matt. 5:12 (2nd part); in the light of testimony for God, John 5:35; in salvation received through the gospel, Acts 16:34, “he rejoiced greatly,” RV; in salvation ready to be revealed, 1 Pet. 1:6; at the revelation of His glory, 1 Pet. 4:13, “with exceeding joy,” lit., “ye may rejoice (see No. 1) exulting”; (b) of Christ’s “rejoicing” (greatly) “in the Holy Spirit,” Luke 10:21, RV; said of His praise, as foretold in Ps. 16:9, quoted in Acts 2:26 (which follows the Sept., “My tongue”); (c) of Abraham’s “rejoicing,” by faith, to see Christ’s day, John 8:56.¶

4. euphraino (εὐφραίνω, 2165), in the active voice, “to cheer, gladden” (eu, “well,” phren, “the mind”), signifies in the passive voice “to rejoice, make merry”; it is translated “to rejoice” in Acts 2:26, RV, “was glad,” KJV, “did ... rejoice,” of the heart of Christ as foretold in Ps. 16:9 [cf. No. 3, 11 (b)]; in Acts 7:41, of Israel’s idolatry; in Rom. 15:10 (quoted from the Sept. of Deut. 32:43, where it is a command to the Gentiles to “rejoice” with the Jews in their future deliverance by Christ from all their foes, at the establishment of the messianic kingdom) the apostle applies it to the effects of the gospel; in Gal. 4:27 (touching the barrenness of Sarah as referred to in Isa. 54:1, and there pointing to the ultimate restoration of Israel to God's favor, cf. 51:2), the word is applied to the effects of the gospel, in that the progeny of grace would greatly exceed the number of those who had acknowledged allegiance to the Law; grace and faith are fruitful, law and works are barren as a means of salvation; in Rev. 12:12, it is used in a call to the heavens to "rejoice" at the casting out of Satan and the inauguration of the Kingdom of God in manifestation and the authority of His Christ; in 18:20, of a call to heaven, saints, apostles, prophets, to "rejoice" in the destruction of Babylon. See GLAD, No. 3, MERRY, No. 1.

5. kauchaomai (καυχάομαι, 2744), "to boast, to glory," is rendered "to rejoice," (a) Rom. 5:2, in hope of the glory of God; (b) 5:3, RV (KJV "glory"), in tribulation; (c) 5:11, RV (KJV, "we joy"), in God; (d) Phil. 3:3, RV, "glory" (KJV, "rejoice") in Christ Jesus; (e) Jas. 1:9 (RV, "glory," KJV, "rejoice"), the brother of low degree in his high estate; the rich brother in being made low; (f) Jas. 4:16, of evil glorying. See GLORY (to boast).

Notes: (1) In Jas. 2:13, KJV, katakauchaomai, "to glory, boast against," is translated "rejoiceth against" (RV, "glorieth against"). See GLORY (to boast), A, No. 2. (2) The nouns kauchema, kauchesis, signifying "glorying, boasting," are always so rendered in the RV, where the KJV has "rejoicing," the former in 2 Cor. 1:14; Gal. 6:4; Phil. 1:26; 2:16; Heb. 3:6; the latter in 1 Cor. 15:31; 2 Cor. 1:12; 1 Thess. 2:19; Jas. 4:16. See GLORY, B, Nos. 1 and 2.

RELEASE

apoliuo (ἀπολύω, 630), "to loose from," is translated "to release" in Matt. 18:27, RV (KJV, "loosed"); 27:15, 17, 21, 26; Mark 15:6, 9, 11, 15; Luke 6:37 (twice), RV (KJV, "forgive" and "ye shall be forgiven"); 23:16 (v. 17, in some mss.), 18, 20, 25; 23:22, RV (KJV, "let ... go"); John 18:39 (twice); 19:10; in 19:12, in the 1st part, KJV and RV; in the 2nd part, RV, "release" (KJV, "let ... go"); so in Acts 3:13. See DEPART, DISMISS.

Note: For aphesis, "release," Luke 4:18, RV, see DELIVERANCE.

RELIEF

1. diakonia (διακονία, 1248), "ministry," is translated "relief" in Acts 11:29 [RV, marg., "for (eis) ministry"].

2. anesis (ἀνεσις, 425), "a loosening, relaxation" (akin to aniemi, "to send away, let go, loosen"), is translated "relief" in 2 Cor. 2:13 and 7:5 (KJV, "rest"). See REST.

RELIEVE

eparkeo (ἐπαρκέω, 1884) signifies "to be strong enough for," and so either "to ward off," or "to aid, to relieve" (a strengthened form of arkeo, which has the same three meanings, epi being intensive); it is used in 1 Tim. 5:10, 16 (twice).¶

RELIGION

1. threskeia (θρησκεία, 2356) signifies "religion" in its external aspect (akin to threskos, see below), "religious worship," especially the ceremonial service of "religion";

it is used of the “religion” of the Jews, Acts 26:5; of the “worshipping” of angels, Col. 2:18, which they themselves repudiate (Rev. 22:8, 9); “there was an officious parade of humility in selecting these lower beings as intercessors rather than appealing directly to the Throne of Grace” (Lightfoot); in Jas. 1:26, 27 the writer purposely uses the word to set in contrast that which is unreal and deceptive, and the “pure religion” which consists in visiting “the fatherless and widows in their affliction,” and in keeping oneself “unspotted from the world.” He is “not herein affirming ... these offices to be the sum total, nor yet the great essentials, of true religion, but declares them to be the body, the threskeia, of which godliness, or the love of God, is the informing soul” (Trench).¶

2. deisidaimonia (δεισιδαιμονία, 1175) primarily denotes “fear of the gods” (from deido, “to fear,” daimon, “a pagan deity,” Eng., “demon”), regarded whether as a religious attitude, or, in its usual meaning, with a condemnatory or contemptuous significance, “superstition.” That is how Festus regarded the Jews’ “religion,” Acts 25:19, KJV and RV marg., “superstition” (RV, “religion”). See RELIGIOUS, Note (1), and under SUPERSTITIOUS.¶

Notes: (1) Threskeia is external, theosebeia is the reverential worship of God (see GODLINESS), eusebeia is piety (see GODLINESS), eulabeia the devotedness arising from godly fear (see FEAR). (2) For “the Jews’ religion,” Gal. 1:13, 14, see JEWS, B.

RELIGIOUS

threskos (θρησκός, 2357), “religious, careful of the externals of divine service,” akin to threskeia (see above), is used in Jas. 1:26.¶

Notes: (1) For deisidaimon, Acts 17:22, RV, marg., “religious,” see SUPERSTITIOUS. (2) For “religious (proselytes),” KJV in Acts 13:43, see DEVOUT, No. 3.

REMAIN

1. meno (μένω, 3306), “to stay, abide,” is frequently rendered “to remain,” e.g., Matt. 11:23; Luke 10:7; John 1:33, KJV (RV, “abiding”); 9:41 (in 15:11, the best texts have the verb to be, see RV); 15:16, KJV (RV, “abide”); 19:31; Acts 5:4 (twice), RV, “whiles it remained, did it (not) remain (thine own)?”; 27:41; 1 Cor. 7:11; 15:6; 2 Cor. 3:11, 14; 9:9, KJV (RV, “abideth”); Heb. 12:27; 1 John 3:9. See ABIDE.

2. diameno (διαμένω, 1265), “to remain throughout” (dia, “through,” and No. 1), is translated “to remain” in Luke 1:22; Heb. 1:11, KJV (RV, “Thou continuest”). See CONTINUE, No. 4.

3. apoleipo (ἀπολείπω, 620), in the passive voice, “to be reserved, to remain,” is translated “remaineth” in Heb. 4:6, 9; 10:26. See LEAVE, No. 4.

4. perileipo (περιλείπω, 4035), “to leave over,” used in the middle voice, is translated “remain” in 1 Thess. 4:15, 17, KJV (RV, “are left”), where it stands for the living believers at the coming (the beginning of the Parousia) of Christ.¶

5. perisseuo (περισσεύω, 4052), “to abound, to be over and above, to remain over,” is rendered “(that which) remained over” in Matt. 14:20, RV; and Luke 9:17, RV (KJV, “remained”); John 6:12, 13 (KJV, “... over and above”). See ABUNDANCE, B, No. 1.

Notes: (1) In Mark 8:8, perisseuma, “an abundance,” is used in the plural, RV, “(of broken pieces) that remained over” (KJV “that was left”). (2) In 1 Cor. 7:29, KJV, to loipon, lit., “(as to) what is left,” “(as for) the rest,” is translated “it remaineth” (RV, “henceforth”); in Rev. 3:2, ta loipa, the plural, “the things that remain.”

REMEMBER, REMEMBRANCE, REMINDED

A. Verbs.

1. mimnesko (μιμνήσκω, 3403), from the older form mnaomai, in the active voice signifies “to remind”; in the middle voice, “to remind oneself of,” hence, “to remember, to be mindful of”; the later form is found only in the present tense, in Heb. 2:6, “are mindful of,” and 13:3, “remember”; the perfect tense in 1 Cor. 11:2 and in 2 Tim. 1:4 (RV, “remembering,” KJV, “being mindful of”), is used with a present meaning. RV variations from the KJV are, in Luke 1:54, RV, “that He might remember” (KJV, “in remembrance of”); 2 Pet. 3:2, “remember” (KJV, “be mindful of”); Rev. 16:19 (passive voice), “was remembered” (KJV, “came in remembrance”). The passive voice is used also in Acts 10:31, KJV and RV, “are had in remembrance.” See MINDFUL OF (TO BE).

3. anamimnesko (ἀναμιμνήσκω, 363), ana, “back,” and No. 1, signifies in the active voice “to remind, call to one’s mind,” 1 Cor. 4:17, “put (KJV, bring) ... into remembrance”; so 2 Tim. 1:6; in the passive voice, “to remember, call to (one’s own) mind,” Mark 11:21, “calling to remembrance”; 14:72, “called to mind”; 2 Cor. 7:15, “remembereth”; Heb. 10:32, “call to remembrance.”¶

4. hupomimnesko (ὑπομιμνήσκω, 5279) signifies “to cause one to remember, put one in mind of” (hupo, “under,” often implying suggestion, and No. 1), John 14:26, “shall ... bring ... to (your) remembrance”; 2 Tim. 2:14, “put ... in remembrance”; Titus 3:1, “put ... in mind”; 3 John 10, RV, “I will bring to remembrance” (KJV, “I will remember”); Jude 5, “to put ... in remembrance.” In Luke 22:61 it is used in the passive voice, “(Peter) remembered,” lit., “was put in mind.”¶

5. epanamimnesko (ἐπαναμιμνήσκω, 1878), “to remind again” (epi, “upon,” and No. 3), is used in Rom. 15:15, RV, “putting (you) again in remembrance,” KJV, “putting (you) in mind.” See MIND.¶

Note: In 1 Tim. 4:6, KJV, hupotithemi, “to lay under, to suggest,” is translated “put ... in remembrance” (RV, “put ... in mind”). See MIND.

B. Nouns.

1. anamnesis (ἀνάμνησις, 364), “a remembrance” (ana, “up,” or “again,” and A, No. 1), is used (a) in Christ’s command in the institution of the Lord’s Supper, Luke 22:19; 1 Cor. 11:24, 25, not “in memory of” but in an affectionate calling of the Person Himself to mind; (b) of the “remembrance” of sins, Heb. 10:3, RV, “a remembrance” (KJV, “a remembrance again”; but the prefix ana does not here signify “again”); what is indicated, in regard to the sacrifices under the Law, is not simply an external bringing to “remembrance,” but an awakening of mind.¶ In the Sept., Lev. 24:7; Num. 10:10; Pss. 38 and 70, Titles.¶

2. hupomnesis (ὑπόμνησις, 5280) denotes “a reminding, a reminder”; in 2 Tim. 1:5 it is used with lambano, “to receive,” lit., “having received a reminder,” RV, “having been reminded” (KJV, “when I call to remembrance”); in 2 Pet. 1:13 and 3:1, “remembrance.”¶

Note: A distinction has been drawn between Nos. 1 and 2, in that anamnesis indicates an unassisted recalling, hupomnesis, a “remembrance” prompted by another.

3. mneia (μνεία, 3417) denotes “a remembrance,” or “a mention.” See MENTION.

4. mneme (μνήμη, 3420) denotes “a memory” (akin to mnaomai, A, No. 1), “remembrance, mention,” 2 Pet. 1:15, “remembrance”; here, however, it is used with poieo, “to make” (middle voice), and some suggest that the meaning is “to make mention.”¶

REMISSION, REMIT

A. Nouns.

1. aphesis (ἄφεσις, 859), “a dismissal, release” (from aphiemi, B), is used of the forgiveness of sins and translated “remission” in Matt. 26:28; Mark 1:4; Luke 1:77; 3:3; 24:47; Acts 2:38; 5:31 (KJV, “forgiveness”); 10:43; 13:38, RV (KJV, “forgiveness”); 26:18 (ditto); Heb. 9:22; 10:18. See FORGIVE, B, and A, No. 1.

2. paresis (πάρεσις, 3929), “a passing by of debt or sin,” Rom. 3:25, KJV, “remission” (RV and KJV marg., “passing over”). See PASSING OVER.¶

Note: No. 2 is a matter of forbearance, No. 1 a matter of grace.

B. Verb.

aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), “to send away” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “to remit” in John 20:23 (twice), KJV (RV, “to forgive”). Scripture makes clear that the Lord’s words could not have been intended to bestow the exercise of absolution, which Scripture declares is the prerogative of God alone. There is no instance in the NT of this act on the part of the apostles. The words are to be understood in a “declarative” sense; the statement has regard to the effects of their ministry of the gospel, with its twofold effects of “remission” or retention. They could not, nor could anyone subsequently, forgive sins, any more than that Joseph actually restored the butler to his office and hanged the baker (Gen. 41:13), or any more than that the prophets actually accomplished things when they declared that they were about to be done (Jer. 1:10; Ezek. 43:3). See FORGIVE, No. 1.

REMNANT

1. loipos (λοιποί, 3062), an adjective (akin to leipo, “to leave”) signifying “remaining,” is used as a noun and translated “the rest” in the RV, where the KJV has “the remnant,” Matt. 22:6; Rev. 11:13; 12:17; 19:21. See OTHER, RESIDUE, REST (THE).

2. leimma (λείμμα, 3005), “that which is left” (akin to leipo, “to leave”), “a remnant,” is used in Rom. 11:5, “there is a remnant,” more lit., “there has come to be a remnant,” i.e., there is a spiritual “remnant” saved by the gospel from the midst of apostate Israel. While in one sense there has been and is a considerable number, yet, compared with the whole nation, past and present, the “remnant” is small, and as such is an evidence of God’s electing grace (see v. 4).¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 19:4.¶

REMOVE, REMOVING

A. Verbs.

1. metabaino (μεταβαίνω, 3327), “to pass over from one place to another” (meta, implying “change,” and baino, “to go”), is translated “to remove” in Matt. 11:20 (twice). See PASS, No. 7.

2. methistemi (μεθίστημι, 3179) is used transitively in the sense of causing “to remove,” in Acts 13:22, of the “removing” of King Saul, by bringing about his death; in 1 Cor. 13:2, of “removing” mountains. See PUT, No. 23, TRANSLATE, TURN.

3. metatithemi (μετατίθημι, 3346), “to remove a person or thing from one place to another” (meta, implying “change,” tithemi, “to put”), e.g., Acts 7:16, “were carried over,” signifies, in the middle voice, “to change oneself,” and is so used in Gal. 1:6 “(I marvel that) ye are ... removing,” RV (not as KJV, “removed”); the present tense suggests that the defection of the Galatians from the truth was not yet complete and would continue unless they changed their views. The middle voice indicates that they were themselves responsible for their declension, rather than the Judaizers who had influenced them. See CARRY, No. 5.

4. paraphero (παράφέρω, 3911), lit., “to bring to or before” (para, “beside,” phero, “to carry”), “to take or carry away,” is translated “remove” in the Lord’s prayer in Gethsemane, Mark 14:36, RV (KJV, “take away”); Luke 22:42. See TAKE. In the Sept., 1 Sam. 21:13.¶

5. metoikizo (μετοικίζω, 3351), “to remove to a new abode, cause to migrate” (meta, implying “change,” oikos, “a dwelling place”), is translated “removed” in Acts 7:4; “I will carry ... away (v. 43). See CARRYING AWAY, B.

6. apochorizo (ἀποχωρίζω, 673), “to separate, part asunder,” is used in the passive voice in Rev. 6:14, “(the heaven) was removed,” RV (KJV, “departed”). See DEPART, No. 14.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 21:21 and Mark 11:23, airo, “to lift, take up,” is translated “be thou removed” (RV, “be thou taken up”). (2) In Rev. 2:5, KJV, kineo, “to move” (RV), is translated “will remove.” See MOVE.

B. Noun.

metathesis (μετάθεσις, 3331), “change of position” (transliterated in Eng., “metathesis,” a transposition of the letter of a word), from meta, implying “change,” and tithemi, “to place,” is used only in Hebrews and translated “removing” in 12:27; “translation” in 11:5; “change” in 7:12. See CHANGE, A.¶

REND, RENT (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. rhēgnumi (ρήγνυμι, 4486), “to tear, rend,” is translated “to rend” in Matt. 7:6, of swine. See BREAK, A, No. 6.

2. diarrhesso, or diaresso (διαρρήσσω, 1284), a late form of diarrhēgnumi, “to break asunder, rend” (dia, “through,” and No. 1), is used of “rending” one’s garments, Matt. 26:65; Mark 14:63; Acts 14:14. See BREAK, A, No. 7.

3. perirrēgnumi, or periregnumi (περιρρήγνυμι, 4048), “to tear off all round” (peri, “around”), is said of garments in Acts 16:22.¶

4. schizo (σχίζω, 4977), “to split, rend open,” translated “to rend” in Matt. 27:51 (twice); Mark 1:10, RV, “rent asunder” (KJV, “open”); 15:38; Luke 5:36, RV, “rendeth (from)”]; the KJV follows the mss. which omit it in the 1st part of this verse; 23:45; John 19:24; 21:11, RV, “rent” (KJV, “broken”), of a net. See BREAK, A, No. 12.

5. diaspao (διασπάω, 1288), “to tear asunder,” is translated “rent asunder” in Mark 5:4, RV (KJV, “plucked asunder”); for Acts 23:10, see TEAR.¶

Note: In Mark 9:26, KJV, sparasso, “to tear” (RV), is rendered “rent.” See TEAR

B. Noun.

schisma (σχίσμα, 4978), “a rent, division” (akin to A, No. 4), signifies a “rent” in wineskins in Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21. See DIVISION, No. 3.

RENDER

1. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), to give up or back,” is translated “to render,” (a) of righteous acts, (1) human, Matt. 21:41; 22:21; Mark 12:17; Luke 16:2, RV (KJV, “give”); Luke 20:25; Rom. 13:7, 1 Cor. 7:3; (2) divine, Matt. 16:27, RV, “shall render” (KJV, “shall reward”), an important RV change; Rom. 2:6; 2 Tim. 4:14, RV (KJV, “reward”);

Rev. 18:6 (ditto); 22:12, RV (KJV, “give”); (b) of unrighteous acts. Rom. 12:17, RV (KJV, “recompense”); 1 Thess. 5:15; 1 Pet. 3:9. See DELIVER, A, No. 3, RECOMPENSE, B, No. 2.

2. antapodidomi (ἀνταποδίδωμι, 467), to give in return for,” is translated “render” in 1 Thess. 3:9. See RECOMPENSE, REPAY.

3. parecho (παρέχω, 3930), “to furnish, provide, supply,” is translated “render” in Col. 4:1, RV (KJV, “give”), of what is due from masters to servants. See GIVE, No. 8.

4. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is translated “rendering” in 2 Thess. 1:8, RV (KJV, “taking”), of the divine execution of vengeance at the revelation of Christ from heaven hereafter. See GIVE, No. 1.

RENEW, RENEWING (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. anakainoo (ἀνακαινόω, 341), “to make new” (ana, “back” or “again,” kainos, “new,” not recent but different), “to renew,” is used in the passive voice in 2 Cor. 4:16, of the daily renewal of “the inward man” (in contrast to the physical frame), i.e., of the “renewal” of spiritual power; in Col. 3:10, of “the new man” (in contrast to the old unregenerate nature), which “is being renewed unto knowledge,” RV (cf. No. 3 in Eph. 4:23), i.e., the true knowledge in Christ, as opposed to heretical teachings.¶

Note: This word has not been found elsewhere in Greek writings as yet, though No. 2 is, which would prevent the supposition that the apostle coined a new word.

2. anakainizo (ἀνακαινίζω, 340) is a variant form of No. 1, used in Heb. 6:6, of the impossibility of “renewing” to repentance those Jews who professedly adhered to the Christian faith, if, after their experiences of it (not actual possession of its regenerating effects), they apostatized into their former Judaism.¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 15:8; Ps. 39:2; 103:5; 104:30; Lam. 5:21.¶

3. ananeo (ἀνανεόω, 365), “to renew, make young” (ana, as in No. 1, and neos, “recent,” not different), is used in Eph. 4:23, “be renewed (in the spirit of your mind).” The “renewal” here mentioned is not that of the mind itself in its natural powers of memory, judgment and perception, but “the spirit of the mind,” which, under the controlling power of the indwelling Holy Spirit, directs its bent and energies Godward in the enjoyment of “fellowship with the Father and with His Son, Jesus Christ,” and of the fulfillment of the will of God.¶ The word is frequent in inscriptions and in the papyri.

B. Noun.

anakainosis (ἀνακαίνωσις, 342), akin to A, No. 1, “a renewal,” is used in Rom. 12:2, “the renewing (of your mind),” i.e., the adjustment of the moral and spiritual vision and thinking to the mind of God, which is designed to have a transforming effect upon the life; in Titus 3:5, where “the renewing of the Holy Spirit” is not a fresh bestowment of the Spirit, but a revival of His power, developing the Christian life; this passage stresses the continual operation of the indwelling Spirit of God; the Romans passage stresses the willing response on the part of the believer.¶

RENOUNCE

1. apeipon (ἀπειπόμην, 550), lit., “to tell from” (apo, “from,” eipon, an aorist form used to supply parts of lego, “to say”), signifies “to renounce,” 2 Cor. 4:2 (middle voice), of disowning “the hidden things of shame.”¶ In the Sept. of 1 Kings 11:2 it signifies “to forbid,” a meaning found in the papyri. The meaning “to renounce” may therefore carry with it the thought of forbidding the approach of the things disowned.

2. apotasso (ἀποτάσσομαι, 657), “to set apart, to appoint,” a meaning found in the papyri (apo, from, tasso, “to arrange”), is used in the middle voice in the sense either of “taking leave of,” e.g., Acts 18:18, or “forsaking,” Luke 14:33, RV, “renounceth” (KJV “forsaketh”). See FORSAKE, LEAVE.

REPAY

1. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give back,” is translated “I will repay” in Luke 10:35. See DELIVER, A, No. 3, RECOMPENSE, B, No. 2, RENDER, No. 1.

2. antapodidomi (ἀνταποδίδωμι, 467), “to give in return for,” is translated “I will repay” in Rom. 12:19, KJV (RV, “I will recompense”). See RECOMPENSE, B, No. 1, RENDER, No. 2.

3. apotino or apotio (ἀποτίνω, 661), signifying “to pay off” (apo, “off,” tino, “to pay a fine”), is used in Philem. 19, of Paul’s promise to “repay” whatever Onesimus owed Philemon, or to whatever extent the runaway slave had wronged his master.¶ The verb is very common in the papyri, e.g., in a contract of apprenticeship the father has to pay a forfeit for each day of the son’s absence from work. Moulton and Milligan, who draw this and other illustrations in the way of “repayment,” point out that “this verb is stronger than apodidomi (No. 1), and carries with it the idea of “repayment” by way of a fine or punishment, a fact which lends emphasis to its use in Philem. 19.”

REPENT, REPENTANCE

A. Verbs.

1. metanoëo (μετανοέω, 3340), lit., “to perceive afterwards” (meta, “after,” implying “change,” noëo, “to perceive”; nous, “the mind, the seat of moral reflection”), in contrast to pronoëo, “to perceive beforehand,” hence signifies “to change one’s mind or purpose,” always, in the NT, involving a change for the better, an amendment, and always, except in Luke 17:3, 4, of “repentance” from sin. The word is found in the Synoptic Gospels (in Luke, nine times), in Acts five times, in the Apocalypse twelve times, eight in the messages to the churches, 2:5 (twice), 16, 21 (twice), RV, “she willeth not to repent” (2nd part); 3:3, 19 (the only churches in those chapters which contain no exhortation in this respect are those at Smyrna and Philadelphia); elsewhere only in 2 Cor. 12:21. See also the general Note below.

2. metamelomai (μεταμέλλομαι, 3338), meta, as in No. 1, and melo, “to care for,” is used in the passive voice with middle voice sense, signifying “to regret, to repent oneself,” Matt. 21:29, RV, “repented himself”; v. 32, RV, “ye did (not) repent yourselves” (KJV, “ye repented not”); 27:3, “repented himself”; 2 Cor. 7:8 (twice), RV, “regret” in each case; Heb. 7:21, where alone in the NT it is said (negatively) of God.¶

B. Adjective.

ametameletos (ἀμεταμέλητος, 278), “not repented of, unregretted” (a, negative, and a verbal adjective of A, No. 2), signifies “without change of purpose”; it is said (a) of God in regard to his “gifts and calling,” Rom. 11:29; (b) of man, 2 Cor. 7:10, RV, “[repentance (metanoia, see C)] ... which bringeth no regret” (KJV, “not to be repented of”); the difference between metanoia and metamelomai, illustrated here, is briefly expressed in the contrast between “repentance” and “regret.”¶

C. Noun.

metanoia (μετάνοια, 3341), “afterthought, change of mind, repentance,” corresponds in meaning to A, No. 1, and is used of “repentance” from sin or evil, except in Heb. 12:17, where the word “repentance” seems to mean, not simply a change of Isaac’s mind, but such a change as would reverse the effects of his own previous state of mind. Esau’s birthright-bargain could not be recalled; it involved an irretrievable loss.

As regards “repentance” from sin, (a) the requirement by God on man’s part is set forth, e.g., in Matt. 3:8; Luke 3:8; Acts 20:21; 26:20; (b) the mercy of God in giving “repentance” or leading men to it is set forth, e.g., in Acts 5:31; 11:18; Rom. 2:4; 2 Tim. 2:25. The most authentic mss. omit the word in Matt. 9:13 and Mark 2:17, as in the RV.

Note: In the OT, “repentance” with reference to sin is not so prominent as that change of mind or purpose, out of pity for those who have been affected by one’s action, or in whom the results of the action have not fulfilled expectations, a “repentance” attributed both to God and to man, e.g., Gen. 6:6; Exod. 32:14 (that this does not imply anything contrary to God’s immutability, but that the aspect of His mind is changed toward an object that has itself changed, see under RECONCILE).

In the NT the subject chiefly has reference to “repentance” from sin, and this change of mind involves both a turning from sin and a turning to God. The parable of the Prodigal Son is an outstanding illustration of this. Christ began His ministry with a call to “repentance,” Matt. 4:17, but the call is addressed, not as in the OT to the nation, but to the individual. In the Gospel of John, as distinct from the Synoptic Gospels, referred to above, “repentance” is not mentioned, even in connection with John the Baptist’s preaching; in John’s gospel and 1st epistle the effects are stressed, e.g., in the new birth, and, generally, in the active turning from sin to God by the exercise of faith (John 3:3; 9:38; 1 John 1:9), as in the NT in general.

REPETITIONS (use vain)

battalogeo or battologeo (βαττολογέω, 945), “to repeat idly,” is used in Matt. 6:7, “use (not) vain repetitions”; the meaning “to stammer” is scarcely to be associated with this word. The word is probably from an Aramaic phrase and onomatopoeic in character. The rendering of the Sinaitic Syriac is “Do not be saying battalatha, idle things,” i.e., meaningless and mechanically repeated phrases, the reference being to pagan (not Jewish) modes of prayer. Battalos, “the Gabbler,” was a nickname for Demosthenes, the great orator, assigned to him by his rivals.

REPLY

antapokrinomai (ἀνταποκρίνομαι, 470) is translated “repliest against” in Rom. 9:20 (anti, “against,” apokrinormai, “to answer”); in Luke 14:6, “answer again.” See ANSWER, B, No. 2.¶

REPORT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. akoe (ἀκοή, 189), “a hearing,” is translated “report” in John 12:38 and Rom. 10:16, and in the RV of Matt. 4:24; 14:1; Mark 1:28. See HEARING, B, No. 1.

2. euphemia (εὐφημία, 2162), “a good report, good reputation” (eu, “well,” pheme “a saying or report”), is used in 2 Cor. 6:8. Contrast No. 3.¶

3. dusphemia (δυσφημία, 1426), “evilspeaking, defamation” (dus-, an inseparable prefix, the opposite to eu, “well,” see No. 2), is used in 2 Cor. 6:8.¶

4. logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word,” is translated “report,” i.e., “a story, narrative”; in Luke 5:15 (KJV, “fame”); 7:17 (KJV, “rumor”); Acts 11:22 (KJV, “tidings”). See WORD.

Note: For marturia, rendered “report” in 1 Tim. 3:7, KJV, see TESTIMONY, WITNESS.

B. Adjective.

euphemos (καταδικάζω, 2613), akin to A, No. 2, primarily, “uttering words or sounds of good omen,” then, “avoiding ill-omened words,” and hence “fair-sounding,” “of good report,” is so rendered in Phil. 4:8.¶

C. Verbs.

1. martureo (μαρτυρέω, 3140), “to be a witness, bear witness, testify,” signifies, in the passive voice, “to be well testified of, to have a good report,” Acts 6:3, “of good (KV, honest) report,” lit., “being well testified of”; 10:22; 16:2; 22:12; 1 Tim. 5:10; in Heb. 11:2, 39, KJV, “obtained a good report” (RV, “had witness borne to them”); in 3 John 12, KJV “hath good report” (RV, “hath the witness”), lit., “witness hath been borne.” See TESTIFY, WITNESS.

2. apangello (ἀπαγγέλλω, 518), “to report” (apo, “from,” angello, “to give a message”), “announce, declare” (by a messenger, speaker, or writer), is translated “reported” in Acts 4:23; 16:36, RV (KJV, “told”); v. 38 (some mss. have No. 3; KJV, “told”); “report” in 1 Cor. 14:25, KJV (RV, “declaring”); 1 Thess. 1:9, RV, “report” (KJV, “shew”); so Acts 28:21. See DECLARE, No. 2.

3. anangello (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), “to bring back word,” in later Greek came to have the same meaning as No. 2, “to announce, declare”; it is translated “are reported” in 1 Pet. 1:12, KJV (RV, “have been announced”). See DECLARE, No. 1.

4. akouo (ἀκούω, 191), “to hear,” is used in the passive voice, impersonally, in 1 Cor. 5:1, lit., “it is heard” or “there is heard,” translated “it is reported.” See HEAR.

5. blasphemeo (βλασφημέω, 987), “to speak slanderously, impiously, profanely” (blapto, “to injure,” and pheme, “a saying”), is translated “we be slanderously reported” in Rom. 3:8 (passive voice). See BLASPHEME, B.

Note: In Matt. 28:15, KJV, diaphemizo, “to spread abroad” (dia, “throughout,” pheme, “a saying, report”), is translated “is commonly reported” (RV, “was spread abroad”). See BLAZE ABROAD.

REPROACH (Noun and Verb), REPROACHFULLY

A. Nouns.

1. oneidismos (ὀνειδισμός, 3680), “a reproach, defamation,” is used in Rom. 15:3; 1 Tim. 3:7; Heb. 10:33; 11:26; 13:13.¶

2. oneidos (ὄνειδος, 3681), akin to No. 1, is used in Luke 1:25 in the concrete sense of “a matter of reproach, a disgrace.”¶ To have no children was, in the Jewish mind, more than a misfortune, it might carry the implication that this was a divine punishment for some secret sin. Cf. Gen. 30:1; 1 Sam. 1:6-10.

3. atimia (ἀτιμία, 819), “dishonor,” is translated “reproach” in 2 Cor. 11:21, KJV (RV, “disparagement”). See DISHONOR, SHAME, VILE.

Note: In 2 Cor. 12:10, KJV, hubris, “insolence injury,” is translated “reproaches” (RV, “injuries”). See HARM.

B. Verbs.

1. oneidizo (ὀνειδίζω, 3679), akin to A, Nos. 1 and 2, signifies (a), in the active voice, “to reproach, upbraid,” Matt. 5:11, RV, “shall reproach” (KJV, “shall revile”); 11:20, “to upbraid”; 27:44, RV, “cast ... reproach” [KJV, “cast ... in (His) teeth”]; Mark 15:32 RV, “reproached” (KJV, “reviled”); 16:14 “upbraided”; Luke 6:22 “shall reproach”, Rom. 15:3; Jas. 1:5, “upbraideth”; (b) in the passive voice, “to suffer reproach, be reproached,” 1 Tim. 4:10 (in some mss. in the 2nd part); 1 Pet. 4:14.¶

2. hubrizo (ὕβριζω, 5195), akin to hubris (see A, Note), used transitively, denotes “to outrage, insult, treat insolently”; it is translated “Thou reproachest” in Luke 11:45. The word is much stronger than “to reproach”; the significance is “Thou insultest (even us),” i.e., who are superior to ordinary Pharisees. The lawyer’s imputation was unjust; Christ’s rebuke was not hubris, “insult.” What He actually said was by way of “reproach”

(oneidizo). See DESPITEFULLY.

Notes: (1) For anepileptos, “without reproach,” RV, in 1 Tim. 3:2; 5:7; 6:14, see BLAMELESS, B No. 5. (2) In 1 Tim. 5:14, KJV, loidoria, “reviling” (RV), used in the genitive case with charin, “in respect of,” “for,” is translated “reproachfully” (RV, “for reviling”). Cf. loidoreo, “to revile.” See RAILING.

REPROBATE

adokimos (ἀδόκιμος, 96), signifying “not standing the test, rejected” (a, negative, dokimos, “approved”), was primarily applied to metals (cf. Isa. 1:22); it is used always in the NT in a passive sense, (a) of things, Heb. 6:8, “rejected,” of land that bears thorns and thistles; (b) of persons, Rom. 1:28, of a “reprobate mind,” a mind of which God cannot approve, and which must be rejected by Him, the effect of refusing “to have God in their knowledge”; in 1 Cor. 9:27 (for which see CAST, REJECTED); 2 Cor. 13:5, 6, 7, where the RV rightly translates the adjective “reprobate” (KJV, “reprobates”), here the reference is to the great test as to whether Christ is in a person; in 2 Tim. 3:8 of those “reprobate concerning the faith,” i.e., men whose moral sense is perverted and whose minds are beclouded with their own speculations; in Titus 1:16, of the defiled, who are “unto every good work reprobate,” i.e., if they are put to the test in regard to any good work (in contrast to their profession), they can only be rejected.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:4; Isa. 1:22.¶

REPROOF, REPROVE

A. Noun.

elegmos (ἐλέγχος, 1650), “a reproof” (akin to B), is found in the best texts in 2 Tim. 3:16 (some mss. have elenchos, which denotes “a proof, proving, test,” as in Heb. 11:1, “proving,” RV marg., “test”).¶ Cf. elenxis, “rebuke,” 2 Pet. 2:16 (lit., “had rebuke”).¶

B. Verb.

elencho (ἐλέγγω, 1651), “to convict, rebuke, reprove,” is translated “to reprove” in Luke 3:19; John 3:20, RV marg., “convicted”; the real meaning here is “exposed” (KJV marg., “discovered”); Eph. 5:11, 13, where “to expose” is again the significance; in John 16:8, KJV, “will reprove” (RV, “will convict”); in 1 Cor. 14:24, RV, “reproved” (KJV, “convinced”); in the following the RV has “to reprove,” for KJV, “to rebuke,” 1 Tim. 5:20; Titus 2:15; Heb. 12:5; Rev. 3:19; for synonymous words see CONVICT and REBUKE.

REPUTATION, REPUTE

dokeo (δοκέω, 1380) signifies (a) “to be of opinion” (akin to doxa, “an opinion”), “to suppose,” e.g., Luke 12:51; 13:2 (see SUPPOSE); (b) “to seem, to be reputed”; in Gal. 2:2, RV, “who were of repute” (KJV, “which were of reputation”); in 2:6 (twice), and 9, RV, “were reputed” and “were of repute” (KJV, “seemed”); in each case the present participle of the verb with the article is used, lit., “(well) thought of” by them, persons held in consideration; in v. 6, RV, “(those) who were reputed to be somewhat” (KJV “who seemed to be somewhat”); so v. 9. where there is no irony [cf. the rendering “are accounted” in Mark 10:42 (i.e., not rulers nominally)], Paul recognized that James, Cephas, and John were, as they were “reputed” by the church at Jerusalem, its responsible guides; (c) impersonally, “to think, to seem good.” See SEEM and THINK.

The first meaning, “to suppose,” implies a subjective opinion based on thought; the second meaning, exemplified in the Galatians passages, expresses, from the standpoint of the observer, his own judgment about a matter (Trench, Syn., Sec.lxxx).

Notes: (1) In Acts 5:34, KJV, timios, “honored, had in honor” (RV), is translated “had in reputation.” (2) In Phil. 2:29, KJV, entimos, “honorable,” with echo, “to have,” i.e., “to hold in honor,” is translated “hold ... in reputation” (RV, “hold ... in honor”). (3) For kenoo, in Phil. 2:7, KJV, “made (Himself) of no reputation,” see EMPTY.

REQUEST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. aitema (αἷτημα, 155) denotes “that which has been asked for” (akin to aiteo, “to ask”); in Luke 23:24, RV, “what they asked for” (KJV, “as they required”), lit., “their request (should be done, ginomai)”; in Phil. 4:6, “requests”; in 1 John 5:15, “petitions.” See PETITION, REQUIRE.¶

2. deesis (δέησις, 1162), “an asking, entreaty, supplication,” is translated “request” in Phil. 1:4, KJV (RV, supplication). See PRAYER, SUPPLICATION.

B. Verbs.

1. deomai (δέομαι, 1189), akin to A, No. 2, “to beseech, pray, request,” is translated “to make request” in Rom. 1:10. See BESEECH, No. 3.

2. aiteo (αἰτέω, 154), “to ask,” is translated “to make request” in Col. 1:9, RV (KJV, “to desire”). See ASK, No. 1.¶

3. erotao (ἐρωτάω, 2065), “to ask,” is translated “to make request” in 1 John 5:16. See ASK, No. 2 and remarks on the difference between Nos. 1 and 2.

REQUIRE

1. zeteo (ζητέω, 2212), “to seek, seek after,” also signifies “to require, demand,” “shall be required,” Luke 12:48; in 1 Cor. 4:2, “it is required (in stewards).” See DESIRE, Note (2), ENDEAVOR, GO, Note (2) (a), SEEK.

2. ekzeteo (ἐκζητέω, 1567), “to seek out” (ek, “out,” and No. 1), also denotes “to demand, require,” Luke 11:50, 51, of executing vengeance for the slaughter of the prophets (cf. 2 Sam. 4:11; Ezek. 3:18). See SEEK.

3. apaiteo (ἀπαιτέω, 523), “to ask back, demand back” (apo, “from,” or “back,” aiteo, “to ask”), is translated “shall be required” in Luke 12:20, lit. “do they require,” in the impersonal sense; elsewhere, Luke 6:30, “to ask again.”¶ It is used in the papyri frequently in the sense of “demanding, making demands.”

4. prasso (πράσσω, 4238), “to do, practice, perform,” is used financially in the sense of “exact” payment, in Luke 19:23. See EXTORT, A.

Notes: (1) In Luke 23:23, KJV, aiteo, “to ask” (middle voice) is translated “requiring” (RV, “asking”); so in 1 Cor. 1:22 (active voice), KJV, “require” (RV, “ask”). (2) In Luke 23:24, KJV, the noun aitema (see REQUEST), “that which is asked for,” is translated “as they required” (RV, “what they asked for”). (3) In 1 Cor. 7:36 the rendering “need so requireth” (RV) represents the phrase houtos (“thus”) opheilei (“it ought”) genesthai (“to become,” i.e., “to be done”).

REQUIRE

amoibe (ἀμοιβή, 287), “a requital, recompence” (akin to ameibomai, “to repay,” not found in the NT), is used with the verb apodidomi, “to render,” in 1 Tim. 5:4, and translated “to requite.”¶ This use is illustrated in the papyri by way of making a return, conferring a benefaction in return for something (Moulton and Milligan).

RESCUE

exaireo (ἐξαίρῶ, 1807), “to take out” (ek, “from,” haireo, “to take”), is used of “delivering” from persons and circumstances, and translated “rescued” in Acts 23:27. See DELIVER, No. 8, PLUCK.

For RESEMBLE, Luke 13:18, KJV, see LIKEN, B, No. 1.

RESERVE

tereo (τηρέω, 5083), “to guard, keep, preserve, give heed to,” is translated “to reserve,” (a) with a happy issue, 1 Pet. 1:4; (b) with a retributive issue, 2 Pet. 2:4; v. 9, KJV (RV, “keep”); 2:17; 3:7; Jude 6, KJV (RV, “hath kept”); v. 13; and referenced (c) the possibility either of deliverance or execution, Acts 25:21, KJV (RV, kept). See KEEP.

Note: In Rom. 11:4, KJV, kataleipo, “to leave behind, leave remaining,” is translated “I have reserved” (RV, “I have left”). See LEAVE.

RESIDUE

kataloipos (κατάλοιπος, 2645), an adjective denoting “left remaining” (kata, “after, behind,” leipo, “to leave”), akin to the verb in the Note above, is translated “residue” in Acts 15:17, from the Sept. of Amos 9:12.¶

Note: In Mark 16:13, KJV, the plural of loipos, “left,” is translated “residue” (RV, “rest”).

RESIST

1. anthistemi (ἀνθίστημι, 436), “to set against” (anti, “against,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), used in the middle (or passive) voice and in the intransitive 2nd aorist and perfect active, signifying “to withstand, oppose, resist,” is translated “to resist” in Matt. 5:39; Acts 6:10, KJV (RV, withstand); Rom. 9:19, KJV (RV, “withstandeth”); 13:2 (2nd and 3rd parts; for 1st part, see No. 3), KJV (RV, “withstandeth” and “withstand”); Gal. 2:11, RV (KJV, “withstood”); 2 Tim. 3:8 (2nd part), KJV (RV, “withstand”); Jas. 4:7; 1 Pet. 5:9, KJV (RV, “withstand”); “to withstand” in Acts 13:8; Eph. 6:13; 2 Tim. 3:8 (1st part); 4:15.¶

2. antikathistemi (ἀντικαθίστημι, 478), “to stand firm against” (anti, “against,” kathistemi, “to set down,” kata), is translated “ye have (not) resisted” in Heb. 12:4.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 31:21; Josh. 5:7; Mic. 2:8.¶

3. antitasso (ἀντιτάσσομαι, 498), anti, “against,” tasso, “to arrange,” originally a military term, “to range in battle against,” and frequently so found in the papyri, is used in the middle voice signifying “to set oneself against, resist,” (a) of men, Acts 18:6, “opposed themselves”; elsewhere “to resist,” of resisting human potentates, Rom. 13:2; (b) of God, Jas. 4:6; 5:6, negatively, of leaving persistent evildoers to pursue their self-determined course, with eventual retribution; 1 Pet. 5:5. See OPPOSE.¶

4. antipipto (ἀντιπίπτω, 496), lit., and primarily, “to fall against or upon” (anti, “against,” pipto, “to fall”), then, “to strive against, resist,” is used in Acts 7:51 of “resisting” the Holy Spirit.¶

RESOLVE

ginosko (γινώσκω, 1097), “to come to know, perceive, realize,” is used in the 2nd aorist tense in Luke 16:4. “I am resolved,” expressing the definiteness of the steward’s realization, and his consequent determination of his course of action. See KNOW.

RESORT

1. erchomai (έρχομαι, 2064), “to come,” is translated “resorted” in Mark 2:13; in John 10:41 (RV, “came”). See COME, No. 1.

2. epiporeuomai (ἐπιπορεύομαι, 1975), “to travel or journey to a place” (epi, “to,” poreuomai, “to go”), is translated “resorted” in Luke 8:4, RV (KJV, “were come”).¶

3. sunago (συνάγω, 4863), “to gather or bring together” (sun, “with,” ago, “to bring”), in the passive voice, “to be gathered or come together,” is translated “resorted” in John 18:2 (the aorist tense expressing repeated action viewed cumulatively). See ASSEMBLE, GATHER, LEAD, Note (1).

Notes: (1) In the KJV of John 18:20 and Acts 16:13, sunerchomai, “to come together” (RV), is translated “to resort.” (2) In Mark 10:1, KJV, sumporeuomai, “to come together” (RV), is translated “resort.”

RESPECT (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part,” has occasionally the meaning of “a class” or “category,” and, used in the dative case with en, “in,” signifies “in respect of,” 2 Cor. 3:10, “in (this) respect”; 9:3, RV, KJV, “in (this) behalf”; Col. 2:16, “in respect of (a feast day).”

B. Verbs.

1. apoblepo (ἀποβλέπω, 578), “to look away from all else at one object” (apo, “from”), hence, “to look steadfastly,” is translated “he had respect” in Heb. 11:26, KJV (RV, “looked”). See LOOK.

2. epiblepo (ἐπιβλέπω, 1914), “to look upon” (epi), is translated “have respect” in Jas. 2:3 (RV “regard”); see LOOK, No. 6.

Notes: (1) The following prepositions are translated “in respect of”: peri, “concerning,” in John 16:8, RV; epi, “upon, over,” in Heb. 11:4, RV; marg., “over (his gifts)”; kata, “in regard to,” in Phil. 4:11. (2) For “respect of persons” and “respector of persons” see PERSON.

REST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. anapausis (ἀνάπαυσις, 372), “cessation, refreshment, rest” (ana, “up,” pauo, “to make to cease”), the constant word in the Sept. for the Sabbath “rest,” is used in Matt. 11:29; here the contrast seems to be to the burdens imposed by the Pharisees. Christ’s “rest” is not a “rest” from work, but in work, “not the rest of inactivity but of the harmonious working of all the faculties and affections—of will, heart, imagination, conscience—because each has found in God the ideal sphere for its satisfaction and development” (J. Patrick, in Hastings Bib. Dic.); it occurs also in Matt. 12:43; Luke 11:24; Rev. 4:8, RV, “(they have no) rest” [KJV, “(they) rest (not)”), where the noun is the object of the verb echo, “to have”; so in 14:11.¶

2. katapausis (κατάπαυσις, 2663), in classical Greek, denotes “a causing to cease” or “putting to rest”; in the NT, “rest, repose”; it is used (a) of God’s “rest,” Acts 7:49; Heb. 3:11, 18; 4:1, 3 (twice), RV (1st part), “that rest” (the KJV, “rest,” is ambiguous), 5, 11; (b) in a general statement, applicable to God and man, 4:10.¶

3. anesis (ἄνεσις, 425), for the significance of which see EASE, B, is translated “rest” in 2 Cor. 2:13, KJV (RV, “relief”); 7:5 (ditto); in 2 Thess. 1:7, the subject is not the “rest” to be granted to the saints, but the divine retribution on their persecutors; hence the phrase “and to you that are afflicted rest with us,” is an incidental extension of the idea of recompense, and is to be read parenthetically. The time is not that at which the saints will be relieved of persecution, as in 1 Thess. 4:15-17, when the Parousia of Christ begins, but that at which the persecutors will be punished, namely, at the epiphany (or out-shining) of His Parousia (2 Thess. 2:8). For similar parentheses characteristic of epistolary writings see v. 10; 1 Thess. 1:6, 2:15, 16.

4. sabbatismos (σαββατισμός, 4520), “a Sabbath-keeping,” is used in Heb. 4:9, RV, “a sabbath rest,” KJV marg., “a keeping of a sabbath” (akin to sabbatizo, “to keep the Sabbath,” used, e.g., in Exod. 16:30, not in the NT); here the sabbath-keeping is the perpetual sabbath “rest” to be enjoyed uninterruptedly by believers in their fellowship with the Father and the Son, in contrast to the weekly Sabbath under the Law. Because this sabbath “rest” is the “rest” of God Himself, 4:10, its full fruition is yet future, though believers now enter into it. In whatever way they enter into divine “rest,” that which they enjoy is involved in an indissoluble relation with God.¶

5. koimesis (κοίμησις, 2838), “a resting, reclining” (akin to keimai, “to lie”), is used in John 11:13, of natural sleep, translated “taking rest,” RV.¶

Note: In Acts 9:31, KJV, eirene, “peace” (RV), is translated “rest.”

B. Verbs.

1. anapauro (ἀναπαύω, 373), akin to A, No. 1, in the active voice, signifies “to give intermission from labor, to give rest, to refresh,” Matt. 11:28; 1 Cor. 16:18, “have refreshed”; Philem. 20, “refresh”; passive voice, “to be rested, refreshed,” 2 Cor. 7:13, “was refreshed”; Philem. 7, “are refreshed”; in the middle voice, “to take or enjoy rest,” Matt. 26:45; Mark 6:31; 14:41; Luke 12:19, “take thine ease”; 1 Pet. 4:14; Rev. 6:11; 14:13. See REFRESH.¶ In the papyri it is found as an agricultural term, e.g., of giving land “rest” by sowing light crops upon it. In inscriptions it is found on gravestones of Christians, followed by the date of death (Moulton and Milligan).

2. katapauro (καταπαύω, 2664), akin to A, No. 2, used transitively, signifies “to cause to cease, restrain,” Acts 14:18; “to cause to rest,” Heb. 4:8; intransitively, “to rest,” Heb. 4:4, 10. See CEASE, A, No. 6, RESTRAIN.¶

3. episkenoō (ἐπισκηνόω, 1981), “to spread a tabernacle over” (epi, “upon,” skene, “a tent”), is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 12:9, “may rest upon (me),” RV, marg., “cover,” “spread a tabernacle over.”¶

4. kataskenoō (κατασκηνόω, 2681), “to pitch one’s tent, lodge,” is translated “shall rest,” in Acts 2:26, KJV (RV, “shall dwell”). See LODGE.

5. hesuchazo (ἡσυχάζω, 2270), “to be still, to rest from labor,” is translated “they rested” in Luke 23:56. See PEACE (hold one’s), No. 3.

6. epanapauro (ἐπαναπαύομαι, 1879), “to cause to rest,” is used in the middle voice, metaphorically, signifying “to rest upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), in Luke 10:6 and Rom. 2:17.¶

Note: For “find rest” Rom. 15:32, RV, see REFRESH, No. 2.

REST (the)

1. loiapos (λοιποί, 3062), “remaining” (for which see REMNANT), is frequently used to mean “the rest,” and is generally so translated in the RV (KJV, “others” in Luke 8:10; Acts 28:9; Eph. 2:3; 1 Thess. 4:13; 5:6; 1 Tim. 5:20; KJV, “other” in Luke 18:11; Acts 17:9; Rom. 1:13; 2 Cor. 12:13; 13:2; Gal. 2:13; Phil. 1:13; 4:3); the neut. plur., lit., “remaining things,” is used in Luke 12:26; 1 Cor. 11:34.

2. epiloipos (ἐπίλοιπος, 1954), signifying “still left, left over” (epi, “over,” and No. 1), is used in the neuter with the article in 1 Pet. 4:2, “the rest (of your time).”¶

For RESTITUTION see RESTORATION

RESTLESS

akatastatos (ἀκατάστατος, 182), “unsettled, unstable, disorderly” (a, negative, kathistemi, “to set in order”), is translated “unstable” in Jas. 1:8; “restless” in 3:8, RV [in the latter, the KJV “unruly” represents the word akataschetos, signifying “that cannot be restrained” (a, negative, katecho, “to hold down, restrain”). In the Sept., Job 31:11.¶]. See UNRULY, UNSTABLE.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 54:11.¶]

RESTORATION

apokatastasis (ἀποκατάστασις, 605), from apo, “back, again,” kathistemi, “to set in order,” is used in Acts 3:21, RV, “restoration” (KJV, “restitution”). See under REGENERATION, concerning Israel in its regenerated state hereafter. In the papyri it is used of a temple cell of a goddess, a “repair” of a public way, the “restoration” of estates to rightful owners, a “balancing” of accounts. Apart from papyri illustrations the word is found in an Egyptian reference to a consummating agreement of the world’s cyclical periods, an idea somewhat similar to that in the Acts passage (Moulton and Milligan).¶

RESTORE

1. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give back,” is translated “I restore” in Luke 19:8. See DELIVER, A, No. 3.

2. apokathistemi or the alternative form apokathistano (ἀποκαθίστημι, 600) is used (a) of “restoration” to a former condition of health Matt. 12:13; Mark 3:5; 8:25; Luke 6:10; (b) of the divine “restoration” of Israel and conditions affected by it, including the renewal of the covenant broken by them, Matt. 17:11; Mark 9:12; Acts 1:6; (c) of “giving” or “bringing” a person back, Heb. 13:19.¶ In the papyri it is used of financial restitution, of making good the breaking of a stone by a workman by his substituting another, of the reclamation of land, etc. (Moulton and Milligan).

3. katartizo (καταρτίζω, 2675), “to mend, to furnish completely,” is translated “restore” in Gal. 6:1, metaphorically, of the “restoration,” by those who are spiritual, of one overtaken in a trespass, such a one being as a dislocated member of the spiritual body. The tense is the continuous present, suggesting the necessity for patience and perseverance in the process. See FIT, MEND, PERFECT.

RESTRAIN

1. katapauro (καταπαύω, 2664); See REST B, No. 2.

2. katecho (κατέχω, 2722), “to hold fast or down,” is translated “restraineth” in 2 Thess. 2:6 and 7. In v. 6 lawlessness is spoken of as being “restrained” in its development: in v. 7 “one that restraineth” is, lit., “the restrainer” (the article with the present participle, “the restraining one”); this may refer to an individual, as in the similar construction in 1 Thess. 3:5, “the tempter” (cf. 1:10, lit., “the Deliverer”); or to a number of persons presenting the same characteristics, just as “the believer” stands for all believers, e.g., Rom. 9:33; 1 John 5:10. V. 6 speaks of a principle, v. 7 of the principle as embodied in a person or series of persons; cf. what is said of “the power” in Rom. 13:3, 4, a phrase representing all such rulers. Probably such powers, i.e., “constituted governments,” are the “restraining” influence here intimated (specifications being designedly withheld). For an extended exposition see Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 254-261.

RESURRECTION

1. anastasis (ἀνάστασις, 386) denotes (I) “a raising up,” or “rising” (ana, “up,” and histemi, “to cause to stand”), Luke 2:34, “the rising up”; the KJV “again” obscures the meaning; the Child would be like a stone against which many in Israel would stumble while many others would find in its strength and firmness a means of their salvation and spiritual life; (II), of “resurrection” from the dead, (a) of Christ, Acts 1:22; 2:31; 4:33; Rom. 1:4; 6:5; Phil. 3:10; 1 Pet. 1:3; 3:21; by metonymy, of Christ as the Author of “resurrection,” John 11:25; (b) of those who are Christ’s at His Parousia (see COMING), Luke 14:14, “the resurrection of the just”; Luke 20:33, 35, 36; John 5:29 (1st part), “the resurrection of life”; 11:24; Acts 23:6; 24:15 (1st part); 1 Cor. 15:21, 42; 2 Tim. 2:18; Heb. 11:35 (2nd part), see RAISE, Note (3); Rev. 20:5, “the first resurrection”; hence the insertion of “is” stands for the completion of this “resurrection,” of which Christ was “the firstfruits”; 20:6; (c) of “the rest of the dead,” after the Millennium (cf. Rev. 20:5); John 5:29 (2nd part), “the resurrection of judgment”; Acts 24:15 (2nd part), “of the unjust”; (d) of those who were raised in more immediate connection with Christ’s “resurrection,” and thus had part already in the first “resurrection,” Acts 26:23 and Rom. 1:4 (in each of which “dead” is plural; see Matt. 27:52); (e) of the “resurrection” spoken of in general terms, Matt. 22:23; Mark 12:18; Luke 20:27; Acts 4:2; 17:18; 23:8; 24:21; 1 Cor. 15:12, 13; Heb. 6:2; (f) of those who were raised in OT times, to die again, Heb. 11:35 (1st part), lit., “out of resurrection.”¶

2. exanastasis (ἐξανάστασις, 1815), ek, “from” or “out of,” and No. 1, Phil. 3:11, followed by ek, lit., “the out-resurrection from among the dead.” For the significance of this see ATTAIN, No. 1.¶

3. egersis (ἐγερσις, 1454), “a rousing” (akin to egeiro, “to arouse, to raise”), is used of the “resurrection” of Christ, in Matt. 27:53.¶

RETAIN

krateo (κρατέω, 2902), “to be strong, obtain, hold, hold fast,” is translated “to retain,” of sins, John 20:23 (twice); see on REMIT. See HOLD, KEEP, OBTAIN, TAKE.

Notes: (1) In Philem. 13, KJV, katecho, “to hold fast, hold back, detain,” is translated “to retain” (RV, to keep). (2) In Rom. 1:28, KJV, echo, “to have” (RV), is translated “to retain.”

RETURN

1. analuō (ἀναλύω, 360), “to depart” in Phil. 1:23, signifies “to return” in Luke 12:36, used in a simile of the “return” of a lord for his servants after a marriage feast (RV). See DEPART, No. 16.¶

2. anastrephō (ἀναστρέφω, 390), “to turn back,” is translated “to return” in Acts 5:22 and 15:16. See ABIDE, BEHAVE.

3. epistrephō (ἐπιστρέφω, 1994), “to turn about,” or “towards,” is translated “to return” in Matt. 12:44; 24:18; Mark 13:16, RV (KJV, “turn back again”); Luke 2:39; 8:55, RV (KJV, “came again”); 17:31; Acts 15:36, RV (KJV, “go again”). See CONVERT, A, No. 2, TURN.

4. hupostrephō (ὑποστρέφω, 5290), “to turn behind,” or “back” (hupo, “under”), is translated “to return” (in some texts in Mark 14:40) in Luke 1:56; 2:20, 43; v. 45, RV (KJV, “turned back again”), 4:1, 14; 7:10; 8:37; 10:17; 11:24, KJV (RV, “I will turn back”); 17:18; 19:12; 23:48, 56; Acts 1:12; 12:25; 13:13; 13:34; 20:3; 21:6; 22:17, RV (KJV, “was come again”); 23:32; Gal. 1:17; Heb. 7:1. See TURN (back).

5. anakampto (ἀνακάμπω, 344), “to turn or bend back,” occurs in Matt. 2:12; Luke 10:6 (i.e., as if it was unsaid); Acts 18:21; Heb. 11:15.¶

6. epanagō (ἐπανάγω, 1877), “to bring up or back” (primarily a nautical term for “putting to sea”; see LAUNCH, PUT), is used intransitively, in Matt. 21:18, “He returned.”

Note: In Luke 19:15, KJV, epanerchomai, “to come back again” (RV) is translated “returned.” See COME, No. 4.

REVEAL

1. apokalupto (ἀποκαλύπτω, 601) signifies “to uncover, unveil” (apo, “from,” kalupto, “to cover”); both verbs are used in Matt. 10:26; in Luke 12:2, apokalupto is set in contrast to sunkalupto, “to cover up, cover completely.” “The NT occurrences of this word fall under two heads, subjective and objective. The subjective use is that in which something is presented to the mind directly, as, (a) the meaning of the acts of God, Matt. 11:25; Luke 10:21; (b) the secret of the Person of the Lord Jesus, Matt. 16:17; John 12:38; (c) the character of God as Father, Matt. 11:27; Luke 10:22; (d) the will of God for the conduct of His children, Phil. 3:15; (e) the mind of God to the prophets of Israel, 1 Pet. 1:12, and of the Church, 1 Cor. 14:30; Eph. 3:5.

“The objective use is that in which something is presented to the senses, sight or hearing, as, referring to the past, (f) the truth declared to men in the gospel, Rom. 1:17; 1 Cor. 2:10; Gal. 3:23; (g) the Person of Christ to Paul on the way to Damascus, Gal. 1:16; (h) thoughts before hidden in the heart, Luke 2:35; referring to the future, (i) the coming in glory of the Lord Jesus, Luke 17:30; (j) the salvation and glory that await the believer, Rom. 8:18; 1 Pet. 1:5; 5:1; (k) the true value of service, 1 Cor. 3:13; (l) the wrath of God (at the Cross, against sin, and, at the revelation of the Lord Jesus, against the sinner), Rom. 1:18; (m) the Lawless One, 2 Thess. 2:3, 6, 8.*¶

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 41, 42.

2. chrematizo (χρηματίζω, 5537), “to give divine admonition, instruction, revelation,” is translated “it had been revealed,” in Luke 2:26. See ADMONITION, B, No. 3, CALL.

REVELATION

apokalupsis (ἀποκάλυψις, 602), “an uncovering” (akin to apokalupto; see above), “is used in the NT of (a) the drawing away by Christ of the veil of darkness covering the Gentiles, Luke 2:32; cf. Isa. 25:7; (b) ‘the mystery,’ the purpose of God in this age, Rom. 16:25; Eph. 3:3; (c) the communication of the knowledge of God to the soul, Eph. 1:17; (d) an expression of the mind of God for the instruction of the church, 1 Cor. 14:6, 26, for the instruction of the Apostle Paul, 2 Cor. 12:1, 7; Gal. 1:12, and for his guidance, Gal. 2:2; (e) the Lord Jesus Christ, to the saints at His Parousia, 1 Cor. 1:7, RV (KJV, ‘coming’); 1 Pet. 1:7, RV (KJV, ‘appearing’), 13; 4:13; (f) the Lord Jesus Christ when He comes to dispense the judgments of God, 2 Thess. 1:7; cf. Rom. 2:5; (g) the saints, to the creation, in association with Christ in His glorious reign, Rom. 8:19, RV, ‘revealing’ (KJV, ‘manifestation’); (h) the symbolic forecast of the final judgments of God, Rev. 1:1 (hence the Greek title of the book, transliterated ‘Apocalypse’ and translated ‘Revelation’).”* See APPEARING, COMING, LIGHTEN, B, Note, MANIFESTATION.¶

REVEL, REVELING

1. truphe (τρυφή, 5172), “luxuriousness, daintiness, reveling,” is translated freely by the verb “to revel” in 2 Pet. 2:13, RV (KJV, “to riot”), lit., “counting reveling in the daytime a pleasure.” In Luke 7:25 it is used with en, “in,” and translated “delicately.” See DELICATELY, RIOT.¶

2. komos (κῶμος, 2970), “a revel, carousal,” the concomitant and consequence of drunkenness, is used in the plural, Rom. 13:13, translated by the singular, RV, “reveling” (KJV, “rioting”); Gal. 5:21 and 1 Pet. 4:3, “revelings.” See RIOT.¶

Note: For entrupeo, 2 Pet. 2:13, RV, “to revel,” see SPORTING.

For REVENGE and REVENGER see AVENGE and AVENGER

REVERENCE (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. entrepo (ἐντρέπω, 1788), lit., “to turn in” (i.e., upon oneself), “to put to shame,” denotes, when used in the passive voice, “to feel respect for, to show deference to, to reverence,” Matt. 21:37; Mark 12:6; Luke 20:13; Heb. 12:9. See ASHAMED, A, No. 4, REGARD.

---

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

2. phobeo (φοβέω, 5399), “to fear,” is used in the passive voice in the NT; in Eph. 5:33 of reverential fear on the part of a wife for a husband, KJV, “reverence” (RV, “fear”). See FEAR, D, No. 1.

B. Noun

eulabeia (εὐλάβεια, 2124), “caution, reverence,” is translated “reverence” in Heb. 12:28 (1st part in the best mss; some have aidos). See FEAR.

REVERENT

hieroprepes (ιεροπρεπής, 2412), “suited to a sacred character, reverend” (hieros, “sacred,” prepo, “to be fitting”), is translated “reverent” in Titus 2:3, RV (KJV, “as becometh holiness”). See BECOME, B.¶

REVILE, REVILING, REVILER

A. Verbs.

1. loidoreo (λοιδορέω, 3058) denotes “to abuse, revile,” John 9:28; Acts 23:4; 1 Cor. 4:12; 1 Pet. 2:23 (1st clause).¶

2. oneidizo (ὀνειδίζω, 3679), “to reproach, upbraid,” is translated “to revile” in Matt. 5:11, KJV, and Mark 15:32 (RV, “reproach”). See REPROACH.

3. blasphemeo (βλασφημέω, 987), “to speak profanely, rail at,” is translated “reviled” in Matt. 27:39, KJV (RV, “railed on”); Luke 22:65, RV, “reviling” (KJV, “blasphemously”).

4. antiloidoreo (ἀντιλοιδορέω, 486), “to revile back or again” (anti, and No. 1), is found in 1 Pet. 2:23 (2nd clause).¶

Note: For epereazo, 1 Pet. 3:16, RV, “revile,” see ACCUSE, B, No. 3.

B. Adjective.

loidoros (λοίδορος, 3060), akin to A, No. 1, “abusive, railing, reviling,” is used as a noun, 1 Cor. 5:11, RV, “a reviler” (KJV “a railer”); 6:10, “revilers.”¶ In the Sept., Prov. 25:24; 26:21; 27:15.¶

C. Noun.

loidoria (λοιδορία, 3059), akin to A, No. 1, and B, “abuse, railing,” is used in 1 Tim. 5:14, RV, “for (charin, ‘for the sake of’) reviling” (KJV, “to speak reproachfully”—a paraphrase); 1 Pet. 3:9 (twice), RV, “reviling” (KJV, “railing”). See RAIL, B.¶

REVIVE

1. anathallo (ἀναθάλλω, 330), “to flourish anew” (ana, “again, anew,” thallo, “to flourish or blossom”), hence, “to revive,” is used metaphorically in Phil. 4:10, RV, “ye have revived (your thought for me),” KJV, “(your care of me) hath flourished again.”¶ In the Sept., Ps. 28:7; Ezek. 17:24; Hos. 8:9.¶

2. anazao (ἀναζάω, 326), “to live again” (ana, “and” zao, “to live”), “to regain life,” is used of moral “revival,” Luke 15:24, “is alive again”; (b) of sin, Rom. 7:9, “revived,” lit., “lived again” i.e., it sprang into activity, manifesting the evil inherent in it; here sin is personified, by way of contrast to the man himself. Some mss. have it in Rom. 14:9, for zao, as in the RV, which italicizes “again.”¶

REWARD (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

misthos (μισθός, 3408), primarily “wages, hire,” and then, generally, “reward,” (a) received in this life, Matt. 5:46; 6:2, 5, 16; Rom. 4:4; 1 Cor. 9:17, 18; of evil “rewards,” Acts 1:18; see ALSO HIRE; (b) to be received hereafter, Matt. 5:12; 10:41 (twice), 42; Mark 9:41; Luke 6:23, 35; 1 Cor. 3:8, 14; 2 John 8; Rev. 11:18; 22:12. See WAGES.

Notes: (1) In Luke 23:41, axios, “worthy, befitting,” used in the plur., is rendered “the due reward,” lit., “things worthy.” (2) For antapodosis, rendered “reward” in Col. 3:24, KJV, see RECOMPENSE. (3) For katabrabeuo, “to rob of a reward,” Col. 2:18, see BEGUILE, Note, and ROB.

B. Verb.

apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give back,” is nowhere translated “to reward” in the RV; KJV, Matt. 6:4, 6, 18 (see RECOMPENSE, B, No. 2); Matt. 16:27; 2 Tim. 4:14; Rev. 18:6 (see RENDER). REWARDER misthapodotes (ἀποδίδωμι, 3406), “one who pays wages” (misthos, “wages,” apo, “back,” didomi, “to give”), is used by metonymy in Heb. 11:6, of God, as the “Rewarder” of those who “seek after Him” (RV).¶ Cf. misthapodosia, “recompence.”

RICH, RICHES, RICHLY, RICH MAN

A. Adjective.

plousios (πλούσιος, 4145), akin to B, C, No. 1, “rich, wealthy,” is used (I) literally, (a) adjectivally (with a noun expressed separately) in Matt. 27:57; Luke 12:16; 14:12; 16:1, 19; (without a noun), 18:23; 19:2; (b) as a noun, singular, a “rich” man (the noun not being expressed), Matt. 19:23, 24; Mark 10:25; 12:41; Luke 16:21, 22; 18:25; Jas. 1:10, 11, “the rich,” “the rich (man);” plural, Mark 12:41, lit., “rich (ones);” Luke 6:24 (ditto); 21:1; 1 Tim. 6:17, “(them that are) rich,” lit., “(the) rich”; Jas. 2:6, RV, “the rich”; 5:1, RV, “ye rich”; Rev. 6:15 and 13:16, RV, “the rich”; (II), metaphorically, of God, Eph. 2:4 (“in mercy”); of Christ, 2 Cor. 8:9; of believers, Jas. 2:5, RV, “(to be) rich (in faith);” Rev. 2:9, of spiritual “enrichment” generally; 3:17, of a false sense of “enrichment.”¶

B. Verbs.

1. plouteo (πλουτέω, 4147), “to be rich,” in the aorist or point tense, “to become rich,” is used (a) literally, Luke 1:53, “the rich,” present participle, lit., “(ones or those) being rich”; 1 Tim. 6:9, 18; Rev. 18:3, 15, 19 (all three in the aorist tense); (b) metaphorically, of Christ, Rom. 10:12 (the passage stresses the fact that Christ is Lord; see v. 9, and the RV); of the “enrichment” of believers through His poverty, 2 Cor. 8:9 (the aorist tense expressing completeness, with permanent results); so in Rev. 3:18, where the spiritual “enrichment” is conditional upon righteousness of life and conduct (see GOLD, No. 2); of a false sense of “enrichment,” 1 Cor. 4:8 (aorist), RV, “ye are become rich” (KJV, “ye are rich”); Rev. 3:17 (perfect tense, RV, “I ... have gotten riches,” KJV, “I am ... increased with goods”), see GOODS, Note (3); of not being “rich” toward God, Luke 12:21.¶

2. ploutizo (πλουτίζω, 4148), “to make rich, enrich,” is rendered “making (many) rich” in 2 Cor. 6:10 (metaphorical of “enriching” spiritually). See ENRICH.

C. Nouns

1. ploutos (πλοῦτος, 4149) is used in the singular (I) of material “riches,” used evilly, Matt. 13:22; Mark 4:19; Luke 8:14; 1 Tim. 6:17; Jas. 5:2; Rev. 18:17; (II) of spiritual and moral “riches,” (a) possessed by God and exercised towards men, Rom. 2:4, “of His goodness and forbearance and longsuffering”; 9:23 and Eph. 3:16, “of His glory” (i.e., of its manifestation in grace towards believers); Rom. 11:33, of His wisdom and knowledge; Eph. 1:7 and 2:7, “of His grace”; 1:18, “of the glory of His inheritance in the saints”; 3:8, “of Christ”; Phil. 4:19, “in glory in Christ Jesus,” RV; Col. 1:27, “of the glory of this mystery ... Christ in you, the hope of glory”; (b) to be ascribed to Christ, Rev. 5:12; (c) of the effects of the gospel upon the Gentiles, Rom. 11:12 (twice); (d) of the full assurance of understanding in regard to the mystery of God, even Christ, Col. 2:2, RV; (e) of the liberality of the churches of Macedonia, 2 Cor. 8:2 (where “the riches” stands for the spiritual and moral value of their liberality); (f) of “the reproach of Christ” in contrast to this world’s treasures, Heb. 11:26.¶

2. chrema (χρῆμα, 5536), “what one uses or needs” (chraomai, “to use”), “a matter, business,” hence denotes “riches,” Mark 10:23, 24; Luke 18:24; see MONEY, No. 2.

D. Adverb.

plousios (πλουσίως, 4146), “richly, abundantly,” akin to A, is used in Col. 3:16; 1 Tim. 6:17; Titus 3:6, RV, “richly” (KJV, “abundantly”); 2 Pet. 1:11 (ditto).¶

For RID see CARE, A, No. 1, Note

RIDE

epibaino (ἐπιβαίνω, 1910), “to go upon” (epi, “upon,” baino, “to go”), is used of Christ’s “riding” into Jerusalem, Matt. 21:5, RV, “riding” (KJV, “sitting”). See COME, No. 16.

dexios (δεξιός, 1188), an adjective, used (a) of “the right” as opposite to the left, e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; Rev. 10:5, RV, “right hand”; in connection with armor (figuratively), 2 Cor. 6:7; with en, followed by the dative plural, Mark 16:5; with ek, and the genitive plural, e.g., Matt. 25:33, 34; Luke 1:11; (b) of giving the “right hand” of fellowship, Gal. 2:9, betokening the public expression of approval by leaders at Jerusalem of the course pursued by Paul and Barnabas among the Gentiles; the act was often the sign of a pledge, e.g., 2 Kings 10:15; 1 Chron. 29:24, marg.; Ezra 10:19; Ezek. 17:18; figuratively, Lam. 5:6; it is often so used in the papyri; (c) metaphorically of “power” or “authority,” Acts 2:33; with ek, signifying “on,” followed by the genitive plural, Matt. 26:64; Mark 14:62; Heb. 1:13; (d) similarly of “a place of honor in the messianic kingdom,” Matt. 20:21; Mark 10:37.

RIGHT (not wrong—Noun and Adjective), RIGHTLY

A. Noun.

exousia (ἐξουσία, 1849), “authority, power,” is translated “right” in the RV, for KJV, “power,” in John 1:12; Rom. 9:21; 1 Cor. 9:4, 5, 6, 12 (twice), 18; 2 Thess. 3:9, where the “right” is that of being maintained by those among whom the ministers of the gospel had labored, a “right” possessed in virtue of the “authority” given them by Christ, Heb. 13:10; Rev. 22:14.

Exousia first denotes “freedom to act” and then “authority for the action.” This is first true of God, Acts 1:7. It was exercised by the Son of God, as from, and in conjunction with, the Father when the Lord was upon earth, in the days of His flesh, Matt. 9:6; John 10:18, as well as in resurrection, Matt. 28:18; John 17:2. All others hold their freedom to act from God (though some of them have abused it), whether angels, Eph. 1:21, or human potentates, Rom. 13:1. Satan offered to delegate his authority over earthly kingdoms to Christ, Luke 4:6, who, though conscious of His “right” to it, refused, awaiting the divinely appointed time. See AUTHORITY, No. 1, and for various synonyms see DOMINION, No. 1, Note.

B. Adjectives.

1. dikaïos (δίκαιος, 1342), “just, righteous, that which is in accordance with” dike, “rule, right, justice,” is translated “right” in Matt. 20:4; v. 7, KJV only (RV omits, according to the most authentic mss., the clause having been inserted from v. 4, to the detriment of the narrative); Luke 12:57; Acts 4:19; Eph. 6:1; Phil. 1:7, RV (KJV, “meet”); 2 Pet. 1:13 (KJV, “meet”). See JUST, RIGHTEOUS.

2. euthus (εὐθύς, 2117), “straight,” hence, metaphorically, “right,” is so rendered in Acts 8:21, of the heart; 13:10, of the ways of the Lord; 2 Pet. 2:15. See STRAIGHT.

C. Adverb.

orthos (ὀρθῶς, 3723), “rightly” (akin to orthos, “straight, direct”), is translated “plain” in Mark 7:35; in Luke 7:43 and 20:21, “rightly”; in Luke 10:28, “right.”¶

Notes: (1) For “right mind” see MIND, B, No. 5. (2) For the KJV, “rightly” in 2 Tim. 2:15, see DIVIDE, A, No. 8.

RIGHTEOUS, RIGHTEOUSLY

A. Adjective.

dikaïos (δίκαιος, 1342) signifies “just,” without prejudice or partiality, e.g., of the judgment of God, 2 Thess. 1:5, 6; of His judgments, Rev. 16:7; 19:2; of His character as Judge, 2 Tim. 4:8; Rev. 16:5; of His ways and doings, Rev. 15:3. See further under JUST, A, No. 1, RIGHT, B, No. 1.

In the following the RV substitutes “righteous” for the KJV “just”; Matt. 1:19; 13:49; 27:19, 24; Mark 6:20; Luke 2:25; 15:7; 20:20; 23:50; John 5:30; Acts 3:14; 7:52; 10:22; 22:14; Rom. 1:17; 7:12; Gal. 3:11; Heb. 10:38; Jas. 5:6; 1 Pet. 3:18; 2 Pet. 2:7; 1 John 1:9; Rev. 15:3.

B. Adverb.

dikaïos (δικαίως, 1346) is translated “righteously” in 1 Cor. 15:34, RV “(awake up) righteously,” KJV, “(awake to) righteousness”; 1 Thess. 2:10, RV (KJV, “justly”); Titus 2:12; 1 Pet. 2:23. See JUSTLY.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 22:11 the best texts have dikaïosune, “righteousness,” with poieo, “to do,” RV, “let him do righteousness”; the KJV follows those which have the passive voice of dikaioo and renders it “let him be righteous,” lit., “let him be made righteous.”

(2) Dikaiokrisia, “righteous judgment” (dikaios, and krisis), occurs in Rom. 2:5.¶

RIGHTEOUSNESS

1. dikaiosune (δικαιοσύνη, 1343) is “the character or quality of being right or just”; it was formerly spelled “rightwiseness,” which clearly expresses the meaning. It is used to denote an attribute of God, e.g., Rom. 3:5, the context of which shows that “the righteousness of God” means essentially the same as His faithfulness, or truthfulness, that which is consistent with His own nature and promises; Rom. 3:25, 26 speaks of His “righteousness” as exhibited in the death of Christ, which is sufficient to show men that God is neither indifferent to sin nor regards it lightly. On the contrary, it demonstrates that quality of holiness in Him which must find expression in His condemnation of sin.

“Dikaiosune is found in the sayings of the Lord Jesus, (a) of whatever is right or just in itself, whatever conforms to the revealed will of God, Matt. 5:6, 10, 20; John 16:8, 10; (b) whatever has been appointed by God to be acknowledged and obeyed by man, Matt. 3:15; 21:32; (c) the sum total of the requirements of God, Matt. 6:33; (d) religious duties, Matt. 6:1 (distinguished as almsgiving, man’s duty to his neighbor, vv. 2-4, prayer, his duty to God, vv. 5-15, fasting, the duty of self-control, vv. 16-18).

“In the preaching of the apostles recorded in Acts the word has the same general meaning. So also in Jas. 1:20, 3:18, in both Epp. of Peter, 1st John and the Revelation. In 2 Pet. 1:1, ‘the righteousness of our God and Savior Jesus Christ,’ is the righteous dealing of God with sin and with sinners on the ground of the death of Christ. ‘Word of righteousness,’ Heb. 5:13, is probably the gospel, and the Scriptures as containing the gospel, wherein is declared the righteousness of God in all its aspects.

“This meaning of dikaiosune, right action, is frequent also in Paul’s writings, as in all five of its occurrences in Rom. 6; Eph. 6:14, etc. But for the most part he uses it of that gracious gift of God to men whereby all who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ are brought into right relationship with God. This righteousness is unattainable by obedience to any law, or by any merit of man’s own, or any other condition than that of faith in Christ.... The man who trusts in Christ becomes ‘the righteousness of God in Him,’ 2 Cor. 5:21, i.e., becomes in Christ all that God requires a man to be, all that he could never be in himself Because Abraham accepted the Word of God, making it his own by that act of the mind and spirit which is called faith, and, as the sequel showed, submitting himself to its control, therefore God accepted him as one who fulfilled the whole of His requirements, Rom. 4:3....

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 246, 247.

2. dikaïoma (δικαίωμα, 1345) is the concrete expression of “righteousness”: see JUSTIFICATION, A, No. 2.

Note: In Heb. 1:8, KJV, euthutes, “straightness, uprightness” (akin to euthus, “straight, right”), is translated “righteousness” (RV “uprightness”; KJV, marg., “rightness, or straightness”).

RING

daktulios (δακτύλιος, 1146), “a finger ring,” occurs in Luke 15:22.¶

Note: Chrusodaktulios, an adjective signifying “with a gold ring,” “a gold-ringed (person),” from chrusos, “gold,” and daktulos, “a finger,” occurs in Jas. 2:2.¶

RINGLEADER

protostates (πρωτοστάτης, 4414), “one who stands first” (protos, “first,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), was used of soldiers, one who stands in the front rank; hence, metaphorically, “a leader,” Acts 24:5.¶

RIOT, RIOTING, RIOTOUS, RIOTOUSLY

A. Nouns.

1. asotia (ἄσωτία, 810), “prodigality, a wastefulness, profligacy” (a, negative, sozo, “to save”), is rendered “riot” in Eph. 5:18, RV (KJV, “excess”); Titus 1:6 and 1 Pet. 4:4 (KJV and RV, “riot”). The corresponding verb is found in a papyrus writing, telling of “riotous living” (like the adverb asotos, see B).¶ In the Sept., Prov. 28:7.¶ Cf. the synonymous word aselgeia (under LASCIVIOUSNESS).

2. komos (κῶμος, 2970), “a revel,” is rendered “rioting” in Rom. 13:13, KJV; see REVEL.

3. truphe (τρυφή, 5172), “luxuriousness,” is rendered “riot” in 2 Pet. 2:13, KJV; see DELICATELY, REVEL.

4. stasis (στάσις, 4714), primarily “a standing” (akin to histemi, “to cause to (‘stand’)”), then “an insurrection,” is translated “riot” in Acts 19:40 RV (KJV, uproar). See DISSENSION, INSURRECTION, SEDITION, UPROAR.

B. Adverb.

asotos (ἄσώτως, 811), “wastefully” (akin to A, No. 1), is translated “with riotous living” in Luke 15:13; though the word does not necessarily signify “dissolutely,” the parable narrative makes clear that this is the meaning here.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 7:11.¶

Note: The verb ekchuno, a Hellenistic form of ekcheo (though the form actually used is the regular classical aorist passive of ekcheo), “to pour out, shed,” is translated “ran riotously” in Jude 11, RV (KJV, “ran greedily”); see POUR, SHED.

RIPE (to be fully)

1. akmazo (ἀκμάζω, 187), “to be at the prime” (akin to akme, “a point”), “to be ripe,” is translated “are fully ripe” in Rev. 14:18.¶

2. xeraino (ξηραίνω, 3583), “to dry up, wither,” is used of “ripened” crops in Rev. 14:15, RV, “overripe,” KJV, “ripe” (marg., “dried”). See DRY, B, OVERRIPE, WITHER.

3. paradidomi (παράδιδωμι, 3860), “to give over, commit, deliver,” etc., also signifies “to permit”; in Mark 4:29, of the “ripe” condition of corn, RV, and KJV marg., “is ripe”; RV marg., “alloweth” (the nearest rendering); KJV, “is brought forth.”

RISE, RISING

Notes: (1) For the various verbs anistemi exanistemi egeiro, anabaino, anatello, sunephistemi, see under ARISE. (2) For the KJV, “should rise” in Acts 26:23, see RESURRECTION. (3) Exanistemi, transitively, “to raise up” (ek, “out, from, out of”), is used intransitively in Acts 15:5, “there rose up,” i.e., from the midst of a gathered company. See RAISE. (4) For the KJV and RV of sunegeiro, “to raise together with,” and in the passive voice in Col. 2:12; 3:1, see RAISE. (5) For the word “rising,” which is used to translate the verbs anatello in Mark 16:2, and anistemi, in Mark 9:10, see under ARISE, Nos. 9 and 1 respectively. (6) For katephistemi Acts 18:12, RV, see INSURRECTION, B. (7) Epanistamai, “to rise up against,” occurs in Matt. 10:21; Mark 13:12.¶ (8) Anastasis, is rendered “rising up” in Luke 2:34, RV.

RIVER

potamos (ποταμός, 4215) denotes (a) “a stream,” Luke 6:48, 49; (b) “a flood or floods,” Matt. 7:25, 27; (c) “a river,” natural, Matt. 3:6, RV; Mark 1:5; Acts 16:13; 2 Cor. 11:26, RV (KJV, “waters”); Rev. 8:10; 9:14; 16:4, 12; symbolical, Rev. 12:15 (1st part), RV, “river” (KJV, “flood”); so v. 16; 22:1, 2 (cf. Gen. 2:10; Ezek. 47); figuratively, John 7:38, “the effects of the operation of the Holy Spirit in and through the believer.” See FLOOD, WATER.¶

Note: For potamophoretos in Rev. 12:15, see FLOOD, B.

ROAR, ROARING

A. Verbs.

1. mukaomai (μυκάομαι, 3455), properly of oxen, an onomatopoeic word, “to low, bellow,” is used of a lion, Rev. 10:3.¶

2. oruomai (ὠρύομαι, 5612), “to howl” or “roar,” onomatopoeic, of animals or men, is used of a lion, 1 Pet. 5:8, as a simile of Satan.¶

B. Noun.

echos (ἦχος, 2279), “a noise” or “sound” (Eng., “echo”), is used of the “roaring” of the sea in Luke 21:25, in the best mss., “for the roaring (of the sea and the billows),” RV; some mss. have the present participle of echeo, “to sound,” KJV “(the sea and the waves) roaring. See RUMOR, SOUND.

ROB

1. sulao (συλάω, 4813), “to plunder, spoil,” is translated “I robbed” in 2 Cor. 11:8.¶ Cf. sulagogeō, “to make spoil of, Col. 2:8.¶

2. katabrabeuo (καταβραβεύω, 2603), “to give judgment against, to condemn” (kata, “against,” and brabeus, “an umpire”; cf. brabeion, “a prize in the games,” 1 Cor. 9:24;

Phil. 3:14, and brabeuo, “to act as an umpire, arbitrate,” Col. 3:15), occurs in Col. 2:18, RV, “let (no man) rob (you) of your prize” (KJV, “... beguile ... of your reward”), said of false teachers who would frustrate the faithful adherence of the believers to the truth, causing them to lose their reward. Another rendering closer to the proper meaning of the word, as given above, is “let no man decide for or against you” (i.e., without any notion of a prize); this suitably follows the word “judge” in v. 16, i.e., “do not give yourselves up to the judgment and decision of any man” (KJV, marg., “judge against”).¶

ROBBER

1. lestes (ληστης, 3027), “a robber, brigand” (akin to leia, “booty”), “one who plunders openly and by violence” (in contrast to kleptes, “a thief,” see below), is always translated “robber” or “robbers” in the RV, as the KJV in John 10:1, 8, 18:40; 2 Cor. 11:26; the KJV has “thief” or “thieves” in Matt. 21:13, and parallel passages; 26:55, and parallel passages; 27:38, 44 and Mark 15:27; Luke 10:30, 36; but “thief” is the meaning of kleptes. See THIEF.

2. hierosulos (ιερόσυλος, 2417), an adjective signifying “robbing temples” (hieron, “a temple,” and sulao, “to rob”), is found in Acts 19:37.¶ Cf. hierosuleo, “to rob a temple,” Rom. 2:22, KJV, “commit sacrilege.”¶

For ROBBERY see PRIZE

ROBE

1. stole (στολή, 4749), for which see CLOTHING, No. 8, is translated “robe” in Mark 16:5, RV (KJV, “garment”); “long robes” in Luke 20:46.

2. chlamus (χλαμύς, 5511), “a cloak,” is translated “robe” in Matt. 27:28, 31. See CLOTHING, Note (4).¶

3. himation (ἱμάτιον, 2440) is translated “robe” in the KJV of John 19:2, 5 (RV, “garment”). See APPAREL, No. 2, CLOTHING, No. 2, GARMENT.

4. esthes (ἔσθής, 2066), “apparel,” is translated “robe” in Luke 23:11 (RV, “apparel”). See APPAREL, No. 1.

ROCK

1. petra (πέτρα, 4073) denotes “a mass of rock,” as distinct from petros, “a detached stone or boulder,” or a stone that might be thrown or easily moved. For the nature of petra, see Matt. 7:24, 25; 27:51, 60; Mark 15:46; Luke 6:48 (twice), a type of a sure foundation (here the true reading is as in the RV, “because it had been well built”); Rev. 6:15, 16 (cf. Isa. 2:19, ff.; Hos. 10:8); Luke 8:6, 13, used illustratively; 1 Cor. 10:4 (twice), figuratively, of Christ; in Rom. 9:33 and 1 Pet. 2:8, metaphorically, of Christ; in Matt. 16:18, metaphorically, of Christ and the testimony concerning Him; here the distinction between petra, concerning the Lord Himself, and Petros, the apostle, is clear (see above).¶

2. spilas (σπιλάς, 4694), “a rock or reef,” over which the sea dashes, is used in Jude 12, “hidden rocks,” RV, metaphorical of men whose conduct is a danger to others.¶ A late meaning ascribed to it is that of “spots,” (KJV), but that rendering seems to have been influenced by the parallel passage in 2 Pet. 2:13, where spiloi, “spots,” occurs.

ROCKY

petrodes (πετρῶδης, 4075), “rock-like” (petra, “a rock,” eidōs, “a form, appearance”), is used of “rock” underlying shallow soil, Matt. 13:5, 20, RV, “the rocky places” (KJV, “stony places”); Mark 4:5, RV, “the rocky ground” (KJV, “stony ground”); v. 16, RV, “rocky places” (KJV, “stony ground”).¶

Note: In Acts 27:29, KJV, the phrase tracheis topoi, lit., “rough places,” is translated “rocks” (RV, “rocky ground”).

ROD

A. Noun.

rhabdos (ῥάβδος, 4464), “a staff, rod, scepter,” is used (a) of Aaron’s “rod,” Heb. 9:4; (b) a staff used on a journey, Matt. 10:10, RV, “staff” (KJV, “staves”); so Luke 9:3; Mark 6:8, “staff”; Heb. 11:21, “staff”; (c) a ruler’s staff, a “scepter,” Heb. 1:8 (twice); elsewhere a “rod,” Rev. 2:27; 12:5; 19:15; (d) a “rod” for chastisement (figuratively), 1 Cor. 4:21; (e) a measuring rod, Rev. 11:1. See STAFF.¶

B. Verb.

rhabdizo (ῥαβδίζω, 4463), “to beat with a rod,” is used in Acts 16:22, RV, “to beat ... with rods”; 2 Cor. 11:25. The “rods” were those of the Roman lictors or “sergeants” (rhabdouchoi, lit., “rodbearers”); the Roman beating with “rods” is distinct from the Jewish infliction of stripes.¶ In the Sept., Jud. 6:11; Ruth 2:17.¶ Cf. Matt. 26:67, RV marg.; John 18:22 (KJV marg., and RV marg.); 19:3, RV marg.; see SMITE.

ROLL (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. apokulio or apokulizo (ἀποκυλίω, 617), “to roll away” (apo, “from,” kulio, “to roll”; cf. Eng., “cylinder,” etc.), is used of the sepulchre stone, Matt. 28:2; Mark 16:3 (v. 4 in some mss.; see No. 2); Luke 24:2.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 29:3, 8, 10.¶

2. anakulio (ἀνά, 303 and ἀνά, 2947), “to roll up or back” (ana), is found in the best texts, in Mark 16:4 (see No 1).¶

3. proskulio (προσκυλίω, 4351), “to roll up or to” (pros), is used in Matt. 27:60; Mark 15:46, of the sepulchre stone.¶

4. heilisso, or helisso (εἰλίσσω, 1507), “to roll,” or “roll up,” is used (a) of the “rolling” up of a mantle, illustratively of the heavens, Heb. 1:12, RV; (b) of the “rolling” up of a scroll, Rev. 6:14, illustratively of the removing of the heaven.¶

5. entulisso (ἐντυλίσσω, 1794), “to wrap up, roll round or about,” is translated “rolled up” in John 20:7, RV, of the cloth or “napkin” that had been wrapped around the head of the Lord before burial. Both the RV and the KJV, “wrapped together,” might suggest that this cloth had been “rolled” or wrapped up and put in a certain part of the tomb at the Lord’s resurrection, whereas, as with the body wrappings, the head cloth was lying as it had been “rolled” round His head, an evidence, to those who looked into the tomb, of the fact of His resurrection without any disturbance of the wrappings either by friend or foe or when the change took place. It is followed by en, “in,” and translated “wrapped” in Matt. 27:59, a meaning and construction which Moulton and Milligan illustrate from the papyri; in Luke 23:53 it is followed by the dative of the noun sindon, “linen cloth,” used instrumentally. See WRAP.¶

B. Noun.

kephalis (κεφαλής, 2777), lit., “a little head” (a diminutive of kephale, “a head”; Lat., capitulum, a diminutive of caput), hence, “a capital of a column,” then, “a roll” (of a book), occurs in Heb. 10:7, RV, “in the roll” (KJV, “in the volume”), lit., “in the heading of the scroll” (from Ps. 40:7).¶

ROMAN

rhomaïos (Ῥωμαῖος, 4514) occurs in John 11:48; Acts 2:10, RV, “from Rome” (KJV, “of Rome”); 16:21, 37, 38; 22:25, 26, 27, 29; 23:27; 25:16; 28:17.¶ For a note on Roman citizenship see CITIZEN, No. 3.

ROOF

stego (στέγη, 4721), “a covering” (stego, “to cover”), denotes “a roof,” Mark 2:4; said of entering a house, Matt. 8:8; Luke 7:6.¶

ROOM

A. Nouns.

1. topos (τόπος, 5117), “a place,” is translated “room” in Luke 2:7 and 14:22, i.e., “place”; in the KJV in Luke 14:9, 10, RV, “place” (of a couch at a feast); of a position or condition which a person occupies, 1 Cor. 14:16 (RV, “place”). See OPPORTUNITY, PLACE.

2. protoklisia (πρωτοκλισία, 4411), “the chief reclining place at table,” is rendered “uppermost rooms,” in Matt. 23:6, KJV (RV, “chief place”); in Mark 12:39, “uppermost rooms,” KJV (RV, “chief places”); in Luke 14:7, “chief rooms,” KJV (RV, “chief seats”); in v. 8, KJV, “highest room” (RV, “chief seat”); in 20:46, KJV, “highest seats” (RV, “chief seats”). See CHIEF, B, No. 7, PLACE, No. 5.¶

3. anagaion or anogeon (ἀνώγειον, 508), “an upper room” (ana, “above,” ge, “ground”), occurs in Mark 14:15; Luke 22:12, “a chamber,” often over a porch, or connected with the roof, where meals were taken and privacy obtained.¶

4. huperoon (ὑπερώον, 5253), the neuter of the adjective huperoots, “upper” (from huper, “above”), used as a noun, denoted in classical Greek “an upper story” or “room” where the women resided; in the Sept. and the NT, “an upper chamber, a roof-chamber,” built on the flat “roof” of the house, Acts 1:13, RV, “upper chamber” (KJV “upper room”); see CHAMBER, No. 2.

B. Verb.

choreo (χωρέω, 5562), “to make room,” is translated “there was ... room” in Mark 2:2. See CONTAIN, No. 1.

C. Preposition.

anti (ἀντί, 473), “in place of, instead of,” is translated “in the room of” in Matt. 2:22.

Notes: (1) In Luke 12:17, KJV, pou, “anywhere” or “where,” with a negative, is translated “no room” (RV, “not where”). (2) In Acts 24:27, KJV, diadochos, “a successor,” with lambano, “to receive,” is translated “came into (Felix’) room,” RV, “(Felix) was succeeded by.” Diadochos often meant “a deputy, a temporary successor.”¶

ROOT

A. Noun.

rhiza (ρίζα, 4491) is used (a) in the natural sense, Matt. 3:10; 13:6, 21; Mark 4:6, 17, 11:20; Luke 3:9; 8:13; (b) metaphorically (1) of “cause, origin, source,” said of persons, ancestors, Rom. 11:16, 17, 18 (twice); of things, evils, 1 Tim. 6:10, RV, of the love of money as a “root” of all “kinds of evil” (marg., “evils”, KJV, “evil”); bitterness, Heb. 12:15; (2) of that which springs from a “root,” a shoot, said of offspring, Rom. 15:12; Rev. 5:5; 22:16.¶

B. Verbs.

1. rhizoo (ρίζω, 4492), “to cause to take root,” is used metaphorically in the passive voice in Eph. 3:17, of being “rooted” in love; Col. 2:7, in Christ, i.e., in the sense of being firmly planted, or established.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 40:24; Jer. 12:2.¶

2. ekrizoo (ἐκρίζω, 1610), “to root out or up” (ek, “out,” and No. 1), is rendered “to root up” in Matt. 13:29; 15:13; see PLUCK.

ROPE

schoinion (σχοινίον, 4979), a diminutive of schoinos, “a rush,” is used of the small cords of which Christ made a scourge, John 2:15; of the “ropes” of a boat, Acts 27:32. See CORD.¶

For ROSE see RISE

ROUGH

1. skleros (σολομών, 4672), “hard,” is translated “rough” in Jas. 3:4, RV, of winds (KJV, fierce). See AUSTERE, FIERCE, Note (1).

2. trachus (τραχύς, 5138), “rough, uneven,” is used of paths, Luke 3:5; of rocky places, Acts 27:29. See ROCKY.¶

ROUND, ROUND ABOUT

1. kuklothen (κυκλόθεν, 2943), from kuklos, “a circle, ring” (Eng., “cycle,” etc.), occurs in Rev. 4:3, 4; in v. 8, RV, “round about,” with reference to the eyes.¶

2. pantothēn (παντόθεν, 3840), “on all sides” (from pas, “all”), is translated “round about” in Heb. 9:4. See EVERYWHERE, No. 3.

3. perix (πέριξ, 4038), from the preposition peri, “around,” occurs in Acts 5:16, “round about” (of cities).¶

4. kuklo (κύκλω, 2945), the dative case of the noun kuklos, “a ring,” is used as an adverb, and translated “round about” in Mark 3:34, KJV (RV, “round”); 6:6, 36; Luke 9:12; Rom. 15:19; Rev. 4:6; 7:11.¶

Note: For combinations with other words see, e.g., COME, No. 38, COUNTRY, A, No. 6, A, No. 4, DWELL, No. 5, GO, No. 9, HEDGE, LOOK, A, No. 3, REGION, SHINE, STAND, B, No. 5.

ROUSE

exupnos (ἐξυπνος, 1853), “roused out of sleep” (ek, “out of,” hupnos, “sleep”), occurs in Acts 16:27.¶ Cf. exupnizo, AWAKE, No. 4.

ROW (Verb)

elauno (ἐλαύνω, 1643), “to drive,” is used of “rowing” or sailing a boat, Mark 6:48; John 6:19. See DRIVE.

ROYAL

1. basileios (βασίλειος, 934), from basileus, “a king,” is used in 1 Pet. 2:9 of the priesthood consisting of all believers.¶ Cf. Luke 7:25, for which see COURT, No. 3. In the Sept., Ex. 19:6; 23:22; Deut. 3:10.¶

2. basilikos (βασιλικός, 937), “belonging to a king,” is translated “royal” in Acts 12:21; Jas. 2:8. See KING B, No. 2, NOBLEMAN.

RUB

pscho (ψάχω, 5597), “to rub, to rub to pieces,” is used in Luke 6:1.¶

RUDDER

pedalion (πηδάλιον, 4079), “a rudder” (akin to pedos, “the blade of an oar”), occurs in Jas. 3:4, RV, “rudder” (KJV, “helm”), and Acts 27:40, plural, RV, “(the bands of) the rudders,” KJV, “the rudder (bands).”¶

The pedalia were actually steering paddles, two of which were used as “rudders” in ancient ships.

RUDE

idiotes (ιδιώτης, 2399), for which see IGNORANT, No. 4, is translated “rude” in 2 Cor. 11:6.

RUDIMENTS

stoicheion (στοιχείον, 4747), “one of a row or series,” is translated “rudiments” in the RV of Gal. 4:3, 9; Heb. 5:12, and the KJV and RV of Col. 2:8, 20. See ELEMENTS.

RUE

peganon (πήγανον, 4076), a shrubby plant with yellow flowers and a heavy smell, cultivated for medicinal purposes, is mentioned in Luke 11:42.¶

RUIN

1. rhegma (ῥήγμα, 4485), akin to rhegunimi, “to break,” denotes “a cleavage, fracture” (so in the Sept., e.g., 1 Kings 11:30, 31); by metonymy, that which is broken, “a ruin,” Luke 6:49.¶

2. katestrammena (καταστρέφω, 2690**), the neuter plural, perfect participle, passive, of katastrepho, “to overturn,” is translated “ruins” in Acts 15:16; cf. DIG, No. 3. See OVERTHROW.

RULE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. arche (ἀρχή, 746), “a beginning,” etc., denotes “rule,” Luke 20:20, RV, “rule” (KJV, “power”); 1 Cor. 15:24; Eph. 1:21, RV, “rule” (KJV, “principality”). See BEGINNING, B.

2. kanon (κανών, 2583) is translated “rule” in the KJV of 2 Cor. 10:13, 15; in Gal. 6:16, KJV and RV; in Phil. 3:16, KJV (RV, in italics): see PROVINCE, No. 2.

B. Verbs.

1. archo (ἄρχομαι, 756), (akin to A, No. 1), in the active voice denotes “to rule,” Mark 10:42 and Rom. 15:12, RV, “to rule” (KJV, “to reign”). See BEGIN, A, No. 1.

2. oikodespoteo (οἰκοδεσποτέω, 3616), from oikos, “a house,” and despotes, “a master,” signifies “to rule the household”; so the RV in 1 Tim. 5:14 (KJV, “guide the house”). See GUIDE, B, Note (1).¶ Cf. oikodespotes, “a householder.”

3. proistemi (προΐστημι, 4291), lit., “to stand before,” hence, “to lead, attend to” (indicating care and diligence), is translated “to rule” (middle voice), with reference to a local church, in Rom. 12:8; perfect active in 1 Tim. 5:17; with reference to a family, 1 Tim. 3:4 and 12 (middle voice); v. 5 (2nd aorist, active). See MAINTAIN.

4. hegeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233), “to lead,” is translated “to rule” in Heb. 13:7, 17, 24 (KJV marg., in the first two, “are the guides” and “guide.”

5. poimaino (ποιμαίνω, 4165), “to act as a shepherd, tend flocks,” is translated “to rule” in Rev. 2:27; 12:5; 19:15, all indicating that the governing power exercised by the Shepherd is to be of a firm character; in Matt. 2:6, KJV, “shall rule” (RV, “shall be shepherd of”). See FEED.

6. brabeuo (βραβεύω, 1018), properly, “to act as an umpire” (brabeus), hence, generally, “to arbitrate, decide,” Col. 3:15, “rule” (RV, marg., “arbitrate”), representing “the peace of Christ” (RV) as deciding all matters in the hearts of believers; some regard the meaning as that of simply directing, controlling, “ruling.”¶ Cf. katabrabeuo; see ROB.

RULER

1. archon (ἄρχων, 758), “a ruler, chief, prince,” is translated “rulers,” e.g., in 1 Cor. 2:6, 8, RV (KJV, “princes”); “ruler,” Rev. 1:5 (KJV, prince). See MAGISTRATE, PRINCE, No. 2.

2. arche (ἀρχή, 746), “a rule, sovereignty,” is rendered “rulers” in Luke 12:11, RV (KJV, “magistrates”). See BEGINNING.

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

3. kosmokrator (κοσμοκράτωρ, 2888) denotes “a ruler of this world” (contrast pantokrator, “almighty”). In Greek literature, in Orphic hymns, etc., and in rabbinic writings, it signifies a “ruler” of the whole world, a world lord. In the NT it is used in Eph. 6:12, “the world rulers (of this darkness),” RV, KJV, “the rulers (of the darkness) of this world.” The context (“not against flesh and blood”) shows that not earthly potentates are indicated, but spirit powers, who, under the permissive will of God, and in consequence of human sin, exercise satanic and therefore antagonistic authority over the world in its present condition of spiritual darkness and alienation from God. The suggested rendering “the rulers of this dark world” is ambiguous and not phraseologically requisite. Cf. John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11; 2 Cor. 4:4.¶

4. politarches (πολιτάρχης, 4173), “a ruler of a city” (polis, “a city,” archo, “to rule”), “a politarch,” is used in Acts 17:6, 8, of the magistrates in Thessalonica, before whom the Jews, with a mob of market idlers, dragged Jason and other converts, under the charge of showing hospitality to Paul and Silas, and of treasonable designs against the emperor. Thessalonica was a “free” city and the citizens could choose their own politarchs. The accuracy of Luke has been vindicated by the use of the term, for while classical authors use the terms poliarchos and politarchos of similar “rulers,” the form used by Luke is supported by inscriptions discovered at Thessalonica, one of which mentions Sosipater, Secundus, and Gaius among the politarchs, names occurring as those of Paul’s companions. Prof. Burton of Chicago, in a paper on “The Politarchs,” has recorded 17 inscriptions which attest their existence, thirteen of which belong to Macedonia and five presumably to Thessalonica itself, illustrating the influence of Rome in the municipal organization of the place.¶

5. architriklinos (ἀρχιτρίκλινος, 755) denotes “the superintendent of a banquet,” whose duty lay in arranging the tables and food (arche, “ruler,” triklinos, lit., “a room with three couches”), John 2:8, 9.¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 13:9 and Luke 21:12, KJV, hegemon, “a leader, a governor of a province,” is translated “ruler” (RV, “governor”). See GOVERNOR, PRINCE, No. 3. (2) For ruler of the synagogue, see SYNAGOGUE. (3) In Matt. 24:45, KJV, kathistemi, “to appoint,” is translated “hath made ruler” (RV, “hath set”); so in v. 47; 25:21, 23; Luke 12:42, 44.

RUMOR

1. akoe (ἀκοή, 189), “a hearing,” is translated “rumor” in Matt. 24:6; Mark 13:7. See HEARING, B, No. 1.

2. echos (ἦχος, 2279), “a noise, sound,” is translated “rumor” in Luke 4:37, RV (KJV, “fame”). See ROAR, SOUND.

Note: In Luke 7:17, KJV, logos, “a word,” is translated “rumor” (RV, “report”).

RUN, RAN

1. trecho (τρέχω, 5143), “to run,” is used (a) literally, e.g., Matt. 27:48 (dramon, an aorist participle, from an obsolete verb dramo, but supplying certain forms absent from trecho, lit., “having run, running,” expressive of the decisiveness of the act); the same form in the indicative mood is used, e.g., in Matt. 28:8; in the Gospels the literal meaning alone is used; elsewhere in 1 Cor. 9:24 (twice in 1st part); Rev. 9:9, KJV, “running” (RV, “rushing”); (b) metaphorically, from the illustration of “runners” in a race, of either swiftness or effort to attain an end, Rom. 9:16, indicating that salvation is not due to human effort, but to God’s sovereign right to exercise mercy; 1 Cor. 9:24 (2nd part), and v. 26, of persevering activity in the Christian course with a view to obtaining the reward; so Heb. 12:1; in Gal. 2:2 (1st part), RV, “(lest) I should be running,” continuous present tense referring to the activity of the special service of his mission to Jerusalem; (2nd part), “had run,” aorist tense, expressive of the continuous past, referring to the activity of his antagonism to the Judaizing teachers at Antioch, and his consent to submit the case to the judgment of the church in Jerusalem; in 5:7 of the erstwhile faithful course doctrinally of the Galatian believers; in Phil. 2:16, of the apostle’s manner of life among the Philippian believers; in 2 Thess. 3:1, of the free and rapid progress of “the word of the Lord.”

2. prostrecho (προστρέχω, 4370), “to run to” (pros, “to,” and No. 1), is used in Mark 9:15; 10:17; Acts 8:30.¶

3. peritrecho (περιτρέχω, 4063), “to run about” (peri “around,” and No. 1), is used in Mark 6:55, RV, “ran round about” (KJV, “ran through”).¶

4. suntrecho (συντρέχω, 4936), “to run together with” (sun, “with”), is used (a) literally, Mark 6:33; Acts 3:11; (b) metaphorically, 1 Pet. 4:4, of “running” a course of evil with others.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 50:18.¶

5. protrecho (προτρέχω, 4390), “to run before,” Luke 19:4: see OUTRUN.

6. eistrecho (εἰστρέχω, 1532), “to run in” (eis, “in”), occurs in Acts 12:14.¶

7. hupotrecho (ὑποτρέχω, 5295), “to run under” (hupo, “under”), is used nautically in Acts 27:16.¶

8. episuntrecho (ἐπισυντρέχω, 1998), “to run together again” (epi, “upon, or again,” and No. 4), occurs in Mark 9:25.¶

9. ekchunno or ekchuno (ἐκχέω, 1632), “to shed,” is translated “ran riotously” in Jude 11, RV (KJV, “ran greedily”). See RIOTOUSLY, Note. See SHED, SPILL.

10. huperekchunno (ὑπερεκχύνω, 5240), a late form of huperekcheo, “to overflow,” is rendered “running over” in Luke 6:38.¶

11. epikello or epokello (ζηλωτής, 2207), “to drive upon,” is used in Acts 27:41 of “running” a ship ashore.¶

Notes: (1) Hormao, “to set in motion, urge on,” but intransitively, “to hasten on, rush,” is always translated “to rush” in the RV; KJV, “ran violently,” Matt. 8:32; Mark 5:13; Luke 8:33; “ran,” Acts 7:57; “rushed,” 19:29. See RUSH.¶

(2) In Acts 21:30, sundrome, “a running together,” with ginomai, “to become, take place,” is translated “ran together,” lit. “a running together took place.” (3) In Matt. 9:17, KJV, ekcheo, “to pour out,” used in the passive voice (RV, “is spilled”), is translated “runneth out.” (4) In Acts 14:14, RV, ekpedao, “to spring forth,” is translated “sprang forth” (this verb is found in the papyri); the KJV, “ran in” translates the mss. which have eispedao, “to spring in.” (5) Katatrecho, “to run down” occurs in Acts 21:32.¶

RUSH, RUSHING

1. hormao (ὁρμάω, 3729), for which see RUN, Note (1), with refs., is akin to horme (see ASSAULT) and hormema, “a rushing” (see VIOLENCE).

2. phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear,” is used in the present participle, passive voice, in Acts 2:2, and translated “rushing,” RV, “the rushing (of a mighty wind),” KJV “a rushing (mighty wind)” lit “a violent wind borne (along).”

3. trecho (τρέχω, 5143), “to run,” is translated “rushing (to war)” in Rev. 9:9, RV, KJV, “running (to battle).”

RUST (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. brosis (βρώσις, 1035), “an eating” (akin to bibrosko, “to eat”), is used metaphorically to denote “rust” in Matt. 6:19, 20. See EAT, B, No. 1, FOOD, MEAT, MORSEL.

2. ios (ἰός, 2447), “poison,” denotes “rust” in Jas. 5:3. See POISON.

B. Verb.

katioo (κατιόω, 2728), an intensive form of ioo, “to poison” (akin to A, No. 2), strengthened by kata, “down,” “to rust over,” and in the passive voice, “to become rusted over,” occurs in Jas. 5:3, RV, “are rusted” (KJV, “are cankered”).¶ Cf. gangraina, “a gangrene,” 2 Tim. 2:17, RV.¶

SABACHTHANI

sabachthanei (σαβαχθανί, 4518), an Aramaic word signifying “Thou hast forsaken Me,” is recorded as part of the utterance of Christ on the cross, Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34, a quotation from Ps. 22:1. Recently proposed renderings which differ from those of the KJV and RV have not been sufficiently established to require acceptance.

SABAOTH

sabaoth (σαβαώθ, 4519) is the transliteration of a Hebrew word which denotes “hosts” or “armies,” Rom. 9:29; Jas. 5:4.¶ While the word “hosts” probably had special reference to angels, the title “the LORD of hosts” became used to designate Him as the One who is supreme over all the innumerable hosts of spiritual agencies, or of what are described as “the armies of heaven.” Eventually it was used as equivalent to “the LORD all-sovereign.” In the prophetic books of the OT the Sept. sometimes has Kurios Sabaoth as the equivalent of “the LORD of hosts,” sometimes Kurios Pantokrator, in Job, it uses Pantokrator to render the Hebrew divine title Shadday (see ALMIGHTY).

---

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

SABBATH

1. sabbaton (σάββατον, 4521) or sabbata: the latter, the plural form, was transliterated from the Aramaic word, which was mistaken for a plural; hence the singular, sabbaton, was formed from it. The root means “to cease, desist” (Heb., shabath; cf. Arab., sabata, “to intercept, interrupt”); the doubled b has an intensive force, implying a complete cessation or a making to cease, probably the former. The idea is not that of relaxation or refreshment, but cessation from activity.

The observation of the seventh day of the week, enjoined upon Israel, was a sign between God and His earthly people, based upon the fact that after the six days of creative operations He rested, Exod. 31:16, 17, with 20:8-11. The OT regulations were developed and systematized to such an extent that they became a burden upon the people (who otherwise rejoiced in the rest provided) and a byword for absurd extravagance. Two treatises of the Mishna (the Shabbath and Erubin) are entirely occupied with regulations for the observance; so with the discussions in the Gemara, on rabbinical opinions. The effect upon current opinion explains the antagonism roused by the Lord’s cures wrought on the “Sabbath,” e.g., Matt. 12:9-13; John 5:5-16, and explains the fact that on a “Sabbath” the sick were brought to be healed after sunset, e.g., Mark 1:32. According to rabbinical ideas, the disciples, by plucking ears of corn (Matt. 12:1; Mark 2:23), and rubbing them (Luke 6:1), broke the “sabbath” in two respects; for to pluck was to reap, and to rub was to thresh. The Lord’s attitude towards the “sabbath” was by way of freeing it from these vexatious traditional accretions by which it was made an end in itself, instead of a means to an end (Mark 2:27).

In the Epistles the only direct mentions are in Col. 2:16, “a sabbath day,” RV (which rightly has the singular, see 1st parag., above), where it is listed among things that were “a shadow of the things to come” (i.e., of the age introduced at Pentecost), and in Heb. 4:4-11, where the perpetual sabbatismos is appointed for believers (see REST); inferential references are in Rom. 14:5 and Gal. 4:9-11. For the first three centuries of the Christian era the first day of the week was never confounded with the “sabbath”; the confusion of the Jewish and Christian institutions was due to declension from apostolic teaching.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 12:1 and 11, where the plural is used, the KJV (as the RV) rightly has the singular, “the sabbath day”; in v. 5 the KJV has the plural (see above). Where the singular is used the RV omits the word “day,” v. 2; 24:20; Mark 6:2; Luke 6:1 (“on a sabbath”); 14:3; John 9:14 (“it was the sabbath on the day when ...”). As to the use or omission of the article the omission does not always require the rendering “a sabbath”; it is absent, e.g., in Matt. 12:2. (2) In Acts 16:13, “on the sabbath day,” is, lit., “on the day of the sabbath” (plural). (3) For Matt. 28:1, see LATE. (4) For “the first day of the week” see ONE, A, (5).

2. prosabbaton (προσάββατον, 4315) signifies “the day before the sabbath” (pro, “before,” and No. 1), Mark 15:42; some mss. have prin, “before,” with sabbaton separately).¶

SACKCLOTH

sakkos (σάκκος, 4526), “a warm material woven from goat’s or camel’s hair,” and hence of a dark color, Rev. 6:12; Jerome renders it saccus cilicinus (being made from the hair of the black goat of Cilicia; the Romans called it cilicium); cf. Isa. 50:3; it was also used for saddlecloths, Josh. 9:4; also for making sacks, e.g., Gen. 42:25, and for garments worn as expressing mourning or penitence, Matt. 11:21; Luke 10:13, or for purposes of prophetic testimony, Rev. 11:3.¶

SACRED

hieros (ἱερός, 2413) denotes “consecrated to God,” e.g., the Scriptures, 2 Tim. 3:15, RV, “sacred” (KJV “holy”); it is used as a noun in the neuter plural in 1 Cor. 9:13, RV, “sacred things” (KJV, “holy things”).¶ The neuter singular, hieron, denotes “a temple.” See TEMPLE. For a comparison of this and synonymous terms see HOLY, B, No. 1 (b) and Note (2).

SACRIFICE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

thusia (θυσία, 2378) primarily denotes “the act of offering”; then, objectively, “that which is offered” (a) of idolatrous “sacrifice,” Acts 7:41; (b) of animal or other “sacrifices,” as offered under the Law, Matt. 9:13; 12:7; Mark 9:49; 12:33; Luke 2:24; 13:1; Acts 7:42; 1 Cor. 10:18; Heb. 5:1; 7:27 (RV, plural); 8:3; 9:9; 10:1, 5, 8 (RV, plural), 11; 11:4; (c) of Christ, in His “sacrifice” on the cross, Eph. 5:2; Heb. 9:23, where the plural antitypically comprehends the various forms of Levitical “sacrifices” in their typical character; 9:26; 10:12, 26; (d) metaphorically, (1) of the body of the believer, presented to God as a living “sacrifice,” Rom. 12:1; (2) of faith, Phil. 2:17; (3) of material assistance rendered to servants of God, Phil. 4:18; (4) of praise, Heb. 13:15; (5) of doing good to others and communicating with their needs, Heb. 13:16; (6) of spiritual “sacrifices” in general, offered by believers as a holy priesthood, 1 Pet. 2:5.¶

B. Verb.

thuo (θύω, 2380) is used of “sacrificing by slaying a victim,” (a) of the “sacrifice” of Christ, 1 Cor. 5:7, RV, “hath been sacrificed” (KJV, “is sacrificed”); (b) of the Passover “sacrifice,” Mark 14:12, RV, “they sacrificed” (KJV, “they killed”); Luke 22:7, RV, “(must) be sacrificed,” KJV, “(must) be killed”; (c) of idolatrous “sacrifices,” Acts 14:13, 18; 1 Cor. 10:20 (twice). See KILL, No. 3.

Note: For eidolothutos, “sacrificed to idols,” see IDOLS (offered to), No. 1.

For SACRILEGE see ROBBER, No. 2, Rom. 2:22

For SAD see COUNTENANCE

For SADDUCEES see under PHARISEES

SAFE, SAFELY, SAFETY

A. Adjective.

asphales (ἀσφαλής, 804), “certain, secure, safe” (from a, negative, and sphallo, “to trip up”), is translated “safe” in Phil. 3:1. See CERTAIN, B.

B. Nouns.

1. asphaleia (ἀσφάλεια, 803), “certainty, safety” (akin to A), is translated “safety” in Acts 5:23; 1 Thess. 5:3. See CERTAIN, A.

2. soteria (σωτηρία, 4991), “salvation,” is translated “safety” in Acts 27:34, RV (KJV, “health”). See HEALTH, Note.

C. Adverb.

asphalos (ἀσφαλῶς, 806), “safely” (akin to A, and B, No. 1), is so rendered in Mark 14:44 and Acts 16:23. See ASSURANCE, C. In the Sept., Gen. 34:25.¶

D. Verbs.

1. diasozo (διασώζω, 1295), “to bring safely through danger,” and, in the passive voice, “to come safe through” (dia, “through,” sozo, “to save”), is translated “bring safe” in Acts 23:24; “escaped safe” in 27:44. See ESCAPE, HEAL, SAVE, WHOLE.

2. hugiaino (ὕγιαίνω, 5198), “to be sound, healthy” (Eng., “hygiene,” etc.), is translated “safe and sound” in Luke 15:27, lit., “being healthy. See HEALTH, SOUND, WHOLE.

For SAIL (Noun, Acts 27:17, KJV) see GEAR

SAIL (Verb)

1. pleo (πλέω, 4126), “to sail,” occurs in Luke 8:23; Acts 21:3; 27:2, 6, 24; Rev. 18:17, RV, “saileth” (for the KJV see COMPANY, A, No. 7).¶

2. apopleo (ἀποπλέω, 636), “to sail away” (apo, “from,” and No. 1), occurs in Acts 13:4; 14:26; 20:15; 27:1.¶

3. ekpleo (1602), “to sail from or thence” (ek, “from”), occurs in Acts 15:39; 18:18; 20:6.¶

4. parapleo (παραπλέω, 3896), “to sail by” (para), occurs in Acts 20:16.¶

5. diapleo (διαπλέω, 1277), “to sail across” (dia, “through”), occurs in Acts 27:5.¶

6. hupopleo (ὕποπλέω, 5284), “to sail under” (hupo), i.e., “under the lee of,” occurs in Acts 27:4, 7.¶

7. anago (ἀνάγω, 321), “to lead up,” is used of “putting to sea,” Acts 13:13; 16:11; 18:21; 20:3, 13; 21:1; 27:21; 28:10, 11; see LAUNCH.

8. paralego (παραλέγομαι, 3881), “to lay beside” (para), is used in the middle voice, of “sailing past” in Acts 27:8, RV, “coasting along” (KJV, “passing”); v. 13, RV, “sailed along” (KJV, “sailed”).¶

9. diaperao (διαπεράω, 1276), “to cross over,” is translated “sailing over” in Acts 21:2, KJV (RV, “crossing over”). See PASS.

10. bradupleo (βραδυπλοέω, 1020), “to sail slowly” (bradus, “slow,” plous, “a voyage”), occurs in Acts 27:7.¶

For SAILING see VOYAGE

For SAILORS see MARINERS

SAINT(S)

hagios (ἅγιος, 40), for the meaning and use of which see HOLY, B, No. 1, is used as a noun in the singular in Phil. 4:21, where pas, “every,” is used with it. In the plural, as used of believers, it designates all such and is not applied merely to persons of exceptional holiness, or to those who, having died, were characterized by exceptional acts of “saintliness.” See especially 2 Thess. 1:10, where “His saints” are also described as “them that believed,” i.e., the whole number of the redeemed. They are called “holy ones” in Jude 14, RV. For the term as applied to the Holy Spirit see HOLY SPIRIT. See also SANCTIFY.

Notes: (1) In Rev. 15:3 the RV follows those texts which have aionon, “ages,” and assigns the reading ethnon, “nations,” to the margin; the KJV translates those which have the inferior reading hagion, “saints,” and puts “nations” and “ages” in the margin. (2) In Rev. 18:20, the best texts have hagioi and apostoloi, each with the article, each being preceded by kai, “and,” RV, “and ye saints, and ye apostles”; the KJV, “and ye holy apostles” follows those mss. from which the 2nd kai and the article are absent. (3) In Rev. 22:21, the RV follows those mss. which have hagion, with the article, “(with) the saints”; the KJV those which simply have panton, “all,” but adds “you” (RV, marg., “with all”).

SALT (Noun, Adjective and Verb), SALTNESS

A. Noun.

halas (ἅλς, 251), a late form of hals (found in some mss. in Mark 9:49), is used (a) literally in Matt. 5:13 (2nd part); Mark 9:50 (1st part, twice); Luke 14:34 (twice); (b) metaphorically, of “believers,” Matt. 5:13 (1st part); of their “character and condition,” Mark 9:50 (2nd part); of “wisdom” exhibited in their speech, Col.4:6.¶

Being possessed of purifying, perpetuating and antiseptic qualities, “salt” became emblematic of fidelity and friendship among eastern nations. To eat of a person’s “salt” and so to share his hospitality is still regarded thus among the Arabs. So in Scripture, it is an emblem of the covenant between God and His people, Num. 18:19; 2 Chron. 13:5; so again when the Lord says “Have salt in yourselves, and be at peace one with another” (Mark 9:50). In the Lord’s teaching it is also symbolic of that spiritual health and vigor essential to Christian virtue and counteractive of the corruption that is in the world, e.g., Matt. 5:13, see (b) above. Food is seasoned with “salt” (see B); every meal offering was to contain it, and it was to be offered with all offerings presented by Israelites, as emblematic of the holiness of Christ, and as betokening the reconciliation provided for man by God on the ground of the death of Christ, Lev. 2:13. To refuse God’s provision in Christ and the efficacy of His expiatory sacrifice is to expose oneself to the doom of being “salted with fire,” Mark 9:49.

While “salt” is used to fertilize soil, excess of it on the ground produces sterility (e.g., Deut. 29:23; Judg. 9:45; Jer. 17:6; Zeph. 2:9).

B. Verb.

halizo (ἀλίζω, 233), akin to A, signifies “to sprinkle” or “to season with salt,” Matt. 5:13; Mark 9:49 (see under A).¶ Cf. SAVOR, B.

C. Adjectives.

1. halukos (ἀλυκός, 252) occurs in Jas. 3:12, “salt (water).”¶

2. analogos (ἄναλος, 358) denotes “saltless” (a, negative, n, euphonic, and A), insipid, Mark 9:50, “have lost its saltiness,” lit., “have become (ginomai) saltless (analogos)”; cf. moraino in Luke 14:34 (see SAVOR, B).

SALVATION

A. Nouns.

1. soteria (σωτηρία, 4991) denotes “deliverance, preservation, salvation.” “Salvation” is used in the NT (a) of material and temporal deliverance from danger and apprehension, (1) national, Luke 1:69, 71; Acts 7:25, RV marg., “salvation” (text, “deliverance”); (2) personal, as from the sea, Acts 27:34; RV, “safety” (KJV, “health”); prison, Phil. 1:19; the flood, Heb. 11:7; (b) of the spiritual and eternal deliverance granted immediately by God to those who accept His conditions of repentance and faith in the Lord Jesus, in whom alone it is to be obtained, Acts 4:12, and upon confession of Him as Lord, Rom. 10:10; for this purpose the gospel is the saving instrument, Rom. 1:16; Eph. 1:13 (see further under SAVE); (c) of the present experience of God’s power to deliver from the bondage of sin, e.g., Phil. 2:12, where the special, though not the entire, reference is to the maintenance of peace and harmony; 1 Pet. 1:9; this present experience on the part of believers is virtually equivalent to sanctification; for this purpose, God is able to make them wise, 2 Tim. 3:15; they are not to neglect it, Heb. 2:3; (d) of the future deliverance of believers at the Parousia of Christ for His saints, a salvation which is the object of their confident hope, e.g., Rom. 13:11; 1 Thess. 5:8, and v. 9, where “salvation” is assured to them, as being deliverance from the wrath of God destined to be executed upon the ungodly at the end of this age (see 1 Thess. 1:10); 2 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 1:14; 9:28; 1 Pet. 1:5; 2 Pet. 3:15; (e) of the deliverance of the nation of Israel at the second advent of Christ at the time of “the epiphany (or shining forth) of His Parousia” (2 Thess. 2:8); Luke 1:71; Rev. 12:10; (f) inclusively, to sum up all the blessings bestowed by God on men in Christ through the Holy Spirit, e.g., 2 Cor. 6:2; Heb. 5:9; 1 Pet. 1:9, 10; Jude 3; (g) occasionally, as standing virtually for the Savior, e.g., Luke 19:9; cf. John 4:22 (see SAVIOR); (h) in ascriptions of praise to God, Rev. 7:10, and as that which it is His prerogative to bestow, 19:1 (RV).

2. soterion (σωτήριον, 4992), the neuter of the adjective (see B), is used as a noun in Luke 2:30; 3:6, in each of which it virtually stands for the Savior, as in No. 1 (g); in Acts 28:28, as in No. 1 (b); in Eph. 6:17, where the hope of “salvation” [see No. 1 (d)] is metaphorically described as “a helmet.”¶

soterios (σωτήριον, 4992**), “saving, bringing salvation,” describes the grace of God, in Titus 2:11.¶

SAME

1. autos (αὐτός, 846) denotes “the same” when preceded by the article, and either with a noun following, e.g., Mark 14:39; Phil. 1:30; 1 Cor. 12:4, or without, e.g., Matt. 5:46, 47; Rom. 2:1; Phil. 2:2; 3:1; Heb. 1:12; 13:8. It is thus to be distinguished from uses as a personal and a reflexive pronoun.

2. houtos (οὗτος, 3778), “this” (person or thing), or “he” (and the feminine and neuter forms), is sometimes translated “the same,” e.g., John 3:2, 26; 7:18; Jas. 3:2; sometimes the RV translates it by “this” or “these,” e.g., John 12:21, “these” (KJV, “the same”); 2 Cor. 8:6, “this” (KJV, “the same”).

SANCTIFICATION, SANCTIFY

hagiasmos (ἁγιασμός, 38), “sanctification,” is used of (a) separation to God, 1 Cor. 1:30; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:2; (b) the course of life befitting those so separated, 1 Thess. 4:3, 4, 7; Rom. 6:19, 22; 1 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 12:14.¶ “Sanctification is that relationship with God into which men enter by faith in Christ, Acts 26:18; 1 Cor. 6:11, and to which their sole title is the death of Christ, Eph. 5:25, 26; Col. 1:22; Heb. 10:10, 29; 13:12.

“Sanctification is also used in NT of the separation of the believer from evil things and ways. This sanctification is God’s will for the believer, 1 Thess. 4:3, and His purpose in calling him by the gospel, v. 7; it must be learned from God, v. 4, as He teaches it by His Word, John 17:17, 19, cf. Ps. 17:4; 119:9, and it must be pursued by the believer, earnestly and undeviatingly, 1 Tim. 2:15; Heb. 12:14. For the holy character, hagiosune, 1 Thess. 3:13, is not vicarious, i.e., it cannot be transferred or imputed, it is an individual possession, built up, little by little, as the result of obedience to the Word of God, and of following the example of Christ, Matt. 11:29; John 13:15; Eph. 4:20; Phil. 2:5, in the power of the Holy Spirit, Rom. 8:13; Eph. 3:16.

“The Holy Spirit is the Agent in sanctification, Rom. 15:16; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:2; cf. 1 Cor. 6:11.... The sanctification of the Spirit is associated with the choice, or election, of God; it is a Divine act preceding the acceptance of the Gospel by the individual.”*

For synonymous words see HOLINESS.

B. Verb.

hagiazō (ἁγιάζω, 37), “to sanctify,” “is used of (a) the gold adorning the Temple and of the gift laid on the altar, Matt. 23:17, 19; (b) food, 1 Tim. 4:5; (c) the unbelieving spouse of a believer, 1 Cor. 7:14; (d) the ceremonial cleansing of the Israelites, Heb. 9:13; (e) the Father’s Name, Luke 11:2; (f) the consecration of the Son by the Father,

John 10:36; (g) the Lord Jesus devoting Himself to the redemption of His people, John 17:19; (h) the setting apart of the believer for God, Acts 20:32; cf. Rom. 15:16; (i) the effect on the believer of the Death of Christ, Heb. 10:10, said of God, and 2:11; 13:12, said of the Lord Jesus; (j) the separation of the believer from the world in his behavior—by the Father through the Word, John 17:17, 19; (k) the believer who turns away from such things as dishonor God and His gospel, 2 Tim. 2:21; (l) the acknowledgment of the Lordship of Christ, 1 Pet. 3:15.

“Since every believer is sanctified in Christ Jesus, 1 Cor. 1:2, cf. Heb. 10:10, a common NT designation of all believers is ‘saints,’ hagioi, i.e., ‘sanctified’ or ‘holy ones.’ Thus sainthood, or sanctification, is not an attainment, it is the state into which God, in grace, calls sinful men, and in which they begin their course as Christians, Col. 3:12; Heb. 3:1.”†

hagion (ἅγιον, 39), the neuter of the adjective hagios, “holy,” is used of those structures which are set apart to God, (a) of “the tabernacle” in the wilderness, Heb. 9:1, RV, “its sanctuary, a sanctuary of this world” (KJV, “a worldly sanctuary”); in v. 2 the outer part is called “the Holy place,” RV (KJV, “the sanctuary”); here the neuter plural hagia is used, as in v. 3.

Speaking of the absence of the article, Westcott says “The anarthrous form Agia (literally Holies) in this sense appears to be unique, as also agia agiwa below, if indeed the reading is correct. Perhaps it is chosen to fix attention on the character of the sanctuary as in other cases. The plural suggests the idea of the sanctuary with all its parts: cf. Moulton-Winer, p. 220.” In their margin, Westcott and Hort prefix the article ta to hagia in vv. 2 and 3. In v. 3 the inner part is called “the Holy of holies,” RV (KJV, “the holiest of all”); in v. 8, “the holy place” (KJV, “the holiest of all”), lit., “(the way) of the holiest”; in v. 24 “a holy place,” RV (KJV, “the holy places”), neuter plural; so in v. 25, “the holy place” (KJV and RV), and in 13:11, RV, “the holy place” (KJV, “the sanctuary”); in all these there is no separate word topos, “place,” as of the Temple in Matt. 24:15; (b) of “Heaven itself,” i.e., the immediate presence of God and His throne, Heb. 8:2, “the sanctuary” (RV, marg., “holy things”); the neut. plur. with the article points to the text as being right, in view of 9:24, 25 and 13:11 (see above), exegetically designated “the true tabernacle”; neut. plur. in 9:12, “the holy place”; so 10:19, RV (KJV, “the holiest”); there are no separate compartments in the antitypical and heavenly sanctuary, into which believers have “boldness to enter” by faith.¶

2. naos (ναός, 3485) is used of the inner part of the Temple in Jerusalem, in Matt. 23:35, RV, “sanctuary.” See TEMPLE.

SAND

amos (ἄμμος, 285), “sand” or “sandy ground,” describes (a) an insecure foundation, Matt. 7:26; (b) numberlessness, vastness, Rom. 9:27; Heb. 11:12; Rev. 20:8; (c) symbolically in Rev. 13:1, RV, the position taken up by the Dragon (not, as in the KJV, by John), in view of the rising of the Beast out of the sea (emblematic of the restless condition of nations; see SEA).¶

sandalion (σανδάλιον, 4547), a diminutive of sandalon, probably a Persian word, Mark 6:9; Acts 12:8. The “sandal” usually had a wooden sole bound on by straps round the instep and ankle.

SAPPHIRE

sappheiros (σάππειρος, 4552) is mentioned in Rev. 21:19 (RV, marg., “lapis lazuli”) as the second of the foundations of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem (cf. Isa. 54:11).¶ It was one of the stones in the high priest’s breastplate, Exod. 28:18; 39:11; as an intimation of its value see Job 28:16; Ezek. 28:13. See also Exod. 24:10; Ezek. 1:26; 10:1. The “sapphire” has various shades of blue and ranks next in hardness to the diamond.

SARDIUS, SARDINE (KJV)

sardion or sardinus (σάρδινος, 4555) denotes “the sardian stone.” Sardius is the word in the best texts in Rev. 4:3 (RV, “a sardius”), where it formed part of the symbolic appearance of the Lord on His throne, setting forth His glory and majesty in view of the judgment to follow. There are two special varieties, one a yellowish brown, the other a transparent red (like a cornelian). The beauty of the stone, its transparent brilliance, the high polish of which it is susceptible, made it a favorite among the ancients. It forms the sixth foundation of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:20.¶

SARDONYX

sardonux (σαρδόνυξ, 4557), a name which indicates the formation of the gem, a layer of sard, and a layer of onyx, marked by the red of the sard and the white of the onyx. It was used among the Romans both for cameos and for signets. It forms the fifth foundation of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:20.¶

SATAN

satanas (Σατανᾶς, 4567), a Greek form derived from the Aramaic (Heb., Satan), “an adversary,” is used (a) of an angel of Jehovah in Num. 22:22 (the first occurrence of the Word in the OT); (b) of men, e.g., 1 Sam. 29:4; Ps. 38:20; 71:13; four in Ps. 109; (c) of “Satan,” the Devil, some seventeen or eighteen times in the OT; in Zech. 3:1, where the name receives its interpretation, “to be (his) adversary,” RV (see marg.; KJV, “to resist him”).

In the NT the word is always used of “Satan,” the adversary (a) of God and Christ, e.g., Matt. 4:10; 12:26; Mark 1:13; 3:23, 26; 4:15; Luke 4:8 (in some mss.); 11:18; 22:3; John 13:27; (b) of His people, e.g., Luke 22:31; Acts 5:3; Rom. 16:20; 1 Cor. 5:5; 7:5; 2 Cor. 2:11; 11:14; 12:7; 1 Thess. 2:18; 1 Tim. 1:20; 5:15; Rev. 2:9, 13 (twice), 24; 3:9; (c) of mankind, Luke 13:16; Acts 26:18; 2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 12:9; 20:7.

His doom, sealed at the Cross, is foretold in its stages in Luke 10:18; Rev. 20:2, 10. Believers are assured of victory over him, Rom. 16:20.

The appellation was given by the Lord to Peter, as a “Satan-like” man, on the occasion when he endeavored to dissuade Him from death, Matt. 16:23; Mark 8:33.¶

“Satan” is not simply the personification of evil influences in the heart, for he tempted Christ, in whose heart no evil thought could ever have arisen (John 14:30; 2 Cor. 5:21; Heb. 4:15); moreover his personality is asserted in both the OT and the NT, and especially in the latter, whereas if the OT language was intended to be figurative, the NT would have made this evident. See DEVIL.

SATISFY

1. chortazo (χορτάζω, 5526), “to fill or satisfy with food,” is translated “satisfy” in Mark 8:4, KJV (RV, “to fill”). See FILL, No. 8.

2. empiplemi or empletho (ἐμπίπλημι, 1705), “to fill up, fill full, satisfy” (en, “in,” pimplete or pletho, “to fill”), is used metaphorically in Rom. 15:24, of taking one’s fill of the company of others, RV, “I shall have been satisfied” (KJV, “I be ... filled”). See FILL, No. 6.

For SATISFYING, Col. 2:23, KJV, see INDULGENCE

SAVE, SAVING

A. Verbs.

1. sozo (σώζω, 4982), “to save,” is used (as with the noun soteria, “salvation”) (a) of material and temporal deliverance from danger, suffering, etc., e.g., Matt. 8:25; Mark 13:20; Luke 23:35; John 12:27; 1 Tim. 2:15; 2 Tim. 4:18 (KJV, “preserve”); Jude 5; from sickness, Matt. 9:22, “made ... whole” (RV, marg., “saved”); so Mark 5:34; Luke 8:48; Jas. 5:15; (b) of the spiritual and eternal salvation granted immediately by God to those who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, e.g., Acts 2:47, RV “(those that) were being saved”; 16:31; Rom. 8:24, RV, “were we saved”; Eph. 2:5, 8; 1 Tim. 2:4; 2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 3:5; of human agency in this, Rom. 11:14; 1 Cor. 7:16; 9:22; (c) of the present experiences of God’s power to deliver from the bondage of sin, e.g., Matt. 1:21; Rom. 5:10; 1 Cor. 15:2; Heb. 7:25; Jas. 1:21; 1 Pet. 3:21; of human agency in this, 1 Tim. 4:16; (d) of the future deliverance of believers at the second coming of Christ for His saints, being deliverance from the wrath of God to be executed upon the ungodly at the close of this age and from eternal doom, e.g., Rom. 5:9; (e) of the deliverance of the nation of Israel at the second advent of Christ, e.g., Rom. 11:26; (f) inclusively for all the blessings bestowed by God on men in Christ, e.g., Luke 19:10; John 10:9; 1 Cor. 10:33; 1 Tim. 1:15; (g) of those who endure to the end of the time of the Great Tribulation, Matt. 10:22; Mark 13:13; (h) of the individual believer, who, though losing his reward at the judgment seat of Christ hereafter, will not lose his salvation, 1 Cor. 3:15; 5:5; (i) of the deliverance of the nations at the Millennium, Rev. 21:24 (in some mss.). See SALVATION.

2. diasozo (διασώζω, 1295), “to bring safely through” (dia, “through,” and No. 1), is used (a) of the healing of the sick by the Lord, Matt. 14:36, RV, “were made whole” (KJV adds “perfectly”); Luke 7:3; (b) of bringing “safe” to a destination, Acts 23:24; (c) of keeping a person “safe,” 27:43; (d) of escaping through the perils of shipwreck, 27:44; 28:1, 4, passive voice; (e) through the Flood, 1 Pet. 3:20. See ESCAPE, WHOLE.¶ Note: In 2 Pet. 2:5, KJV, phulasso, “to guard, keep, preserve,” is translated “saved” (RV, “preserved”). In Luke 17:33 some mss. have sozo (KJV, “save”), for the RV: see GAIN, B, No. 3. For “save alive,” Luke 17:33, RV, see LIVE, No. 6.

B. Noun.

peripoiesis (περιποίησις, 4047), (a) “preservation,” (b) “acquiring or gaining something,” is used in this latter sense in Heb. 10:39, translated “saving” (RV marg., “gaining”); the reference here is to salvation in its completeness. See OBTAIN, POSSESSION.

Note: In Heb. 11:7 soteria is rendered saving. See SALVATION.

SAVING (Preposition)

parektos (παρεκτός, 3924), used as a preposition, denotes “saving,” Matt. 5:32 (in some mss., 19:9). See EXCEPT.¶

Note: In Luke 4:27 and Rev. 2:17, KJV, ei me (lit., “if not”), is translated “saving” (RV, “but only” and “but”).

SAVIOR

soter (σωτήρ, 4990), “a savior, deliverer, preserver,” is used (a) of God, Luke 1:47; 1 Tim. 1:1; 2:3; 4:10 (in the sense of “preserver,” since He gives “to all life and breath and all things”); Titus 1:3; 2:10; 3:4; Jude 25; (b) of Christ, Luke 2:11; John 4:42; Acts 5:31; 13:23 (of Israel); Eph. 5:23 (the sustainer and preserver of the church, His “body”); Phil. 3:20 (at His return to receive the Church to Himself); 2 Tim. 1:10 (with reference to His incarnation, “the days of His flesh”); Titus 1:4 (a title shared, in the context, with God the Father); 2:13, RV, “our great God and Savior Jesus Christ,” the pronoun “our,” at the beginning of the whole clause, includes all the titles; Titus 3:6; 2 Pet. 1:1, “our God and Savior Jesus Christ; RV, where the pronoun “our,” coming immediately in connection with “God,” involves the inclusion of both titles as referring to Christ, just as in the parallel in v. 11, “our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ” (KJV and RV); these passages are therefore a testimony to His deity; 2 Pet. 2:20; 3:2, 18; 1 John 4:14.¶

SAVOR (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. euodia (εὐωδία, 2175), “fragrance” (eu, “well,” ozo, “to smell”), is used metaphorically (a) of those who in the testimony of the gospel are to God “a sweet savor of Christ,” 2 Cor. 2:15; (b) of the giving up of His life by Christ for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for an odor (osme, see No. 2) of “a sweet smell,” Eph. 5:2, RV [KJV, “a sweet smelling (savor)”]; (c) of material assistance sent to Paul from the church at Philippi “(an odor) of a sweet smell,” Phil. 4:18. In all three instances the fragrance is that which ascends to God through the person, and as a result of the sacrifice, of Christ.¶

2. osme (ὀσμή, 3744), “a smell, odor” (from ozo, “to smell”; Eng., “ozone”), is translated “odor” in John 12:3; it is used elsewhere in connection with No. 1, in the three passages mentioned, as of an odor accompanying an acceptable sacrifice; in 2 Cor. 2:14, 16 (twice), of the “savor” of the knowledge of Christ through Gospel testimony, in the case of the perishing “a savor from death unto death,” as of that which arises from what is dead (the spiritual condition of the unregenerate); in the case of the saved “a savor from life unto life,” as from that which arises from what is instinct with life (the spiritual condition of the regenerate); in Eph. 5:2, “a (sweetsmelling) savor”; in Phil. 4:18, “an odor (of a sweet smell)”;

B. Verb.

moraino (μωραίνω, 3471), primarily, “to be foolish,” is used of salt that has lost its “savor,” Matt. 5:13; Luke 14:34. See FOOLISH, B, No. 1.

Note: In the KJV of Matt. 16:23 and Mark 8:33, phroneo, “to think, to mind,” is translated “thou savorest” (RV, “thou mindest”).

SAW ASUNDER

prizo or prio (πρίζω, 4249), “to saw asunder,” occurs in Heb. 11:37. Some have seen here a reference to the tradition of Isaiah’s martyrdom under Manasseh.¶ In the Sept., Amos 1:3.¶ Cf. diaprio, “to cut to the heart” Acts 5:33; 7:54.¶

SAY

1. lego (λέγω, 3004), primarily to pick out, gather,” chiefly denotes “to say, speak, affirm,” whether of actual speech, e.g., Matt. 11:17, or of unspoken thought, e.g., Matt. 3:9, or of a message in writing, e.g., 2 Cor. 8:8. The 2nd aorist form eipon is used to supply that tense, which is lacking in lego.

Concerning the phrase “he answered and said,” it is a well known peculiarity of Hebrew narrative style that a speech is introduced, not simply by “and he said,” but by prefixing “and he answered” (apokrinomai, with eipon). In Matt. 14:27, “saying,” and Mark 6:50, “and saith,” emphasis is perhaps laid on the fact that the Lord, hitherto silent as He moved over the lake, then addressed His disciples. That the phrase sometimes occurs where no explicit question has preceded (e.g., Matt. 11:25; 17:4; 28:5; Mark 11:14; 12:35; Luke 13:15; 14:3; John 5:17, 19), illustrates the use of the Hebrew idiom.

Note: A characteristic of lego is that it refers to the purport or sentiment of what is said as well as the connection of the words; this is illustrated in Heb. 8:1, RV, “(in the things which) we are saying,” KJV, “(which) we have spoken.” In comparison with laleo (No. 2), lego refers especially to the substance of what is “said,” laleo, to the words conveying the utterance; see, e.g., John 12:49, “what I should say (lego, in the 2nd aorist subjunctive form eipo), and what I should speak (laleo)”; v. 50, “even as the Father hath said (lego, in the perfect form eireke) unto Me, so I speak” (laleo); cf. 1 Cor. 14:34, “saith (lego) the law”; v. 35, “to speak” (laleo). Sometimes laleo signifies the utterance, as opposed to silence, lego declares what is “said”; e.g., Rom. 3:19, “what things soever the law saith (lego), it speaketh (laleo) to them that are under the law”; see also Mark 6:50; Luke 24:6. In the NT laleo never has the meaning “to chatter.”

2. laleo (λάλέω, 2980), “to speak,” is sometimes translated “to say”; in the following where the KJV renders it thus, the RV alters it to the verb “to speak,” e.g., John 8:25 (3rd part), 26; 16:6; 18:20 (2nd part), 21 (1st part); Acts 3:22 (2nd part); 1 Cor. 9:8 (1st part); Heb. 5:5; in the following the RV uses the verb “to say,” John 16:18; Acts 23:18 (2nd part); 26:22 (2nd part); Heb. 11:18. See Note above, and SPEAK, TALK, TELL, UTTER.

3. phemi (φημί, 5346), “to declare, say,” (a) is frequently used in quoting the words of another, e.g., Matt. 13:29; 26:61; (b) is interjected into the recorded words, e.g., Acts 23:35; (c) is used impersonally, 2 Cor. 10:10.

4. eiro (Fut. of λέγω, 3004), an obsolete verb, has the future tense ereo, used, e.g., in Matt. 7:4; Luke 4:23 (2nd part); 13:25 (last part); Rom. 3:5; 4:1; 6:1; 7:7 (1st part); 8:31; 9:14, 19, 20, 30; 11:19; 1 Cor. 15:35; 2 Cor. 12:6; Jas. 2:18. The perfect is used, e.g., in John 12:50; see No. 1, Note. The 1st aorist passive, “it was said,” is used in Rom. 9:12, 26; Rev. 6:11. See SPEAK, No. 13.

5. proeipon (προλέγω, 4302) and proereo, “to say before,” used as aorist and future respectively of prolego (pro, “before,” and No. 1), is used (a) of prophecy, e.g., Rom. 9:29; “to tell before,” Matt. 24:25; Mark 13:23; “were spoken before,” 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17; (b) of “saying” before, 2 Cor. 7:3; 13:2, RV (KJV, “to tell before” and “foretell”); Gal. 1:9; 5:21; in 1 Thess. 4:6, “we forewarned,” RV. See FORETELL, FOREWARN, TELL.

6. anteipon (ἀντί, 473 and Aor. of ἀντί, 3004), “to say against” (anti, “against,” and No. 1), is so rendered in Acts 4:14. See GAINSAY.

Notes: (1) Phasko, “to affirm, assert,” is translated “saying” in Acts 24:9, KJV (RV, “affirming”), and Rev. 2:2 in some mss. (KJV). See AFFIRM, No. 3. (2) In Acts 2:14, KJV, apophthengomai, “to speak forth” (RV), is rendered “said.” (3) The phrase touto esti (i.e., touto esti), “that is,” is so translated in Matt. 27:46, RV (KJV, “that is to say”); so Acts 1:19; in Heb. 9:11 and 10:20, KJV and RV, “that is to say”; in Mark 7:11 the phrase is ho esti, lit., “which is”; the phrase ho legetai, lit., “which is said,” John 1:38 and 20:16, is rendered “which is to say.” (4) In Luke 7:40 and Acts 13:15, the imperative mood of eipon and lego, respectively, is rendered “say on.” (5) In Mark 6:22, KJV, autes, “herself,” RV, is rendered “the said.” (6) In Heb. 5:11, “we have many things to say” is, lit., “much (polus) is the word (or discourse, logos) for us.”

SAYING

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word,” as embodying a conception or idea, denotes among its various meanings, “a saying, statement or declaration,” uttered (a) by God; RV, “word” or “words” (KJV, “saying”), e.g., in John 8:55; Rom. 3:4; Rev. 19:9; 22:6, 7, 9, 10; (b) by Christ, e.g., Mark 8:32; 9:10; 10:22; Luke 9:28; John 6:60; 21:23; the RV appropriately substitutes “word” or “words” for KJV, “saying” or “sayings,” especially in John’s gospel e.g. 7:36, 40; 8:51, 52; 10:19; 14:24; 15:20; 18:9, 32; 19:13; (c) by an angel, Luke 1:29; (d) by OT prophets, John 12:38 (RV, “word”) Rom. 13:9 (ditto); 1 Cor. 15:54; (e) by the apostle Paul in the Pastoral Epp., 1 Tim. 1:15; 3:1; 4:9; 2 Tim. 2:11; Titus 3:8; (f) by other men, Mark 7:29; Acts 7:29; John 4:37 (in general). See ACCOUNT, and especially WORD.

2. rhema (ῥῆμα, 4487), “that which is said, a word,” is rendered “saying” or “sayings” in Mark 9:32; Luke 1:65; 2:17, 50, 51; 7:1; 9:45 (twice); 18:34. See WORD.

Note: In Acts 14:18, “with these sayings” is lit., “saying (lego) these things.” For lalia, “saying,” John 4:42, KJV, see SPEECH, No. 2.

SCALE

lepis (λεπίς, 3013), from lepo, “to peel,” occurs in Acts 9:18.¶

For SCARCE, SCARCELY see DIFFICULTY

SCARLET

kokkinos (κόκκινος, 2847) is derived from kokkos, used of the “berries” (clusters of the eggs of an insect) collected from the ilex coccifera; the color, however, is obtained from the cochineal insect, which attaches itself to the leaves and twigs of the coccifera oak; another species is raised on the leaves of the cactus ficus. The Arabic name for this insect is qirmiz, whence the word “crimson.” It is used (a) of “scarlet” wool, Heb. 9:19; cf. in connection with the cleansing of a leper, Lev. 14:4, 6, “scarlet”; with the offering of the red heifer, Num. 19:6; (b) of the robe put on Christ by the soldiers, Matt. 27:28; (c) of the “beast” seen in symbolic vision in Rev. 17:3, “scarlet-colored”; (d) of the clothing of the “woman” as seen sitting on the “beast,” 17:4; (e) of part of the merchandise of Babylon, 18:12; (f) figuratively, of the glory of the city itself, 18:16; the neuter is used in the last three instances.¶

SCATTER

A. Verbs.

1. skorpizo (σκορπίζω, 4650) is used in Matt. 12:30; Luke 11:23; John 10:12; 16:32; 2 Cor. 9:9, RV. See DISPERSE, No. 2.¶

2. diaskorpizo (διασκορπίζω, 1287), “to scatter abroad,” is rendered “to scatter” in Matt. 25:24, 26, RV (KJV, “strawed”); 26:31; Mark 14:27; Luke 1:51; John 11:52; Acts 5:37, RV. See DISPERSE, No. 3.

3. diaspeiro (διασπείρω, 1289), “to scatter abroad” (dia, “throughout,” speiro, “to sow seed”), is used in Acts 8:1, 4; 11:19, all of the church in Jerusalem “scattered” through persecution; the word in general is suggestive of the effects of the “scattering” in the sowing of the spiritual seed of the Word of life. See DISPERSE, No. 4.¶

4. rhipto (ρίπτω, 4496), “to throw, cast, hurl, to be cast down, prostrate,” is used in Matt. 9:36 of people who were “scattered” as sheep without a shepherd. See CAST, No. 2, THROW.

5. likmao (λικμάω, 3039), “to winnow” (likmos, “a winnowing fan”), is rendered “will scatter ... as dust” in Matt. 21:44 and Luke 20:18, RV (KJV, “will grind ... to powder”). See GRIND, Note.¶

6. dialuo (διαλύω, 1262), “to dissolve,” is translated “scattered” in Acts 5:36, KJV; see DISPERSE, No. 1.¶

B. Noun.

diaspora (διασπορά, 1290), “a dispersion,” is rendered “scattered abroad” in Jas. 1:1, KJV; “scattered” in 1 Pet. 1:1, KJV; see DISPERSION, B.

For SCEPTRE see ROD

SCHISM

schisma (σχίσμα, 4978), “a rent, division,” is translated “schism” in 1 Cor. 12:25, metaphorically of the contrary condition to that which God has designed for a local church in “tempering the body together” (v. 24), the members having “the same care one for another” (“the same” being emphatic). See DIVISION, No. 3, RENT.

SCHOOL

scholē (σχολή, 4981) (whence Eng., “school”) primarily denotes “leisure,” then, “that for which leisure was employed, a disputation, lecture”; hence, by metonymy, “the place where lectures are delivered, a school,” Acts 19:9.¶

For SCHOOLMASTER, Gal. 3:24, 25, see INSTRUCTOR, B, No. 1

SCIENCE

gnōsis (γνώσις, 1108) is translated “science” in the KJV of 1 Tim. 6:20; the word simply means “knowledge” (RV), where the reference is to the teaching of the Gnostics (lit., “the knowers”) “falsely called knowledge.” Science in the modern sense of the word, viz., the investigation, discovery, and classification of secondary laws, is unknown in Scripture. See KNOW, C, No. 1.

SCOFF

ekmukterizo (ἐκμυκτηρίζω, 1592), “to hold up the nose in derision at” (ek, “from,” used intensively, mukterizo, “to mock”; from mukter, “the nose”), is translated “scoffed at” in Luke 16:14, RV (KJV, “derided”), of the Pharisees in their derision of Christ on account of His teaching; in 23:35 (ditto), of the mockery of Christ on the cross by the rulers of the people.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 2:4; 22:7; 35:16.¶ For SCOFFERS, 2 Pet. 3:3, KJV, see MOCKERS

SCORCH, SCORCHING

A. Verb.

kaumatizo (καυματίζω, 2739), “to scorch” (from kauma, “heat”), is used (a) of seed that had not much earth, Matt. 13:6; Mark 4:6; (b) of men, stricken retributively by the sun’s heat, Rev. 16:8, 9.¶

B. Noun.

kauson (καύσων, 2742), “burning heat” (akin to kaio, “to burn”), is translated “scorching heat” in Matt. 20:12 (KJV, “heat”); Luke 12:55 (ditto); in Jas. 1:11, RV, “scorching wind” (KJV, “burning heat”), here the reference is to a hot wind from the east (cf. Job 1:19). See HEAT.¶ In the Sept., Job 27:21; Jer. 18:17; 51:1; Ezek. 17:10; 19:12; Hos. 12:1; 13:15; Jonah 4:8.¶

For SCORN see LAUGH

SCORPION

skorpīos (σκορπίος, 4651), akin to skorpizo, “to scatter” (which see), is a small animal (the largest of the several species is 6 in. long) like a lobster, but with a long tail, at the end of which is its venomous sting; the pain, the position of the sting, and the effect are mentioned in Rev. 9:3, 5, 10. The Lord’s rhetorical question as to the provision of a “scorpion” instead of an egg, Luke 11:12, is, firstly, an allusion to the egg-like shape of the creature when at rest; secondly, an indication of the abhorrence with which it is regarded. In Luke 10:19, the Lord’s assurance to the disciples of the authority given them by Him to tread upon serpents and scorpions conveys the thought of victory over spiritually antagonistic forces, the powers of darkness, as is shown by His reference to the “power of the enemy” and by the context in vv. 17, 20.¶

SCOURGE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

phragellion (φραγέλλιον, 5416), “a whip” (from Latin, flagellum), is used of the “scourge” of small cords which the Lord made and employed before cleansing the Temple, John 2:15. However He actually used it, the whip was in itself a sign of authority and judgment.¶

B. Verbs.

1. phragelloo (φραγελλόω, 5417) (akin to A: Latin, flagello; Eng., “flagellate”), is the word used in Matt. 27:26, and Mark 15:15, of the “scourging” endured by Christ and administered by the order of Pilate. Under the Roman method of “scourging,” the person was stripped and tied in a bending posture to a pillar, or stretched on a frame. The “scourge” was made of leather thongs, weighted with sharp pieces of bone or lead, which tore the flesh of both the back and the breast (cf. Ps. 22:17). Eusebius (Chron.) records his having witnessed the suffering of martyrs who died under this treatment.¶

Note: In John 19:1 the “scourging” of Christ is described by Verb No. 2, as also in His prophecy of His sufferings, Matt. 20:19; Mark 10:34; Luke 18:33. In Acts 22:25 the similar punishment about to be administered to Paul is described by Verb No. 3 (the “scourging” of Roman citizens was prohibited by the Porcian law of 197, B.C.).

2. mastigoo (μαστιγώω, 3146), akin to mastix (see below), is used (a) as mentioned under No. 1; (b) of Jewish “scourgings,” Matt. 10:17 and 23:34; (c) metaphorically, in Heb. 12:6, of the “chastening” by the Lord administered in love to His spiritual sons.¶

Note: The Jewish method of “scourging,” as described in the Mishna, was by the use of three thongs of leather, the offender receiving thirteen stripes on the bare breast and thirteen on each shoulder, the “forty stripes save one,” as administered to Paul five times (2 Cor. 11:24). See also SCOURGINGS (below).

3. mastizo (μαστιζώ, 3147), akin to No. 2, occurs in Acts 22:25 (see No. 1, above).¶ In the Sept., Num. 22:25.¶

mastix (μάστιξ, 3148), “a whip, scourge,” is used (a) with the meaning “scourging,” in Acts 22:24, of the Roman method (see above, B, No. 1, Note), (b) in Heb. 11:36, of the “sufferings” of saints in the OT times. Among the Hebrews the usual mode, legal and domestic, was that of beating with a rod (see 2 Cor. 11:25); (c) metaphorically, of “disease” or “suffering”: see PLAGUE, No. 1.

SCRIBE (-S)

grammateus (γραμματεύς, 1122), from gramma, “a writing,” denotes “a scribe, a man of letters, a teacher of the law”; the “scribes” are mentioned frequently in the Synoptists, especially in connection with the Pharisees, with whom they virtually formed one party (see Luke 5:21), sometimes with the chief priests, e.g., Matt. 2:4; Mark 8:31; 10:33; 11:18, 27; Luke 9:22. They are mentioned only once in John’s gospel, 8:3, three times in the Acts, 4:5; 6:12; 23:9; elsewhere only in 1 Cor. 1:20, in the singular. They were considered naturally qualified to teach in the synagogues, Mark 1:22. They were ambitious of honor, e.g., Matt. 23:5–11, which they demanded especially from their pupils, and which was readily granted them, as well as by the people generally. Like Ezra (Ezra 7:12), the “scribes” were found originally among the priests and Levites. The priests being the official interpreters of the Law, the “scribes” ere long became an independent company; though they never held political power, they became leaders of the people.

Their functions regarding the Law were to teach it, develop it, and use it in connection with the Sanhedrin and various local courts. They also occupied themselves with the sacred writings both historical and didactic. They attached the utmost importance to ascetic elements, by which the nation was especially separated from the Gentiles. In their regime piety was reduced to external formalism. Only that was of value which was governed by external precept. Life under them became a burden; they themselves sought to evade certain of their own precepts, Matt. 23:16,ff.; Luke 11:46; by their traditions the Law, instead of being a help in moral and spiritual life, became an instrument for preventing true access to God, Luke 11:52. Hence the Lord’s stern denunciations of them and the Pharisees (see PHARISEES).

Note: The word grammateus is used of the town “clerk” in Ephesus, Acts 19:35.

For SCRIP see WALLET

SCRIPTURE

1. graphe (γραφή, 1124), akin to grapho, “to write” (Eng., “graph,” “graphic,” etc.), primarily denotes “a drawing, painting”; then “a writing,” (a) of the OT Scriptures, (1) in the plural, the whole, e.g., Matt. 21:42; 22:29; John 5:39; Acts 17:11; 18:24; Rom. 1:2, where “the prophets” comprises the OT writers in general; 15:4; 16:26, lit., “prophetic writings,” expressing the character of all the Scriptures; (2) in the singular in reference to a particular passage, e.g., Mark 12:10; Luke 4:21; John 2:22; 10:35 (though applicable to all); 19:24, 28, 36, 37; 20:9; Acts 1:16; 8:32, 35; Rom. 4:3; 9:17; 10:11; 11:2; Gal. 3:8, 22; 4:30; 1 Tim. 5:18, where the 2nd quotation is from Luke 10:7, from which it may be inferred that the apostle included Luke’s gospel as “Scripture” alike with Deuteronomy, from which the first quotation is taken; in reference to the whole, e.g. Jas. 4:5 (see RV, a separate rhetorical question from the one which follows); in 2 Pet. 1:20, “no prophecy of Scripture,” a description of all, with special application to the OT in the next verse; (b) of the OT Scriptures (those accepted by the Jews as canonical) and all those of the NT which were to be accepted by Christians as authoritative, 2 Tim. 3:16; these latter were to be discriminated from the many forged epistles and other religious “writings” already produced and circulated in Timothy’s time. Such discrimination would be directed by the fact that “every Scripture,” characterized by inspiration of God, would be profitable for the purposes mentioned; so the RV. The KJV states truth concerning the completed canon of Scripture, but that was not complete when the apostle wrote to Timothy.

The Scriptures are frequently personified by the NT writers (as by the Jews, John 7:42), (a) as speaking with divine authority, e.g., John 19:37; Rom. 4:3; 9:17, where the Scripture is said to speak to Pharaoh, giving the message actually sent previously by God to him through Moses; Jas. 4:5 (see above); (b) as possessed of the sentient quality of foresight, and the active power of preaching, Gal. 3:8, where the Scripture mentioned was written more than four centuries after the words were spoken. The Scripture, in such a case, stands for its divine Author with an intimation that it remains perpetually characterized as the living voice of God. This divine agency is again illustrated in Gal. 3:22 (cf. v. 10 and Matt. 11:13).

2. gramma (γράμμα, 1121), “a letter of the alphabet,” etc. is used of the Holy Scriptures in 2 Tim. 3:15. For the various uses of this word see LETTER.

SCROLL

biblion (βιβλίον, 975), the diminutive of biblos, “a book,” is used in Rev. 6:14, of “a scroll,” the rolling up of which illustrates the removal of the heaven. See BOOK, No. 2.

SEA

A. Nouns.

1. thalassa (θάλασσα, 2281) is used (a) chiefly literally, e.g., “the Red Sea,” Acts 7:36; 1 Cor. 10:1; Heb. 11:29; the “sea” of Galilee or Tiberias, Matt. 4:18; 15:29; Mark 6:48, 49, where the acts of Christ testified to His deity; John 6:1; 21:1; in general, e.g., Luke 17:2; Acts 4:24; Rom. 9:27; Rev. 16:3; 18:17; 20:8, 13; 21:1; in combination with No. 2, Matt. 18:6; (b) metaphorically, of “the ungodly men” described in Jude 13 (cf. Isa. 57:20); (c) symbolically, in the apocalyptic vision of “a glassy sea like unto crystal,” Rev. 4:6, emblematic of the fixed purity and holiness of all that appertains to the authority and judicial dealings of God; in 15:2, the same, “mingled with fire,” and, standing by it (RV) or on it (KJV and RV marg.), those who had “come victorious from the beast” (ch. 13); of the wild and restless condition of nations, Rev. 13:1 (see 17:1, 15), where “he stood” (RV) refers to the dragon, not John (KJV); from the midst of this state arises the beast, symbolic of the final gentile power dominating the federated nations of the Roman world (see Dan., chs. 2, 7, etc.).

Note: For the change from “the sea” in Deut. 30:13, to “the abyss” in Rom. 10:7, see BOTTOM, B.

2. pelagos (βλάσφημος, 989), “the deep sea, the deep,” is translated “the depth” in Matt. 18:6, and is used of the “Sea of Cilicia” in Acts 27:5. See DEPTH, No. 2.¶ Pelagos signifies “the vast expanse of open water,” thalassa, “the sea as contrasted with the land” (Trench, Syn., Sec.xiii).

B. Adjectives.

1. enalios (ἐνάλιος, 1724), “in the sea,” lit., “of, or belonging to, the salt water” (from hals, “salt”), occurs in Jas. 3:7.¶

2. paralios (παράλιος, 3882), “by the sea,” Luke 6:17: see COAST.¶

3. parathalassios (παραθαλάσσιος, 3864), “by the sea,” Matt. 4:13, see COAST, Note 2.¶

4. dithalassos (διθάλασσος, 1337) primarily signifies “divided into two seas” (dis, “twice,” and thalassa), then, “dividing the sea,” as of a reef or rocky projection running out into the “sea,” Acts 27:41.¶

SEAL (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

sphragis (σφραγίς, 4973) denotes (a) “a seal” or “signet,” Rev. 7:2, “the seal of the living God,” an emblem of ownership and security, here combined with that of destination (as in Ezek. 9:4), the persons to be “sealed” being secured from destruction and marked for reward; (b) “the impression” of a “seal” or signet, (1) literal, a “seal” on a book or roll, combining with the ideas of security and destination those of secrecy and postponement of disclosures, Rev. 5:1, 2, 5, 9; 6:1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 12; 8:1; (2) metaphorical, Rom. 4:11, said of “circumcision,” as an authentication of the righteousness of Abraham’s faith, and an external attestation of the covenant made with him by God; the rabbis called circumcision “the seal of Abraham”; in 1 Cor. 9:2, of converts as a “seal” or authentication of Paul’s apostleship; in 2 Tim. 2:19, “the firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are His,” RV, indicating ownership, authentication, security and destination, “and, Let every one that nameth the Name of the Lord depart from unrighteousness,” indicating a ratification on the part of the believer of the determining counsel of God concerning him; Rev. 9:4 distinguishes those who will be found without the “seal” of God on their foreheads [see (a) above and B, No. 1].¶

B. Verbs.

1. sphragizo (σφραγίζω, 4972), “to seal” (akin to A), is used to indicate (a) security and permanency (attempted but impossible), Matt. 27:66; on the contrary, of the doom of Satan, fixed and certain, Rev. 20:3, RV, “sealed it over”; (b) in Rom. 15:28, “when ... I have ... sealed to them this fruit,” the formal ratification of the ministry of the churches of the Gentiles in Greece and Galatia to needy saints in Judea, by Paul’s faithful delivery of the gifts to them; this material help was the fruit of his spiritual ministry to the Gentiles, who on their part were bringing forth the fruit of their having shared with them in spiritual things; the metaphor stresses the sacred formalities of the transaction (Deissmann illustrates this from the papyri of Fayyum, in which the “sealing” of sacks guarantees the full complement of the contents); (c) secrecy and security and the postponement of disclosure, Rev. 10:4; in a negative command 22:10; (d) ownership and security, together with destination, Rev. 7:3, 4, 5 (as with the noun in v. 2; see A); the same three indications are conveyed in Eph. 1:13, in the metaphor of the “sealing” of believers by the gift of the Holy Spirit, upon believing (i.e., at the time of their regeneration, not after a lapse of time in their spiritual life, “having also believed”—not as KJV, “after that ye believed”—the aorist participle marks the definiteness and completeness of the act of faith); the idea of destination is stressed by the phrase “the Holy Spirit of promise” (see also v. 14); so 4:30, “ye were sealed unto the day of redemption”; so in 2 Cor. 1:22, where the middle voice intimates the special interest of the Sealer in His act; (e) authentication by the believer (by receiving the witness of the Son) of the fact that “God is true,” John 3:33; authentication by God in sealing the Son as the Giver of eternal life (with perhaps a figurative allusion to the impress of a mark upon loaves), 6:27.¶

Note: In Rev. 7, after the 5th verse (first part) the original does not repeat the mention of the “sealing” except in v. 8 (last part) (hence the omission in the RV).

2. katosphragizo (κατασφραγίζω, 2696), No. 1, strengthened by kata, intensive, is used of the “book” seen in the vision in Rev. 5:1, RV, “close sealed (with seven seals),” the successive opening of which discloses the events destined to take place throughout the period covered by chapters 6 to 19.¶ In the Sept., Job 9:7; 37:7.¶

SEAM (without)

araphos or arrhaphos (ἄρραφος, 729) denotes “without seam” (a, negative, and rhapto, “to sew”), John 19:23.¶

SEARCH

1. eraunao or ereunao, an earlier form, (ἐρευνάω, 2045), “to search, examine,” is used (a) of God, as “searching” the heart, Rom. 8:27; (b) of Christ, similarly, Rev. 2:23; (c) of the Holy Spirit, as “searching” all things, 1 Cor. 2:10, acting in the spirit of the believer; (d) of the OT prophets, as “searching” their own writings concerning matters foretold of Christ, testified by the Spirit of Christ in them, 1 Pet. 1:11 (cf. No. 2); (e) of the Jews, as commanded by the Lord to “search” the Scriptures, John 5:39, KJV, and RV marg., “search,” RV text, “ye search,” either is possible grammatically; (f) of Nicodemus as commanded similarly by the chief priests and Pharisees, John 7:52.¶

2. exeraunao (ἐξερευνάω, 1830), a strengthened form of No. 1 (ek, or ex, “out”), “to search out,” is used in 1 Pet. 1:10, “searched diligently”; cf. No. 1 (d).¶

3. exetazo (ἐξετάζω, 1833), “to examine closely, inquire carefully” (from etazo, “to examine”), occurs in Matt. 2:8, RV, “search out”; so Matt. 10:11, RV: see INQUIRE, No. 4.

Note: For anakrino, rendered “searched” in Acts 17:11, KJV, see EXAMINE.

For SEARED see BRANDED

SEASON (Noun)

A. Nouns.

1. kairos (καιρός, 2540), primarily, “due measure, fitness, proportion,” is used in the NT to signify “a season, a time, a period” possessed of certain characteristics, frequently rendered “time” or “times”; in the following the RV substitutes “season” for the KJV “time,” thus distinguishing the meaning from chronos (see No. 2): Matt. 11:25; 12:1; 14:1; 21:34; Mark 11:13; Acts 3:19; 7:20; 17:26; Rom. 3:26; 5:6; 9:9; 13:11; 1 Cor. 7:5; Gal. 4:10; 1 Thess. 2:17, lit., “for a season (of an hour)”, 2 Thess. 2:6; in Eph. 6:18, “at all seasons” (KJV, “always”); in Titus 1:3, “His own seasons” (marg., “its”; KJV, “in due times”); in the preceding clause chronos is used.

The characteristics of a period are exemplified in the use of the term with regard, e.g. to harvest, Matt. 13:30; reaping, Gal. 6:9; punishment, Matt. 8:29; discharging duties, Luke 12:42; opportunity for doing anything, whether good, e.g., Matt. 26:18; Gal. 6:10 (“opportunity”); Eph. 5:16; or evil, e.g., Rev. 12:12; the fulfillment of prophecy, Luke 1:20; Acts 3:19; 1 Pet. 1:11; a time suitable for a purpose, Luke 4:13, lit., “until a season”; 2 Cor. 6:2; see further under No. 2. See ALWAYS, Note, OPPORTUNITY, TIME, WHILE.

2. chronos (χρόνος, 5550), whence Eng. words beginning with “chron”—, denotes “a space of time,” whether long or short: (a) it implies duration, whether longer, e.g., Acts 1:21, “(all the) time”; Acts 13:18; 20:18, RV, “(all the) time” (KJV, “at all seasons”); or shorter, e.g., Luke 4:5; (b) it sometimes refers to the date of an occurrence, whether past, e.g., Matt. 2:7, or future, e.g., Acts 3:21; 7:17.

Broadly speaking, chronos expresses the duration of a period, kairos stresses it as marked by certain features; thus in Acts 1:7, “the Father has set within His own authority” both the times (chronos), the lengths of the periods, and the “seasons”

(kairos), epochs characterized by certain events; in 1 Thess. 5:1, “times” refers to the length of the interval before the Parousia takes place (the presence of Christ with the saints when He comes to receive them to Himself at the Rapture), and to the length of time the Parousia will occupy; “seasons” refers to the special features of the period before, during, and after the Parousia.

Chronos marks quantity, kairos, quality. Sometimes the distinction between the two words is not sharply defined as, e.g., in 2 Tim. 4:6, though even here the apostle’s “departure” signalizes the time (kairos). The words occur together in the Sept. only in Dan. 2:21 and Eccl. 3:1. Chronos is rendered “season” in Acts 19:22, KJV (RV, “a while”); 20:18 (RV, “all the time,” see above); Rev. 6:11, KJV (RV, “time”); so 20:3. In Luke 23:8 it is used with hikanos in the plural, RV, “(of a long) time,” more lit., “(for a sufficient number) of times.”

In Rev. 10:6 chronos has the meaning “delay” (RV, marg.), an important rendering for the understanding of the passage (the word being akin to chronizo, “to take time, to linger, delay,” Matt. 24:48; Luke 12:45). See DELAY, B, Note, SPACE, TIME, WHILE.

3. hora (ώρα, 5610), “an hour,” is translated “season” in John 5:35; 2 Cor. 7:8; Philem. 15: see HOUR.

B. Adjective.

proskairos (πρόσκαιρος, 4340), “temporary, transient,” is rendered “for a season” in Heb. 11:25. See TEMPORAL, TIME, WHILE.

C. Adverbs.

1. akairos (ἀκαίρως, 171) denotes “out of season, unseasonably” (akin to akairos, “unseasonable,” a, negative, and A, No. 1), 2 Tim. 4:2.¶

2. eukairos (εὐκαίρως, 2122), “in season” (eu, “well”), 2 Tim. 4:2; it occurs also in Mark 14:11, “conveniently.”¶

Note: For oligon, 1 Pet. 1:6, KJV, “for a season,” see WHILE.

SEASON (Verb)

artuo (ἀρτύνω, 741), “to arrange, make ready” (cf. artios, “fitted”), is used of “seasoning,” Mark 9:50; Luke 14:34; Col. 4:6.¶

SEAT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. kathedra (καθέδρα, 2515), from kata, “down,” and hedra, “a seat,” denotes “a seat” (Eng., “cathedral”), “a chair,” Matt. 21:12; Mark 11:15; of teachers, Matt. 23:2.¶

2. protokathedria (πρωτοκαθεδρία, 4410), “the first seat,” Matt. 23:6; Mark 12:39; Luke 11:43; 20:46; see CHIEF, No. 6. Cf. ROOM.¶

Note: For thronos, sometimes translated “seat” in the KJV, see THRONE.

B. Verb.

kathemai (κάθημαι, 2521), “to sit, be seated,” is translated “shall ... be seated” in Luke 22:69, RV; “is seated,” Col. 3:1, RV (KJV, “shall ... sit” and “sitteth”). See SIT.

SECOND, SECONDARILY, SECONDLY

1. deuteros (δεύτερος, 1208) denotes “second in order” with or without the idea of time, e.g., Matt. 22:26, 39; 2 Cor. 1:15; Rev. 2:11; in Rev. 14:8, RV only (“a second angel”); it is used in the neuter, deuteron, adverbially, signifying a “second” time, e.g., John 3:4; 21:16; Acts 7:13; Rev. 19:3, RV (KJV, “again”); Jude 5, “afterward” (RV, marg., “the second time”); used with ek (“of”) idiomatically, the preposition signifying “for (the second time),” Mark 14:72; John 9:24 and Acts 11:9, RV (KJV, “again”); Heb. 9:28; in 1 Cor. 12:28, KJV, “secondarily,” RV, “secondly.”

Note: In Acts 13:33 some mss. have protos, “(in the) first (psalm)”]; the 1st and 2nd Psalms were originally one, forming a prologue to the whole book; hence the numbering in the Sept.

2. deuteraios (δευτεραίος, 1206), an adjective with an adverbial sense (from No. 1), is used in Acts 28:13, RV, “on the second day” (KJV, “the next day”), lit., “second day (persons we came).”¶

Note: In Luke 6:1, the KJV translates those mss. which have deuteroprotos, lit., “secondfirst,” said of a sabbath (see RV marg.).¶

SECRET, SECRETLY

A. Adjectives.

1. kruptos (κρυπτός, 2927), “secret, hidden” (akin to krupto, “to hide”), Eng., “crypt,” “cryptic,” etc., is used as an adjective and rendered “secret” in Luke 8:17, KJV (RV, “hid”); in the neuter, with en, “in,” as an adverbial phrase, “in secret,” with the article, Matt. 6:4, 6 (twice in each v.), without the article, John 7:4, 10; 18:20; in the neuter plural, with the article, “the secrets (of men),” Rom. 2:16; of the heart, 1 Cor. 14:25; in Luke 11:33, KJV, “a secret place” (RV, “cellar”). See CELLAR, HIDDEN, INWARDLY.

2. apokruphos (ἀπόκρυφος, 614) (whence “Apocrypha”), “hidden,” is translated “kept secret” in Mark 4:22, KJV (RV, “made secret”); “secret” in Luke 8:17, RV (KJV, “hid”). See HIDE, B, No. 2.

3. krupthaios (κρύπτω, 2928d) occurs in the best mss. in Matt. 6:18 (twice; some have No. 1).¶

B. Adverbs.

1. kruphe (κρυφή, 2931), akin to A, No. 1, “secretly, in secret,” is used in Eph. 5:12.¶

d Derivatives or roots of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “d” following the number (for instance, genema, a derivative of Ginomai, is 1096d).

2. lathra (λάθρα, 2977), akin to lanthano, “to escape notice, be hidden,” is translated “secretly” in John 11:28. See PRIVILEY.

C. Verb.

krupō (κρύπτω, 2928), “to hide,” is translated “secretly” in John 19:38 [perfect participle, passive voice, lit., “(but) having been hidden”], referring to Nicodemus as having been a “secret” disciple of Christ; in Matt. 13:35, KJV, it is translated “kept secret” (RV, “hidden”).

Notes: (1) For tameion, translated “secret chambers” in Matt. 24:26, see CHAMBER, No. 1. (2) For the KJV rendering of sigao, in Rom. 16:25, “kept secret,” see PEACE (hold one’s), No. 2, and SILENCE. (3) For “I have learned the secret,” see LEARN, No. 4.

SECT

hairesis (αἵρεσις, 139), “a choosing,” is translated “sect” throughout the Acts, except in 24:14, KJV, “heresy” (RV, “sect”); it properly denotes a predilection either for a particular truth, or for a perversion of one, generally with the expectation of personal advantage; hence, a division and the formation of a party or “sect” in contrast to the uniting power of “the truth,” held in toto; “a sect” is a division developed and brought to an issue; the order “divisions, heresies” (marg. “parties”) in “the works of the flesh” in Gal. 5:19-21 is suggestive of this. See HERESY.

SECURE (Verb)

perikrates (περικρατής, 4031), an adjective, signifies “having full command of” (peri, “around, about,” krateo, “to be strong, to rule”); it is used with ginomai, “to become,” in Acts 27:16, RV, “to secure (the boat),” KJV, “to come by.”¶

Note: In Matt. 28:14, KJV, amerimnos, “without anxiety,” with poieo, “to make,” is translated “we will ... secure (you),” RV, “we will ... rid (you) of care.” The Eng. “secure” is derived from the Latin se, “free from,” and cura, “care.” See CARE.

SECURITY

hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “sufficient,” is used in its neuter form with the article, as a noun, in Acts 17:9, “(when they had taken) security,” i.e., satisfaction, lit., “the sufficient.” The use of hikanos in this construction is a Latinism in Greek. See Moulton, Proleg., p. 20. Probably the bond given to the authorities by Jason and his friends included an undertaking that Paul would not return to Thessalonica. Any efforts to have the bond cancelled were unsuccessful; hence the reference to the hindrance by Satan (1 Thess. 2:18). See ABLE, C, No. 2.

SEDITION

A. Nouns.

1. stasis (στάσις, 4714), “a dissension, an insurrection,” is translated “sedition” in Acts 24:5, KJV (KV, “insurrections”). See DISSENSION, INSURRECTION.

2. dichostasia (δικοστασία, 1370), lit., “a standing apart” (dicha, “asunder, apart,” stasis, “a standing”), hence “a dissension, division,” is translated “seditions” in Gal. 5:20, KJV. See DIVISION, No. 2.

B. Verb.

anastatoo (ἀναστατόω, 387), “to excite, unsettle,” or “to stir up to sedition,” is so translated in Acts 21:38, RV (KJV, “madest an uproar”); in 17:6, “have turned (the world) upside down,” i.e., “causing tumults”; in Gal. 5:12, RV, “unsettle” (KJV, “trouble”), i.e., by false teaching (here in the continuous present tense, lit., “those who are unsettling you”). The word was supposed not to have been used in profane authors. It has been found, however, in several of the papyri writings. See TURN, UNSETTLE.¶

SEDUCE, SEDUCING

A. Verbs.

1. planao (πλανάω, 4105), “to cause to wander, lead astray,” is translated “to seduce” in 1 John 2:26, KJV (RV, “lead ... astray”); in Rev. 2:20, “to seduce.” See DECEIT, C, No. 6.

2. apoplanao (ἀποπλανάω, 635) is translated “seduce” in Mark 13:22 (RV, “lead astray”); see LEAD, No. 13.

B. Adjective.

planos (πλάνος, 4108), akin to A, lit., “wandering,” then, “deceiving,” is translated “seducing” in 1 Tim. 4:1. See DECEIVER, No. 1.

For SEDUCERS see IMPOSTORS

SEE, SEEING

A. Verbs.

1. blepo (βλέπω, 991), “to have sight,” is used of bodily vision, e.g., Matt. 11:4; and mental, e.g. Matt. 13:13, 14; it is said of God the Father in Matt. 6:4, 6, 18; of Christ as “seeing” what the Father doeth, John 5:19. It especially stresses the thought of the person who “sees.” For the various uses see BEHOLD, No. 2; see Note below.

2. horao (ὁράω, 3708), with the form eidon, serving for its aorist tense, and opsomai, for its future tense (middle voice), denotes “to see,” of bodily vision, e.g., John 6:36; and mental, e.g., Matt. 8:4; it is said of Christ as “seeing” the Father, John 6:46, and of what He had “seen” with the Father, 8:38. It especially indicates the direction of the thought to the object “seen.” See BEHOLD, No. 1.

Note: “Horao and blepo both denote the physical act: horao, in general, blepo, the single look; horao gives prominence to the discerning mind, blepo to the particular mood or point. When the physical side recedes, horao denotes perception in general (as resulting principally from vision) ... Blepo, on the other hand, when its physical side recedes, gets a purely outward sense, look (open, incline) towards [as of a situation]” (Schmidt, Grimm-Thayer).

3. aphorao (ἀφοράω, 872), with apeidon serving as the aorist tense, “to look away from one thing so as to see another” (apo, “from,” and No. 2), as in Heb. 12:2, simply means “to see” in Phil. 2:23.¶

4. kathorao (καθοράω, 2529), lit., “to look down” (kata, and No. 2), denotes “to discern dearly,” Rom. 1:20, “are clearly seen.”¶ In the Sept., Num. 24:2; Job 10:4; 39:26.¶

5. diablepo (διαβλέπω, 1227), “to see clearly” (dia, “through,” and No. 1), is used in Matt. 7:5; Luke 6:42; in Mark 8:25, RV, “he looked steadfastly” (No. 6 is used in the next clause; No. 1 in v. 24, and No. 2 in the last part).¶

6. emblepo (ἐμβλέπω, 1689), “to look at” (en, “in,” and No. 1), used of earnestly looking, is translated “saw” in Mark 8:25 (last part); “could (not) see” in Acts 22:11. See BEHOLD, No. 3.

7. anablepo (ἀναβλέπω, 308), “to look up,” is translated “see,” of the blind, in Luke 7:22, KJV (RV, “receive their sight”). See SIGHT.

8. theaomai (θεάομαι, 2300), “to view attentively, to see with admiration, desire, or regard,” stresses more especially the action of the person beholding, as with No. 1, in contrast to No. 2; it is used in Matt. 11:7 (RV, “to behold”), while idein, the infinitive of eidon (see under No. 2), is used in the questions in the next two verses; in verse 7 the interest in the onlooker is stressed, in vv. 8, 9, the attention is especially directed to the object “seen.” The verb is translated “to see” in the KJV and RV of Matt. 6:1; Mark 16:11, 14; John 6:5; Acts 8:18 (in some mss.); 21:27; Rom. 15:24; elsewhere, for the KJV, “to see,” the RV uses the verb “to behold,” bringing out its force more suitably. See BEHOLD, No. 8.

9. theoreo (θεωρέω, 2334) denotes “to be a spectator of,” indicating the careful perusal of details in the object; it points especially, as in No. 1, to the action of the person beholding, e.g., Matt. 28:1; the RV frequently renders it by “to behold,” for the KJV, “to see,” e.g., John 14:17, 19; 16:10, 16, 17, 19. The difference between this verb and Nos. 1 and 2 is brought out in John 20:5, 6, 8; in v. 5 blepo is used of John’s sight of the linen cloths in the tomb, without his entering in; he “saw” at a glance the Lord was not there; in v. 6 the closer contemplation by Peter is expressed in the verb theoreo. But in v. 8 the grasping by John of the significance of the undisturbed cloths is denoted by eidon (see No. 2, and see WRAP).

10. muopazo (μυωπάζω, 3467), “to be short-sighted” (muo, “to shut,” ops, “the eye”; cf. Eng., “myopy,” “myopic”: the root mu signifies a sound made with closed lips, e.g., in the words “mutter,” “mute”), occurs in 2 Pet. 1:9, RV, “seeing only what is near” (KJV, “and cannot see afar off”); this does not contradict the preceding word “blind,” it qualifies it; he of whom it is true is blind in that he cannot discern spiritual things, he is near-sighted in that he is occupied in regarding worldly affairs.¶

11. phaino (φαίνω, 5316), “to cause to appear,” and in the passive voice, “to appear, be manifest,” is rendered “(that) they may be seen” in Matt. 6:5; “it was (never so) seen,” 9:33. See APPEAR.

Notes: (1) For ide and idou, regularly rendered “behold” in the RV, see BEHOLD, No. 4. (2) For optano, in Acts 1:3, KJV, “being seen,” see APPEAR, A, No. 7. (3) For historeo, in Gal. 1:18, KJV, “to see,” see VISIT. (4) For proorao, and proeidon, “to see before,” see FORESEE. (5) For “make ... see” see ENLIGHTEN.

B. Noun.

blemma (βλέμμα, 990), primarily, “a look, a glance” (akin to A, No. 1), denotes “sight,” 2 Pet. 2:8, rendered “seeing”; some interpret it as meaning “look”; Moulton and Milligan illustrate it thus from the papyri; it seems difficult, however to take the next word “hearing” (in the similar construction) in this way.¶

SEED

1. sperma (σπέρμα, 4690), akin to speiro, “to sow” (Eng., “sperm,” “spermatic,” etc.), has the following usages, (a) agricultural and botanical, e.g., Matt. 13:24, 27, 32 (for the KJV of vv. 19, 20, 22, 23, see SOW, as in the RV); 1 Cor. 15:38; 2 Cor. 9:10; (b) physiological, Heb. 11:11; (c) metaphorical and by metonymy for “offspring, posterity,” (1) of natural offspring, e.g., Matt. 22:24, 25, RV, “seed” (KJV, “issue”); John 7:42; 8:33, 37; Acts 3:25; Rom. 1:3; 4:13, 16, 18; 9:7 (twice), 8, 29; 11:1; 2 Cor. 11:22; Heb. 2:16; 11:18; Rev. 12:17; Gal. 3:16, 19, 29; in the 16th v., “He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ,” quoted from the Sept. of Gen. 13:15 and 17:7, 8, there is especial stress on the word “seed,” as referring to an individual (here, Christ) in fulfillment of the promises to Abraham—a unique use of the singular. While the plural form “seeds,” neither in Hebrew nor in Greek, would have been natural any more than in English (it is not so used in Scripture of human offspring; its plural occurrence is in 1 Sam. 8:15, of crops), yet if the divine intention had been to refer to Abraham’s natural descendants, another word could have been chosen in the plural, such as “children”; all such words were, however, set aside, “seed” being selected as one that could be used in the singular, with the purpose of showing that the “seed” was Messiah. Some of the rabbis had even regarded “seed,” e.g., in Gen. 4:25 and Isa. 53:10, as referring to the Coming One. Descendants were given to Abraham by other than natural means, so that through him Messiah might come, and the point of the apostle’s argument is that since the fulfillment of the promises of God is secured alone by Christ, they only who are “in Christ” can receive them; (2) of spiritual offspring, Rom. 4:16, 18; 9:8; here “the children of the promise are reckoned for a seed” points, firstly, to Isaac’s birth as being not according to the ordinary course of nature but by divine promise, and, secondly, by analogy, to the fact that all believers are children of God by spiritual birth; Gal. 3:29.

As to 1 John 3:9, “his seed abideth in him,” it is possible to understand this as meaning that children of God (His “seed”) abide in Him, and do not go on doing (practicing) sin (the verb “to commit” does not represent the original in this passage). Alternatively, the “seed” signifies the principle of spiritual life as imparted to the believer, which abides in him without possibility of removal or extinction; the child of God remains eternally related to Christ, he who lives in sin has never become so related, he has not the principle of life in him. This meaning suits the context and the general tenor of the Epistle.

2. sporos (σπόρος, 4703), akin to No. 1, properly “a sowing,” denotes “seed sown,” (a) natural, Mark 4:26, 27; Luke 8:5, 11 (the natural being figuratively applied to the Word of God); 2 Cor. 9:10 (1st part); (b) metaphorically of material help to the needy, 2 Cor. 9:10 (2nd part), RV, “(your) seed for sowing” (KJV, “seed sown”).¶

3. spora (σπορά, 4701), akin to No. 1, and like No. 2, “a sowing, seedtime,” denotes “seed sown,” 1 Pet. 1:23, of human offspring.¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 19:29.¶

For SEEING, SEEING THAT (conjunction), see †, p. 1

SEEK

1. zeteo (ζητέω, 2212) signifies (a) “to seek, to seek for,” e.g., Matt. 7:7, 8; 13:45; Luke 24:5; John 6:24; of plotting against a person’s life, Matt. 2:20; Acts 21:31; Rom. 11:3; metaphorically, to “seek” by thinking, to “seek” how to do something, or what to obtain, e.g., Mark 11:18; Luke 12:29; to “seek” to ascertain a meaning, John 16:19, “do ye inquire”; to “seek” God, Acts 17:27, RV; Rom. 10:20; (b) “to seek or strive after, endeavor, to desire,” e.g., Matt. 12:46, 47, RV, “seeking” (KJV, “desiring”); Luke 9:9, RV, “sought” (KJV, “desired”); John 7:19, RV, “seek ye” (KJV, “go ye about”); so v. 20; Rom. 10:3, RV, “seeking” (KV, “going about”); of “seeking” the kingdom of God and His righteousness, in the sense of coveting earnestly, striving after, Matt. 6:33; “the things that are above,” Col. 3:1; peace, 1 Pet. 3:11; (c) “to require or demand,” e.g., Mark 8:12; Luke 11:29 (some mss. have No. 4); 1 Cor. 4:2, “it is required”; 2 Cor. 13:3, “ye seek.”

See ABOUT, B, Note, DESIRE, B, Note (2), ENDEAVOR, GO, Note (2) (a), INQUIRE, REQUIRE.

2. anazeteo (ἀναζητέω, 327), “to seek carefully” (ana, “up,” used intensively, and No. 1), is used of searching for human beings, difficulty in the effort being implied Luke 2:44, 45 (some mss. have No. 1 in the latter v.), Acts 11:25; numerous illustrations of this particular meaning in the papyri are given by Moulton and Milligan.¶ In the Sept., Job 3:4; 10:6.¶

3. ekzeteo (ἐκζητέω, 1567) signifies (a) “to seek out (ek) or after, to search for”; e.g., God Rom. 3:11; the Lord, Acts 15:17; in Heb. 11:6, RV, “seek after” (KJV, “diligently seek”); 12:17, RV, “sought diligently” (KJV, “sought carefully”); 1 Pet. 1:10, RV, “sought” (KJV, “have inquired”), followed by exeraunao, “to search diligently”, (b) “to require or demand,” Luke 11:50, 51. See INQUIRE, Note (3), REQUIRE.¶

4. epizeteo (ἐπιζητέω, 1934), “to seek after” (directive, epi, “towards”) is always rendered in the RV, by some form of the verb “to seek,” Acts 13:7, “sought” (KJV, “desired”); 19:39, “seek” (KJV, “inquire”); Phil. 4:17, “seek for” (KJV, “desire”), twice; elsewhere, Matt. 6:32; 12:39; 16:4; Mark 8:12 (in some texts); Luke 12:30; Acts 12:19; Rom. 11:7; Heb. 11:14; 13:14. See DESIRE, INQUIRE.¶

5. orego (ὀρέγομαι, 3713), “to reach out, or after,” used in the middle voice is translated “seeketh” in 1 Tim. 3:1, RV, of “seeking overseership” (KJV, desireth). See DESIRE, No. 5.

Note: For the RV renderings of zeloo, in Gal. 4:17, 18, “they zealously seek,” “ye may seek,” “to be zealously sought,” see AFFECT, Note, and ZEALOUS.

SEEM

dokeo (δοκέω, 1380) denotes (a) “to be of opinion” (akin to doxa, “opinion”), e.g., Luke 8:18, RV, “thinketh” (KJV, “seemeth”); so 1 Cor. 3:18; to think, suppose, Jas. 1:26, RV, “thinketh himself (KJV, “seem”); see SUPPOSE, THINK; (b) “to seem, to be reputed,” e.g., Acts 17:18; 1 Cor. 11:16; 12:22; 2 Cor. 10:9; Heb. 4:1; 12:11; for Gal. 2:2, 6, 9, see REPUTE; (C) impersonally (1) to think (see THINK), (2) to “seem” good, Luke 1:3; Acts 15:22, RV, “it seemed good” (KJV, “it pleased”); 15:25, 28 (v. 34 in some mss.); in Heb. 12:10, the neuter of the present participle is used with the article, lit., “the (thing) seeming good,” RV, “(as) seemed good,” KJV, “after (their own) pleasure.” See ACCOUNT, No. 1.

Notes: In Matt. 11:26 and Luke 10:21, eudokia, “good pleasure, satisfaction” (eu, “well,” and dokeo), is used with ginomai, “to become,” and translated “it seemed good,” KJV (RV, “it was well-pleasing”). (2) In Luke 24:11, KJV, phaino, “to appear” (passive voice), is translated “seemed” (RV, “appeared”).

For SEEMLY, RV, see COMELY, B, and Note (2)

Note: In 1 Pet. 2:12, RV, kalos, “good, fair,” is rendered “seemly.”

SEIZE

1. sullambano (συνλαμβάνω, 4815), lit., “to take together” (sun, “with,” lambano, “to take or lay hold of”), chiefly signifies “to seize as a prisoner”; in the following the RV substitutes the more suitable and forceful verb, “to seize,” for KJV, “to take”: Matt. 26:55; Mark 14:48; Luke 22:54; John 18:12; Acts 12:3; 23:27; 26:21; in Acts 1:16, RV and KJV, “took.” See CATCH, No. 8, CONCEIVE, HELP.

2. sunarpazo (συναρπάζω, 4884) is translated “seized” in the RV of Luke 8:29; Acts 6:12; 19:29; see CATCH, No. 7.

Note: In Matt. 21:38, the best texts have echo, “to have” (“to take,” RV); some have katecho, “to lay hold of” (KJV, “seize on”).

SELF, SELVES

1. automatos (αὐτόματος, 844), “of oneself” (Eng., “automatic,” “automaton,” etc.), is used in Mark 4:28; Acts 12:10. See ACCORD, B, No. 2.¶

2. autos (αὐτός, 846), “he,” also means “self,” in the reflexive pronouns “myself, thyself, himself,” etc. (see, e.g., HE), expressing distinction, exclusion, etc.; it is usually emphatic in the nominative case, e.g., Luke 6:42; 11:4; John 18:28; Rom. 8:16, RV, “Himself.”

Note: In John 16:27, “the Father Himself (autos),” Field (Notes on the Translation of the NT) remarks that autos stands for automatos.

For SELF-CONDEMNED see CONDEMN, C, No. 1

SELF-CONTROL (without)

akrates (ἀκράτης, 193), “powerless” (a, negative, kratos, “strength”), is rendered “without self-control,” in 2 Tim. 3:3, RV; see INCONTINENT.¶

SELFSAME

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 5:5, KJV, auto touto, “this thing itself,” “this very thing,” RV, is rendered “the selfsame”; in 2 Cor. 7:11, RV and KJV, “this selfsame thing.” (2) In Matt. 8:13, KJV, ekeinos, with the article, “that,” RV, is rendered “that selfsame.” (3) In 1 Cor. 12:11, KJV, the article with autos, “the same,” RV, is rendered “the selfsame.”

SELF-WILLED

authades (αὐθάδης, 829), “self-pleasing” (autos, “self,” hedomai, “to please”), denotes one who, dominated by self-interest, and inconsiderate of others, arrogantly asserts his own will, “self-willed,” Titus 1:7; 2 Pet. 2:10 (the opposite of epieikes, “gentle,” e.g., 1 Tim. 3:3), “one so far overvaluing any determination at which he has himself once arrived that he will not be removed from it” (Trench, who compares and contrasts philautos, “loving self, selfish”; Syn. Sec.xciii).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:3, 7; Prov. 21:24.¶

SELL

1. poleo (πωλέω, 4453), “to exchange or barter, to sell,” is used in the latter sense in the NT, six times in Matthew, three in Mark, six in Luke; in John only in connection with the cleansing of the Temple by the Lord, 2:14, 16; in Acts only in connection with the disposing of property for distribution among the community of believers, 4:34, 37; 5:1; elsewhere, 1 Cor. 10:25; Rev. 13:17.

2. piprasko (πιπράσκω, 4097), from an earlier form, perao, “to carry across the sea for the purpose of selling or to export,” is used (a) literally, Matt. 13:46; 18:25; 26:9; Mark 14:5; John 12:5; Acts 2:45; 4:34; 5:4; (b) metaphorically, Rom. 7:14, “sold under sin,” i.e., as fully under the domination of sin as a slave is under his master; the statement evinces an utter dissatisfaction with such a condition; it expresses, not the condemnation of the unregenerate state, but the evil of bondage to a corrupt nature, involving the futility of making use of the Law as a means of deliverance.¶

3. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give up or back,” also means, in the middle voice, “to give up of one’s own will”; hence, “to sell”; it is so used in Peter’s question to Sapphira as to “selling” the land, Acts 5:8; of the act of Joseph’s brothers, 7:9; of Esau’s act in “selling” his birthright, Heb. 12:16.

Note: In Jas. 4:13, KJV, emporeuomai, “to trade” (RV), is rendered “buy and sell.”

For SELLER see PURPLE

SENATE

gerousia (γερουσία, 1087), “a council of elders” (from geron, “an old man,” a term which early assumed a political sense among the Greeks, the notion of age being merged in that of dignity), is used in Acts 5:21, apparently exegetically of the preceding word sunedrion, “council,” the Sanhedrin.¶

SEND

1. apostello (ἀποστέλλω, 649), lit., “to send forth” (apo, “from”), akin to apostolos, “an apostle,” denotes (a) “to send on service, or with a commission.” (1) of persons; Christ, sent by the Father, Matt. 10:40; 15:24; 21:37; Mark 9:37; 12:6; Luke 4:18, 43; 9:48; 10:16; John 3:17; 5:36, 38; 6:29, 57; 7:29; 8:42; 10:36; 11:42; 17:3, 8, 18 (1st part), 21, 23, 25; 20:21; Acts 3:20 (future); 3:26; 1 John 4:9, 10, 14; the Holy Spirit, Luke 24:49 (in some texts; see No. 3); 1 Pet. 1:12; Rev. 5:6; Moses, Acts 7:35; John the Baptist, John 1:6; 3:28; disciples and apostles, e.g., Matt. 10:16; Mark 11:1; Luke 22:8; John 4:38; 17:18 (2nd part); Acts 26:17; servants, e.g., Matt. 21:34; Luke 20:10; officers and officials, Mark 6:27; John 7:32; Acts 16:35; messengers, e.g., Acts 10:8, 17, 20; 15:27; evangelists, Rom. 10:15; angels, e.g., Matt. 24:31; Mark 13:27; Luke 1:19, 26; Heb. 1:14; Rev. 1:1; 22:6; demons, Mark 5:10; (2) of things, e.g., Matt. 21:3; Mark 4:29, RV, marg., “sendeth forth,” text, “putteth forth” (KJV, “... in”); Acts 10:36; 11:30; 28:28; (b) “to send away, dismiss,” e.g., Mark 8:26; 12:3; Luke 4:18, “to set (at liberty).” See Note below, No. 2.

2. pempo (πέμπω, 3992), “to send,” is used (a) of persons: Christ, by the Father, Luke 20:13; John 4:34; 5:23, 24, 30, 37; 6:38, 39, (40), 44; 7:16, 18, 28, 33; 8:16, 18, 26, 29; 9:4; 12:44, 45, 49; 13:20 (2nd part); 14:24; 15:21; 16:5; Rom. 8:3; the Holy Spirit, John 14:26; 15:26; 16:7; Elijah, Luke 4:26; John the Baptist, John 1:33; disciples and apostles, e.g., Matt. 11:2; John 20:21; servants, e.g., Luke 20:11, 12; officials, Matt. 14:10; messengers, e.g., Acts 10:5, 32, 33; 15:22, 25; 2 Cor. 9:3; Eph. 6:22; Phil. 2:19, 23, 25; 1 Thess. 3:2, 5; Titus 3:12; a prisoner, Acts 25:25, 27; potentates, by God, 1 Pet. 2:14; an angel, Rev. 22:16; demons, Mark 5:12; (b) of things, Acts 11:29; Phil. 4:16; 2 Thess. 2:11; Rev. 1:11; 11:10; 14:15, 18, RV, “send forth” (KJV, “thrust in”).

Notes: (1) Pempo is a more general term than apostello; apostello usually “suggests official or authoritative sending” (Thayer). A comparison of the usages mentioned above shows how nearly (in some cases practically quite) interchangeably they are used, and yet on close consideration the distinction just mentioned is discernible; in the Gospel of John, cf. pempo in 5:23, 24, 30, 37, apostello in 5:33, 36, 38; pempo in 6:38, 39, 44, apostello in 6:29, 57; the two are not used simply for the sake of variety of expression. Pempo is not used in the Lord’s prayer in ch. 17, whereas apostello is used six times.

(2) The “sending” of the Son by the Father was from the glory which He had with the Father into the world, by way of the Incarnation, not a “sending” out into the world after His birth, as if denoting His mission among and His manifestation to the people. “Hofmann, in support of his view that Jesus is called the Son of God only in virtue of His being born of man, vainly urges that the simple accusative after apostello also denotes what the Person is or becomes by being sent. What he states is true but only when the name of the object spoken of is chosen to correspond with the purposed mission, as e.g., in Mark 1:2; Luke 14:32; 19:14. We can no more say, ‘God sent Jesus that He should be His Son’ than we can render ‘he sent his servants,’ Matt. 21:34, in this manner. That the Sonship of Christ is anterior to His mission to the world ... is clear from John 16:28; cf. especially also the double accusative in 1 John 4:14, ‘the Father sent the Son the Savior of the world.’ The expression that Jesus is sent by God denotes the mission which He has to fulfill and the authority which backs Him” (Cremer, Lexicon of NT Greek).

3. exapostello (ἐξαποστέλλω, 1821) denotes (a) “to send forth”: of the Son by God the Father, Gal. 4:4; of the Holy Spirit, 4:6; Luke 24:49 in the best texts (some have No. 1); an angel, Acts 12:11; the ancestors of Israel, Acts 7:12; Paul to the Gentiles, 22:21; of the word of salvation, 13:26 (some mss. have No. 1); (b) “to send away,” Luke 1:53; 20:10, 11; Acts 9:30; 11:22; 17:14.¶

4. anapempo (ἀναπέμπω, 375) denotes (a) “to send up” (ana, “up,” and No. 2), to a higher authority, Luke 23:7, 15; Acts 25:21 (in the best texts; some have No. 2); this meaning is confirmed by examples from the papyri (Moulton and Milligan), by Deissmann (Bible Studies, p. 229); see also Field, Notes on the Trans. of the NT; (b) “to send back,” Luke 23:11; Philem. 12.¶

5. ekpempo (ἐκπέμπω, 1599) denotes “to send forth” (ek, “out of”), Acts 13:4, “being sent forth”; 17:10, “sent away.”¶

6. ballo (βάλλω, 906), “to cast, throw,” is translated “to send (peace)” in Matt. 10:34 (twice), (RV, marg., “cast”). See CAST.

7. ekballo (ἐκβάλλω, 1544), “to cast out,” or “send out,” is translated “sent out” in Mark 1:43, RV (KJV, “sent away”), and in KJV and RV in Jas. 2:25. See CAST, No. 5.

8. apoluo (ἀπολύω, 630), “to set free, to let go,” is translated “to send away” in Matt. 14:15, 22, 23; Mark 6:36, 45; 8:3, 9; Luke 8:38; Acts 13:3, where the “sending” is not that of commissioning, but of letting go, intimating that they would gladly have retained them (contrast ekpempo, the act of commissioning by the Holy Spirit in v. 4).

9. metapempo (μεταπέμπω, 3343), “to send after or for, fetch” (meta, “after”), is used only in the Acts; in the middle voice, translated “to send for” in 10:22, 29 (2nd part: passive voice in the 1st part); 20:1, RV only (some texts have proskaleo); 24:24, 26; 25:3; in 10:5 and 11:13, RV, fetch. See FETCH.¶

10. bruo (βρύω, 1032), “to be full to bursting,” was used of the earth in producing vegetation, of plants in putting forth buds; in Jas. 3:11 it is said of springs gushing with water, “(doth the fountain) send forth ...?”¶

11. sunapostello (συναποστέλλω, 4882), “to send along with,” is used in 2 Cor. 12:18.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 33:2, 12.¶

12. sunpempo (συμπέμπω, 4842), “to send along with,” is used in 2 Cor. 8:18, 22.¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 13:36, KJV, aphiemi, “to leave,” is translated “He sent ... away” (RV, “He left”); so in Mark 4:36, KJV, “they had sent away,” RV, “leaving.” (2) In Mark 6:46, apotassomai, “to take leave of” (RV) is translated “He had sent ... away.” (3) In John 13:16 apostolos is rendered “one (KJV, he) that is sent,” RV marg., “an apostle.” (4) Paristemi is rendered “send” in Matt. 26:53, RV

For SENSELESS see FOOLISH, No. 4

aistheterion (αἰσθητήριον, 145), “sense, the faculty of perception, the organ of sense” (akin to aisthanomai, “to perceive”), is used in Heb. 5:14, “senses,” the capacities for spiritual apprehension.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 4:19, “(I am pained ... in the) sensitive powers (of my heart).”¶

For SENSUAL see NATURAL, A, No. 2

SENTENCE

A. Nouns.

1. krima (κρίμα, 2917), “a judgment,” a decision passed on the faults of others, is used especially of God’s judgment upon men, and translated “sentence” in 2 Pet. 2:3, RV (KJV, judgment). See JUDGMENT, No. 2.

2. katadike (καταδικάζω, 2613), “a judicial sentence, condemnation,” is translated “sentence” in Acts 25:15, RV (KJV, “judgment”); some mss. have dike.¶

3. apokrima (ἀπόκριμα, 610) is translated “sentence” in 2 Cor. 1:9, KJV (RV, “answer”). See ANSWER, No. 2.¶

B. Verbs.

1. krino (κρίνω, 2919), “to judge, to adjudge,” is translated “(my) sentence is” in Acts 15:19, KJV, RV, “(my) judgment is,” lit., “I (ego, emphatic) judge,” introducing the substance or draft of a resolution. See JUDGE, B, No. 1.

2. epikrino (ἐπικρίνω, 1948), “to give sentence,” is used in Luke 23:24.¶

SEPARATE

A. Verbs.

1. aphorizo (ἀφορίζω, 873), “to mark off by bounds” (apo, “from,” horizo, “to determine”; horos, “a limit”), “to separate,” is used of “(a) the Divine action in setting men apart for the work of the gospel, Rom. 1:1; Gal. 1:15; (b) the Divine judgment upon men, Matt. 13:49; 25:32; (c) the separation of Christians from unbelievers, Acts 19:9; 2 Cor. 6:17; (d) the separation of believers by unbelievers, Luke 6:22; (e) the withdrawal of Christians from their brethren, Gal. 2:12. In (c) is described what the Christian must do, in (d) what he must be prepared to suffer, and in (e) what he must avoid.”¶*

2. chorizo (χωρίζω, 5563), “to put asunder, separate,” is translated “to separate” in Rom. 8:35, 39; in the middle voice, “to separate oneself, depart” (see DEPART); in the passive voice in Heb. 7:26, RV, “separated” (KJV, “separate”), the verb here relates to the resurrection of Christ, not, as KJV indicates, to the fact of His holiness in the days of His flesh; the list is progressive in this respect that the first three qualities apply to His sinlessness, the next to His resurrection, the last to His ascension. See PUT, No. 14.

3. apodiorizo (ἀποδιορίζω, 592), “to mark off” (apo, “from,” dia, “asunder,” horizo, “to limit”), hence denotes metaphorically to make “separations,” Jude 19, RV (KJV, “separate themselves”), of persons who make divisions (in contrast with v. 20); there is no pronoun in the original representing “themselves.”¶

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine. p. 83.

B. Preposition.

choris (χωρίς, 5565), “apart from, without” (cf. aneu, “without,” a rarer word than this), is translated “separate from” in Eph. 2:12 (KJV, without). See APART, BESIDE, WITHOUT.

For SEPARATIONS see No. 3, above

SEPULCHRE

1. taphos (τάφος, 5028), akin to thapto, “to bury,” originally “a burial,” then, “a place for burial, a tomb,” occurs in Matt. 23:27; v. 29, RV (KJV, “tombs”); 27:61, 64, 66; 28:1; metaphorically, Rom. 3:13.¶

2 and 3. mnema and mnemeion: see GRAVE.

SERGEANT (-S)

rhabdouchos (ῥαβδοῦχος, 4465), “a rod bearer” (rhabdos, “a rod,” echo, “to hold”), one who carries a staff of office, was, firstly, an umpire or judge, later, a Roman lictor, Acts 16:35, 38. The duty of these officials was to attend Roman magistrates to execute their orders, especially administering punishment by scourging or beheading; they carried as their sign of office the fascies (whence “Fascist”), a bundle of rods with an axe inserted. At Philippi they acted under the strategoi or pretors (see MAGISTRATE, No. 1.)¶

SERPENT

1. ophis (ὄφις, 3789): the characteristics of the “serpent” as alluded to in Scripture are mostly evil (though Matt. 10:16 refers to its caution in avoiding danger); its treachery, Gen. 49:17; 2 Cor. 11:3; its venom, Ps. 58:4; 1 Cor. 10:9; Rev. 9:19; its skulking, Job 26:13; its murderous proclivities, e.g., Ps. 58:4; Prov. 23:32; Eccl. 10:8, 11; Amos 5:19; Mark 16:18; Luke 10:19; the Lord used the word metaphorically of the scribes and Pharisees, Matt. 23:33 (cf. echidna, “viper,” in Matt. 3:7; 12:34). The general aspects of its evil character are intimated in the Lord’s rhetorical question in Matt. 7:10 and Luke 11:11. Its characteristics are concentrated in the archadversary of God and man, the Devil, metaphorically described as the serpent, 2 Cor. 11:3; Rev. 12:9, 14, 15; 20:2. The brazen “serpent” lifted up by Moses was symbolical of the means of salvation provided by God, in Christ and His vicarious death under the divine judgment upon sin, John 3:14. While the living “serpent” symbolizes sin in its origin, hatefulness, and deadly effect, the brazen “serpent” symbolized the bearing away of the curse and the judgment of sin; the metal was itself figurative of the righteousness of God’s judgment.¶

2. herpeton (ἑρπετόν, 2062), “a creeping thing” (from herpo, “to creep”), “a reptile,” is rendered “serpents” in Jas. 3:7, KJV (RV, “creeping things,” as elsewhere). See CREEP, B.

SERVANT

A. Nouns.

1. doulos (δοῦλος, 1401), an adjective, signifying “in bondage,” Rom. 6:19 (neuter plural, agreeing with mele, “members”), is used as a noun, and as the most common and general word for “servant,” frequently indicating subjection without the idea of bondage; it is used (a) of natural conditions, e.g., Matt. 8:9; 1 Cor. 7:21, 22 (1st part); Eph. 6:5;

Col. 4:1; 1 Tim. 6:1; frequently in the four Gospels; (b) metaphorically of spiritual, moral and ethical conditions: “servants” (1) of God, e.g., Acts 16:17; Titus 1:1; 1 Pet. 2:16; Rev. 7:3; 15:3; the perfect example being Christ Himself, Phil. 2:7; (2) of Christ, e.g., Rom. 1:1; 1 Cor. 7:22 (2nd part); Gal. 1:10; Eph. 6:6; Phil. 1:1; Col. 4:12; Jas. 1:1; 2 Pet. 1:1; Jude 1; (3) of sin, John 8:34 (RV, “bondservants”); Rom. 6:17, 20; (4) of corruption, 2 Pet. 2:19 (RV, “bondservants”); cf. the verb doulōo (see B). See BONDMAN.

2. diakonos (διάκονος, 1249), for which see DEACON and Note there on synonymous words, is translated “servant” or “servants” in Matt. 22:13 (RV marg., “ministers”); 23:11 (RV marg., ditto); Mark 9:35, KJV (RV, “minister”); John 2:5, 9; 12:26; Rom. 16:1.

3. pais (παῖς, 3816), for which see CHILD, No. 4, also denotes “an attendant”; it is translated “servant” (a) of natural conditions, in Matt. 8:6, 8, 13; 14:2; Luke 7:7 (“menservants” in 12:45); 15:26; (b) of spiritual relation to God, (1) of Israel, Luke 1:54; (2) of David, Luke 1:69; Acts 4:25; (3) of Christ, so declared by God the Father, Matt. 12:18; spoken of in prayer, Acts 4:27, 30, RV (KJV, “child”); the argument advanced by Dalman for the rendering “Child” in these passages, is not sufficiently valid as against the RV, “Servant” in Acts 4, and the KJV and RV in Matt. 12 (cf, e.g., the use of pais in the Sept. of Gen. 41:38; Jer. 36:24). The Matt. 12 passage by direct quotation, and the Acts 4 passages by implication, refer to the ideal “Servant of Jehovah” (Sept., pais Kuriou), of Isa. 42:1 and following passages, thus identifying the Servant with the Lord Jesus; for the same identification, cf. Acts 8:35.

4. oiketes (οἰκέτης, 3610), “a house servant” (oikeo, “to dwell,” oikos, “a house”), is translated “servant” in Luke 16:13 (RV marg., “household servant”); so Rom. 14:4 and 1 Pet. 2:18; in Acts 10:7, KJV and RV, “household servants.”¶

5. huperetes (ὑπηρετής, 5257), for which see MINISTER, No. 3, and OFFICER, is translated “servants” in the KJV of Matt. 26:58; Mark 14:65 (RV, “officers”); in John 18:36, KJV and RV (RV, marg., “officers”).

6. therapon (θεράπων, 2324), akin to therapeuo, “to serve, to heal, an attendant, servant,” is a term of dignity and freedom, used of Moses in Heb. 3:5.¶

7. sundoulos (σύνδουλος, 4889), “a fellow servant,” is used (a) of natural conditions, Matt. 18:28, 29, 31, 33; 24:49; (b) of “servants” of the same divine Lord, Col. 1:7; 4:7; Rev. 6:11; of angels, Rev. 19:10; 22:9.¶

Note: For misthios and misthotos, see HIRED SERVANT.

B. Verb.

doulōo (δουλόω, 1402), “to enslave, to bring into bondage” (akin to A, No. 1), e.g., 1 Cor. 9:19, RV, “I brought (myself) under bondage (to all),” KJV, “I made myself servant,” denotes in the passive voice, “to be brought into bondage, to become a slave or servant,” rendered “ye became servants (of righteousness)” in Rom. 6:18; “being ... become servants (to God),” v. 22. See BONDAGE, B, No. 2.

SERVE

1. diakoneo (διακονέω, 1247), “to minister” (akin to diakonos, No. 2, above), “to render any kind of service,” is translated “to serve,” e.g., in Luke 10:40; 12:37; 17:8; 22:26, 27 (twice); see MINISTER, B, No. 1.

2. douleuo (δουλεύω, 1398), “to serve as a doulos” (No. 1, above), is used (a) of serving God (and the impossibility of serving mammon also), Matt. 6:24 and Luke 16:13; Rom. 7:6; in the gospel, Phil. 2:22; (b) Christ, Acts 20:19; Rom. 12:11; 14:18; 16:18; Eph. 6:7; Col. 3:24; (c) the law of God, Rom. 7:25; (d) one another, Gal. 5:13, RV, “be servants to” (KJV, “serve”); (e) a father, Luke 15:29 (with a suggestion of acting as a slave); (f) earthly masters, Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; 1 Tim. 6:2, RV, “serve”; (g) the younger by the elder, Rom. 9:12; (h) of being in bondage to a nation, Acts 7:7; Gal. 4:25, to the Romans, actually, though also spiritually to Judaizers; (i) to idols, Gal. 4:8, RV, “were in bondage” (KJV, “did service”); (j) to “the weak and beggarly rudiments,” v. 9 (RV), “to be in bondage” (aorist tense in the best texts, suggesting “to enter into bondage”), i.e., to the religion of the Gentiles (“rudiments” being used in v. 3 of the religion of the Jews); (k) sin, Rom. 6:6, RV, “be in bondage” (KJV, “serve”); (l) “divers lusts and pleasures,” Titus 3:3; (m) negatively, to any man—a proud and thoughtless denial by the Jews, John 8:33.¶

3. latreuo (λατρεύω, 3000), primarily “to work for hire” (akin to latris, “a hired servant”), signifies (1) to worship, (2) to “serve”; in the latter sense it is used of service (a) to God, Matt. 4:10; Luke 1:74 (“without fear”); 4:8; Acts 7:7; 24:14, RV, “serve” (KJV, “worship”); 26:7; 27:23; Rom. 1:9 (“with my spirit”); 2 Tim. 1:3; Heb. 9:14; 12:28, KJV, “we may serve,” RV, “we may offer service”; Rev. 7:15; (b) to God and Christ (“the Lamb”), Rev. 22:3; (c) in the tabernacle, Heb. 8:5, RV; 13:10; (d) to “the host of heaven,” Acts 7:42, RV, “to serve” (KJV, “to worship”); (e) to “the creature,” instead of the Creator, Rom. 1:25, of idolatry: see WORSHIP.

Note: In Luke 2:37 the RV has “worshiping,” for KJV, “served”; in Heb. 9:9, “the worshiper,” for KJV, “that did the service.”

4. hupereteo (ὑπηρετέω, 5256), for which see MINISTER, B, No. 3, is translated “to serve” in Acts 13:36; there is a contrast intimated between the service of David, lasting for only a generation, and the eternal character of Christ’s ministry as the One who not having seen corruption was raised from the dead.

SERVICE, SERVING

1. diakonia (διακονία, 1248) is rendered “service” in Rom. 15:31, KJV; “serving” in Luke 10:40. See MINISTRY, A, No. 1.

2. leitourgia (λειτουργία, 3009) is rendered “service” in 2 Cor. 9:12; Phil. 2:17, 30. See MINISTRY, A, No. 2.

3. latreia (λατρεία, 2999), akin to latreuo (see No. 3, above), primarily “hired service,” is used (a) of the “service” of God in connection with the tabernacle, Rom. 9:4; Heb. 9:1, “divine service”; v. 6, plural, RV, “services” (KJV, “service”, and, in italics, “of God”); (b) of the intelligent “service” of believers in presenting their bodies to God, a living sacrifice, Rom. 12:1, RV marg., “worship”; (c) of imagined “service” to God by persecutors of Christ’s followers, John 16:2.¶

Note: For “soldier on service,” 2 Tim. 2:3, RV, see SOLDIER, B.

SET

A. Verbs.

1. histemi (ἵστημι, 2476), “to cause to stand,” is translated “to set” in Matt. 4:5 (aorist tense in the best texts; some have the present, as in KJV); 18:2; 25:33; Mark 9:36; Luke 4:9; 9:47; John 8:3; Acts 4:7; 5:27; 6:6; v. 13, “set up”; 22:30; in Jude 24, RV, “to set” (KJV, “to present”). See ABIDE, No. 10.

2. kathistemi (καθίστημι, 2525), lit., “to set down” (kata, “down,” and No. 1), “to appoint, constitute,” is translated “to set” in Matt. 24:45, 47; 25:21, 23, RV (KJV, “made”); so Luke 12:42, 44; it is found in some mss. in Heb. 2:7, and translated “set over” (KJV). See APPOINT, No. 2.

3. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put, to place,” is translated “to set” in Acts 1:7, of times and seasons (KJV, “put”); Acts 13:47; Rev. 10:2; “setteth on” (of wine) in John 2:10, RV (KJV, “doth set forth”); in the KJV of Mark 4:21 (2nd part) and in Luke 8:16 it is rendered “set” (RV, “put”), of a lamp (some texts have No. 6 in both). In Mark 4:30 it is used of “setting” forth by parable the teaching concerning the kingdom of God, RV, “shall we set (it) forth” (KJV, “compare”). See APPOINT, No. 3.

4. paratithemi (παράτιθημι, 3908), “to place beside” (para, “beside,” and No. 3), “to set forth,” of a parable, Matt. 13:24, RV (KJV, “put forth”); “to set before,” of food, Mark 6:41; 8:6 (twice), 7; Luke 9:16; 10:8; 11:6; Acts 16:34; 1 Cor. 10:27. See ALLEGE, No. 1, PUT, No. 3.

5. peritithemi (περιτίθημι, 4060), “to place or put around” (peri, “around,” and No. 3), is translated “to set about” (of a hedge) in Mark 12:1. See BESTOW, No. 5, PUT.

6. epitithemi (ἐπιτίθημι, 2007), “to put, set or lay upon,” is used of the placing over the head of Christ on the cross “His accusation,” Matt. 27:37, “set up”; of attacking a person, Acts 18:10, “shall set on.” See ADD, No. 1.

7. protithemi (προτίθεμαι, 4388), “to set before” (pro, “before,” and No. 3), is used in the middle voice, translated “set forth,” of Christ, in Rom. 3:25 (RV marg., “purposed”). See PURPOSE, B, No. 3.

8. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is translated “I have set before” in Rev. 3:8 (RV marg., “given”). See GIVE.

9. kathizo (καθίζω, 2523), used transitively, signifies “to cause to sit down, set, appoint,” translated “to set” in Acts 2:30, RV (KJV, incorrectly, “to sit”); in 1 Cor. 6:4, of appointing, i.e., obtaining the services of, judges in lawcourts; in Eph. 1:20, RV, “made (Him) to sit” (KJV, “set”).

Note: In Heb. 8:1, kathizo is used intransitively, RV, “sat down” (KJV, “is set”); so in 12:2, RV, “hath sat down” (KJV, “is set down”); Rev. 3:21, RV, “I ... sat down” (KJV, “am set down”). So epikathizo in Matt. 21:7 (last part), RV, “He sat” [some mss. have the plural in a transitive sense, KJV, “they set (Him)”.] See SIT, No. 8.

10. tasso (τάσσω, 5021), “to arrange, assign, order,” is translated “set (under authority)” in Luke 7:8. In 1 Cor. 16:15, RV, “have set (themselves),” KJV, “addicted.” See APPOINT, No. 5.

11. anatassomai (ἀνατάσσομαι, 392), “to arrange in order, draw up in order” (ana, “up,” and the middle voice of No. 10), occurs in Luke 1:1, KJV, “to set forth in order,” RV, “to draw up. See DRAW, No. 9.¶

12. duno (δύνω, 1416), “to sink into,” is used of the “setting” of the sun, Mark 1:32, “did set”; Luke 4:40, “was setting.” The sun, moon and stars were conceived of as sinking into the sea when they set.¶

13. sunallasso (σύν, 4862, σύν, 236), “to reconcile” (sun, “together,” allasso, “to change or exchange”), is translated “he ... would have set (them at one, lit., ‘into peace’) again” in Acts 7:26 (the imperfect tense being conative, expressing an attempt); some mss. have sunelauno, “to drive together, force together.”¶

14. katangello (καταγγέλλω, 2605), “to declare, proclaim,” is translated “set forth” in Acts 16:21, RV (KJV, “teach”); “set I forth” in Acts 17:23, RV (KJV, “declare I”). See DECLARE, No. 4.

15. enecho (ἐνέχω, 1758), “to hold in,” has a secondary significance of “setting oneself against a person,” “being urgent against,” Mark 6:19; Luke 11:53 (RV, marg.). See ENTANGLE, No. 3, QUARREL, URGE.

16. propempro (προπέμπω, 4311), lit., “to send forward” (pro, “forward,” pempro, “to send”), is translated “set forward” in Titus 3:13, RV (KJV, “bring”) and in 3 John 6, RV (KJV, “bring forward”), of practical assistance to servants of God in their journeys. See ACCOMPANY, No. 4.

17. apodeiknumi (ἀποδείκνυμι, 584), “to show forth, declare,” is translated “set forth” in 1 Cor. 4:9, here, a technical term, used for exhibiting gladiators in an arena, “last of all” referring to the grand finale, to make the most thrilling sport for the spectators (cf. 15:32); prophets and others had preceded the apostles in the spectacle; in 2 Thess. 2:4 it is used of the man of sin, who will “set (himself) forth (as God),” KJV, “showing.” Elsewhere Acts 2:22; 25:7. See APPROVE, PROVE.¶ The word is frequently used in the papyri of the proclamation of the accession of a king or the appointment of an official. Cf. apodeixis, “demonstration,” 1 Cor. 2:4.¶

18. epibibazo (ἐπιβιβάζω, 1913), “to place upon,” is used of causing persons to mount animals for riding, Luke 10:34; 19:35; Acts 23:24.¶

19. sterizo (στηρίζω, 4741), “to fix, establish,” is rendered “He steadfastly set (His face)” in Luke 9:51. See ESTABLISH, No. 1.

20. anorthoo (ἀνορθόω, 461), “to set straight, set up” (ana, “up,” orthos, “straight”), is used in Acts 15:16 in God’s promise to “set” up the fallen tabernacle (skene, “tent”) of David. The word is used in the papyri of rearing buildings again. See LIFT, No. 6, STRAIGHT.

21. keimai (κείμεαι, 2749), “to lie, to be laid” (used as the passive voice of tithemi, No. 3), is translated “to be set,” e.g., in Matt. 5:14 (of a city); Luke 2:34 (of Christ); John 2:6 (of waterpots); 19:29 (of a vessel of vinegar); Phil. 1:16, RV (v. 17, KJV) (of the apostle Paul); Rev. 4:2 (of the throne in heaven). See APPOINT, LAY, LIE.

22. anakeimai (ἀνακείμεναι, 345), “to be laid up” (ana “up”), “to recline at a meal,” is so used in John 6:11, “(to them) that were set down. See LEAN, LIE, Note (1), SIT, No. 3.

23. prokeimai (πρόκειμαι, 4295) signifies (a) “to be set before” (pro, “before,” and No. 21), and is so rendered in Heb. 6:18 of the hope of the believer; 12:1, of the Christian race; v. 2, of the joy “set” before Christ in the days of His flesh and at His death; (b) “to be set forth,” said of Sodom and Gomorrah, in Jude 7. It is used elsewhere in 2 Cor. 8:12, for which see FIRST, D, Note (2).¶

24. prographo (προγράφω, 4270), “to write before,” is translated “were set forth (unto this condemnation)” in Jude 4, RV (KJV, “ordained”); the evil teachers were “designated of old for this judgment” (cf. 2 Pet. 2:3). For the meaning of this verb in Gal. 3:1, RV, “openly set forth,” see OPENLY, No. 2, Note. See WRITE.

B. Adjective.

taktos (τακτός, 5002), an adjective (from tasso, A, No. 10), “ordered, fixed, set,” is said of an appointed day, in Acts 12:21.¶ In the Sept., Job 12:5.¶

Notes: (1) For “to set at liberty” (apoluo and apostello), see LIBERTY. (2) In Acts 21:2, KJV, anago, “to set sail” (RV), is translated “set forth”; see LAUNCH. (3) In Luke 22:55, KJV, sunkathizo, “to sit down together” (RV), is translated “were set down together.” See SIT, No. 10. (4) For Acts 7:5, “to set his foot on,” see FOOT, A, No. 1, Note. (5) In Acts 13:9, KJV, atenizo, “to look fixedly, gaze,” is rendered “set his eyes on” (RV, “fastened his eyes on”). See FASTEN, No. 1. (6) In Matt. 27:19, KJV, kathemai, “to sit,” is rendered “he was set down” (RV, “he was sitting”). See SIT, No. 1. (7) In John 13:12, (KJV, anapipto, “to recline at table,” is translated “was set down” (RV, “sat down”; marg., “reclined”). See RECLINE. (8) In Matt. 27:66 there is no word in the Greek representing the KJV “setting”; the RV has “the guard being with them,” lit., “with (meta) the guard.” (9) The verb is combined with other words, e.g., AFFECTION, FIRE, MIND, NOUGHT, ORDER, SEAL, UPROAR, VARIANCE.

SETTER FORTH

katangeleus (καταγγελεύς, 2604), “a proclaimer, herald” (akin to katangelo, “to proclaim”), is used in Acts 17:18, “a setter forth (of strange gods).” It is found in inscriptions in connection with proclamations made in public places.¶

SETTLE

tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put, place,” is translated “settle (it therefore in your hearts)” in Luke 21:14, active voice in the best texts (some have the middle), the aorist tense signifying complete decision, i.e., “resolve” (not “consider”); cf. Acts 5:4, “to conceive in the heart,” and contrast Luke 1:66, “to lay up” (both have aorist tense, middle voice). See APPOINT, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In 1 Pet. 5:10, some texts have themelioo, “to lay a foundation,” used metaphorically, and translated “settle,” KJV. (2) In Col. 1:23, KJV, hedraios, lit., “seated”

(hedra, “a seat”), is translated “settled” (RV, “steadfast”). (3) For epiluo see DETERMINE, No. 4.

SEVEN

hepta (ἑπτά, 2033), whence Eng. words beginning with “hept”—, corresponds to the Heb. sheba (which is akin to saba, signifying “to be full, abundant”), sometimes used as an expression of fullness, e.g., Ruth 4:15: it generally expresses completeness, and is used most frequently in the Apocalypse; it is not found in the Gospel of John, nor between the Acts and the Apocalypse, except in Heb. 11:30 (in Rom. 11:4 the numeral is heptakischilioi, “seven thousand”); in Matt. 22:26 it is translated “seventh” (marg., “seven”).

Note: In 2 Pet. 2:5, RV, “Noah with seven others” is a translation into idiomatic English of the Greek idiom “Noah the eighth person” (so KJV, translating literally). See EIGHTH.

SEVENTH

hebdomos (ἑβδομος, 1442) occurs in John 4:52; Heb. 4:4 (twice); Jude 14; Rev. 8:1; 10:7; 11:15; 16:17; 21:20.¶

SEVEN TIMES

heptakis (ἑπτακίς, 2034) occurs in Matt. 18:21, 22; Luke 17:4 (twice).¶

SEVENTY

hebdomekonta (ἑβδομήκοντα, 1440) occurs in Luke 10:1, 17; in Acts 7:14 it precedes pente, “five,” lit., “seventy-five,” rendered “threescore and fifteen”; for the details see FIFTEEN, Note (1); in 23:23 it is translated “threescore and ten”; in 27:37 it precedes hex, “six,” lit., “seventy-six,” rendered “threescore and sixteen.”¶

SEVENTY TIMES

hebdomekontakis (ἑβδομηκοντακίς, 1441) occurs in Matt. 18:22, where it is followed by hepta, “seven,” “seventy times seven”; RV marg. has “seventy times and seven,” which many have regarded as the meaning; cf. Gen. 4:24 (Winer, in Winer-Moulton, Gram., p. 314, remarks that while this would be the strict meaning, it “would not suit the passage”; his translator, W. F. Moulton, in a footnote, expresses the opinion that it would. So also J. H. Moulton, Prol., p. 98, says: “A definite allusion to the Genesis story is highly probable: Jesus pointedly sets against the natural man’s craving for seventy-sevenfold revenge the spiritual man’s ambition to exercise the privilege of seventy-sevenfold forgiveness”).

The Lord’s reply “until seventy times seven” was indicative of completeness, the absence of any limit, and was designed to turn away Peter’s mind from a merely numerical standard. God’s forgiveness is limitless; so should man’s be.¶

SEVER

1. katargeo (καταργέω, 2673), lit., “to reduce to inactivity” (see ABOLISH, where all the occurrences are given), is rendered “ye are severed (from Christ)” in Gal. 5:4, RV; the aorist tense indicates that point of time at which there was an acceptance of the Judaistic doctrines; to those who accepted these Christ would be of no profit, they were as branches severed from the tree.

2. aphorizo (ἀφορίζω, 873), “to separate from,” is used of the work of the angels at the end of this age, in “severing” the wicked from among the righteous, Matt. 13:49, a premillennial act quite distinct from the rapture of the Church as set forth in 1 Thess. 4. See DIVIDE, No. 1.

SEVERAL

idios (ἴδιος, 2398), “one’s own,” is translated “several (ability),” in Matt. 25:15.

Note: For Rev. 21:21, “the several gates,” RV, see EVERY, No. 3.

SEVERALLY

idia (ἴδιος, 2398**), the dative case, feminine, of idios (see above), is used adverbially, signifying “severally,” in 1 Cor. 12:11.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 12:5, kata (kath) followed by the numeral heis, “one,” and preceded by the article, signifies “severally,” RV (KJV, “every one”). Cf. EVERY, Note (1). (2) In 1 Cor. 12:27, RV, the phrase ek merous, lit., “out of a part” (meros), is rendered “severally” (KJV, “in particular”). (3) In Heb. 9:5, RV, the phrase kata meros, lit., “according to a part,” is rendered “severally.” (4) For Eph. 5:33, RV, “severally,” see EVERY, No. 3.

SEVERITY

1. apotomia (ἀποτομία, 663), “steepness, sharpness” (apo, “off,” temno, “to cut”; tome, “a cutting”), is used metaphorically in Rom. 11:22 (twice) of “the severity of God,” which lies in His temporary retributive dealings with Israel.¶ In the papyri it is used of exacting to the full the provisions of a statute. Cf. the adverb apotomos, “sharply” (which see).

2. apheidia (ἀφειδία, 857), primarily “extravagance” (a, negative, pheidomai, “to spare”), hence, “unsparing treatment, severity,” is used in Col. 2:23, RV, “severity (to the body),” KJV, “neglecting of” (marg., “punishing, not sparing”); here it refers to ascetic discipline; it was often used among the Greeks of courageous exposure to hardship and danger.¶

epirapto or epirrhapto (ἐπιρράπτω, 1976) (epi, “upon,” rhapto, “to sew or stitch”), is used in Mark 2:21.¶

SHADOW (Noun)

1. skia (σκία, 4639) is used (a) of “a shadow,” caused by the interception of light, Mark 4:32; Acts 5:15; metaphorically of the darkness and spiritual death of ignorance, Matt. 4:16; Luke 1:79; (b) of “the image” or “outline” cast by an object, Col. 2:17, of ceremonies under the Law; of the tabernacle and its appurtenances and offerings, Heb. 8:5; of these as appointed under the Law, Heb. 10:1.¶

2. aposkiasma (ἀποσκίασμα, 644), “a shadow,” is rendered “shadow that is cast” in Jas. 1:17, RV; the KJV makes no distinction between this and No. 1. The probable significance of this word is “overshadowing” or “shadowing-over” (which apo may indicate), and this with the genitive case of trope, “turning,” yields the meaning “shadowing-over of mutability” implying an alternation of “shadow” and light; of this there are two alternative explanations, namely, “overshadowing” (1) not caused by mutability in God, or (2) caused by change in others, i.e., “no changes in this lower world can cast a shadow on the unchanging Fount of light” [Mayor, who further remarks, “The meaning of the passage will then be, ‘God is alike incapable of change (parallage) and incapable of being changed by the action of others’”].

For SHADOWING, Heb. 9:5, KJV, see OVERSHADOW SHAKE

1. saleuo (σαλεύω, 4531), “to agitate, shake,” primarily of the action of stormy winds, waves, etc., is used (a) literally, of a reed, Matt. 11:7; Luke 7:24; a vessel, “shaken” in filling, Luke 6:38; a building, Luke 6:48; Acts 4:31; 16:26; the natural forces of the heavens and heavenly bodies, Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:25; Luke 21:26; the earth, Heb. 12:26, “shook”; (b) metaphorically, (1) of “shaking” so as to make insecure, Heb. 12:27 (twice); (2) of casting down from a sense of security, Acts 2:25, “I should (not) be moved”; (3) to stir up (a crowd), Acts 17:13; (4) to unsettle, 2 Thess. 2:2, “(to the end that) ye be not (quickly) shaken (from your mind),” i.e., from their settled conviction and the purpose of heart begotten by it, as to the return of Christ before the Day of the Lord begins; the metaphor may be taken from the loosening of a ship from its moorings by a storm. See MOVE, STIR.¶

2. seio (σείω, 4579), “to shake to and fro,” is rendered “to shake” in Matt. 28:4, KJV; Heb. 12:26, KJV; Rev. 6:13, KJV and RV; see MOVE, No. 3.

3. apotinasso (ἀποτινάσσω, 660), “to shake off” (apo, “from,” tinasso, “to shake”), is used in Luke 9:5, of dust from the feet; Acts 28:5, of a viper from the hand.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 16:20; 1 Sam. 10:2; Lam. 2:7.¶

4. ektinasso (ἐκτινάσσω, 1621), “to shake out,” is used of “shaking off” the dust from the feet, Matt. 10:14; Mark 6:11; Acts 13:51; of “shaking out” one’s raiment, Acts 18:6.¶

SHALL

mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about (to be or do),” is used of purpose, certainty, compulsion or necessity. It is rendered simply by “shall” or “should” (which frequently represent elsewhere part of the future tense of the verb) in the following (the RV sometimes translates differently, as noted): Matt. 16:27 (1st part), lit., “is about to come”; 17:12, 22; 20:22, RV, “am about”; 24:6; Mark 13:4 (2nd part), RV, “are about”; Luke 9:44; 21:7 (2nd part), RV, “are about”; v. 36; Acts 23:3; 24:15; 26:2, RV, “I am (to)”; Rom. 4:24; 8:13 (1st part), RV, “must”; v. 18; 2 Tim. 4:1; Heb. 1:14; 10:27; Jas. 2:12, RV “are to”; 1 Pet. 5:1; Rev. 1:19; 2:10 (1st and 2nd parts), RV, “art about,” “is about”; 3:10, RV, “is (to)”; 17:8 (1st part), RV, “is about.” See ABOUT, B.

Notes: (1) The use of “shall, shalt,” is frequently part of the rendering of a future tense of a verb. (2) The phrase “it shall come to pass” is the rendering of the future tense of eimi, “to be,” in Acts 2:17, 21; 3:23; Rom. 9:26.

SHAMBLES

makellon (μάκελλον, 3111), a term of late Greek borrowed from the Latin macellum, denotes a “meat market,” translated “shambles” in 1 Cor. 10:25. The word is found in the koine, or vernacular Greek covering the time of the NT, illustrating this passage (see Deissmann, Light from the Ancient East, 274). A plan, drawn by Lietzmann, of a forum in Pompeii, shows both the slaughterhouse and the meat shop next to the chapel of Caesar. Some of the meat which had been used for sacrificial purposes was afterwards sold in the markets. The apostle enjoins upon the believer to enter into no inquiry, so as to avoid the troubling of conscience (contrast v. 28).¶

SHAME (Noun, and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. atimia (ἀτιμία, 819) signifies (a) “shame, disgrace,” Rom. 1:26, “vile (passions),” RV, lit., “(passions) of shame”; 1 Cor. 11:14; (b) “dishonor,” e.g., 2 Tim. 2:20, where the idea of disgrace or “shame” does not attach to the use of the word; the meaning is that while in a great house some vessels are designed for purposes of honor, others have no particular honor (time) attached to their use (the prefix a simply negatives the idea of honor). See DISHONOR.

2. aischune (αἰσχύνη, 152): See ASHAMED, B, No. 1.

3. entrope (ἐντροπή, 1791), 1 Cor. 6:5 and 15:34. See ASHAMED, B, No. 2.¶

4. aschomosune (ἀσχημοσύνη, 808) denotes (a) “unseemliness,” Rom. 1:27, RV (KV, “that which is unseemly”); (b) “shame, nakedness,” Rev. 16:15, a euphemism for No. 2.¶

B. Adjective.

aischros (αἰσχρός, 150), “base, shameful” (akin to aischos, “shame”), of that which is opposed to modesty or purity, is translated as a noun in 1 Cor. 11:6; 14:35, KJV (RV, “shameful”); Eph. 5:12; in Titus 1:11, “filthy (lucre),” lit., “shameful (gain).” See FILTHY.¶

C. Verbs.

1. atimazo (ἀτιμάζω, 818), “to dishonor, put to shame (akin to A, No. 1): see DISHONOR, C, No. 1.

2. entrepo (ἐντρέπω, 1788), lit., “to turn in upon, to put to shame” (akin to A, No. 3), is translated “to shame (you)” in 1 Cor. 4:14. See ASHAMED, A, No. 4.

3. kataischuno (καταισχύνω, 2617), “to put to shame” (kata, perhaps signifying “utterly”), is translated “ye ... shame (them)” in 1 Cor. 11:22, KJV, RV, “ye ... put (them) to shame.” See ASHAMED, A, No. 3.

4. paradeigmatizo (παραδειγματίζω, 3856) signifies “to set forth as an example” (para, “beside,” deiknumi, “to show”), and is used in Heb. 6:6 of those Jews, who, though attracted to, and closely associated with, the Christian faith, without having experienced more than a tasting of the heavenly gift and partaking of the Holy Ghost (not actually receiving Him), were tempted to apostatize to Judaism, and, thereby crucifying the Son of God a second time, would “put Him to an open shame.” So were criminals exposed.¶ In the Sept., Num. 25:4; Jer. 13:22; Ezek. 28:17.¶

SHAMEFASTNESS (KJV, SHAMEFACEDNESS)

aidos (αἰδώς, 127), “a sense of shame, modesty,” is used regarding the demeanor of women in the church, 1 Tim. 2:9 (some mss. have it in Heb. 12:28 for deos, “awe”: here only in NT). “Shamefastness is that modesty which is ‘fast’ or rooted in the character ... The change to ‘shamefacedness’ is the more to be regretted because shamefacedness ... has come rather to describe an awkward diffidence, such as we sometimes call sheepishness” (Davies; Bible English, p. 12).

As to aidos and aischune (see ASHAMED, B, No. 1), aidos is more objective, having regard to others; it is the stronger word. “Aidos would always restrain a good man from an unworthy act, aischune would sometimes restrain a bad one” (Trench, Syn. Sec.xix, xx).

SHAMEFULLY (ENTREAT)

Note: This forms part of the rendering of (a) atimazo, Mark 12:4, Luke 20:11, see DISHONOR, C, No. 1, ENTREAT, Note, HANDLE, No. 4; (b) hubrizo, “to insult,” Acts 14:5, RV; 1 Thess. 2:2, “were (RV, having been) shamefully entreated.” See SPITEFULLY.

SHAPE

1. eidos (εἶδος, 1491), rendered “shape” in the KJV of Luke 3:22 and John 5:37: see FORM, No. 4.

2. homoïoma (ὁμοίωμα, 3667), rendered “shapes” in Rev. 9:7: see LIKENESS, No. 1. For SHARERS (Heb. 2:14) see PARTAKE, B, No. 1.

SHARP, SHARPER, SHARPLY, SHARPNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. oxus (ὀξύς, 3691) denotes (a) “sharp” (Eng., “oxy—,” said of a sword, Rev. 1:16; 2:12; 19:15; of a sickle, 14:14, 17, 18 (twice); (b) of motion, “swift,” Rom. 3:15. See SWIFT.¶

2. tomos (τομώτερος, 5114*), akin to temno, “to cut” [Eng., “(ana)tomy,” etc.], is used metaphorically in the comparative degree, tomoteros, in Heb. 4:12, of the Word of God.

B. Adverb.

apotomos (ἀποτόμως, 664) signifies “abruptly, curtly,” lit., “in a manner that cuts” (apo, “from,” temno, “to cut,” hence “sharply, severely,” 2 Cor. 13:10, RV, “(that I may not ... deal) sharply,” KJV, “(use) sharpness”; the pronoun “you” is to be understood, i.e., “that I may not use (or deal with) ... sharply”; Titus 1:13, of rebuking.¶ Cf. apotomia, “severity.”

SHAVE

xurao (ξυράω, 3587), a late form of xureo, or xuro, from xuron, “a razor,” occurs in Acts 21:24 (middle voice), in connection with a vow (Num. 6:2-18; cf. Acts 18:18: see SHEAR); 1 Cor. 11:5, 6 (2nd part in each).¶

SHE

Note: The words under HE in their feminine forms are used for this pronoun.

SHEAR, SHEARER, SHORN

keiro (κείρω, 2751) is used (a) of “shearing sheep,” Acts 8:32, “shearer,” lit., “the (one) shearing”: (b) in the middle voice, “to have one’s hair cut off, be shorn,” Acts 18:18; 1 Cor. 11:6 (twice; cf. xurao, “to shave”; see above).¶

SHEATH

theke (θήκη, 2336), “a place to put something in” (akin to tithemi, “to put”), “a receptacle, chest, case,” is used of the “sheath” of a sword, John 18:11.¶

SHED

1. ekcheo (ἐκχέω, 1632), “to pour out,” is translated “to shed” or “to shed forth” in Acts 2:33; Titus 3:6, KJV; of “shedding” blood in murder, Rom. 3:15. See POUR, No. 3.

2. ekchuno, or ekchunno (ἐκχέω, 1632), a later form of No. 1, is used of the voluntary giving up of His life by Christ through the “shedding” of His blood in crucifixion as an atoning sacrifice, Matt. 26:28; Mark 14:24; Luke 22:20, KJV, “is shed,” RV, “is poured out”; these passages do not refer to the effect of the piercing of His side (which took place after His death); of the murder of servants of God, Matt. 23:35; Luke 11:50; Acts 22:20 (in the best texts; others have No. 1); of the love of God in the hearts of believers through the Holy Spirit, Rom. 5:5. For the “pouring out” of the Holy Spirit, Acts 10:45, see POUR, No. 4. (The form in the last two passages might equally well come from No. 1, above.) See GUSH OUT, RUN, SPILL.

SHEEP

1. probaton (πρόβατον, 4263), from probaino, “to go forward,” i.e., of the movement of quadrupeds, was used among the Greeks of small cattle, sheep and goats; in the NT, of “sheep” only (a) naturally, e.g., Matt. 12:11, 12; (b) metaphorically, of those who belong to the Lord, the lost ones of the house of Israel, Matt. 10:6; of those who are under the care of the Good Shepherd, e.g., Matt. 26:31; John 10:1, lit., “the fold of the sheep,” and vv. 2-27; 21:16, 17 in some texts; Heb. 13:20; of those who in a future day, at the introduction of the millennial kingdom, have shown kindness to His persecuted earthly people in their great tribulation, Matt. 25:33; of the clothing of false shepherds, Matt. 7:15; (c) figuratively, by way of simile, of Christ, Acts 8:32; of the disciples, e.g., Matt. 10:16; of true followers of Christ in general, Rom. 8:36; of the former wayward condition of those who had come under His Shepherd care, 1 Pet. 2:25; of the multitudes who sought the help of Christ in the days of His flesh, Matt. 9:36; Mark 6:34.

2. probation (πρόβατον, 4263*), a diminutive of No. 1, “a little sheep,” is found in the best texts in John 21:16, 17 (some have No. 1); distinct from arnia, “lambs” (v. 15), but used as a term of endearment.¶

Note: For “keeping sheep,” Luke 17:7, RV, see CATTLE.

For SHEEPFOLD see FOLD

SHEEP GATE, SHEEP MARKET

probatikos (προβατικός, 4262), an adjective, used in the grammatically feminine form, in John 5:2, to agree with pule, “a gate,” understood, RV, “sheep gate” (not with agora, “a market,” KJV, “sheep market”).¶ In the Sept., Neh. 3:1, 32; 12:39.¶ This “sheep gate” was near the Temple; the sacrifices for the Temple probably entered by it.

SHEEPSKIN

melote (μηλωτή, 3374), from melon, “a sheep or goat,” occurs in Heb. 11:37.¶ In the Sept., 1 Kings 19:13, 19; 2 Kings 2:8, 13, 14.¶

SHEET

othone (ὀθόνη, 3607) primarily denoted “fine linen,” later, “a sheet,” Acts 10:11; 11:5.¶ Cf. othonion, “linen.”

SHEKEL, HALF SHEKEL

1. stater (στατήρ, 4715), a tetradrachmon or four drachmae, originally 224 grains, in Tyrian currency, but reduced in weight somewhat by the time recorded in Matt. 17:24; the value was about three shillings, and would pay the Temple tax for two persons, Matt. 17:27, RV, “shekel” (KJV, “a piece of money”); in some mss., 26:16; see MONEY, Note.¶

2. didrachmon (δίδραχμον, 1323), “a halfshekel” (i.e., dis, “twice,” drachme, “a drachma,” the coin mentioned in Luke 15:8, 9), was the amount of the tribute in the 1st cent., A.D., due from every adult Jew for the maintenance of the Temple services, Matt. 17:24 (twice).¶ This was based on Exod. 30:13, 24 (see also 38:24-26; Lev. 5:15; 27:3, 25; Num. 3:47, 50; 7:13ff.; 18:16).

SHEPHERD

poimen (ποιμήν, 4166) is used (a) in its natural significance, Matt. 9:36; 25:32; Mark 6:34; Luke 2:8, 15, 18, 20; John 10:2, 12; (b) metaphorically of Christ, Matt. 26:31; Mark 14:27; John 10:11, 14, 16; Heb. 13:20; 1 Pet. 2:25; (c) metaphorically of those who act as pastors in the churches, Eph. 4:11.¶ See PASTOR.

For CHIEF SHEPHERD see CHIEF, B, No. 3

SHEW (SHOW)

1. deiknumi, or deiknuo, (δεικνύω, 1166) denotes (a) “to show, exhibit,” e.g., Matt. 4:8; 8:4; John 5:20; 20:20; 1 Tim. 6:15; (b) “to show by making known,” Matt. 16:21; Luke 24:40; John 14:8, 9; Acts 10:28; 1 Cor. 12:31; Rev. 1:1; 4:1; 22:6; (c) “to show by way of proving,” Jas. 2:18; 3:13.

2. anadeiknumi (ἀναδείκνυμι, 322) signifies (a) “to lift up and show, show forth, declare” (ana, “up,” and No. 1), Acts 1:24; (b) to “appoint,” Luke 10:1. See APPOINT, No. 14.¶

3. endeiknumi (ἐνδείκνυμι, 1731) signifies (1) “to show forth, prove” (middle voice), said (a) of God as to His power, Rom. 9:17; His wrath, 9:22; the exceeding riches of His grace, Eph. 2:7; (b) of Christ, as to His longsuffering, 1 Tim. 1:16; (c) of Gentiles, as to “the work of the Law written in their hearts,” Rom. 2:15; (d) of believers, as to the proof of their love, 2 Cor. 8:24; all good fidelity, Titus 2:10; meekness, 3:2; love toward God’s Name, Heb. 6:10; diligence in ministering to the saints, v. 11; (2) “to manifest by evil acts,” 2 Tim. 4:14, “did (me much evil),” marg., “showed.”¶

4. epideiknumi (ἐπιδείκνυμι, 1925), epi, “upon,” intensive, and No. 1, signifies (a) “to exhibit, display,” Matt. 16:1; 22:19; 24:1; Luke 17:14 (in some mss. 24:40; No. 1 in the best texts); in the middle voice, “to display,” with a special interest in one’s own action, Acts 9:39; (b) “to point out, prove, demonstrate,” Acts 18:28; Heb. 6:17.¶

5. hupodeiknumi (ὑποδείκνυμι, 5263), primarily, “to show secretly (hupo, ‘under’), or by tracing out,” hence, “to make known, warn,” is translated “to show” in Luke 6:47; Acts 9:16; in 20:35, KJV (RV, “I gave ... an example”). See EXAMPLE, WARN.

6. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to make, to do,” is translated, “He hath showed” in Luke 1:51; “to show (mercy),” v. 72, RV (KJV, “perform”); “showed (mercy),” 10:37; John 6:30, KJV, “showest Thou,” RV, “doest Thou (for a sign)”]; Acts 7:36, KJV, “showed,” RV, “wrought”]; Jas. 2:13, “showed (no mercy)”]; in Mark 13:22 in the best texts (some have didomi), “shall show (signs).” See DO, No. 1.

7. menuo (μηνύω, 3377), “to disclose, make known” (what was secret), is rendered “to show” in Luke 20:37; 1 Cor. 10:28; in a forensic sense, John 11:57; Acts 23:30, RV (KJV, “it was told”). See TELL.¶

8. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936), “to show,” in Acts 1:3; 2 Tim. 2:15 (KJV): see PRESENT, No. 1.

9. parecho (παρέχω, 3930), “to afford, give, show,” etc., in the active voice, is translated “showed” in Acts 28:2; in the middle voice, “showing” in Titus 2:7 (1st part). See BRING, No. 21.

10. exangello (ἐξαγγέλλω, 1804), “to tell out, proclaim abroad, to publish completely” (ek, or ex, “out,” angello, “to proclaim”), is rendered “show forth” in 1 Pet. 2:9; it indicates a complete proclamation (verbs compounded with ek often suggest what is to be done fully).¶

11. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is rendered “to show” in Matt. 24:24. See also No. 6.

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

Notes: The KJV translates the following words by the verb “to show” in the passages indicated. The RV gives the better renderings: (1) apodeiknumi (“to demonstrate”), 2 Thess. 2:4, “setting (himself) forth,” see SET, No. 17; (2) anangelo (“to declare”), Matt. 11:4, “tell”; John 16:13–15, “declare”; 16:25, “shall tell”; Acts 19:18 and 20:20, “declaring”; (3) katangelo, Acts 16:17; 26:23; 1 Cor. 11:26, “proclaim”; in the last passage the partaking of the elements at the Lord’s Supper is not a “showing forth” of His death, but a proclamation of it; (4) phaneroo, John 7:4; 21:1 (twice), 14; Rom. 1:19, “to manifest”; (5) deloo, (“to make plain”), 2 Pet. 1:14, “signify”; (6) diegeomai (“to recount”), Luke 8:39, “declare”; (7) emphanizo (“to manifest”), Acts 23:22, “hast signified”; (8) euangelizo, Luke 1:19, “to bring glad tidings”; (9) katatithemi (“to lay up”), Acts 24:27, “to gain”; (10) lego (“to tell”), 1 Cor. 15:51, “I tell”; (11), energeo, Matt. 14:2 and Mark 6:14, “work”; (12), ophthe (lit., “was seen”), Acts 7:26, “He appeared”; (13), ginomai (“to become”), Acts 4:22, “was wrought”; (14), in Acts 10:40, emphanes, “manifest,” with didomi, “to give,” and ginomai, “to become,” gave ... to be made manifest” (KJV “showed ... openly”); (15) apangelo (“to announce”), Matt. 11:4, “tell”; 12:18, “declare”; 28:11, “told”; Luke 14:21, “told”; Acts 26:20, “declared”; 28:21, “report”; 1 Thess. 1:9, “report”; 1 John 1:2, “declare”; (16), In Luke 1:58, KJV, megaluno, to magnify (RV), is rendered “shewed great.” (17) See also SHEWING. For SHEW BEFORE see FORESHEW

SHEWBREAD

Note: The phrase rendered “the shewbread” is formed by the combination of the nouns prothesis, “a setting forth” (pro, “before,” tithemi, “to place”) and artos, “a loaf” (in the plural), each with the article, Matt. 12:4; Mark 2:26 and Luke 6:4, lit., “the loaves of the setting forth”; in Heb. 9:2, lit., “the setting forth of the loaves.”¶ The corresponding OT phrases are lit., “bread of the face,” Exod. 25:30, i.e., the presence, referring to the Presence of God (cf. Isa. 63:9 with Exod. 33:14, 15); “the bread of ordering,” 1 Chron. 9:32, marg. In Num. 4:7 it is called “the continual bread”; in 1 Sam. 21:4, 6, “holy bread” (KJV, “hallowed”). In the Sept. of 1 Kings 7:48, it is called “the bread of the offering” (prosphora, “a bearing towards”). The twelve loaves, representing the tribes of Israel, were set in order every Sabbath day before the Lord, “on the behalf of the children,” Lev. 24:8, RV (marg., and KJV, “from”), “an everlasting covenant.” The loaves symbolized the fact that on the basis of the sacrificial atonement of the Cross, believers are accepted before God, and nourished by Him in the person of Christ. The shewbread was partaken of by the priests, as representatives of the nation. Priesthood now being coextensive with all who belong to Christ, 1 Pet. 2:5, 9, He, the Living Bread, is the nourishment of all, and where He is, there, representatively, they are.

SHEWING

anadeixis (ἀνάδειξις, 323), “a shewing forth” (ana, “up or forth,” and deiknumi, “to show”), is translated “showing” in Luke 1:80.¶

Note: For “showing,” Rom. 3:25, 26, RV, see DECLARE, B.

SHIELD

thureos (θυρεός, 2375) formerly meant “a stone for closing the entrance of a cave”; then, “a shield,” large and oblong, protecting every part of the soldier; the word is used metaphorically of faith, Eph. 6:16, which the believer is to take up “in (en in the original) all” (all that has just been mentioned), i.e., as affecting the whole of his activities.¶

SHINE, SHINING

A. Verbs.

1. phaino (φαίνω, 5316), “to cause to appear,” denotes, in the active voice, “to give light, shine,” John 1:5; 5:35; in Matt. 24:27, passive voice; so Phil. 2:15, RV, “ye are seen” (for KJV, “ye shine”); 2 Pet. 1:19 (active); so 1 John 2:8, Rev. 1:16; in 8:12 and 18:23 (passive); 21:23 (active). See APPEAR.

2. epiphaino (ἐπιφαίνω, 2014), “to shine upon” (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), is so translated in Luke 1:79, RV (KJV, “to give light”). See APPEAR, No. 2.

3. lampro (λάμπω, 2989), “to shine as a torch,” occurs in Matt. 5:15, 16, 17:2; Luke 17:24; Acts 12:7; 2 Cor. 4:6 (twice).¶: see LIGHT, B, No. 3.

4. stilbo (στίλβω, 4744), “to shine, glisten,” is used in Mark 9:3 of the garments of Christ at His transfiguration, RV, “glistening” KJV, “shining.”¶ Cf. exastrapto, “dazzling,” in Luke 9:29, RV.

5. eklampo (ἐκλάμπω, 1584), “to shine forth” (ek, “out” and No. 3), is used in Matt. 13:43, of the future shining “forth” of the righteous “in the Kingdom of their Father.”¶

6. perilampo (περιλάμπω, 4034), “to shine around” (peri, “around,” and No. 3), is used in Luke 2:9, “shone round about,” of the glory of the Lord; so in Acts 26:13, of the light from Heaven upon Saul of Tarsus.¶

7. periastrapto (περιαστράπτω, 4015), “to flash around, shine round about” (peri, and astrape, “shining brightness”), is used in Acts 9:3 and 22:6 of the same circumstance as in 26:13 (No. 6).¶

8. epiphausko or epiphauo (ἐπιφάω, 2017), “to shine forth,” is used figuratively of Christ upon the slumbering believer who awakes and arises from among the dead, Eph. 5:14, RV, “shall shine upon thee” (KJV, “shall give thee light”).¶

B. Noun.

astrape (ἀστραπή, 796), denotes (a) “lightning,” (b) “bright shining,” of a lamp, Luke 11:36. See LIGHTNING. Cf. No. 7, above, and Note (1) below.

Notes: (1) In Luke 24:4, KJV, astrapto, “to lighten,” is translated “shining” (RV, “dazzling”). (2) In 2 Cor. 4:4, KJV, augazo, “to shine forth,” is translated “shine” (RV, “dawn”).¶

SHIP, SHIPPING

1. plōion (πλοῖον, 4143), akin to pleo, “to sail,” a boat or a ship, always rendered appropriately “boat” in the RV in the Gospels; “ship” in the Acts; elsewhere, Jas. 3:4; Rev. 8:9; 18:17 (in some mss.), 19. See BOAT, No. 2.

2. plōiarion (πλοιᾶριον, 4142), a diminutive form of No. 1, is translated “ship” in the KJV of Mark 3:9; 4:36 and John 21:8; “(took) shipping” in John 6:24, KJV, RV “(got into the) boats. See BOAT, No. 1.

3. naus (ναῦς, 3491) denotes “a ship” (Lat. navis, Eng. “nautical,” “naval,” etc.), Acts 27:41.¶ Naus, in classical Greek the ordinary word for a “ship,” survived in Hellenistic Greek only as a literary word, but disappeared from popular speech (Moulton, Proleg., p. 25). Blass (Philology of the Gospels, p. 186) thinks the solitary Lucan use of naus was due to a reminiscence of the Homeric phrase for beaching a “ship.”

Note: For epibaino, Acts 21:6, “we took ship,” see TAKE, Note (16).

For OWNER OF THE SHIP see OWNER, No. 2

For SHIPMEN see MARINERS

For SHIPMASTER see MASTER, A, No. 7

SHIPWRECK

nauageo (ναυαγέω, 3489) signifies (a) literally, “to suffer shipwreck” (naus, “a ship,” agnumi, “to break”), 2 Cor. 11:25; (b) metaphorically, “to make shipwreck,” 1 Tim. 1:19, “concerning the faith,” as the result of thrusting away a good conscience (both verbs in this v. are in the aorist tense, signifying the definiteness of the acts).¶

For SHIVERS (Rev. 2:27) see BREAK, A, No. 5

For SHOD see BIND, No. 3

SHOE

hupodemo (ὑπόδημα, 5266) denotes “a sole bound under the foot” (hupo, “under,” deo, “to bind”; cf. hupodeo, “to bind under”), “a sandal,” always translated “shoes,” e.g., Matt. 3:11; 10:10; Mark 1:7.

SHOOT FORTH

proballo (προβάλλω, 4261), lit., “to throw before,” is used of “the putting forth of leaves, blossom, fruit,” said of trees in general, Luke 21:30, “shoot forth.” See PUT (forward), Acts 19:33.¶

Note: In Mark 4:32, KJV, poieo, “to do, make,” is rendered “shooteth out,” RV, “putteth out.”

For SHORE see BEACH and LIP

For SHORT (Adjective and Adverb) see LITTLE, A, No. 2 and B, No. 2

Note: In 1 Thess. 2:17, “a short season,” is lit., “a season of an hour” (hora; see HOUR, SEASON, No. 1.

SHORT (come, cut), SHORTEN

1. koloboo (κολοβόω, 2856) denotes “to cut off, amputate” (kolobos, “docked”); hence, “to curtail, shorten,” said of the “shortening” by God of the time of the great tribulation, Matt. 24:22 (twice); Mark 13:20 (twice).¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 4:12.¶

2. sustello (συστέλλω, 4958) denotes (a) “to draw together” (sun, “together,” stello, “to bring, gather”), “to contract, shorten,” 1 Cor. 7:29, RV, “(the time) is shortened” (KJV, “... is short”); the coming of the Lord is always to be regarded as nigh for the believer, who is to be in constant expectation of His return, and thus is to keep himself from being the slave of earthly conditions and life’s relationships; (b) “to wrap up,” of enshrouding a body for burial, Acts 5:6, RV, “they wrapped (KJV, wound) ... up.”¶

3. suntemno (συντηρέω, 4933), primarily, “to cut in pieces” (sun, “together,” temno, “to cut”), then, “to cut down, cut short,” is used metaphorically in Rom. 9:28 (twice in some texts), “the Lord will execute His word (logos, not “work,” as KJV) upon the earth, finishing it and cutting it short,” i.e., in the fulfillment of His judgments pronounced upon Israel, a remnant only being saved; the “cutting short” of His word is suggestive of the summary and decisive character of the divine act.¶

Note: For hustereo, “to come short, fall short,” see FALL, No. 10.

SHORTLY

1. eutheos (εὐθέως, 2112), “straightway, directly,” is translated “shortly” in 3 John 14. The general use of the word suggests something sooner than “shortly.” See FORTHWITH, STRAIGHTWAY.

2. tacheos (ταχέως, 5030): see QUICKLY, No. 3.

3. tacheion (τάχιον, 5032): see QUICKLY, No. 2.

4. en tachei: see QUICKLY, No. 4.

Note: In 2 Pet. 1:14, KJV, tachinos, an adjective denoting “swift” (akin to the above), is translated “shortly” (RV, “swiftly”), lit., “the putting off of my tabernacle is swift” (i.e., in its approach). Cf. 2:1.

SHOULD

Note: This is frequently part of the translation of the tense of a verb. Otherwise it translates the following:

1. mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about to” (for the significance of which see SHALL), e.g., Mark 10:32, RV, “were to”; Luke 19:11, RV, “was to”; “should” in 22:23; 24:21; John 6:71; 7:39, RV, “were to”; 11:51; 12:4, 33; 18:32; Acts 11:28; 23:27, RV, “was about (to be slain)”; 1 Thess. 3:4, RV, “are to”; Rev. 6:11. See ABOUT, B. 2. dei (δέλλω, 1163), “it needs, it should,” e.g., Matt. 18:33; Acts 27:21: see MUST.

Note: In 1 Cor. 9:10, KJV, opheilo, “to owe,” is rendered “should” (RV, “ought to”).

SHOULDER

omos (ὤμος, 5606) occurs in Matt. 23:4 and Luke 15:5, and is suggestive (as in the latter passage) of strength and safety.¶

SHOUT (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

keleusma (κέλευμα, 2752), “a call, summons, shout of command” (akin to keleuo, “to command”), is used in 1 Thess. 4:16 of the “shout” with which (en, “in,” denoting the attendant circumstances) the Lord will descend from heaven at the time of the rapture of the saints (those who have fallen asleep, and the living) to meet Him in the air. The “shout” is not here said to be His actual voice, though this indeed will be so (John 5:28).¶ In the Sept., Prov. 30:27, “(the locusts ... at the) word of command (march in rank).”¶

B. Verb.

epiphoneo (ἐπιφωνέω, 2019), “to call out” (epi, “upon,” phoneo, “to utter a sound”), is translated “shouted” in Acts 12:22, RV (KJV, “gave a shout”). See CRY, B, No. 8.

SHOW (Noun)

logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word,” is sometimes used of mere talk, the talk which one occasions; hence, “repute, reputation”; this seems to be the meaning in Col. 2:23, translated “a show (KJV ‘show’) of wisdom,” i.e., “a reputation for wisdom,” rather than “appearance, reason,” etc. See WORD.

Note: In Luke 20:47, KJV, prophasis, “a pretense” (RV), is translated “show.” See CLOKE (Pretense), No. 2.

SHOW (make a)

1. deigmatizo (δειγματίζω, 1165), “to make a show of, expose,” is used in Col. 2:15 of Christ’s act regarding the principalities and powers, displaying them “as a victor displays his captives or trophies in a triumphal procession” (Lightfoot). Some regard the meaning as being that He showed the angelic beings in their true inferiority (see under TRIUMPH). For its other occurrence, Matt. 1:19, see EXAMPLE, B, No. 1.¶

2. euprosopeo (εὐπροσώπεω, 2146) denotes “to look well, make a fair show” (eu, “well,” prosopon, “a face”), and is used in Gal. 6:12, “to make a fair show (in the flesh),” i.e., “to make a display of religious zeal.” Deissmann illustrates the metaphorical use of this word from the papyri in Light from the Ancient East, p. 96.¶

Note: For parateresis, KJV marg. in Luke 17:20, “outward show,” see OBSERVATION.¶

For SHOW (Verb) see SHEW

SHOWER

ombros (ὄμβρος, 3655) denotes a “heavy shower, a storm of rain,” Luke 12:54.¶

For SHRANK and SHRINK see DRAW (B), No. 4

SHRINE

naos (ναός, 3485), “the inmost part of a temple, a shrine,” is used in the plural in Acts 19:24, of the silver models of the pagan “shrine” in which the image of Diana (Greek Artemis) was preserved. The models were large or small, and were signs of wealth and devotion on the part of purchasers. The variety of forms connected with the embellishment of the image provided “no little business” for the silversmiths. See TEMPLE.

SHUDDER

phrisso (φρίσσω, 5425), primarily, “to be rough, to bristle,” then, “to shiver, shudder, tremble,” is said of demons, Jas. 2:19, RV, “shudder” (KJV, “tremble”).¶ Cf. Matt. 8:29, indicating a cognizance of their appointed doom.

For SHUN see AVOID, No. 4, and DRAW, (B), No. 4

SHUT, SHUT UP

1. kleio (κλείω, 2808) is used (a) of things material, Matt. 6:6; 25:10; Luke 11:7; John 20:19, 26; Acts 5:23; 21:30; Rev. 20:3; figuratively, 21:25; (b) metaphorically, of the kingdom of heaven, Matt. 23:13; of heaven, with consequences of famine, Luke 4:25; Rev. 11:6; of compassion, 1 John 3:17, RV (KJV, “bowels of compassion”); of the blessings accruing from the promises of God regarding David, Rev. 3:7; of a door for testimony, 3:8.¶

2. apokleio (ἀποκλείω, 608), to shut fast (apo, away from, and No. 1), is used in Luke 13:25, expressing the impossibility of entrance after the closing.¶

3. katakleio (κατακλείω, 2623), lit., to shut down” (the kata has, however, an intensive use), signifies “to shut up in confinement,” Luke 3:20; Acts 26:10.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 32:3.¶

4. sunkleio (συγκλείω, 4788): see ENCLOSE.

SICK, SICKLY, SICKNESS

A. Verbs.

1. astheneo (ἀσθενέω, 770), lit., “to be weak, feeble” (a, negative, sthenos, “strength”), is translated “to be sick,” e.g., in Matt. 10:8, “(the) sick”; 25:36; v. 39 in the best texts (some have B, No. 1); Mark 6:56; Luke 4:40; 7:10 (RV omits the word); 9:2; John 4:46; 5:3, RV (KJV, “impotent folk”); v. 7; 6:2, RV (KJV, “were diseased”); 11:1-3, 6; Acts 9:37; 19:12; Phil. 2:26, 27; 2 Tim. 4:20; Jas. 5:14. See DISEASED, B, No. 1, IMPOTENT, and, especially, WEAK.

2. kamno (κάμνω, 2577), primarily, “to work,” hence, from the effect of constant work, “to be weary,” Heb. 12:3, is rendered “(him) that is sick,” in Jas. 5:15, RV, KJV “(the) sick.” The choice of this verb instead of the repetition of No. 1 (v. 14, see above), is suggestive of the common accompaniment of “sickness,” weariness of mind (which is the meaning of this verb), which not infrequently hinders physical recovery; hence this special cause is here intimated in the general idea of “sickness.” In some mss. it occurs in Rev. 2:3.¶ In the Sept., Job 10:1; 17:2.¶

3. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912), “to hold in, hold fast,” is used, in the passive voice, of “being seized or afflicted by ills,” Acts 28:8, “sick” (of the father of Publius, cf. Matt. 4:24; Luke 4:38, taken with). See CONSTRAIN, No. 3.

Notes: (1) Noseo, “to be sick,” is used metaphorically of mental ailment, in 1 Tim. 6:4, “doting” (marg., “sick”). (2) The adverb kakos, “evilly ill,” with echo, “to hold, to have,” is rendered “to be sick,” in Matt. 4:24, RV, “that were sick”; 8:16; 9:12; 14:35 and Mark 1:32, RV (KJV, “diseased”); 1:34; 2:17; 6:55; Luke 5:31; 7:2. (3) For “sick of the palsy,” Luke 5:24; Acts 9:33, see PALSY (SICK OF).

B. Adjectives.

1. asthenes (ἀσθενής, 772), lit., “without strength,” hence, “feeble, weak,” is used of “bodily debility,” Matt. 25:43 (for v. 39, see A, No. 1), 44; some texts have it in Luke 9:2 (the best omit it, the meaning being “to heal” in general); 10:9; Acts 5:15, 16; in 4:9 it is rendered “impotent. See FEEBLE, IMPOTENT, WEAK.

2. arrhostos (ἄρρωστος, 732), “feeble, sickly” (a, negative, rhonnumi, “to be strong”), is translated “sick” in Matt. 14:14; Mark 16:18; “sick folk” in Mark 6:5; “that were sick” in 6:13; “sickly” in 1 Cor. 11:30, here also of the physical state.¶ In the Sept., 1 Kings 14:5; Mal. 1:8.¶

C. Nouns.

1. astheneia (ἀσθένεια, 769), “weakness, sickness” (akin to A, No. 1 and B, No. 1), is translated “sickness” in John 11:4. See DISEASE, No. 1, INFIRMITY, WEAKNESS.

2. nosos (νόσος, 3554): see DISEASE, No. 3.

SICKLE

drepanon (δρέπανον, 1407), “a pruning hook, a sickle” (akin to drepo, “to pluck”), occurs in Mark 4:29; Rev. 14:14, 15, 16, 17, 18 (twice), 19.¶

SIDE

A. Noun.

pleura (πλευρά, 4125), “a side” (cf. Eng., “pleurisy”), is used of the “side” of Christ, into which the spear was thrust, John 19:34; 20:20, 25, 27 (some mss. have it in Matt. 27:49; see RV marg.); elsewhere, in Acts 12:7.¶

B. Adverb.

peran (πέραν, 4008), an adverb, signifying “beyond, on the other side,” is used (a) as a preposition and translated “on the other side of,” e.g., in Mark 5:1; Luke 8:22; John 6:1, RV; 6:22, 25; (b) as a noun with the article, e.g., Matt. 8:18, 28; 14:22; 16:5. See BEYOND, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In Luke 9:47, the preposition para, “by the side of,” with the dative case of the pronoun heautou, is rendered “by His side,” RV (KJV, “by Him”). (2) See also EITHER, EVERYWHERE, No. 3, HIGHWAY, RIGHT.

SIFT

siniazo (σινιάζω, 4617), “to winnow, sift” (sinion, “a sieve”), is used figuratively in Luke 22:31.¶

SIGH

1. stenazo (στενάζω, 4727), “to groan,” is translated “He sighed” in Mark 7:34. See GRIEF, GROAN.

2. anastenazo (ἀναστενάζω, 389), “to sigh deeply” (ana, “up,” suggesting “deep drawn,” and No. 1), occurs in Mark 8:12.¶ In the Sept., Lam. 1:4.¶

SIGHT

A. Nouns.

1. eidos (εἶδος, 1491) is translated. “sight” in 2 Cor. 5:7; see APPEARANCE, No. 1.

2. theoria (θεωρία, 2335) denotes “a spectacle, a sight” (akin to theoreo, “to gaze, behold”); see BEHOLD), in Luke 23:45.¶

3. horama (ὄραμα, 3705), “that which is seen” (akin to horao, “to see”), besides its meaning, “a vision, appearance,” denotes “a sight,” in Acts 7:31. See VISION.

4. ophthalmos (ὀφθαλμός, 3788) “an eye” (Eng. “ophthalmic,” etc.) in Acts 1:9 is translated “sight” (plur. lit., “eyes”). See EYE.

5. anablepsis (ἀνάβλεψις, 309) denotes “recovering of sight” (ana, “again,” blepo, “to see”), Luke 4:18.¶ In the Sept, Isa. 61:1.¶ Notes: (1) For horasis (akin to No. 3), translated “in sight” in Rev. 4:3, KJV (RV, “to look upon”), see LOOK, B. (2) In Luke 7:21, the infinitive mood of blepo, “to see,” is used as a noun, “(He bestowed, KJV, ‘gave’) sight.” In Acts 9:9 it is used in the present participle with me, “not,” “without sight” (lit., “not seeing”). (3) In Heb. 12:21 phantazomai, “to make visible,” is used in the present participle as a noun, with the article, “(the) sight.”¶ (4) In Luke 21:11, KJV, phobetron (or phobethron), plur., is translated “fearful sights” (RV, “terrors”).¶

B. Verb.

anablepo (ἀναβλέπω, 308), “to look up,” also denotes “to receive or recover sight” (akin to A, No. 5), e.g., Matt. 11:5; 20:34; Mark 10:51, 52; Luke 18:41-43; John 9:11, 15, 18 (twice); Acts 9:12, 17, 18; 22:13.

SIGHT OF (in the)

1. enopion (ἐνώπιον, 1799), for which see BEFORE, No. 9, is translated “in the sight of” in the RV (for KJV, “before”) in Luke 12:6; 15:18; 16:15; Acts 7:46; 10:33; 19:19; 1 Tim. 5:4, 21; 2 Tim. 2:14; 4:1; Rev. 13:12. The RV is more appropriate in most passages, as giving the real significance of the word.

2. katenopion (κατενώπιον, 2714), see BEFORE, No. 10, is translated “in the sight of” in 2 Cor. 2:17 (in some texts); Col. 1:22, KJV.

3. emprosthen (ἐμπροσθεν, 1715), see BEFORE, No. 4, is translated “in the sight of” in Matt. 11:26; Luke 10:21; 1 Thess. 1:3, KJV.

4. enantion (ἐναντίον, 1726), see BEFORE, No. 5, is translated “in the sight of” in Acts 7:10.

5. enanti (ἐναντι, 1725), see BEFORE, No. 6, is translated “in the sight of” in Acts 8:21, KJV.

6. katenanti (κατέναντι, 2713), see BEFORE, No. 8, is found in the best texts in 2 Cor. 12:19, “in the sight of,” RV, and in 2:17.

SIGN

1. semeion (σημείον, 4592), “a sign, mark, indication, token,” is used (a) of that which distinguished a person or thing from others, e.g., Matt. 26:48; Luke 2:12; Rom. 4:11; 2 Cor. 12:12 (1st part); 2 Thess. 3:17, “token,” i.e., his autograph attesting the authenticity of his letters; (b) of a “sign” as a warning or admonition, e.g., Matt. 12:39, “the sign of (i.e., consisting of) the prophet Jonas”; 16:4; Luke 2:34; 11:29, 30; (c) of miraculous acts (1) as tokens of divine authority and power, e.g., Matt. 12:38, 39 (1st part); John 2:11, RV, “signs”; 3:2 (ditto); 4:54, “(the second) sign,” RV; 10:41 (ditto); 20:30; in 1 Cor. 1:22, “the Jews ask for signs,” RV, indicates that the Apostles were met with the same demand from Jews as Christ had been: “signs were vouchsafed in plenty, signs of God’s power and love, but these were not the signs which they sought.... They wanted signs of an outward Messianic Kingdom, of temporal triumph, of material greatness for the chosen people.... With such cravings the Gospel of a ‘crucified Messiah’ was to them a stumblingblock indeed” (Lightfoot); 1 Cor. 14:22; (2) by demons, Rev. 16:14; (3) by false teachers or prophets, indications of assumed authority, e.g., Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22; (4) by Satan through his special agents, 2 Thess. 2:9; Rev. 13:13, 14; 19:20; (d) of tokens portending future events, e. g., Matt. 24:3, where “the sign of the Son of Man” signifies, subjectively, that the Son of Man is Himself the “sign” of what He is about to do; Mark 13:4; Luke 21:7, 11, 25; Acts 2:19; Rev. 12:1, RV; 12:3, RV; 15:1.

“Signs” confirmatory of what God had accomplished in the atoning sacrifice of Christ, His resurrection and ascension, and of the sending of the Holy Spirit, were given to the Jews for their recognition, as at Pentecost, and supernatural acts by apostolic ministry, as well as by the supernatural operations in the churches, such as the gift of tongues and prophesying; there is no record of the continuance of these latter after the circumstances recorded in Acts 19:1-20.

2. parasemos (παράσημος, 3902), an adjective meaning “marked at the side” (para, “beside,” sema, “a mark”), is used in Acts 28:11 as a noun denoting the figurehead of a vessel.¶

SIGNS (to make)

enneuo (ἐννεύω, 1770), “to nod to” (en, “in,” neuo, “to nod”), denotes “to make a sign to” in Luke 1:62.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 6:13; 10:10.¶

Note: For dianeuo, Luke 1:22, RV, see BECKON, No. 2.

For SIGNIFICATION, 1 Cor. 14:10, see DUMB, No. 2

SIGNIFY

1. semaino (σημαίνω, 4591), “to give a sign, indicate” (sema, “a sign”: cf. SIGN, No. 1), “to signify,” is so translated in John 12:33; 18:32; 21:19; Acts 11:28; 25:27; Rev. 1:1, where perhaps the suggestion is that of expressing by signs.¶

2. deloo (δηλόω, 1213), “to make plain” (delos, “evident”), is translated “to signify” in 1 Cor. 1:11, RV, “it hath been signified” (KJV, “declared”); Heb. 9:8; 12:27; 1 Pet. 1:11, KJV (RV, “point unto”); 2 Pet. 1:14, RV, “signified” (KJV, “hath showed”). See POINT (unto).

3. emphanizo (ἐμφανίζω, 1718), “to manifest, make known,” is translated “signify” in Acts 23:15; v. 22, RV (KJV, “hath showed”). See APPEAR, No. 5.

Note: In Acts 21:26, KJV, diangelo, “to announce,” is rendered “to signify” (RV, “declaring”).

SILENCE

A. Noun.

sige (σιγή, 4602) occurs in Acts 21:40; Rev. 8:1, where the “silence” is introductory to the judgments following the opening of the seventh seal.¶

Note: For hesuchia, KJV, “silence,” in Acts 22:2 and 1 Tim. 2:11, 12, see QUIETNESS.

B. Verbs.

1. phimoo (φιμόω, 5392), “to muzzle,” is rendered “to put to silence” in Matt. 22:34; 1 Pet. 2:15. See MUZZLE, PEACE (HOLD), SPEECHLESS, STILL.

2. sigao (σιγάω, 4601), “to be silent”: see PEACE (hold), No. 1.

For SILENT, Luke 1:20, RV, see DUMB, B
SILK

serikos or sirikos (σηρικός, 4596), “silken,” an adjective derived from the Seres, a people of India, who seem to have produced “silk” originally as a marketable commodity, is used as a noun with the article, denoting “silken fabric,” Rev. 18:12.¶

For SILLY, 2 Tim. 3:6, see WOMAN, No. 2

SILVER

A. Nouns.

1. argurion (ἀργύριον, 694) is rendered “silver” in Acts 3:6; 8:20, RV (KJV, “money”); 20:33; 1 Cor. 3:12 (metaphorical); 1 Pet. 1:18.

See MONEY, PIECE.

2. arguros (ἄργυρος, 696), akin to argos, “shining,” denotes “silver.” In each occurrence in the NT it follows the mention of gold, Matt. 10:9; Acts 17:29; Jas. 5:3; Rev. 18:12.¶ Note: For drachme, Luke 15:8, see PIECE.

B. Adjective.

argureos (ἀργύρεος, 693) signifies “made of silver,” Acts 19:24; 2 Tim. 2:20; Rev. 9:20.¶

SILVERSMITH

argurokopos (ἀργυροκόπος, 695), from arguros (see above) and kopto, “to beat,” occurs in Acts 19:24.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 17:4; Jer. 6:29.¶

SIMILITUDE

Note: For homoionoma, rendered “similitude” in Rom. 5:14, KJV, see LIKENESS, No. 1. For homoioites, “similitude” in Heb. 7:15 KJV, see LIKE, C, Note (1), and LIKENESS, No. 3. For homoiosis, “similitude” in Jas. 3:9, KJV, see LIKENESS, No. 2.

For SIMPLE see GUILLESS, No. 2, and HARMLESS

For SIMPLICITY see LIBERALITY

SIN (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. hamartia (ἁμαρτία, 266) is, lit., “a missing of the mark,” but this etymological meaning is largely lost sight of in the NT. It is the most comprehensive term for moral obliquity. It is used of “sin” as (a) a principle or source of action, or an inward element producing acts, e.g., Rom. 3:9; 5:12, 13, 20; 6:1, 2; 7:7 (abstract for concrete); 7:8

(twice), 9, 11, 13, “sin, that it might be shown to be sin,” i.e., “sin became death to me, that it might be exposed in its heinous character”: in the last clause, “sin might become exceeding sinful,” i.e., through the holiness of the Law, the true nature of sin was designed to be manifested to the conscience;

(b) a governing principle or power, e.g., Rom. 6:6, “(the body) of sin,” here “sin” is spoken of as an organized power, acting through the members of the body, though the seat of “sin” is in the will (the body is the organic instrument); in the next clause, and in other passages, as follows, this governing principle is personified, e.g., Rom. 5:21; 6:12, 14, 17; 7:11, 14, 17, 20, 23, 25; 8:2; 1 Cor. 15:56; Heb. 3:13; 11:25; 12:4; Jas. 1:15 (2nd part);

(c) a generic term (distinct from specific terms such as No. 2 yet sometimes inclusive of concrete wrong doing, e.g., John 8:21, 34, 46; 9:41; 15:22, 24; 19:11); in Rom. 8:3, “God, sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh,” lit., “flesh of sin,” the flesh stands for the body, the instrument of indwelling “sin” [Christ, preexistently the Son of God, assumed human flesh, “of the substance of the Virgin Mary”; the reality of incarnation was His, without taint of sin (for homoionoma, “likeness,” see LIKENESS)], and as an offering for sin,” i.e., “a sin offering” (so the Sept., e.g., in Lev. 4:32; 5:6, 7, 8, 9), “condemned sin in the flesh,” i.e., Christ, having taken human nature, “sin” apart (Heb. 4:15), and having lived a sinless life, died under the condemnation and judgment due to our “sin”; for the generic sense see further, e.g., Heb. 9:26; 10:6, 8, 18; 13:11; 1 John 1:7, 8; 3:4 (1st part; in the 2nd part, “sin” is defined as “lawlessness,” RV), 8, 9; in these verses the KJV use of the verb to commit is misleading; not the committal of an act is in view, but a continuous course of “sin,” as indicated by the RV, “doeth.” The apostle’s use of the present tense of poieo, “to do,” virtually expresses the meaning of prasso, “to practice,” which John does not use (it is not infrequent in this sense in Paul’s Epp., e.g., Rom. 1:32, RV; 2:1; Gal. 5:21; Phil. 4:9); 1 Pet. 4:1 (singular in the best texts), lit., “has been made to cease from sin,” i.e., as a result of suffering in the flesh, the mortifying of our members, and of obedience to a Savior who suffered in flesh. Such no longer lives in the flesh, “to the lusts of men, but to the will of God”; sometimes the word is used as virtually equivalent to a condition of “sin,” e.g., John 1:29, “the sin (not sins) of the world”; 1 Cor. 15:17; or a course of “sin,” characterized by continuous acts, e.g., 1 Thess. 2:16; in 1 John 5:16 (2nd part) the RV marg., is probably to be preferred, “there is sin unto death,” not a special act of “sin,” but the state or condition producing acts; in v. 17, “all unrighteousness is sin” is not a definition of “sin” (as in 3:4), it gives a specification of the term in its generic sense;

(d) a sinful deed, an act of “sin,” e.g., Matt. 12:31; Acts 7:60; Jas. 1:15 (1st part); 2:9; 4:17; 5:15, 20; 1 John 5:16 (1st part).

Notes: (1) Christ is predicated as having been without “sin” in every respect, e.g., (a), (b), (c) above, 2 Cor. 5:21 (1st part); 1 John 3:5; John 14:30; (d) John 8:46; Heb. 4:15; 1 Pet. 2:22. (2) In Heb. 9:28 (2nd part) the reference is to a “sin” offering. (3) In 2 Cor. 5:21, “Him ... He made to be sin” indicates that God dealt with Him as He must deal with “sin,” and that Christ fulfilled what was typified in the guilt offering. (4) For the phrase “man of sin” in 2 Thess. 2:3, see INIQUITY, No. 1.

2. hamartema (ἁμαρτημα, 265), akin to No. 1, denotes “an act of disobedience to divine law” [as distinct from No. 1 (a), (b), (c)]; plural in Mark 3:28; Rom. 3:25; 2 Pet.

1:9, in some texts; sing. in Mark 3:29 (some mss. have krisis, KJV, “damnation”); 1 Cor. 6:18.¶

Notes: (1) For paraptoma, rendered “sins” in the KJV in Eph. 1:7; 2:5; Col. 2:13 (RV, “trespass”), see TRESPASS. In Jas. 5:16, the best texts have No. 1 (RV, “sins”). (2) For synonymous terms see DISOBEDIENCE, ERROR, FAULT, INIQUITY, TRANSGRESSION, UNGODLINESS.

B. Adjective.

anamartetos (ἀναμάρτητος, 361), “without sin” (a, negative, n, euphonic, and C, No. 1), is found in John 8:7.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 29:19.¶

C. Verbs.

1. hamartano (ἁμαρτάνω, 264), lit., “to miss the mark,” is used in the NT (a) of “sinning” against God, (1) by angels, 2 Pet. 2:4; (2) by man, Matt. 27:4; Luke 15:18, 21 (heaven standing, by metonymy, for God); John 5:14; 8:11; 9:2, 3; Rom. 2:12 (twice); 3:23; 5:12, 14, 16; 6:15; 1 Cor. 7:28 (twice), 36; 15:34; Eph. 4:26; 1 Tim. 5:20; Titus 3:11; Heb. 3:17; 10:26; 1 John 1:10; in 2:1 (twice), the aorist tense in each place, referring to an act of “sin”; on the contrary, in 3:6 (twice), 8, 9, the present tense indicates, not the committal of an act, but the continuous practice of “sin” [see on A, No. 1 (c)]; in 5:16 (twice) the present tense indicates the condition resulting from an act, “unto death” signifying “tending towards death”; (b) against Christ, 1 Cor. 8:12; (c) against man, (1) a brother, Matt. 18:15, RV, “sin” (KJV, “trespass”); v. 21; Luke 17:3, 4, RV, “sin” (KJV, “trespass”); 1 Cor. 8:12; (2) in Luke 15:18, 21, against the father by the Prodigal Son, “in thy sight” being suggestive of befitting reverence; (d) against Jewish law, the Temple, and Caesar, Acts 25:8, RV, “sinned” (KJV, “offended”); (e) against one’s own body, by fornication, 1 Cor. 6:18; (f) against earthly masters by servants, 1 Pet. 2:20, RV, “(when) ye sin (and are buffeted for it),” KJV, “(when ye be buffeted) for your faults,” lit., “having sinned.”¶

2. proamartano (προαμαρτάνω, 4258), “to sin previously” (pro, “before,” and No. 1), occurs in 2 Cor. 12:21; 13:2, RV in each place, “have sinned heretofore” (so KJV in the 2nd; in the 1st, “have sinned already”).¶

SINCERE, SINCERELY, SINCERITY

A. Adjectives.

1. adolos (ἄδολος, 97), “guileless, pure,” is translated “sincere” in 1 Pet. 2:2, KJV, “without guile,” RV. See GUILLESS, No. 1.

2. gnosios (γνήσιος, 1103), “true, genuine, sincere,” is used in the neuter, as a noun, with the article, signifying “sincerity,” 2 Cor. 8:8 (of love). See OWN, TRUE.

3. eilikrines (εἰλικρινής, 1506), see PURE, A, No. 3.

B. Adverb.

---

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

hagnos (ἄγνῶς, 55) denotes “with pure motives,” akin to words under PURE, A, No. 1, and B, Nos. 1 and 2, and is rendered “sincerely” in Phil. 1:17, RV (v. 16, KJV).¶

C. Noun.

eilikrinia (or —eia) (εἰλικρίνεια, 1505), akin to A, No. 3 denotes “sincerity, purity”; it is described metaphorically in 1 Cor. 5:8 as “unleavened (bread)”; in 2 Cor. 1:12, “sincerity (of God),” RV, KJV, “(godly) sincerity,” it describes a quality possessed by God, as that which is to characterize the conduct of believers; in 2 Cor. 2:17 it is used of the rightful ministry of the Scriptures.¶

Notes: (1) For 2 Cor. 8:8, see A, No. 2. (2) In Eph. 6:24, KJV, aphtharsia, “incorruption,” is translated “sincerity” (RV, “uncorruptness,” KJV marg., “incorruption”); some inferior mss. have it in Titus 2:7, KJV; the RV follows those in which it is absent.

SINFUL

hamartolos (ἁμαρτωλός, 268), an adjective, akin to hamartano, “to sin,” is used as an adjective, “sinful” in Mark 8:38; Luke 5:8; 19:7 (lit., “a sinful man”); 24:7; John 9:16, and 24 (lit., “a man sinful”); Rom. 7:13, for which see SIN, A, No. 1 (a). Elsewhere it is used as a noun: see SINNER. The noun is frequently found in a common phrase in sepulchral epitaphs in the S.W. of Asia Minor, with the threat against any desecrator of the tomb, “let him be as a sinner before the subterranean gods” (Moulton and Milligan).

Notes: (1) In Rom. 8:3, “sinful flesh” is, lit., “flesh of sin” (RV marg.): see SIN, No. 1 (c). (2) For the RV of Rom. 7:5, “sinful passions,” see PASSION, No. 1.

SING, SINGING

1. ado (ᾄδω, 103) is used always of “praise to God,” (a) intransitively, Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16; (b) transitively, Rev. 5:9; 14:3; 15:3.¶

2. psallo (ψάλλω, 5567): see MELODY.

3. humneo (ὑμνέω, 5214): see HYMN, B.

SINGLE

haplous (ἁπλοῦς, 573), “simple, single,” is used in a moral sense in Matt. 6:22 and Luke 11:34, said of the eye; “singleness” of purpose keeps us from the snare of having a double treasure and consequently a divided heart.¶ The papyri provide instances of its use in other than the moral sense, e.g., of a marriage dowry, to be repaid pure and simple by a husband (Moulton and Milligan). In the Sept., Prov. 11:25.¶

SINGLENESS

1. aphelotes (ἄφελότης, 858) denotes “simplicity,” Acts 2:46, “singleness,” for which Moulton and Milligan, from papyri examples, suggest “unworldly simplicity”; the idea here is that of an unalloyed benevolence expressed in act.¶

2. haplotes (ἁπλότης, 572): see BOUNTY, No. 2.

SINK

1. buthizo (βυθίζω, 1036) is used literally in Luke 5:7. See DROWN, No. 1.

2. katapontizo (καταποντίζω, 2670) is translated “to sink” in Matt. 14:30 (passive voice). See DROWN, No. 3.

3. tithemi (τίθημι, 5087), “to put,” is rendered “let ... sink” in Luke 9:44, RV (“let ... sink down,” KJV). See APPOINT, LAY.

Note: In Acts 20:9 (2nd part), KJV, kataphero, “to bear down,” is translated “he sunk down” (RV, “being borne down”); in the 1st part it is rendered “being fallen,” KJV, “borne down,” RV.

SINNER

hamartolos (ἁματωλός, 268), lit., “one who misses the mark” (a meaning not to be pressed), is an adjective, most frequently used as a noun (see SINFUL); it is the most usual term to describe the fallen condition of men; it is applicable to all men, Rom. 5:8, 19. In the Synoptic Gospels the word is used not infrequently, by the Pharisees, of publicans (tax collectors) and women of ill repute, e.g., “a woman which was in the city, a sinner,” Luke 7:37; “a man that is a sinner,” 19:7. In Gal. 2:15, in the clause “not sinners of the Gentiles,” the apostle is taking the Judaizers on their own ground, ironically reminding them of their claim to moral superiority over Gentiles; he proceeds to show that the Jews are equally sinners with Gentiles.

Note: In Luke 13:4, KJV, opheiletes, “a debtor,” is translated “sinners” (RV, “offenders”; RV and KJV marg., “debtors”).

SIR(-S)

1. kurios (κύριος, 2962): see LORD.

2. aner (άνήρ, 435), “a man,” is translated “sirs” in Acts 7:26; 14:15; 19:25; 27:10, 21, 25. See MAN.

Note: In John 21:5 the KJV marg. has “sirs” for paidia, “children.”

SISTER

adelphē (ἀδελφή, 79) is used (a) of natural relationship, e.g., Matt. 19:29; of the “sisters” of Christ, the children of Joseph and Mary after the virgin birth of Christ, e.g., Matt. 13:56; (b) of “spiritual kinship” with Christ, an affinity marked by the fulfillment of the will of the Father, Matt. 12:50; Mark 3:35; of spiritual relationship based upon faith in Christ, Rom. 16:1; 1 Cor. 7:15; 9:5, KJV and RV marg.; Jas. 2:15; Philem. 2, RV.

Note: In Col. 4:10, KJV, anepsios (cf. Lat., nepos, whence Eng., “nephew”), “a cousin” (so, RV), is translated “sister’s son.” See COUSIN.¶

SIT

1. kathemai (κάθημαι, 2521) is used (a) of the natural posture, e.g., Matt. 9:9, most frequently in the Apocalypse, some 32 times; frequently in the Gospels and Acts; elsewhere only in 1 Cor. 14:30; Jas. 2:3 (twice); and of Christ’s position of authority on the throne of God, Col. 3:1, KJV, “sitteth” (RV, “is, seated”); Heb. 1:13 (cf. Matt. 22:44; 26:64 and parallel passages in Mark and Luke, and Acts 2:34); often as antecedent or successive to, or accompanying, another act (in no case a superfluous expression), e.g., Matt. 15:29; 27:36; Mark 2:14; 4:1; (b) metaphorically in Matt. 4:16 (twice); Luke 1:79; of inhabiting a place (translated “dwell”), Luke 21:35; Rev. 14:6, RV marg., “sit” (in the best texts: some have katoikeo, “to dwell”). See DWELL.

2. sunkathemai (συγκάθημαι, 4775), “to sit with” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), occurs in Mark 14:54; Acts 26:30.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 101:6, “dwell.”¶

3. anakeimai (ἀνακείμεαι, 345), “to recline at table” (ana, “up” keimai, “to lie”), is rendered “to sit at meat” in Matt. 9:10 (RV, marg., “reclined”); 26:7; 26:20, RV, “He was sitting at meat” (KJV, “He sat down”); Mark 16:14; in some mss. Luke 7:37 (see No. 5); 22:27 (twice); in Mark 14:18, “sat”; in John 6:11, “were set down”; John 12:2 in the best texts (see No. 4).

See GUEST, LEAN, LIE, Note (1), SET, No. 22, TABLE (AT THE).

4. sunanakeimai (συνανάκειμαι, 4873), “to recline at table with or together” (sun, and No. 3), “to sit at meat or at table with,” occurs in Matt. 9:10, “sat down”; 14:9; Mark 2:15, RV, “sat down with” (KJV, “sat ... together with”); 6:22; Luke 7:49; 14:10, 15; John 12:2 (in some texts).¶

5. katakeimai (κατάκειμαι, 2621), “to lie down” (kata, “down,” and keimai, cf. No. 3), is used of “reclining at a meal,” Mark 2:15; 14:3; Luke 5:29, RV, “were sitting at meat” (KJV, “sat down”); 7:37 (in the best texts); 1 Cor. 8:10. See KEEP, LIE.

6. anaklino (ἀνακλίνω, 347), “to cause to recline, make to sit down,” is used in the active voice, in Luke 12:37 (also in 2:7, of “laying” the infant Christ in the manger); in the passive, Matt. 8:11; 14:19; Mark 6:39 (in the best texts); in some texts, Luke 7:36 and 9:15 (see No. 7); 13:29. See LAY.¶

7. kataklineo (κατακλίνω, 2625) is used only in connection with meals, (a) in the active voice, “to make recline,” Luke 9:14, 15 (in the best texts); in the passive voice, “to recline,” Luke 7:36 (in the best texts), “sat down to meat”; 14:8; 24:30 (RV, “had sat down ... to meat”).¶

8. kathizo (καθίζω, 2523), is used (a) transitively, “to make sit down,” Acts 2:30 (see also SET, No. 9); (b) intransitively, “to sit down,” e.g., Matt. 5:1, RV, “when (He) had sat down” (KJV, “was set”); 19:28; 20:21, 23; 23:2; 25:31; 26:36; Mark 11:2, 7; 12:41; Luke 14:28, 31; 16:6; John 19:13; Acts 2:3 (of the tongues of fire); 8:31; 1 Cor. 10:7; 2 Thess. 2:4, “he sitteth,” aorist tense, i.e., “he takes his seat” (as, e.g., in Mark 16:19); Rev. 3:21 (twice), RV, “to sit down” and “sat down”; 20:4.

9. parakathazomai (παρακαθίζω, 3869v), “to sit down beside” (para), in a passive voice form, occurs in the best mss. in Luke 10:39.¶ Some texts have the verb parakathizo, “to set beside,” active form in middle sense.

10. sunkathizo (συγκαθίζω, 4776) denotes (a) transitively, “to make to sit together,” Eph. 2:6; (b) intransitively, Luke 22:55, RV, “had sat down together” (KJV, “were set down”).¶

11. anakathizo (ἀνακαθίζω, 339), “to set up,” is used intransitively, “to sit up,” of two who were raised from the dead, Luke 7:15; Acts 9:40.¶

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong's are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

12. anapipto (ἀναπίπτω, 377), “to fall back” (ana, “back,” pipto, “to fall”), denotes, in the NT, “to recline for a repast,” Matt. 15:35; Mark 6:40; 8:6; Luke 11:37; 14:10; 17:7; 22:14; John 6:10 (twice); 13:12; in John 13:25 and 21:20 it is used of leaning on the bosom of Christ. See LEAN.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:9.¶

13. kathzomai (καθέζομαι, 2516), “to sit (down),” is used in Matt. 26:55; Luke 2:46; John 4:6; 11:20; 20:12; Acts 6:15.¶

Note: For epibaino, “sitting upon,” Matt. 21:5, KJV, see RIDE.

SIX

hex (ἕξ, 1803), whence Eng. prefix, “hex”-, is used separately from other numerals in Matt. 17:1; Mark 9:2; Luke 4:25; 13:14; John 2:6; 12:1; Acts 11:12; 18:11; Jas. 5:17; Rev. 4:8. It sometimes suggests incompleteness, in comparison with the perfect number seven.

Notes: (1) In combination with tessarakonta, “forty,” it occurs in John 2:20; with hebdomekonta, “seventy,” Acts 27:37, “(two hundred) threescore and sixteen.” (2) It forms the first syllable of hexekonta, “sixty” (see below) and hexakosioi, “six hundred,” Rev. 13:18 (see SIXTY, Note); 14:20.

SIXTH

hekto (ἕκτος, 1623) is used (a) of a month, Luke 1:26, 36; (b) an hour, Matt. 20:5; 27:45 and parallel passages; John 4:6; (c) an angel, Rev. 9:13, 14; 16:12; (d) a seal of a roll, in vision, Rev. 6:12; (e) of the “sixth” precious stone, the sardius, in the foundations of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:20.

SIXTY, SIXTYFOLD

hexekonta (ἑξήκοντα, 1835) occurs in Matt. 13:8, RV (KJV, “sixty-fold”); 13:23; Mark 4:8, where the RV and KJV reverse the translation, as in Matt. 13:8, while in Mark 4:20 the RV has “sixtyfold,” KJV, “sixty”; in Rev. 13:18, RV, “sixty” (KJV, “threescore”). It is rendered “threescore” in Luke 24:13; 1 Tim. 5:9; Rev. 11:3; 12:6.¶

Note: In Rev. 13:18, the number of the “Beast,” the human potentate destined to rule with satanic power the ten-kingdom league at the end of this age, is given as “six hundred and sixty and six” (RV), and described as “the number of (a) man.” The number is suggestive of the acme of the pride of fallen man, the fullest development of man under direct satanic control, and standing in contrast to “seven” as the number of completeness and perfection.

SKIN

askos (ἄσκός, 779), “a leather bottle, wineskin,” occurs in Matt. 9:17 (four times); Mark 2:22 (four times); Luke 5:37 (three times), 38; in each place, RV, “wineskins” or “skins,” for KJV, “bottles.” A whole goatskin, for example, would be used with the apertures bound up, and when filled, tied at the neck. They were tanned with acacia bark and left hairy on the outside. New wines, by fermenting, would rend old skins (cf. Josh. 9:13; Job 32:19). Hung in the smoke to dry, the skin-bottles become shriveled (see Ps. 119:83).¶

Note: For “(a girdle) of a skin,” Mark 1:6, see LEATHERN.

SKULL

kranion (κρανίον, 2898), Lat., cranium (akin to kara, “the head”), is used of the scene of the Crucifixion, Matt. 27:33; Mark 15:22; John 19:17; in Luke 23:33, RV, “(the place which is called) The skull,” KJV, “Calvary” (from Latin calvaria, “a skull”: marg., “the place of a skull”). The locality has been identified by the traces of the resemblance of the hill to a “skull”.¶ In the Sept., Judg. 9:53; 2 Kings 9:35.¶

For SKY see HEAVEN

SLACK (Verb), SLACKNESS

A. Verb.

braduno (βραδύνω, 1019), used intransitively signifies “to be slow, to tarry” (bradus, “slow”), said negatively of God, 2 Pet. 3:9, “is (not) slack”; in 1 Tim. 3:15, translated “(if) I tarry.” See TARRY.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 43:10; Deut. 7:10; Isa. 46:13.¶

B. Noun.

bradutes (βραδύτης, 1022), “slowness” (akin to A), is rendered “slackness” in 2 Pet. 3:9.¶

SLANDERER

diabolos (διάβολος, 1228), an adjective, “slandorous, accusing falsely,” is used as a noun, translated “slanderers” in 1 Tim. 3:11, where the reference is to those who are given to finding fault with the demeanor and conduct of others and spreading their innuendos and criticisms in the church; in 2 Tim. 3:3, RV (KJV, “false accusers”); Titus 2:3 (ditto): see ACCUSER, DEVIL.

For SLANDEROUSLY see REPORT, C, No. 5

SLAUGHTER

1. sphage (σφαγή, 4967) is used in two quotations from the Sept., Acts 8:32 from Isa. 53:7, and Rom. 8:36 from Ps. 44:22; in the latter the quotation is set in a strain of triumph, the passage quoted being an utterance of sorrow. In Jas. 5:5 there is an allusion to Jer. 12:3, the luxurious rich, getting wealth by injustice, spending it on their pleasures, are “fattening themselves like sheep unconscious of their doom.”¶

2. kope (κοπή, 2871), “a stroke” (akin to kopto, “to strike, to cut”), signifies “a smiting in battle,” in Heb. 7:1.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 14:17; Deut. 28:25; Josh. 10:20.¶

3. phonos (φόνος, 5408), “a killing, murder,” is rendered “slaughter” in Acts 9:1; see MURDER.

SLAVE

soma (σῶμα, 4983), “a body,” is translated “slaves” in Rev. 18:13 (RV and KJV marg., “bodies”), an intimation of the unrighteous control over the bodily activities of “slaves”; the next word “souls” stands for the whole being. See BODY.

SLAY, SLAIN, SLEW

1. apokteino (ἀποκτείνω, 615), the usual word for “to kill,” is so translated in the RV wherever possible (e.g., for KJV, “to slay,” in Luke 11:49; Acts 7:52; Rev. 2:13; 9:15; 11:13; 19:21); in the following the verb “to kill” would not be appropriate, Rom. 7:11, “slew,” metaphorically of sin, as using the commandment; Eph. 2:16, “having slain,” said metaphorically of the enmity between Jew and Gentile. See KILL, No. 1.

Note: Some mss. have it in John 5:16 (KJV, “to slay”).

2. anaireo (ἀναιρέω, 337), “to take away, destroy, kill,” is rendered “to slay” in Matt. 2:16; Acts 2:23; 5:33, 36; 9:29, KJV (RV, “to kill”); 10:39; 13:28; 22:20; 23:15, RV; in 2 Thess. 2:8 the best texts have this verb (for analisko, “to consume,” KJV and RV marg.); hence the RV, “shall slay,” of the destruction of the man of sin. See KILL, No. 2.

3. sphazo or sphatto (σφάζω, 4969), “to slay,” especially of victims for sacrifice (akin to sphage: see SLAUGHTER), is used (a) of taking human life, 1 John 3:12 (twice); Rev. 6:4, RV, “slay” (KJV, “kill”); in 13:3, probably of assassination, RV, “smitten (unto death),” KJV, “wounded (to death),” RV marg., “slain;” 18:24; (b) of Christ, as the Lamb of sacrifice, Rev. 5:6, 9, 12; 6:9; 13:8. See KILL, No. 7.¶

4. katasphazo (κατασφάττω, 2695V), “to kill off” (kata, used intensively, and No. 3), is used in Luke 19:27.¶ In the Sept., Ezek. 16:40; Zech. 11:5.¶

5. diacheirizo (διαχειρίζομαι, 1315), “to lay hands on, kill,” is translated “slew” in Acts 5:30. See KILL, No. 6.

6. phoneuo (φονεύω, 5407), “to kill, to murder,” is rendered “ye slew” in Matt. 23:35. See KILL, No. 4.

Note: For thuo, Acts 11:7, KJV, “slay” (RV, “kill”), see KILL, No. 3.

For SLAIN BEASTS see BEAST, No. 5

For SLEEP see ASLEEP

SLEIGHT

kubia (or —eia) (κυβεία, 2940) denotes “dice playing” (from kubos, “a cube, a die as used in gaming”); hence, metaphorically, “trickery, sleight,” Eph. 4:14. The Eng. word is connected with “sly” (“not with slight”).¶

For SLIP see DRIFT

SLOTHFUL

1. nothros (νωθρός, 3576), “indolent, sluggish,” is rendered “slothful” in Heb. 6:12, KJV, See DULL, and synonymous words there, and SLUGGISH.

2. okneros (ὀκνηρός, 3636), “shrinking, irksome,” is translated “slothful” in Matt. 25:26, and Rom. 12:11, where “in diligence not slothful,” RV, might be rendered “not flagging in zeal.” See GRIEVOUS, Note (2).

SLOW

bradus (βραδύς, 1021) is used twice in Jas. 1:19, in an exhortation to “be slow to speak” and “slow to wrath”; in Luke 24:25, metaphorically of the understanding.¶

Note: For “slow” (argos) in Titus 1:12, see IDLE.

For SLOWLY (sailed) see SAIL, No. 10

SLUGGISH

nothros (νωθρός, 3576), for which see SLOTHFUL, is translated “sluggish in Heb. 6:12, RV; here it is set in contrast to confident and constant hope; in 5:11 (“dull”) to vigorous growth in knowledge. See DULL.¶

For SLUMBER (Noun) see STUPOR

SLUMBER (Verb)

nustazo (νυστάζω, 3573) denotes “to nod in sleep” (akin to neuo, “to nod”), “fall asleep,” and is used (a) of natural slumber, Matt. 25:5; (b) metaphorically in 2 Pet. 2:3, negatively, of the destruction awaiting false teachers.¶

SMALL

1. mikros (μικρός, 3398), “little, small” (of age, quantity, size, space), is translated “small” in Acts 26:22; Rev. 11:18; 13:16; 19:5, 18; 20:12. See LITTLE.

2. oligos (ὀλίγος, 3641), “little, small” (of amount, number, time), is translated “small” in Acts 12:18; 15:2; 19:23; v. 24; KJV (RV, “little”); 27:20.

Notes: (1) For “very small” and “smallest” see LEAST. (2) For combinations with other words, see CORD, FISH, ISLAND.

For SMELL see SAVOR

SMELLING

osphresis (ὀσφρησις, 3750) denotes “the sense of smell,” 1 Cor. 12:17, “smelling.”¶

SMITE

1. patasso (πατάσσω, 3960), “to strike, smite,” is used (I) literally, of giving a blow with the hand, or fist or a weapon, Matt. 26:51, RV, “smote” (KJV, “struck”); Luke 22:49, 50; Acts 7:24; 12:7; (II) metaphorically, (a) of judgment meted out to Christ, Matt. 26:31; Mark 14:27; (b) of the infliction of disease, by an angel, Acts 12:23; of plagues to be inflicted upon men by two divinely appointed witnesses, Rev. 11:6; (c) of judgment to be executed by Christ upon the nations, Rev. 19:15, the instrument being His Word, described as a sword.¶

2. tupto (τύπτω, 5180), “to strike, smite, beat,” is rendered “to smite” in Matt. 24:49, KJV (RV, “beat”); 27:30; Mark 15:19; Luke 6:29; 18:13; in some texts in 22:64 (1st part: RV omits; for the 2nd part see No. 3); 23:48; Acts 23:2, 3 (twice). See BEAT, No. 2.

3. paio (παίω, 3817) signifies “to strike or smite” (a) with the hand or fist, Matt. 26:68; Luke 22:64 (see No. 2); (b) with a sword, Mark 14:47; John 18:10, KJV (RV, “struck”); (c) with a sting, Rev. 9:5, “strieth.”¶

4. dero (δέρω, 1194), “to flay, to beat,” akin to derma, “skin,” is translated “to smite” in Luke 22:63, KJV (RV, “beat”); John 18:23; 2 Cor. 11:20. See BEAT, No. 1.

5. plesso (πλήσσω, 4141), akin to plege, “a plague, stripe, wound,” is used figuratively of the effect upon sun, moon and stars, after the sounding of the trumpet by the fourth angel, in the series of divine judgments upon the world hereafter, Rev. 8:12.¶

6. rhapizo (ῥαπίζω, 4474), primarily “to strike with a rod” (rhapis, “a rod”), then, “to strike the face with the palm of the hand or the clenched fist,” is used in Matt. 5:39; 26:67, where the marg. of KJV and RV has “with rods.” Cf. rhapisma, Note (2), below.¶

7. kataballo (καταβάλλω, 2598), “to cast down,” is translated “smitten down” in 2 Cor. 4:9, RV. See CAST, No. 8.

8. proskopto (προσκόπτω, 4350), “to beat upon,” is translated “smote upon” in Matt. 7:27. See BEAT, No. 6.

9. sphazo (σφάζω, 4969), “to slay,” is translated “smitten unto death” in Rev. 13:3; see KILL, SLAY.

Notes: (1) In Matt. 26:51, KJV, aphaireo, “to take away, take off,” is translated “smote off” (RV, “struck off”). (2) The noun rhapisma, “a blow,” in the plural, as the object of didomi, “to give,” in John 19:3 is translated “smote (Him) with their hands” (RV, “struck, etc.”), lit., “gave ... blows” (RV marg., “with rods”); in 18:22 (where the phrase is used with the singular of the noun) the RV renders it “struck ... with his hand” (KJV, “struck ... with the palm of his hand”), marg. of both, “with a rod.”

The same word is used in Mark 14:65, “(received Him) with blows (of their hands)”, RV [KJV, “did strike Him with the palms (of their hands),” RV margin, “strokes of rods”]. See BLOW (Noun).¶ Cf. No. 6, above, Matt. 26:67.

SMOKE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

kapnos (καπνός, 2586), “smoke,” occurs in Acts 2:19 and 12 times in the Apocalypse.¶

B. Verb.

tupho (τύφω, 5188), “to raise a smoke” [akin to tuphos, “smoke” (not in the NT), and tuphoo, “to puff up with pride, see HIGH-MINDED], is used in the passive voice in Matt. 12:20, “smoking (flax),” lit., “caused to smoke,” of the wick of a lamp which has ceased to burn clearly, figurative of mere nominal religiousness without the Spirit’s power.¶ The Sept. uses the verb kapnizo (akin to A).

SMOOTH

leoís (λεῖος, 3006), “smooth,” occurs in Luke 3:5, figurative of the change in Israel from self-righteousness, pride and other forms of evil, to repentance, humility and submission.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 27:11; 1 Sam. 17:40; Prov. 2:20; 12:13; 26:23; Isa. 40:4.¶

Note: Chrestologia (chrestos, “good,” lego, “to speak”) is rendered “smooth ... (speech),” in Rom. 16:18, RV (KJV, “good words”).¶

SNARE

1. pagis (παγίς, 3803), “a trap, a snare” (akin to pegnumi, “to fix,” and pagideuo, “to ensnare,” which see), is used metaphorically of (a) the allurements to evil by which the Devil “ensnares” one, 1 Tim. 3:7; 2 Tim. 2:26; (b) seductions to evil, which “ensnare” those who “desire to be rich,” 1 Tim. 6:9; (c) the evil brought by Israel upon themselves by which the special privileges divinely granted them and centering in Christ, became a “snare” to them, their rejection of Christ and the Gospel being the retributive effect of their apostasy, Rom. 11:9; (d) of the sudden judgments of God to come upon those whose hearts are “overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life,” Luke 21:34 (v. 35 in KJV).¶

2. brochos (βρόχος, 1029), “a noose, slipknot, halter,” is used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 7:35, “a snare” (RV, marg., “constraint,” “noose”).¶ In the Sept., Prov. 6:5; 7:21; 22:25.¶

SNATCH

harpazo (ἁρπάζω, 726), “to snatch,” is translated “to snatch” in the RV only, in Matt. 13:19, KJV, “catcheth away”; John 10:12, KJV, “catcheth”; 10:28, 29, KJV, “pluck”; Jude 23, KJV, “pulling.” See CATCH, No. 1.

SNOW

chion (χιών, 5510) occurs in Matt. 28:3; Rev. 1:14. Some mss. have it in Mark 9:3 (KJV).¶

SO

Notes: (1) Houtos or houto, “thus,” is the usual word (see THUS). (2) Some form of houtos, “this,” is sometimes rendered “so,” e.g., Acts 23:7; Rom. 12:20. (3) It translates homoios, “likewise,” e.g., in Luke 5:10; oun, “therefore,” e.g., John 4:40, 53. (4) For “so many as,” see MANY; for “so much as,” see MUCH. (5) Sumbaino, when used of events, signifies “to come to pass, happen”; in Acts 21:35 it is rendered “so it was.” See BEFALL, HAPPEN. (6) In 1 Pet. 3:17, thelo, “to will,” is translated “should so will,” lit., “willeth.” (7) In 2 Cor. 12:16, the imperative mood, 3rd person singular, of eimi, “to be,” is used impersonally, and signifies “be it so.” (8) In Heb. 7:9 epos, “a word,” is used in a phrase rendered “so to say”; see WORD, Note (1). (9) In 1 Tim. 3:11, hosautos, “likewise,” is translated “even so.” (10) Hos, as, is rendered “so” in Heb. 3:11 (RV, “as”). For association with other words see †, p. 1.

SOBER, SOBERLY, SOBERMINDED

A. Adjective.

sophron (σώφρων, 4998) denotes “of sound mind” (sozo, “to save,” phren, “the mind”); hence, “self-controlled, soberminded,” always rendered “sober-minded” in the RV; in 1 Tim. 3:2 and Titus 1:8, KJV, “sober”; in Titus 2:2, KJV, “temperate”; in 2:5, KJV, “discreet.”¶

Note: For nephalios (akin to B, No. 1), translated “sober” in 1 Tim. 3:11; Titus 2:2, see TEMPERATE.

B. Verbs.

1. nepho (νήφω, 3525) signifies “to be free from the influence of intoxicants”; in the NT, metaphorically, it does not in itself imply watchfulness, but is used in association with it, 1 Thess. 5:6, 8; 2 Tim. 4:5; 1 Pet. 1:13; 4:7, RV (KJV, “watch”); 5:8.¶ Cf. eknepho and ananepho, under AWAKE, No. 3 and Note.

2. sophroneo (σωφρονέω, 4993), akin to A, is rendered “to think soberly,” Rom. 12:3; “to be sober,” 2 Cor. 5:13; “to be soberminded,” Titus 2:6; in 1 Pet. 4:7, KJV “be ye sober” (RV, “of sound mind”); see MIND, B, No. 5.

3. sophronizo (σωφρονίζω, 4994) denotes “to cause to be of sound mind, to recall to one’s senses”; in Titus 2:4, RV, it is rendered “they may train” (KJV, “they may teach ... to be sober,” marg., “wise”); “train” expresses the meaning more adequately; the training would involve the cultivation of sound judgment and prudence.¶

C. Adverb.

sophronos (σωφρόνως, 4996), akin to A and B, Nos. 2 and 3, “soberly,” occurs in Titus 2:12; it suggests the exercise of that self-restraint that governs all passions and desires, enabling the believer to be conformed to the mind of Christ.¶

Note: For the phrase “to think soberly,” see B, No. 2.

SOBERNESS, SOBRIETY

sophrosune (σωφροσύνη, 4997) denotes “soundness of mind” (see SOBER, A), Acts 26:25, “soberness”; 1 Tim. 2:9, 15, “sobriety”; “sound judgment” practically expresses the meaning; “it is that habitual inner self-government, with its constant rein on all the passions and desires, which would hinder the temptation to these from arising, or at all events from arising in such strength as would overbear the checks and barriers which aidos (shamefastness) opposed to it” (Trench Syn. Sec.xx, end).¶

For SOFT see EFFEMINATE

For SOFTLY see BLOW (Verb), No. 2

SOJOURN, SOJOURNER, SOJOURNING

A. Verbs.

1. paroikeo (παροικέω, 3939) denotes “to dwell beside, among or by” (para, “beside,” oikeo, “to dwell”); then, “to dwell in a place as a paroikos, a stranger” (see below), Luke 24:18, RV, “Dost thou (alone) sojourn ...?” [marg., “Dost thou sojourn (alone)” is preferable], KJV, “art thou (only) a stranger?” (monos, “alone,” is an adjective, not an adverb); in Heb. 11:9, RV, “he became a sojourner” (KJV, “he sojourned”), the RV gives the force of the aorist tense.¶

2. epidemeo (ἐπιδημέω, 1927) is rendered “to sojourn” in Acts 17:21, RV.

B. Adjectives.

1. paroikos (πάροικος, 3941), an adjective, akin to A, No. 1, lit., “dwelling near” (see above), then, “foreign, alien” (found with this meaning in inscriptions), hence, as a noun, “a sojourner,” is used with eimi, “to be,” in Acts 7:6, “should sojourn,” lit., “should be a sojourner”; in 7:29, RV, “sojourner” (KJV, “stranger”); in Eph. 2:19, RV, “sojourners” (KJV, “foreigners”), the preceding word rendered “strangers” is xenos; in 1 Pet. 2:11, RV, ditto (KJV, “strangers”).¶

2. apodemos (ἀπόδημος, 590), “gone abroad” (apo, “from,” demos, “people”), signifies “sojourning in another country,” Mark 13:34, RV (KJV, “taking a far journey”).¶

3. parepidemos (παρεπίδημος, 3927), “sojourning in a strange place,” is used as a noun, denoting “a sojourner, an exile,” 1 Pet. 1:1, RV, “sojourners” (KJV, “strangers”). See PILGRIM.¶

C. Noun.

paroikia (παροικία, 3940), “a sojourning” (akin to A and B, Nos. 1), occurs in Acts 13:17, rendered “they sojourned,” RV, KJV, “dwelt as strangers,” lit., “in the sojourning”; in 1 Pet. 1:17, “sojourning.”¶

SOLDIER

A. Nouns.

1. stratiotes (στρατιώτης, 4757), “a soldier,” is used (a) in the natural sense, e.g., Matt. 8:9; 27:27; 28:12; Mark 15:16; Luke 7:8; 23:36; six times in John; thirteen times in Acts; not again in the NT; (b) metaphorically of one who endures hardship in the cause of Christ, 2 Tim. 2:3.

2. strateuma (στράτευμα, 4753), “an army,” is used to denote “a company of soldiers” in Acts 23:10; in v. 27, RV, “the soldiers,” KJV, “an army”; in Luke 23:11 (plural), RV, “soldiers,” KJV, “men of war.” See ARMY.

3. sustratiotes (συστρατιώτης, 4961), “a fellow-soldier” (sun, “with,” and No. 1), is used metaphorically in Phil. 2:25 and Philem. 2, of fellowship in Christian service.¶

B. Verb.

strateuo (στρατεύομαι, 4754), always in the middle voice in the NT, is used (a) literally of “serving as a soldier,” Luke 3:14, “soldiers” (RV, marg., “soldiers on service,” present participle); 1 Cor. 9:7, RV, “(what) soldier ... serveth,” KJV, “(who) goeth a warfare”; 2 Tim. 2:4, RV, “soldier on service,” KJV, “man that warreth,” lit., “serving as a soldier”; (b) metaphorically, of “spiritual conflict”: see WAR.

Notes: (1) For spekoulator, Mark 6:27, RV, “soldier of his guard,” see GUARD.¶ (2) In 2 Tim. 2:4 stratologeō is rendered “hath chosen (him) to be a soldier,” KJV (RV, “enrolled (him) as a soldier”).¶

stereos (στερεός, 4731), for which see FIRM, No. 2, has the meaning “solid” in Heb. 5:12, 14, of food (KJV, “strong”). As “solid” food requires more powerful digestive organs than are possessed by a babe, so a fuller knowledge of Christ (especially here with reference to His Melchizedek priesthood) required that exercise of spiritual intelligence which is derived from the practical appropriation of what had already been received.

For SOLITARY, Mark 1:35, KJV, see DESERT, B

SOME, SOMEONE, SOMETHING, SOMEWHAT

Notes: (1) Various forms of the article and certain pronouns, followed by the particles men and de denote “some.” These are not enumerated here. (2) The indefinite pronoun tis in its singular or plural forms, frequently means “some,” “some one” (translated “some man,” in the KJV, e.g., of Acts 8:31; 1 Cor. 15:35), or “somebody,” Luke 8:46; the neuter plural denotes “some things” in 2 Pet. 3:16; the singular denotes “something,” e.g., Luke 11:54; John 13:29 (2nd part); Acts 3:5; 23:18; Gal. 6:3, where the meaning is “anything,” as in 2:6, “somewhat.” It is translated “somewhat,” in the more indefinite sense, in Luke 7:40; Acts 23:20; 25:26; 2 Cor. 10:8; Heb. 8:3. See also ONE, B, No. 1. (3) Meros, “a part, a measure,” preceded by the preposition apo, “from,” is translated “in some measure” in Rom. 15:15, RV (KJV, “in some sort”), and v. 24 (KJV, “somewhat”). (4) In the following alloi, “others” (“some” in the KJV), is translated “others” in the RV, Matt. 13:5, 7; Mark 4:7 (“other”); 8:28; Luke 9:19; John 9:9. Followed by a correlative expression it denotes “some,” e.g., Acts 19:32; 21:34; see OTHER, No. 1.

For SOMETIMES see TIME

SOMEWHERE

pou (πού, 4225), a particle, signifies “somewhere” in Heb. 2:6 and 4:4, RV (KJV, “in a certain place”); the writer avoids mentioning the place to add stress to his testimony. See HAPPLY, No. 5, VERILY.

SON

huios (υἱός, 5207) primarily signifies the relation of offspring to parent (see John 9:18-20; Gal. 4:30). It is often used metaphorically of prominent moral characteristics (see below). “It is used in the NT of (a) male offspring, Gal. 4:30; (b) legitimate, as opposed to illegitimate offspring, Heb. 12:8; (c) descendants, without reference to sex, Rom. 9:27; (d) friends attending a wedding, Matt. 9:15; (e) those who enjoy certain privileges, Acts 3:25; (f) those who act in a certain way, whether evil, Matt. 23:31, or good, Gal. 3:7; (g) those who manifest a certain character, whether evil, Acts 13:10; Eph. 2:2, or good, Luke 6:35; Acts 4:36; Rom. 8:14; (h) the destiny that corresponds with the character, whether evil, Matt. 23:15; John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3, or good, Luke 20:36; (i) the dignity of the relationship with God whereinto men are brought by the Holy Spirit when they believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, Rom. 8:19; Gal. 3:26....

“The Apostle John does not use huios, ‘son,’ of the believer, he reserves that title for the Lord; but he does use teknon, ‘child,’ as in his Gospel, 1:12; 1 John 3:1, 2; Rev. 21:7 (huios) is a quotation from 2 Sam. 7:14.

“As to moral characteristics, the following phrases are used: (a) sons of God, Matt. 5:9, 45; Luke 6:35; (b) sons of the light, Luke 16:8; John 12:36; (c) sons of the day, 1 Thess. 5:5; (d) sons of peace, Luke 10:6; (e) sons of this world, Luke 16:8; (f) sons of disobedience, Eph. 2:2; (g) sons of the evil one, Matt. 13:38, cf. ‘of the Devil,’ Acts 13:10; (h) son of perdition, John 17:12; 2 Thess. 2:3. It is also used to describe characteristics other than moral, as: (i) sons of the resurrection, Luke 20:36; (j) sons of the Kingdom, Matt. 8:12; 13:38; (k) sons of the bridechamber, Mark 2:19; (l) sons of exhortation, Acts 4:36; (m) sons of thunder, Boanerges, Mark 3:17.”*

Notes: (1) For the synonyms teknon and teknion see under CHILD. The difference between believers as “children of God” and as “sons of God” is brought out in Rom. 8:14-21. The Spirit bears witness with their spirit that they are “children of God,” and, as such, they are His heirs and joint-heirs with Christ. This stresses the fact of their spiritual birth (vv. 16, 17). On the other hand, “as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God,” i.e., “these and no other.” Their conduct gives evidence of the dignity of their relationship and their likeness to His character. (2) Pais is rendered “son” in John 4:51. For Acts 13:13, 26 see below.

The Son of God

In this title the word “Son” is used sometimes (a) of relationship, sometimes (b) of the expression of character. “Thus, e.g., when the disciples so addressed Him, Matt. 14:33; 16:16; John 1:49, when the centurion so spoke of Him, Matt. 27:54, they probably meant that (b) He was a manifestation of God in human form. But in such passages as Luke 1:32, 35; Acts 13:33, which refer to the humanity of the Lord Jesus, ... the word is used in sense (a).

“The Lord Jesus Himself used the full title on occasion, John 5:25; 9:35 [some mss. have ‘the Son of Man’; see RV marg.]; 11:4, and on the more frequent occasions on which He spoke of Himself as ‘the Son,’ the words are to be understood as an abbreviation of ‘the Son of God,’ not of ‘The Son of Man’; this latter He always expressed in full; see Luke 10:22; John 5:19, etc.

Other titles of Christ as the “Son of God” are: “His Son,” 1 Thess. 1:10 (in Acts 13:13, 26, RV, pais is rendered “servant”); “His own Son,” Rom. 8:32; “My beloved Son,” Matt. 3:17; “His Only Begotten Son,” John 3:16; “the Son of His love,” Col. 1:13.

“The Son is the eternal object of the Father’s love, John 17:24, and the sole Revealer of the Father’s character, John 1:14; Heb. 1:3. The words, ‘Father’ and ‘Son,’ are never in the NT so used as to suggest that the Father existed before the Son; the Prologue to the Gospel according to John distinctly asserts that the Word existed ‘in the beginning,’ and that this Word is the Son, Who ‘became flesh and dwelt among us.’”*

In addressing the Father in His prayer in John 17 He says, “Thou lovedst Me before the foundation of the world.” Accordingly in the timeless past the Father and the “Son” existed in that relationship, a relationship of love, as well as of absolute Deity. In this passage the “Son” gives evidence that there was no more powerful plea in the Father’s estimation than that coeternal love existing between the Father and Himself.

The declaration “Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee,” Ps. 2:7, quoted in Acts 13:33; Heb. 1:5; 5:5, refers to the birth of Christ, not to His resurrection. In Acts 13:33 the verb “raise up” is used of the raising up of a person to occupy a special position in the nation, as of David in verse 22 (so of Christ as a Prophet in 3:22 and 7:37). The word “again” in the KJV in v. 33 represents nothing in the original. The RV rightly omits it. In v. 34 the statement as to the resurrection of Christ receives the greater stress in this respect through the emphatic contrast to that in v. 33 as to His being raised up in the nation, a stress imparted by the added words “from the dead.” Accordingly v. 33 speaks of His incarnation, v. 34 of His resurrection.

In Heb. 1:5, that the declaration refers to the Birth is confirmed by the contrast in verse 6. Here the word “again” is rightly placed in the RV, “when He again bringeth in the Firstborn into the world.” This points on to His second advent, which is set in contrast to His first advent, when God brought His Firstborn into the world the first time (see FIRSTBORN).†

So again in Heb. 5:5, where the High Priesthood of Christ is shown to fulfill all that was foreshadowed in the Levitical priesthood, the passage stresses the facts of His humanity, the days of His flesh, His perfect obedience and His sufferings.

Son of Man

In the NT this is a designation of Christ, almost entirely confined to the Gospels. Elsewhere it is found in Acts 7:56, the only occasion where a disciple applied it to the Lord and in Rev. 1:13; 14:14 (see below).

“Son of Man” is the title Christ used of Himself; John 12:34 is not an exception, for the quotation by the multitude was from His own statement. The title is found especially in the Synoptic Gospels. The occurrences in John’s gospel, 1:51; 3:13, 14; 5:27; 6:27, 53, 62; 8:28 (9:35 in some texts); 12:23, 34 (twice); 13:31, are not parallel to those in the Synoptic Gospels. In the latter the use of the title falls into two groups, (a) those in which it refers to Christ’s humanity, His earthly work, sufferings and death, e.g., Matt. 8:20; 11:19; 12:40; 26:2, 24; (b) those which refer to His glory in resurrection and to that of His future advent, e.g., Matt. 10:23; 13:41; 16:27, 28; 17:9; 24:27, 30 (twice), 37, 39, 44.

While it is a messianic title it is evident that the Lord applied it to Himself in a distinctive way, for it indicates more than Messiahship, even universal headship on the part of One who is Man. It therefore stresses His manhood, manhood of a unique order in comparison with all other men, for He is declared to be of heaven, 1 Cor. 15:47, and even

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine. pp. 46. 47.

† The Western text of Luke 3:22 reads “Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee,” instead of “Thou art My beloved Son. in Thee I am well pleased.” There is probably some connection between this and those early heresies which taught that our Lord’s deity began at His baptism.

while here below, was “the Son of Man, which is in Heaven,” John 3:13. As the “Son of Man” He must be appropriated spiritually as a condition of possessing eternal life, John 6:53. In His death, as in His life, the glory of His Manhood was displayed in the absolute obedience and submission to the will of the Father (12:23; 13:31), and, in view of this, all judgment has been committed to Him, who will judge in full understanding experimentally of human conditions, sin apart, and will exercise the judgment as sharing the nature of those judged, John 5:22, 27. Not only is He man, but He is “Son of Man,” not by human generation but, according to the Semitic usage of the expression, partaking of the characteristics (sin apart) of manhood belonging to the category of mankind. Twice in the Apocalypse, 1:13 and 14:14, He is described as “One like unto a Son of man,” RV (KJV, “... the Son of Man”), cf. Dan. 7:13. He who was thus seen was indeed the “Son of Man,” but the absence of the article in the original serves to stress what morally characterizes Him as such. Accordingly in these passages He is revealed, not as the Person known by the title, but as the One who is qualified to act as the Judge of all men. He is the same Person as in the days of His flesh, still continuing His humanity with His Deity. The phrase “like unto” serves to distinguish Him as there seen in His glory and majesty in contrast to the days of His humiliation.

SONG

ode (ὕμνη, 5603), “an ode, song,” is always used in the NT (as in the Sept.), in praise of God or Christ; in Eph. 5:19 and Col. 3:16 the adjective “spiritual” is added, because the word in itself is generic and might be used of songs anything but spiritual; in Rev. 5:9 and 14:3 (1st part) the descriptive word is “new” (kainos, “new,” in reference to character and form: see NEW), a “song,” the significance of which was confined to those mentioned (v. 3, and 2nd part); in 15:3 (twice), “the song of Moses ... and the song of the Lamb,” the former as celebrating the deliverance of God’s people by His power, the latter as celebrating redemption by atoning sacrifice.¶

SOOTHSAYING

manteuomai (μαντεύομαι, 3132), “to divine, practice divination” (from mantis, “a seer, diviner”), occurs in Acts 16:16.¶ The word is allied to mainomai, “to rave,” and mania, “fury” displayed by those who were possessed by the evil spirit (represented by the pagan god or goddess) while delivering their oracular messages. Trench (Syn. Sec.vi) draws a distinction between this verb and propheteuo, not only as to their meanings, but as to the fact of the single occurrence of manteuomai in the NT, contrasted with the frequency of propheteuo, exemplifying the avoidance by NT writers of words the employment of which “would tend to break down the distinction between heathenism and revealed religion.”

SOP

psomion (ψωμίον, 5596), a diminutive of psomos, “a morsel,” denotes “a fragment, a sop” (akin to psomizo; see FEED), John 13:26 (twice), 27, 30. It had no connection with the modern meaning of “sop,” something given to pacify (as in the classical expression “a sop to Cerberus”).¶

SORCERER

1. magos (μάγος, 3097), (a) “one of a Median caste, a magician”: see WISE; (b) “a wizard, sorcerer, a pretender to magic powers, a professor of the arts of witchcraft,” Acts 13:6, 8, where Bar-Jesus was the Jewish name, Elymas, an Arabic word meaning “wise.” Hence the name Magus, “the magician,” originally applied to Persian priests. In the Sept., only in Dan. 2:2, 10, of the “enchanters,” RV (KJV, “astrologers”), of Babylon. The superior Greek version of Daniel by Theodotion has it also at 1:20; 2:27; 4:7; 5:7, 11, 15.¶

2. pharmakos (φαρμακός, 5333), an adjective signifying “devoted to magical arts,” is used as a noun, “a sorcerer,” especially one who uses drugs, potions, spells, enchantments, Rev. 21:8, in the best texts (some have pharmakeus), and 22:15.¶

SORCERY

A. Nouns.

1. pharmakia (or —eia) (φαρμακεία, 5331) (Eng., “pharmacy,” etc.) primarily signified “the use of medicine, drugs, spells”; then, “poisoning”; then, “sorcery,” Gal. 5:20, RV, “sorcery” (KJV, “witchcraft”), mentioned as one of “the works of the flesh.” See also Rev. 9:21; 18:23.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 7:11, 22; 8:7, 18; Isa. 47:9, 12.¶ In “sorcery,” the use of drugs, whether simple or potent, was generally accompanied by incantations and appeals to occult powers, with the provision of various charms, amulets, etc., professedly designed to keep the applicant or patient from the attention and power of demons, but actually to impress the applicant with the mysterious resources and powers of the sorcerer.

2. magia (or —eia) (μαγεία, 3095), “the magic art,” is used in the plural in Acts 8:11, “sorceries (see SORCERER, No. 1).¶

B. Verb.

mageuo (μαγεύω, 3096), akin to A, No. 2, “to practice magic,” Acts 8:9, “used sorcery,” is used as in A, No. 2, of Simon Magnus.¶

SORE (Noun, Adjective, Adverb), SORER

A. Noun.

helkos (ἕλκος, 1668), “a sore” or “ulcer” (primarily a wound), occurs in Luke 16:21; Rev. 16:2, 11.¶

B. Verb.

helkoo (ἐλκώ, 1669), “to wound, to ulcerate,” is used in the passive voice, signifying “to suffer from sores,” to be “full of sores,” Luke 16:20 (perfect participle).¶

C. Adjectives.

1. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), used of things, occasionally denotes “much,” translated “sore” in Acts 20:37, lit., “there was much weeping of all. See ABLE, C, No. 2.

2. cheiron (χείρων, 5501), “worse” (used as a comparative degree of kakos, “evil”), occurs in Heb. 10:29, “sorier.” See WORSE.

D. Adverbs.

1. lian (λίαν, 3029), “very, exceedingly,” is translated “sore” in Mark 6:51 (of amazement). See EXCEED, B, No. 1.

2. sphodra (σφόδρα, 4970), “very, very much,” is translated “sore” in Matt. 17:6 (of fear). See GREATLY, Note (1).

Notes: (1) For the KV, “sore vexed” in Matt. 17:15, see GRIEVOUSLY, B, No. 2, Note (2). (2) In Luke 2:9 megas, “great,” is used with phobos, “fear,” as the object of the verb “to fear,” “(they were) sore (afraid),” lit., “(they feared) a great (fear).” (3) In Mark 9:26, KJV, polla, “much” (RV), the neuter plur. of polus, used as an adverb, is translated “sore.” (4) In Matt. 21:15, aganakteo, “to be moved with indignation” (RV), is translated “they were sore displeased.” (5) For the RV, “sore troubled,” Matt. 26:37 and Mark 14:33 (KJV, “very heavy”), see TROUBLE, B, No. 12. (6) For KJV, “were sore amazed” in Mark 14:33, see AMAZE, B, No. 4. (7) In Luke 9:39, RV, suntribo, “to break, bruise,” is rendered “bruise sorely.” See BREAK, A, No. 5. (8) In Mark 9:6, ekphobos is rendered “sore afraid.”

SORROW (Noun and Verb), SORROWFUL

A. Nouns.

1. lupe (λύπη, 3077), “grief, sorrow,” is translated “sorrow” in Luke 22:45; John 16:6, 20-22; Rom. 9:2, RV (KJV, “heaviness”); 2 Cor. 2:1, RV; 2:3, 7; 7:10 (twice); Phil. 2:27 (twice). See GRIEF.

2. odune (ὀδύνη, 3601), “pain, consuming grief, distress,” whether of body or mind, is used of the latter, Rom. 9:2, RV, “pain”; 1 Tim. 6:10.¶

3. odin (ὠδίν, 5604), “a birth-pang, travail, pain,” “sorrows,” Matt. 24:8; Mark 13:8; see PAIN, A, No. 2.

4. penthos (πένθος, 3997), “mourning,” “sorrow,” Rev. 18:7 (twice); 21:4: see MOURN.

B. Verbs.

1. lupeo (λυπέω, 3076), akin to A, No. 1: see GRIEF, B, No. 1, SORRY, A (below).

2. odunao (ὀδυνάω, 3600), “to cause pain” (akin to A, No. 2), is used in the middle voice in Luke 2:48; Acts 20:38: see ANGUISH, B, No. 3.

C. Adjectives.

1. perilupos (περίλυπος, 4036), “very sad, deeply grieved” (peri, intensive), is used in Matt. 26:38 and Mark 14:34, “exceeding sorrowful”; Mark 6:26; Luke 18:23 (v. 24 in some mss.).¶

2. alupos (ἀλυπότερος, 253) denotes “free from grief” (a, negative, lupe, “grief”), comparative degree in Phil. 2:28, “less sorrowful,” their joy would mean the removal of a burden from his heart.¶

SORRY

A. Verb.

lupeo (λυπέω, 3076) is rendered “to be sorry” (passive voice) in Matt. 14:9, KJV (RV, “grieved”); 17:23; 18:31; 2 Cor. 2:2 [1st part, active voice, “make sorry” (as in 7:8, twice); 2nd part, passive]; 2:4, RV, “made sorry”; 9:9 and 11, RV, “ye were made sorry.” See GRIEVE, B, No. 1.

B. Adjective.

perilupos (περίλυπος, 4036) is translated “exceeding sorry” in Mark 6:26: see SORROWFUL, C, No. 1.

SORT

A. Adjective.

hopoios (ὁποῖος, 3697), “of what sort,” is so rendered in 1 Cor. 3:13. See MANNER, SUCH AS, WHAT.

B. Noun.

meros (μέρος, 3313), “a part,” is used with apo, “from,” in Rom. 15:15 and rendered “(in some) sort,” KJV (RV, “... measure”). See BEHALF.

Note: See BASE, No. 3, GODLY, C, Notes (2) and (3).

For SOUGHT see SEEK

SOUL

psuche (ψυχή, 5590) denotes “the breath, the breath of life,” then “the soul,” in its various meanings. The NT uses “may be analyzed approximately as follows:

(a) the natural life of the body, Matt. 2:20; Luke 12:22; Acts 20:10; Rev. 8:9; 12:11; cf. Lev. 17:11; 2 Sam. 14:7; Esth. 8:11; (b) the immaterial, invisible part of man, Matt. 10:28; Acts 2:27; cf. 1 Kings 17:21; (c) the disembodied (or “unclothed” or “naked,” 2 Cor. 5:3, 4) man, Rev. 6:9; (d) the seat of personality, Luke 9:24, explained as = “own self,” v. 25; Heb. 6:19; 10:39; cf. Isa. 53:10 with 1 Tim. 2:6; (e) the seat of the sentient element in man, that by which he perceives, reflects, feels, desires, Matt. 11:29; Luke 1:46; 2:35; Acts 14:2, 22; cf. Ps. 84:2; 139:14; Isa. 26:9; (f) the seat of will and purpose, Matt. 22:37; Acts 4:32; Eph. 6:6; Phil. 1:27; Heb. 12:3; cf. Num. 21:4; Deut. 11:13; (g) the seat of appetite, Rev. 18:14; cf. Ps. 107:9; Prov. 6:30; Isa. 5:14 (“desire”); 29:8; (h) persons, individuals, Acts 2:41, 43; Rom. 2:9; Jas. 5:20; 1 Pet. 3:20; 2 Pet. 2:14; cf. Gen. 12:5; 14:21 (“persons”); Lev. 4:2 (“any one”); Ezek. 27:13; of dead bodies, Num. 6:6, lit., “dead soul”; and of animals, Lev. 24:18, lit., “soul for soul”; (i) the equivalent of the personal pronoun, used for emphasis and effect:—1st person, John 10:24 (“us”); Heb. 10:38; cf. Gen. 12:13; Num. 23:10; Jud. 16:30; Ps. 120:2 (“me”); 2nd person, 2 Cor. 12:15; Heb. 13:17; Jas. 1:21; 1 Pet. 1:9; 2:25; cf. Lev. 17:11; 26:15; 1 Sam. 1:26; 3rd person, 1 Pet. 4:19; 2 Pet. 2:8; cf. Exod. 30:12; Job 32:2, Heb. “soul,” Sept. “self”; (j) an animate creature, human or other, 1 Cor. 15:45; Rev. 16:3; cf. Gen. 1:24; 2:7, 19; (k) “the inward man,” the seat of the new life, Luke 21:19 (cf. Matt. 10:39); 1 Pet. 2:11; 3 John 2.

“With (j) compare a-psuchos, “soulless, inanimate,” 1 Cor. 14:7.¶

“With (f) compare di-psuchos, “two-souled,” Jas. 1:8; 4:8;¶ oligo psuchos, “feeble-souled,” 1 Thess. 5:14;¶ iso-psuchos, “like-souled,” Phil. 2:20;¶ sum-psuchos, “joint-souled” (“with. one accord”), Phil. 2:2.¶

“The language of Heb. 4:12 suggests the extreme difficulty of distinguishing between the soul and the spirit, alike in their nature and in their activities. Generally speaking the spirit is the higher, the soul the lower element. The spirit may be recognized as the life principle bestowed on man by God, the soul as the resulting life constituted in the individual, the body being the material organism animated by soul and spirit....

“Body and soul are the constituents of the man according to Matt. 6:25; 10:28; Luke 12:20; Acts 20:10; body and spirit according to Luke 8:55; 1 Cor. 5:3; 7:34; Jas. 2:26. In Matt. 26:38 the emotions are associated with the soul, in John 13:21 with the spirit; cf. also Ps. 42:11 with 1 Kings 21:5. In Ps. 35:9 the soul rejoices in God, in Luke 1:47 the spirit.

“Apparently, then, the relationships may be thus summed up ‘Soma, body, and pneuma, spirit, may be separated, pneuma and psuche, soul, can only be distinguished’ (Cremer).”*

SOUND (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. phone (φωνή, 5456), most frequently “a voice,” is translated “sound” in Matt. 24:31 (KJV marg., “voice”); John 3:8, KJV (RV, “voice”); so 1 Cor. 14:7 (1st part), 8; Rev. 1:15; 18:22 (2nd part, RV, “voice”); KJV and RV in 9:9 (twice); in Acts 2:6, RV, “(this) sound (was heard),” KJV, “(this) was noised abroad.”

2. echos (ἦχος, 2279), “a noise, a sound of any sort” (Eng., “echo”), is translated “sound” in Acts 2:2; Heb. 12:19. See ROARING, B, RUMOR.

3. phthongos (φθόγγος, 5353), akin to phthengomai, “to utter a voice,” occurs in Rom. 10:18; 1 Cor. 14:7.¶ In the Sept, Ps. 19:4.¶

B. Verbs.

1. echeo (ἠχέω, 2278), akin to A, No. 2, occurs in 1 Cor. 13:1, “sounding (brass)” in some mss., Luke 21:25. See ROARING.¶

2. execheo (ἐξηχέομαι, 1837), “to sound forth as a trumpet” or “thunder” (ex, “out,” and No. 1), is used in 1 Thess. 1:8, “sounded forth,” passive voice, lit., “has been sounded out.”¶ In the Sept., Joel 3:14.¶

3. salpizo (σαλπίζω, 4537), “to sound a trumpet” (salpinx), occurs in Matt. 6:2; 1 Cor. 15:52, “the trumpet shall sound”; Rev. 8:6-8, 10, 12, 13; 9:1, 13; 10:7; 11:15.¶

4. bolizo (βολίζω, 1001), “to heave the lead” (bolis, “that which is thrown or hurled,” akin to ballo, “to throw”; sounding-lead), to take soundings, occurs in Acts 27:28 (twice).¶

Note: In Luke 1:44, KJV, ginomai, “to become,” is rendered “sounded” (RV, “came”).

SOUND (Adjective), BE SOUND

---

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine pp. 205-207.

A. Adjective.

hugies (ἁκριβῶς, 199), “whole, healthy,” is used metaphorically of “sound speech,” Titus 2:8. See WHOLE.

B. Verb.

hugiaino (ὕγιαίνω, 5198), “to be healthy, sound in health” (Eng., “hygiene,” etc.), translated “safe and sound” in Luke 15:27, is used metaphorically of doctrine, 1 Tim. 1:10; 2 Tim. 4:3; Titus 1:9; 2:1; of words, 1 Tim. 6:3, RV (KJV, “wholesome,” RV marg., “healthful”); 2 Tim. 1:13; “in the faith,” Titus 1:13 (RV marg., “healthy”); “in faith,” Titus 2:2 (RV marg., ditto).

Note: For “sound mind” in 2 Tim. 1:7, KJV, see DISCIPLINE; in 1 Pet. 4:7 (KJV, “sober”), see MIND, B, No. 5.

SOUNDNESS

holokleria (ὁλοκληρία, 3647), “completeness, soundness” (akin to holokleros, see ENTIRE), occurs in Acts 3:16.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 1:6.¶

SOUTH, SOUTH WIND

notos (νότος, 3558) denotes (a) “the south wind,” Luke 12:55; Acts 27:13; 28:13; (b) “south,” as a direction, Luke 13:29; Rev. 21:13; (c) “the South,” as a region, Matt. 12:42; Luke 11:31.¶

Note: For mesembria, Acts 8:26, see NOON.

SOUTHWEST

lips (λίψ, 3047), lit., “Libyan,” denotes “the S.W. wind,” Acts 27:12, “(looking) northeast (and southeast),” RV, lit., “(looking down) the southwest wind (and down the northwest wind)”]; to look down a wind was to look in the direction in which it blows. A S.W. wind blows towards the N.E.; the aspect of the haven answers to this. See also under NORTHEAST, NORTHWEST.¶

SOW (Noun)

hus (ὑς, 5300), “swine” (masc. or fem.), is used in the fem. in 2 Pet. 2:22.¶

SOW (Verb), SOWER

speiro (σπείρω, 4687), “to sow seed,” is used (1) literally, especially in the Synoptic Gospels; elsewhere, 1 Cor. 15:36, 37; 2 Cor. 9:10, “the sower”, (2) metaphorically, (a) in proverbial sayings, e.g., Matt. 13:3, 4; Luke 19:21, 22; John 4:37; 2 Cor. 9:6; (b) in the interpretation of parables, e.g., Matt. 13:19-23 (in these vv., RV, “was sown,” for KJV, “received seed”); (c) otherwise as follows: of “sowing” spiritual things in preaching and teaching, 1 Cor. 9:11; of the interment of the bodies of deceased believers, 1 Cor. 15:42-44; of ministering to the necessities of others in things temporal (the harvest being proportionate to the “sowing”), 2 Cor. 9:6, 10 (see above); of “sowing” to the flesh, Gal. 6:7, 8 (“that” in v. 7 is emphatic, “that and that only,” what was actually “sown”); in v. 8, eis, “unto,” signifies “in the interests of”; of the “fruit of righteousness” by peacemakers, Jas. 3:18.

SPACE

A. Noun.

diastema (διάστημα, 1292), “an interval, space” (akin to B), is used of time in Acts 5:7.¶

B. Verb.

diistemi (διίστημι, 1339), “to set apart, separate” (dia, “apart,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), see A, is rendered “after the space of” in Luke 22:59; in Acts 27:28, with brachu, “a little,” RV, “after a little space” (KJV, “when they had gone a little further”). See PART.

Notes: (1) In Acts 15:33 and Rev. 2:21, KJV, chronos, “time” (RV), is translated “space.” (2) In Acts 19:8 and 10, epi, “for or during” (of time), is translated “for the space of”; in 19:34, “about the space of” (3) In Acts 5:34, KJV, brachu (the neuter of brachus, “short”), used adverbially, is translated “a little space” (RV “... while”). (4) In Gal. 2:1, dia, “through,” is rendered “after the space of,” RV, stressing the length of the period mentioned (KJV, “after,” which would represent the preposition meta). (5) In Jas. 5:17 there is no word in the original representing the phrase “by the space of,” KJV (RV, “for”). (6) In Rev. 14:20, KJV, apo, “away from,” is translated “by the space of” (RV, “as far as”). (7) In Rev. 17:10, KJV, oligon, “a little while” (RV), is rendered “a short space.”

SPARE, SPARINGLY

A. Verb.

pheidomai (φείδομαι, 5339), “to spare,” i.e., “to forego” the infliction of that evil or retribution which was designed, is used with a negative in Acts 20:29; Rom. 8:32; 11:21 (twice); 2 Cor. 13:2; 2 Pet. 2:4, 5; positively, in 1 Cor. 7:28; 2 Cor. 1:3; rendered “forbear” in 2 Cor. 12:6. See FOREBEAR.¶

Note: In Luke 15:17, perisseuo, “to abound, have abundance,” is translated “have enough and to spare.”

B. Adverb.

pheidomenos (φειδομένως, 5340), akin to A, “sparingly,” occurs in 2 Cor. 9:6 (twice), of sowing and reaping.

SPARROW

strouthion (στρουθίον, 4765), a diminutive of strouthos, “a sparrow,” occurs in Matt. 10:29, 31; Luke 12:6, 7.¶

SPEAK

1. lego (λέγω, 3004), “to say, speak”: see SAY, No. 1.

2. laleo (λαλέω, 2980), for which see SAY, No. 2, is used several times in 1 Cor. 14; the command prohibiting women from speaking in a church gathering, vv. 34, 35, is regarded by some as an injunction against chattering, a meaning which is absent from the use of the verb everywhere else in the NT; it is to be understood in the same sense as in vv. 2, 3-6, 9, 11, 13, 18, 19, 21, 23, 27-29, 39.

3. proslaleo (προσλαλέω, 4354), “to speak to or with” (pros, “to,” and No. 2), is used in Acts 13:43 and 28:20.¶

4. phthengomai (φθέγγομαι, 5350), “to utter a sound or voice,” is translated “to speak” in Acts 4:18; 2 Pet. 2:16; in 2:18, KJV, “speak” (RV, “utter”).

5. apophthengomai (ἀποφθέγγομαι, 669), “to speak forth” (apo, “forth,” and No. 4), is so rendered in Acts 2:14, RV (KJV, “said”), and 26:25; in 2:2 it denotes to give utterance.¶

6. antilego (ἀντίλεγω, 483), “to speak against,” is so rendered in Luke 2:34; John 19:12; Acts 13:45, KJV (RV, “contradicted”); 28:19, 22. See CONTRADICT, GAINSAY.

7. katalaleo (καταλαλέω, 2635), synonymous with No. 6 (kata, “against,” and No. 2), is always translated “to speak against” in the RV. See BACKBITER, Note.

8. kakologeo (κακολογέω, 2551), “to speak evil”: see CURSE, B, No. 4.

9. sullaleo (συλλαλέω, 4814), “to speak together” (sun, “with,” and No. 2), is rendered “spake together” in Luke 4:36, RV. See COMMUNE, No. 3, CONFER, No. 2, TALK.

10. proiepon (προλέγω, 4302), “to speak or say before” (a 2nd aorist tense from an obsolete present), is rendered “to speak before” in Acts 1:16; 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17. See FORETELL.

11. prophthano (προφθάνω, 4399), “to anticipate” (an extension, by pro, “before,” of phthano, which has the same meaning), is rendered “spake first” in Matt. 17:25, RV (KJV, “prevented”).¶

12. prosphoneo (προσφωνέω, 4377), “to address, call to,” is rendered “spake unto” (or “to”) in Luke 23:20; Acts 21:40; 22:2; “to call unto” (or “to”) in Matt. 11:16; Luke 6:13; 7:32; 13:12.¶

13. eiro (Fut. of λέγω, 3004), for which see SAY, No. 4, has a 1st aorist, passive participle rhethen, “spoken” or “spoken of,” used in Matt. 1:22; 2:15, 17, 23; 3:3; 4:14; 8:17; 12:17; 13:35; 21:4; 22:31; 24:15; 27:9 (in some texts in 27:35 and Mark 13:14).

Notes: (1) In Heb. 12:5, KJV, dialegomai, “to discuss, to reason,” is translated “speaketh” (RV, “reasoneth”). (2) In Heb. 12:25, KJV chrematizo, “to warn, instruct,” is translated “spake” (RV, warned”): see ADMONISH. (3) In Eph. 4:31, KJV, blasphemia is translated “evil speaking”: see RAILING. (4) In Heb. 12:19, prostithemi, “to put to, add,” used with logos, “a word,” is rendered “(that no word) more should be spoken,” RV [KJV, “(that) the word should (not) be spoken (to them) any more”]. (5) In Acts 26:24, KJV, apologeomai, “to make a defense” (RV), is rendered “spake for himself.” See ANSWER, B, No. 4. (6) In Rom. 15:21, KJV, anangelo, “to bring back word” (RV, “tidings ... came”), is translated “he was ... spoken of.” (7) For “is spoken of” in Rom. 1:8, KJV, see PROCLAIM, No. 2. (8) For “spake out” in Luke 1:42, KJV, see VOICE, Note. (9) In Gal. 4:15, there is no verb in the original for the KJV, “ye spake of” (see RV). (10) For “spoken against” in Acts 19:36 see GAINSAY, C. (11), For “speak reproachfully,” 1 Tim. 5:14, see REVILE, C. (12), In Acts 21:3, KJV, ginosko is translated “speak,” RV, “know.”

SPEAKER (chief)

Note: In Acts 14:12 the verb hegeomai, “to lead the way, be the chief,” is used in the present participle with the article (together equivalent to a noun), followed by the genitive case of logos, “speech,” with the article, the phrase being rendered “the chief speaker,” lit., “the leader of the discourse.” See CHIEF, C.

SPEAKING (evil, much)

polulogia (πολυλογία, 4180), “loquacity,” “much speaking” (polus, “much,” logos, “speech”), is used in Matt. 6:7.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 10:19.¶

Note: For “evil speaking(s),” in Eph. 4:31, see RAILING; in 1 Pet. 2:1, see BACKBITING. For “shameful speaking” see COMMUNICATION, B, Note.

SPEAR

lonche (λόγχη, 3057), primarily “a spearhead,” then, “a lance or spear,” occurs in John 19:34; some texts have it in Matt. 27:49.¶ As to John 19:29, there is an old conjecture, mentioned by Field (Notes on the Trans. of the NT) to the effect that the sponge was put on a spear (hussos, “a javelin,” the Roman pilum, instead of hussopos, “hyssop”).

SPEARMAN

dexiolabos (δεξιολάβος, 1187), from dexios, “the right (hand),” and lambano, “to lay hold of,” is used in the plural in Acts 23:23, “spearmen.” Some texts have dexiobolos, “one who throws with his right hand” (ballo, “to throw”), “right-handed slingers.”¶

SPECIAL

Note: Tuchon, the 2nd aorist participle of tunchano, “to happen, meet with, chance,” is used with a negative signifying “not common or ordinary, special,” Acts 19:11; so in 28:2. See COMMON, B, Note (3).

For SPECIALLY see ESPECIALLY

SPECTACLE

theatron (θέατρον, 2302), akin to theaomai, “to behold,” denotes (a) “a theater” (used also as a place of assembly), Acts 19:29, 31; (b) “a spectacle, a show,” metaphorically in 1 Cor. 4:9. See THEATER.¶

SPEECH

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), akin to lego (SPEAK, No. 1), most frequently rendered “word” (for an analysis see WORD), signifies “speech,” as follows: (a) “discourse,” e.g., Luke 20:20, RV, “speech” (KJV, “words”); Acts 14:12 (see SPEAKER); 20:7; 1 Cor. 2:1, 4; 4:19, KJV (RV, “word”); 2 Cor. 10:10; (b) “the faculty of speech,” e.g., 2 Cor. 11:6; (c) “the manner of speech,” e.g., Matt. 5:37, RV, “speech” (KJV, “communication”); Col. 4:6; (d) “manner of instruction,” Titus 2:8; 1 Cor. 14:9, RV (KJV, “words”); Eph. 4:29, RV (KJV, “communication”). See SAYING.

2. lalia (λαλία, 2981), akin to laleo (SPEAK, No. 2), denotes “talk, speech,” (a) of “a dialect,” Matt. 26:73; Mark 14:70; (b) “utterances,” John 4:42, RV, “speaking” (KJV, “saying”); 8:43.¶

3. eulogia (εὐλογία, 2129) has the meaning “fair speaking, flattering speech” in Rom. 16:18, RV, “fair speech” (KJV, “fair speeches”). See BLESSING, C, No. 1.

4. chrestologia (χρηστολογία, 5542), which has a similar meaning to No. 3, occurs with it in Rom. 16:18 [RV, “smooth ... (speech)"]. See SMOOTH, Note.¶

Notes: (1) For “persuasiveness of speech,” Col. 2:4, RV, see PERSUASIVE, B. (2) In Acts 14:11 “the speech of Lycaonia” translates the adverb Lukaonisti. Lycaonia was a large country in the center and south of the plateau of Asia Minor; the villages retained the native language, but cities like Lystra probably had a Seleucid tone in their laws and customs (Ramsay on Galatians).

SPEECHLESS

1. eneos (or enneos) (ἐννεός, 1769), “dumb, speechless,” occurs in Acts 9:7.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 17:28; Isa. 56:10.¶

2. kophos, which means either “deaf” or “dumb” (see DEAF), is translated “speechless” in Luke 1:22.

Note: For phimoo, translated “he was speechless” in Matt. 22:12, see MUZZLE, SILENCE.

SPEED, SPEEDILY

Notes: (1) In Acts 17:15 “with all speed” is the rendering of the phrase hos, “as,” tachista, “most speedily” (the superlative of tachu, “speedily”), i.e., “as speedily as possible.” (2) For “speedily,” en tachei, in Luke 18:8, see QUICKLY, No. 4. (3) For “God speed” see GREETING, A, No. 2.

SPEND, SPENT

1. dapanao (δαπανάω, 1159) denotes (a) “to expend, spend,” Mark 5:26 [for Acts 21:24 see CHARGE, Note (5)]; 2 Cor. 12:15 (1st part: for “be spent,” see No. 2); (b) “to consume, squander,” Luke 15:14; Jas. 4:3. See CONSUME, Note.¶

2. ekdapanao (ἐκδαπανάω, 1550), lit., “to spend out” (ek), an intensive form of No. 1, “to spend entirely,” is used in 2 Cor. 12:15, in the passive voice, with reflexive significance, “to spend oneself out (for others),” “will ... be spent,” RV marg., “spent out” (see No. 1).¶

3. prosdapanao (προσδαπανάω, 4325), “to spend besides” (pros, and No. 1), is used in Luke 10:35, “thou spendest more.”¶

4. prosanalisko (προσαναλίσκω, 4321), “to spend besides,” a strengthened form of analisko, “to expend, consume” (see CONSUME, No. 1), occurs in most texts in Luke 8:43.¶

5. diaginomai (διαγίνομαι, 1230), used of time, “to intervene, elapse,” is rendered “was spent” in Acts 27:9. See PAST.

6. prokopto (προκόπτω, 4298), to cut forward a way, advance,” is translated “is far spent,” in Rom. 13:12, said metaphorically of “the night,” the whole period of man’s alienation from God. Though the tense is the aorist, it must not be rendered “was far spent,” as if it referred, e.g., to Christ’s first advent. The aorist is here perfective. See ADVANCE.

7. klino (κλίνω, 2827), “to lean, decline,” is said of the decline of day in Luke 24:29, “is (now) far spent,” lit., “has declined.” See BOW (Verb).

8. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, occur,” is rendered “was far spent” in Mark 6:35, lit., “much hour (i.e., many an hour) having taken place.”

9. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” is translated “have spent (but one hour),” in Matt. 20:12, RV (KJV, “have wrought”) lit., as in the Eng. idiom, “have done one hour”; so in Acts 20:3, RV, “when he had spent (lit., ‘had done’) three months” (KJV, “abode”).

10. eukaireo (εὐκαιρέω, 2119), “to have leisure or devote one’s leisure to,” is translated “spent their time,” in Acts 17:21. See LEISURE.

11. chronotribeo (χρονотριβέω, 5551), “to spend time” (chronos, “time,” tribo, “to rub, to wear out”), occurs in Acts 20:16.¶

Note: Polus, much, is rendered “far spent” twice in Mark 6:35, RV.

SPEW (KJV, SPUE)

emeo (ἐμέω, 1692), “to vomit” (cf. Eng., “emetic”), is used in Rev. 3:16, figuratively of the Lord’s utter abhorrence of the condition of the church at Laodicea.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 19:14.¶

SPICE(S)

1. aroma (ἄρωμα, 759), “spice,” occurs in Mark 16:1, RV “spices” (KJV, “sweet spice”); Luke 23:56; 24:1; John 19:40.¶ A papyrus document has it in a list of articles for a sacrifice.

2. amomon (ἀμώμητος, 298a), amomum, probably a word of Semitic origin, a fragrant plant of India, is translated “spice” in Rev. 18:13, RV (KJV, “odors”).¶

SPIKENARD

nardos (νάρδος, 3487), is derived, through the Semitic languages (Heb. nerd, Syriac nardin), from the Sanskrit nalada, “a fragrant oil,” procured from the stem of an Indian plant. The Arabs call it the “Indian spike.” The adjective pistikos is attached to it in the NT, Mark 14:3; John 12:3; pistikos, if taken as an ordinary Greek word, would signify “genuine.” There is evidence, however, that it was regarded as a technical term. It has been suggested that the original reading was pistakes, i.e., the Pistacia Terebinthus, which grows in Cyprus, Syria, Palestine, etc., and yields a resin of very fragrant odor, and in such inconsiderable quantities as to be very costly. “Nard was frequently mixed with aromatic ingredients ... so when scented with the fragrant resin of the pistake it would quite well be called nardos pistakes” (E. N. Bennett, in the Classical Review for 1890, Vol. iv, p. 319). The oil used for the anointing of the Lord’s head was worth about L/12, and must have been of the most valuable kind.¶ In the Sept., Song of Sol. 1:12; 4:13, 14.¶

SPILL

ekchunno (or ekchuno), (ἐκχέω, 1632), “to pour out, shed,” is rendered “be spilled” in Luke 5:37. See POUR, SHED.

Note: Some texts have ekcheo in Mark 2:22 (so KJV). The form in Luke 5:37 might also come from ekcheo.

SPIN

netho (νήθω, 3514), “to spin,” is found in Matt. 6:28 and Luke 12:27, of the lilies of the field (see LILY).¶

SPIRIT

pneuma (πνεῦμα, 4151) primarily denotes “the wind” (akin to pneo, “to breathe, blow”); also “breath”; then, especially “the spirit,” which, like the wind, is invisible, immaterial and powerful. The NT uses of the word may be analyzed approximately as follows:

“(a) the wind, John 3:8 (where marg. is, perhaps, to be preferred); Heb. 1:7; cf. Amos 4:13, Sept.; (b) the breath, 2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 11:11; 13:15; cf. Job 12:10, Sept.; (c) the immaterial, invisible part of man, Luke 8:55; Acts 7:59; 1 Cor. 5:5; Jas. 2:26; cf. Eccl. 12:7, Sept.; (d) the disembodied (or ‘unclothed,’ or ‘naked,’ 2 Cor. 5:3, 4) man, Luke 24:37, 39; Heb. 12:23; 1 Pet. 4:6; (e) the resurrection body, 1 Cor. 15:45; 1 Tim. 3:16; 1 Pet. 3:18; (f) the sentient element in man, that by which he perceives, reflects, feels, desires, Matt. 5:3; 26:41; Mark 2:8; Luke 1:47, 80; Acts 17:16; 20:22; 1 Cor. 2:11; 5:3, 4; 14:4, 15; 2 Cor. 7:1; cf. Gen. 26:35; Isa. 26:9; Ezek. 13:3; Dan. 7:15; (g) purpose, aim, 2 Cor. 12:18; Phil. 1:27; Eph. 4:23; Rev. 19:10; cf. Ezra 1:5; Ps. 78:8; Dan. 5:12; (h) the equivalent of the personal pronoun, used for emphasis and effect: 1st person, 1 Cor. 16:18; cf. Gen. 6:3; 2nd person, 2 Tim. 4:22; Philem. 25; cf. Ps. 139:7; 3rd person, 2 Cor. 7:13; cf. Isa. 40:13; (i) character, Luke 1:17; Rom. 1:4; cf. Num. 14:24; (j) moral qualities and activities: bad, as of bondage, as of a slave, Rom. 8:15; cf. Isa. 61:3; stupor, Rom. 11:8; cf. Isa. 29:10; timidity, 2 Tim. 1:7; cf. Josh. 5:1; good, as of adoption, i.e., liberty as of a son, Rom. 8:15; cf. Ps. 51:12; meekness, 1 Cor. 4:21; cf. Prov. 16:19; faith, 2 Cor. 4:13; quietness, 1 Pet. 3:4; cf. Prov. 14:29; (k) the Holy Spirit, e.g., Matt. 4:1 (see below); Luke 4:18; (l) ‘the inward man’ (an expression used only of the believer, Rom. 7:22; 2 Cor. 4:16; Eph. 3:16); the new life, Rom. 8:4-6, 10, 16; Heb. 12:9; cf. Ps. 51:10; (m) unclean spirits, demons, Matt. 8:16; Luke 4:33; 1 Pet. 3:19; cf. 1 Sam. 18:10; (n) angels, Heb. 1:14; cf. Acts 12:15; (o) divine gift for service, 1 Cor. 14:12, 32; (p) by metonymy, those who claim to be depositories of these gifts, 2 Thess. 2:2; 1 John 4:1-3; (q) the significance, as contrasted with the form, of words, or of a rite, John 6:63; Rom. 2:29; 7:6; 2 Cor. 3:6; (r) a vision, Rev. 1:10; 4:2; 17:3; 21:10.”*

Notes: (1) For phantasma, rendered “spirit,” Matt. 14:26; Mark 6:49, KJV, see APPARITION. (2) For the distinction between “spirit” and “soul,” see under SOUL, last three paragraphs.

The Holy Spirit

The “Holy Spirit” is spoken of under various titles in the NT (“Spirit” and “Ghost” are renderings of the same word, pneuma; the advantage of the rendering “Spirit” is that it can always be used, whereas “Ghost” always requires the word “Holy” prefixed.) In the following list the omission of the definite article marks its omission in the original (concerning this see below): “Spirit, Matt. 22:43; Eternal Spirit, Heb. 9:14; the Spirit, Matt. 4:1; Holy Spirit, Matt. 1:18; the Holy Spirit, Matt. 28:19; the Spirit, the Holy, Matt. 12:32; the Spirit of promise, the Holy, Eph. 1:13; Spirit of God, Rom. 8:9; Spirit of (the) living God, 2 Cor. 3:3; the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2:11; the Spirit of our God, 1 Cor. 6:11; the Spirit of God, the Holy, Eph. 4:30; the Spirit of glory and of God, 1 Pet. 4:14; the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead (i.e., God), Rom. 8:11; the Spirit of your Father, Matt. 10:20; the Spirit of His Son, Gal. 4:6; Spirit of (the) Lord, Acts 8:39; the Spirit of (the) Lord, Acts 5:9; (the) Lord, (the) Spirit, 2 Cor. 3:18; the Spirit of Jesus, Acts 16:7; Spirit of Christ, Rom. 8:9; the Spirit of Jesus Christ, Phil. 1:19; Spirit of adoption, Rom. 8:15; the Spirit of truth, John 14:17; the Spirit of life, Rom. 8:2; the Spirit of grace, Heb. 10:29.”†

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 204, 205.

The use or absence of the article in the original where the “Holy Spirit” is spoken of cannot always be decided by grammatical rules, nor can the presence or absence of the article alone determine whether the reference is to the “Holy Spirit.” Examples where the Person is meant when the article is absent are Matt. 22:43 (the article is used in Mark 12:36); Acts 4:25, RV (absent in some texts); 19:2, 6; Rom. 14:17; 1 Cor. 2:4; Gal. 5:25 (twice); 1 Pet. 1:2. Sometimes the absence is to be accounted for by the fact that Pneuma (like Theos) is substantially a proper name, e.g., in John 7:39. As a general rule the article is present where the subject of the teaching is the Personality of the Holy Spirit, e.g., John 14:26, where He is spoken of in distinction from the Father and the Son. See also 15:26 and cf. Luke 3:22.

In Gal. 3:3, in the phrase “having begun in the Spirit,” it is difficult to say whether the reference is to the “Holy Spirit” or to the quickened spirit of the believer; that it possibly refers to the latter is not to be determined by the absence of the article, but by the contrast with “the flesh”; on the other hand, the contrast may be between the “Holy Spirit” who in the believer sets His seal on the perfect work of Christ, and the flesh which seeks to better itself by works of its own. There is no preposition before either noun, and if the reference is to the quickened spirit it cannot be dissociated from the operation of the “Holy Spirit.” In Gal. 4:29 the phrase “after the Spirit” signifies “by supernatural power,” in contrast to “after the flesh,” i.e., “by natural power,” and the reference must be to the “Holy Spirit”; so in 5:17.

The full title with the article before both pneuma and hagios (the “resumptive” use of the article), lit., “the Spirit the Holy,” stresses the character of the Person, e.g., Matt. 12:32; Mark 3:29; 12:36; 13:11; Luke 2:26; 10:21 (RV); John 14:26; Acts 1:16; 5:3; 7:51; 10:44, 47; 13:2; 15:28; 19:6; 20:23, 28; 21:11; 28:25; Eph. 4:30; Heb. 3:7; 9:8; 10:15.

The Personality of the Spirit is emphasized at the expense of strict grammatical procedure in John 14:26; 15:26; 16:8, 13, 14, where the emphatic pronoun ekeinos, “He,” is used of Him in the masculine, whereas the noun pneuma is neuter in Greek, while the corresponding word in Aramaic, the language in which our Lord probably spoke, is feminine (rucha, cf. Heb. ruach). The rendering “itself” in Rom. 8:16, 26, due to the Greek gender, is corrected to “Himself” in the RV.

The subject of the “Holy Spirit” in the NT may be considered as to His divine attributes; His distinct Personality in the Godhead; His operation in connection with the Lord Jesus in His birth, His life, His baptism, His death; His operations in the world; in the church; His having been sent at Pentecost by the Father and by Christ; His operations in the individual believer; in local churches; His operations in the production of Holy Scripture; His work in the world, etc.

SPIRITUAL

A. Adjective.

pneumatikos (πνευματικός, 4152) “always connotes the ideas of invisibility and of power. It does not occur in the Sept. nor in the Gospels; it is in fact an after-Pentecost word. In the NT it is used as follows: (a) the angelic hosts, lower than God but higher in the scale of being than man in his natural state, are ‘spiritual hosts,’ Eph. 6:12; (b) things that have their origin with God, and which, therefore, are in harmony with His character, as His law is, are ‘spiritual,’ Rom. 7:14; (c) ‘spiritual’ is prefixed to the material type in order to indicate that what the type sets forth, not the type itself, is intended, 1 Cor. 10:3, 4; (d) the purposes of God revealed in the gospel by the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. 2:13a, and the words in which that revelation is expressed, are ‘spiritual,’ 13b, matching, or combining, spiritual things with spiritual words [or, alternatively, ‘interpreting spiritual things to spiritual men,’ see (e) below]; ‘spiritual songs’ are songs of which the burden is the things revealed by the Spirit, Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16; ‘spiritual wisdom and understanding’ is wisdom in, and understanding of, those things, Col. 1:9; (e) men in Christ who walk so as to please God are ‘spiritual,’ Gal. 6:1; 1 Cor. 2:13b [but see (d) above], 15; 3:1; 14:37; (f) the whole company of those who believe in Christ is a ‘spiritual house,’ 1 Pet. 2:5a; (g) the blessings that accrue to regenerate men at this present time are called ‘spiritualities,’ Rom. 15:27; 1 Cor. 9:11; ‘spiritual blessings,’ Eph. 1:3; ‘spiritual gifts,’ Rom. 1:11; (h) the activities Godward of regenerate men are ‘spiritual sacrifices,’ 1 Pet. 2:5b; their appointed activities in the churches are also called ‘spiritual gifts,’ lit., ‘spiritualities,’ 1 Cor. 12:1; 14:1; (i) the resurrection body of the dead in Christ is ‘spiritual,’ i.e., such as is suited to the heavenly environment, 1 Cor. 15:44; (j) all that is produced and maintained among men by the operations of the Spirit of God is ‘spiritual,’ 1 Cor. 15:46....

“The spiritual man is one who walks by the Spirit both in the sense of Gal. 5:16 and in that of 5:25, and who himself manifests the fruit of the Spirit in his own ways....

“According to the Scriptures, the ‘spiritual’ state of soul is normal for the believer, but to this state all believers do not attain, nor when it is attained is it always maintained. Thus the apostle, in 1 Cor. 3:1-3, suggests a contrast between this spiritual state and that of the babe in Christ, i.e., of the man who because of immaturity and inexperience has not yet reached spirituality, and that of the man who by permitting jealousy, and the strife to which jealousy always leads, has lost it. The spiritual state is reached by diligence in the Word of God and in prayer; it is maintained by obedience and self-judgment. Such as are led by the Spirit are spiritual, but, of course, spirituality is not a fixed or absolute condition, it admits of growth; indeed growth in ‘the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ,’ 2 Pet. 3:18, is evidence of true spirituality.”*

B. Adverb.

pneumatikos (πνευματικῶς, 4153), “spiritually,” occurs in 1 Cor. 2:14, with the meaning as (j) above, and Rev. 11:8, with the meaning as in (c). Some mss. have it in 1 Cor. 2:13.¶

Notes: (1) In Rom. 8:6, the RV rightly renders the noun pneuma “(the mind) of the spirit,” KJV, “spiritual (mind).” (2) In 1 Cor. 14:12 the plural of pneuma, “spirits,” RV, marg., stands for “spiritual gifts” (text). (3) In 1 Pet. 2:2, the RV renders logikos “spiritual.”

SPIT

1. ptuo (πτύω, 4429), “to spit,” occurs in Mark 7:33; 8:23; John 9:6.¶ In the Sept., Num. 12:14.¶

2. emptuo (ἐμπτύω, 1716), “to spit upon” (en, “in,” and No. 1), occurs in Matt. 26:67; 27:30; Mark 10:34; 14:65; 15:19; Luke 18:32.¶ In the Sept., Num. 12:14, in some texts; Deut. 25:9.¶

SPITEFULLY (ENTREAT)

hubrizo (ὕβριζω, 5195), used transitively, denotes “to outrage, treat insolently”; “to entreat shamefully” in Matt. 22:6, RV (KJV, “spitefully”); so in Luke 18:32, RV; in Acts 14:5 (KJV, “use spitefully”); in 1 Thess. 2:2, KJV and RV; in Luke 11:45, “reproachest.” See DESPITEFULLY, ENTREAT, REPROACH, SHAMEFULLY.¶

SPITTLE

ptusma (πτύσμα, 4427), akin to ptuo, “to spit,” occurs in John 9:6.¶

SPOIL (Noun and Verb), SPOILING

A. Nouns.

1. skulon (σκῶλον, 4661), used in the plural, denotes “arms stripped from a foe”; “spoils” in Luke 11:22.¶

2. akrothinion (ἀκροθίνιον, 205), primarily “the top of a heap” (akros, “highest, top,” and this, “a heap”), hence “firstfruit offerings,” and in war “the choicest spoils,” Heb. 7:4.¶

3. harpaze (ἁρπαγή, 724), “pillage,” is rendered “spoiling” in Heb. 10:34. See EXTORT, B, No. 1.

B. Verbs.

1. diarpazo (διαρπάζω, 1283), “to plunder,” is found in Matt. 12:29, 2nd part (the 1st has harpazo, in the best texts), lit., “(then) he will completely (dia, intensive) spoil (his house)”; Mark 3:27 (twice).¶

---

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 308- 319.

2. harpazo (ἁρπάζω, 726), “to seize, snatch away,” is rendered “spoil” in Matt. 12:29a (see No. 1). See CATCH, No. 1.

3. sulagogeō (συλαγωγέω, 4812), “to carry off as spoil, lead captive” (sule, “spoil,” ago, “to lead”), is rendered “maketh spoil of” in Col. 2:8, RV (KJV, “spoil”), rather “carry you off as spoil.” The false teacher, through his “philosophy and vain deceit,” would carry them off as so much booty.¶

4. apekduō (ἀπεκδύομαι, 554), in the middle voice is translated “having spoiled” in Col. 2:15, KJV, RV, “having put off from Himself (the principalities and the powers).” These are regarded by some as the unsinners, because they are mentioned twice before in the Epistle (1:16; 2:10). It is also argued that the verb apekduō, rendered “having put off from Himself,” in 2:15, is used in a somewhat different sense in 3:9. Such representations do not form a sufficiently cogent reason for regarding the principalities and the powers here mentioned as those of light, rather than those of darkness.

Others think that the reference is to the holy angels, which were in attendance at the giving of the Law (Acts 7:53; Gal. 3:19), and that Christ wrought His work on the cross, without any such attendance; or, again, that, even apart from the Law and its circumstances, the Lord stripped Himself of those who usually ministered to Him, as, e.g., in the wilderness and in the garden of Gethsemane.

The exposition given by Lightfoot and others seems to be the right one. There is no doubt that Satan and his hosts gathered together to attack the soul of Christ, while He was enduring, in propitiatory sacrifice, the judgment due to our sins, and fulfilling the great work of redemption. There is an intimation of this in Ps. 22:21, “Save Me from the lion’s mouth; yea, from the horns of the wild-oxen” (cf. vv. 12, 13). Doubtless the powers of darkness gathered against the Lord at that time, fiercely assaulting Him to the utmost of their power. He Himself had said, “This is your hour, and the power of darkness” (Luke 22:53). The metaphor of putting off from Himself these powers need not be pressed to the extent of regarding them as a garment clinging about Him. It seems to stand simply as a vivid description of His repulsion of their attack and of the power by which He completely overthrew them.

SPONGE

spongōs (σπόγγος, 4699) was the medium by which vinegar was carried to the mouth of Christ on the cross, Matt. 27:48; Mark 15:36; John 19:29.¶

SPORTING

entrupeō (ἐντροπέω, 1792) occurs in 2 Pet. 2:13 (RV, “revel”).

SPOT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. spilos (σπίλος, 4696), “a spot or stain,” is used metaphorically (a) of moral blemish, Eph. 5:27; (b) of lascivious and riotous persons, 2 Pet. 2:13.¶

2. spilas (σπιλάς, 4694) is rendered “spots” in Jude 12, KJV: see ROCK, No. 2.

B. Verb.

spilōō (σπιλόω, 4695), akin to A, No. 1, is used in Jude 23, in the clause “hating even the garment spotted by the flesh,” the garment representing that which, being brought into contact with the polluting element of the flesh, becomes defiled: see CLOTHING, No. 3 (last par.). See DEFILE, No. 4.

C. Adjective.

aspilos (ἄσπιλος, 784), “unspotted, unstained” (a, negative, and A), is used of a lamb, 1 Pet. 1:19; metaphorically, of keeping a commandment without alteration and in the fulfillment of it, 1 Tim. 6:14; of the believer in regard to the world, Jas. 1:27, and free from all defilement in the sight of God, 2 Pet. 3:14.¶

Note: For amomos, in Heb. 9:14, KJV, see BLEMISH, B.

SPREAD

1. stronnuo or stronnumi (στροννύμι, 4766), “to spread,” is so rendered in Matt. 21:8, RV, twice; Mark 11:8, RV, once. See FURNISH.

2. hupostronnuo (ὑποστροννύμι, 5291), “to spread under” (hupo), of clothes, is used in Luke 19:36.¶

3. dianemo (διανέμω, 1268), “to distribute,” is used in the passive voice in Acts 4:17, “spread,” lit., “be spread about” (dia).¶ In the Sept., Deut. 29:26, “to assign” or “divide” (concerning the worship of other gods).¶

4. diaphero (διαφέρω, 1308), “to carry about, spread abroad”: see PUBLISH, No. 2; for other meanings of the word see BETTER (be), No. 1.

5. ekpetannumi (ἐκπετάννυμι, 1600), “to spread out” (as a sail), is rendered “did I spread out” in Rom. 10:21, RV (KJV, “I have stretched forth”).¶

Notes: (1) In Mark 1:28 and 1 Thess. 1:8, KJV, exerchomai, “to go out or forth” (RV), is rendered “to spread abroad.” (2) In Mark 6:14, KJV, ginomai, “to become,” with phaneros, “manifest,” is translated “had spread abroad” (RV, “had become known”). (3) In 2 Cor. 8:18, the RV “is spread” (KJV, “is”) represents nothing in the original. (4) For RV, “spread His tabernacle over,” Rev. 7:15, see DWELL, No. 9. (5) For Mark 1:45, see BLAZE ABROAD.

SPRING (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is used in the best texts in Heb. 11:12, “sprang” (some have gennao, in the passive voice, rendered in the same way).

2. anatello (ἀνατέλλω, 393), “to arise,” is rendered by the verb “to spring,” or “spring up,” in Matt. 4:16 and Heb. 7:14. See ARISE, No. 9.

3. exanatello (ἐξανατέλλω, 1816), ek or ex, “out,” and No. 2, is used of the “springing” up of seeds, Matt. 13:5; Mark 4:5 (No. 7 in v. 8).¶

4. phuo (φύω, 5453), used transitively, “to bring forth, produce,” denotes, in the passive voice, “to spring up, grow,” of seed, Luke 8:6, 8, KJV, “was sprung up” and “sprang up” (RV, “grew”); in the active voice, intransitively, in Heb. 12:15, of a root of bitterness. See GROW.¶

5. sumphuo (συμφύω, 4855), “to cause to grow together” (sun, “with,” and No. 4), occurs in Luke 8:7, RV, “grew with,” KJV, “sprang up with.”¶
6. blastano (βλαστάνω, 985), “to sprout,” is rendered “to spring up” in Matt. 13:26, of tare blades, and Mark 4:27, of seed. See BRING, A, No. 26, BUD.
7. anabaino (ἀναβαίνω, 305), “to go up,” is rendered “sprang up” in Matt. 13:7, KJV, of thorns, and Mark 4:8, of seed (RV, “grew up). See GROW, No. 4.
8. hallomai (ἄλλομαι, 242), “to leap, spring,” is rendered “springing up,” of well water, in John 4:14, figurative of the Holy Spirit in the believer. See LEAP.
9. eispedao (εἰσπηδάω, 1530), “to spring” or “leap in,” occurs in Acts 16:29, “sprang in.”¶ In the Sept., Amos 5:19.¶
10. ekpedao (ἐκπετάννυμι, 1600a), “to spring forth,” occurs in Acts 14:14, in the best texts. See RUN, Note (4).

B. Noun.

pege (πηγή, 4077) is rendered “springs” in 2 Pet. 2:17, RV: see FOUNTAIN.

Note: For epiginomai Acts 28:13, see BLOW (verb).

SPRINKLE, SPRINKLING

A. Verb.

rhantizo (ῥαντίζω, 4472), “to sprinkle” (a later form of rhaino), is used in the active voice in Heb. 9:13, of “sprinkling” with blood the unclean, a token of the efficacy of the expiatory sacrifice of Christ, His blood signifying the giving up of His life in the shedding of His blood (cf. 9:22) under divine judgment upon sin (the voluntary act to be distinguished from that which took place after His death in the piercing of His side); so again in vv. 19, 21 (see B); in Heb. 10:22, passive voice, of the purging (on the ground of the same efficacy) of the hearts of believers from an evil conscience. This application of the blood of Christ is necessary for believers, in respect of their committal of sins, which on that ground receive forgiveness, 1 John 1:9. In Mark 7:4, the verb is found in the middle voice “in some ancient authorities” (RV marg.) instead of baptizo. In Rev. 19:13, the RV, “sprinkled” follows those texts which have rhantizo (marg., “some anc. auth. read ‘dipped in.’” bapto; so Nestle’s text).¶ This requires mention as a variant text in Rev. 19:13 under DIP.

B. Nouns.

1. rhantismos (ῥαντισμός, 4473), “sprinkling,” akin to A, is used of the “sprinkling” of the blood of Christ, in Heb. 12:24 and 1 Pet. 1:2, an allusion to the use of the blood of sacrifices, appointed for Israel, typical of the sacrifice of Christ (see under A).¶

2. proschusis (πρόσχυσις, 4378), “a pouring or sprinkling upon,” occurs in Heb. 11:28, of the “sprinkling” of the blood of the Passover lamb.¶

For SPUE see SPEW

SPY (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. enkathetos (ἐγκάθετος, 1455), an adjective denoting “suborned to lie in wait” (en, “in,” kathiemī, “to send down”), is used as a noun in Luke 20:20, “spies.”¶ In the Sept., Job. 19:12; 31:9.¶

2. kataskopos (κατάσκοπος, 2685) denotes “a spy” (kata, “down,” signifying “closely,” and skopeo, “to view”), Heb. 11:31.¶

B. Verb.

kataskopeo (κατασκοπέω, 2684), “to view closely” (akin to A, No. 2), “spy out, search out” with a view to overthrowing, is used in Gal. 2:4.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 10:3; 1 Chron. 19:3.¶

For STABLISH see ESTABLISH

STAFF, STAVES

1. rhabdos (ῥάβδος, 4464), rendered “staff” or “staves” in Matt. 10:10, parallel passages, and Heb. 11:21: see ROD.

2. xulon (ξύλον, 3586), “wood,” then, “anything made of wood,” e.g., “a cudgel” or “staff,” is rendered “staves” in Matt. 26:47, 55 and parallel passages. See STOCKS, TREE, WOOD.

For STAGGER see WAVER

STAIR

anabathmos (ἀναβαθμός, 304), “an ascent” (akin to anabaino, “to go up”), denotes “a flight of stairs,” Acts 21:35, 40. These were probably the steps leading down from the castle of Antonia to the Temple. (See Josephus, B.J., v., 5, 8.)¶ In the Sept., it is used, e.g., in the titles of the Songs of Ascents, Ps. 120-134.

For STALL see MANGER

STANCH

histemi (ἵστημι, 2476), transitively, “to cause to stand,” is used intransitively (“to stand still”) in Luke 8:44, translated “stanchd.” See STAND.

STAND (Noun and Verb), STANDING, STOOD

A. Noun.

luchnia (λυχνία, 3087), “a lampstand,” is translated “stand” in Matt. 5:15 and parallel passages (KJV, “candlestick”). See LAMPSTAND.

B. Verbs.

1. histemi (ἵστημι, 2476), (a) transitively, denotes “to cause to stand, to set”; in the passive voice, “to be made to stand,” e.g., Matt. 2:9, lit., “was made to stand”; so Luke 11:18; 19:8 (Col. 4:12 in some mss.); in Rev. 13:1 the RV follows the best texts, “he stood” (not as KJV, “I stood”); the reference is to the Dragon. In the middle voice, “to take one’s stand, place oneself,” e.g., Rev. 18:15; (b) intransitively, in the 2nd aorist and perfect active, “to stand, stand by, stand still,” e.g., Matt. 6:5; 20:32, “stood still”; in Luke 6:8, “stand forth” and “stood forth”; metaphorically, “to stand firm,” John 8:44 (negatively), in the truth (see No. 7); Rom. 5:2, in grace; 1 Cor. 15:1, in the gospel; Rom. 11:20, “by thy faith,” RV; 2 Cor. 1:24, “by faith” (marg., “by your faith”); of steadfastness, 1 Cor. 7:37; Eph. 6:11, 13, 14; Col. 4:12 [some mss. have the passive, see (a)]. See APPOINT, ESTABLISH, SET.

2. anistemi (ἀνίστημι, 450), “to raise,” intransitively, “to rise,” is translated “to stand up” in Matt. 12:41, RV; Mark 14:60; Luke 4:16; 10:25; Acts 1:15; 5:34; 10:26; 11:28; 13:16; in 14:10, “stand upright.” See ARISE, No. 1.

3. ephistemi (ἐφίστημι, 2186) (epi, “upon,” and No. 1), used intransitively, denotes “to stand upon or by, be present,” Luke 2:9 and Acts 12:7, “stood by,” RV (KJV, “came upon”); Luke 4:39, “stood over”; 24:4 and Acts 23:11, “stood by”; Acts 10:17, “stood”; 22:13, “standing by (me),” RV; so v. 20, KJV and RV. See ASSAULT, COME, No. 27, HAND (AT), B Note (2), INSTANT, PRESENT.

4. paristemi (παρίστημι, 3936), intransitively, denotes “to stand by or beside” (para, “by,” and No. 1), Mark 14:47, 69, 70; 15:35, 39 (RV, “stood by”); Luke 19:24; John 18:22; 19:26; Acts 1:10; 9:39; 23:2, 4; 27:23; in 27:24, “stand before”; in 4:10, “doth ... stand here”; in Luke 1:19, “stand”; Rom. 14:10, “we shall ... stand before” (middle voice); 2 Tim. 4:17, RV, “stood by” (KJV, “... with”). See COMMEND, No. 4.

5. periistemi (περιῖστημι, 4026), intransitively. “to stand around” (peri), is so used in John 11:42; Acts 25:7. See AVOID, No. 4.

6. sunistemi (συνιστάω, 4921), intransitively. denotes “to stand with” (sun), Luke 9:32; for 2 Pet. 3:5, KJV, standing, see COMPACTED, No. 1: for other meanings see APPROVE, A, No. 2.

7. steko (στήκω, 4739), a late present tense from hesteka, the perfect of histemi, is used (a) literally, Mark 3:31; 11:25; John 1:26, in the best texts (in some texts Rev. 12:4); (b) figuratively, Rom. 14:4, where the context indicates the meaning “standeth upright” rather than that of acquittal; of “standing fast,” 1 Cor. 16:13, “in the faith,” i.e., by adherence to it; Gal. 5:1, in freedom from legal bondage; Phil. 1:27, “in one spirit”; Phil. 4:1 and 1 Thess. 3:8, “in the Lord,” i.e., in the willing subjection to His authority; 2 Thess. 2:15, in the apostle’s teaching; some mss. have it in John 8:44, the most authentic have histemi, RV, “stood” (KJV, “abode”).¶

8. meno (μένω, 3306), “to abide, remain,” is rendered “might stand,” in Rom. 9:11, of the purpose of God, i.e., might abide for the permanent recognition of its true character. See ABIDE, No. 1.

9. kukloo (κυκλόω, 2944), “stood round about,” Acts 14:20: see COMPASS, No. 2.

Notes: (1) In Mark 3:3, egeiro, “to raise,” followed by the phrase eis to meson, “into the midst,” is translated “stand forth.” (2) In 2 Tim. 4:16, KJV, paraginomai (in some texts, sumparaginomai), “to come up to assist,” is rendered “stood with (me),” RV, “took (my) part.” (3) In Heb. 9:8, RV, “is ... standing” (KJV, “was ... standing”) represents the phrase echo, “to have,” stasis, “a standing,” lit., “has a standing.” (4) For “stand ... in jeopardy” see DANGER.

STAR

1. aster (ἀστήρ, 792), “a star,” Matt. 2:2–10; 24:29; Mark 13:25; 1 Cor. 15:41; Rev. 6:13; 8:10–12; 9:1; 12:1, 4, is used metaphorically, (a) of Christ, as “the morning star,” figurative of the approach of the day when He will appear as the “sun of righteousness,” to govern the earth in peace, an event to be preceded by the rapture of the Church, Rev. 2:28; 22:16, the promise of the former to the overcomer being suggestive of some special personal interest in Himself and His authority; (b) of the angels of the seven churches, Rev. 1:16, 20; 2:1; 3:1; (c) of certain false teachers, described as “wandering stars,” Jude 13, as if the “stars,” intended for light and guidance, became the means of deceit by irregular movements.¶

2. astron (ἄστρον, 798), practically the same as No. 1, is used (a) in the sing. in Acts 7:43, “the star of the god Rephan,” RV, the symbol or “figure,” probably of Saturn, worshiped as a god, apparently the same as Chiun in Amos 5:26 (Rephan being the Egyptian deity corresponding to Saturn, Chiun the Assyrian); (b) in the plur., Luke 21:25; Acts 27:20; Heb. 11:12.¶

For STATE see ESTATE, Notes

For STATURE see AGE, A, No. 3

For STAVES see STAFF

STAY

1. katecho (κατέχω, 2722), “to hold fast, hold back,” is used in the sense of detaining in Luke 4:42, “would have stayed (Him),” RV. See HOLD.

2. epecho (ἐπέχω, 1907) has the meaning “to wait in a place, to stay,” in Acts 19:22. See HEED, HOLD, MARK.

3. koluo (κωλύω, 2967), “to hinder,” is rendered “stayed” in Acts 27:43, RV (KJV, “kept”); so in 2 Pet. 2:16, RV (KJV, “forbad”). See HINDER.

For STEADFAST see STEDFAST

STEAL

klepto (κλέπτω, 2813), “to steal,” akin to kleptes, “a thief” (cf. Eng., “kleptomania”), occurs in Matt. 6:19, 20; 19:18; 27:64; 28:13; Mark 10:19; Luke 18:20; John 10:10; Rom. 2:21 (twice); 13:9; Eph. 4:28 (twice).¶

STEDFAST, STEDFASTLY, STEDFASTNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. bebaios (βέβαιος, 949), “firm, secure” (akin to baino, “to go”), is translated “steadfast” in 2 Cor. 1:7; Heb. 2:2; 3:14, KJV (RV, “firm”); 6:19. See FIRM, FORCE, SURE.

2. hedraios (ἑδραῖος, 1476) primarily denotes “seated” (hedra, “a seat”); hence, “steadfast,” metaphorical of moral fixity, 1 Cor. 7:37; 15:58; Col. 1:23, RV (KJV, “settled”).¶

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

3. stereos (στερεός, 4731), firm, is rendered “steadfast” in 1 Pet. 5:9. See FIRM, No. 2.

B. Nouns.

1. stereoma (στερέωμα, 4733), primarily “a support, foundation,” denotes “strength, steadfastness,” Col. 2:5.¶ In the Sept., in Gen. 1:6, and Ezek. 1:22, it is used of the firmament, which was believed to be a solid canopy. The corresponding Heb. word raqiaʿ means “expanse,” from raqaʿ, “to spread out.”

2. sterigmos (στηριγμός, 4740), “a setting firmly, supporting,” then “fixedness, steadfastness” (akin to sterizo, “to establish”), is used in 2 Pet. 3:17.¶

Note: For STEADFASTLY see BEHOLD, No. 10, CONTINUE, No. 9, FASTEN, No. 1, LOOK, No. 15, SET, No. 19.

STEEP

kremnos (κρημνός, 2911), “a steep bank” (akin to kremannumi, “to hang”), occurs in Matt. 8:32; Mark 5:13; Luke 8:33, RV, “the steep” (KJV, “a steep place”).¶ In the Sept., 2 Chron. 25:12.¶

For STEERSMAN see GOVERNOR, B, Note

STEP (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

ichnos (ἵχνος, 2487), “a footstep, a track,” is used metaphorically of the “steps” (a) of Christ’s conduct, 1 Pet. 2:21; (b) of Abraham’s faith, Rom. 4:12; (c) of identical conduct in carrying on the work of the gospel, 2 Cor. 12:18.¶

B. Verb.

katabaino (καταβαίνω, 2597), “to go, or come, down,” is translated “steppeth down” in John 5:7. See COME, No. 19.

Note: Many ancient authorities have the passage in the KJV in John 5:4, which contains embaino, rendered “stepped in.” See COME, No. 21.

STERN

prumna (πρύμνα, 4403), the feminine form of the adjective prumnos, “hindmost,” is rendered “stern” in Acts 27:29; and in the RV in v. 41 and Mark 4:38. See PART, A, Note (2).¶

STEWARD, STEWARDSHIP

A. Nouns.

1. oikonomos (οἰκονόμος, 3623) primarily denoted “the manager of a household or estate” (oikos, “a house,” nemo, “to arrange”), “a steward” (such were usually slaves or freedmen), Luke 12:42; 16:1, 3, 8; 1 Cor. 4:2; Gal. 4:2, RV (KJV, “governors”); in Rom. 16:23, the “treasurer (RV) of a city (see CHAMBERLAIN, Note); it is used metaphorically, in the wider sense, of a “steward” in general, (a) of preachers of the gospel and teachers of the Word of God, 1 Cor. 4:1; (b) of elders or bishops in churches, Titus 1:7; (c) of believers generally, 1 Pet. 4:10.¶

3. oikonomia (οἰκονομία, 3622) is rendered “stewardship” in Luke 16:2, 3, 4, and in the RV in 1 Cor. 9:17: see DISPENSATION.

B. Verb.

oikonomeo (οἰκονομέω, 3621), akin to A, Nos. 1 and 3, signifies “to be a house steward,” Luke 16:2.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 112:5.¶

STICK

phruganon (φρύγανον, 5434) denotes “a dry stick” (from phrugo, “to parch”); in the plural, “brushwood,” Acts 28:3.¶

STICK FAST

ereido (ἐρείδω, 2043), primarily “to prop, fix firmly,” is used intransitively in Acts 27:41 of a ship driving ashore, RV, “struck.”¶

STIFFNECKED

sklerotrachelos (σκληροτράχηλος, 4644), from skleros, “harsh, hard,” trachelos, “a neck,” is used metaphorically in Acts 7:51.¶

STILL (Verb)

phimoo (φιμόω, 5392), in the passive voice, is rendered “be still” in Mark 4:39: see MUZZLE.

STILL (Adverb)

eti (ἔτι, 2089), “yet, as yet, still,” is translated “still” in the RV in 1 Cor. 12:31; 2 Cor. 1:10; Gal. 1:10 and 5:11; KJV and RV in Rev. 22:11 (four times), where the word indicates the permanent character, condition and destiny of the unrighteous and the filthy, the righteous and the holy (for the verbs see the RV); in John 11:30, the best mss. have the word; so RV (KJV omits).

Note: For combinations see ABIDE, IGNORANCE, B, No. 1, STAND.

For STING see GOAD

STINK

ozo (ὀζω, 3605), “to emit a smell” (cf. Eng., “ozone”), occurs in John 11:39.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 8:14.¶

STIR, STIR UP (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

tarachos (τάραχος, 5017), akin to tarache, “trouble,” and tarasso, “to trouble,” is rendered “stir” in Acts 12:18; 19:23.¶

B. Verbs.

1. anazopureo (ἀναζωπυρέω, 329) denotes “to kindle afresh,” or “keep in full flame” (ana, “up,” or “again,” zoos, “alive,” pur, “fire”), and is used metaphorically in 2 Tim. 1:6, where “the gift of God” is regarded as a fire capable of dying out through neglect.¶ The verb was in common use in the vernacular of the time.

2 epegeiro (ἐπεγείρω, 1892), “stirred up” in Acts 14:2. See RAISE.

3. diegeiro (διεγείρω, 1326), “stir up” in 2 Pet. 1:13; 3:1: see ARISE, No. 4.

4. seio (σεῖω, 4579), “to move to and fro,” is rendered “was stirred” in Matt. 21:10, RV (KJV, “was moved”). See MOVE, QUAKE, SHAKE.

5. anaseio (ἀνασεῖω, 383) primarily denotes “to shake back or out, move to and fro”; then, “to stir up,” used metaphorically in Mark 15:11, RV, “stirred ... up” (KJV, “moved”), and Luke 3:14; 23:5.¶

6. saleuo (σαλεύω, 4531), “stirred up” in Acts 17:13: see SHAKE.

7. parotruno (παροτρύνω, 3951), from para, used intensively, beyond measure, and otruno, “to urge on, rouse,” occurs in Acts 13:50, “stirred up.”¶

8. sunkineo (συγκινέω, 4787), “to move together” (sun, “together,” kineo, “to move”), “to stir up, excite,” is used metaphorically in Acts 6:12.¶

9. suncheo (συγχέω, 4797), “to pour together,” is used metaphorically in Acts 21:27, stirred up. See CONFOUND, B, No. 1.

10. paroxuno (παροξύνω, 3947), “stirred” in Acts 17:16: see PROVOKE, No. 2.

11. erethizo (ἐρεθίζω, 2042), “hath stirred” in 2 Cor. 9:2, RV. See PROVOKE, No. 3.

12. anastatoo (ἀναστατόω, 387), “to excite, unsettle” (akin to anistemi, “to raise up,” and anastasis, “a raising”), is used (a) of “stirring up” to sedition, and tumult, Acts 17:6, “turned ... upside down”; 21:38, RV, “stirred up to sedition,” KJV, “madest an uproar”; (b) “to upset” by false teaching, Gal. 5:12, RV, “unsettle” (KJV, “trouble”).¶

Note: In Acts 24:12, poieo, “to make,” with epistasis, “a stopping” (in some texts episustasis), signifies “to collect” (a crowd), KJV, “raising up (the people),” RV, “stirring up (a crowd).” See COME, Note (9).

For STOCK see KIND

STOCKS

xulon (ξύλον, 3586), “wood,” is used of stocks in Acts 16:24. See STAFF, TREE, WOOD.

STOMACH

stomachos (στόμαχος, 4751), properly “a mouth, an opening,” akin to stoma, “a mouth,” denotes “the stomach” in 1 Tim. 5:23.¶

STONE (Noun, Verb, and Adjective)

A. Nouns.

1. lithos (λίθος, 3037) is used (1) literally, of (a) the “stones” of the ground, e.g., Matt. 4:3, 6; 7:9; (b) “tombstones,” e.g., Matt. 27:60, 66; (c) “building stones,” e.g., Matt. 21:42; (d) “a millstone,” Luke 17:2; cf. Rev. 18:21 (see MILLSTONE); (e) the “tables (or tablets)” of the Law, 2 Cor. 3:7; (f) “idol images,” Acts 17:29; (g) the “treasures” of commercial Babylon, Rev. 18:12, 16; (II), metaphorically, of (a) Christ, Rom. 9:33; 1 Pet. 2:4, 6, 8; (b) believers, 1 Pet. 2:5; (c) spiritual edification by scriptural teaching, 1 Cor. 3:12; (d) the adornment of the foundations of the wall of the spiritual and heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:19; (e) the adornment of the seven angels in Rev. 15:6, RV (so the best texts; some have linon, “linen,” KJV); (f) the adornment of religious Babylon, Rev. 17:4;

(III) figuratively, of Christ, Rev. 4:3; 21:11, where “light” stands for “Light-giver” (phoster).

2. psephos (ψηφός, 5586), “a smooth stone, a pebble,” worn smooth as by water, or polished (akin to psao, “to rub”), denotes (a) by metonymy, a vote (from the use of “pebbles” for this purpose; cf. psephizo, “to count”), Acts 26:10, RV (KJV, “voice”); (b) a (white) “stone” to be given to the overcomer in the church at Pergamum, Rev. 2:17 (twice); a white “stone” was often used in the social life and judicial customs of the ancients; festal days were noted by a white “stone,” days of calamity by a black; in the courts a white “stone” indicated acquittal, a black condemnation. A host’s appreciation of a special guest was indicated by a white “stone” with the name or a message written on it; this is probably the allusion here.¶

Note: In John 1:42 petros stands for the proper name, Peter, as the RV (KJV, “a stone”; marg., “Peter”); petros denotes “a piece of a rock, a detached stone or boulder,” in contrast to petra, “a mass of rock.” See ROCK.

B. Verbs.

1. lithoboleo (λιθοβολέω, 3036), “to pelt with stones” (A, No. 1, and ballo, “to throw”), “to stone to death,” occurs in Matt. 21:35; 23:37; Luke 13:34 (John 8:5 in some mss.: see No. 2); Acts 7:58, 59; 14:5; Heb. 12:20.¶

2. lithazo (λιθάζω, 3034), “to stone,” virtually equivalent to No. 1, but not stressing the casting, occurs in John 8:5 (in the most authentic mss.); 10:31-33; 11:8; Acts 5:26; 14:19; 2 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 11:37.¶

3. katalithazo (καταλιθάζω, 2642), an intensive form of No. 2, “to cast stones at,” occurs in Luke 20:6.¶

C. Adjective.

lithinos (λίθινος, 3035), “of stone” (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in John 2:6; 2 Cor. 3:3; Rev. 9:20.¶

For STONY see ROCKY

STOOP

1. kupto (κύπτω, 2955), “to bow the head, stoop down,” occurs in Mark 1:7; John 8:6, 8.¶

2. parakupto (παρακύπτω, 3879) is rendered “to stoop down” in Luke 24:12; John 20:5, 11, RV, “stooping and looking in”: see LOOK, No. 10.

STOP

1. phrasso (φράσσω, 5420), “to fence in” (akin to phragmos, “a fence”), “close, stop,” is used (a) metaphorically, in Rom. 3:19, of “preventing” all excuse from Jew and Gentile, as sinners; in 2 Cor. 11:10, lit., “this boasting shall not be stopped to me”; passive voice in both; (b) physically, of the mouths of lions, Heb. 11:33 (active voice).¶

2. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912), “to hold together,” is rendered “stopped (their ears)” in Acts 7:57. See HOLD.

3. epistomizo (ἐπιστομίζω, 1993), “to stop the mouth,” Titus 1, see MOUTH, B.¶

STORE (Verb)

1. thesaurizo (θησαυρίζω, 2343), “to lay up, store up,” is rendered “in store” (lit., “storing”), with a view to help a special case of need, 1 Cor. 16:2; said of the heavens and earth in 2 Pet. 3:7, RV, “have been stored up (for fire),” marg., “stored (with fire),” KJV, “kept in store (reserved unto fire).” See LAY, No. 17, TREASURE.

2. apothsaurizo (ἀποθησαυρίζω, 597), “to treasure up, store away” (apo), is used in 1 Tim. 6:19, of “laying up in store” a good foundation for the hereafter by being rich in good works.¶

For STOREHOUSE, STORECHAMBER, see CHAMBER

STORM

lailaps (λαίλαψ, 2978), “a hurricane, whirlwind,” is rendered “storm” in Mark 4:37; Luke 8:23; 2 Pet. 2:17, RV (KJV, “tempest”). See TEMPEST.¶

STORY

tristegos (τρίστεγον, 5152), an adjective denoting “of three stories” (treis, “three,” stegē, “a roof”), occurs in Acts 20:9 (with oikema, “a dwelling,” understood), RV, “the third story” (KJV, “the third loft”).¶

STRAIGHT

A. Adjectives.

1. euthus (εὐθύς, 2117), “direct, straight, right,” is translated “straight,” figuratively, of the paths of the Lord, Matt. 3:3; Mark 1:3; Luke 3:4; in v. 5 of the rectification of the crooked, with reference to moral transformation; in Acts 9:11, the name of a street in Damascus, still one of the principal thoroughfares. See RIGHT.

2. orthos (ὀρθός, 3717), used of height, denotes “upright,” Acts 14:10; of line of direction, figuratively, said of paths of righteousness, Heb. 12:13.¶

B. Verbs.

1. euthuno (εὐθύνω, 2116), akin to A, No. 1, is used of the directing of a ship by the steersman, Jas. 3:4 (see GOVERNOR, B, Note); metaphorically, of making “straight” the way of the Lord, John 1:23.¶

2. anorthoo (ἀνορθόω, 461), “to set up, make straight”: see LIFT, No. 6.

For STRAIGHT COURSE, see COURSE, B, Note (1)

For STRAIGHTWAY see FORTHWITH, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and IMMEDIATELY, No. 1

STRAIN OUT

diulizo (διυλίζω, 1368), primarily denotes “to strain thoroughly” (dia, “through,” intensive, hulizo, “to strain”), then, “to strain out,” as through a sieve or strainer, as in the case of wine, so as to remove the unclean midge, Matt. 23:24, RV (KJV, “strain at”).¶ In the Sept., Amos 6:6.¶

For the Adjective STRAIT see NARROW

STRAIT (be in a), STRAITENED

1. sunecho (συνέχω, 4912), “to hold together, constrain,” is translated “I am in a strait” in Phil. 1:23 (passive voice), i.e., being restricted on both sides, under a pressure which prevents a definite choice; so in Luke 12:50, “(how) am I straitened,” i.e., pressed in. See CONSTRAIN, A, No. 3.

2. senochoreo (στενοχωρέω, 4729), “to be pressed for room” (stenos, “narrow,” choros, “a space”), is rendered “to be straitened” in 2 Cor. 4:8, RV (KJV, “distressed”); 6:12 (twice). See ANGUISH, B, No. 1.¶

3. thlibo (θλίβω, 2346), for which see AFFLICT, No. 4, is used in the perfect participle passive of “a narrowed way,” in Matt. 7:14, RV, “straitened,” KJV, “narrow,” of the way “that leadeth unto life,” i.e., hemmed in like a narrow gorge between rocks.

STRAITEST

akribestatos (ἀκριβέστατος, 196), the superlative degree of akribes, “accurate, exact” (cf. akribos, see ACCURATELY and associated words there), occurs in Acts 26:5, “the straitest (sect),” RV (KJV, “most straitest”).¶

STRAITLY

Notes: (1) For polla, KJV, “straitly” in Mark 3:12; 5:43, see MUCH (RV). (2) In Acts 4:17 some mss. have apeile, “a threat,” with apeilo (middle voice), lit., “let us threaten them with a threat,” KJV, “let us straitly threaten”; the best texts omit the noun (so RV). Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.), arguing for the presence of the noun, consider that it “clearly reflects the literal rendering of a Semitic original reported to Luke from an eye-witness—was it Paul?” (3) A similar construction, parangello with the noun parangelia, occurs in Acts 5:28, “we straitly charged you,” lit., “we charged you with a charge.” See CHARGE, A, No. 6. (4) For embrimaomai, KJV, “charge straitly” (RV, “strictly”) in Matt. 9:30; Mark 1:43, see CHARGE, C, No. 4.

For STRAKE, Acts 27:17, KJV (RV, “lowered”), see LET DOWN, No. 2.

STRANGE

A. Adjectives.

1. xenos (ξένος, 3581) denotes (a) “foreign, alien,” Acts 17:18, of gods; Heb. 13:9, of doctrines; (b) “unusual,” 1 Pet. 4:12, 2nd part, of the fiery trial of persecution (for 1st part, see B). See STRANGER.

2. allotrios (ἀλλότριος, 245) denotes (a) “belonging to another” (allos), see MAN’S, Note (1); (b) “alien, foreign, strange,” Acts 7:6; Heb. 11:9, KJV, RV, “(a land) not his own.” See ALIEN, STRANGER.

3. paradoxos (παράδοξος, 3861), “contrary to received opinion” (para, “beside,” doxa, “opinion”; Eng. “paradox,” “-ical”), is rendered “strange things” in Luke 5:26.¶

4. exo (ἐξορκιστής, 1845), outside, is rendered “strange” in Acts 26:11, KJV: see FOREIGN.

Note: In 1 Cor. 14:21 (1st part), RV, heteroglossos, signifying “of a different tongue” (heteros, “another,” glossa, “a tongue”) is translated “of strange (KJV, other) tongues.”¶

B. Verb.

xenizo (ξενίζω, 3579) denotes “to think something strange,” 1 Pet. 4:4, 12, passive voice, i.e., “they are surprised,” and “be (not) surprised”; in Acts 17:20, the present participle, active, is rendered “strange,” i.e., “surprising.” See ENTERTAIN, LODGE.

STRANGER

A. Adjectives (used as nouns).

1. xenos (ξένος, 3581), “strange” (see No. 1 above), denotes “a stranger, foreigner,” Matt. 25:35, 38, 43, 44; 27:7; Acts 17:21; Eph. 2:12, 19; Heb. 11:13; 3 John 5.

2. allotrios (ἀλλότριος, 245), “strangers,” Matt. 17:25, 26; John 10:5 (twice): see No. 2, above.

3. allogenes (ἀλλογενής, 241) (allos, “another,” genos, “a race”) occurs in Luke 17:18, of a Samaritan. Moulton and Milligan illustrate the use of the word by the inscription on the Temple barrier, “let no foreigner enter within the screen and enclosure surrounding the sanctuary”; according to Mommsen this inscription was cut by the Romans: cf. PARTITION.¶

Notes: (1) For paroikos, in KJV, see SOJOURN, B, No. 1. For parepidemos, in KJV, see PILGRIM. (2) The pronoun heteros, “other,” is translated “strangers” in 1 Cor. 14:21 (2nd part), RV (KJV, “other”); cf. STRANGE, A, Note.

B. Verb.

xenodocheo (ξενοδοχέω, 3580), “to receive strangers” (xenos, No. 1, above, and dechomai, “to receive”), occurs in 1 Tim. 5:10, RV, “(if) she hath used hospitality to strangers,” KJV, “(if) she have lodged strangers.”¶

Note: For epidemeo, in KJV, see SOJOURNER, A, No. 2. For paroikeo, in KJV, see SOJOURN, A, No. 1.

C. Noun.

philoxenia (φιλονεξία, 5381), “love of strangers,” occurs in Rom. 12:13, “hospitality,” and Heb. 13:2, RV, “to show love unto strangers,” KJV, “to entertain strangers.” See ENTERTAIN, Note.¶

Note: For paroikia in Acts 13:17, see SOJOURN, C.

STRANGLED

pniktos (πνικτός, 4156), from pnigo, “to choke,” occurs in Acts 15:20, 29; 21:25, of the flesh of animals killed by strangling, without shedding their blood (see, e.g., Lev. 17:13, 14).¶

For STRAWED see FURNISH and SCATTER, No. 2

For STREAM see RIVER

STREET

1. plateia (πλατεία, 4113), grammatically the feminine of platus, “broad,” is used as a noun (hodos, “a way,” being understood, i.e., “a broad way”), “a street,” Matt. 6:5; 12:19 (in some texts, Mark 6:56); Luke 10:10; 13:26; 14:21; Acts 5:15; Rev. 11:8; 21:21; 22:2.¶

2. amphodon (ἄμφοδον, 296), properly “a way around” (amphi, “around,” hodos, “a way”), occurs in Mark 11:4, RV, “the open street” (KJV, “where two ways met”).¶

Note: For rhume, see LANE. For agora, see MARKET.

STRENGTH, STRENGTHEN

A. Nouns.

1. dunamis (δύναμις, 1411) is rendered “strength” in the RV and KJV of Rev. 1:16; elsewhere the RV gives the word its more appropriate meaning “power,” for KJV, “strength,” 1 Cor. 15:56; 2 Cor. 1:8; 12:9; Heb. 11:11; Rev. 3:8; 12:10. See ABILITY, No. 1, POWER, No. 1.

2. ischus (ἰσχύς, 2479), “ability, strength,” is rendered “strength” in Mark 12:30, 33; Luke 10:27; in Rev. 5:12, KJV (RV, “might”). See ABILITY, No. 2, MIGHT.

3. krotos (κράτος, 2904), “force, might,” is rendered “strength” in Luke 1:51, RV and KJV; RV, “strength” (KJV, “power”) in Eph. 1:19 and 6:10. See DOMINION, No. 1, POWER, No. 4.

Note: In Rev. 17:13, KJV, exousia, “freedom of action,” is rendered “strength” (RV, “authority”).

B. Verbs.

1. dunamoo (δυναμόω, 1412), “to strengthen,” occurs in Col. 1:11, and in the best texts in Heb. 11:34, “were made strong” (some have No. 2); some have it in Eph. 6:10 (the best have No. 2).¶ In the Sept., Ps. 52:7; 68:28; Eccl. 10:10; Dan. 9:27.¶

2. endunamoo (ἐνδυναμόω, 1743), “to make strong,” is rendered “increased ... in strength” in Acts 9:22; “to strengthen” in Phil. 4:13; 2 Tim. 2:1, RV, “be strengthened”; 4:17. See ENABLE, STRONG, B.

3. ischuo (ἰσχύω, 2480), akin to A, No. 2, “to have strength,” is so rendered in Mark 5:4, RV (KJV, “could”); in Luke 16:3, RV, “I have not strength to” (KJV, “I cannot”). See AVAIL.

4. enischuo (ἐνισχύω, 1765), akin to A, No. 2, a strengthened form of No. 3, is used in Luke 22:43 and Acts 9:19.¶

5. krataioo (κραταιόω, 2901), “to strengthen,” is rendered “to be strengthened” in Eph. 3:16. See STRONG, B.

6. sthenoo (σθενόω, 4599), from sthenos, “strength,” occurs in 1 Pet. 5:10, in a series of future tenses, according to the best texts, thus constituting divine promises.¶

Notes: (1) For ischuo, Heb. 9:17, see AVAIL. (2) For sterizo, Luke 22:32, see ESTABLISH, No. 1. (3) For stereo, Acts 3:7, see ESTABLISH, No. 2. (4) Episterizo is found in some texts in Acts 18:23, KJV, “strengthening.” See CONFIRM, A, No. 2, ESTABLISH, No. 1. (5) For “without strength,” Rom. 5:6, KJV, see WEAK.

STRETCH

1. ekteino (ἐκτείνω, 1614), “to stretch out or forth,” is so rendered in Matt. 12:13 (twice), 49; 14:31; 26:51; Mark 3:5 (twice), Luke 6:10; in Matt. 8:3; Mark 1:41 and Luke 5:13, RV (KJV, “put forth”); Luke 22:53; John 21:18; Acts 4:30; 26:1. For Acts 27:30 see LAY, No. 3.¶

2. epekteino (ἐπεκτείνωμαι, 1901), an intensive form of No. 1 (epi, “forth”), is used in Phil. 3:13, RV, “stretching forward” (KJV, “reaching forth”), a metaphor probably from the foot race (rather than the chariot race), so Lightfoot, who quotes Bengel’s paraphrase, “the eye goes before and draws on the hand, the hand goes before and draws on the foot.”¶

3. hyperekteino (ὑπερεκτείνω, 5239), “to stretch out beyond” (hyper, “over,” and No. 1), occurs in 2 Cor. 10:14, RV, “we stretch (not) ... overmuch” (KJV, “... beyond our measure”).¶

Note: For ekpetannumi, Rom. 10:21, see SPREAD, No. 5. For epiballo, Acts 12:1, see PUT, No. 8.

STRICKEN (in years)

probaino (προβαίνω, 4260), “to go forward,” is used metaphorically of age, in Luke 1:7, 18, with the phrases “in their (her) days,” translated “well stricken in years” (see marg.); in 2:36, “of a great age” (marg., “advanced in many days”). See GO, No. 20. For STRICT, RV, see MANNER, A, No. 5. For STRICTLY, RV, see STRAITLY STRIFE

1. eris (ἔρις, 2054), “strife, contention,” is the expression of “enmity,” Rom. 1:29, RV, “strife” (KJV, “debate”); 13:13; 1 Cor. 1:11, “contentions” (RV and KJV); 3:3; 2 Cor. 12:20, RV, “strife” (KJV, “debates”); Gal. 5:20, RV, “strife” (KJV, “variance”); Phil. 1:15; 1 Tim. 6:4; Titus 3:9, RV, “strifes” (KJV, “contentions”). See CONTENTION, A, No. 1.¶

2. erithia (or —eia) (ἐριθεία, 2052): see FACTION.

3. antilogia (ἀντιλογία, 485), “strife,” Heb. 6:16, KJV: see DISPUTE, A, No. 4.

4. mache (μάχη, 3163), “strifes,” 2 Tim. 2:23: see FIGHTING, A.

5. philoneikia (φιλονεικία, 5379), “strife,” Luke 22:24, KJV: see CONTENTION, A, No. 3.¶

6. logomachia (λογομαχία, 3055), “strife of words,” 1 Tim. 6:4: see DISPUTE, A, No. 2.¶

STRIKE

Notes: (1) In Rev. 7:16, pipto, “to fall,” is rendered “strike” in the RV, KJV, “light (on).” (2) In Acts 27:41, ereido, “to fix firmly,” is used of a ship driving ashore, RV, “struck” (KJV, “stuck fast”).¶ (3) For paio, “to smite,” Rev. 9:5, KJV, striketh, see SMITE, No. 3. (4) For patasso, “to smite,” Matt. 26:51, KJV, “struck,” see SMITE, No. 1. (5) For chalaō, “to let go,” Acts 27:17, KJV, “strake, see LET DOWN, No. 2. (6) In Luke 22:64 some mss. have tupto, “to beat,” imperfect tense, “they were beating.” (7) For rhapizo, Matt. 26:67, and rhapisma, Mark 14:65, see BLOW, SMITE, No. 6 and Note (2). Some mss. have ballo, “struck.”

STRIKER

plektes (πλήκτης, 4131), “a striker, a brawler” (akin to plesso, “to strike,” smite), occurs in 1 Tim. 3:3; Titus 1:7.¶

For STRING see BOND, No. 1

STRIP

ekduo (ἐκδύω, 1562), “to take off, strip off,” is used especially of clothes, and rendered “to strip” in Matt. 27:28 (some mss. have enduo, “to clothe”), and Luke 10:30, to take off, Matt. 27:31; Mark 15:20; figuratively, 2 Cor. 5:4, “unclothed” (middle voice), of putting off the body at death (the believer’s state of being unclothed does not refer to the body in the grave but to the spirit, which awaits the “body of glory” at the resurrection).¶

STRIPE

1. molops (μώλωψ, 3468), “a bruise, a wound from a stripe,” is used in 1 Pet. 2:24 (from the Sept. of Isa. 53:5), lit., in the original, “by whose bruise,” not referring to Christ’s scourging, but figurative of the stroke of divine judgment administered vicariously to Him on the cross (a comforting reminder to these Christian servants, who were not infrequently buffeted, v. 20, by their masters).¶

2. plege (πληγή, 4127), “a blow, stripe, wound” (akin to plesso, “to strike,” and plektes, “a striker”), is rendered “stripes” in Luke 12:48 (the noun is omitted in the original in v. 47 and the 2nd part of v. 48); Acts 16:23, 33; 2 Cor. 6:5; 11:23. See PLAGUE, WOUND.

STRIVE

1. agonizomai (ἀγωνίζομαι, 75), “to contend” (Eng., “agonize”), is rendered “to strive” in Luke 13:24; 1 Cor. 9:25; Col. 1:29; 4:12, RV (KJV, “laboring fervently”). In 1 Tim. 4:10, the best texts have this verb (RV, “strive”) for oneidizomai, “to suffer reproach,” KJV; see FIGHT, B, No. 1.

2. machomai (μάχομαι, 3164), “to fight, to quarrel, dispute,” is rendered “to strive” in John 6:52; Acts 7:26; 2 Tim. 2:24. See FIGHT, B, No. 3.

3. diamachomai (διαμάχομαι, 1264), “to struggle against” (dia, intensive, and No. 2), is used of “contending” in an argument, Acts 23:9, “strove.”¶

4. erizo (ἐρίζω, 2051), “to wrangle, strive” (eris, “strife”), is used in Matt. 12:19.¶

5. logomacheo (λογομαχέω, 3054), “to strive about words” (logos, “a word,” and No. 2), is used in 2 Tim. 2:14.¶

6. antagonizomai (ἀνταγωνίζομαι, 464), “to struggle against” (anti), is used in Heb. 12:4, “striving against.”¶

7. sunagonizomai (συναγωνίζομαι, 4865), “to strive together with” (sun), is used in Rom. 15:30.¶

8. sunathleo (συναθλέω, 4866), “to strive together,” Phil. 1:27: see LABOR, B, No. 3.

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 2:5, KJV, athleo, “to contend in games, wrestle” (athlos, “a contest”), is rendered “strive.” See CONTEND. (2) For philotimeornai, Rom. 15:20, see AIM.

For STRIVINGS, Titus 3:9, KJV, see FIGHTING

STROLLING

perierchomai (περιέρχομαι, 4022), “to go about,” as an itinerant (peri, “around,” erchomai, “to go”), is used of certain Jews in Acts 19:13, RV, “strolling” (KJV, “vagabond”). See COMPASS, No. 6, WANDER.

STRONG, STRONGER

A. Adjectives.

1. dunatos (δυνατός, 1415), “powerful, mighty,” is translated “strong,” in Rom. 15:1, where the “strong” are those referred to in ch. 14, in contrast to “the weak in faith,” those who have scruples in regard to eating meat and the observance of days; 2 Cor. 12:10, where the strength lies in bearing sufferings in the realization that the endurance is for Christ’s sake; 2 Cor. 13:9, where “ye are strong” implies the good spiritual condition which the apostle desires for the church at Corinth in having nothing requiring his exercise of discipline (contrast No. 2 in 1 Cor. 4:10). See ABLE, C, No. 1, MIGHTY, POSSIBLE, POWER.

2. ichuuros (ἰσχυρός, 2478), “strong, mighty,” is used of (a) persons: (1) God, Rev. 18:8; (2) angels, Rev. 5:2; 10:1; 18:21; (3) men, Matt. 12:29 (twice) and parallel passages; Heb. 11:34, KJV, “valiant” (RV, “mighty”); Rev. 6:15 (in the best texts; some have No. 1); 19:18, “mighty”; metaphorically, (4) the church at Corinth, 1 Cor. 4:10, where the apostle reproaches them ironically with their unspiritual and self-complacent condition; (5) of young men in Christ spiritually strong, through the Word of God, to overcome the evil one, 1 John 2:14; of (b) things: (1) wind, Matt. 14:30 (in some mss.), “boisterous”; (2) famine, Luke 15:14; (3) things in the mere human estimate, 1 Cor. 1:27; (4) Paul’s letters, 2 Cor. 10:10; (5) the Lord’s crying and tears, Heb. 5:7; (6) consolation, 6:18; (7) the voice of an angel, Rev. 18:2 (in the best texts; some have megas, “great”); (8) Babylon, Rev. 18:10; (9) thunderings, Rev. 19:6. See BOISTEROUS, MIGHTY.

3. ischuroteros (ἰσχυρότερος, 2478*), the comparative degree of No. 2, is used (a) of Christ, Matt. 3:11; Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; (b) of “the weakness of God,” as men without understanding regard it, 1 Cor. 1:25; (c) of a man of superior physical strength, Luke 11:22; (d) in 1 Cor. 10:22, in a rhetorical question, implying the impossibility of escaping the jealousy of God when it is kindled.¶

Notes: (1) For “strong delusion,” 2 Thess. 2:11, KJV, see ERROR, No. 1. (2) For “strong (meat),” Heb. 5:12, 14, KJV, see SOLID.

B. Verbs.

1. endunamoo (ἐνδυναμόω, 1743), “to make strong” (en, “in,” dunamis, “power”), “to strengthen,” is rendered “waxed strong” in Rom. 4:20, RV (KJV, “was strong”); “be strong,” Eph. 6:10; “were made strong,” Heb. 11:34. See ENABLE, STRENGTH, B, No. 2.

2. krataioo (κραταιόω, 2901), “to strengthen” (akin to kratos, “strength”), is rendered (a) “to wax strong,” Luke 1:80; 2:40; “be strong,” 1 Cor. 16:13, lit., “be strengthened”; “to be strengthened,” Eph. 3:16 (passive voice in each place). See STRENGTHEN.¶

3. stereoō (στερεόω, 4732): see ESTABLISH, No. 2.

STRONGHOLDS

ochuroma (ὀχύρωμα, 3794), “a stronghold, fortress” (akin to ochuroo, “to make firm”), is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 10:4, of those things in which mere human confidence is imposed.¶

STUBBLE

kalame (καλάμη, 2562), “a stalk of corn,” denotes “straw” or “stubble”; in 1 Cor. 3:12, metaphorically of the effect of the most worthless form of unprofitable doctrine, in the lives and conduct of those in a church who are the subjects of such teaching; the teachings received and the persons who receive them are associated; the latter are “the doctrine exhibited in concrete form” (Lightfoot).¶

For STUCK see STICK

STUDY

Notes: For philotimeomai, “study,” 1 Thess. 4:11, see AIM. For spoudazo, 2 Tim. 2:15, KJV, see DILIGENCE, B, No. 1.

For STUFF, Luke 17:31, KJV, see GOODS, No. 4

STUMBLE

1. proskopto (προσκόπτω, 4350), “to strike against,” is used of “stumbling,” (a) physically, John 11:9, 10; (b) metaphorically, (1) of Israel in regard to Christ, whose Person, teaching, and atoning death, and the gospel relating thereto, were contrary to all their ideas as to the means of righteousness before God, Rom. 9:32; 1 Pet. 2:8; (2) of a brother in the Lord in acting against the dictates of his conscience, Rom. 14:21. See BEAT, No. 6.

2. ptaio (πταίω, 4417), “to cause to stumble,” signifies, intransitively, “to stumble,” used metaphorically in Rom. 11:11, in the sense (b) (1) in No. 1; with moral significance in Jas. 2:10 and 3:2 (twice), RV, “stumble” (KJV, “offend”); in 2 Pet. 1:10, RV, “stumble” (KJV, “fall”).¶

Note: For aptaistos, “from stumbling,” Jude 24, RV, see FALL, B, Note (6).

For STUMBLING, STUMBLING BLOCK, STUMBLING-STONE, see OFFENSE, A, Nos. 1, 2, 3 and B

STUPOR

katanuxis (κατάνυξις, 2659), “a pricking” (akin to katanusso, “to strike” or “prick violently,” Acts 2:37), is used in Rom. 11:8, RV, “stupor” (KJV, “slumber”). It is suggested that this meaning arose from the influence of the verb katanustazo, “to nod” or “fall asleep” (Field, Notes on the Translation of the NT). Evidently what is signified is the dulling of the spiritual sense.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 60:3; Isa. 29:10.¶

SUBDUE

katagonizomai (καταγωνίζομαι, 2610), primarily, “to struggle against” (kata, “against,” agon, “a contest”), came to signify “to conquer,” Heb. 11:33, “subdued.”¶

Note: For hupotasso, KJV, “to subdue,” in 1 Cor. 15:28 and Phil. 3:21, see SUBJECT.

SUBJECT, SUBJECTION (Verb, Adjective, Noun)

A. Verb.

hupotasso (ὑποτάσσω, 5293), primarily a military term, “to rank under” (hupo, “under,” tasso, “to arrange”), denotes (a) “to put in subjection, to subject,” Rom. 8:20 (twice); in the following, the RV, has to subject for KJV, “to put under,” 1 Cor. 15:27 (thrice), 28 (3rd clause); Eph. 1:22; Heb. 2:8 (4th clause); in 1 Cor. 15:28 (1st clause), for KJV “be subdued”; in Phil. 3:21, for KJV, “subdue”; in Heb. 2:5, KJV, “hath ... put in subjection”; (b) in the middle or passive voice, to subject oneself, to obey, be subject to, Luke 2:51; 10:17, 20; Rom. 8:7; 10:3, RV, “did (not) subject themselves” [KJV, “have (not) submitted themselves”]; 13:1, 5; 1 Cor. 14:34, RV, “be in subjection” (KJV, “be under obedience”); 15:28 (2nd clause); 16:16 RV, “be in subjection” (KJV, “submit, etc.”); so Col. 3:18; Eph. 5:21, RV, “subjecting yourselves” (KJV, “submitting, etc.”); v. 22, RV in italics, according to the best texts; v. 24, “is subject”; Titus 2:5, 9, RV, “be in subjection” (KJV, “be obedient”); 3:1, RV, “to be in subjection” (KJV, “to be subject”); Heb. 12:9, “be in subjection”; Jas. 4:7, RV, “be subject” (KJV, “submit yourselves”); so 1 Pet. 2:13; v. 18, RV, “be in subjection”; so 3:1, KJV and RV; v. 5, similarly; 3:22, “being made subject”; 5:5, RV, “be subject” (KJV, “submit yourselves”); in some texts in the 2nd part, as KJV. See OBEDIENT, SUBMIT.

Note: For doulagogeio, 1 Cor. 9:27, KJV, bring into subjection, see BONDAGE, B, No.

3. For anupotaktos, “not subject,” Heb. 2:8, see DISOBEDIENT, B, Note.

B. Adjective.

enochos (ἐνοχος, 1777), “held in, bound by,” in Heb. 2:15, subject to: see DANGER, B, No. 1.

Note: For “subject to like passions,” Jas. 5:17, KJV, see PASSION.

C. Noun.

hupotage (ὑποταγή, 5292), “subjection,” occurs in 2 Cor. 9:13; Gal. 2:5; 1 Tim. 2:11; 3:4.¶

SUBMIT

hupeiko (ὑπείκω, 5226), “to retire, withdraw” (hupo, under, eiko, “to yield”), hence, “to yield, submit,” is used metaphorically in Heb. 13:17, of “submitting” to spiritual guides in the churches.¶

Note: For hupotasso, see SUBJECT, A.

SUBORN

hupoballo (ὑποβάλλω, 5260), “to throw or put under, to subject,” denoted “to suggest, whisper, prompt”; hence, “to instigate,” translated “suborned” in Acts 6:11. To “suborn” in the legal sense is to procure a person who will take a false oath. The idea of making suggestions is probably present in this use of the word.¶

SUBSTANCE

1. ousia (οὐσία, 3776), derived from a present participial form of eimi, “to be,” denotes “substance, property,” Luke 15:12, 13, RV, “substance,” KJV, “goods” and “substance.”¶

2. huparchonta (ὑπάρχοντα, 5224), the neuter plural of the present participle of huparcho, “to be in existence,” is used as a noun with the article, signifying one’s “goods,” and translated “substance” in Luke 8:3. See GOODS, POSSESS, A, No. 3.

3. huparxis (ὑπαρξις, 5223), existence (akin to No. 2), possession: see POSSESS, B, No. 4.

4. hupostasis (ὑπόστασις, 5287), for which see CONFIDENCE, A, No. 2, is translated “substance” (a) in Heb. 1:3, of Christ as “the very image” of God’s “substance”; here the word has the meaning of the real nature of that to which reference is made in contrast to the outward manifestation (see the preceding clause); it speaks of the divine essence of God existent and expressed in the revelation of His Son. The KJV, “person” is an anachronism; the word was not so rendered till the 4th cent. Most of the earlier Eng. versions have “substance”; (b) in Heb. 11:1 it has the meaning of “confidence, assurance” (RV), marg., “the giving substance to,” KJV, “substance,” something that could not equally be expressed by elpis, “hope.”

SUBTLY

katasophizomai (κατασοφίζομαι, 2686), “to deal subtly” (from kata, “against, under,” sophos, “wise, subtle,” used in the Sept. in 2 Sam. 13:3, of Jonadab), occurs in Acts 7:19.¶ In the Sept.. Ex. 1:10.¶

SUBTLETY

Note: For dolos, Matt. 26:4; Acts 13:10, see GUILF. For panourgia, 2 Cor. 11:3, see CRAFTINESS.

SUBVERT, SUBVERTING

A. Verb.

anaskeuazo (ἀνασκευάζω, 384), primarily, “to pack up baggage” (ana, “up,” skeuos, “a vessel”), hence, from a military point of view, “to dismantle a town, to plunder,” is used metaphorically in Acts 15:24, of unsettling or “subverting” the souls of believers. In the papyri it is used of going bankrupt.¶

Note: For anatrepo, Titus 1:11, see OVERTHROW, B, No. 3. For ekstrepho, Titus 3:11, see PERVERT, No. 4.

B. Noun.

katastrophe (καταστροφή, 2692), “an overthrow,” 2 Pet. 2:6 (Eng. “catastrophe”), is rendered “subverting” in 2 Tim. 2:14. See OVERTHROW.¶

For SUCCEED, Acts 24:27, RV, see ROOM, Note (2)

For SUCCOR see HELP, B, No. 4

SUCCORER

prostatis (προστάτις, 4368), a feminine form of prostates, denotes “a protectress, patroness”; it is used metaphorically of Phoebe in Rom. 16:2. It is a word of dignity, evidently chosen instead of others which might have been used (see, e.g., under HELPER), and indicates the high esteem with which she was regarded, as one who had been a protectress of many. Prostates was the title of a citizen in Athens, who had the responsibility of seeing to the welfare of resident aliens who were without civic rights. Among the Jews it signified a wealthy patron of the community.¶

SUCH AS

Notes: (1) In Acts 2:47, KJV, the article with the present participle, passive, of sozo, “to save,” lit., “the (ones), i.e., those, being saved,” is translated “such as (should be saved)”; the RV, “those that (were being saved),” gives the correct meaning, marking the kind of persons who were added to the company; (2) “such as” is a rendering of certain relative pronouns: hoios, “what sort of,” e.g., Matt. 24:21; 2 Cor. 12:20 (twice); Rev. 16:18; hostis, “whoever,” e.g., Mark 4:20; hopoios, “of what sort,” preceded by toioutos, “of such a sort,” Acts 26:29; (3) deina, Matt. 26:18, denotes “such a one” (whom one cannot, or will not, name).¶ (4) In Heb. 13:5, “such things as ye have” represents the phrase ta paronta, “the (things) present” (present participle of pareimi); (5) in Luke 11:41, ta enonta, KJV, “such things as ye have,” lit., “the (things) within” (eneimi, “to be in”), RV, “those things which are within” (KJV marg., “as you are able,” RV, marg., “ye can”), perhaps signifying not outward things such as lustrations, but “what things ye have within your cups and platters,” i.e., “your possessions.”

SUCK (GIVE SUCK), SUCKLING

thelazo (θηλάζω, 2337), from thele, “a breast,” is used (a) of the mother, “to suckle,” Matt. 24:19; Mark 13:17; Luke 21:23; in some texts in 23:29 (the best have trepho); (b) of the young, “to suck,” Matt. 21:16, “sucklings”; Luke 11:27.¶

SUDDEN, SUDDENLY

A. Adjective.

aipnidiος (αἰφνίδιος, 160), “sudden,” occurs in 1 Thess. 5:3, where it has the place of emphasis at the beginning of the sentence, as olethros, “destruction,” which the adjective qualifies, has at the end; in Luke 21:34, it is used adverbially, RV, “suddenly” (KJV, “unawares”). See UNAWARES.¶

---

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

B. Adverbs.

1. aphno (ἄφνω, 869), “suddenly,” occurs in Acts 2:2; 16:26; 28:6.¶

2. exaiphnes (ἐξαίφνης, 1810), a strengthened form, akin to No. 1, occurs in Mark 13:36; Luke 2:13; 9:39; Acts 9:3; 22:6.¶

3. exapina (ἐξάπιννα, 1819), a later form of No. 2, occurs in Mark 9:5.¶

Note: For tacheos in 1 Tim. 5:22, KJV, “suddenly,” RV, “hastily,” see QUICKLY, No. 3.

SUFFER

A. Verbs.

(a) to permit

1. eao (ἐάω, 1439), “to let, permit,” is translated “to suffer” in Matt. 24:43; Luke 4:41; 22:51; Acts 14:16; 16:7; 19:30; 28:4; 1 Cor. 10:13. See LEAVE (a) No. 9, LET, No. 4.

2. proseao (προσεάω, 4330), “to permit further” (pros, and No. 1), occurs in Acts 27:7.¶

3. epitrepo (ἐπιτρέπω, 2010), for which see LEAVE, (b), is rendered “to suffer” in KJV and RV in Matt. 8:21; Mark 10:4; Luke 9:59; Acts 28:16; RV only, Luke 9:61 (KJV, “let”); KJV only, Acts 21:39; in some texts, Matt. 8:31, KJV only. See LIBERTY, C, Note, PERMIT.

4. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), “to send away,” signifies “to permit, suffer,” in Matt. 3:15 (twice); Matt. 19:14; 23:13; Mark 1:34; 5:19, 37; 10:14; 11:16; Luke 8:51; 12:39, KJV (RV, “left”); 18:16; John 12:7, RV, KJV and RV marg., “let (her) alone”; Rev. 11:9. See FORGIVE.

Notes: (1) In Acts 2:27 and 13:35, KJV, didomi, “to give” (RV), is rendered “to suffer.” (2) In 1 Cor. 6:7, KJV, apostereo, in the passive voice, is rendered “suffer yourselves to be defrauded” (RV, “be defrauded”). (3) For koluo in Heb. 7:23, KJV, “were not suffered,” see HINDER.

(b) to endure suffering

1. anecho (ἀνέχομαι, 430), in the middle voice, “to bear with,” is rendered “to suffer” in Matt. 17:17 and parallel passages; KJV only, 1 Cor. 4:12 (RV, “endure”); 2 Cor. 11:19, 20 and Heb. 13:22 (RV, bear with). See BEAR, ENDURE.

2. pascho (πάσχω, 3958), “to suffer,” is used (I) of the “sufferings” of Christ (a) at the hands of men, e.g., Matt. 16:21; 17:12; 1 Pet. 2:23; (b) in His expiatory and vicarious sacrifice for sin, Heb. 9:26; 13:12; 1 Pet. 2:21; 3:18; 4:1; (c) including both (a) and (b), Luke 22:15; 24:26, 46; Acts 1:3, “passion”; 3:18; 17:3; Heb. 5:8; (d) by the antagonism of the evil one, Heb. 2:18; (II), of human “suffering” (a) of followers of Christ, Acts 9:16; 2 Cor. 1:6; Gal. 3:4; Phil. 1:29; 1 Thess. 2:14; 2 Thess. 1:5; 2 Tim. 1:12; 1 Pet. 3:14, 17; 5:10; Rev. 2:10; in identification with Christ in His crucifixion, as the spiritual ideal to be realized, 1 Pet. 4:1; in a wrong way, 4:15; (b) of others, physically, as the result of demoniacal power, Matt. 17:15, RV, “suffereth (grievously),” KJV, “is (sore) vexed”; cf. Mark 5:26; in a dream, Matt. 27:19; through maltreatment, Luke 13:2; 1 Pet. 2:19, 20; by a serpent (negatively), Acts 28:5, RV, “took” (KJV, “felt:” see FEEL, Note); (c) of the effect upon the whole body through the “suffering” of one member, 1 Cor. 12:26, with application to a church.

3. propascho (προπάσχω, 4310), “to suffer before” (pro, and No. 2), occurs in 1 Thess. 2:2.¶

4. sumpascho (συμπάσχω, 4841), “to suffer with” (sun, and No. 2), is used in Rom. 8:17 of “suffering” with Christ; in 1 Cor. 12:26 of joint “suffering” in the members of the body.¶

5. hupecho (ὑπέχω, 5254), “to hold under” (hupo, “under,” echo, “to have or hold”), is used metaphorically in Jude 7 of “suffering” punishment.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 89:50; Lam. 5:7.¶

6. kakoucheo (κακουχέω, 2558), “to illtreat” (kakos, “evil,” and echo, “to have”), is used in the passive voice in Heb. 11:37, RV, “evil entreated” (KJV, “tormented”); in 13:3, RV, “are evil entreated” (KJV, “suffer adversity”).¶

7. sunkakoucheomai (συγκακουχέω, 4778), “to endure adversity with,” is used in Heb. 11:25 (sun, “with,” and No. 6), RV, “to be evil entreated with,” KJV, “to suffer affliction with.”¶

8. makrothumeo (μακροθυμέω, 3114) is rendered “suffereth long” in 1 Cor. 13:4. See PATIENCE.

9. adikeo (ἀδικέω, 91), “to do wrong, injustice” (a, negative, dike, “right”), is used in the passive voice in 2 Pet. 2:13, RV, “suffering wrong” (some texts have komizo, “to receive,” KJV); there is a play upon words here which may be brought out thus, “being defrauded (of the wages of fraud),” a use of the verb illustrated in the papyri. See HURT.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 9:12, KJV, stego, “to bear up under,” is translated “suffer” (RV, “bear”); see BEAR, No. 11. (2) For hupomeno, rendered “to suffer” in 2 Tim. 2:12, see ENDURE, No. 2. (3) For “suffer hardship, suffer trouble,” see HARDSHIP, Nos. 1 and 2. (4) For “suffer need,” Phil. 4:12, see WANT. (5) For “suffer loss,” 2 Cor. 7:9, RV, see LOSE, No. 2. (6) For “suffer persecution,” see PERSECUTION. (7) For “suffer shipwreck,” see SHIPWRECK. (8) For trophoreo in Acts 13:18, “suffered ... manners,” see MANNER, E. (9) For “suffereth violence,” biazō, see FORCE, B, No. 1, VIOLENCE, B, No. 2. (10) In 2 Thess. 1:9, RV, tino, “to pay a penalty,” is rendered “shall suffer (punishment).”¶

B. Adjective.

pathetos (παθητός, 3805), akin to pascho, denotes “one who has suffered,” or “subject to suffering,” or “destined to suffer”; it is used in the last sense of the “suffering” of Christ, Acts 26:23.¶

SUFFERING

pathema (πάθημα, 3804) is rendered “sufferings” in the RV (KJV, “afflictions”) in 2 Tim. 3:11; Heb. 10:32; 1 Pet. 5:9; in Gal. 5:24, “passions (KJV, “affections”). See AFFLICTION, B, No. 3.

Note: For kakopatheia, Jas. 5:10, RV, “suffering,” see AFFLICTION, B, No. 1.

SUFFICE, SUFFICIENT

A. Verbs.

1. arkeo (ἀρκέω, 714), “to suffice,” is rendered “is sufficient” in John 6:7; 2. Cor. 12:9; “it sufficeth” in John 14:8. See CONTENT, ENOUGH.

Note: For 1 Pet. 4:3, see B, No. 2.

2. hikanoo (ἱκανόω, 2427), “to make sufficient, render fit,” is translated “made (us) sufficient” in 2 Cor. 3:6, RV (KJV, “hath made ... able”). See ABLE, B, No. 6, Note.

B. Adjectives.

1. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), akin to A, No. 2, “enough, sufficient, fit,” etc. is translated “sufficient” in 2 Cor. 2:6, 16; 3:5. See ABLE, C, No. 2.

2. arketos (ἀρκετός, 713), akin to A, No. 1, used with eimi, “to be,” is translated “may suffice” in 1 Pet. 4:3. See ENOUGH, A, No. 1.

SUFFICIENCY

1. autarkeia (αὐτάρκεια, 841) (autos, “self,” arkeo, see A, above; Eng., “autarchy”), “contentment,” 1 Tim. 6:6, is rendered “sufficiency” in 2 Cor. 9:5.¶

2. hikanotes (ἱκανότης, 2426) is rendered “sufficiency” in 2 Cor. 3:5.¶

For SUIT (make), Acts 25:24, RV, see DEAL WITH, Note (1)

SUM (Noun), SUM UP

A. Noun.

Note: For kephalaion, Acts 22:28; Heb. 8:1, see POINT, B.¶ For time, Acts 7:16, see PRICE, A.

B. Verb.

anakephalaioo (ἀνακεφαλαίωμα, 346), “to sum up, gather up” (ana, “up,” kephale, “a head”), “to present as a whole,” is used in the passive voice in Rom. 13:9, RV, “summed up” (KJV, “briefly comprehended”), i.e., the one commandment expresses all that the Law enjoins, and to obey this one is to fulfil the Law (cf. Gal. 5:14); middle voice in Eph. 1:10, RV, “sum up” (KJV, “gather together”), of God’s purpose to “sum up” all things in the heavens and on the earth in Christ, a consummation extending beyond the limits of the church, though the latter is to be a factor in its realization.¶

SUMMER

theros (θέρος, 2330), akin to thero, “to heat,” occurs in Matt. 24:32; Mark 13:28; Luke 21:30.¶

SUMPTUOUS, SUMPTUOUSLY

A. Adjective.

lampros (λαμπρός, 2986), “bright,” is rendered “sumptuous” in Rev. 18:14, RV See BRIGHT, GOODLY, Note.

B. Adverb.

lampros (λαμπρῶς, 2988), the corresponding adverb, is used in Luke 16:19, “sumptuously.”¶ helios (ἥλιος, 2246), whence Eng. prefix “helio—,” is used (a) as a means of the natural benefits of light and heat, e.g., Matt. 5:45, and power, Rev. 1:16; (b) of its qualities of brightness and glory, e.g., Matt. 13:43; 17:2; Acts 26:13; 1 Cor. 15:41; Rev. 10:1; 12:1; (c) as a means of destruction, e.g., Matt. 13:6; Jas. 1:11; of physical misery, Rev. 7:16; (d) as a means of judgment, e.g., Matt. 24:29; Mark 13:24; Luke 21:25; 23:45; Acts 2:20; Rev. 6:12; 8:12; 9:2; 16:8.

SUN

Note: In Rev. 7:2 and 16:12, anatole, “rising,” used with helios, is translated “sunrising,” RV (KJV, “east”).

For SUNDER (Asunder) see CUT, No. 6

For SUNDRY see PORTION, C

SUP

deipneo (δειπνέω, 1172), “to sup” (said of taking the chief meal of the day), occurs in Luke 17:8; 22:20 (in the best texts), lit., “(the) supping”; so 1 Cor. 11:25; metaphorically in Rev. 3:20, of spiritual communion between Christ and the faithful believer.¶

For SUPERFLUITY see ABUNDANCE, A, No. 2, B, No. 1

SUPERFLUOUS

perissos (περισσός, 4053), “abundant, more than sufficient,” is translated “superfluous” in 2 Cor. 9:1. See ABUNDANT, C, No. 1, ADVANTAGE, MORE, B, No. 2.

SUPERScription

epigraphē (ἐπιγραφή, 1923), lit., “an overwriting” (epi, “over,” grapho, “to write”) (the meaning of the anglicized Latin word “superscription”), denotes “an inscription, a title.” On Roman coins the emperor’s name was inscribed, Matt. 22:20; Mark 12:16; Luke 20:24. In the Roman Empire, in the case of a criminal on his way to execution, a board on which was inscribed the cause of his condemnation, was carried before him or hung round his neck; the inscription was termed a “title” (titlos). The four Evangelists state that at the crucifixion of Christ the title was affixed to the cross, Mark (15:26), and Luke (23:38), call it a “superscription”; Mark says it was “written over” (epigrapho, the corresponding verb). Matthew calls it “His accusation”; John calls it “a title” (a technical term). The wording varies: the essential words are the same, and the variation serves to authenticate the narratives, showing that there was no consultation leading to an agreement as to the details. See further under TITLE.¶

For SUPERSTITION see RELIGION

SUPERSTITIOUS

deisidaimon (δεισιδαιμονία, 1175), “reverent to the deity” (deido, “to fear”; daimon, “a demon,” or “pagan god”), occurs in Acts 17:22 in the comparative degree, rendered “somewhat superstitious,” RV (KJV, “too superstitious”), a meaning which the word sometimes has; others, according to its comparative form, advocate the meaning “more religious (than others),” “quite religious” (cf. the noun in 25:19). This is supported by Ramsay, who renders it “more than others respectful of what is divine”; so Deissmann in Light from the Ancient East, and others. It also agrees with the meaning found in Greek writers; the context too suggests that the adjective is used in a good sense; perhaps, after all with kindly ambiguity (Grimm-Thayer). An ancient epitaph has it in the sense of “reverent” (Moulton and Milligan).

SUPPER

deipnon (δῆπνον, 1173) denotes “a supper” or “feast” (for an analysis of the uses see FEAST, No. 2). In John 13:2 the RV, following certain texts, has “during supper” (KJV, “supper being ended”).

Note: For “supper” in Luke 22:20 see SUP.

SUPPLICATION

1. deesis (δέσις, 1162) is always translated “supplication,” or the plural, in the RV. See PRAYER, B, No. 3.

2. hiketeria (ἱκετηρία, 2428) is the feminine form of the adjective hiketerios, denoting “of a suppliant,” and used as a noun, formerly “an olive branch” carried by a suppliant (hiketes), then later, “a supplication,” used with No. 1 in Heb. 5:7.¶ In the Sept., Job 40:22 (Eng. Vers. 41:3).¶

SUPPLY (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. choregeo (χορηγέω, 5524) primarily, among the Greeks, signified “to lead a stage chorus or dance” (choros, and hegeomai, “to lead”), then, “to defray the expenses of a chorus”; hence, later, metaphorically, “to supply,” 2 Cor. 9:10 (2nd part; see also No. 2), RV, “supply” (KJV “minister”); 1 Pet. 4:11, RV, “supplieth” (KJV, “giveth”). See GIVE, Note (4), MINISTER, B, Note (1).¶

2. epichoregeo (ἐπιχορηγέω, 2023), “to supply fully, abundantly” (a strengthened form of No. 1), is rendered “to supply” in the RV of 2 Cor. 9:10 (1st part) and Gal. 3:5 (for KJV, “to minister”), where the present continuous tense speaks of the work of the Holy Spirit in all His ministrations to believers individually and collectively; in Col. 2:19, RV, “being supplied” (KJV, “having nourishment ministered”), of the work of Christ as the Head of the church His body, in 2 Pet. 1:5, “supply” (KJV, “add”); in v. 11, “shall be ... supplied” (KJV, “shall be ministered”), of the reward hereafter which those are to receive, in regard to positions in the kingdom of God, for their fulfillment here of the conditions mentioned.¶

Note: In 2 Cor. 9:10 (see Nos. 1 and 2 above) the stronger verb No. 2 is used where the will and capacity to receive are in view.

3. anapleroo (ἀναπληρόω, 378), “to fill up, fulfill,” is rendered “to supply” in 1 Cor. 16:17 and Phil. 2:30. See FILL, FULFILL, OCCUPY.

4. prosanapleroo (προσαναπληρόω, 4322), “to fill up by adding to, to supply fully” (pros, “to,” and No. 3), is translated “supplieth” in 2 Cor. 9:12, KJV (RV, “filleth up the measure of”); in 11:9, RV and KJV, “supplied.”¶

Note: In Phil. 4:19, KJV, pleroo, to fulfill (RV), is rendered “shall supply.”

B. Noun.

epichoregia (ἐπιχορηγία, 2024), “a full supply,” occurs in Eph. 4:16, “supplieth,” lit., “by the supply of every joint,” metaphorically of the members of the church, the body of which Christ is the Head, and Phil. 1:19, “the supply (of the Spirit of Jesus Christ),” i.e., “the bountiful supply”; here “of the Spirit” may be taken either in the subjective sense, the Giver, or the objective, the Gift.¶

SUPPORT

Notes: (1) In Acts 20:35, KJV, antilambanomai, “to help” (RV), is translated “support.” See HELP, B, No. 1. (2) In 1 Thess. 5:14, antechomai signifies “to support”: see HOLD, No. 3.

SUPPOSE

2. dokeo (δοκέω, 1380), “to be of opinion,” is translated “to suppose” in Mark 6:49; Luke 24:37; John 20:15; Acts 27:13; in the following, KJV “suppose,” RV, “think,” Luke 12:51; 13:2; Heb. 10:29. It is most frequently rendered “to think,” always in Matthew; always in John, except 11:31, “supposing,” RV [where the best texts have this verb (for lego, KJV, “saying”)], and 20:15 (see above).

3. hupolambano (ὑπολαμβάνω, 5274), when used of mental action, signifies “to suppose, Luke 7:43, and Acts 2:15. See ANSWER, RECEIVE.

4. huponoeo (ὑπονοέω, 5282), “to suspect, to conjecture,” is translated “suppose ye” in Acts 13:25, RV (KJV, “think ye”); “I supposed” in 25:18. See DEEM.

5. oimomai or oimomai (οἶμαι, 3633) signifies “to expect, imagine, suppose”; it is rendered “to suppose” in John 21:25; Phil. 1:17, RV (KJV, v. 16, “thinking”); “think” in Jas. 1:7. See THINK.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 11:5, KJV, logizomai, “to reckon” (RV), is rendered “I suppose”; so in 1 Pet. 5:12, KJV, RV, “(as) I account (him)”]; Silvanus was not supposed by Peter to be faithful, he was “reckoned” or regarded so. (2) In Phil. 2:25, KJV, hegeomai, “to reckon,” deem, is rendered “I supposed” (RV, “I counted”).

SUPREME

huperecho (ὑπερέχω, 5242), “to be superior, to excel,” is translated “supreme” in 1 Pet. 2:13: see EXCEL, No. 3.

SURE

A. Adjectives.

1. asphales (ἀσφαλής, 804), “safe,” is translated “sure” in Heb. 6:19. See CERTAIN, B.

2. bebaios (βέβαιος, 949), “firm, steadfast,” is used of (a) God’s promise to Abraham, Rom. 4:16; (b) the believer’s hope, Heb. 6:19, “steadfast”; (c) the hope of spiritual leaders regarding the welfare of converts, 2 Cor. 1:7, “steadfast”; (d) the glorying of the hope, Heb. 3:6, “firm”; (e) the beginning of our confidence, 3:14, RV, “firm” (KJV, “steadfast”); (f) the Law given at Sinai, Heb. 2:2, “steadfast”; (g) the testament (or covenant) fulfilled after a death, 9:17, “of force”; (h) the calling and election of believers, 2 Pet. 1:10, to be made “sure” by the fulfillment of the injunctions in vv. 5-7; (i) the word of prophecy, “made more sure,” 2 Pet. 1:19, RV, KJV, “a more sure (word of prophecy)”; what is meant is not a comparison between the prophecies of the OT and NT, but that the former have been confirmed in the person of Christ (vv. 16-18). See FIRM.¶

3. pistos (πιστός, 4103), “faithful,” is translated sure in Acts 13:34. See FAITHFUL.

Note: In 2 Tim. 2:19, KJV, stereos, “firm,” is translated “sure,” and connected with “standeth,” RV, “the firm (foundation of God standeth),” i.e., “however much the faith may be misrepresented or denied, the firm foundation of God’s knowledge and truth, with its separating power, remains.”

B. Verb.

asphalizo (ἀσφαλίζω, 805), “to make safe or sure” (akin to A, No. 1), is rendered “to make sure” in Matt. 27:64, 65, 66, of the sepulchre of Christ; elsewhere, Acts 16:24, of making feet fast in the stocks. See FAST.¶

Note: In the KJV of John 16:30; Rom. 2:2 and 15:29, the verb oida, “to know,” is translated “to be sure” (RV, in each place, “to know”). So with ginosko, “to know,” in John 6:69. For the difference between the verbs see KNOW.

SURELY

Notes: (1) In the KJV of Matt. 26:73; Mark 14:70; John 17:8, alethos, “truly,” is rendered “surely” (RV, “of a truth”); so pantos, “at all events, altogether,” in Luke 4:23 (RV, “doubtless”), and nai, “yea,” in Rev. 22:20 (RV, “yea”). (2) In Heb. 6:14, “surely” represents the phrase ei men (so the best texts; some have e men). (3) For Luke 1:1, KJV, see BELIEVE, C, Note (4). (4) For “surely” in 2 Pet. 2:12, RV, see CORRUPT, A, No. 2 (b).

SURETY (Noun)

enguos (ἐγγυος, 1450) primarily signifies “bail,” the bail who personally answers for anyone, whether with his life or his property (to be distinguished from mesites, “a mediator”); it is used in Heb. 7:22, “(by so much also hath Jesus become) the Surety (of a better covenant),” referring to the abiding and unchanging character of His Melchizedek priesthood, by reason of which His suretyship is established by God’s oath (vv. 20, 21). As the Surety, He is the personal guarantee of the terms of the new and better covenant, secured on the ground of His perfect sacrifice (v. 27).¶

kraipale (κραিপάλη, 2897) signifies “the giddiness and headache resulting from excessive wine-bibbing, a drunken nausea,” “surfeiting,” Luke 21:34.¶ Trench (Syn. Sec.lxi) distinguishes this and the synonymous words, methe, “drunkenness,” oinophlugia, “wine-bibbing” (KJV, “excess of wine,” 1 Pet. 4:3), komos, “revelling.”

For SURGE, Jas. 1:6, RV, see RAGE and WAVE

For SURMISE, SURMISINGS, see DEEM

SURNAME

epikaleo (ἐπικαλέομαι, 1941), “to put a name upon” (epi, “upon,” kaleo, “to call”), “to surname,” is used in this sense in the passive voice, in some texts in Matt. 10:3 (it is absent in the best); in Luke 22:3, in some texts (the best have kaleo, “to call”); Acts 1:23; 4:36; 10:5, 18, 32; 11:13; 12:12, 25; in some texts, 15:22 (the best have kaleo).

Notes: (1) In Mark 3:16, 17, “He surnamed” is a translation of epitithemi, “to put upon, to add to,” with onoma, “a name,” as the object. (2) In Acts 15:37, KJV, kaleo, “to call” (RV, “called”), is rendered “whose surname was.” (3) The verb eponomazo, translated “bearest the name” in Rom. 2:17, RV, finds a literal correspondence in the word “surname” (epi, “upon,” = sur), and had this significance in Classical Greek.¶

For SURPASS, 2 Cor. 3:10, see EXCEED, A, No. 1

For SUSPENSE (hold in) see DOUBT, No. 6

SUSTENANCE

chortasma (χόρτασμα, 5527), “fodder” (akin to chortazo, to feed, fill, see FEED, No. 4), is used in the plural in Acts 7:11, “sustenance.”¶ In the Sept., Gen. 24:25, 32; 42:27; 43:24; Deut. 11:15; Jud 19:19.¶

SWADDLING CLOTHES

sparganoō (σπαργανόω, 4683), “to swathe” (from sparganon, “a swathing band”), signifies “to wrap in swaddling clothes” in Luke 2:7, 12. The idea that the word means “rags” is without foundation.¶ In the Sept., Job 38:9; Ezek. 16:4.¶

SWALLOW (Verb)

katapino (καταπίνω, 2666), “to drink down” (kata, and pino, “to drink”), “to swallow,” is used with this meaning (a) physically, but figuratively, Matt. 23:24; Rev. 12:16; (b) metaphorically, in the passive voice, of death (by victory), 1 Cor. 15:54; of being overwhelmed by sorrow, 2 Cor. 2:7; of the mortal body (by life), 5:4. See DEVOUR, No. 3, DROWN, No. 2.

SWEAR, SWORN

omnumi or omnuo (ὀμνύω, 3660) is used of “affirming or denying by an oath,” e.g., Matt. 26:74; Mark 6:23; Luke 1:73; Heb. 3:11, 18; 4:3; 7:21; accompanied by that by which one swears, e.g., Matt. 5:34, 36; 23:16; Heb. 6:13, 16; Jas. 5:12; Rev. 10:6. Cf. ADJURE.

Note: For “false swearers,” 1 Tim. 1:10, see FORSWEAR.

SWEAT

hidros (ἰδρώς, 2402) is used in Luke 22:44.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 3:19.¶

SWEEP

saroo (σαρόω, 4563) occurs in Matt. 12:44; Luke 11:25; 15:8.¶

SWEET

glukus (γλυκύς, 1099) (cf. Eng., “glycerine,” “glucose”), occurs in Jas. 3:11, 12 (KJV, “fresh” in this verse); Rev. 10:9, 10.¶

For SWEET SMELLING see SAVOR, No. 1

SWELL, SWOLLEN

pimpremi (πίμπρημι, 4092), primarily, “to blow, to burn,” later came to denote “to cause to swell,” and, in the middle voice, “to become swollen,” Acts 28:6.¶ In the Sept., Num. 5:21, 22, 27.¶

Note: Some, connecting the word prenes in Acts 1:18 with pimpremi, give it the meaning “swelling up”: see HEADLONG.

SWELLING

1. phusiosis (φυσίωσις, 5450) denotes “a puffing up, swelling with pride” (akin to phusioo, “to puff up”), 2 Cor. 12:20, “swellings.”¶

2. hyperonkos (ὑπέρογκος, 5246), an adjective denoting “of excessive weight or size,” is used metaphorically in the sense of “immoderate,” especially of arrogant speech, in the neuter plural, virtually as a noun, 2 Pet. 2:18; Jude 16, “great swelling words,” doubtless with reference to gnostic phraseology.

SWERVE

astocheo (ἀστοχέω, 795), “to miss the mark,” is translated “having swerved” in 1 Tim. 1:6. See ERR, No. 3. Moulton and Milligan illustrate the use of the verb from the papyri, e.g., of a man in extravagant terms bewailing the loss of a pet fighting cock, “(I am distraught, for my cock) has failed (me).”

SWIFT, SWIFTLY

1. oxus (ὀξύς, 3691) denotes “swift” in Rom. 3:15. See SHARP.

2. tachus (ταχύς, 5036), “swift, speedy,” is used in Jas. 1:19.¶ Cf. tacheos, tachu and tacheion, “quickly,” tachos, “quickness, speed.”

3. tachinos (ταχινός, 5031), a poetical and late form of No. 2, “of swift approach,” is used in 2 Pet. 1:14, RV, “swiftly” (KJV, “shortly”), lit., “(the putting off of my tabernacle is) swift,” i.e., “imminent”; in 2:1, “swift (destruction).”¶ In the Sept., Prov. 1:16; Isa. 59:7; Hab. 1:6.¶

SWIM

1. kolumbao (κολυμβάω, 2860), “to dive, plunge, into the sea,” hence, “to swim,” occurs in Acts 27:43.¶ Cf. kolumbethra, “a pool.”

2. ekkolumbao (ἐκκολυμβάω, 1579), “to swim out of” (ek), occurs in Acts 27:42.¶

SWINE

choiros (χοῖρος, 5519), “a swine,” is used in the plural, in the Synoptic Gospels only, Matt. 7:6; 8:30, 31, 32; Mark 5:11, 13, 16; Luke 8:32, 33; Luke 15:15, 16. It does not occur in the OT.¶

SWORD

1. machaira (μάχαιρα, 3162), “a short sword or dagger” (distinct from No. 2), e.g., Matt. 26:47, 51, 52 and parallel passages; Luke 21:24; 22:38, possibly “a knife” (Field, Notes on the Translation of the NT); Heb. 4:12 (see TWO-EDGED); metaphorically and by metonymy, (a) for ordinary violence, or dissensions, that destroy peace, Matt. 10:34; (b) as the instrument of a magistrate or judge, e.g., Rom. 13:4; (c) of the Word of God, “the sword of the Spirit,” probing the conscience, subduing the impulses to sin, Eph. 6:17.

2. rhomphaia (ρόμφαία, 4501), a word of somewhat doubtful origin, denoted “a Thracian weapon of large size,” whether a sword or spear is not certain, but usually longer than No. 1; it occurs (a) literally in Rev. 6:8; (b) metaphorically, as the instrument of anguish, Luke 2:35; of judgment, Rev. 1:16; 2:12, 16; 19:15, 21, probably figurative of the Lord’s judicial utterances.¶

sukaminos (ρύπαρία, 4507) occurs in Luke 17:6.¶ It is generally recognized as the black mulberry, with fruit like blackberries. The leaves are too tough for silkworms and thus are unlike the white mulberry. Neither kind is the same as the mulberry of 2 Sam. 5:23, 24, etc. The town Haifa was called Sycaminopolis, from the name of the tree.

SYCAMORE

sukomorea (ρύπος, 4509) occurs in Luke 19:4.¶ This tree is of the fig species, with leaves like the mulberry and fruit like the fig. It is somewhat less in height than the sycamine and spreads to cover an area from 60 to 80 feet in diameter. It is often planted by the roadside, and was suitable for the purpose of Zacchaeus. Seated on the lowest branch he was easily within speaking distance of Christ.

SYNAGOGUE

synagoge (συναγωγή, 4864), properly “a bringing together” (sun, “together,” ago, “to bring”), denoted (a) “a gathering of things, a collection,” then, of “persons, an assembling, of Jewish religious gatherings,” e.g., Acts 9:2; an assembly of Christian Jews, Jas. 2:2, RV, “synagogue” (KJV, marg.; text, “assembly”); a company dominated by the power and activity of Satan, Rev. 2:9; 3:9; (b) by metonymy, “the building” in which the gathering is held, e.g. Matt. 6:2; Mark 1:21. The origin of the Jewish “synagogue” is probably to be assigned to the time of the Babylonian exile. Having no temple, the Jews assembled on the Sabbath to hear the Law read, and the practice continued in various buildings after the return. Cf. Ps. 74:8.

SYNAGOGUE (put out of the) aposunagogos (ἄποσυνάγωγος, 656), an adjective denoting “expelled from the congregation, excommunicated,” is used (a) with ginomai, “to become, be made,” John 9:22; 12:42; (b) with poieo, “to make,” John 16:2. This excommunication involved prohibition not only from attendance at the “synagogue,” but from all fellowship with Israelites.¶

SYNAGOGUE (ruler of the)

archisunagogos (ἀρχισυνάγωγος, 752) denotes “the administrative official,” with the duty of preserving order and inviting persons to read or speak in the assembly, Mark 5:22, 35, 36, 38; Luke 8:49; 13:14; Acts 13:15; “chief ruler” (KJV) in Acts 18:8, 17.¶

Note: In Luke 8:41, “ruler of the synagogue” represents archon, “ruler,” followed by the genitive case of the article and sunagoge.

SYROPHOENICIAN

surophoinikissa or surophunissa (Συροφοίνισσα, 4949) occurs in Mark 7:26 as the national name of a woman called “a Canaanitish woman” in Matt. 15:22, i.e., not a Jewess but a descendant of the early inhabitants of the coastland of Phoenicia. The word probably denoted a Syrian residing in Phoenicia proper.¶ There is a tradition that the woman’s name was Justa and her daughter Bernice (Clementine Homilies, ii:19; iii:73). In Acts 21:2, 3, the two parts of the term are used interchangeably.

TABERNACLE

1. skene (σκηνή, 4633), “a tent, booth, tabernacle,” is used of (a) tents as dwellings, Matt. 17:4; Mark 9:5; Luke 9:33; Heb. 11:9, KJV, “tabernacles” (RV, “tents”); (b) the Mosaic tabernacle, Acts 7:44; Heb. 8:5; 9:1 (in some mss.); 9:8, 21, termed “the tent of meeting,” RV (i.e., where the people were called to meet God), a preferable description to “the tabernacle of the congregation,” as in the KJV in the OT; the outer part 9:2, 6; the inner sanctuary, 9:3; (c) the heavenly prototype, Heb. 8:2; 9:11; Rev. 13:6; 15:5; 21:3 (of its future descent); (d) the eternal abodes of the saints, Luke 16:9, RV, “tabernacles” (KJV, “habitations”); (e) the Temple in Jerusalem, as continuing the service of the tabernacle, Heb. 13:10; (f) the house of David, i.e., metaphorically of his people, Acts 15:16; (g) the portable shrine of the god Moloch, Acts 7:43.¶

2. skenos (σκήνος, 4636), the equivalent of No. 1, is used metaphorically of the body as the “tabernacle” of the soul, 2 Cor. 5:1, 4.¶

3. skenoma (σκήνωμα, 4638) occurs in Acts 7:46; 2 Pet. 1:13, 14; see HABITATION, No. 6.¶

4. skenopegia (σκηνοπηγία, 4634), properly “the setting up of tents or dwellings” (No. 1, and pegnumi, “to fix”), represents the word “tabernacles” in “the feast of tabernacles,” John 7:2.¶ This feast, one of the three Pilgrimage Feasts in Israel, is called “the feast of ingathering” in Exod. 23:16; 34:22; it took place at the end of the year, and all males were to attend at the “tabernacle” with their offerings. In Lev. 23:34; Deut. 16:13, 16; 31:10; 2 Chron. 8:13; Ezra 3:4 (cf. Neh. 8:14-18), it is called “the feast of tabernacles” (or “booths,” sukkoth), and was appointed for seven days at Jerusalem from the 15th to the 22nd Tishri (approximately October), to remind the people that their fathers dwelt in these in the wilderness journeys. Cf. Num. 29:15-38, especially v. 35-38, for the regulations of the eighth or “last day, the great day of the feast” (John 7:37).

Note: For skenoo, “to spread a tabernacle over, Rev. 7:15, RV, see DWELL, No. 9.

TABLE

1. trapeza (τράπεζα, 5132) is used of (a) “a dining table,” Matt. 15:27; Mark 7:28; Luke 16:21; 22:21, 30; (b) “the table of shewbread,” Heb. 9:2; (c) by metonymy, of “what is provided on the table” (the word being used of that with which it is associated), Acts 16:34; Rom. 11:9 (figurative of the special privileges granted to Israel and centering in Christ); 1 Cor. 10:21 (twice), “the Lord’s table,” denoting all that is provided for believers in Christ on the ground of His death (and thus expressing something more comprehensive than the Lord’s Supper); “the table of demons,” denoting all that is partaken of by idolaters as the result of the influence of demons in connection with their sacrifices; (d) “a moneychanger’s table,” Matt. 21:12; Mark 11:15; John 2:15; (e) “a bank,” Luke 19:23 (cf. trapezites: see BANKERS); (f) by metonymy for “the distribution of money,” Acts 6:2. See BANK.¶

2. plax (πλάξ, 4109) primarily denotes “anything flat and broad,” hence, “a flat stone, a tablet,” 2 Cor. 3:3 (twice); Heb. 9:4.¶

Note: Some texts have the word kline, “a couch,” in Mark 7:4 (KJV, “tables”).

anakeimai (ἀνακείμεναι, 345), “to recline at a meal table,” is rendered “sat at the table” in John 12:2, KJV, RV, “sat at meat” (some texts have sunanakeimai); “sat,” of course does not express the actual attitude; in John 13:23, RV, “at the table reclining”; KJV, “leaning”; in 13:28, “at the table” (KJV and RV), lit., “of (those) reclining.”

For TABLET see WRITING TABLET

TACKLING

skeue (σκευή, 4631) denotes “gear, equipment, tackling” (of a ship), Acts 27:19.¶

TAIL

oura (οὐρά, 3769), “the tail of an animal,” occurs in Rev. 9:10 (twice), 19; 12:4.¶

TAKE

1. lambano (λαμβάνω, 2983), “to take, lay hold of,” besides its literal sense, e.g., Matt. 5:40; 26:26, 27, is used metaphorically, of fear, in “taking” hold of people, Luke 7:16, RV (KJV, “came ... on”); of sin in “finding (occasion),” RV (KJV, “taking”), Rom. 7:8, 11, where sin is viewed as the corrupt source of action, an inward element using the commandment to produce evil effects; of the power of temptation, 1 Cor. 10:13; of “taking” an example, Jas. 5:10; of “taking” peace from the earth, Rev. 6:4; of Christ in “taking” the form of a servant, Phil. 2:7; of “taking” rightful power (by the Lord, hereafter), Rev. 11:17. See ACCEPT, No. 4.

2. analambano (ἀναλαμβάνω, 353) signifies (a) “to take up” (ana), e.g., Acts 1:2, 11, 22 (RV, “received”); (b) “to take to oneself,” Acts 7:43; or “to one’s company,” 20:13, 14; 23:31; 2 Tim. 4:11; of “taking up spiritual armor,” Eph. 6:13, 16. See RECEIVE.

3. apolambano (ἀπολαμβάνω, 618), besides its common meaning, “to receive,” denotes “to take apart or aside,” Mark 7:33, middle voice. It is frequent in the papyri, and, in the sense of separation or drawing aside, is illustrated in a message of sorrow, concerning the nonarrival of one who with others had been “shut up” as recluses in a temple (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.). See RECEIVE.

4. epilambano (ἐπιλαμβάνομαι, 1949), in the middle voice, “to lay hold of, take hold of,” is used literally, e.g., Mark 8:23; Luke 9:47; 14:4; metaphorically, e.g., Heb. 8:9, “(I) took them (by the hand)”: for other instances in each respect see HOLD, No. 7.

5. katalambano (καταλαμβάνω, 2638), “to lay hold of,” is rendered “to take,” in Mark 9:18; John 8:3, 4. See APPREHEND.

6. metalambano (μεταλαμβάνω, 3335), “to get, or have, a share of,” is rendered “to take (food)” in Acts 2:46, RV (KJV, “did eat,” see EAT, Note); 27:33, i.e., “to share it together.” See HAVE, PARTAKE, RECEIVE.

7. paralambano (παραλαμβάνω, 3880), besides its meaning “to receive,” denotes “to take to (or with) oneself,” of “taking” a wife, e.g., Matt. 1:20, 24; of “taking” a person or persons with one, e.g., Matt. 2:13, 14, 20, 21; 4:5, 8; of demons, 12:45; of Christ and His disciples, 17:1; 20:17; Mark 9:2; 10:32; 14:33; of witnesses, Matt. 18:16; of the removal of persons from the earth in judgment, when “the Son of Man is revealed,” Matt. 24:40, 41; Luke 17:34, 35 (cf. the means of the removal of corruption, in v. 37); of the “taking” of Christ by the soldiers for scourging, Matt. 27:27, RV, and to crucifixion, John 19:16; see also Acts 15:39; 16:33; 21:24, 26, 32; 23:18. See RECEIVE.

8. sumparalambano (συμπαράλαμβάνω, 4838), sun, “with,” and No. 7, denotes “to take along with oneself,” as a companion, Acts 12:25; 15:37, 38; Gal. 2:1.¶

9. proslambano (προσλαμβάνω, 4355), “to take to oneself” (pros), is used of food, Acts 27:33-36; of persons, of Peter’s act toward Christ, Matt. 16:22; Mark 8:32; for evil purposes, Acts 17:5; for good purposes, 18:26. See RECEIVE.

10. prolambano (προλαμβάνω, 4301) is rendered “to take before” in 1 Cor. 11:21. See COME, Note (2) at end, OVERTAKE.

11. sullambano (συλλαμβάνω, 4815), “to seize, take,” is rendered “to take” in Matt. 26:55 and Mark 14:48, KJV (RV, “seize”); Luke 5:9; Acts 1:16; in 12:3 and 23:27, KJV (RV, “seize”). See CATCH, CONCEIVE, HELP.

12. airo (αἶρω, 142), “to lift, carry, take up or away,” occurs very frequently with its literal meanings. In John 1:29 it is used of Christ as “the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world,” not the sins, but sin, that which has existed from the time of the Fall, and in regard to which God has had judicial dealings with the world; through the expiatory sacrifice of Christ the sin of the world will be replaced by everlasting righteousness; cf. the plural, “sins”, in 1 John 3:5. Righteous judgment was “taken away” from Christ at human tribunals, and His life, while voluntarily given by Himself (John 10:17, 18), was “taken (from the earth),” Acts 8:33 (quoted from the Sept. of Isa. 53:8). In John 15:2 it is used in the Lord’s statement, “Every branch in Me that beareth not fruit, He taketh it away.” This does not contemplate members of the “body” of Christ, but those who (just as a graft which being inserted, does not “abide” or “strike”) are merely professed followers, giving only the appearance of being joined to the parent stem.

The Law described in Col. 2:14 as “the bond written in ordinances that was against us,” Christ “took” out of the way at His cross. In 1 Cor. 5:2, airo is used in the best texts (some have No. 14), of the divine judgment which would have been exercised in “taking away” from the church the incestuous delinquent, had they mourned before God. See AWAY, BEAR, No. 9, etc.

13. apairo (ἀπαίρω, 522), “to lift off” (apo, “from,” and No. 12), is used, in the passive voice, of Christ, metaphorically as the Bridegroom of His followers, Matt. 9:15; Mark 2:20; Luke 5:35.¶

14. exairo (ἐξαίρω, 1808), “to take away,” is used of “putting away” a person in church discipline, 1 Cor. 5:13; for this verb as a variant reading in v. 2, see No. 12.¶

15. epairo (ἐπαίρω, 1869), “to lift, raise,” is used in the passive voice and rendered “He was taken up” in Acts 1:9. See EXALT, HOIST, LIFT.

16. anaireo (ἀναιρέω, 337), “to take up” (ana, “up,” and haireo, “to take”), is used of Pharaoh’s daughter in “taking up” the infant Moses, Acts 7:21; of God’s act in “taking away” the typical animal sacrifices under the Law, Heb. 10:9. See DEATH, C, No. 2, KILL, SLAY.

17. aphaireo (ἀφαιρέω, 851), “to take away” (apo), is used with this meaning in Luke 1:25; 10:42; 16:3; Rom. 11:27, of the “removal” of the sins of Israel; Heb. 10:4, of the impossibility of the “removal” of sins by offerings under the Law; in Rev. 22:19 (twice). See CUT, No. 8.

18. kathaireo (καθαίρέω, 2507), “to take down” (kata), besides its meaning of “putting down by force,” was the technical term for the “removal” of the body after crucifixion, Mark 15:36, 46; Luke 23:53; Acts 13:29. See CAST, No. 14.

19. periaireo (περιαιρέω, 4014), “to take away that which surrounds” (peri, “around”), is used (a) literally, of “casting off” anchors, Acts 27:40, RV (KJV, “having taken up”); 28:13 in some texts, for perierchomai, “to make a circuit”; (b) metaphorically, of “taking away” the veil off the hearts of Israel, 2 Cor. 3:16; of hope of rescue, Acts 27:20; of sins (negatively), Heb. 10:11.¶

20. dechomai (δέχομαι, 1209), “to receive,” is rendered “take (thy bond, RV, KJV, bill)” in Luke 16:6, 7; “take (the helmet of salvation),” Eph. 6:17, suggesting a heartiness in the “taking.” See ACCEPT, No. 1, RECEIVE.

21. prosdechomai (προσδέχομαι, 4327), “to receive favorably,” is rendered “took” in Heb. 10:34. See ACCEPT, No. 3.

22. krateo (κρατέω, 2902), “to take hold of, get possession of,” is translated “to take” in Matt. 9:25; 22:6; 26:4; Mark 1:31; 5:41; 9:27; 14:1, 44, 46, 49; Luke 8:54; Acts 24:6. See HOLD, No. 6.

23. drassomai (δράσσομαι, 1405), “to grasp with the hand, take hold of,” is used metaphorically in 1 Cor. 3:19, “taketh (the wise in their craftiness).”¶

24. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” found in the best texts in Mark 3:6, is rendered “took (counsel)”; some have poieo, “to make.”

25. katecho (κατέχω, 2722), “to hold,” is rendered “to take (the lowest place)” in Luke 14:9. See HOLD.

26. piazo (πιάζω, 4084), “to lay or take hold of forcefully,” is always rendered “to take” in the RV. See APPREHEND, No. 2.

27. paraphero (παραφέρω, 3911), “to bear away” (para, “aside,” phero, “to bear”), “remove,” is rendered “take away” in Mark 14:36, KJV, RV, “remove,” as in Luke 22:42. See REMOVE.¶

28. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have, to hold,” is used in Matt. 21:46 in the sense of regarding a person as something, “they took (Him) for (a prophet).” See HAVE.

29. sunago (συνάγω, 4863), “to bring together,” is used of “taking” a person into one’s house receiving hospitality, “took ... in,” Matt. 25:35, 38, 43; so in Acts 11:26, RV, “were gathered together,” KJV, “assembled”; perhaps the meaning is “they were entertained.” See ASSEMBLE, BESTOW, GATHER.

30. ekduo (ἐκδύω, 1562), “to take off a garment from a person,” is so rendered with reference to the soldiers’ treatment of Christ, Matt. 27:31; Mark 15:20. See STRIP.

31. ekballo (ἐκβάλλω, 1544) has the meaning “to bring or take out” in Luke 10:35, “took out (two pence),” a word perhaps chosen to express the wholeheartedness of the act (lit., “to throw out”). See CAST, No. 5.

32. bastazo (βαστάζω, 941), “to bear, lift,” is used of “taking up” stones, John 10:31. As to Matt. 3:11, Moulton and Milligan supply evidences from the vernacular that the word signified “to take off” (the sandals), which confirms Mark’s word luo, “to unloose” (1:7). See BEAR, No. 1.

33. epicheireo (ἐπιχειρέω, 2021), “to take in hand” (epi, “upon,” cheir, “the hand”), “to attempt, take upon oneself,” is rendered “have taken in hand,” Luke 1:1; “took upon (them),” Acts 19:13. See GO, No. 30.

34. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, to come to be,” is rendered “he be taken” in 2 Thess. 2:7, lit., “(until) he, or it, become” (for a treatment of the whole passage see Notes on Thess. by Hogg and Vine).

Notes: (1) For sunairo in Matt. 18:23, see RECKON. (2) Some texts have apago, “to take away,” in Acts 24:7. (3) In John 6:24, KJV, embaino, “to enter,” is rendered “took (shipping),” RV, “got into (the boats).” (4) In 2 Thess. 1:8, KJV, didomi, “to give” (RV “rendering”), is translated “taking.” (5) In Rom. 3:5, KJV, epiphero, “to bring against,” is rendered “taketh (vengeance),” RV, “visiteth (with wrath).” (6) In Luke 4:5, KJV, anago, “to lead up” (RV, “led”), is rendered “took up.” (7) In Acts 10:26, KJV, egeiro, “to raise” talanton (τάλαντον, 5007), originally “a balance,” then, “a talent in weight,” was hence “a sum of money” in gold or silver equivalent to a “talent.” The Jewish “talent” contained 3,000 shekels of the sanctuary, e.g., Ex. 30:13 (about 114 lbs.). In NT times the “talent” was not a weight of silver, but the Roman-Attic “talent,” comprising 6,000 denarii or drachmas, and equal to about L/240. It is mentioned in Matthew only, 18:24; 25:15, 16, 20 (twice in the best texts), 22 (thrice), 24, 25, 28 (twice). In 18:24 the vastness of the sum, 10,000 talents (L/2,400,000), indicates the impossibility of man’s clearing himself, by his own efforts, of the guilt which lies upon him before God.¶

(RV), is rendered “took ... up.” (8) For “taking up” baggage, Acts 21:15, see BAGGAGE. (9) For taken from in 1 Thess. 2:17, KJV, see BEREAVED, No. 1. (10) Sunecho is translated “taken with” in Matt. 4:24, Luke 4:38; 8:37. See HOLDEN. (11), In 2 Pet. 2:12 “to be taken” translates the phrase eis halosin, lit., “for capture” (halosis, “a taking”). (12), In 1 Pet. 2:20, hupomeno, “to endure,” is rendered “ye take ... patiently.” (13), In Matt. 11:12; John 6:15; Acts 23:10 harpazo (see CATCH) is rendered “take ... by force.” (14) For apotassomai, “to take leave of,” see LEAVE, (c) No. 1. (15) For apaspozomai, rendered “to take leave of” in Acts 21:6, KJV, see LEAVE, (c) No. 2. (16) In Acts 21:6 some mss. have epibaino, KJV, “we took ship” (RV, embaino, “we went on board”): cf. Note (3), above. (17), For “untaken” in 2 Cor. 3:14 see UNLIFTED. (18), In 1 Tim. 5:9, KJV, katalego is rendered “to take into the number” (RV, “be enrolled”).¶ (19), For “take ... to record” see TESTIFY. See also CARE, HEED, JOURNEY, THOUGHT (TO TAKE).

TALENT

A. Noun.

Note: That the “talent” denoted “something weighed” has provided the meaning of the Eng. word as “a gift or ability,” especially under the influence of the parable of the talents (Matt. 25:14-30).

B. Adjective.

alantiaios (ταλαντιαῖος, 5006) denotes “of a talent’s weight,” Rev. 16:21.¶

TALITHA

taleitha or talitha (ταλιθά, 5008), an Aramaic feminine meaning “maiden,” Mark 5:41, has been variously transliterated in the NT Greek mss. Koumi or Koum (Heb. and Aram., qum, “arise”), which follows, is interpreted by, “I say unto thee, arise.” Koum is the better attested word; so in the Talmud, where this imperative occurs “seven times in one page” (Edersheim, Life and Times of Jesus, i, p. 631).¶

TALK (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), a word, is translated “talk” in Matt. 22:15; Mark 12:13. See ACCOUNT, B.

2. leros (λῆρος, 3026) denotes “foolish talk, nonsense,” Luke 24:11, RV, “idle talk” (KJV, “idle tales”).¶

B. Verbs.

1. laleo (λαλέω, 2980), “to speak, say,” is always translated “to speak” in the RV, where the KJV renders it by “to talk,” Matt. 12:46; Mark 6:50; Luke 24:32; John 4:27 (twice); 9:37; 14:30; Acts 26:31; Rev. 4:1; 17:1; 21:9, 15. The RV rendering is preferable; the idea of “chat” or “chatter” is entirely foreign to the NT, and should never be regarded as the meaning in 1 Cor. 14:34, 35. See COMMUNE, Note, SAY, No. 1, Note, and No. 2, SPEAK.

2. sullaleo (συλλαλέω, 4814), “to speak with” (sun), is translated “to talk with,” Matt. 17:3; Mark 9:4; Luke 9:30. See CONFER, No. 2.

3. homileo (ὁμιλέω, 3656), “to be in company with, consort with” (homilos, “a throng”; homilia, “company”), hence, “to converse with,” is rendered “to talk with,” Acts 20:11. See COMMUNE, No. 2.

4. sunomileo (συνομιλέω, 4926), “to converse, talk with,” occurs in Acts 10:27.¶

TALKERS (vain)

mataiologos (ματαιολόγος, 3151), an adjective denoting “talking idly” (mataios, “vain, idle,” lego, “to speak”), is used as a noun (plural) in Titus 1:10.¶

TALKING (vain, foolish)

1. mataiologia (ματαιολογία, 3150), a noun corresponding to the above, is used in 1 Tim. 1:6, RV, “vain talking” (KJV, “vain jangling”).¶

2. morologia (μωρολογία, 3473), from moros, “foolish, dull, stupid,” and lego, is used in Eph. 5:4; it denotes more than mere idle “talk.” Trench describes it as “that ‘talk of fools’ which is foolishness and sin together” (Syn. Sec. xxxiv).¶

TAME

damazo (δαμάζω, 1150), “to subdue, tame,” is used (a) naturally in Mark 5:4 and Jas. 3:7 (twice); (b) metaphorically, of the tongue, in Jas. 3:8.¶ In the Sept., Dan. 2:40.¶

TANNER

burseus (βυρσεύς, 1038), “a tanner” (from bursa, “a hide”), occurs in Acts 9:43; 10:6, 32.¶

For TARE (Verb) see TEAR

TARES

zizanion (ζιζάνιον, 2215) is a kind of darnel, the commonest of the four species, being the bearded, growing in the grain fields, as tall as wheat and barley, and resembling wheat in appearance. It was credited among the Jews with being degenerate wheat. The rabbis called it “bastard.” The seeds are poisonous to man and herbivorous animals, producing sleepiness, nausea, convulsions and even death (they are harmless to poultry). The plants can be separated out, but the custom, as in the parable, is to leave the cleaning out till near the time of harvest, Matt. 13:25-27, 29, 30, 36, 38, 40.¶ The Lord describes the tares as “the sons of the evil one”; false teachings are indissociable from their propagandists. For the Lord’s reference to the Kingdom see KINGDOM.

TARRY

1. meno (μένω, 3306), “to abide,” is translated by the verb “to abide,” in the RV, for KJV, “to tarry,” in Matt. 26:38; Mark 14:34; Luke 24:29; John 4:40; Acts 9:43; 18:20; the RV retains the verb “to tarry” in John 21:22, 23; in Acts 20:5, KJV, “tarried” (RV, “were waiting”). Some mss. have it in Acts 20:15 (KJV, “tarried”). See ABIDE.

2. epimeno (ἐπιμένω, 1961), to abide, continue, a strengthened form of No. 1, is translated “to tarry” in Acts 10:48; 21:4, 10; 28:12, 14; 1 Cor. 16:7, 8; Gal. 1:18, RV (KJV, “abode”). See ABIDE, No. 2.

3. hupomeno (ὕπομένω, 5278), “to endure,” is rendered “tarried behind” in Luke 2:43. See ENDURE, No. 2.

4. prosmeno (προσμένω, 4357), “to abide still, continue,” is translated “tarried” in Acts 18:18, suggesting patience and steadfastness in remaining after the circumstances which preceded; in 1 Tim. 1:3, RV, “to tarry” (KJV, “to abide still”). See ABIDE, No. 6.

5. diatribo (διατρίβω, 1304), for which see ABIDE, No. 7, is invariably rendered “to tarry,” in the RV; KJV, twice, John 3:22; Acts 25:6; “continued” in John 11:54; Acts 15:35; “abode,” Acts 12:19; 14:3, 28; 20:6; “abiding,” 16:12, “had been,” 25:14.¶

6. chronizo (χρονίζω, 5549), “to spend or while away time”; “to tarry,” Matt. 25:5; Luke 1:21; Heb. 10:37. See DELAY, No. 2.

7. braduno (βραδύνω, 1019), “to be slow” (bradus, “slow”), is rendered “I tarry long,” 1 Tim. 3:15; “is ... slack,” 2 Pet. 3:9.¶

8. kathizo (καθίζω, 2523), “to make to sit down,” or, intransitively, “to sit down,” is translated “tarry ye” in Luke 24:49. See SET.

9. mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about to,” is rendered “(why) tarriest thou?” in Acts 22:16. See ABOUT, B.

10. ekdechomai (ἐκδέχομαι, 1551), “to expect, await” (ek, “from,” dechomai, “to receive”), is translated “tarry” in 1 Cor. 11:33, KJV (RV, “wait”). See EXPECT, LOOK, WAIT.

Notes: (1) In Acts 27:33, KJV, prosdokao, “to wait, look for,” is translated “have tarried” (RV, “wait”). (2) In Acts 15:33, poieo, “to make or do,” is used with chronos, “time,” KJV, “they had tarried a space,” RV, “they had spent some time.”

TASTE

geuo (γεύομαι, 1089), “to make to taste,” is used in the middle voice, signifying “to taste” (a) naturally, Matt. 27:34; Luke 14:24; John 2:9; Col. 2:21; (b) metaphorically, of Christ’s “tasting” death, implying His personal experience in voluntarily undergoing death, Heb. 2:9; of believers (negatively) as to “tasting” of death, Matt. 16:28; Mark 9:1; Luke 9:27; John 8:52; of “tasting” the heavenly gift (different from receiving it), Heb. 6:4; “the good word of God, and the powers of the age to come,” 6:5; “that the Lord is gracious,” 1 Pet. 2:3. See EAT.

TATTLER

phluaros (φλύαρος, 5397), “babbling, garrulous” (from phluo, “to babble”: cf. phluareo, “to prate against”), is translated “tattlers” in 1 Tim. 5:13.¶

TAUGHT (Adjective)

1. didaktos (διδακτός, 1318), primarily “what can be taught,” then, “taught,” is used (a) of persons, John 6:45; (b) of things, 1 Cor. 2:13 (twice), “(not in words which man’s wisdom) teacheth, (but which the Spirit) teacheth,” lit., “(not in words) taught (of man’s wisdom, but) taught (of the Spirit).”¶

2. theodidaktos (θεοδιδακτος, 2312), “God-taught” (Theos, “God,” and No. 1), occurs in 1 Thess. 4:9, lit., “God-taught (persons)”; while the missionaries had “taught” the converts to love one another, God had Himself been their Teacher. Cf. John 6:45 (see No. 1).¶

For TAXED, TAXING see ENROLL, ENROLLMENT

TEACH

A. Verbs.

1. didasko (διδάσκω, 1321) is used (a) absolutely, “to give instruction,” e.g., Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Rom. 12:7; 1 Cor. 4:17; 1 Tim. 2:12; 4:11; (b) transitively, with an object, whether persons, e.g., Matt. 5:2; 7:29, and frequently in the Gospels and Acts, or things “taught,” e.g., Matt. 15:9; 22:16; Acts 15:35; 18:11; both persons and things, e.g., John 14:26; Rev. 2:14, 20.

2. paideuo (παιδεύω, 3811), “to instruct and train”: see INSTRUCT, No. 2.

3. katecheo (κατηχέω, 2727), for which see INFORM, No. 2, INSTRUCT, No. 1, is rendered to teach” in 1 Cor. 14:19, KJV (RV, “instruct”); Gal. 6:6 (twice).

4. heterodidaskaleo (ἑτεροδιδασκαλέω, 2085), “to teach a different doctrine” (heteros, “different,” to be distinguished from allos, “another of the same kind: see ANOTHER), is used in 1 Tim. 1:3; 6:3, RV, KJV, “teach (no) other doctrine” and “teach otherwise,” of what is contrary to the faith.¶

Notes: (1) For matheteuo, “to teach,” in the KJV of Matt. 28:19; Acts 14:21, see DISCIPLE, B. (2) In Acts 16:21, KJV, katangelo, “to declare, preach,” is rendered “teach” (RV, “set forth”). (3) For “teacheth” in 1 Cor. 2:13, see TAUGHT, No. 1 (b).

B. Adjective.

didaktikos (διδασκτικός, 1317), “skilled in teaching” (akin to No. 1 above: Eng., “didactic”), is translated “apt to teach” in 1 Tim. 3:2; 2 Tim. 2:24.

TEACHER, FALSE TEACHERS

1. didaskalos (διδάσκαλος, 1320) is rendered “teacher” or “teachers” in Matt. 23:8, by Christ, of Himself; in John 3:2 of Christ; of Nicodemus in Israel, 3:10, RV; of “teachers” of the truth in the churches, Acts 13:1; 1 Cor. 12:28, 29; Eph. 4:11; Heb. 5:12; Jas. 3:1, RV; by Paul of his work among the churches, 1 Tim. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:11; of “teachers,” wrongfully chosen by those who have “itching ears,” 2 Tim. 4:3. See MASTER, RABBI.

2. kalodidaskalos (καλοδιδάσκαλος, 2567) denotes “a teacher of what is good” (kalos), Titus 2:3.¶

3. pseudodidaskalos (ψευδοδιδάσκαλος, 5572), “a false teacher,” occurs in the plural in 2 Pet. 2:1.¶

For TEACHING (Noun) see DOCTRINE, Nos. 1 and 2

TEARS

dakruon or dakru (δάκρυ, 1144), akin to dakruo, “to weep,” is used in the plural, Mark 9:24; Luke 7:38, 44 (with the sense of washing therewith the Lord’s feet); Acts 20:19, 31; 2 Cor. 2:4; 2 Tim. 1:4; Heb. 5:7; 12:17; Rev. 7:17; 21:4.¶

TEAR, TORN

1. sparasso (σπαράσσω, 4682), denotes “to tear, rend, convulse,” Mark 1:26; 9:20 (in some mss.), 26, RV, “having ... torn” (KJV, “rent”); Luke 9:39.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 22:8, of the foundations of heaven; Jer. 4:18, of the heart.¶

2. susparasso (συσπαράσσω, 4952), “to tear violently” (sun, “with,” intensive), “convulse completely,” a strengthened form of No. 1, is used in Mark 9:20, in the best texts (some have No. 1); Luke 9:42.¶

3. diaspao (διασπάω, 1288), “to break or tear asunder,” is translated “should be torn in pieces” in Acts 23:10, RV (KJV, “... pulled ...”). See REND, No. 5.

4. rhegnumi (ρήγνυμι, 4486), “to break,” is rendered “teareth” in Mark 9:18, KJV (RV, “dasheth ... down”). See HINDER, No. 1.

TEDIOUS (to be)

enokopto (ἐγκόπτω, 1465), “to hinder,” is rendered “to be tedious” in Acts 24:4, of detaining a person unnecessarily. See HINDER, No. 1.

For TEETH see TOOTH

TELL

1. lego (λέγω, 3004) and the 2nd aorist form eipon, used to supply this tense in lego, are frequently translated “to tell,” e.g., Matt. 2:13, RV, “I tell,” KJV, “I bring (thee) word”; 10:27. See SAY, No. 1.

2. laleo (λαλέω, 2980), for which see SAY, No. 2, is usually rendered “to speak,” in the RV (for KJV, “to tell”), e.g., Matt. 26:13; Luke 1:45; 2:17, 18, 20; Acts 11:14; 27:25; but RV and KJV, “to tell” in John 8:40; Acts 9:6; 22:10.

3. eklaleo (ἐκλαλέω, 1583), “to speak out” (ek), is translated “tell” in Acts 23:22.¶

4. eiro (Fut. of λέγω, 3004), for which see SAY, No. 4, is rendered “to tell” in Matt. 21:24; Mark 11:29; John 14:29; Rev. 17:7.

5. apangello (ἀπαγγέλλω, 518), “to announce, declare, report” (usually as a messenger), is frequently rendered “to tell,” e.g., Matt. 8:33; 14:12. See BRING, No. 36.

6. anangello (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), “to bring back word, announce,” is sometimes rendered “to tell,” e.g., John 5:15; 2 Cor. 7:7. See DECLARE, No. 1.

7. diegeomai (διηγέομαι, 1334), for which see DECLARE, No. 6, is rendered “to tell,” in the KJV and RV, in Mark 9:9; Heb. 11:32.

8. exegeomai (ἐξηγέομαι, 1834), for which see DECLARE, No. 8, is translated told in Luke 24:35, KJV (RV, “rehearsed”).

9. diasapheo (διασαφένω, 1285), “to make clear” (dia, “throughout,” saphes, “clear”), explain fully, is translated “told” in Matt. 18:31. See EXPLAIN.

10. menuo (μηνύω, 3377) is rendered “told” in Acts 23:30, KJV: see show, No. 7.

11. proeiro (prolego) (προερέω, 4280v), “to tell before,” is so rendered in Matt. 24:25: see FORETELL, FOREWARN.

Note: In the following, oida, “to know,” is translated “tell” in the KJV (RV, “know”), Matt. 21:27; Mark 11:33; Luke 20:7; John 3:8; 8:14; 16:18; 2 Cor. 12:2.

TEMPER TOGETHER

sunkerannumi (συγκεράννυμι, 4786), “to mix or blend together,” is used in 1 Cor. 12:24, of the combining of the members of the human body into an organic structure, as illustrative of the members of a local church (see v. 27, where there is no definite article in the original). See MIXED (WITH).

TEMPERANCE, TEMPERATE

A. Noun.

enkrateia (ἐγκράτεια, 1466), from kratos, “strength,” occurs in Acts 24:25; Gal. 5:23; 2 Pet. 1:6 (twice), in all of which it is rendered “temperance”; the RV marg., “self-control” is the preferable rendering, as “temperance” is now limited to one form of self-control; the various powers bestowed by God upon man are capable of abuse; the right use demands the controlling power of the will under the operation of the Spirit of God; in Acts 24:25 the word follows “righteousness,” which represents God’s claims, self-control being man’s response thereto; in 2 Pet. 1:6, it follows “knowledge,” suggesting that what is learned requires to be put into practice.¶

B. Adjectives.

1. enkrates (ἐγκρατής, 1468), akin to A, denotes “exercising self-control,” rendered “temperate” in Titus 1:8.¶

2. nephalios (νηφάλιος, 3524), for which see SOBER, is translated “temperate” in 1 Tim. 3:2, RV (KJV, “vigilant”); in 3:11 and Titus 2:2, RV (KJV, “sober”).¶

Note: In Titus 2:2, KJV, sophron, “sober,” is rendered “temperate” (RV, “soberminded”).

C. Verb.

enkrateuomai (ἐγκρατεύομαι, 1467), akin to A and B, No. 1, rendered “is temperate” in 1 Cor. 9:25, is used figuratively of the rigid selfcontrol practiced by athletes with a view to gaining the prize. See CONTINENCY.

---

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

TEMPEST

1. thuella (θύελλα, 2366), “a hurricane, cyclone, whirlwind” (akin to thuo, “to slay,” and thumos, “wrath”), is used in Heb. 12:18.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 10:22; Deut. 4:11; 5:22.¶

2. seismos (σεισμός, 4578), “a shaking” (Eng., “seismic,” etc.), is used of a “tempest” in Matt. 8:24. See EARTHQUAKE.

3. cheimon (χειμών, 5494), “winter, a winter storm,” hence, in general, “a tempest,” is so rendered in Acts 27:20. See WEATHER, WINTER.

4. lailaps (λαίλαψ, 2978), “a tempest,” 2 Pet. 2:17, KJV: see STORM.

Note: For “tossed with a tempest,” Acts 27:18, KJV, see LABOR, B, No. 2.

TEMPESTUOUS

tuphonikos (τυφωνικός, 5189), from tuphon, “a hurricane, typhoon,” is translated “tempestuous” in Acts 27:14.¶

TEMPLE

1. hieron (ἱερόν, 2411), the neuter of the adjective hieros, “sacred,” is used as a noun denoting “a sacred place, a temple,” that of Artemis (Diana), Acts 19:27; that in Jerusalem, Mark 11:11, signifying the entire building with its precincts, or some part thereof, as distinct from the naos, “the inner sanctuary” (see No. 2); apart from the Gospels and Acts, it is mentioned only in 1 Cor. 9:13. Christ taught in one of the courts, to which all the people had access. Hieron is never used figuratively. The Temple mentioned in the Gospels and Acts was begun by Herod in 20 B.C., and destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70.

2. naos (ναός, 3485), “a shrine or sanctuary,” was used (a) among the heathen, to denote the shrine containing the idol, Acts 17:24; 19:24 (in the latter, miniatures); (b) among the Jews, the sanctuary in the “Temple,” into which only the priests could lawfully enter, e.g., Luke 1:9, 21, 22; Christ, as being of the tribe of Judah, and thus not being a priest while upon the earth (Heb. 7:13, 14; 8:4), did not enter the naos; for 2 Thess. 2:4 see Note (below); (c) by Christ metaphorically, of His own physical body, John 2:19, 21; (d) in apostolic teaching, metaphorically, (1) of the church, the mystical body of Christ, Eph. 2:21; (2) of a local church, 1 Cor. 3:16, 17; 2 Cor. 6:16; (3) of the present body of the individual believer, 1 Cor. 6:19; (4) of the “Temple” seen in visions in the Apocalypse, 3:12; 7:15; 11:19; 14:15, 17; 15:5, 6, 8; 16:1, 17; (5) of the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb, as the “Temple” of the new and heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:22. See SANCTUARY and HOLY, B (b), par. 4.

Notes: (1) The “temple” mentioned in 2 Thess. 2:4 (naos), as the seat of the Man of Sin, has been regarded in different ways. The weight of Scripture evidence is in favor of the view that it refers to a literal “temple” in Jerusalem, to be reconstructed in the future (cf. Dan. 11:31 and 12:11, with Matt. 24:15). For a fuller examination of the passage, see Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 250-252. (2) For oikos, rendered “temple,” Luke 11:51, KJV, see HOUSE, No. 1.

TEMPLE KEEPER

neokoros (νεωκόρος, 3511), Acts 19:35, RV, and KJV marg., “temple keeper” (KJV, “worshiper”), is used in profane Greek of “one who has charge of a temple.” Coin inscriptions show that it was an honorary title given to certain cities, especially in Asia Minor, where the cult of some god or of a deified human potentate had been established, here to Ephesus in respect of the goddess Artemis. Apparently the imperial cult also existed at Ephesus. Josephus applies the word to Jews as worshipers, but this is not the meaning in Acts 1:9.¶

TEMPORAL

proskairos (πρόσκαιρος, 4340), “for a season” (pros, “for,” kairos, “a season”), is rendered “temporal” in 2 Cor. 4:18. See SEASON, WHILE.

TEMPT

A. Verbs.

1. peirazo (πειράζω, 3985) signifies (1) “to try, attempt, assay” (see TRY); (2) “to test, try, prove,” in a good sense, said of Christ and of believers, Heb. 2:18, where the context shows that the temptation was the cause of suffering to Him, and only suffering, not a drawing away to sin, so that believers have the sympathy of Christ as their High Priest in the suffering which sin occasions to those who are in the enjoyment of communion with God; so in the similar passage in 4:15; in all the temptations which Christ endured, there was nothing within Him that answered to sin. There was no sinful infirmity in Him. While He was truly man, and His divine nature was not in any way inconsistent with His Manhood, there was nothing in Him such as is produced in us by the sinful nature which belongs to us; in Heb. 11:37, of the testing of OT saints; in 1 Cor. 10:13, where the meaning has a wide scope, the verb is used of “testing” as permitted by God, and of the believer as one who should be in the realization of his own helplessness and his dependence upon God (see PROVE, TRY); in a bad sense, “to tempt” (a) of attempts to ensnare Christ in His speech, e.g., Matt. 16:1; 19:3; 22:18, 35, and parallel passages; John 8:6; (b) of temptations to sin, e.g., Gal. 6:1, where one who would restore an erring brother is not to act as his judge, but as being one with him in liability to sin, with the possibility of finding himself in similar circumstances, Jas. 1:13, 14 (see note below); of temptations mentioned as coming from the Devil, Matt. 4:1; and parallel passages; 1 Cor. 7:5; 1 Thess. 3:5 (see TEMPTER); (c) of trying or challenging God, Acts 15:10; 1 Cor. 10:9 (2nd part); Heb. 3:9; the Holy Spirit, Acts 5:9: cf. No. 2.

Note: * “James 1:13-15 seems to contradict other statements of Scripture in two respects, saying (a) that ‘God cannot be tempted with evil,’ and (b) that ‘He Himself tempteth no man.’ But God tempted, or tried, Abraham, Heb. 11:17, and the Israelites tempted, or tried, God, 1 Cor. 10:9. V. 14, however, makes it plain that, whereas in these cases the temptation or trial, came from without, James refers to temptation, or trial, arising within, from uncontrolled appetites and from evil passions, cf. Mark 7:20-23. But though such temptation does not proceed from God, yet does God regard His people while they endure it, and by it tests and approves them.”

2. ekpeirazo (ἐκπειράζω, 1598), an intensive form of the foregoing, is used in much the same way as No. 1 (2) (c), in Christ’s quotation from Deut. 6:16, in reply to the Devil, dokimazo (see PROVE).

B. Adjective.

apeirastos (ἀπειράστος, 551), “untempted, untried” (a, negative, and A, No. 1), occurs in Jas. 1:13, with eimi, “to be,” “cannot be tempted,” “untemptable” (Mayor).¶

TEMPTATION

peirasmos (πειρασμός, 3986), akin to A, above, is used of (1) “trials” with a beneficial purpose and effect, (a) of “trials” or “temptations,” divinely permitted or sent, Luke 22:28; Acts 20:19; Jas. 1:2; 1 Pet. 1:6; 4:12, RV, “to prove,” KJV, “to try”; 2 Pet. 2:9 (singular); Rev. 3:10, RV, “trial” (KJV, “temptation”); in Jas. 1:12, “temptation” apparently has meanings (1) and (2) combined (see below), and is used in the widest sense; (b) with a good or neutral significance, Gal. 4:14, of Paul’s physical infirmity, “a temptation” to the Galatian converts, of such a kind as to arouse feelings of natural repugnance; (c) of “trials” of a varied character, Matt. 6:13 and Luke 11:4, where believers are commanded to pray not to be led into such by forces beyond their own control; Matt. 26:41; Mark 14:38; Luke 22:40, 46, where they are commanded to watch and pray against entering into “temptations” by their own carelessness or disobedience; in all such cases God provides “the way of escape,” 1 Cor. 10:13 (where peirasmos occurs twice). (2) Of “trial” definitely designed to lead to wrong doing, “temptation,” Luke 4:13; 8:13; 1 Tim. 6:9; (3) of “trying” or challenging God, by men, Heb. 3:8.¶

TEMPTER

Note: The present participle of peirazo, “to tempt,” preceded by the article, lit., “the (one) tempting,” is used as a noun, describing the Devil in this character, Matt. 4:3; 1 Thess. 3:5.¶

TEN

deka (δέκα, 1176), whence the Eng. prefix “deca-,” is regarded by some as the measure of human responsibility, e.g., Luke 19:13, 17; Rev. 2:10; it is used in a figurative setting in Rev. 12:3; 13:1; 17:3, 7, 12, 16.

Notes: (1) In Acts 23:23, hebdomekonta, “seventy,” is translated “threescore and ten.” (2) For “ten thousand” see THOUSAND.

For TEND, John 21:16; 1 Pet. 5:2, RV, see FEED, No. 2

TENDER

hapalos (ἀπαλός, 527), “soft, tender,” is used of the branch of a tree, Matt. 24:32; Mark 13:28.¶

Note: For Luke 1:78, “tender mercy”; Phil. 1:8; 2:1 “tender mercies,” see BOWELS. For TENDERHEARTED see PITIFUL, No. 2

TENTH

1. dekatos (δέκατος, 1182), an adjective from deka, “ten,” occurs in John 1:39; Rev. 11:13; 21:20.¶

2. dekate (δεκάτη, 1181), grammatically the feminine form of No. 1, with meris, “a part,” understood, is used as a noun, translated “a tenth part” in Heb. 7:2, “a tenth,” v. 4; “tithes” in vv. 8, 9.¶

For TENTS see TABERNACLE, No. 1

TENTMAKERS

skenopoios (σκηνοποιός, 4635), an adjective, “tentmaking” (skene, “a tent,” poieo, “to make”), is used as a noun in Acts 18:3.¶

TERM (appointed)

prothesmios (προθέσμιος, 4287), an adjective denoting “appointed beforehand” (pro, “before,” tithemi, “to put, appoint”: see APPOINT No. 3, Note), is used as a noun, prothesmia (grammatically feminine, with hemera, “a day,” understood), as in Greek law, “a day appointed before,” Gal. 4:2, RV, “the term appointed,” i.e., “a stipulated date” (KJV, “the time appointed”).¶

TERRESTRIAL

epigeios (ἐπίγειος, 1919), “on earth, earthly” (epi, “on,” ge, “the earth”), is rendered “terrestrial” in 1 Cor. 15:40 (twice), in contrast to epouranios, “heavenly.” See EARTHLY, No. 2.

For TERRIBLE, Heb. 12:21, see FEARFUL, B, No. 1

TERRIFY

A. Verbs.

1. ptoeo (πτοέω, 4422), “to terrify,” is used in the passive voice, Luke 21:9; 24:37.¶
2. ekphobeo (ἐκφοβέω, 1629), “to frighten away” (ek, “out,” phobos, “fear”), occurs in 2 Cor. 10:9.¶
3. pturo (πτύρω, 4426), “to scare,” Phil. 1:28: see AFFRIGHTED, B, No. 1.¶

B. Adjective.

emphobos (ἐμφοβος, 1719), “terrified,” is so rendered in the RV of Acts 24:25. See TREMBLE.

TERROR

1. phobos (φόβος, 5401), “fear,” is rendered “terror” in Rom. 13:3; in 2 Cor. 5:11 and 1 Pet. 3:14, KJV (RV, “fear”). See FEAR, No. 1.

2. phobetron (φόβητρον, 5400), “that which causes fright, a terror,” is translated “terrors” in Luke 21:11, RV (KJV, “fearful sights”).¶ See FEAR, A, Note. For ptoesis, See AMAZEMENT.

For TESTAMENT see COVENANT

TESTATOR

diatithemi (διατίθεμαι, 1303), “to arrange, dispose,” is used only in the middle voice in the NT; in Heb. 9:16, 17, the present participle with the article, lit., “the (one) making a testament (or covenant),” virtually a noun, “the testator” (the covenanting one); it is used of “making a covenant” in 8:10 and 10:16 and Acts 3:25. In “covenant-making,” the sacrifice of a victim was customary (Gen. 15:10; Jer. 34:18, 19). He who “made a covenant” did so at the cost of a life. While the terminology in Heb. 9:16, 17 has the appearance of being appropriate to the circumstances of making a will, there is excellent reason for adhering to the meaning “covenant-making.” The rendering “the death of the testator” would make Christ a Testator, which He was not. He did not die simply that the terms of a testamentary disposition might be fulfilled for the heirs. Here He who is “the Mediator of a new covenant” (v. 15) is Himself the Victim whose death was necessary. The idea of “making a will” destroys the argument of v. 18. In spite of various advocacies of the idea of a will, the weight of evidence is confirmatory of what Hatch, in Essays in Biblical Greek, p. 48, says: “There can be little doubt that the word (diatheke) must be invariably taken in this sense of ‘covenant’ in the NT, and especially in a book ... so impregnated with the language of the Sept. as the Epistle to the Hebrews” (see also Westcott, and W. F. Moulton). We may render somewhat literally thus: ‘For where a covenant (is), a death (is) necessary to be brought in of the one covenanting; for a covenant over dead ones (victims) is sure, since never has it force when the one covenanting lives’ [Christ being especially in view]. The writer is speaking from a Jewish point of view, not from that of the Greeks. “To adduce the fact that in the case of wills the death of the testator is the condition of validity, is, of course, no proof at all that a death is necessary to make a covenant valid.... To support his argument, proving the necessity of Christ’s death, the writer adduces the general law that he who makes a covenant does so at the expense of life” (Marcus Dods). See APPOINT, MAKE.

TESTIFY

1. martureo (μαρτυρέω, 3140), for which see WITNESS, is frequently rendered “to bear witness, to witness,” in the RV, where KJV renders it “to testify,” John 2:25; 3:11, 32; 5:39; 15:26; 21:24; 1 Cor. 15:15; Heb. 7:17; 11:4; 1 John 4:14; 5:9; 3 John 3. In the following, however, the RV, like the KJV, has the rendering “to testify,” John 4:39, 44; 7:7; 13:21; Acts 26:5; Rev. 22:16, 18, 20.

2. epimartureo (ἐπιμαρτυρέω, 1957), “to bear witness to” (a strengthened form of No. 1), is rendered “testifying” in 1 Pet. 5:12.¶

3. marturomai (μαρτύρομαι, 3143), primarily, “to summon as witness,” then, “to bear witness” (sometimes with the suggestion of solemn protestation), is rendered “to testify” in Acts 20:26, RV (KJV, “I take ... to record”); 26:22, in the best texts (some have No. 1), RV; Gal. 5:3; Eph. 4:17; 1 Thess. 2:11, in the best texts (some have No. 1), RV, “testifying” (KJV, “charged”).¶

4. diamarturomai (διαμαρτύρομαι, 1263), “to testify or protest solemnly,” an intensive form of No. 3, is translated “to testify” in Luke 16:28; Acts 2:40; 8:25; 10:42; 18:5; 20:21, 23, 24; 23:11; 28:23; 1 Thess. 4:6; Heb. 2:6; “to charge” in 1 Tim. 5:21; 2 Tim. 2:14; 4:8.¶

5. promarturomai (προμαρτύρομαι, 4303), “to testify beforehand,” occurs in 1 Pet. 1:11, where the pronoun “it” should be “He” (the “it” being due to the grammatically neuter form of pneuma; the personality of the Holy Spirit requires the masculine pronoun).¶

Note: In Rev. 22:18 some texts have summartureo, “to bear witness with.” See WITNESS.

TESTIMONY

1. marturion (μαρτύριον, 3142), “a testimony, witness,” is almost entirely translated “testimony” in both KJV and RV. The only place where both have “witness” is Acts 4:33. In Acts 7:44 and Jas. 5:3, the RV has “testimony” (KJV, “witness”).

In 2 Thess. 1:10, “our testimony unto you,” RV, refers to the fact that the missionaries, besides proclaiming the truths of the gospel, had borne witness to the power of these truths. Kerugma, “the thing preached, the message,” is objective, having especially to do with the effect on the hearers; marturion is mainly subjective, having to do especially with the preacher’s personal experience. In 1 Tim. 2:6 the RV is important, “the testimony (i.e., of the gospel) to be borne in its own times,” i.e., in the times divinely appointed for it, namely, the present age, from Pentecost till the church is complete. In Rev. 15:5, in the phrase, “the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in Heaven,” the “testimony” is the witness to the rights of God, denied and refused on earth, but about to be vindicated by the exercise of the judgments under the pouring forth of the seven bowls or vials of divine retribution. See WITNESS.

2. marturia (μαρτυρία, 3141), “witness, evidence, testimony,” is almost always rendered “witness” in the RV (for KJV, “testimony” in John 3:32, 33; 5:34; 8:17; 21:24, and always for KJV, “record,” e.g., 1 John 5:10, 11), except in Acts 22:18 and in the Apocalypse, where both, with one exception, have “testimony,” 1:2, 9; 6:9; 11:7; 12:11, 17; 19:10 (twice); 20:4 (KJV, “witness”). In 19:10, “the testimony of Jesus” is objective, the “testimony” or witness given to Him (cf. 1:2, 9; as to those who will bear it, see Rev. 12:17, RV). The statement “the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy,” is to be understood in the light, e.g., of the “testimony” concerning Christ and Israel in the Psalms, which will be used by the godly Jewish remnant in the coming time of “Jacob’s Trouble.” All such “testimony” centers in and points to Christ. See WITNESS.

TETRARCH

A. Noun.

tetraarches or tetrarches (τετράρχης, 5076) denotes “one of four rulers” (tetra, “four,” arche, “rule”), properly, “the governor of the fourth part of a region”; hence, “a dependent princeling,” or “any petty ruler” subordinate to kings or ethnarchs; in the NT, Herod Antipas, Matt. 14:1; Luke 3:19; 9:7; Acts 13:1.¶

B. Verb.

tetraarcheo or tetrarcheo (τετραρχέω, 5075), “to be a tetrarch,” occurs in Luke 3:1 (thrice), of Herod Antipas, his brother Philip and Lysanias. Antipas and Philip each inherited a fourth part of his father’s dominions. Inscriptions bear witness to the accuracy of Luke’s details.¶

THANK, THANKS (Noun and Verb), THANKFUL, THANKFULNESS, THANKSGIVING, THANKWORTHY

A. Nouns.

1. charis (χάρις, 5485), for the meanings of which see GRACE, No. 1, is rendered “thank” in Luke 6:32, 33, 34; in 17:9, “doth he thank” is lit., “hath he thanks to”; it is rendered “thanks (be to God)” in Rom. 6:17, RV (KJV, “God be thanked”); “thanks” in 1 Cor. 15:57; in 1 Tim. 1:12 and 2 Tim. 1:3, “I thank” is, lit., “I have thanks”; “thankworthy,” 1 Pet. 2:19, KJV (RV, “acceptable”). See ACCEPT, D, No. 2.

2. eucharistia (εὐχαριστία, 2169), eu, “well,” charizomai, “to give freely” (Eng., “eucharist”), denotes (a) “gratitude,” “thankfulness,” Acts 24:3; (b) “giving of thanks, thanksgiving,” 1 Cor. 14:16; 2 Cor. 4:15; 9:11, 12 (plur.); Eph. 5:4; Phil. 4:6; Col. 2:7; 4:2; 1 Thess. 3:9 (“thanks”); 1 Tim. 2:1 (plur.); 4:3, 4; Rev. 4:9, “thanks”; 7:12.¶

B. Verbs.

1. eucharisteo (εὐχαριστέω, 2168), akin to A, No. 2, “to give thanks,” (a) is said of Christ, Matt. 15:36; 26:27; Mark 8:6; 14:23; Luke 22:17, 19; John 6:11, 23; 11:41; 1 Cor. 11:24; (b) of the Pharisee in Luke 18:11 in his selfcomplacent prayer; (c) is used by Paul at the beginning of all his epistles, except 2 Cor. (see, however, eulogetos in 1:3), Gal., 1 Tim., 2 Tim. (see, however, charin echo, 1:3), and Titus, (1) for his readers, Rom. 1:8; Eph. 1:16; Col. 1:3; 1 Thess. 1:2; 2 Thess. 1:3 (cf. 2:13); virtually so in Philem. 4; (2) for fellowship shown, Phil. 1:3; (3) for God’s gifts to them, 1 Cor. 1:4; (d) is recorded (1) of Paul elsewhere, Acts 27:35; 28:15; Rom. 7:25; 1 Cor. 1:14; 14:18; (2) of Paul and others, Rom. 16:4; 1 Thess. 2:13; of himself, representatively, as a practice, 1 Cor. 10:30; (3) of others, Luke 17:16; Rom. 14:6 (twice); 1 Cor. 14:17; Rev. 11:17; (e) is used in admonitions to the saints, the Name of the Lord Jesus suggesting His character and example, Eph. 5:20; Col. 1:12; 3:17; 1 Thess. 5:18; (f) as the expression of a purpose, 2 Cor. 1:11, RV; (g) negatively of the ungodly, Rom. 1:21.¶ “Thanksgiving” is the expression of joy Godward, and is therefore the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22); believers are encouraged to abound in it (e.g., Col. 2:7, and see C, below).

2. exomologeō (ἐξομολογέω, 1843), in the middle voice, signifies “to make acknowledgment,” whether of sins (to confess), or in the honor of a person, as in Rom. 14:11; 15:9 (in some mss. in Rev. 3:5); this is the significance in the Lord’s address to the Father, “I thank (Thee),” in Matt. 11:25 and Luke 10:21, the meaning being “I make thankful confession” or “I make acknowledgment with praise.” See CONFESS, No. 2, CONSENT, PROMISE.

3. anthomologeomai (ἀνθομολογέομαι, 437), “to acknowledge fully, to celebrate fully (anti) in praise with thanksgiving,” is used of Anna in Luke 2:35.¶ Note: For homologeō, rendered “giving thanks” in Heb. 13:15 (RV, “make confession”), See CONFESS, A, No. 1 (d).

C. Adjective.

eucharistos (εὐχάριστος, 2170), primarily, “gracious, agreeable” (as in the Sept., Prov. 11:16, of a wife, who brings glory to her husband¶), then “grateful, thankful,” is so used in Col. 3:15.¶

For THAT (Conjunction, etc.) see †, p. 1

For THAT (Demonstrative Pronoun), see THIS

THEATER

theatron (θέατρον, 2302), “a theater,” was used also as “a place of assembly,” Acts 19:29, 31; in 1 Cor. 4:9 it is used of “a show” or “spectacle.” See SPECTACLE.¶

THEE

Note: This translates the oblique forms of the pronoun su, “thou.” In 2 Tim. 4:11, it translates the reflexive pronoun seautou, “thyself.”

THEFT

1. klope (κλοπή, 2829), akin to klepto, “to steal,” is used in the plural in Matt. 15:19; Mark 7:22.¶

2. klemma (κλέμμα, 2809), “a thing stolen,” and so, “a theft,” is used in the plural in Rev. 9:21.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 31:39; Ex. 22:3, 4.¶

THEIR, THEIRS

Note: These pronouns are the rendering of (1) auton, the genitive plur. of autos, “he,” e.g., Matt. 2:12; (2) heauton, “of themselves,” the genitive plur. of heautou, “of himself,” e.g., Matt. 8:22; Rom. 16:4, 18, “their own”; or the accusative plur. heautous, e.g., 2 Cor. 8:5, “their own selves” (for John 20:10, see HOME, A, No. 3); (3) idious, the accusative plur. of idios, “one’s own,” e.g., 1 Cor. 14:35, “their own”; (4) touton, lit., “of these,” the gen. plur. of houtos, “this,” Rom. 11:30, “their (disobedience)”; (5) ekeinon, the gen. plur. of ekeinos, “that one” (emphatic), e.g., 2 Cor. 8:14 (twice), “their,” lit., “of those”; 2 Tim. 3:9, “theirs.”

THEM, THEMSELVES

Note: These translate the plural, in various forms, of (1) autos [see (1) above], e.g., Matt. 3:7; (2) heatou [see (2) above], e.g., Matt. 15:30; (3) houtos (toutous) [see (4) above], e.g., Acts 21:24; (4) ekeinos [see (5) above], e.g., Matt. 13:11. Regarding allelon, “of one another,” and its other forms, the RV substitutes “one another” for the KJV “themselves” in Mark 8:16; 9:34; Luke 4:36; John 6:52; 11:56; 16:17; 19:24; Acts 26:31; 28:4; Rom. 2:15, but adheres to the rendering “themselves” in Mark 15:31; Acts 4:15; 28:25.

THEN

1. tote (τότε, 5119), a demonstrative adverb of time, denoting “at that time,” is used (a) of concurrent events, e.g., Matt. 2:17; Gal. 4:8, “at that time”; v. 29, “then”; 2 Pet. 3:6, “(the world) that then was,” lit., “(the) then (world)”; (b) of consequent events, “then, thereupon,” e.g., Matt. 2:7; Luke 11:26; 16:16, “[from (KJV, “since”)] that time”; John 11:14; Acts 17:14; (c) of things future, e.g., Matt. 7:23; 24:30 (twice), 40; eight times in ch. 25; 1 Cor. 4:5; Gal. 6:4; 1 Thess. 5:3; 2 Thess. 2:8. It occurs 90 times in Matthew, more than in all the rest of the NT together.

2. eita (εἴτα, 1534) denotes sequence (a) “of time, then, next,” Mark 4:17, RV, “then”; 4:28, in some texts; 8:25, RV, “then” (KJV, “after that”); Luke 8:12; John 13:5; 19:27; 20:27; in some texts in 1 Cor. 12:28; 1 Cor. 15:5, 7, 24; 1 Tim. 2:13; 3:10; Jas. 1:15; (b) In argument, Heb. 12:9, “furthermore.”¶

3. epeita (ἐπειτα, 1899) “thereupon, thereafter,” then (in some texts, Mark 7:5; kai, “and,” in the best); Luke 16:7; John 11:7; 1 Cor. 12:28, RV, “then” (KJV, “after that”); 15:6 and 7 (ditto); v. 23, RV, KJV, “afterward” (No. 2 in v. 24); v. 46 (ditto); Gal. 1:18; v. 21, RV (KJV, “afterwards”), 2:1; 1 Thess. 4:17; Heb. 7:2, RV (KJV, “after that”); v. 27; Jas. 3:17; 4:14. See AFTER.¶

4. loipon (λοιπόν, 3063), “finally, for the rest,” the neuter of loipos, “(the) rest,” used adverbially, is rendered “then” in Acts 27:20, KJV (RV, “now.”).

5. oun (οὖν, 3767), a particle expressing sequence or consequence, is rendered “then,” e.g., Matt. 22:43; 27:22; Luke 11:13.

6. oukoun (οὐκοῦν, 3766), an adverb formed from ouk, “not,” oun, “therefore,” with the negative element dropped, meaning “so then,” is used in John 18:37.¶

Notes: (1) In James 2:24, where in some texts the inferential particle toinun, “therefore,” occurs, the KJV renders it by “then” (RV follows the superior mss. which omit it). (2) For conjunctions (ara, “so”; de, “but”; gar “for”; kai, “and”; te, “and”), sometimes translated “then,” see †, p. 1.

THENCE (from)

ekethen (ἐκῑθεν, 1564) is used (a) of place, e.g., Matt. 4:21, “from thence”; 5:26; in Acts 20:13, “there”; often preceded by kai, written kakeithen, e.g., Mark 9:30 and Luke 11:53 (in the best texts); Acts 7:4; 14:26; (b) of time, Acts 13:21, “and afterward.” See AFTER.

Note: In Acts 28:13, hothen, “from whence,” is translated “from thence.”

eti (ἔτι, 2089), “yet, still, further,” is rendered “thenceforth” in Matt. 5:13.

Notes: (1) In Luke 13:9, RV, the phrase eis to mellon, lit., “unto the about to be” (mello, “to be about to”), is translated “thenceforth” (KJV, “after that”). (2) In John 19:12, KJV, ek toutou, “from this,” is translated “from thenceforth” (RV, “upon this”).

THERE, THITHER

1. ekei (ἐκεῖ, 1563) signifies (a) “there,” e.g., Matt. 2:13, frequently in the Gospels; (b) “thither,” e.g., Luke 17:37; in Rom. 15:24, “thitherward.”

2. ekeise (ἐκεῖσε, 1566), properly, “thither,” signifies “there” in Acts 21:3; 22:5.¶ In the Sept., Job 39:29.¶

3. ekethen (ἐκῑθεν, 1564), “thence,” is rendered “there” in Acts 20:13. See THENCE.

4. enthade (ἔρωμα, 759), “here, hither,” is rendered “there” in Acts 10:18. See HERE, HITHER.

5. autou (αὐτοῦ, 847), the genitive case, neuter, of autos, he, lit., “of it,” is used as an adverb, “there,” in Acts 18:19; 21:4 (in some texts in 15:34). See HERE.

Notes: (1) In Luke 24:18 and Acts 9:38, “there” translates the phrase en aute, “in it.” (2) In John 21:9, “there” is used to translate the verb keimai. (3) In Matt. 24:23 (2nd part), KJV, hode, “here” (RV), is translated “there.” (4) In Acts 17:21, “there” forms part of the translation of epidemeo, “to sojourn,” “sojourning there,” RV (“which were there,” KJV).

THEREABOUT

Note: The phrase peri toutou, “concerning this,” is rendered “thereabout” in Luke 24:4.

THEREAT

Note: The phrase di' autas, lit., “by (dia) it,” is rendered “thereat” in Matt. 7:13, KJV (RV, “thereby”).

THEREBY

Notes: (1) Di' autas (see above) occurs in Matt. 7:13; John 11:4; Heb. 12:11. (2) Dia tautas, “by means of this, thereby,” occurs in Heb. 12:15; 13:2. (3) En aute, “in, or by, it,” is rendered “thereby” in Rom. 10:5; en auto in Eph. 2:16 (some texts have en heauto, “in Himself”); 1 Pet. 2:2.

For THEREFORE see †, p. 1

THEREIN, THEREINTO, THEREOF, THEREON, THEREOUT, THERETO, THEREUNTO, THEREUPON, THEREWITH

Note: These translate various phrases consisting of a preposition with forms of either the personal pronoun autos, “he,” or the demonstrative houtos, “this.”

For THESE see THIS

THEY, THEY THEMSELVES

Note: When not forming part of the translation of the 3rd pers., plur. of a verb, (1) these translate the plural of the pronouns under HE, in their various forms, autos, houtos, ekeinos, heautou. (2) In Acts 5:16, hoitines, the plural of hostis, “anyone who,” is translated “they”; so in 23:14, translated “and they”; in 17:11, “in that they” (some texts have it in Matt. 25:3). (3) Sometimes the plural of the article is rendered “they,” e.g., Phil. 4:22; Heb. 13:24; in 1 Cor. 11:19, “they which are (approved)” is, lit., “the approved”; in Gal. 2:6, “they ... (who were of repute),” RV.

For THICK see GATHER, A, No. 8

THIEF, THIEVES

1. kleptes (κλέπτης, 2812) is used (a) literally, Matt. 6:19, 20; 24:43; Luke 12:33, 39; John 10:1, 10; 12:6; 1 Cor. 6:10; 1 Pet. 4:15; (b) metaphorically of “false teachers,” John 10:8; (c) figuratively, (1) of the personal coming of Christ, in a warning to a local church, with most of its members possessed of mere outward profession and defiled by the world, Rev. 3:3; in retributive intervention to overthrow the foes of God, 16:15; (2) of the Day of the Lord, in divine judgment upon the world, 2 Pet. 3:10 and 1 Thess. 5:2, 4; in v. 2, according to the order in the original “the word ‘night’ is not to be read with ‘the day of the Lord,’ but with ‘thief,’ i.e., there is no reference to the time of the coming, only to the manner of it. To avoid ambiguity the phrase may be paraphrased, ‘so comes as a thief in the night comes.’ The use of the present tense instead of the future emphasizes the certainty of the coming.... The unexpectedness of the coming of the thief, and the unpreparedness of those to whom he comes, are the essential elements in the figure; cf. the entirely different figure used in Matt. 25:1-13.”¶*

2. lestes (ληστης, 3027) is frequently rendered “thieves” in the KJV, e.g., Matt. 21:13. See ROBBER.

THIGH

meros (μηρός, 3382) occurs in Rev. 19:16; Christ appears there in the manifestation of His judicial capacity and action hereafter as the executor of divine vengeance upon the foes of God; His name is spoken of figuratively as being upon His “thigh” (where the sword would be worn; cf. Ps. 45:3), emblematic of His strength to tread down His foes, His action being the exhibition of His divine attributes of righteousness and power.¶

For THINE see THY

THING(S)

1. logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word, an account,” etc., is translated “thing” in Matt. 21:24, KJV (1st part), and Luke 20:3, KJV, RV, “question” (in Matt. 21:24, 2nd part, “these things” translates tauta, the neut. plur. of houtos, “this”); Luke 1:4; Acts 5:24, KJV (RV, “words”) See ACCOUNT.

2. pragma (πράγμα, 4229), for which see MATTER, No. 2, is translated thing in Matt. 18:19, as part of the word “anything,” lit., “every thing”; Luke 1:1, KJV only; Acts 5:4; in Heb. 6:18; 10:1, and 11:1, “things.” See BUSINESS, MATTER, WORK.

3. rhema (ῥῆμα, 4487), “a saying, word,” is translated “thing” in Luke 2:15; v. 19, KJV (RV, “saying”); in Acts 5:32, “things.” See SAYING.

Notes: (1) The neuter sing. and plur. of the article are frequently rendered “the thing” and “the things”; so with tauta, “these things,” the neut. plur. of houtos, “this.” (2) So in the case of the neut. plur. of certain pronouns and adjectives without nouns, e.g., “all,” “base,” “heavenly,” “which.” (3) When “thing” represents a separate word in the original, it is a translation of one or other of Nos. 1, 2, 3, above. (4) In Phil. 2:10, “things” is added in italics to express the meaning of the three adjectives.

THINK

1. dokeo (δοκέω, 1380), “to suppose, to think, to form an opinion,” which may be either right or wrong, is sometimes rendered “to think,” e.g., Matt. 3:9; 6:7; see ACCOUNT, No. 1, SUPPOSE, No. 2.

2. hegeomai (ἡγέομαι, 2233), for which see ACCOUNT, No. 3, is rendered “to think” in Acts 26:2; 2 Cor. 9:5, “I thought”; Phil. 2:6, KJV (RV, “counted”); 2 Pet. 1:13.

* From Notes on Thessalonians. by Hogg and Vine, pp. 153, 154.

3. noeo (νοιέω, 3539), “to perceive, understand, apprehend,” is rendered “think” in Eph. 3:20. See PERCEIVE, UNDERSTAND.

4. huponoeo (ὑπονοέω, 5282), “to suppose, surmise” (hupo, “under,” and No. 3), is rendered “to think” in Acts 13:25, KJV (RV, “suppose”). See DEEM.

5. logizomai (λογίζομαι, 3049), “to reckon,” is rendered “to think,” in Rom. 2:3, KJV (RV, “reckonest”); 1 Cor. 13:5, KJV, RV, “taketh (not) account of,” i.e., love does not reckon up or calculatingly consider the evil done to it (something more than refraining from imputing motives); 13:11, “I thought”; in the following, for the KJV, “to think,” in 2 Cor. 3:5, RV, “to account”; 10:2 (twice), “count”; 10:7, “consider”; 10:11, “reckon”; 12:6, “account.” In Phil. 4:8, “think on (these things),” it signifies “make those things the subjects of your thoughtful consideration,” or “carefully reflect on them” (RV marg., “take account of”). See ACCOUNT, A, No. 4.

6. nomizo (νομίζω, 3543), to suppose, is sometimes rendered to think, e.g., Matt. 5:17. See SUPPOSE, No. 1.

7. phroneo (φρονέω, 5426), “to be minded in a certain way” (phren, “the mind”), is rendered “to think,” in Rom. 12:3 (2nd and 3rd occurrences), RV, “not to think of himself more highly (hyperphroneo, see No. 13) than he ought to think (phroneo); but so to think (phroneo) as to think soberly [sophroneo, see Note (3)]”; the play on words may be expressed by a literal rendering somewhat as follows: “not to over-think beyond what it behoves him to think, but to think unto sober-thinking”; in 1 Cor. 4:6, some inferior texts have this verb, hence the KJV “to think”; in the best texts, it is absent, hence the RV, puts “go” in italics; lit., the sentence is “that ye might learn the (i.e., the rule) not beyond what things have been written.” The saying appears to be proverbial, perhaps a rabbinical adage. Since, however, grapho, “to write,” was a current term for framing a law or an agreement (so Deissmann, Bible Studies, and Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.), it is quite possible that the apostle’s meaning is “not to go beyond the terms of a teacher’s commission, thinking more of himself than the character of his commission allows”; this accords with the context and the whole passage, 3:1-4:5. In Phil. 1:7, KJV, “to think” (RV, “to be ... minded”). See AFFECTION, B, Note (1) and list there.

8. oiomai or oimai (οἶομαι, 3633), “to imagine,” is rendered “I suppose” in John 21:25; “thinking” in Phil. 1:17, RV (v. 16, KJV, “supposing”); “let (not that man) think,” Jas. 1:7. See SUPPOSE.¶

9. phaino (φαίνω, 5316), in the passive voice, “to appear,” is rendered “(what) think (ye)” in Mark 14:64, lit., “what does it appear to you?” See APPEAR, No. 1.

10. eudokeo (εὐδοκέω, 2106), “to be wellpleasing,” is rendered “we thought it good” in 1 Thess. 3:1. See PLEASE.

11. axioo (ἀξιόω, 515), “to regard as worthy” (axios), “to deem it suitable,” is rendered “thought (not) good” in Acts 15:38. See WORTHY, B.

12. enthumeomai (ἐνθυμέομαι, 1760), “to reflect on, ponder,” is used in Matt. 1:20; 9:4: see No. 14. Cf. enthumesis, “consideration” (see THOUGHT).¶

13. hyperphroneo (ὑπερφρονέω, 5252), “to be overproud, high-minded,” occurs in Rom. 12:3, rendered “to think of himself more highly.” See No. 7.¶

14. dienthumeomai (διά, 1223) and διά, 1760), “to consider deeply” (dia, “through,” and No. 12), is used of Peter in Acts 10:19, in the best texts (some have No. 12).¶

15. epiballo (ἐπιβάλλω, 1911), “to throw oneself upon,” is used metaphorically in Mark 14:72, “when he thought thereon (he wept),” lit., “thinking thereon,” but “to think” is an exceptional sense of the word (see BEAT, CAST, LAY, PUT); hence various suggestions have been made. Field, following others, adopts the meaning “putting (his garment) over (his head),” as an expression of grief. Others regard it as having here the same meaning as archomai, “to begin” (at an early period, indeed, archomai was substituted in the text for the authentic epiballo); Moulton confirms this from a papyrus writing. Another suggestion is to understand it as with dianouan, mind, i.e., “casting his mind thereon.”

Notes: (1) In Acts 26:8, KJV, krino, “to judge, reckon,” is translated “should it be thought” (RV, “is it judged”). (2) In Luke 12:17, KJV, dialogizomai, “to reason” (RV, “reasoned”), is translated “thought.” (3) In Rom. 12:3, sophroneo, “to think soberly,” RV, is, lit., “unto sober thinking,” the infinitive mood of the verb being used as a noun (KJV marg., “to sobriety”): Cf. No. 7. See SOBER, B, No. 2.

THIRD, THIRDLY

tritōs (τρίτος, 5154) is used (a) as a noun, e.g., Luke 20:12, 31; in Rev. 8:7-12 and 9:15, 18, “the third part,” lit., “the third”; (b) as an adverb, with the article, “the third time,” e.g., Mark 14:41; John 21:17 (twice); without the article, lit., “a third time,” e.g., John 21:14; 2 Cor. 12:14; 13:1; in enumerations, in Matt. 26:44, with ek, “from,” lit., “from the third time” (the ek indicates the point of departure, especially in a succession of events, cf. John 9:24; 2 Pet. 2:8); absolutely, in the accusative neuter, in 1 Cor. 12:28, “thirdly”; (c) as an adjective (its primary use), e.g., in the phrase the third heaven, 2 Cor. 12:2 [cf. HEAVEN, A, No. 1 (c), PARADISE]; in the phrase “the third hour,” Matt. 20:3; Mark 15:25; Acts 2:15 (“... of the day”); 23:23 (“... of the night”); in a phrase with hemera, “a day,” “on the third day” (i.e., “the next day but one”), e.g., Matt. 16:21; Luke 24:46; Acts 10:40; in this connection the idiom “three days and three nights,” Matt. 12:40, is explained by ref to 1 Sam. 30:12, 13, and Esth. 4:16 with 5:1; in Mark 9:31 and 10:34, the RV, “after three days,” follows the texts which have this phrase, the KJV, “the third day,” those which have the same phrase as in Matt. 16:21, etc.

Note: For “third story,” Acts 20:9, RV, see STORY.

THIRST (Noun and Verb), THIRSTY (to be), ATHIRST

A. Noun.

dipsos (δίψος, 1373), “thirst” (cf. Eng., “dipsomania”), occurs in 2 Cor. 11:27.¶

B. Verb.

dipsao (διψάω, 1372) is used (a) in the natural sense, e.g., Matt. 25:35, 37, 42; in v. 44, “athirst” (lit., “thirsting”); John 4:13, 15; 19:28; Rom. 12:20; 1 Cor. 4:11; Rev. 7:16;

(b) figuratively, of spiritual “thirst,” Matt. 5:6; John 4:14; 6:35; 7:37; in Rev. 21:6 and 22:17, “that is athirst.”

THIRTY, THIRTYFOLD

triakonta (τριάκοντα, 5144) is usually rendered “thirty,” e.g., Matt. 13:23; “thirtyfold,” in Matt. 13:8, KJV only; in Mark 4:8, RV only; in Mark 4:20, KJV and RV.

THIS, THESE

Note: The singular and plural translate various forms of the following: (1) houtos, which is used (a) as a noun, “this one,” followed by no noun, e.g., Matt. 3:17; translated in Luke 2:34, “this child”; in 1 Cor. 5:3, RV, “this thing.” (KJV, “this deed”); for “this fellow” see FELLOW, Note (3); in Acts 17:32 the RV rightly omits “matter”; in Heb. 4:5 “place” is italicized; it is frequently rendered “this man,” e.g., Matt. 9:3; John 6:52; “of this sort,” 2 Tim. 3:6, KJV (RV, “of these”); (b) as an adjective with a noun, either with the article and before it, e.g., Matt. 12:32, or after the noun (which is preceded by the article), e.g., Matt. 3:9 and 4:3, “these stones”; or without the article often forming a predicate, e.g., John 2:11; 2 Cor. 13:1; (2) ekeinos, “that one,” rendered “this” in Matt. 24:43; (3) autos; “he,” rendered “this” in Matt. 11:14, lit., “he”; in John 12:7, KJV (RV, “it”); in the feminine, Luke 13:16; (4) the article ho, Matt. 21:21 (to, the neuter), KJV (RV, “what”); in Rom. 13:9 (1st part); Gal. 5:14; Heb. 12:27, the article to is virtually equivalent to “the following.”

The demonstrative pronouns THAT and the plural THOSE translate the same pronouns (1), (2), (3) mentioned above. In Heb. 7:21, KJV, “those” translates the article, which requires the RV, “they.”

THISTLE

tribolos (τρίβολος, 5146) occurs in Matt. 7:16 and Heb. 6:8 (KJV, “briers”).¶ In the Sept., Gen. 3:18; 2 Sam. 12:31; Prov. 22:5; Hos. 10:8.¶ Cf. THORNS.

For THITHER, THITHERWARD see THERE

Note: In John 7:34, 36, KJV, hopou, “where” (RV) is amplified by the italicized word “thither.”

For THONG see LATCHET

THORN, THORNS (of)

A. Nouns.

1. akantha (ἄκανθα, 173), “a brier, a thorn” (from ake, “a point”), is always used in the plural in the NT, Matt. 7:16 and parallel passage in Luke 6:44; Matt. 13:7 (twice), 22 and parallels in Mark and Luke; in Matt. 27:29 and John 19:2, of the crown of “thorns” placed on Christ’s head (see also B) in mock imitation of the garlands worn by emperors. They were the effects of the divine curse on the ground (Gen. 3:18; contrast Isa. 55:13). The “thorns” of the crown plaited by the soldiers, are usually identified with those of the Zizyphus spina Christi, some 20 feet high or more, fringing the Jordan and abundant in Palestine; its twigs are flexible. Another species, however, the Arabian qundaul, crowns of which are plaited and sold in Jerusalem as representatives of Christ's crown, seems likely to be the one referred to. The branches are easily woven and adapted to the torture intended. The word akantha occurs also in Heb. 6:8.¶

2. skolops (σκόλοψ, 4647) originally denoted "anything pointed," e.g., "a stake"; in Hellenistic vernacular, "a thorn" (so the Sept., in Num. 33:55; Ezek. 28:24; Hos. 2:6.¶), 2 Cor. 12:7, of the apostle's "thorn in the flesh"; his language indicates that it was physical, painful, humiliating; it was also the effect of divinely permitted Satanic antagonism; the verbs rendered "that I should (not) be exalted overmuch" (RV) and "to buffet" are in the present tense, signifying recurrent action, indicating a constantly repeated attack. Lightfoot interprets it as "a stake driven through the flesh," and Ramsay agrees with this. Most commentators adhere to the rendering "thorn." Field says "there is no doubt that the Alexandrine use of skolops for thorn is here intended, and that the ordinary meaning of 'stake' must be rejected." What is stressed is not the metaphorical size, but the acuteness of the suffering and its effects. Attempts to connect this with the circumstances of Acts 14:19 and Gal. 4:13 are speculative.¶

B. Adjective.

akanthinos (ἀκάνθινος, 174), "of thorns" (from A, No. 1), is used in Mark 15:17 and John 19:5.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 34:13.¶

THOROUGHLY (THROUGHLY)

Note: This is usually part of the translation of a verb, e.g., CLEANSE, FURNISH, PURGE. In 2 Cor. 11:6, the phrase en panti, "in everything," RV, is translated "thoroughly" in the KJV.

For THOSE see THIS (last part of Note)

THOU

Note: Frequently this forms part of the translation of a verb in the 2nd person, singular. Otherwise it translates (a) the pronoun su, used for emphasis or contrast, e.g., John 1:19, 21 (twice), 25, 42 (twice); 8:5, 13, 25, 33, 48, 52, 53; Acts 9:5; in addressing a person or place, e.g., Matt. 2:6; Luke 1:76; John 17:5; perhaps also in the phrase su eipas, "thou hast said," e.g., Matt. 26:64 (sometimes without emphasis, e.g., Acts 13:33); (b) in the oblique cases, e.g., the dative soi, lit., "to thee," e.g., Matt. 17:25, "what thinkest thou?" (lit., "what does it seem to thee?"); (c) autos, "self," e.g., Luke 6:42; Acts 21:24, "thou thyself"; (d) the reflexive pronoun, seauton, Rom. 2:19, "thou thyself."

THOUGHT (Noun)

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

1. epinoia (ἐπίνοια, 1963), “a thought by way of a design” (akin to epinoeo, “to contrive,” epi, intensive, noeo, “to consider”), is used in Acts 8:22.¶ In the Sept.. Jer. 20:10.¶

2. noema (νόημα, 3540), “a purpose, device of the mind” (akin to noeo, see No. 1), is rendered “thought” in 2 Cor. 10:5, “thoughts” in Phil. 4:7, RV: see DEVICE, No. 2.

3. dianoema (διανόημα, 1270), “a thought,” occurs in Luke 11:17, where the sense is that of “machinations.”¶

4. enthumesis (ἐνθύμησις, 1761), is translated “thoughts” in Matt. 9:4; 12:25; Heb. 4:12: see DEVICE, No. 1.

5. logismos (λογισμός, 3053) is translated “thoughts” in Rom. 2:15: see IMAGINATION, No. 1.

6. dialogismos (διαλογισμός, 1261), “reasoning,” is translated “thoughts” in Matt. 15:19; Mark 7:21; Luke 2:35; 6:8; in 5:22, KJV, RV, “reasonings”; in 9:47, KJV, RV, “reasoning,” and 24:38, KJV, RV, “reasonings”; so 1 Cor. 3:20; in Luke 9:46, KJV and RV, “reasoning”; “thoughts” in Jas. 2:4, KJV and RV. See DISPUTE, IMAGINATION, REASONING.

THOUGHT (to take)

1. merimnao (μεριμνάω, 3309) denotes “to be anxious, careful.” For the KJV, “to take thought,” the RV substitutes “to be anxious” in Matt. 6:25, 27, 28, 31, 34; 10:19; Luke 12:11, 22, 25, 26, See CARE, B, No. 1.

2. promerimnao (προμεριμνάω, 4305), “to be anxious beforehand,” occurs in Mark 13:11.¶

3. phroneo (φρονέω, 5426): for Phil. 4:10, RV, “ye did take thought,” see CARE, B, No. 6.

4. pronoeo (προνοέω, 4306), “to provide,” is rendered “to take thought” in Rom. 12:17 and 2 Cor. 8:21. See PROVIDE.

THOUSAND (-S)

1. chilioi (χίλιοι, 5507), “a thousand,” occurs in 2 Pet. 3:8; Rev. 11:3; 12:6; 14:20; 20:2–7.¶ 2. chilias (χίλιοι, 5505), “one thousand,” is always used in the plural, chiliades, but translated in the sing. everywhere, except in the phrase “thousands of thousands,” Rev. 5:11.

Notes: (1) The following compounds of No. 1 represent different multiples of a thousand: dischilioi, 2,000, Mark 5:13;¶ trischilioi, 3,000, Acts 2:41;¶ tetrakischilioi, 4,000, Matt. 15:38; 16:10; Mark 8:9, 20; Acts 21:35;¶ pentakischilioi, 5,000, Matt. 14:21; 16:9; Mark 6:44; 8:9; Luke 9:14; John 6:10;¶ heplakischilioi, 7,000, Rom. 11:4.¶ (2)

Murias, “a myriad, a vast number,” “many thousands,” Luke 12:1, RV; Acts 21:20; it also denotes 10,000, Acts 19:19, lit., “five ten-thousands”; Jude 14, “ten thousands”; in Rev. 5:11 “ten thousand times ten thousand” is, lit., “myriads of myriads”; in Rev. 9:16 in the best texts, dismuriades muriadon, “twice ten thousand times ten thousand” RV (KJV, “two hundred thousand thousand”): see INNUMERABLE. (3) Murioi (the plur. of murios), an adjective signifying “numberless,” is used in this indefinite sense in 1 Cor. 4:15 and 14:19; it also denotes the definite number “ten thousand,” Matt. 18:24.¶

THREATEN

1. apeileo (ἀπειλέω, 546) is used of Christ, negatively, in 1 Pet. 2:23; in the middle voice, Acts 4:17, where some texts have the noun apeile in addition, hence the KJV, “let us straitly threaten,” lit., “let us threaten ... with threatening (see THREATENING).¶ (See also STRAITLY.)

2. prosapeileo (προσαπειλέω, 4324), “to threaten further” (pros, and No. 1), occurs in the middle voice in Acts 4:21.¶

apeile (ἀπειλή, 547), akin to apeileo (see above), occurs in Acts 4:29 (in some mss. v. 17); 9:1; Eph. 6:9.¶

THREE

treis (τréχω, 5143) is regarded by many as a number sometimes symbolically indicating fullness of testimony or manifestation, as in the three persons in the Godhead, cf. 1 Tim. 5:19; Heb. 10:28; the mention in 1 John 5:7 is in a verse which forms no part of the original; no Greek ms. earlier than the 14th century contained it; no version earlier than the 5th cent. in any other language contains it, nor is it quoted by any of the Greek or Latin “Fathers” in their writings on the Trinity. That there are those who bear witness in Heaven is not borne out by any other Scripture. It must be regarded as the interpolation of a copyist.

In Mark 9:31 and 10:34 the best texts have meta treis hemeras, “after three days,” which idiomatically expresses the same thing as te trite hemera, “on the third day,” which some texts have here, as, e.g., the phrase “the third day” in Matt. 17:23; 20:19; Luke 9:22; 18:33, where the repetition of the article lends stress to the number, lit., “the day the third”; 24:7, 46; Acts 10:40. For THREE TIMES see THRICE.

THREE HUNDRED

triakosioi (τριακόσιοι, 5145) occurs in Mark 14:5 and John 12:5.¶

For THREESCORE see SIXTY and SEVENTY

For THREE THOUSAND see THOUSAND

THRESH

aloao (ἀλοάω, 248), “to thresh,” is so rendered in 1 Cor. 9:10; in v. 9 and 1 Tim. 5:18, “that treadeth out the corn.”¶

THRASHING FLOOR

halon (ἄλων, 257), “a threshing floor,” is so translated in Matt. 3:12, and Luke 3:17, RV (KJV, “floor”), perhaps by metonymy for the grain.¶

For THREW see THROW

THRICE

tris (τρίς, 5151) occurs in Matt. 26:34, 75 and parallel passages; in Acts 10:16 and 11:10, preceded by epi, “up to”; 2 Cor. 11:25 (twice); 12:8.

THROAT (Noun), to take by the (Verb)

A. Noun.

larunx (λάρυγξ, 2995), “a throat” (Eng., “larynx”), is used metaphorically of “speech” in Rom. 3:13.¶

B. Verb.

pnigo (πνίγω, 4155), “to choke,” is rendered “took ... by the throat” in Matt. 18:28. See CHOKER, No. 1.

THRONE

1. thronos (θρόνος, 2362), “a throne, a seat of authority,” is used of the “throne” (a) of God, e.g., Heb. 4:16, “the throne of grace,” i.e., from which grace proceeds; 8:1; 12:2; Rev. 1:4; 3:21 (2nd part); 4:2 (twice); 5:1; frequently in Rev.; in 20:12, in the best texts, “the throne” (some have Theos, “God,” KJV); cf. 21:3; Matt. 5:34; 23:22; Acts 7:49; (b) of Christ, e.g. Heb. 1:8; Rev. 3:21 (1st part); 22:3; His seat of authority in the Millennium, Matt. 19:28 (1st part); (c) by metonymy for angelic powers, Col. 1:16; (d) of the Apostles in millennial authority, Matt. 19:28 (2nd part); Luke 22:30; (e) of the elders in the heavenly vision, Rev. 4:4 (2nd and 3rd parts), RV, “thrones” (KJV, “seats”); so 11:16; (f) of David, Luke 1:32; Acts 2:30; (g) of Satan, Rev. 2:13, RV, “throne” (KJV, “seat”); (h) of “the beast,” the final and federal head of the revived Roman Empire, Rev. 13:2; 16:10.

2. bema (βῆμα, 968), for which see JUDGMENT SEAT, is used of the throne or tribunal of Herod, Acts 12:21.

THRONG (Verb)

1. thlibo (θλίβω, 2346), “to press,” is rendered “throng,” Mark 3:9. See AFFLICT, No. 4.

2. sunthlibo (συνθλίβω, 4918), “to press together,” on all sides (sun, “together,” and No. 1), a strengthened form, is used in Mark 5:24, 31.¶

3. sumpnigo (σμπνίγω, 4846), “to choke,” is used of “thronging” by a crowd, Luke 8:42. See CHOKER, No. 3.

Note: For sunecho, “to hold together, press together,” Luke 8:45 (KJV, “throng”), see PRESS.

For THROUGH and THROUGHOUT see †, p. 1

For THROUGHLY see THOROUGHLY

THROW

1. ballo (βάλλω, 906), “to cast, to throw,” is rendered “to throw” in Mark 12:42, KJV (RV, “cast”); so Acts 22:23 (2nd part); “to throw down,” Rev. 18:21 (2nd part), KJV (RV, “cast down”). See CAST, No. 1.

2. rhipto (ρίπτω, 4496), “to hurl, throw, throw off,” is rendered “had thrown ... down” in Luke 4:35, RV (KJV, “had thrown”). See CAST, No. 2.

3. katakremnizo (κατακρημνίζω, 2630), “to throw over a precipice” (kremnos), “cast down headlong,” is rendered “throw ... down” in Luke 4:29 (KJV, “cast ... down headlong”).¶

4. kataluo (καταλύω, 2647), lit., “to loosen down,” is rendered “to throw down” (of the stones of the Temple) in Matt. 24:2 and parallel passages. See DESTROY, No. 5.

THRUST

1. ballo (βάλλω, 906), for which cf. THROW, No. 1, is rendered “to thrust” in John 20:25, 27, KJV (RV, put); Acts 16:24, KJV (RV, “cast”); so Rev. 14:16, 19. See CAST, No. 1.

2. ekballo (ἐκβάλλω, 1544), “to cast out,” is rendered “thrust ... out” in Luke 4:29, KJV (RV, “cast ... forth”); so 13:28 and Acts 16:37. See CAST, No. 5.

3. apothéo (ἀποπνίγω, 638), “to thrust away,” is used in the middle voice, “to thrust away from oneself,” and translated “thrust away” in Acts 7:27, 39; “thrust ... from,” 13:46, RV (KJV, “put ... from”); “having thrust from them,” 1 Tim. 1:19, RV (KJV, “having put away”). See CAST, No. 13.

4. katatoxeuo (κατατοξεύω, 2700), “to strike down with an arrow, shoot dead,” occurs in Heb. 12:20 in some mss. (in a quotation from Ex. 19:13, Sept.).¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 11:23 and Luke 10:15 the best texts have katabaino, “to go down” (RV), instead of katabibazo, in the passive voice, “to be thrust down or brought down” (KJV). (2) In Acts 27:39, KJV, exotheo, “to drive out,” is rendered “to thrust in,” RV, “drive (the ship) upon (it [i.e., the beach]).” (3) In Rev. 14:15, 18, KJV, pempo, to send (RV, “send forth”), is translated “thrust in.” (4) For Luke 5:3, KJV, see LAUNCH, No. 2.

THUNDER, THUNDERING

bronte (βροντή, 1027): in Mark 3:17 “sons of thunder” is the interpretation of Boanerges, the name applied by the Lord to James and John; their fiery disposition is seen in 9:38 and Luke 9:54; perhaps in the case of James it led to his execution. The name and its interpretation have caused much difficulty; some suggest the meaning “the twins.” It is however most probably the equivalent of the Aramaic bene regesh, “sons of tumult”; the latter of the two words was no doubt used of “thunder” in Palestinian Aramaic; hence the meaning “the sons of thunder”; the cognate Hebrew word ragash, “to rage,” is used in Ps. 2:1 and there only. In John 12:29 bronte is used with ginomai, “to take place,” and rendered “it had thundered”; lit., “there was thunder”; elsewhere, Rev. 4:5; 6:1; 8:5; 10:3, 4; 11:19; 14:2; 16:18; 19:6.¶

THUS

houtos or houto (οὗτω, 3779), “in this way, so, thus,” is used (a) with reference to what precedes, e.g., Luke 1:25; 2:48; (b) with reference to what follows, e.g., Luke 19:31, rendered “on this wise,” in Matt. 1:18; John 21:1, and before quotations, Acts 7:6; 13:34; Rom. 10:6, KJV (RV, “thus”); Heb. 4:4; (c) marking intensity, rendered “so,” e.g., Gal. 1:6; Heb. 12:21; Rev. 16:18; (d) in comparisons, rendered “so,” e.g., Luke 11:30; Rom. 5:15. See FASHION, B, LIKEWISE, Note (1), MANNER, C, No. 2, SO Note (1).

Notes: (1) Touto, the neuter of houtos, “this,” is translated “thus” in 2 Cor. 1:17; 5:14; Phil. 3:15; the neuter plural, tauta, “these things,” e.g., in Luke 18:11; 19:28; John 9:6; 11:43; 13:21; 20:14; Acts 19:41. (2) Tade, these things (the neuter plural of hode, “this”), is translated “thus” in Acts 21:11. (3) In Luke 17:30, KJV, kata tauta, lit., “according to these things,” is rendered “thus” (RV, “after the same manner,” follows the reading kata ta auta, lit., “according to the same things”).

THY, THINE, THINE OWN, THYSELF

Note: These are translations of (1) the possessive pronoun sos, and its inflections, e.g., Matt. 7:3 (1st part); it is used as a noun with the article, in the phrases to son, “that which is thine,” Matt. 20:14; 25:25, “thine own”; hoi soi, “thy friends,” Mark 5:19; ta sa, “thy goods,” Luke 6:30, lit., “the thine”; (2) one of the oblique cases of su, “thou”; sou, “of thee,” e.g., Matt. 1:20; 7:3 (2nd part), “thine own”; soi, “to thee,” e.g., Mark 5:9; with meno, “to remain,” Acts 5:4 (1st part), “thine own,” lit., “remain to thee”; in Matt. 26:18, pros se, “at thy house,” lit., “with thee”; (3) seauton, “(as) thyself,” Rom. 13:9; seautou, “of thyself,” e.g., Matt. 4:6; seauto, “to thyself,” Acts 16:28; (4) heautou (with apo, “from”), John 18:34, “of thyself,” lit., “from thyself”; (5) autos, “self,” is sometimes used for “thyself,” e.g., Luke 6:42.

THYINE (WOOD)

thuinos (θύϊνος, 2367) is akin to thuia, or thua, an African aromatic and coniferous tree; in Rev. 18:12 it describes a wood which formed part of the merchandise of Babylon; it was valued by Greeks and Romans for tables, being hard, durable and fragrant (KJV marg., “sweet”).¶

TIDINGS

phasis (φάσις, 5334), akin to phemi, “to speak,” denotes “information,” especially against fraud or other delinquency, and is rendered “tidings” in Acts 21:31.¶

Note: In Acts 11:22, KJV, logos, “a word, a report” (RV), is rendered “tidings.”

B. Verbs.

1. euangelizo (εὐαγγελίζω, 2097) is used of any message designed to cheer those who receive it; it is rendered “to bring, declare, preach,” or “show good or glad tidings,” e.g., Luke 1:19; 2:10; 3:18, RV; 4:43, RV; 7:22, RV; 8:1; Acts 8:12 and 10:36, RV; 14:15, RV; in 1 Thess. 3:6, “brought us glad (KJV, good) tidings”; in Heb. 4:2, RV, “we have had good tidings preached”; similarly, 4:6; in 1 Pet. 1:25 rhema, “a word,” is coupled with this verb, “the word of good tidings which was preached,” RV (KJV, “the word which by the gospel is preached”). See PREACH, A, No. 1.

2. anangelo (ἀναγγέλλω, 312), “to announce, declare,” is rendered “(no) tidings ... came,” in Rom. 15:21, RV, KJV, “was (not) spoken of. See TELL.

TIE

1. deo (δέω, 1210), “to bind,” is rendered “to tie” in Matt. 21:2; Mark 11:2, 4; Luke 19:30. See BIND.

2. proteino (προτείνω, 4385), “to stretch out or forth,” is used of preparations for scourging, Acts 22:25, RV, “had tied (him) up” (KJV, “bound”).¶

TILES, TILING

keramos (κέραμος, 2766), “potter’s clay,” or “an earthen vessel,” denotes in the plural “tiles” in Luke 5:19, RV, KJV, “tiling.”¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 17:25.¶

For TILL (Conjunction) see †, p. 1

TILL (Verb)

georgéo (γεωργέω, 1090), “to till the ground,” is used in the passive voice in Heb. 6:7, RV, “it is tilled” (KJV, “.. dressed”).¶ Moulton and Milligan point out that, agriculture being the principal industry in Egypt, this word and its cognates (georgion, see HUSBANDRY, and georgos, see HUSBANDMAN) are very common in the papyri with reference to the cultivation of private allotments and the crown lands.

TIME

A. Nouns.

1. chronos (χρόνος, 5550) denotes “a space of time,” whether short, e.g., Matt. 2:7; Luke 4:5, or long, e.g., Luke 8:27; 20:9; or a succession of “times,” shorter, e.g., Acts 20:18, or longer, e.g., Rom. 16:25, RV, “times eternal”; or duration of “time,” e.g., Mark 2:19, 2nd part, RV, “while” (KJV, “as long as”), lit., “for whatever time.” For a fuller treatment see SEASON, A, No. 2.

2. kairos (καιρός, 2540), primarily “due measure, due proportion,” when used of “time,” signified “a fixed or definite period, a season,” sometimes an opportune or seasonable “time,” e.g., Rom. 5:6, RV, “season”; Gal. 6:10, “opportunity.” In Mark 10:30 and Luke 18:30, “this time” (kairos), i.e., “in this lifetime,” is contrasted with “the coming age.” In 1 Thess. 5:1, “the times and the seasons,” “times” (chronos) refers to the duration of the interval previous to the Parousia of Christ and the length of “time” it will occupy (see COMING, No. 3), as well as other periods; “seasons” refers to the characteristics of these periods. See SEASON, A, No. 1, and the contrasts between chronos and kairos under SEASON, A, No. 2.

3. hora (ώρα, 5610), primarily, “any time or period fixed by nature,” is translated “time” in Matt. 14:15; Luke 14:17; Rom. 13:11, “high time”; in the following the RV renders it “hour,” for KJV, “time,” Matt. 18:1; Luke 1:10; John 16:2, 4, 25; 1 John 2:18 (twice); Rev. 14:15; in Mark 6:35, RV, “day”; in 1 Thess. 2:17, RV, “a short (season),” lit., “(the season, KJV, ‘time’) of an hour.” See HOUR.

B. Adverbs.

1. popote (πώποτε, 4455), “ever yet,” is rendered “at any time” in John 1:18; 5:37; 1 John 4:12. For Luke 15:29 see Note (14), below. See NEVER.

2. ede (ἤδη, 2235), “already, now,” is translated “by this time” in John 11:39. See ALREADY.

3. palai (πάλαι, 3819), “long ago, of old,” is rendered “of old time” in Heb. 1:1 (KJV, “in time past”). See OLD.

Notes: (1) In Luke 9:51 and Acts 8:1, KJV, hemera, “a day,” is translated “time,” in the former, plural, RV, “the days”; in Luke 23:7 (plural), RV “(in these) days,” KJV, “(at that) time.” (2) In 1 Tim. 6:19 the phrase eis to mellon, lit., “unto the about-to-be,” i.e., “for the impending (time),” is rendered “against the time to come.” (3) In 1 Cor. 16:12, KJV, nun, “now” (RV), is rendered “at this time”; in Acts 24:25, the phrase to nun echon, lit., “the now having,” is rendered “at this time” (the verb is adjectival); the phrase is more expressive than the simple “now.” Cf. heos tou nun, “until now,” Matt. 24:21 and Mark 13:19, RV, KJV, “unto (this time).” (4) For polumeros, strangely rendered “at sundry times,” in Heb. 1:1, KJV, see PORTION, C. (5) For “long time,” see LONG. (6) For “nothing ... at any time,” see NOTHING, Note (3). (7) For proskairos, rendered “for a time” in Mark 4:17, KJV, see SEASON, WHILE. (8) In Matt., apo tote, “from that time,” lit., “from then,” occurs thrice, 4:17; 16:21; 26:16; in Luke 16:16, RV (KJV, “since that time”); in John 6:66, KJV, “from that time” translates ek toutou, lit., “from, or out of, this,” RV, “upon this.” (9) In Luke 4:27, the preposition epi signifies “in the time of.” (10) For genea, rendered “times” in Acts 14:16, “time” in 15:21, see AGE, No. 2 (RV, “generations”). (11), For “at every time,” 2 Pet. 1:15, RV, see ALWAYS, No. 2. (12), For “in time of need, Heb. 4:16, see CONVENIENT, and NEED, C, Note. (13), In Heb. 2:1, pote signifies “at any time”; in 1 Pet. 3:5, “in the old time”; in 2 Pet. 1:21, “in old time.” See PAST. In the following where the KJV has “sometimes” the RV has “once” in Eph. 2:13 and 5:8; “aforetime” in Titus 3:3. (14), In Luke 15:29, KJV, oudepote, “never,” is rendered “neither ... at any time” (RV, “never”). (15), For eukaireo, “to spend time, Acts 17:21, see SPEND, No. 10. (16), For chronotribeo, “to spend time,” see SPEND, No. 11. (17), For prolego, rendered “told ... in time past,” in Gal. 5:21, KJV, see FOREWARN. (18), In Luke 12:1, “in the mean time” is a rendering of the phrase en hois, lit., “in which (things or circumstances).” (19), In Rev. 5:11 there is no word representing “times”: see THOUSAND, Note (2). (20), In Gal. 4:2 prothesmios (in its feminine form, with hemera, “day,” understood) is rendered “time appointed” (see APPOINT, No. 3 and Note, TERM).

For TINKLING see CLANGING

TIP

akron (ἄκρον, 206), “the top, an extremity,” is translated “tip” in Luke 16:24. See END, C, Note (6), TOP.

For TITHES (Noun) see TENTH, No. 2

TITHE (Verb)

1. dekatoō (δεκατόω, 1183), from dekatos, “tenth”, in the active voice denotes “to take tithes of,” Heb. 7:6, RV, “hath taken (KJV, received) tithes”; in the passive, “to pay tithes,” 7:9, RV, “hath paid (KJV, ‘payed’) tithes.”¶ In the Sept., Neh. 10:37.¶

2. apodekatoō (ἀποδεκατόω, 586) denotes (a) “to tithe” (apo, “from,” dekatos, “tenth”), Matt. 23:23 (KJV, “pay tithe of”); Luke 11:42; in Luke 18:12 (where the best texts have the alternative form apodekateuo), “I give tithes”; (b) “to exact tithes” from Heb. 7:5.¶

3. apodekateuo (ἀποδεκατόω, 586v), “to give tithes,” in Luke 18:12 (some texts have No. 2).¶

Note: Heb. 7:4-9 shows the superiority of the Melchizedek priesthood to the Levitical, in that (1) Abraham, the ancestor of the Levites, paid “tithes” to Melchizedek (Gen. 14:20); (2) Melchizedek, whose genealogy is outside that of the Levites, took “tithes” of Abraham, the recipient himself of the divine promises; (3) whereas death is the natural lot of those who receive “tithes,” the death of Melchizedek is not recorded; (4) the Levites who received “tithes” virtually paid them through Abraham to Melchizedek.

TITLE

titlos (τίτλος, 5102), from Latin titulus, is used of the inscription above the cross of Christ, John 19:19, 20. See SUPERScription.¶

TITTLE

keraia or kerea (κεραία, 2762), “a little horn” (keras, “a horn”), was used to denote the small stroke distinguishing one Hebrew letter from another. The rabbis attached great importance to these; hence the significance of the Lord’s statements in Matt. 5:18 and Luke 16:17, charging the Pharisees with hypocrisy, because, while professing the most scrupulous reverence to the Law, they violated its spirit.

Grammarians used the word to denote the accents in Greek words.

For TO see †, p. 1

TODAY, THIS DAY

semeron (σήμερον, 4594), an adverb (the Attic form is temeron), akin to hemera, a day, with the prefix t originally representing a pronoun. It is used frequently in Matthew, Luke and Acts; in the last it is always rendered “this day”; also in Heb. 1:5, and the RV of 5:5 (KJV, “to day”) in the same quotation; “today” in 3:7, 13, 15; 4:7 (twice); 13:8; also Jas. 4:13.

The clause containing semeron is sometimes introduced by the conjunction hoti, “that,” e.g., Mark 14:30; Luke 4:21; 19:9; sometimes without the conjunction, e.g., Luke 22:34; 23:43, where “today” is to be attached to the next statement, “shalt thou be with Me”; there are no grammatical reasons for the insistence that the connection must be with the statement “Verily I say unto thee,” nor is such an idea necessitated by examples from either the Sept. or the NT; the connection given in the KJV and RV is right.

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

In Rom. 11:8 and 2 Cor. 3:14, 15, the lit. rendering is “unto the today day,” the emphasis being brought out by the RV, “unto (until) this very day.”

In Heb. 4:7, the “today” of Ps. 95:7 is evidently designed to extend to the present period of the Christian faith.

TOGETHER

1. homou (ὁμοῦ, 3674), used in connection with place, in John 21:2; Acts 2:1 (in the best texts), RV, “together” (KJV, “with one accord,” translating the inferior reading homothumadon: see ACCORD, A), is used without the idea of place in John 4:36; 20:4.¶

2. hama (ἅμα, 260), “at once,” is translated “together” in Rom. 3:12; 1 Thess. 4:17; 5:10. See EARLY, Note, WITHAL.

Notes: (1) For pamphlethei, Luke 23:18, RV, see ONCE, Note. (2) In 1 Thess. 5:11, KJV, allelous, “one another” (RV), is rendered “yourselves together”; in Luke 23:12, KJV, meta allelon, lit., “with one another,” is rendered “together” (RV, “with each other”); so in Luke 24:14, KJV, pros allelous, RV, “with each other.” (3) In the following, “together” translates the phrase epi to auto, lit., “to (upon, or for) the same,” Matt. 22:34; Luke 17:35; Acts 1:15; 2:44 (3:1, in some texts); 4:26; 1 Cor. 7:5; 14:23, RV: see PLACE, A, Note (7). (4) In Acts 14:1, it translates kata to auto, “at the same”; it may mean “in the same way” (i.e., as they had entered the synagogue at Pisidian Antioch). (5) In many cases “together” forms part of another word.

TOIL (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. kopiao (κοπιᾶω, 2872), “to be weary, to labor,” is rendered “to toil” in Matt. 6:28; Luke 5:5 (12:27), in some mss.; in 1 Cor. 4:12, RV (KJV, “we labor”). See LABOR

2. basanizo (βασανίζω, 928), primarily, “to rub on the touchstone, to put to the test,” then, “to examine by torture” (basanos, “touchstone, torment”), hence denotes “to torture, torment, distress”; in the passive voice it is rendered “toiling” in Mark 6:48, KJV (RV, “distressed”). See PAIN, TORMENT, VEX.

B. Noun.

kopos (κόπος, 2873), “labor, trouble,” is rendered “toil” in Rev. 2:2, RV (KJV, “labor”). See LABOR.

TOKEN

1. semeion (σημεῖον, 4592), “a sign, token or indication,” is translated “token” in 2 Thess. 3:17, of writing of the closing salutations, the apostle using the pen himself instead of his amanuensis, his autograph attesting the authenticity of his Epistles. See MIRACLE, SIGN.

2. sussemon (σύσσημον, 4953), “a fixed sign or signal, agreed upon with others” (sun, “with”), is used in Mark 14:44, “a token.”¶ In the Sept., Judg. 20:38, 40; Isa. 5:26; 49:22; 62:10.¶

3. endeigma (ἐνδειγμα, 1730), “a plain token, a proof” (akin to endeiknumi, “to point out, prove”), is used in 2 Thess. 1:5 “a manifest token,” said of the patient endurance and faith of the persecuted saints at Thessalonica, affording proof to themselves of their new life, and a guarantee of the vindication by God of both Himself and them (see No. 4, Note).¶

4. endeixis (ἐνδειξις, 1732), “a pointing out, showing forth,” is rendered “evident token” in Phil. 1:28. See DECLARE, B, PROOF. Cf. apodeixis, 1 Cor. 2:4.

Note: No. 4 refers to the act or process of proving, No. 3 to the thing proved. While the two passages, Phil. 1:28 and 2 Thess. 1:5, contain similar ideas, endeigma indicates the “token” as acknowledged by those referred to; endeixis points more especially to the inherent veracity of the “token.”

TOLERABLE

anektos (ἀνεκτότερος, 414) (akin to anecho, in the middle voice, “to endure,” see ENDURE, No. 5) is used in its comparative form, anektoteros, in Matt. 10:15; 11:22, 24; Luke 10:12, 14; some texts have it in Mark 6:11.¶

For TOLL see CUSTOM (TOLL)

TOMB

1. mnemeion (μνημεῖον, 3419) is almost invariably rendered “tomb” or “tombs” in the RV, never “grave,” sometimes “sepulchre”; in the KJV, “tomb” in Matt. 8:28; 27:60; Mark 5:2; 6:29. See GRAVE No. 1, SEPULCHRE.

2. mnema (μνήμα, 3418), rendered “tombs” in Mark 5:3, 5; Luke 8:27: see GRAVE, No. 2, SEPULCHRE.

3. taphos (τάφος, 5028), akin to thapto, “to bury,” is translated “tombs” in Matt. 23:29; elsewhere “sepulchre.” See SEPULCHRE.

TOMORROW

aurion (αὔριον, 839) is used either without the article, e.g., Matt. 6:30; 1 Cor. 15:32; Jas. 4:13; or with the article in the feminine form, to agree with hemera, “day,” e.g., Matt. 6:34; Acts 4:3, RV, “the morrow” (KJV, “next day”); Jas. 4:14; preceded by epi, “on,” e.g., Luke 10:35; Acts 4:5.

TONGUE (-S)

A. Nouns.

1. glossa (γλῶσσα, 1100) is used of (1) the “tongues ... like as of fire” which appeared at Pentecost; (2) “the tongue,” as an organ of speech, e.g., Mark 7:33; Rom. 3:13; 14:11; 1 Cor. 14:9; Phil. 2:11; Jas. 1:26; 3:5, 6, 8; 1 Pet. 3:10; 1 John 3:18; Rev. 16:10; (3) (a) “a language,” coupled with phule, “a tribe,” laos, “a people,” ethnos, “a nation,” seven times in the Apocalypse, 5:9; 7:9; 10:11; 11:9; 13:7; 14:6; 17:15; (b) “the supernatural gift of speaking in another language without its having been learnt”; in Acts 2:4-13 the circumstances are recorded from the viewpoint of the hearers; to those in whose language the utterances were made it appeared as a supernatural phenomenon; to others, the stammering of drunkards; what was uttered was not addressed primarily to the audience but consisted in recounting “the mighty works of God”; cf. 2:46; in 1 Cor., chapters 12 and 14, the use of the gift of “tongues” is mentioned as exercised in the gatherings of local churches; 12:10 speaks of the gift in general terms, and couples with it that of “the interpretation of tongues”; chapt. 14 gives instruction concerning the use of the gift, the paramount object being the edification of the church; unless the “tongue” was interpreted the speaker would speak “not unto men, but unto God,” v. 2; he would edify himself alone, v. 4, unless he interpreted, v. 5, in which case his interpretation would be of the same value as the superior gift of prophesying, as he would edify the church, vv. 4-6; he must pray that he may interpret, v. 13; if there were no interpreter, he must keep silence, v. 28, for all things were to be done “unto edifying,” v. 26. “If I come ... speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you,” says the apostle (expressing the great object in all oral ministry), “unless I speak to you either by way of revelation, or of knowledge, or of prophesying, or of teaching?” (v. 6). “Tongues” were for a sign, not to believers, but to unbelievers, v. 22, and especially to unbelieving Jews (see v. 21): cf. the passages in the Acts.

There is no evidence of the continuance of this gift after apostolic times nor indeed in the later times of the apostles themselves; this provides confirmation of the fulfillment in this way of 1 Cor. 13:8, that this gift would cease in the churches, just as would “prophecies” and “knowledge” in the sense of knowledge received by immediate supernatural power (cf. 14:6). The completion of the Holy Scriptures has provided the churches with all that is necessary for individual and collective guidance, instruction, and edification.

2. dialektos (διάλεκτος, 1258), “language” (Eng., “dialect”), is rendered “tongue” in the KJV of Acts 1:19; 2:6, 8; 21:40; 22:2; 26:14. See LANGUAGE.¶

B. Adjective.

heteroglossos (Κλαύδιος, 2804) is rendered “strange tongues” in 1 Cor. 14:21, RV (heteros, “another of a different sort”—see ANOTHER—and A, No. 1), KJV, other tongues.¶

C. Adverb.

hebraisti (or ebraisti, Westcott and Hort) (Ἑβραϊστί, 1447) denotes (a) “in Hebrew,” Rev. 9:11, RV (KV, “in the Hebrew tongue”); so 16:16; (b) in the Aramaic vernacular of Palestine, John 5:2, KJV, “in the Hebrew tongue” (RV, “in Hebrew”); in 19:13, 17, KJV, “in the Hebrew” (RV, “in Hebrew”); in v. 20, KJV and RV, “in Hebrew”; in 20:16, RV only, “in Hebrew (Rabboni).”¶

Note: Cf. Hellenisti, “in Greek,” John 19:20, RV; Acts 21:37, “Greek.”¶ See also Rhomaisti, under LATIN.

TOOTH, TEETH

odous (ὀδοός, 3599) is used in the sing. in Matt. 5:38 (twice); elsewhere in the plural, of “the gnashing of teeth,” the gnashing being expressive of anguish and indignation, Matt. 8:12; 13:42, 50; 22:13; 24:51; 25:30; Mark 9:18; Luke 13:28; Acts 7:54; in Rev. 9:8, of the beings seen in a vision and described as locusts.¶

TOP

A. Noun.

akron (ἄκρον, 206), for which see TIP, is used of Jacob's staff, Heb. 11:21.

B. Phrases.

Note: In Matt. 27:51 and Mark 15:38, apo anothēn, “from the top” (lit., “from above”), is used of the upper part of the Temple veil. In John 19:23, the different phrase ek ton anothēn is used of the weaving of the Lord's garment (the chiton: see CLOTHING), lit., “from the parts above.”

TOPAZ

topazion (τοπάζιον, 5116) is mentioned in Rev. 21:20, as the ninth of the foundation stones of the wall of the heavenly Jerusalem; the stone is of a yellow color (though there are topazes of other colors) and is almost as hard as the diamond. It has the power of double refraction, and when heated or rubbed becomes electric.¶ In the Sept., Ex. 28:17; 39:10; Job 28:19; Ps. 119:127, “(gold and) topaz”; Ezek. 28:13.¶

TORCH

lampas (λαμπάς, 2985), “a torch,” is used in the plur. and translated “torches” in John 18:3; in Rev. 8:10, RV, “torch” (KJV, “lamp”). See LAMP.

TORMENT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. basanismos (βασανισμός, 929), akin to basanizo (see TOIL, No. 2), is used of divine judgments in Rev. 9:5; 14:11; 18:7, 10, 15.¶

2. basanos (βάσανος, 931), primarily “a touchstone,” employed in testing metals, hence, “torment,” is used (a) of physical diseases, Matt. 4:24: (b) of a condition of retribution in Hades, Luke 16:23, 28.¶

Note: In 1 John 4:18, KJV, kolasis, “punishment” (RV), is rendered “torment.” See PUNISHMENT, No. 3.

B. Verbs.

1. basanizo (βασανίζω, 928), for which see TOIL, No. 2, is translated “to torment,” (a) of sickness, Matt. 8:6; (b) of the doom of evil spirits, Mark 5:7; Luke 8:28; (c) of retributive judgments upon impenitent mankind at the close of this age, Rev. 9:5; 11:10; (d) upon those who worship the Beast and his image and receive the mark of his name, 14:10; (e) of the doom of Satan and his agents, 20:10.

2. kakoucheo (κακουχέω, 2558), “to treat evilly,” in the passive voice is translated “tormented” in Heb. 11:37, KJV (RV, “evil entreated”). See SUFFER, No. 6.

3. odunao (ὀδυνάω, 3600), for which see ANGUISH, B, No. 3, in the passive voice is rendered “I am (thou art) tormented” in Luke 16:24, 25, KJV.

TORMENTOR

basanistes (βασανιστής, 930), properly, “a torturer” (akin to basanizo, see TORMENT, B), “one who elicits information by torture,” is used of jailors, Matt. 18:34.¶

TORTURE (Verb)

tumpanizo (τυμπανίζω, 5178) primarily denotes “to beat a drum” (tumpanon, “a kettledrum,” Eng., “tympanal,” “tympanitis,” “tympanum”), hence, “to torture by beating, to beat to death,” Heb. 11:35.¶ In the Sept., 1 Sam. 21:13, “(David) drummed (upon the doors of the city).”¶ The tympanum as an instrument of “torture” seems to have been a wheel-shaped frame upon which criminals were stretched and beaten with clubs or thongs.

TOSS

1. rhipizo (ρίπίζω, 4494), primarily “to fan a fire” (rhapis, “a fan,” cf. rhipe, “twinkling”), then, “to make a breeze,” is used in the passive voice in Jas. 1:6, “tossed,” of the raising of waves by the wind.¶

2. kludonizomai (κλυδωνίζομαι, 2831) signifies “to be tossed by billows” (kludon, “a billow”); metaphorically, in Eph. 4:14, of an unsettled condition of mind influenced and agitated by one false teaching and another, and characterized by that immaturity which lacks the firm conviction begotten by the truth.¶ In the Sept., Isa. 57:20.¶

Note: For “being ... tossed,” Acts 27:18, See LABOR, B, No. 2.

TOUCH (Verb)

1. hapto (ἅπτω, 681), primarily, “to fasten to,” hence, of fire, “to kindle,” denotes, in the middle voice (a) “to touch,” e.g., Matt. 8:3, 15; 9:20, 21, 29; (b) “to cling to, lay hold of,” John 20:17; here the Lord’s prohibition as to clinging to Him was indicative of the fact that communion with Him would, after His ascension, be by faith, through the Spirit; (c) “to have carnal intercourse with a woman,” 1 Cor. 7:1; (d) “to have fellowship and association with unbelievers,” 2 Cor. 6:17; (e) (negatively) “to adhere to certain Levitical and ceremonial ordinances,” in order to avoid contracting external defilement, or to practice rigorous asceticism, all such abstentions being of “no value against the indulgence of the flesh,” Col. 2:21, KJV (RV, “handle”); (f) “to assault,” in order to sever the vital union between Christ and the believer, said of the attack of the Evil One, 1 John 5:18. See HANDLE, No. 2, KINDLE, LIGHT.

2. thingano (θιγγάνω, 2345), “to touch,” a lighter term than No. 1, though Heb. 11:28 approximates to it, in expressing the action of the Destroyer of the Egyptian firstborn; in Heb. 12:20 it signifies “to touch,” and is not to be interpreted by Ps. 104:32, “He toucheth (No. 1 in the Sept.) the hills and they smoke”; in Col. 2:21, RV (KJV, handle). See HANDLE, No. 2.¶

3. prospsauro (προσψάύω, 4379), “to touch upon, to touch slightly,” occurs in Luke 11:46.¶

4. pselaphao (ψηλαφάω, 5584), “to feel, to handle,” is rendered “that might be touched” in Heb. 12:18. See FEEL, No. 3, HANDLE, No. 1.

5. katago (κατάγω, 2609), to bring down, is used of bringing a ship to land in Acts 27:3. See BRING No. 16.

6. sumpatheo (συμπαθέω, 4834), for which see COMPASSION, A, No. 3, is rendered “be touched with” in Heb. 4:15.

7. paraballo (παραβάλλω, 3846), for which see ARRIVE, No. 4, COMPARE, No. 2, is rendered “touched at” in Acts 20:15, RV.

For TOUCHING (Preposition) see †, p. 1

For TOWARD (Preposition), see †, p. 1

TOWEL

lention (λέντιον, 3012) denotes “a linen cloth or towel” (Lat., linteum), as used by the Lord, John 13:4, 5; it was commonly used by servants in a household.¶

TOWER

purgos (πύργος, 4444) is used of “a watchtower in a vineyard,” Matt. 21:33; Mark 12:1; probably, too, in Luke 14:28 (cf. Isa. 5:2); in Luke 13:4, of the “tower in Siloam,” the modern Silwan, which is built on a steep escarpment of rock.¶

TOWN

1. komopolis (κωμόπολις, 2969), denotes a country town,” Mark 1:38, “a large village” usually without walls.¶

2. kome (κώμη, 2968), “a village,” or “country town without walls.” The RV always renders this “village” or “villages,” KJV, “town” or “towns,” Matt. 10:11; Mark 8:23, 26 (twice), 27; Luke 5:17; 9:6, 12; John 7:42; 11:1, 30. See VILLAGE.

TOWN CLERK

grammateus (γραμματεὺς, 1122), “a writer, scribe,” is used in Acts 19:35 of a state “clerk,” an important official, variously designated, according to inscriptions found in Graeco-Asiatic cities. He was responsible for the form of decrees first approved by the Senate, then sent for approval in the popular assembly, in which he often presided. The decrees having been passed, he sealed them with the public seal in the presence of witnesses. Such an assembly frequently met in the theater. The Roman administration viewed any irregular or unruly assembly as a grave and even capital offense, as tending to strengthen among the people the consciousness of their power and the desire to exercise it. In the circumstances at Ephesus the town clerk feared that he might himself be held responsible for the irregular gathering. See SCRIBE.

TRACE

A. Verb.

parakoloutheo (παρακολουθέω, 3877), “to follow up,” is used of investigating or “tracing” a course of events, Luke 1:3, where the writer, humbly differentiating himself from those who possessed an essential apostolic qualification, declares that he “traced the course of all things” (RV) about which he was writing (KJV, “having had ... understanding, etc.”). See FOLLOW, No. 5.

B. Adjective.

anexichniastos (ἀνεξιχνίαστος, 421) signifies “that cannot be traced out” (a, negative, ex, for ek, “out,” ichnos, “a track”), is rendered “past tracing out” in Rom. 11:33, RV (KJV, “past finding out”); in Eph. 3:8, “unsearchable.” See FIND, Note (3), UNSEARCHABLE.¶ In the Sept., Job 5:9; 9:10; 34:24.¶

TRADE (Noun and Verb)

A. Verbs.

1. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038), “to work,” is rendered “traded” in Matt. 25:16; in Rev. 18:17, KJV, “trade,” RV, “gain their living.” See COMMIT, DO, LABOR, B, Note (1), MINISTER, WORK.

2. pragmateuomai (πραγματεύομαι, 4231) is rendered “trade ye” in Luke 19:13, RV, which adds “herewith”: see OCCUPY.¶

3. diapragmateuomai (διαπραγματεύομαι, 1281), “to accomplish by traffic, to gain by trading,” occurs in Luke 19:15.¶

4. emporeuomai (ἐμπορεύομαι, 1710) is rendered “trade” in Jas. 4:13, RV: see BUY, Note, MERCHANDISE, B.

B. Nouns.

1. techne (τέχνη, 5078), “an art” (Eng., “technique,” “technical”), is used in Acts 18:3 (2nd part) of a “trade,” RV (KJV, “occupation”). For the 1st part see Note below. See ART.

2. meros (μέρος, 3313), “a portion,” is used of “a trade” in Acts 19:27. See CRAFT, No. 5.

Note: For the adjective homotechnos, “of the same trade,” Acts 18:3, 1st part, RV, see CRAFT, No. 4.¶

TRADITION

paradosis (παράδοσις, 3862), “a handing down or on” (akin to paradidomi, “to hand over, deliver”), denotes “a tradition,” and hence, by metonymy, (a) “the teachings of the rabbis,” interpretations of the Law, which was thereby made void in practice, Matt. 15:2, 3, 6; Mark 7:3, 5, 8, 9, 13; Gal. 1:14; Col. 2:8; (b) of “apostolic teaching,” 1 Cor. 11:2, RV, “traditions” (KJV, “ordinances”), of instructions concerning the gatherings of believers (instructions of wider scope than ordinances in the limited sense); in 2 Thess. 2:15, of Christian doctrine in general, where the apostle’s use of the word constitutes a denial that what he preached originated with himself, and a claim for its divine authority (cf. paralambano, “to receive,” 1 Cor. 11:23; 15:3); in 2 Thess. 3:6, it is used of instructions concerning everyday conduct.¶

For TRAIN, Titus 2:4, RV, see SOBER, B, No. 3

TRAITOR

prodotes (προδότης, 4273) denotes “a betrayer, traitor”; the latter term is assigned to Judas, virtually as a title, in Luke 6:16; in 2 Tim. 3:4 it occurs in a list of evil characters, foretold as abounding in the last days. See BETRAY, B.

TRAMPLE

katapateo (καταπατέω, 2662), “to tread down, trample under foot,” is rendered “trample in Matt. 7:6. See TREAD, No. 2.

TRANCE

ekstasis (ἔκστασις, 1611), for which see AMAZE, A, No. 1, denotes “a trance” in Acts 10:10; 11:5; 22:17, a condition in which ordinary consciousness and the perception of natural circumstances were withheld, and the soul was susceptible only to the vision imparted by God.

For TRANQUIL, 1 Tim. 2:2, RV, see QUIET, No. 1

TRANSFIGURE

metamorphoo (μεταμορφόω, 3339), “to change into another form” (meta, implying change, and morphe, “form:” see FORM, No. 1), is used in the passive voice (a) of Christ’s “transfiguration,” Matt. 17:2; Mark 9:2; Luke (in 9:29) avoids this term, which might have suggested to gentile readers the metamorphoses of heathen gods, and uses the phrase egeneto heteron, “was altered”, lit., “became (ginomai) different (heteros)”; (b) of believers, Rom. 12:2, “be ye transformed,” the obligation being to undergo a complete change which, under the power of God, will find expression in character and conduct; morphe lays stress on the inward change, schema (see the preceding verb in that verse, suschematizo) lays stress on the outward (see FASHION, No. 3, FORM, No. 2); the present continuous tenses indicate a process; 2 Cor. 3:18 describes believers as being “transformed (RV) into the same image” (i.e., of Christ in all His moral excellencies), the change being effected by the Holy Spirit.¶

TRANSFORM

1. metamorphoo (μεταμορφόω, 3339) is rendered “transformed” in Rom. 12:2: see TRANSFIGURE.

2. metaschematizo (μετασχηματίζω, 3345) in the passive voice is rendered “to be transformed” in the KJV of 2 Cor. 11:13, 14, 15: see FASHION, C, No. 1.

TRANSGRESS, TRANSGRESSION

A. Verbs.

1. parabaino (παραβαίνω, 3845), lit., “to go aside” (para), hence “to go beyond,” is chiefly used metaphorically of “transgressing” the tradition of the elders, Matt. 15:2; the commandment of God, 15:3; in Acts 1:25, of Judas, KJV, “by transgression fell” (RV, “fell away”); in 2 John 9 some texts have this verb (KJV, “transgresseth”), the best have proago (see GO, No. 10).¶

2. hyperbaino (ὑπερβαίνω, 5233), lit., “to go over” (hyper), used metaphorically and rendered “transgress” in 1 Thess. 4:6 (KJV, “go beyond”), i.e., of “overstepping” the limits separating chastity from licentiousness, sanctification from sin.¶

3. parerchomai (παρέρχομαι, 3928), “to come by” (para, “by,” erchomai, “to come”), “pass over,” and hence, metaphorically, “to transgress,” is so used in Luke 15:29. See COME, No. 9, PASS.

B. Nouns.

1. parabasis (παράβασις, 3847), akin to A, No. 1, primarily “a going aside,” then, “an overstepping,” is used metaphorically to denote “transgression” (always of a breach of law): (a) of Adam, Rom. 5:14; (b) of Eve, 1 Tim. 2:14; (c) negatively, where there is no law, since “transgression” implies the violation of law, none having been enacted between Adam’s “transgression” and those under the Law, Rom. 4:15; (d) of

2. paranomia (παράνομία, 3892), “lawbreaking” (para, “contrary to,” nomos, “law”), is rendered “transgression” in 2 Pet. 2:16, RV (KJV, “iniquity”).¶

Note: In 1 John 3:4 (1st part), KJV, poieo, “to do,” with anomia, “lawlessness,” is rendered “transgresseth ... the law” (RV, “doeth ... lawlessness”); in the 2nd part anomia alone is rendered “transgression of the law,” KJV (RV, “lawlessness”).

TRANSGRESSOR

1. parabates (παράβατης, 3848), lit. and primarily, “one who stands beside,” then, “one who oversteps the prescribed limit, a transgressor” (akin to parabaino, “to transgress,” see above); so Rom. 2:25, RV (KJV, “a breaker”); v. 27, RV, “a transgressor” (KJV, “dost transgress”); Gal. 2:18; Jas. 2:9, 11.¶

Note: Hamartolos, “a sinner, one who misses the mark,” is applicable to all men without distinction; parabates stresses the positive side of sin, and is applicable to those who received the Law.

2. anomos (ἄνομος, 459), “without law” (a-, negative), is translated “transgressors” in Luke 22:37 (in some texts, Mark 15:28), in a quotation from Isa. 53:12. See LAW, C, No. 3, LAWLESS, A.

TRANSLATE, TRANSLATION

A. Verbs.

1. methistemi or methistano (μεθίστημι, 3179), “to change, remove” (meta, implying “change,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), is rendered “hath translated” in Col. 1:13. See PUT, REMOVE, TURN (away).

2. metatithemi (μετατίθημι, 3346), “to transfer to another place” (meta, see above, tithemi, “to put”), is rendered “to translate” in Heb. 11:5 (twice). See CARRY, CHANGE, REMOVE, TURN.

B. Noun.

metathesis (μετάθεσις, 3331), “a change of position” (akin to A, No. 2), is rendered “translation” in Heb. 11:5. See CHANGE, REMOVING.

For TRANSPARENT, Rev. 21:21, see DAWN, A, No. 2, Note

TRAP

thera (θήρα, 2339) denotes “a hunting, chase,” then, “a prey”; hence, figuratively, of “preparing destruction by a net or trap,” Rom. 11:9.¶

TRAVAIL (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. mochthos (μόχθος, 3449), “labor, involving painful effort,” is rendered “travail” in 2 Cor. 11:27, RV (KJV, “painfulness”); in 1 Thess. 2:9 and 2 Thess. 3:8 it stresses the toil involved in the work.¶

2. odin (ὠδίν, 5604), a birth pang, “travail pain,” is used illustratively in 1 Thess. 5:3 of the calamities which are to come upon men at the beginning of the Day of the Lord; the figure used suggests the inevitableness of the catastrophe. See PAIN, No. 2, SORROW.

B. Verbs.

1. odino (ὠδίνω, 5605), akin to A, No. 2, is used negatively in Gal. 4:27, “(thou) that travailest (not),” quoted from Isa. 54:1; the apostle applies the circumstances of Sarah and Hagar (which doubtless Isaiah was recalling) to show that, whereas the promise by grace had temporarily been replaced by the works of the Law (see Gal. 3:17), this was now reversed, and, in the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham, the number of those saved by the gospel would far exceed those who owned allegiance to the Law. Isa. 54 has primary reference to the future prosperity of Israel restored to God’s favor, but frequently the principles underlying events recorded in the OT extend beyond their immediate application.

In 4:19 the apostle uses it metaphorically of a second travailing on his part regarding the churches of Galatia; his first was for their deliverance from idolatry (v. 8), now it was for their deliverance from bondage to Judaism. There is no suggestion here of a second regeneration necessitated by defection. There is a hint of reproach, as if he was enquiring whether they had ever heard of a mother experiencing second birth pangs for her children.

In Rev. 12:2 the woman is figurative of Israel; the circumstances of her birth pangs are mentioned in Isa. 66:7 (see also Micah 5:2, 3). Historically the natural order is reversed. The Manchild, Christ, was brought forth at His first advent; the travail is destined to take place in “the time of Jacob’s trouble,” the “great tribulation,” Matt. 24:21; Rev. 7:14. The object in 12:2 in referring to the birth of Christ is to connect Him with His earthly people Israel in their future time of trouble, from which the godly remnant, the nucleus of the restored nation, is to be delivered (Jer. 30:7).¶

2. sunodino (συνωδίνω, 4944), “to be in travail together,” is used metaphorically in Rom. 8:22, of the whole creation.¶

3. tikto (τίκτω, 5088), “to beget,” is rendered “travail” in John 16:21.

For TRAVEL (companions in), Acts 19:29, and (TRAVEL WITH), 2 Cor. 8:19, see COMPANION, No. 1.

TRAVEL

dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), “to go or pass through,” is translated “travelled” in Acts 11:19. See COME, No. 5.

Note: For apodemeo, rendered “travelling” in Matt. 25:14, KJV, see GO, No. 27.

TREAD, TRODE, TRODDEN

1. pateo (πατέω, 3961) is used (a) intransitively and figuratively, of “treading” upon serpents, Luke 10:19; (b) transitively, of “treading” on, down or under, of the desecration of Jerusalem by its foes, Luke 21:24; Rev. 11:2; of the avenging, by the Lord in Person hereafter, of this desecration and of the persecution of the Jews, in divine retribution, metaphorically spoken of as the “treading” of the winepress of God’s wrath, Rev. 14:20; 19:15 (cf. Isa. 63:2, 3).¶

2. katapateo (καταπατέω, 2662), “to tread down, trample under foot,” is used (a) literally, Matt. 5:13; 7:6; Luke 8:5; 12:1; (b) metaphorically, of “treading under foot” the Son of God, Heb. 10:29, i.e., turning away from Him, to indulge in willful sin.¶

For TREADING out the corn, see THRESH

TREASURE (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. thesauros (θησαυρός, 2344) denotes (1) “a place of safe keeping” (possibly akin to tithemi, “to put”), (a) “a casket,” Matt. 2:11; (b) “a storehouse,” Matt. 13:52; used metaphorically of the heart, Matt. 12:35, twice (RV, “out of his treasure”); Luke 6:45; (2) “a treasure,” Matt. 6:19, 20, 21; 13:44; Luke 12:33, 34; Heb. 11:26; “treasure” (in heaven or the heavens), Matt. 19:21; Mark 10:21; Luke 18:22; in these expressions (which are virtually equivalent to that in Matt. 6:1, “with your Father which is in Heaven”) the promise does not simply refer to the present life, but looks likewise to the hereafter; in 2 Cor. 4:7 it is used of “the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ,” descriptive of the gospel, as deposited in the earthen vessels of the persons who proclaim it (cf. v. 4); in Col. 2:3, of the wisdom and knowledge hidden in Christ.¶

2. gaza (γάζα, 1047), a Persian word, signifying “royal treasure,” occurs in Acts 8:27.¶

B. Verb.

thesaurizo (θησαυρίζω, 2343), akin to A, No. 1, is used metaphorically in Rom. 2:5 of “treasuring up wrath.” See LAY, No. 17.

For TREASURER see CHAMBERLAIN, Note

TREASURY

1. gazophylakion (γαζοφυλάκιον, 1049), from gaza, “a treasure,” phulake, “a guard,” is used by Josephus for a special room in the women’s court in the Temple in which gold and silver bullion was kept. This seems to be referred to in John 8:20; in Mark 12:41 (twice), 43 and Luke 21:1 it is used of the trumpet-shaped or ram’s-horn-shaped chests, into which the temple offerings of the people were cast. There were 13 chests, six for such gifts in general, seven for distinct purposes.¶

2. korbanas (κορβάν, 2878), signifying “the place of gifts,” denoted the Temple “treasury,” Matt. 27:6. See CORBAN.¶

For TREATED, Acts 27:3, RV, see ENTREAT (TO DEAL WITH)

TREATISE

logos (λόγος, 3056), a word, denotes “a treatise or written narrative” in Acts 1:1. See WORD.

TREE

1. dendron (δένδρον, 1186), “a living, growing tree” (cf. Eng., “rhododendron,” lit., “rose tree”), known by the fruit it produces, Matt. 12:33; Luke 6:44; certain qualities are mentioned in the NT; “a good tree,” Matt. 7:17, 18; 12:33; Luke 6:43; “a corrupt tree” (ditto); in Jude 12, metaphorically, of evil teachers, “autumn trees (KJV, ‘trees whose fruit withereth’) without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots,” RV; in Luke 13:19 in some texts, “a great tree,” KJV (RV, “a tree”); for this and Matt. 13:32 see MUSTARD; in Luke 21:29 “the fig tree” is illustrative of Israel, “all the trees” indicating gentile nations.

2. xulon (ξύλον, 3586), “wood, a piece of wood, anything made of wood” (see STAFF, STOCKS), is used, with the rendering “tree,” (a) in Luke 23:31, where “the green tree” refers either to Christ, figuratively of all His living power and excellencies, or to the life of the Jewish people while still inhabiting their land, in contrast to “the dry,” a figure fulfilled in the horrors of the Roman massacre and devastation in A.D. 70 (cf. the Lord’s parable in Luke 13:6–9; see Ezek. 20:47, and cf. 21:3); (b) of “the cross,” the tree being the stauros, the upright pale or stake to which Romans nailed those who were thus to be executed, Acts 5:30; 10:39; 13:29; Gal. 3:13; 1 Pet. 2:24; (c) of “the tree of life,” Rev. 2:7; 22:2 (twice), 14, 19, RV, KJV, “book.” See WOOD.

TREMBLE, TREMBLING

A. Verbs.

1. tremo (τρέμω, 5141), “to tremble, especially with fear,” is used in Mark 5:33; Luke 8:47 (Acts 9:6, in some mss.); 2 Pet. 2:10, RV, “they tremble (not),” KJV, “they are (not) afraid.”¶

2. seio (σειώ, 4579), “to move to and fro, shake,” is rendered “will I make to tremble” in Heb. 12:26, RV (KJV, “I shake”). See QUAKE, SHAKE.

Notes: (1) For phrisso in Jas. 2:19, KJV, “tremble,” see SHUDDER. (2) For the adjective entromos, “trembling,” Acts 7:32; 16:29, RV, “trembling for fear,” see QUAKE, No. 1. (3) The adjective emphobos, used with ginomai, “to become,” is rendered “trembled” in Acts 24:25 (RV, “was terrified”); in Luke 24:5, RV, “they were affrighted,” KJV, “they were afraid.” See AFFRIGHTED, A.

B. Noun.

tromos (τρόμος, 5156), “a trembling” (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in Mark 16:8, RV, “trembling ( ... had come upon them)”;

TRENCH

charax (χάραξ, 5482), primarily “a pointed stake,” hence, “a palisade or rampart,” is rendered “trench” in Luke 19:43, KJV (RV, “bank,” marg., “palisade”). In A.D. 70, Titus, the Roman general, surrounded Jerusalem with a palisaded mound (Tyndale, l.c. renders it “mound”). The Jews in one of their sorties destroyed this charax, after which Titus surrounded the city with a wall of masonry.¶

TRESPASS (Noun and Verb)

paraptoma (παράπτωμα, 3900), primarily “a false step, a blunder” (akin to parapipto, “to fall away,” Heb. 6:6), lit., “a fall beside,” used ethically, denotes “a trespass,” a deviation, from uprightness and truth, Matt. 6:14, 15 (twice); 18:35, in some mss.; Mark 11:25, 26; in Romans the RV substitutes “trespass” and “trespasses” for KJV, “offense” and “offenses,” 4:25, “for (i.e., because of) our trespasses”; 5:15 (twice), where the trespass is that of Adam (in contrast to the free gift of righteousness, v. 17, a contrast in the nature and the effects); 5:16, where “of many trespasses” expresses a contrast of quantity; the condemnation resulted from one “trespass,” the free gift is “of (ek, expressing the origin, and throwing stress upon God’s justifying grace in Christ) many trespasses”; v. 17, introducing a contrast between legal effects and those of divine grace; v. 18, where the RV, “through one trespass,” is contrasted with “one act of righteousness”; this is important, the difference is not between one man’s “trespass” and Christ’s righteousness (as KJV), but between two acts, that of Adam’s “trespass” and the vicarious death of Christ; v. 20 [cf. TRANSGRESSION, B, No. 1 (d)]; in 2 Cor. 5:19, KJV and RV, “trespasses”; in Eph. 1:7, RV, “trespasses” (KJV, “sins”); in 2:1, RV, “(dead through your) trespasses,” KJV, “(dead in) trespasses”; 2:5, RV, “(dead through our) trespasses,” KJV, “(dead in) sins”; so Col. 2:13 (1st part); in the 2nd part, KJV and RV, “trespasses.”

In Gal. 6:1, RV, “(in any) trespass” (KJV, “fault”), the reference is to “the works of the flesh” (5:19), and the thought is that of the believer’s being found off his guard, the “trespass” taking advantage of him; in Jas. 5:16, KJV, “faults” (RV, “sins” translates the word hamartias, which is found in the best texts), auricular confession to a priest is not in view here or anywhere else in Scripture; the command is comprehensive, and speaks either of the acknowledgment of sin where one has wronged another, or of the unburdening of a troubled conscience to a godly brother whose prayers will be efficacious, or of open confession before the church.

In Rom. 11:11, 12, the word is used of Israel’s “fall,” i.e., their deviation from obedience to God and from the fulfillment of His will (to be distinguished from the verb ptaio, “fall,” in the 1st part of v. 11, which indicates the impossibility of recovery). See FALL, A, No. 2.¶

B. Verb.

hamartano (ἁμαρτάνω, 264), “to sin,” is translated “to trespass,” in the KJV of Matt. 18:15, and Luke 17:3, 4 (RV, “to sin”).

Note: For the different meanings of words describing sin, see SIN. Paraptoma, and hamartema (“a sinful deed”) are closely associated, with regard to their primary meanings: parabasis seems to be a stronger term, as the breach of a known law (see TRANSGRESSION).

TRIAL

1. dokime (δοκιμή, 1382), for which see EXPERIENCE, No. 2, is rendered “trial” in 2 Cor. 8:2, KJV (RV, “proof”).

2. peira (πεῖρα, 3984), “a making trial, an experiment,” is used with lambano, “to receive or take,” in Heb. 11:29, rendered “assaying,” and v. 36, in the sense of “having experience of” (akin to peirao, “to assay, to try”), “had trial.”¶ In the Sept., Deut. 28:56.¶

3. peirasmos (πειρασμός, 3986), akin to No. 2, is rendered “trials” in Acts 20:19, RV. See TEMPTATION.

4. purosis (πύρωσις, 4451), akin to puroo, “to set on fire,” signifies (a) “a burning”; (b) “a refining,” metaphorically in 1 Pet. 4:12, “fiery trial,” or rather “trial by fire,” referring to the refining of gold (1:7). See BURNING.

Note: For dokimion, rendered “trial” in 1 Pet. 1:7, KJV, see PROOF, No. 2.

TRIBE (-S)

1. phule (φυλή, 5443), “a company of people united by kinship or habitation, a clan, tribe,” is used (a) of the peoples of the earth, Matt. 24:30; in the following the RV has “tribe(-s)” for KJV, “kindred(-s),” Rev. 1:7; 5:9; 7:9; 11:9; 13:7; 14:6; (b) of the “tribes” of Israel, Matt. 19:28; Luke 2:36; 22:30; Acts 13:21; Rom. 11:1; Phil. 3:5; Heb. 7:13, 14; Jas. 1:1; Rev. 5:5; 7:4-8; 21:12.¶

2. dodekaphulos (δωδεκάφυλον, 1429), an adjective signifying “of twelve tribes” (dodeka, “twelve,” and No. 1), used as a noun in the neuter, occurs in Acts 26:7.¶

TRIBULATION

thlipsis (θλίψις, 2347), for which see AFFLICTION, B, No. 4, is translated “tribulation” in the RV (for KJV, “affliction”) in Mark 4:17; 13:19; plural in 2 Thess. 1:4, KJV, “tribulations,” RV, “afflictions”; in Acts 14:22 “many tribulations” (KJV, “much tribulation”); in Matt. 24:9, “unto tribulation” (KJV, “to be afflicted”); in 2 Cor. 1:4; 7:4; 2 Thess. 1:6, KJV, “tribulation” for RV, “affliction”; RV and KJV, “tribulation(-s),” e.g., in Rom. 2:9; 5:3 (twice); 8:35; 12:12; Eph. 3:13; Rev. 1:9; 2:9, 10, 22.

In Rev. 7:14, “the great tribulation,” RV, lit., “the tribulation, the great one” (not as KJV, without the article), is not that in which all saints share; it indicates a definite period spoken of by the Lord in Matt. 24:21, 29; Mark 13:19, 24, where the time is mentioned as preceding His second advent, and as a period in which the Jewish nation, restored to Palestine in unbelief by gentile instrumentality, will suffer an unprecedented outburst of fury on the part of the antichristian powers confederate under the Man of Sin (2 Thess. 2:10-12; cf. Rev. 12:13-17); in this tribulation gentile witnesses for God will share (Rev. 7:9), but it will be distinctly “the time of Jacob’s trouble” (Jer. 30:7); its beginning is signaled by the setting up of the “abomination of desolation” (Matt. 24:15; Mark 13:14, with Dan. 11:31; 12:11).

Note: For the verb thlibo, in the passive voice rendered “suffer tribulation” in 1 Thess. 3:4, KJV (RV, “suffer affliction”), see AFFLICT, No. 4.

TRIBUTE

1. phoros (φόρος, 5411), akin to phero, “to bring,” denotes “tribute” paid by a subjugated nation, Luke 20:22; 23:2; Rom. 13:6, 7.¶

2. kensos (κῆνσος, 2778), Lat. and Eng., “census,” denotes “a poll tax,” Matt. 17:25; 22:17, 19; Mark 12:14.¶

3. didrachmon (δίδραχμον, 1323), “the halfshekel,” is rendered “tribute” in Matt. 17:24 (twice); see SHEKEL, No. 2.¶

TRIM

kosmeo (κοσμέω, 2885), “to arrange, adorn,” is used of “trimming” lamps, Matt. 25:7. See ADORN, GARNISH.

TRIUMPH

thriambeuo (θριαμβεύω, 2358) denotes (a) “to lead in triumph,” used of a conqueror with reference to the vanquished, 2 Cor. 2:14. Theodoret paraphrases it “He leads us about here and there and displays us to all the world.” This is in agreement with evidences from various sources. Those who are led are not captives exposed to humiliation, but are displayed as the glory and devoted subjects of Him who leads (see the context). This is so even if there is a reference to a Roman “triumph.” On such occasions the general’s sons, with various officers, rode behind his chariot (Livy, xlv. 40). But there is no necessary reference here to a Roman “triumph” (Field, in Notes on the Trans. of the NT). The main thought is that of the display, “in Christ” being the sphere; its evidences are the effects of gospel testimony.

In Col. 2:15 the circumstances and subjects are quite different, and relate to Christ’s victory over spiritual foes at the time of His death; accordingly the reference may be to the triumphant display of the defeated.¶

For TRODE see TREAD

TROUBLE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

thlipsis (θλίψις, 2347), for which see AFFLICTION, No. 4, and TRIBULATION, is rendered “trouble” in the KJV of 1 Cor. 7:28 (RV, “tribulation”); 2 Cor. 1:4 (2nd clause), 8 (RV, “affliction”).

Note: In some mss. tarache, “an agitation, disturbance, trouble,” is found in Mark 13:8 (plur.) and John 5:4 (RV omits).¶

B. Verbs.

1. tarosso (ταράσσω, 5015), akin to tarache (A, Note), is used (1) in a physical sense, John 5:7 (in some mss. v. 4), (2) metaphorically, (a) of the soul and spirit of the Lord, John 11:33, where the true rendering is “He troubled Himself”; (b) of the hearts of disciples, 14:1, 27; (c) of the minds of those in fear or perplexity, Matt. 2:3; 14:26; Mark 6:50; Luke 1:12; 24:38; 1 Pet. 3:14; (d) of subverting the souls of believers, by evil doctrine, Acts 15:24; Gal. 1:7; 5:10; (e) of stirring up a crowd, Acts 17:8; v. 13 in the best texts, “troubling (the multitudes),” RV.¶

2. diatarasso (διαταράσσω, 1298), “to agitate greatly” (dia, “throughout,” and No. 1), is used of the Virgin Mary, Luke 1:29.¶

3. ektarasso (ἐκταράσσω, 1613), “to throw into great trouble, agitate,” is used in Acts 16:20, “do exceedingly trouble (our city).”¶ In the Sept., Ps. 18:4; 88:16.¶

4. thlibo (θλίβω, 2346), “to afflict,” is rendered “to trouble” in the KJV, e.g., 2 Cor. 4:8 (RV, “pressed”); 7:5, but never in the RV: see AFFLICT, No. 4, PRESS, STRAITENED, TRIBULATION.

5. enochleo (ἐνοχλέω, 1776), from en, “in,” ochlos, “a throng, crowd,” is used in Heb. 12:15 of a root of bitterness; in Luke 6:18 (in the best texts; some have ochleo), RV, “were troubled” (KJV, “were vexed”).¶

6. parenochleo (παρενοχλέω, 3926), “to annoy concerning anything” (para, and No. 5), occurs in Acts 15:19, “we trouble (not them).”¶

7. skullo (σκούλλω, 4660), primarily “to flay,” hence, “to vex, annoy” (“there was a time when the Greek, in thus speaking, compared his trouble to the pains of flaying alive,” Moulton, Proleg., p. 89), is used in the active voice in Mark 5:35; Luke 8:49; in the passive voice, Matt. 9:36, in the best texts, RV, “they were distressed” (some have ekluo, KJV, “they fainted”); in the middle voice, Luke 7:6, “trouble (not thyself).”¶ The word is frequent in the papyri.

8. anastatoo (ἀναστατόω, 387) is rendered “trouble” in Gal. 5:12, KJV: see STIR, No. 12, TURN, No. 15, UPROAR.

9. thorubeo (θορυβέω, 2350), akin to thorubos, “a tumult,” in the middle voice, “to make an uproar,” is rendered “trouble not yourselves” in Acts 20:10, KJV. See ADO, TUMULT.

10. throeo (θορέω, 2360), “to make an outcry” (throos, “a tumult”), is used in the passive voice, Matt. 24:6; Mark 13:7; Luke 24:37; 2 Thess. 2:2.¶ In the Sept., Song of Sol. 5:4.¶

11. thorubazo (θόρυβος, 2351), “to disturb, to trouble” (akin to No. 9), is used in Luke 10:41, in the best texts (in some, turbazo, with the same meaning).¶

12. ademoneo (ἀδημονέω, 85), “to be much troubled, distressed” (perhaps from a, negative, and demon, “knowing,” the compound therefore originally suggesting bewilderment), is translated “sore troubled” in Matt. 26:37 and Mark 14:33, RV (KJV, “very heavy”); so the RV in Phil. 2:26 (KJV, “full of heaviness”); Lightfoot renders it “distressed,” a meaning borne out in the papyri. See HEAVY.¶

13. diaponeo (διαπονέω, 1278) denotes “to work out with toil,” hence, “to be sore troubled”; so the RV in Acts 4:2 and 16:18 (KJV, “grieved”); Mark 14:4 in some texts.¶

Notes: (1) The noun kopos, “a striking, beating,” then, “laborious toil, trouble,” used with parecho, “to furnish, to supply,” is rendered “to trouble” (lit., “to give trouble to”), in Matt. 26:10; Mark 14:6; Luke 11:7; 18:5; Gal. 6:17; the meaning is to embarrass a person by distracting his attention, or to give occasion for anxiety. In the last passage the apostle expresses his determination not to allow the Judaizing teachers to distract him any further. See LABOR, A, No. 1. (2) For “suffer trouble” in 2 Tim. 2:9, see HARSHIP.

TROW

Note: Some mss. have dokeo, “to think,” in Luke 17:9, KJV, “I trow (not).”

For TRUCE BREAKERS see IMPLACABLE

TRUE, TRULY, TRUTH

A. Adjectives.

1. alethes (ἀληθής, 227), primarily, “unconcealed, manifest” (a, negative, letho, “to forget,” = lanthano, “to escape notice”), hence, actual, “true to fact,” is used (a) of persons, “truthful,” Matt. 22:16; Mark 12:14; John 3:33; 7:18; 8:26; Rom. 3:4; 2 Cor. 6:8;

(b) of things, “true,” conforming to reality, John 4:18, “truly,” lit., “true”; 5:31, 32; in the best texts, 6:55 (twice), “indeed”; 8:13, 14 (v. 16 in some texts: see No. 2), 17; 10:41; 19:35; 21:24; Acts 12:9; Phil. 4:8; Titus 1:13; 1 Pet. 5:12; 2 Pet. 2:22; 1 John 2:8, 27; 3 John 1:2.¶

2. alethinós (ἀληθινός, 228), akin to No. 1, denotes “true” in the sense of real, ideal, genuine; it is used (a) of God, John 7:28 (cf. No. 1 in 7:18, above); 17:3; 1 Thess. 1:9; Rev. 6:10; these declare that God fulfills the meaning of His Name; He is “very God,” in distinction from all other gods, false gods (alethes, see John 3:33 in No. 1, signifies that He is veracious, “true” to His utterances, He cannot lie); (b) of Christ, John 1:9; 6:32; 15:1; 1 John 2:8; 5:20 (thrice); Rev. 3:7, 14; 19:11; His judgment, John 8:16 (in the best texts, instead of No. 1); (c) God’s words, John 4:37; Rev. 19:9, 21:5; 22:6; the last three are equivalent to No. 1; (d) His ways, Rev. 15:3; (e) His judgments, Rev. 16:7; 19:2; (to His riches, Luke 16:11; (g) His worshipers, John 4:23; (h) their hearts, Heb. 10:22; (i) the witness of the apostle John, John 19:35; (j) the spiritual, antitypical tabernacle, Heb. 8:2; 9:24, not that the wilderness tabernacle was false, but that it was a weak and earthly copy of the heavenly.¶

Note: “Alethinós is related to alethes as form to contents or substances; alethes denotes the reality of the thing, alethinós defines the relation of the conception to the thing to which it corresponds = genuine” (Cremer).

3. gnesios (γνήσιος, 1103), primarily “lawfully begotten” (akin to ginomai, “to become”), hence, “true, genuine, sincere,” is used in the apostle’s exhortation to his “true yoke-fellow” in Phil. 4:3. See OWN, SINCERITY.

Note: In the KJV of 2 Cor. 1:18 and 1 Tim. 3:1, pistos, “faithful” (RV), is translated “true.”

B. Verb.

aletheuo (ἀληθεύω, 226) signifies “to deal faithfully or truly with anyone” (cf. Gen. 42:16, Sept., “whether ye deal truly or no”), Eph. 4:15, “speaking the truth”; Gal. 3:16, “I tell (you) the truth,” where probably the apostle is referring to the contents of his epistle.¶

C. Noun.

aletheia (ἀλήθεια, 225), “truth,” is used (a) objectively, signifying “the reality lying at the basis of an appearance; the manifested, veritable essence of a matter” (Cremer), e.g., Rom. 9:1; 2 Cor. 11:10; especially of Christian doctrine, e.g., Gal. 2:5, where “the truth of the Gospel” denotes the “true” teaching of the Gospel, in contrast to perversions of it; Rom. 1:25, where “the truth of God” may be “the truth concerning God” or “God whose existence is a verity”; but in Rom. 15:8 “the truth of God” is indicative of His faithfulness in the fulfillment of His promises as exhibited in Christ; the word has an absolute force in John 14:6; 17:17; 18:37, 38; in Eph. 4:21, where the RV, “even as truth is in Jesus,” gives the correct rendering, the meaning is not merely ethical “truth,” but “truth” in all its fullness and scope, as embodied in Him; He was the perfect expression of the truth; this is virtually equivalent to His statement in John 14:6; (b) subjectively, “truthfulness,” “truth,” not merely verbal, but sincerity and integrity of character, John 8:44; 3 John 3, RV; (C) in phrases, e.g., “in truth” (epi, “on the basis of”), Mark 12:14;

Luke 20:21; with en, “in,” 2 Cor. 6:7; Col. 1:6; 1 Tim. 2:7, RV (KJV, “in ... verity”), 1 John 3:18; 2 John 1, 3, 4.

Note: In Matt. 15:27, KJV, nai, “yea” (RV), is translated “truth.”

D. Adverbs.

1. alethos (ἀληθῶς, 230), “truly, surely,” is rendered “of a truth” in Matt. 14:33; 26:73 and Mark 14:70, RV, (KJV, “surely”); Luke 9:27; 12:44; 21:3; John 6:14; 7:40; 17:8, RV, “of a truth (KJV, surely); Acts 12:11, RV (KJV, “of a surety”); “in truth,” 1 Thess. 2:13; “truly,” Matt. 27:54; Mark 15:39. See INDEED, No. 3.

2. gnesios (γνησίως, 1104), “sincerely, honorably” (akin to A, No. 3), is rendered “truly” (marg., “genuinely”) in Phil. 2:20 (KJV, “naturally”).¶

Notes: (1) The particles ara, men, and de are sometimes rendered “truly” in the KJV, but are differently rendered in the RV. (2) In 1 Cor. 14:25, KJV, ontos (RV, “indeed”) is rendered “of a truth. See CERTAIN, C, No. 1, INDEED, No. 4. (3) In John 20:30, KJV, the particle oun, therefore (RV), is rendered “truly.”

TRUMP, TRUMPET

A. Noun.

salpinx (σάλπιγξ, 4536) is used (1) of the natural instrument, 1 Cor. 14:8; (2) of the supernatural accompaniment of divine interpositions, (a) at Sinai, Heb. 12:19; (b) of the acts of angels at the second advent of Christ, Matt. 24:31; (c) of their acts in the period of divine judgments preceding this, Rev. 8:2, 6, 13; 9:14; (d) of a summons to John to the presence of God, Rev. 1:10; 4:1; (e) of the act of the Lord in raising from the dead the saints who have fallen asleep and changing the bodies of those who are living, at the Rapture of all to meet Him in the air, 1 Cor. 15:52, where “the last trump” is a military allusion, familiar to Greek readers, and has no connection with the series in Rev. 8:6 to 11:15; there is a possible allusion to Num. 10:2-6, with reference to the same event, 1 Thess. 4:16, “the (lit., a) trump of God” (the absence of the article suggests the meaning “a trumpet such as is used in God’s service”).¶

B. Verb.

salpizo (σαλπίζω, 4537), “to sound a trumpet,” Matt. 6:2; as in (2) (c) above, Rev. 8:6, 7, 8, 10, 12, 13; 9:1, 13; 10:7; 11:15; as in (2) (e) 1 Cor. 15:52.¶

TRUMPETER

salpistes (σαλπιστής, 4538) occurs in Rev. 18:22.¶

TRUST (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

pepoithesis (πεποίθησις, 4006) is rendered trust in 2 Cor. 3:4, KJV; see CONFIDENCE, No. 1.

B. Verbs.

1. peitho (πείθω, 3982), intransitively, in the perfect and pluperfect active, “to have confidence, trust,” is rendered “to trust” in Matt. 27:43; Mark 10:24; Luke 11:22; 18:9; 2 Cor. 1:9; 10:7; Phil. 2:24; 3:4, KJV (RV, “to have confidence”); Heb. 2:13; in the present middle, Heb. 13:18, KJV (RV, “are persuaded”). See AGREE, No. 5, PERSUADE.

2. pisteuo (πιστεύω, 4100), “to entrust,” or, in the passive voice, “to be entrusted with,” is rendered “to commit to one’s trust,” in Luke 16:11; 1 Tim. 1:11; “to be put in trust with,” 1 Thess. 2:4, KJV (RV, “to be intrusted”).

Note: Wherever elpizo, “to hope,” is translated “to trust” in the KJV, the RV substitutes “to hope.” So proelpizo, “to hope before.” See HOPE.

For TRUTH see TRUE

TRY, TRIED

1. dokimazo (δοκιμάζω, 1381) is rendered “to try” in the KJV in 1 Cor. 3:13; 1 Thess. 2:4; 1 Pet. 1:7; 1 John 4:1: see PROVE, No. 1.

2. peirazo (πειράζω, 3985) is rendered “to try” in Heb. 11:17; Rev. 2:2, 10; 3:10. In Acts 16:7 it is rendered “assayed”; in 24:6, RV, “assayed” (KJV, “hath gone about”): see GO, Note (2) (b). See EXAMINE, PROVE, TEMPT. Cf. peirao in Acts 26:21, RV, “assayed” (KJV, “went about”); see GO, Note (2) (c).

Notes: (1) In Rev. 3:18, KJV, puroo, in the passive voice, “to be purified by fire” (RV, “refined”), is rendered “tried.” (2) For dokimion, Jas. 1:3, KJV, “trying,” see PROOF. (3) For dokimos, Jas. 1:12, KJV, “tried,” see APPROVED. (4) In 1 Pet. 4:12, KJV, the phrase pros peirasmon, lit., “for trial,” i.e., “for testing,” is rendered “to try (you),” RV, “to prove (you).”

TUMULT

1. akatastasia (ἀκαταστασία, 181) is rendered “tumults” in Luke 21:9, RV; 2 Cor. 6:5; 12:20. See CONFOUND, A, No. 1.

2. thorubos (θόρυβος, 2351), “a noise, uproar, tumult,” is rendered “tumult” in Matt. 27:24 and Mark 5:38; in Matt. 26:5, RV (KJV, “uproar”), so in Mark 14:2; in Acts 20:1, “uproar,” KJV and RV; in 24:18, “tumult”; in 21:34, KJV, “tumult” (RV, “uproar”).¶

Note: For thorubeo, RV, “to make a tumult,” see NOISE, Note (2).

TURN

1. strepheo (στρέφω, 4762) denotes (1) in the active voice, (a) “to turn” (something), Matt. 5:39; (b) “to bring back,” Matt. 27:3 (in the best texts; some have No. 2); (c) reflexively, “to turn oneself, to turn the back to people,” said of God, Acts 7:42; (d) “to turn one thing into another,” Rev. 11:6 (the only place where this word occurs after the Acts); (2) in the passive voice, (a) used reflexively, “to turn oneself,” e.g. Matt. 7:6; John 20:14, 16; (b) metaphorically, Matt. 18:3, RV, “(except) ye turn” (KJV, “... be converted”); John 12:40 (in the best texts; some have No. 4). See CONVERT, A, No. 1.

2. apostrepheo (ἀποστρέφω, 654) denotes (a) “to cause to turn away (apo), to remove,” Rom. 11:26; 2 Tim. 4:4 (1st clause); metaphorically, “to turn away from allegiance, pervert,” Luke 23:14; (b) “to make to return, put back,” Matt. 26:52, (c) in the passive voice, used reflexively, “to turn oneself away from,” Matt. 5:42; 2 Tim. 1:15; Titus 1:14; Heb. 12:25; in the active voice, Acts 3:26. See PERVERT, PUT.¶

3. diostrepho (διαστρέφω, 1294), “to distort” (dia, “asunder”), is rendered “to turn aside,” RV (KJV, “... away”), in Acts 13:8. See PERVERT, No. 2.

4. epistrepho (ἐπιστρέφω, 1994) is used (a) transitively, “to make to turn towards” (epi), Luke 1:16, 17; Jas. 5:19, 20 (to convert); (b) intransitively, “to turn oneself round,” e.g., in the passive voice, Mark 5:30 (see RETURN); in the active voice, Matt. 13:15, RV, “turn again” (KJV, “be converted”); Acts 11:21; 14:15; 15:19; 1 Thess. 1:9, “ye turned,” the aorist tense indicating an immediate and decisive change, consequent upon a deliberate choice; conversion is a voluntary act in response to the presentation of truth. See CONVERT.

5. metastrepho (μεταστρέφω, 3344) signifies, in the passive voice, “to be turned” (of a change into something different, meta) in Acts 2:20 and Jas. 4:9: see PERVERT, No. 3.

6. hupostrepho (ὑποστρέφω, 5290) is used intransitively of “turning back, behind” (hupo), e.g., Luke 17:15, “turned back”; in 2:45, RV, “returned”: see RETURN.

7. apobaino (ἀποβαίνω, 576), “to go from,” is used metaphorically of events, “to issue, turn out,” Luke 21:13; Phil. 1:19. See GO, No. 21.

8. metago (μετάγω, 3329), “to move from one side to another,” is rendered “to turn about” in Jas. 3:3, 4.¶

9. metatithemi (μετατίθημι, 3346), “to change,” is translated “turning (the grace of God)” in Jude 4. See CARRY, CHANGE, REMOVE, TRANSLATE.

10. anakampto (ἀνακάμπω, 344), ana, “back,” kampto, “to bend,” is rendered “shall turn ... again,” in Luke 10:6. See RETURN.

11. ektrepo (ἐκτρέπω, 1624), “to cause to turn aside” (ek, “from,” trepo, “to turn”), is used in the passive voice, with middle sense, in 1 Tim. 1:6; 5:15; 6:20, RV, “turning away” (KJV, “avoiding”); 2 Tim. 4:4 (2nd clause); Heb. 12:13, “be (not) turned out of the way” (RV, marg., “put out of joint”); some adhere to the meaning “to turn aside, go astray”; the interpretation depends on the antithesis which follows, “but rather be healed” (RV), which is not the antithesis to “turning aside” or being “turned” out of the way; accordingly the marg. is to be preferred (the verb is often used medically).¶ In the Sept., Amos 5:5.¶

12. apotrepo (ἀποτρέπω, 665), “to cause to turn away” (apo), is used in the middle voice in 2 Tim. 3:5.¶

13. peritrepo (περιτρέπω, 4062), “to turn about” (peri), is rendered “doth turn (thee to madness)” in Acts 26:24, RV, KJV, “doth make (thee mad).”¶

14. methistemi (μεθίστημι, 3179) is used metaphorically in Acts 19:26, “turned away (much people).” See PUT, REMOVE, TRANSLATE.

15. anastatoo (ἀναστατόω, 387), “to stir up, excite, unsettle” (ana, “up,” histemi, “to cause to stand”), is rendered “have turned (the world) upside down” in Acts 17:6. See TROUBLE, UPROAR.

16. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is rendered “shall be turned” in John 16:20 (of sorrow into joy).

17. ekklino (ἐκκλίνω, 1578), “to turn aside” (ek, “from,” klino, “to lean”), is rendered “have ... turned aside” in Rom. 3:12 (KJV, “are ... gone out of the way”); 16:17, RV, “turn away” (KJV, “avoid”); 1 Pet. 3:11, RV, ditto (KJV, “eschew”).¶

18. diadechomai (διαδέχομαι, 1237), “to receive through another, to receive in turn” (dia, “through,” dechomai, “to receive”), occurs in Acts 7:45, RV, “in their turn ... when they entered” (KJV, “that came after”); the meaning here is “having received (it) after,” i.e., as from Moses under Joshua’s leadership. In the papyri the word is used similarly of visiting as deputy (see also Field, Notes on the Trans. of the NT, 1:16).¶

Notes: (1) In Matt. 2:22, KJV, anachoreo, “to retire, withdraw,” is rendered “turned aside” (RV, “withdrew”). (2) For “turned to flight,” klino, Heb. 11:34, see FLIGHT, B. (3) For the phrase “by turn” in 1 Cor. 14:27 see COURSE, B, Note (3).

TURNING

trope (τροπή, 5157), used especially of the revolution of the heavenly orbs (akin to trepo, “to turn”), occurs in Jas. 1:17, “(neither shadow) that is cast by turning,” RV (KJV, “of turning”). For a more detailed treatment of the passage, see SHADOW, No. 2.¶

For TURTLEDOVE see DOVE

For TUTOR see GUARDIAN and INSTRUCTOR, No. 1.

TWAIN, TWO

duo (δύο, 1417) is rendered “twain” in Matt. 5:41; 19:5, 6; 21:31; 27:21, 51; Mark 10:8 (twice); 15:38; in 1 Cor. 6:16 and Eph. 5:31, RV (KJV, “two”); Eph. 2:15; in Rev. 19:20, RV (KJV, “both”).

Notes: (1) In the following phrases the numeral is used distributively: (a) ana duo, “two apiece,” John 2:6 (in some mss., Luke 9:3); in Luke 10:1, “two and two” (“by twos”); (b) kata duo, “by two,” 1 Cor. 14:27; (c) duo duo, “by two and two,” lit., “two (and) two,” Mark 6:7 (not a Hebraism; the form of expression is used in the papyri); (d) eis duo, “into two,” “in twain,” Matt. 27:51 and Mark 15:38 (see above). (2) In Luke 17:34 duo stands for “two men”; in v. 35 for “two women.”

TWELFTH

dodekatos (δωδέκατος, 1428) occurs in Rev. 21:20.¶

TWELVE

dodeka (δώδεκα, 1427) is used frequently in the Gospels for the twelve apostles, and in Acts 6:2; 1 Cor. 15:5; Rev. 21:14b; of the tribes of Israel, Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:30; Jas. 1:1; Rev. 21:12c (cf. 7:5-8; 12:1); in various details relating to the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:12-21; 22:2. The number in general is regarded as suggestive of divine administration.

TWENTY

eikosi (εἴκοσι, 1501) occurs in Luke 14:31; John 6:19; Acts 1:15; 27:28; 1 Cor. 10:8; of the “four and twenty” elders, in Rev. 4:4 (twice), 10; 5:8; 11:16; 19:4 (combined in one numeral with tessares, “four,” in some mss.).¶

TWICE

dis (δῖς, 1364) occurs in Mark 14:30, 72; Luke 18:12; Jude 12; combined with muriades, “ten thousand,” in Rev. 9:16; rendered “again” in Phil. 4:16 and 1 Thess. 2:18. See AGAIN.¶

TWINKLING

rhipe (ῥιπή, 4493), akin to rhipto, “to hurl,” was used of any rapid movement, e.g., the throw of a javelin, the rush of wind or flame; in 1 Cor. 15:52 of the “twinkling” of an eye.¶

For TWO see TWAIN

TWO-EDGED

distomos (δίστομος, 1366), lit., “two-mouthed” (dis, and stoma, “a mouth”), was used of rivers and branching roads; in the NT of swords, Heb. 4:12; Rev. 1:16; 2:12, RV, “two-edged” (KJV, “with two edges”).¶ In the Sept., Judg. 3:16; Ps. 149:6; Prov. 5:4.¶

For TWOFOLD MORE see DOUBLE

TWO HUNDRED

diakosioi (διακόσιοι, 1250) occurs in Mark 6:37; John 6:7; 21:8; Acts 23:23 (twice); 27:37, “two hundred (threescore and sixteen)”; Rev. 11:3, “(a thousand) two hundred (and threescore)”; so 12:6.¶

Note: In Acts 27:37, some ancient authorities read “about threescore and sixteen souls” (RV, margin). The confusion was quite natural when the word diakosioi was not written in full but represented by one Greek letter. The larger number is by no means improbable: Josephus sailed for Rome in A.D. 63 in a ship which had 600 on board (Life, ch. 3).

For TWO THOUSAND see THOUSAND, Note (1)

U

For UNAPPROACHABLE, 1 Tim. 6:16, RV, see APPROACH, B
UNAWARES

Notes: (1) In Heb. 13:2, lanthano, “to escape notice,” is used with the aorist participle of xenizo, “to entertain,” signifying “entertained ... unawares” (an idiomatic usage common in classical Greek). (2) For aiphnidios, “unawares,” in Luke 21:34, KJV, see SUDDENLY. (3) In Gal. 2:4, KJV, pareisaktos, “brought in secretly,” is rendered

“unawares brought in.” See PRIVILY, Note: cf. BRING, No. 17.¶ (4) In Jude 4, KJV, pareisduno, “to slip in secretly,” is rendered “crept in unawares.” See CREEP, A, No. 2.¶

UNBELIEF

1. apistia (ἀπιστία, 570), “unbelief” 12 times, but see BELIEF, C, Note (2) for references.

2. apeitheta (ἀπειθεία, 543) is always rendered “disobedience” in the RV; in Rom. 11:30, 32 and Heb. 4:6, 11, KJV, “unbelief.” See DISOBEDIENCE, A, No. 1.

UNBELIEVER

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571), an adjective, is used as a noun, rendered “unbeliever” in 2 Cor. 6:15 and 1 Tim. 5:8, RV; plural in 1 Cor. 6:6 and 2 Cor. 6:14; KJV only, Luke 12:46 (RV, “unfaithful”). See BELIEF, C, Note (3), FAITHLESS, INCREDIBLE.

UNBELIEVING

A. Adjective.

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571): see BELIEF, C, Note (3).

B. Verb.

apeitheo (ἀπειθέω, 544): see DISBELIEVE, DISOBEDIENT, C.

UNBLAMEABLE, UNBLAMEABLY

A. Adjectives.

1. amemptos (ἄμεμπτος, 273), “unblameable” (from a, negative, and memphomai, “to find fault”), is so rendered in 1 Thess. 3:13, i.e., “free from all valid charge.” See BLAME, B, No. 3.

2. amomos (ἄμωμος, 299): see BLEMISH, B.

B. Adverb.

amemptos (ἄμέμπτως, 274) is used in 1 Thess. 2:10, “unblameably,” signifying that no charge could be maintained, whatever charges might be made. See BLAME, C. For UNCEASING see CEASE, B. For UNCEASINGLY, RV, in Rom. 1:9, see CEASE, C

UNCERTAIN, UNCERTAINLY, UNCERTAINTY

A. Adjective.

adelos (ἄδηλος, 82) denotes (a) “unseen”; with the article, translated “which appear not” (a, negative, delos, “evident”), Luke 11:44; (b) “uncertain, indistinct,” 1 Cor. 14:8.¶ In the Sept., Ps. 51:6.¶

B. Adverb.

adelos (ἀδήλως, 84), “uncertainly” (akin to A), occurs in 1 Cor. 9:26.¶

C. Noun.

adelotes (ἀδηλότης, 83), “uncertainty” (akin to A and B), occurs in 1 Tim. 6:17, “(the) uncertainty (of riches),” RV (the KJV translates it as an adjective, “uncertain”), i.e.,

---

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

riches the special character of which is their “uncertainty”; the Greek phrase is a rhetorical way of stressing the noun “riches”; when a genitive (here “of riches”) precedes the governing noun (here “uncertainty”) the genitive receives emphasis.¶

UNCHANGEABLE

aparabatos (ἀπαράβατος, 531) is used of the priesthood of Christ, in Heb. 7:24, “unchangeable,” “unalterable, inviolable,” RV, marg. (a meaning found in the papyri); the more literal meaning in KJV and RV margins, “that doth not pass from one to another,” is not to be preferred. This active meaning is not only untenable, and contrary to the constant usage of the word, but does not adequately fit with either the preceding or the succeeding context.¶

For UNCIRCUMCISED and UNCIRCUMCISION see CIRCUMCISION
UNCLEAN

A. Adjectives.

1. akathartos (ἀκάθαρτος, 169), “unclean, impure” (a, negative, kathairo, “to purify”), is used (a) of “unclean” spirits, frequently in the Synoptists, not in John’s gospel; in Acts 5:16; 8:7; Rev. 16:13; 18:2a (in the 2nd clause the birds are apparently figurative of destructive satanic agencies); (b) ceremonially, Acts 10:14, 28; 11:8; 1 Cor. 7:14; (c) morally, 2 Cor. 6:17, including (b), RV; “no unclean thing”; Eph. 5:5; Rev. 17:4, RV, “the unclean things” (KJV follows the text which have the noun akathartes, “the filthiness”).

2. koinos (κοινός, 2839), “common,” is translated “unclean” in Rom. 14:14 (thrice); in Rev. 21:27, RV (KJV, “that defileth,” follows the inferior texts which have the verb koinoo: see B). See COMMON, DEFILE, C, UNHOLY, No. 2.

B. Verb.

koinoo (κοινώω, 2840), to make koinos, “to defile,” is translated “unclean” in Heb. 9:13, KJV, where the perfect participle, passive, is used with the article, hence the RV, “them that have been defiled.” See DEFILE, A, No. 1.

C. Noun.

akatharsia (ἀκαθαρσία, 167), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “uncleanness,” (a) physical, Matt. 23:27 (instances in the papyri speak of tenants keeping houses in good condition); (b) moral, Rom. 1:24; 6:19; 2 Cor. 12:21; Gal. 5:19; Eph. 4:19; 5:3; Col. 3:5; 1 Thess. 2:3 (suggestive of the fact that sensuality and evil doctrine are frequently associated); 4:7.¶

Note: In 2 Pet. 2:10, KJV, miasmos, “a defilement,” is rendered “uncleanness”; see DEFILEMENT, B, No. 2.¶

For UNCLOTHED see STRIP

UNCOMELY

aschemon (ἀσχήμων, 809), “shapeless” (a, negative, schema, “a form”), the opposite of euschemon, “comely,” is used in 1 Cor. 12:23.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 34:7; Deut. 24:3.¶

Note: For the verb aschemoneo, rendered “to behave oneself uncomely” in 1 Cor. 7:36, KJV, see BEHAVE, No. 4.

UNCONDEMNED

akatakritos (ἀκατάκριτος, 178), rendered “uncondemned” in Acts 16:37; 22:25 (a, negative, katakrito, “to condemn”), properly means “without trial, not yet tried.” Sir W. M. Ramsay points out that the apostle, in claiming his rights, would probably use the Roman phrase re incognita, i.e., “without investigating our case” (The Cities of St. Paul, p. 225).¶

For UNCORRUPTIBLE see CORRUPT, C, No. 2. For UNCORRUPTNESS, see CORRUPT, B, No. 4

apostegazo (ἀποστεγάζω, 648) signifies “to unroof” (apo, from, stegē, “a roof”), Mark 2:4.¶

For UNCOVERED, 1 Cor. 11:5, 13, see UNVEILED

For UNCTION see ANOINT, B

UNDEFILED

amiantos (ἀμίαντος, 283), “undefiled, free from contamination” (a, negative, miaino, “to defile”), is used (a) of Christ, Heb. 7:26; (b) of pure religion, Jas. 1:27; (c) of the eternal inheritance of believers, 1 Pet. 1:4; (d) of the marriage bed as requiring to be free from unlawful sexual intercourse, Heb. 13:4.¶

UNDER, UNDERNEATH

1. hupokato (ὑποκάτω, 5270), an adverb signifying “under,” is used as a preposition and rendered “under” in Mark 6:11; 7:28; Luke 8:16; Heb. 2:8; Rev. 5:3, 13; 6:9; 12:1; “underneath” in Matt. 22:44, RV (Mark 12:36 in some mss.); John 1:50, RV (KJV, “under”).¶

2. katotero (κάτω, 2736), the comparative degree of kato, “below, beneath,” occurs in Matt. 2:16, “under.”

3. elasson (ἐλάσσων, 1640), the neuter of the adjective elasson, “less,” is used adverbially in 1 Tim. 5:9, “under” (or “less than”). See LESS.

Notes: (1) The preposition epi, “upon,” is rendered “under” in Heb. 7:11; 9:15; 10:28, KJV (RV, “on the word of”). (2) The preposition en, “in,” is rendered “under” in Matt. 7:6; Rom. 3:19 (1st part). (3) The usual preposition is hupo.

UNDERGIRD

hupozonnumi (ὑποζώννυμι, 5269), hupo, “under,” zonnumi, “to gird,” is used of frapping a ship, Acts 27:17, bracing the timbers of a vessel by means of strong ropes.¶

UNDERSTAND, UNDERSTOOD

A. Verbs.

1. sunieimi (συνίημι, 4920), primarily, “to bring or set together,” is used metaphorically of “perceiving, understanding, uniting” (sun), so to speak, the perception with what is perceived, e.g., Matt. 13:13-15, 19, 23, 51; 15:10; 16:12; 17:13, and similar passages in Mark and Luke; Acts 7:25 (twice); 28:26, 27; in Rom. 3:11, the present participle, with the article, is used as a noun, lit., “there is not the understanding (one),” in a moral and spiritual sense; Rom. 15:21; 2 Cor. 10:12, RV, “are (without) understanding,” KJV, “are (not) wise”; Eph. 5:17, RV, “understand.” See CONSIDER, Note (2).

2. noeo (νοιέω, 3539), “to perceive with the mind,” as distinct from perception by feeling, is so used in Matt. 15:17, KJV, “understand,” RV, “perceive”; 16:9, 11; 24:15 (here rather perhaps in the sense of considering) and parallels in Mark (not in Luke); John 12:40; Rom. 1:20; 1 Tim. 1:7; Heb. 11:3; in Eph. 3:4, KJV, “may understand” (RV, “can perceive”); 3:20, “think”; 2 Tim. 2:7, “consider,” See CONSIDER, No. 4.¶

3. ginosko (γινώσκω, 1097), “to know, to come to know,” is translated “to understand” in the KJV in Matt. 26:10 and John 8:27 (RV, “to perceive”); KJV and RV in John 8:43; 10:6; in 10:38, RV (in some texts pisteuo, KJV, “believe”); KJV and RV in 12:16; 13:7 RV, KJV, “know” (see Note under KNOW, No. 2); Acts 8:30; in Phil. 1:12, KJV, RV, “know” (in some texts, Acts 24:11, KJV). See KNOW, No. 1.

4. epistamai (ἐπίσταμαι, 1987), “to know well,” is rendered “to understand” in Mark 14:68; Jude 10, RV, 2nd clause (KJV, “know”). See KNOW, No. 5.

5. punthanomai (πυνθάνομαι, 4441), “to inquire,” is rendered “to understand” in Acts 23:34. See INQUIRE.

6. gnorizo (γνωρίζω, 1107), “to make known,” is rendered “I give ... to understand” in 1 Cor. 12:3. See KNOW, No. 8.

7. agnoeo (ἄγνοέω, 50), “to be ignorant,” is rendered “they understood not” in Mark 9:32; Luke 9:45; in 2 Pet. 2:12, KJV, RV, “they are ignorant of” See IGNORANT, B, No. 1.

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 13:2, KJV, oida, “to know, to perceive,” is rendered “understand” (RV, “know”); so in 14:16. (2) For manthano, rendered “understand in Acts 23:27, KJV, see LEARN, No. 1. (3) In 1 Cor. 13:11, KJV, phroneo, “to be minded,” is rendered “I understood” (RV, “I felt”). (4) For parakolouthéo, Luke 1:3, KJV, “have perfect understanding of,” see TRACE.

B. Adjectives.

1. eusemos (εὐσημος, 2154), primarily denotes “conspicuous” or “glorious” (as in Ps. 81:3, Sept.; RV, “solemn”¶), then, “distinct, clear to understanding,” 1 Cor. 14:9, “easy to be understood” (KJV, marg., “significant”).¶

2. dusnoetos (δυσνόητος, 1425), “hard to be understood” (dus, a prefix like Eng., “mis- or un-,” and A, No. 2), occurs in 2 Pet. 3:16.¶

UNDERSTANDING

A. Nouns.

1. nous (νοῦς, 3563), for which see MIND, No. 1, is translated “understanding” in Luke 24:45, KJV (RV, “mind”); 1 Cor. 14:14, 15 (twice), 19; Phil. 4:7; Rev. 13:18.

2. sunesis (σύνεσις, 4907), akin to sunimi, “to set together, to understand,” denotes (a) “the understanding, the mind or intelligence,” Mark 12:33; (b) “understanding, reflective thought,” Luke 2:47; 1 Cor. 1:19, RV, “prudence”, Eph. 3:4, RV (KV, “knowledge”); Col. 1:9; 2:2; 2 Tim. 2:7.¶ See PRUDENCE, No. 2.

3. dianoia (διάνοια, 1271), for which see MIND, No. 2, is rendered “understanding” in Eph. 4:18; 1 John 5:20 (in some texts, Eph. 1:18, KJV, for kardia, “heart,” RV).

B. Adjective.

asunetos (ἀσύνετος, 801), “without understanding or discernment” (a, negative, sunetos, “intelligent, understanding”), is translated “without understanding” in Matt. 15:16; Mark 7:18; Rom. 1:31; 10:19, RV, “void of understanding” (KJV, “foolish”); in Rom. 1:21, RV, “senseless” (KJV, “foolish”).¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 14:20, KJV, phren, “the mind,” is translated “understanding” (twice), RV, “mind.”

For UNDONE (leave) see LEAVE, No. 1

UNDRESSED

agnaphos (ἄγναφος, 46), “uncarded” (a, negative, knapto, “to card wool”), is rendered “undressed,” of cloth, in Matt. 9:16 and Mark 2:21, RV (KJV, “new”).¶

For UNEQUALLY see YOKED

UNFAITHFUL

apistos (ἄπιστος, 571), “unbelieving, faithless,” is translated “unfaithful” in Luke 12:46, RV (KJV, “unbelievers”). See BELIEF, C, Note (3), FAITHLESS, INCREDIBLE.

For UNFEIGNED see DISSIMULATION, C

For UNFRUITFUL see FRUIT, B, No. 2

UNGODLINESS, UNGODLY

A. Noun.

asebeu (ἀσέβεια, 763), “impiety, ungodliness,” is used of (a) general impiety, Rom. 1:18; 11:26; 2 Tim. 2:16; Titus 2:12; (b) “ungodly” deeds, Jude 15, RV, “works of ungodliness”; (c) of lusts or desires after evil things, Jude 18. It is the opposite of eusebeia, “godliness.”¶

Note: Anomia is disregard for, or defiance of, God’s laws; asebeia is the same attitude towards God’s Person.

B. Adjective.

asebes (ἀσεβής, 765), “impious, ungodly” (akin to A), “without reverence for God,” not merely irreligious, but acting in contravention of God’s demands, Rom. 4:5; 5:6; 1 Tim. 1:9; 1 Pet. 4:18; 2 Pet. 2:5 (v. 6 in some mss.); 3:7; Jude 4, 15 (twice).¶

C. Verb.

asebeo (ἀσεβέω, 764), akin to A and B, signifies (a) “to be or live ungodly,” 2 Pet. 2:6; (b) “to commit ungodly deeds,” Jude 15.¶

UNHOLY

1. anosios (ἀνόσιος, 462), (a, negative, n, euphonic, hosios, “holy”), “unholy, profane,” occurs in 1 Tim. 1:9; 2 Tim. 3:2.¶ Cf. HOLY. In the Sept., Ezek. 22:9.¶

2. koinon (κοινός, 2839), the neut. of koinos, “common,” is translated “an unholy thing” in Heb. 10:29. See COMMON, DEFILE, C, UNCLEAN, A, No. 2.

For UNITED, Rom. 6:5, RV, see PLANT, C; in Heb. 4:2, see MIXED (with),

Note

UNITY

henotes (ἐνότης, 1775), from hen, the neuter of heis, “one.” is used in Eph. 4:3, 13.¶

UNJUST

adikos (ἄδικος, 94), “not in conformity with dike. ‘right,’” is rendered “unjust” in the KJV and RV in Matt. 5:45; Luke 18:11; Acts 24:15; elsewhere for the KJV “unjust” the RV has “unrighteous. See UNRIGHTEOUS.

Note: For adikeo, “to be unrighteous,” or “do unrighteousness,” Rev. 22:11, RV, and adikia, “unrighteous,” Luke 16:8 and 18:6, RV, see UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.

For UNKNOWN see IGNORANCE, B, No. 1, and KNOW, 13, No. 4

UNLADE

apophortizo (ἀποφορτίζομαι, 670), “to discharge a cargo” (apo, “from,” phortizo, “to load”), is used in Acts 21:3.¶

UNLAWFUL

athemitos (ἄθέμιτος, 111), a late form for athemistos (themis, “custom, right”; in classical Greek “divine law”), “contrary to what is right,” is rendered “an unlawful thing” (neuter) in Acts 10:28; in 1 Pet. 4:3, “abominable.”¶

Note: For 2 Pet. 2:8, KJV, see LAWLESS.

UNLEARNED

1. agrammatos (ἀγράμματος, 62), lit., “unlettered” (grammata, “letters”: grapho, “to write”) Acts 4:13, is explained by GrimmThayer as meaning “unversed in the learning of the Jewish schools”; in the papyri, however, it occurs very frequently in a formula used by one who signs for another who cannot write, which suggests that the rulers, elders and scribes regarded the apostles as “unlettered” (Moulton and Milligan).¶

2. amathes (ἀμαθής, 261), “unlearned” manthano, “to learn”), is translated “unlearned” in 2 Pet. 3:16, KJV (RV, “ignorant”).¶

3. apaideutos (ἀπαίδευτος, 521), “uninstructed” (paideuo, “to train, teach”), is translated “unlearned” in 2 Tim. 2:23, KJV (RV, “ignorant”).¶

Note: For idiotes, rendered “unlearned” in 1 Cor. 14:16, 23, 24, see IGNORANT, No. 4.

For UNLEAVENED see BREAD, No. 2

For UNLESS see EXCEPT

UNLIFTED

anakalupto (ἀνακαλύπτω, 343), “to uncover, unveil,” used in 2 Cor. 3:14 with the negative me, “not,” is rendered “unlifted,” RV, KJV, “untaken away” (a paraphrase rather than translation); the RV marg., “remaineth, it not being revealed that it is done away,” is not to be preferred. The best rendering seems to be, “the veil remains unlifted (for it is in Christ that it is done away).” Judaism does not recognize the vanishing of the glory of the Law as a means of life, under God’s grace in Christ. In 3:18 the RV, “unveiled (face)”

(KJV, “open”), continues the metaphor of the veil (vv. 13-17), referring to hindrances to the perception of spiritual realities, hindrances removed in the unveiling.¶

UNLOOSE

luo (λύω, 3089), “to loose,” is rendered “to unloose” in Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; John 1:27; in Acts 13:25, RV: see LOOSE.

UNMARRIED

agamos (ἄγαμος, 22), a, negative, gameo, “to marry,” occurs in 1 Cor. 7:8, 11, 32, 34.¶

UNMERCIFUL

aneleemon (ἀνελεήμων, 415), “without mercy” (a, negative, n, euphonic, eleemon, “merciful”), occurs in Rom. 1:31.¶

For UNMIXED, Rev. 14:10, RV, see MIXTURE, Note

For UNMOVABLE, Acts 27:41, see MOVE, B, No. 1; in 1 Cor. 15:58, MOVE, B, No. 2

UNPREPARED

aparaskeuastos (ἀπαρασκευάστος, 532), from a, negative, and paraskeuazo (see PREPARE, B, No. 4), occurs in 2 Cor. 9:4.¶

UNPROFITABLE, UNPROFITABLENESS

A. Adjectives.

1. achreios (ἄχρηϊος, 888), “useless” (chreia, “use”), “unprofitable,” occurs in Matt. 25:30 and Luke 17:10.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 6:22.¶

2. achrestos (ἄχρηστος, 890), “unprofitable, unserviceable” (chrestos, “serviceable”), is said of Onesimus, Philem. 11, antithetically to euchrestos, “profitable,” with a play on the name of the converted slave (from onesis, “profit”).¶

Note: Achreios is more distinctly negative than achrestos, which suggests positively hurtful.

3. alusiteles (ἄλυσιτελής, 255), “not advantageous, not making good the expense involved” (lusiteles, “useful”) occurs in Heb. 13:17.¶

4. anopheles (ἀνωφέλης, 512), “not beneficial or serviceable” (a, negative, n, euphonic, opheleo, “to do good, to benefit”), is rendered “unprofitable” in Titus 3:9; in the neuter, used as a noun, “unprofitableness,” Heb. 7:18, said of the Law as not accomplishing that which the “better hope” could alone bring.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 28:3; Isa. 44:10; Jer. 2:8.¶

B. Verb.

achreoo, or achreioo (ἀχρειόω, 889), akin to A, No. 1, “to make useless,” occurs in Rom. 3:12, in the passive voice, rendered “they have ... become unprofitable.”¶

For UNQUENCHABLE see QUENCH

UNREASONABLE

1. alogos (ἄλογος, 249), “without reason, irrational,” is rendered “unreasonable” in Acts 25:27. See BRUTE.

2. atopos (ἄτοπος, 824), lit., “out of place” (topos, “a place”), is translated “unreasonable” in 2 Thess. 3:2, where the meaning intended seems to be “perverse, truculent.” See AMISS.

For UNREBUKEABLE see BLAME, B, No. 5

UNRIGHTEOUS

adikos (ἄδικος, 94), not conforming to dike, “right,” is translated “unrighteous” in Luke 16:10 (twice), RV, 11; Rom. 3:5; 1 Cor. 6:1, RV; 6:9; Heb. 6:10; 1 Pet. 3:18, RV; 2 Pet. 2:9, RV: see UNJUST.

UNRIGHTEOUSNESS

A. Noun.

adikia (ἀδικία, 93) denotes (a) “injustice,” Luke 18:6, lit., “the judge of injustice”; Rom. 9:14; (b) “unrighteousness, iniquity,” e.g., Luke 16:8, lit., “the steward of unrighteousness,” RV marg., i.e., characterized by “unrighteousness”; Rom. 1:18, 29; 2:8; 3:5; 6:13; 1 Cor. 13:6, RV, “unrighteousness”; 2 Thess. 2:10, “[with all (lit., ‘in every’) deceit] of unrighteousness,” i.e., deceit such as “unrighteousness” uses, and that in every variety; Antichrist and his ministers will not be restrained by any scruple from words or deeds calculated to deceive; 2 Thess. 2:12, of those who have pleasure in it, not an intellectual but a moral evil; distaste for truth is the precursor of the rejection of it; 2 Tim. 2:19, RV; 1 John 1:9, which includes (c); (c) “a deed or deeds violating law and justice” (virtually the same as adikema, “an unrighteous act”), e.g., Luke 13:27, “iniquity”; 2 Cor. 12:13, “wrong,” the wrong of depriving another of what is his own, here ironically of a favor; Heb. 8:12, 1st clause, “iniquities,” lit., “unrighteousnesses” (plural, not as KJV); 2 Pet. 2:13, 15, RV, “wrongdoing,” KJV, “unrighteousness”; 1 John 5:17. See INIQUITY.

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 6:14, KJV, anomia, “lawlessness,” is translated “unrighteousness” (RV, “iniquity”). (2) Adikia is the comprehensive term for wrong, or wrongdoing, as between persons; anomia, “lawlessness,” is the rejection of divine law, or wrong committed against it.

B. Verb.

adikeo (ἀδικέω, 91), “to do wrong,” is rendered in Rev. 22:11, RV, firstly, “he that is unrighteous,” lit., “the doer of unrighteousness” (present participle of the verb, with the article), secondly, “let him do unrighteousness (still),” the retributive and permanent effect of a persistent course of unrighteous-doing (KJV, “he that is unjust, let him be unjust”). See HURT, OFFENDER, Note, WRONG.

For UNRIPE, UNTIMELY, see FIG, No. 2

UNRULY

1. anupotaktos (ἀνυπότακτος, 506), “not subject to rule” (a, negative, n, euphonic, hupotasso, “to put in subjection”), is used (a) of things, Heb. 2:8, RV, “not subject” (KJV, “not put under”); (b) of persons, “unruly,” 1 Tim. 1:9, RV (KJV, “disobedient”); Titus 1:6, 10. See DISOBEDIENT, B, Note.¶

2. ataktos (ἀτάκτως, 814) is rendered “unruly” in 1 Thess. 5:14, KJV (marg. and RV, “disorderly”). See DISORDERLY, A.¶

Note: In Jas. 3:8, some texts have akataschetos, “that cannot be restrained,” KJV, “unruly”: see RESTLESS.¶

UNSEARCHABLE

1. anexeraunetos, or anexereunetos (ἀνεξερεύνητος, 419), a, negative, n, euphonic, ex (ek), “out,” eraunao, “to search, examine,” is used in Rom. 11:33, of the judgments of God.¶

2. anexichniastos (ἀνεξιχνίαστος, 421), with the same prefixes as in No. 1 and an adjectival form akin to ichneuo, “to trace out” (ichnos, “a footprint, a track”), is translated “unsearchable” in Eph. 3:8, of the riches of Christ; in Rom. 11:33, “past tracing out,” of the ways of the Lord (cf. No. 1, in the same verse). The ways of God are the outworkings of His judgment. Of the two questions in v. 34, the first seems to have reference to No. 1, the second to No. 2. See FIND, Note (3), TRACE.¶

UNSEMLINESS, UNSEEMLY

aschemosune (ἀσχημοσύνη, 808), from aschemon, “unseemly,” is rendered “unseemliness” in Rom. 1:27, RV: see SHAME, No. 4.

Note: For “behave ... unseemly” see BEHAVE, No. 4.

For UNSETTLE, Gal. 5:12, RV, see STIR, No. 12

For UNSKILLFUL, Heb. 5:13, see EXPERIENCE, No. 1

UNSPEAKABLE

1. anekdiegetos (ἀνεκδιήγητος, 411) denotes “inexpressible” (a, negative, n, euphonic, ekdiegeomai, “to declare, relate”), 2 Cor. 9:15, “unspeakable” (of the gift of God); regarding the various explanations of the gift, it seems most suitable to view it as the gift of His Son.¶

2. aneklaletos (ἀνεκλάλητος, 412) denotes “unable to be told out” (eklaleo, “to speak out”), 1 Pet. 1:8, of the believer joy.¶

3. arrhetos (ἄρρητος, 731), primarily, “unspoken” (a, negative, rhetos, “spoken”), denotes “unspeakable,” 2 Cor. 12:4, of the words heard by Paul when caught up into paradise.¶ The word is common in sacred inscriptions especially in connection with the Greek Mysteries; hence Moulton and Milligan suggest the meaning “words too sacred to be uttered.”

For UNSPOTTED see SPOT, C

UNSTABLE, UNSTEADFAST

1. asteriktos (ἀστήρικτος, 793), a, negative, sterizo, “to fix,” is used in 2 Pet. 2:14; 3:16, KJV, “unstable,” RV, “unsteadfast.”¶

2. akatastatos (ἀκατάστατος, 182), from kathistemi, “to set in order,” is rendered “unstable” in Jas. 1:8: see RESTLESS.

For UNTAKEN AWAY, 2 Cor. 3:14, KJV, see UNLIFTED

UNTHANKFUL

acharistos (ἀχάριστος, 884) denotes “ungrateful, thankless” (charis, “thanks”), Luke 6:35; 2 Tim. 3:2.¶

For UNTIL and UNTO see †, p. 1

For UNTIMELY see FIG, No. 2

For UNTOWARD see CROOKED

UNVEILED

akatakaluptos (ἀκατακάλυπτος, 177), “uncovered” (a, negative, katakalupto, “to cover”), is used in 1 Cor. 11:5, 13, RV, “unveiled,” with reference to the injunction forbidding women to be “unveiled” in a church gathering.¶ Whatever the character of the covering, it is to be on her head as “a sign of authority” (v. 10), RV, the meaning of which is indicated in v. 3 in the matter of headships, and the reasons for which are given in vv. 7-9, and in the phrase “because of the angels,” intimating their witness of, and interest in, that which betokens the headship of Christ. The injunctions were neither Jewish, which required men to be veiled in prayer, nor Greek, by which men and women were alike “unveiled.” The apostle’s instructions were “the commandment of the Lord” (14), and were for all the churches (vv. 33, 34).

Note: For the verb anakalupto, rendered “unveiled” in 2 Cor. 3:18, RV, see UNLIFTED (2nd ref.).

UNWASHED

aniptos (ἄνιπτος, 449), “unwashed” (a, negative, nipto, “to wash”), occurs in Matt. 15:20; Mark 7:2 (v. 5 in some mss.).¶

UNWILLING

Note: “I am unwilling” is the RV rendering of thelo, “to will,” with the negative ou, in 3 John 13 (KJV, “I will not”).

UNWISE

1. anoetos (ἀνόητος, 453) is translated “unwise” in Rom. 1:14, KJV; see FOOLISH, No. 2.

2. aphron (ἄφρων, 878) is translated “unwise” in Eph. 5:17, KJV; see FOOLISH, No. 1.

3. asophos (ἄσοφος, 781), a, negative, is rendered “unwise” in Eph. 5:15, RV (KJV, “fools.”)¶

UNWORTHILY, UNWORTHY

A. Adverb.

anaxios (ἀναξίως, 371) is used in 1 Cor. 11:27, of partaking of the Lord’s Supper “unworthily,” i.e., treating it as a common meal, the bread and cup as common things, not apprehending their solemn symbolic import. In the best texts the word is not found in v. 29 (see RV).¶

B. Adjective.

---

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

anaxios (ἀνάξιος, 370), a, negative, n, euphonic, axios, “worthy,” is used in 1 Cor. 6:2. In modern Greek it signifies “incapable.”¶

Note: In Acts 13:46, “unworthy” represents the adjective axios, preceded by the negative ouk.

UP

Notes: (1) In Matt. 13:6 and Mark 4:6, KJV, anatello, “to rise” (of the sun), is rendered “was up.” See RISE. (2) The adverb is used with numerous Eng. verbs to translate single Greek verbs. In John 11:41 and Heb. 12:15, however, the adverb ano, “up,” is used separately: see ABOVE, BRIM, HIGH.

For UPBRAID see REPROACH, B, No. 1

UPHOLD

phero (φέρω, 5342), “to bear, carry, uphold,” is rendered “upholding” in Heb. 1:3. See BEAR.

For UPON see †, p. 1

For UPPER see CHAMBER, COUNTRY, B, No. 1, ROOM

UPPERMOST

Note: In Luke 11:43 protokathedria, “a chief seat,” is translated “uppermost seats,” KJV (RV, “chief seats”). In Matt. 23:6 and Mark 12:39, KJV, protoklisia, “a chief place,” is translated “uppermost rooms” (RV, “chief place” and “chief places”). See CHIEF, B, Nos. 6 and 7.

For UPRIGHT see STRAIGHT, No. 2; UPRIGHTLY see WALK, No. 6

UPRIGHTNESS

euthutes (εὐθύτης, 2118), from euthus, “straight,” is rendered “uprightness” in Heb. 1:8, RV, KJV, “righteousness,” marg., “rightness,” or, “straightness.”¶

For UPROAR (Noun), thorubos, see TUMULT, and for stasis see RIOT

UPROAR (Verbs)

thorubeo (θορυβέω, 2350), used in the middle voice, denotes “to make a noise or uproar,” or, transitively, in the active voice, “to trouble, throw into confusion,” Acts 17:5. See ADO, NOISE, TROUBLE.

Note: For suncheo, “to confuse,” Acts 21:31 (KJV, “was in an uproar”), see CONFUSION; for anastatoo, Acts 21:38 (KJV, “madest an uproar”), see STIR UP.

For UPSIDE DOWN see TURN, No. 15.

URGE

Notes: (1) In Acts 13:50, KJV, parotruno, “to urge on” (RV), is rendered “stirred up.”¶ (2) In Acts 13:43, peitho, “to persuade,” is rendered “urged,” RV (KJV, “persuaded”). (3)

For enecho, rendered “to urge” in Luke 11:53, KJV, see ENTANGLE, No. 3.

US

The oblique cases of hemeis, “we,” are the genitive hemon, “of us,” the dative hemin, “to us,” the accusative hemas, “us.” When the nominative hemeis is used, it is always emphatic, e.g., John 11:16, “(let) us (go)” ; lit., “we, let us go”; 1 Thess. 5:8, “let us ... be sober,” lit., “we ... let us be sober.” Sometimes the oblique cases are governed by prepositions.

USE (Noun), USEFUL

1. hexis (ἔξις, 1838), akin to echo, “to have,” denotes “habit, experience,” “use,” Heb. 5:14.¶

2. chreia (χρεία, 5532), “need,” is translated “uses” in Titus 3:14; in Eph. 4:29, KJV, “(for the) use (of edifying),” RV, “(as the) need (may be).” See NECESSITY, NEED.

3. chresis (χρησις, 5540), “use” (akin to chraomai, “to use”), occurs in Rom. 1:26, 27.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 2:21, the adjective euchrestos, “useful, serviceable” (eu, “well,” chraomai, “to use”), is translated “meet for ... use”; in 4:11, “useful,” RV (KJV, “profitable”); in Philem. 11, “profitable”. See PROFITABLE, B, No. 2.¶ (2) In 1 Cor. 8:7 the best texts have the noun sunetheia, RV, “being used,” lit., “by the custom (of the idol),” i.e., by being associated. See CUSTOM. In the Sept., Prov. 31:13.¶ Contrast achrestos, “unprofitable,” Philem. 1:1.¶

USE (Verb)

1. chraomai (χράω, 5531), from chre, “it is necessary,” denotes (a) “to use,” Acts 27:17; 1 Cor. 7:21, where “use it rather” means “use your bondservice rather”; 7:31, where “they that use (this world)” is followed by the strengthened form katachraomai, rendered “abusing,” or “using to the full” (RV, marg.); 9:12, 15; 2 Cor. 1:17; 3:12; 13:10; 1 Tim. 1:8, of “using” the Law lawfully, i.e., agreeably to its designs; 1 Tim. 5:23; (b) “deal with,” Acts 27:3. See ENTREAT (TO TREAT). Cf. the active chrao (or kichremi), “to lend,” Luke 11:5. See LEND.¶

2. echo (ἔχω, 2192), “to have,” is rendered “using” in 1 Pet. 2:16 (marg., “having”); see HAVE.

3. anastrepho (ἀναστρέφω, 390) chiefly denotes “to behave, to live in a certain manner,” rendered “(were so) used” in Heb. 10:33 (passive voice); the verb, however, does not mean “to treat or use”; here it has the significance of “living amidst sufferings, reproaches,” etc. See ABIDE, BEHAVE, LIVE, OVERTHROW, PASS, RETURN.

Notes: (1) In Acts 19:19, KJV, prasso, “to practice” (RV), is rendered “used.” (2) For Heb. 5:13, KJV, “useth (milk),” see PARTAKE, B, No. 3. (3) In 1 Thess. 2:5, “were we found using” is the rendering of the verb ginomai, “to become,” with the preposition en, “in,” governing the noun, “words (or speech) [of flattery]”; this idiomatic phrase signifies “to be engaged in, to resort to.” A rendering close to the meaning of the Greek is “for neither at any time did we fall into the use of flattering speech”; cf. 1 Tim. 2:14, “fallen into transgression.” (4) “To use” is combined in Eng. with other words, e.g., DECEIT, DESPITEFULLY, HOSPITALITY, REPETITIONS.

USING

apochresis (ἀπόχρησις, 671), a strengthened form of chresis, “a using,” and signifying “a misuse” (akin to apochraomai, “to use to the full, abuse”), is translated “using” in Col. 2:22; the clause may be rendered “by their using up.” “The unusual word was chosen for its expressiveness; the chresis here was an apochresis; the things could not be used without rendering them unfit for further use” (Lightfoot).¶

For USURP see AUTHORITY, B, No. 3

USURY

Note: The RV, “interest,” Matt. 25:27; Luke 19:23, is the preferable rendering of tokos here. See INTEREST.¶

For UTMOST PART see END, A, No. 3

UTTER

1. laleo (λαλέω, 2980), “to speak,” is rendered “to utter” in 2 Cor. 12:4 and Rev. 10:3, 4 (twice). See PREACH, SAY, SPEAK, TALK, TELL.

2. ereugomai (ἐρεύγομαι, 2044), primarily, “to spit or spue out,” or, of oxen, “to bellow, roar,” hence, “to speak aloud, utter,” occurs in Matt. 13:35.¶ This affords an example of the tendency for certain words to become softened in force in late Greek.

3. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), “to send forth,” is used of “uttering” a cry, Mark 15:37, of Christ’s final “utterance” on the cross, RV, “uttered” (KJV, “cried”). See FORGIVE, LAY, Note (2), LEAVE, LET, OMITTED, PUT, REMIT, SUFFER, YIELD.

4. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is translated “utter” in 1 Cor. 14:9. See GIVE.

5. phthengomai (φθέγγομαι, 5350), “to utter a sound or voice,” is translated “uttering” in 2 Pet. 2:18, RV: see SPEAK, No. 4.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 8:26, alaletos, “inexpressible” (a, negative, laleo, “to speak”), is rendered “which cannot be uttered.”¶ (2) In Heb. 5:11, KJV, dusermeneutos, followed by lego, “to speak,” [translated “hard of interpretation” (RV), dus (whence “dys-” in Eng., “dyspeptic,” etc.), a prefix like Eng., “un-,” or “mis-,” and hermeneuo, “to interpret”], is rendered “hard to be uttered.”¶

UTTERANCE

logos (λόγος, 3056), “a word,” is translated “utterance” in 1 Cor. 1:5; 2 Cor. 8:7; Eph. 6:19. See WORD.

Notes: (1) In Col. 4:3, KJV, logos is rendered “(a door) of utterance.” (2) For apophthengomai, rendered “utterance” in Acts 2:4, see SPEAK, No. 5.

For UTTERLY, 1 Cor. 6:7, see ACTUALLY; 2 Pet. 2:12, see CORRUPT, A, No. 2 (b)

UTTERMOST

1. panteles (παντελής, 3838), the neuter of the adjective panteles, “complete, perfect,” used with eis to (“unto the”), is translated “to the uttermost” in Heb. 7:25, where the meaning may be “finally”; in Luke 13:11 (negatively), “in no wise.”¶

2. telos (τέλος, 5056), “an end,” is rendered “the uttermost” in 1 Thess. 2:16, said of divine wrath upon the Jews, referring to the prophecy of Deut. 28:15-68; the nation as such, will yet, however, be delivered (Rom. 11:26; cf. Jer. 30:4-11). The full phrase is eis telos, “to the uttermost,” which is probably the meaning in John 13:1, “to the end.”

Notes: (1) For “uttermost (farthing),” Matt. 5:26, KJV, see LAST. For “uttermost in Acts 24:22, see DETERMINE, No. 5. (2) For “uttermost part (-s),” see END, A, No. 3 (a) and C (b).

V

For VAGABOND see STROLLING

For VAIL see VEIL

VAIN, IN VAIN, VAINLY

A. Adjectives.

1. kenos (κενός, 2756), “empty,” with special reference to quality, is translated “vain” (as an adjective) in Acts 4:25; 1 Cor. 15:10, 14 (twice); Eph. 5:6; Col. 2:8; Jas. 2:20; in the following the neuter, kenon, follows the preposition eis, “in,” and denotes “in vain,” 2 Cor. 6:1; Gal. 2:2; Phil. 2:16 (twice); 1 Thess. 3:5. See EMPTY, B, where the applications are enumerated.

2. mataios (μάταιος, 3152), “void of result,” is used of (a) idolatrous practices, Acts 14:15, RV, “vain things” (KJV, “vanities”); (b) the thoughts of the wise, 1 Cor. 3:20; (c) faith, if Christ is not risen, 1 Cor. 15:17; (d) questionings, strifes, etc., Titus 3:9; (e) religion, with an unbridled tongue, Jas. 1:26; (f) manner of life, 1 Pet. 1:18.¶ For the contrast between No. 1 and No. 2 see EMPTY.

Note: For mataiologoi, Titus 1:10, see TALKERS (VAIN).¶

B. Verbs.

1. mataioo (ματαιόω, 3154), “to make vain, or foolish,” corresponding in meaning to A, No. 2, occurs in Rom. 1:21, “became vain.”¶

2. kenoo (κενόω, 2758), “to empty,” corresponding to A, No. 1, is translated “should be in vain” in 2 Cor. 9:3, KJV. See EFFECT, EMPTY, VOID.

C. Adverbs.

---

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

1. maten (μάτην, 3155), properly the accusative case of mate, “a fault, a folly,” signifies “in vain, to no purpose,” Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7.¶

2. dorean (δωρεάν, 1432), the accusative of dorea, “a gift,” is used adverbially, denoting (a) “freely” (see FREE, D); (b) “uselessly,” “in vain,” Gal. 2:21, KJV (RV, “for nought”). See CAUSE, A, under “without a cause.”

3. eike (εἰκῆ, 1500) denotes (a) “without cause,” “vainly,” Col. 2:18; (b) “to no purpose,” “in vain,” Rom. 13:4; Gal. 3:4 (twice); 4:11. See CAUSE, A, Note (1), under “without a cause.”

VAINGLORY, VAINGLORIOUS

A. Nouns.

1. kenodoxia (κενοδοξία, 2754), from kenos, “vain, empty,” doxa, “glory,” is used in Phil. 2:3.¶

2. alaoneia, or -ia (ἀλαζονεία, 212) denotes “boastfulness, vaunting,” translated “vainglory” in 1 John 2:16, RV (KJV, “pride”); in Jas. 4:16, RV, “vauntings” (KJV, “boastings”). Cf. alazon, “a boaster.”¶

B. Adjective.

kenodoxos (κενόδοξος, 2755), akin to A, No. 1, is rendered “vainglorious” in Gal. 5:26, RV (KJV, “desirous of vain glory”).¶

For VALIANT see MIGHTY, B, No. 2, STRONG, No. 2 (a) (3)

VALLEY

pharanx (φάραγξ, 5327) denotes “a ravine or valley,” sometimes figurative of “a condition of loneliness and danger” (cf. Ps. 23:4); the word occurs in Luke 3:5 (from the Sept. of Isa. 40:4).¶

VALUE

A. Verb.

diaphero (διαφέρω, 1308), used intransitively, means “to differ, to excel,” hence “to be of more value,” Matt. 6:26, RV, “are (not) ye of (much) more value” (KJV, “better”); 12:12 and Luke 12:24, ditto; Matt. 10:31; Luke 12:7. See BETTER (BE), CARRY, No. 4, DIFFER, DRIVE, No. 7, EXCELLENT, MATTER, Note (1), PUBLISH, No. 2.

Note: For timao, rendered “to value” in Matt. 27:9 (twice), KJV, see PRICE.

B. Noun.

time (τιμή, 5092) denotes “a valuing, a price, honor”; in Col. 2:23, RV, “(not of any) value (against the indulgence of the flesh)” [KJV, “(not in any) honor ...”], i.e., the ordinances enjoined by human tradition are not of any value to prevent (pros, “against”; cf. Acts 26:14) indulgence of the flesh. See HONOR, PRECIOUS, PRICE, SUM.

VANISH, VANISHING

A. Verb.

aphanizo (ἀφανίζω, 853), “to render unseen,” is translated “vanisheth away” in Jas. 4:14 (passive voice, lit., “is made to disappear”). See CONSUME, DISFIGURE, PERISH.

Note: In 1 Cor. 13:8, KJV, katargeo, “to abolish,” is rendered “it shall vanish away” (RV, “... be done away”). See ABOLISH.

B. Noun.

aphanismos (ἀφανισμός, 854), a, negative, phaino, “to cause to appear” (akin to A), occurs in Heb. 8:13, RV, “(nigh unto) vanishing away”; the word is suggestive of abolition.¶

Note: In Luke 24:31, the adjective aphantos (akin to A and B), “invisible,” used with ginomai, “to become,” and followed by apo, “from,” with the plural personal pronoun, is rendered “He vanished out of their sight” (KJV, marg., “He ceased to be seen of them”), lit., “He became invisible from them.”¶

VANITY

mataiotes (ματαιότης, 3153), “emptiness as to results,” akin to mataios (see EMPTY, VAIN), is used (a) of the creation, Rom. 8:20, as failing of the results designed, owing to sin; (b) of the mind which governs the manner of life of the Gentiles, Eph. 4:17; (c) of the “great swelling words” of false teachers, 2 Pet. 2:18.¶

Note: For mataios, in the neut. plur. in Acts 14:15, “vanities,” see VAIN, A, No. 2 (a).

VAPOR

atmis (ἀτμίς, 822) is used of “smoke,” Acts 2:19; figuratively of human life, Jas. 4:14.¶

VARIABLENESS, VARIATION

parallage (παράλλαγή, 3883) denotes, in general, “a change” (Eng., “parallax,” the difference between the directions of a body as seen from two different points), “a transmission” from one condition to another; it occurs in Jas. 1:17, RV, “variation” (KJV, “variableness”); the reference may be to the sun, which “varies” its position in the sky.¶ In the Sept., 2 Kings 9:20.¶

VARIANCE

dichazo (διχάζω, 1369), “to cut apart, divide in two,” is used metaphorically in Matt. 10:35, “to set at variance.”¶

Notes: (1) In Gal. 5:20, KJV, eris, “strife” (RV), is rendered “variance.” (2) For adiakritos, Jas. 3:17, RV, “without variance” (marg., “doubtfulness, or partiality”), KJV, “without partiality” (marg., “without wrangling”), see PARTIAL.¶

VAUNT (ONESELF)

perpereuomai (περπερεύομαι, 4068), “to boast or vaunt oneself” (from perperos, “vainglorious, braggart,” not in the NT), is used in 1 Cor. 13:4, negatively of love.¶

For VAUNTINGS see VAINGLORY

For VEHEMENT see DESIRE, A, No. 3

VEHEMENTLY

1. deinos (δεινώς, 1171), for which see GRIEVOUS, B, No. 1, is rendered “vehemently” in Luke 11:53.

2. eutonos (εὐτόνως, 2159), vigorously, is translated “vehemently” in Luke 23:10, of accusations against Christ. See MIGHTY, D.

3. ekperissos (ἐκ, 1537 and ἐκ, 4053), formed from ek, “out of,” and the adverb perissos, “exceedingly, the more,” is found in Mark 14:31, in the best texts (some have ek perissou, the genitive case of the adjective perissos, “more”), RV, “exceeding vehemently” (KJV, “the more vehemently”), of Peter’s protestation of loyalty; the RV gives the better rendering.¶

Note: For “brake (KJV, ‘beat’) vehemently,” Luke 6:48, 49, see BEAT, No. 8.

VEIL

1. katapetasma (καταπέτασμα, 2665), lit., “that which is spread out” (petannumi) “before” (kata), hence, “a veil,” is used (a) of the inner “veil” of the tabernacle, Heb. 6:19; 9:3; (b) of the corresponding “veil” in the Temple, Matt. 27:51; Mark 15:38; Luke 23:45; (c) metaphorically of the “flesh” of Christ, Heb. 10:20, i.e., His body which He gave up to be crucified, thus by His expiatory death providing a means of the spiritual access of believers, the “new and living way,” into the presence of God.¶

2. kalumma (κάλυμμα, 2571), “a covering,” is used (a) of the “veil” which Moses put over his face when descending Mount Sinai, thus preventing Israel from beholding the glory, 2 Cor. 3:13; (b) metaphorically of the spiritually darkened vision suffered retributively by Israel, until the conversion of the nation to their Messiah takes place, vv. 14, 15, 16. See under UNLIFTED.¶

3. peribolaion (περιβόλαιον, 4018), rendered “a veil” in the KJV marg. of 1 Cor. 11:15: see COVER, B, No. 1, VESTURE.¶

ekdikesis (ἐκδίκησις, 1557), lit., (“that which proceeds) out of justice,” not, as often with human “vengeance,” out of a sense of injury or merely out of a feeling of indignation. The word is most frequently used of divine “vengeance,” e.g., Rom. 12:19; Heb. 10:30. For a complete list see AVENGE, B, No. 2. The judgments of God are holy and right (Rev. 16:7), and free from any element of self-gratification or vindictiveness.

Notes: (1) Dike, “justice,” is translated “vengeance” in the KJV of Acts 28:4 and Jude 7: see JUSTICE. (2) In Rom. 3:5, KJV, orge, “wrath” (RV), is rendered “vengeance”: see ANGER, WRATH.

For VENOMOUS see BEAST, No. 2

VERILY

1. alethos (ἀληθώς, 230), “truly” (akin to aletheia, “truth”), is translated “verily” in 1 John 2:5. See INDEED, No. 3, SURELY, TRULY.

2. amen (ἀμήν, 281), the transliteration of a Heb. word = “truth,” is usually translated “verily” in the four Gospels; in John’s gospel the Lord introduces a solemn pronouncement by the repeated word “verily, verily” twenty-five times. See AMEN.

3. ontos (ὄντως, 3689), “really” (connected with eimi, “to be”), is rendered “verily” in Mark 11:32, RV, and Gal. 3:21. See INDEED, No. 4.

Notes: (1) In Acts 16:37, gar, “for,” is translated “verily.” (2) In Heb. 2:16, depou (in some texts de pou), a particle meaning “of course, we know,” is rendered “verily.”¶ (3) In Luke 11:51, KJV, nai, “yea” (RV), is translated “verily.” (4) The particle men (see INDEED, No. 1) is rendered “verily,” e.g., in 1 Cor. 5:3; 14:17; Heb. 12:10; in the KJV, Heb. 3:5; 7:5, 18; 1 Pet. 1:20; in Acts 26:9 it is combined with oun (“therefore”): see YEA, No. 4.

For VERITY, 1 Tim. 2:7, KJV, see TRUTH

VERY

Notes: (1) When “very” forms part of the translation of numerous other words (e.g., act, bold, many, precious, sorrowful, well), there is no separate word in the original. (2) For sphodra, “exceedingly,” sometimes rendered “very” in the KJV, see EXCEEDING, B, No. 2. (3) Occasionally one of the forms of the pronoun autos, “self, same,” is translated “very”; the RV rendering is sometimes “himself,” etc., e.g., 1 Thess. 5:23, “(The God of peace) Himself”; see, however, John 14:11, “(the) very (works)”; Rom. 13:6 and Phil. 1:6, “(this) very (thing)”; Heb. 10:1, “(the) very (image)”; and the RV, “very” (KJV, “same”) in Luke 12:12; 20:19; 24:13, 33; Acts 16:18; Rom. 9:17; Eph. 6:22. (4) Sometimes it translates the conjunction kai, in the sense of “even,” e.g., Matt. 10:30; in 24:24, KJV, “very” (RV, “even”); Luke 12:59. (5) In Philem. 12, RV, “my very” translates the possessive pronoun emos (in the neuter plural, ema) used with emphasis. (6) In Mark 8:1 some texts have pampollou, “very great,” KJV (from pas, “all,” polus, “much”), RV, “a great (pollou) multitude” (after palin, “again”). (7) For “very great” in Matt. 21:8 see GREAT, Note (6). (8) The adverb lian is translated “very” in Mark 16:2; 2 Cor. 11:5; 12:11. See EXCEEDING, B, No. 1.

VESSEL

1. skeuos (σκεῦος, 4632) is used (a) of “a vessel or implement” of various kinds, Mark 11:16; Luke 8:16; John 19:29; Acts 10:11, 16; 11:5; 27:17 (a sail); Rom. 9:21; 2 Tim. 2:20; Heb. 9:21; Rev. 2:27; 18:12; (b) of “goods or household stuff,” Matt. 12:29 and Mark 3:27, “goods”; Luke 17:31, RV, “goods” (KJV, “stuff”); (c) of “persons,” (1) for the service of God, Acts 9:15, “a (chosen) vessel”; 2 Tim. 2:21, “a vessel (unto honor)”; (2) the “subjects” of divine wrath, Rom. 9:22; (3) the “subjects” of divine mercy, Rom. 9:23; (4) the human frame, 2 Cor. 4:7; perhaps 1 Thess. 4:4; (5) a husband and wife, 1 Pet. 3:7; of the wife, probably, 1 Thess. 4:4; while the exhortation to each one “to possess himself of his own vessel in sanctification and honor” is regarded by some as referring to the believer’s body [cf. Rom. 6:13; 1 Cor. 9:27; see No. (4)], the view that the “vessel” signifies the wife, and that the reference is to the sanctified maintenance of the married state, is supported by the facts that in 1 Pet. 3:7 the same word time, “honor,” is used with regard to the wife, again in Heb. 13:4, timios, “honorable” (RV, “in honor”) is used in regard to marriage; further, the preceding command in 1 Thess. 4 is against fornication, and the succeeding one (v. 6) is against adultery.¶ In Ruth 4:10, Sept., ktaomai, “to possess,” is used of a wife.

2. angos (ἄγγεῖον, 30) denotes “a jar” or “pail,” Matt. 13:48, in the best texts (some have No. 3). It is used, in an inscription, of a cinerary urn.¶

3. angeion (ἄγγεῖον, 30) denotes “a small vessel” (a diminutive of No. 2), e.g., for carrying oil, Matt. 25:4.¶

Note: For phaulos, Jas. 3:16, RV, see EVIL, A, No. 3.

VESTURE

1. himation (ἱμάτιον, 2440), “an outer garment,” is rendered “vesture” in Rev. 19:13, 16, KJV (RV, “garment”). See APPAREL, No. 2.

2. himatismos (ἱματισμός, 2441), used of “clothing in general,” is translated “vesture” in Matt. 27:35, KJV, in a quotation from Ps. 22:18 (RV, following the better texts, omits the quotation); in John 19:24, KJV and RV; see CLOTHING, No. 4.

3. peribolaion (περιβόλαιον, 4018) is translated “vesture” in Heb. 1:12, KJV (RV, “mantle”). See COVER, B, No. 1.

VEX

1. ochleo (ὀχλέω, 3791), “to disturb, trouble,” is used in the passive voice, of being “troubled” by evil spirits, Acts 5:16.¶

2. basanizo (βασανίζω, 928), “to torment,” is translated “vexed” in 2 Pet. 2:8. See TORMENT.

Notes: (1) In Luke 6:18, the best texts have enochleo, RV, “troubled.” See TROUBLE, B, No. 5. (2) In 2 Pet. 2:7, KJV, kataponeo, “to wear down with toil,” is translated “vexed.” See DISTRESS, B, No. 4. (3) In Acts 12:1, KJV, kakoo, “to afflict” (RV), is translated “to vex.” See AFFLICT, No. 1. (4) For Matt. 17:15, KJV, “vexed,” see GRIEVOUSLY, B, Note (2).

For VIAL see BOWL

VICTORY, VICTORIOUS

A. Nouns.

1. nike (νίκη, 3529), “victory,” is used in 1 John 5:4.¶

2. nikos (νίκος, 3534), a later form of No. 1, is used in Matt. 12:20; 1 Cor. 15:54, 55, 57.¶

B. Verb.

nikao (νικάω, 3528), “to conquer, overcome,” is translated “(them) that come victorious (from)” in Rev. 15:2, RV (KJV, “that had gotten the victory”). See CONQUER, OVERCOME, PREVAIL.

VICTUALS

episitismos (ἐπισιτισμός, 1979), “provisions, food” (epi, “upon,” sitizo, “to feed, nourish”; sitos, “food”), is translated “victuals” in Luke 9:12.¶

Note: In Matt. 14:15, KJV, broma, “food, meat,” is translated “victuals” (RV, “food”). See MEAT.

For VIGILANT, 1 Tim. 3:2, see TEMPERATE; 1 Pet. 5:8, see WATCHFUL VILE

A. Noun.

atimia (ἀτιμία, 819), “dishonor,” is translated “vile” in Rom. 1:26, RV, marg., “(passions) of dishonor.” See DISHONOR.

B. Adjectives.

1. rhuparos (ρύπαρός, 4508), “filthy dirty,” is used (a) literally, of old shabby clothing, Jas. 2:2, “vile”; (b) metaphorically, of moral defilement, Rev. 22:11 (in the best texts).¶ In the Sept., Zech. 3:3, 4.¶

2. poneros (πονηρός, 4190), “evil,” is translated “vile” in Acts 17:5, RV (KJV, “lewd”). See BAD, EVIL.

Note: For “vile” in the KJV of Phil. 3:21, see HUMILIATION.

kome (κώμη, 2968), “a village,” or “country town,” primarily as distinct from a walled town, occurs in the Gospels; elsewhere only in Acts 8:25. The difference between polis, “a city,” and kome, is maintained in the NT, as in Josephus. Among the Greeks the point of the distinction was not that of size or fortification, but of constitution and land. In the OT the city and the village are regularly distinguished. The Mishna makes the three distinctions, a large city, a city, and a village.

The RV always substitutes “village(-s)” for KJV, “town(-s),” Matt. 10:11; Mark 8:23, 26, 27; Luke 5:17; 9:6, 12; John 7:42; 11:1, 30. See TOWN.

VILLANY

1. rhadiourgia (ῥαδιουργία, 4468) lit. and primarily denotes “ease in working” (rhadios, “easy,” ergon, “work”), “easiness, laziness”; hence “recklessness, wickedness,” Acts 13:10, RV, “villany,” KJV, “mischief.”¶ In the papyri it is used of “theft.”

2. rhadiourgema (ῥαδιούργημα, 4467), “a reckless act” (akin to No. 1), occurs in Acts 18:14, RV, “villany” (KJV, “lewdness”).¶

ampelos (ἄμπελος, 288) is used (a) lit., e.g., Matt. 26:29 and parallel passages; Jas. 3:12; (b) figuratively, (1) of Christ, John 15:1, 4, 5; (2) of His enemies, Rev. 14:18, 19, “the vine of the earth” (RV, “vintage” in v. 19), probably figurative of the remaining mass of apostate Christendom.¶

VINEDRESSER

ampelourgos (ἀμπελουργός, 289), “a worker in a vineyard” (from ampelos, “a vine,” and ergon), is rendered “vinedresser” in Luke 13:7, RV (KJV, “dresser of the vineyard”).¶

VINEGAR

oxos (ὄξος, 3690), akin to oxus, “sharp,” denotes “sour wine,” the ordinary drink of laborers and common soldiers; it is used in the four Gospels of the “vinegar” offered to the Lord at His crucifixion. In Matt. 27:34 the best texts have oinos, “wine” (RV). Some have oxos (KJV, “vinegar”), but Mark 15:23 (KJV and RV) confirms the RV in the passage in Matthew. This, which the soldiers offered before crucifying, was refused by Him, as it was designed to alleviate His sufferings; the “vinegar” is mentioned in Mark 15:36; so Luke 23:36, and John 19:29, 30.¶ In the Sept., Num. 6:3; Ruth 2:14; Ps. 69:21; Prov. 25:20.¶

VINEYARD

ampelon (ἀμπελῶν, 290) is used 22 times in the Synoptic Gospels; elsewhere in 1 Cor. 9:7.

VIOLENCE, VIOLENT, VIOLENTLY

A. Nouns.

1. bia (βία, 970) denotes “force, violence,” said of men, Acts 5:26; 21:35; 24:7; of waves, 27:41.¶

2. hormema (ὄρμημα, 3731), “a rush” (akin to hormao, “to urge on, to rush”), is used of the fall of Babylon, Rev. 18:21, KJV, “violence,” RV, “mighty fall.”¶

3. biastes (βιαστής, 973), “a forceful or violent man,” is used in Matt. 11:12. See FORCE, B, No. 1, Note.¶

Note: In Heb. 11:34, KJV, dunamis, “power” (RV), is rendered “violence.”

B. Verbs.

1. diaseio (διασείω, 1286), “to shake violently,” is used in Luke 3:14, “do violence,” including intimidation.¶ In the Sept., Job 4:14.¶

2. biazo (βιάζω, 971), in the passive voice, is rendered “suffereth violence” in Matt. 11:12; see FORCE, B, Nos. 1 and 2. Some, e.g., Cremer (Lexicon) and Dalman (Words of Jesus, pp. 139,ff.), hold that the reference is to the antagonism of the enemies of the kingdom, but Luke 16:16 (middle voice: RV, “entereth violently”) indicates the meaning as referring to those who make an effort to enter the kingdom in spite of violent opposition: see PRESS, A, No. 3.¶

Note: For hormao, rendered “ran violently,” in Matt. 8:32 and parallels, see RUN, RUSH.

VIPER

echidna (ἐχιδνα, 2191) is probably a generic term for “poisonous snakes.” It is rendered “viper” in the NT, (a) of the actual creature, Acts 28:3; (b) metaphorically in Matt. 3:7; 12:34; 23:33; Luke 3:7.¶

VIRGIN

parthenos (παρθένος, 3933) is used (a) of “the Virgin Mary,” Matt. 1:23; Luke 1:27; (b) of the ten “virgins” in the parable, Matt. 25:1, 7, 11; (c) of the “daughters” of Philip the evangelist, Acts 21:9; (d) those concerning whom the apostle Paul gives instructions regarding marriage, 1 Cor. 7:25, 28, 34; in vv. 36, 37, 38, the subject passes to that of “virgin daughters” (RV), which almost certainly formed one of the subjects upon which the church at Corinth sent for instructions from the apostle; one difficulty was relative to the discredit which might be brought upon a father (or guardian), if he allowed his daughter or ward to grow old unmarried. The interpretation that this passage refers to a man and woman already in some kind of relation by way of a spiritual marriage and living together in a vow of virginity and celibacy, is untenable if only in view of the phraseology of the passage; (e) figuratively, of “a local church” in its relation to Christ, 2 Cor. 11:2; (f) metaphorically of “chaste persons,” Rev. 14:4.¶

VIRGINITY

parthenia (παρθενία, 3932), akin to the above, occurs in Luke 2:36.¶ In the Sept., Jer. 3:4.¶

VIRTUE

arete (ἀρέτη, 703) properly denotes whatever procures preeminent estimation for a person or thing; hence, “intrinsic eminence, moral goodness, virtue,” (a) of God, 1 Pet. 2:9, “excellencies” (KJV, “praises”); here the original and general sense seems to be blended with the impression made on others, i.e., renown, excellence or praise (Hort); in 2 Pet. 1:3, “(by His own glory and) virtue,” RV (instrumental dative), i.e., the manifestation of His divine power; this significance is frequently illustrated in the papyri and was evidently common in current Greek speech; (b) of any particular moral excellence, Phil. 4:8; 2 Pet. 1:5 (twice), where virtue is enjoined as an essential quality in the exercise of faith, RV, “(in your faith supply) virtue.”¶

Note: In the KJV of Mark 5:30; Luke 6:19; 8:46, dunamis, “power” (RV), is rendered “virtue.”

VISIBLE

horatos (ὁρατός, 3707), from horao, “to see,” occurs in Col. 1:16.¶

VISION

1. horama (ὄραμα, 3705), “that which is seen” (horao), denotes (a) “a spectacle, sight,” Matt. 17:9; Acts 7:31 (“sight”); (b) “an appearance, vision,” Acts 9:10 (v. 12 in some mss.): 10:3, 17, 19; 11:5; 12:9; 16:9, 10; 18:9.¶

2. horasis (ὄρασις, 3706), “sense of sight,” is rendered “visions” in Acts 2:17; Rev. 9:17. See LOOK, B.

3. optasia (ὀπτασία, 3701) (a late form of opsis, “the act of seeing”), from optano, “to see, a coming into view,” denotes a “vision” in Luke 1:22; 24:23; Acts 26:19; 2 Cor. 12:1.¶

VISIT

1. episkeptomai (ἐπισκέπτομαι, 1980), primarily, “to inspect” (a late form of episkopeo, “to look upon, care for, exercise oversight”), signifies (a) “to visit” with help, of the act of God, Luke 1:68, 78; 7:16; Acts 15:14; Heb. 2:6; (b) “to visit” the sick and afflicted, Matt. 25:36, 43; Jas. 1:27; (c) “to go and see,” “pay a visit to,” Acts 7:23; 15:36; (d) “to look out” certain men for a purpose, Acts 6:3 See LOOK.¶

Note: In the Sept., “to visit with punishment,” e.g., Ps. 89:32; Jer. 9:25.

2. historeo (ἱστορέω, 2477), from histor, “one learned in anything,” denotes “to visit” in order to become acquainted with, Gal. 1:18, RV, “visit” (KJV, “see”), RV marg., “become acquainted with.”¶

3. epiphero (ἐπιφέρω, 2018), for which see BRING, No. 6, is rendered “visiteth (with wrath)” in Rom. 3:5, RV, KJV, “taketh (vengeance).”

VISITATION

episkope (ἐπισκοπή, 1984), for which see BISHOP, No. 2, denotes “a visitation,” whether in mercy, Luke 19:44, or in judgment, 1 Pet. 2:12.

For VOCATION, Eph. 4:1, see CALL, B

VOICE

phone (φωνή, 5456), “a sound,” is used of the voice (a) of God, Matt. 3:17; John 5:37; 12:28, 30; Acts 7:31; 10:13, 15; 11:7, 9; Heb. 3:7, 15; 4:7; 12:19, 26; 2 Pet. 1:17, 18; Rev. 18:4; 21:3; (b) of Christ, (1) in the days of His flesh, Matt. 12:19 (negatively); John 3:29; 5:25; 10:3, 4, 16, 27; 11:43; 18:37; (2) on the cross Matt. 27:46, and parallel passages; (3) from heaven, Acts 9:4, 7; 22:7, 9, 14; 26:14; Rev. 1:10, 12 (here, by metonymy, of the speaker), 15; 3:20; (4) at the resurrection “to life,” John 5:28; 1 Thess. 4:16, where “the voice of the archangel” is, lit., “a voice of an archangel,” and probably refers to the Lord’s voice as being of an archangelic character; (5) at the resurrection to judgment, John 5:28 [not the same event as (4)]; (c) of human beings on earth, e.g., Matt. 2:18; 3:3; Luke 1:42, in some texts, KJV, “voice,” and frequently in the Synoptists; (d) of angels, Rev. 5:11, and frequently in the Apocalypse; (e) of the redeemed in heaven, e.g., Rev. 6:10; 18:22; 19:1, 5; (f) of a pagan god, Acts 12:22; (g) of things, e.g., wind, John 3:8, RV, “voice” (KJV, “sound”). See SOUND.

Notes: (1) In Luke 1:42 (1st part), KJV, anaphoneo, “to lift up one’s voice,” is rendered “spake out,” RV, “lifted up (her) voice.” (2) In Acts 26:10, KJV, “I gave my voice” (RV, “... vote”): see STONE, No. 2.

VOID

1. kenoo (κενόω, 2758), “to empty, make of no effect,” is rendered “to make void,” in Rom. 4:14; 1 Cor. 1:17, RV; 9:15; 2 Cor. 9:3, RV. ee EFFECT (of none), No. 3, EMPTY, VAIN, B, No. 2.

2. atheteo (ἀθετέω, 114), for which see DISANNUL, No. 1, is rendered “to make void” in Gal. 2:21, RV (KJV, “frustrate”); 3:15, RV.

3. akuroo (ἀκυρόω, 208), for which see DISANNUL, No. 2, is rendered “to make void” in Matt. 15:6; Mark 7:13, RV.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 3:31, KJV, katargeo is translated “to make void.” See ABOLISH, EFFECT (of none), No. 2. (2) See also IMPOSSIBLE, B, OFFENSE, UNDERSTANDING.

For VOLUME see ROLL, B

VOLUNTARY

Note: In Col. 2:18, thelo (for which see DESIRE, B, No. 6) is rendered “(in a) voluntary (humility),” present participle, i.e., “being a voluntary (in humility),” KJV marg., RV marg., “of his own mere will (by humility),” en, “in,” being rendered as instrumental; what was of one’s own mere will, with the speciousness of humility, would mean his being robbed of his prize.

VOMIT

exerama (ἐξέραιμα, 1829), “a vomit” (from exerao, “to disgorge”), occurs in 2 Pet. 2:22.¶

For VOTE, Acts 26:10, RV, see STONE, No. 2

VOUCHSAFE

homologeō (ὁμολογέω, 3670), “to agree,” is found in the best texts in Acts 7:17, and rendered “vouchsafed,” RV, with reference to God’s promise to Abraham; some mss. have omosen, “swore” (omnumi, “to swear”), as in KJV. See CONFESS, PROFESS, PROMISE THANKS, B, Note.

VOW

euche (εὐχή, 2171) denotes also “a vow,” Acts 18:18; 21:23, with reference to the “vow” of the Nazirite (wrongly spelt Nazarite), see Num. 6, RV; in Jas. 5:15, “prayer.” See PRAYER.¶

VOYAGE

plōos or plous (πλόος, 4144) is rendered “a voyage” (pleo, “to sail”) in Acts 27:10 (KJV and RV); in 21:7, RV (KJV, “course”); in 27:9, RV (KJV, “sailing”). See COURSE, B, Note (4).¶

W

WAG

kineō (κινέω, 2795), “to move,” is used of those who mocked the Lord at His crucifixion, nodding their heads in the direction of the cross as if sneering at this supposed ending of His career, Matt. 27:39; Mark 15:29. Cf. 2 Kings 19:21; Job 16:4; Ps. 22:7; 109:25; Isa. 37:22. See MOVE, No. 1.

WAGES

1. opsonion (ὀψώνιον, 3800), for which see CHARGE, A, No. 5, denotes (a) “soldier’s pay,” Luke 3:14; 1 Cor. 9:7 (“charges”); (b) in general, “hire, wages of any sort,” used metaphorically, Rom. 6:23, of sin; 2 Cor. 11:8, of material support which Paul received from some of the churches which he had established and to which he ministered in spiritual things; their support partly maintained him at Corinth, where he forebore to receive such assistance (vv. 9, 10).¶

2. misthos (μισθός, 3408), “hire,” is rendered “wages” in John 4:36; in 2 Pet. 2:15, KJV (RV, hire). See HIRE, A.

WAIL, WAILING

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

Notes: (1) For alalazo, rendered “to wail” in Mark 5:38, see CLANGING. (2) For kopto, rendered “to wail” in Rev. 1:7, KJV (RV, “shall mourn”) and 18:9, RV, “wail” (KJV, “lament”), see BEWAIL. (3) For pentheo, rendered “to wail” in Rev. 18:15, 19, KJV, see MOURN. (4) For klauthmos, rendered “wailing” in Matt. 13:42, 50, KJV, see WEEP. (5) In Matt. 11:17 and Luke 7:32, KJV, threneo, “to wail” (RV), is rendered to mourn. See BEWAIL, Note (1), MOURN.

WAIT

1. ekdechomai (ἐκδέχομαι, 1551), for which see EXPECT, No. 1, is rendered “to wait” in John 5:3, KJV; Acts 17:16; 1 Cor. 11:33, RV.

2. opekdechomai (ἀπεκδέχομαι, 553), “to await or expect eagerly,” is rendered “to wait for” in Rom. 8:19, 23, 25; 1 Cor. 1:7; Gal. 5:5; Phil. 3:20, RV (KJV, “look for”); Heb. 9:28, RV (KJV, “look for”), here “them that wait” represents believers in general, not a section of them; 1 Pet. 3:20 (in the best texts; some have No. 1). See LOOK (for), Note (1).¶

3. prosdéchomai (προσδέχομαι, 4327), “to look for” with a view to favorable reception, is rendered “to wait for” in Mark 15:43; Luke 2:25; 12:36; 23:51. See LOOK (for), No. 2.

4. prosdokao (προσδοκάω, 4328), “to await,” is rendered “to wait for” in Luke 1:21; 8:40; Acts 10:24; in 27:33, RV “ye wait” (KJV, “have tarried”). See LOOK (for), No. 1.

5. anameno (ἀναμένω, 362), “to wait for” (ana, “up,” used intensively, and meno, “to abide”), is used in 1 Thess. 1:10, of “waiting” for the Son of God from heaven; the word carries with it the suggestion of “waiting” with patience and confident expectancy.¶

6. perimeno (περιμένω, 4037), “to await an event,” is used in Acts 1:4, of “waiting” for the Holy Spirit, “the promise of the Father.”¶ In the Sept., Gen. 49:18.¶

7. proskartereo (προσκαρτερέω, 4342), to continue steadfastly, is rendered “to wait on,” in Mark 3:9 and Acts 10:7. See CONTINUE, No. 9 (in the Sept., Num. 13:21¶).

8. paredreuo (πάρδαλις, 3917a), “to sit constantly beside” (para, “beside,” hedra, “a seat”), is used in the best texts in 1 Cor. 9:13, RV, “wait upon (KJV, “at”) (the altar).”¶ In the Sept., Prov. 1:21; 8:3.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Thess. 3:5, KJV, hupomone, “patience” (so RV), is rendered “patient waiting” (marg., “patience”). See PATIENCE. (2) For “lie in wait” in Eph. 4:14, KJV, see WILES. (3) For “lying in wait,” Acts 20:19, KJV, and “laid wait,” 20:3; 23:30, see PLOT.

WAKE

gregoreo (γρηγορεύω, 1127), translated “wake” in 1 Thess. 5:10, is rendered “watch” in the RV marg., as in the text in v. 6, and the RV in the twenty-one other places in which it occurs in the NT (save 1 Pet. 5:8, “be watchful”). It is not used in the metaphorical sense of “to be alive”; here it is set in contrast with katheudo, “to sleep,” which is never used by the apostle with the meaning “to be dead” (it has this meaning only in the case of Jairus’ daughter). Accordingly the meaning here is that of vigilance and expectancy as contrasted with laxity and indifference. All believers will live together with Christ from the time of the Rapture described in ch. 4; for all have spiritual life now, though their spiritual condition and attainment vary considerably. Those who are lax and fail to be watchful will suffer loss (1 Cor. 3:15; 9:27; 2 Cor. 5:10, e.g.), but the apostle is not here dealing with that aspect of the subject. What he does make clear is that the Rapture of believers at the second coming of Christ will depend solely on the death of Christ for them, and not upon their spiritual condition. The Rapture is not a matter of reward, but of salvation. See WATCH.

WALK

1. peripateo (περιπατέω, 4043) is used (a) physically, in the Synoptic Gospels (except Mark 7:5); always in the Acts except in 21:21; never in the Pauline Epistles, nor in those of John; (b) figuratively, “signifying the whole round of the activities of the individual life, whether of the unregenerate, Eph. 4:17, or of the believer, 1 Cor. 7:17; Col. 2:6. It is applied to the observance of religious ordinances, Acts 21:21; Heb. 13:9, marg., as well as to moral conduct. The Christian is to walk in newness of life, Rom. 6:4, after the spirit, 8:4, in honesty, 13:13, by faith, 2 Cor. 5:7, in good works, Eph. 2:10, in love, 5:2, in wisdom, Col. 4:5, in truth, 2 John 4, after the commandments of the Lord, v. 6. And, negatively, not after the flesh, Rom. 8:4; not after the manner of men, 1 Cor. 3:3; not in craftiness, 2 Cor. 4:2; not by sight, 5:7; not in the vanity of the mind, Eph. 4:17; not disorderly, 2 Thess. 3:6.”* See GO, Note (2) (r).

2. poreuo (πορεύομαι, 4198), for which see DEPART, No. 8, and GO, No. 1, is used in the middle voice and rendered “to walk” in Luke 1:6, of the general activities of life; so in Luke 13:33, KJV, “walk” (RV, “go on My way”); Acts 9:31; 14:16; 1 Pet. 4:3; 2 Pet. 2:10; Jude 16, 18.

3. emperipateo (ἐμπεριπατέω, 1704), “to walk about in, or among” (en, “in,” and No. 1), is used in 2 Cor. 6:16, of the activities of God in the lives of believers.¶

4. stoicheo (στοιχέω, 4748), from stoichos, “a row,” signifies “to walk in line,” and is used metaphorically of “walking” in relation to others (No. 1 is used more especially of the individual walk); in Acts 21:24, it is translated “walkest orderly”; in Rom. 4:12, “walk (in ... steps)”; in Gal. 5:25 it is used of walking “by the Spirit,” RV, in an exhortation to keep step with one another in submission of heart to the Holy Spirit, and therefore of keeping step with Christ, the great means of unity and harmony in a church (contrast No. 1 in v. 16; v. 25 begins a new section which extends to 6:10); in 6:16 it is used of walking by the rule expressed in vv. 14, 15; in Phil. 3:16 the reference is to the course pursued by the believer who makes “the prize of the high calling” the object of his ambition.¶ In the Sept., Eccl. 1:16.¶

5. dierchomai (διέρχομαι, 1330), “to go through” (dia), is rendered “to walk through” in the KJV of Matt. 12:43 and Luke 11:24 (RV, “passeth through”). See COME, No. 5, PASS, No. 2.

* From Notes on Thessalonians, by Hogg and Vine p. 67.

6. orthopodeo (ὀρθοποδέω, 3716), “to walk in a straight path” (orthos, “straight,” pous, “a foot”), is used metaphorically in Gal. 2:14, signifying a “course of conduct” by which one leaves a straight track for others to follow (“walked ... uprightly”).¶

Note: In Mark 1:16, KJV, parago, “to pass along” (RV, “passing along”), is translated “walked.”

WALL

1. teichos (τείχος, 5038), “a wall,” especially one around a town, is used (a) literally, Acts 9:25; 2 Cor. 11:33; Heb. 11:30; (b) figuratively, of the “wall” of the heavenly city, Rev. 21:12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 19.¶

2. toichos (τοῖχος, 5109), “a wall,” especially of a house, is used figuratively in Acts 23:3, “(thou whited) wall.”¶

3. mesotoichon (μεσότοιχον, 3320), “a partition wall” (mesos, “middle,” and No. 2), occurs in Eph. 2:14, figuratively of the separation of Gentile from Jew in their unregenerate state, a partition demolished by the Cross for both on acceptance of the gospel. Cf. PARTITION.¶

WALLET

pera (πήρα, 4082), “a traveler’s leather bag or pouch for holding provisions,” is translated “wallet” in the RV (KJV, “scrip”), Matt. 10:10; Mark 6:8; Luke 9:3; 10:4; 22:35, 36.¶ Deissmann (Light from the Ancient East) regards it as an alms-bag.

WALLOW (Verb and Noun)

A. Verb.

kulio (κυλιόω, 2947) in the active voice denotes “to roll, roll along”; in the middle voice in Mark 9:20, rendered “wallowed.”¶

B. Noun.

kulismos (κύλισμα, 2946**), “a rolling, wallowing,” akin to A (some texts have kulisma), is used in 2 Pet. 2:22, of the proverbial sow that had been washed.¶

WANDER

A. Verb.

planao (πλανάω, 4105), for which see DECEIT, C, No. 6, is translated “to wander” in Heb. 11:38, passive voice, lit., “were made to wander.”

Note: In the KJV of 1 Tim. 5:13 and Heb. 11:37, perierchomai, “to go about or around,” is translated “to wander about.” See GO, No. 29.

B. Noun.

---

** Differing gender, number, or verb forms (for instance, infinitive or participle) of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a double asterisk (for instance, opsia, from opsion, is 3798**).

planetes (πλανήτης, 4107), “a wanderer” (Eng., “planet”), is used metaphorically in Jude 13, of the evil teachers there mentioned as “wandering (stars).”¶ In the Sept., Hos. 9:17.¶

WANT (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. husteresis (ὕστερησις, 5304), akin to B, No. 1 (below), occurs in Mark 12:14 and Phil. 4:11.¶

2. husterema (ὑστερον, 5305) denotes (more concretely than No. 1) (a) “that which is lacking” (see LACK); (b) “need, poverty, want,” rendered “want” in Luke 21:4 (KJV, “penury”); 2 Cor. 8:14 (twice); 9:12; 11:9 (2nd occurrence), RV, “want” (KJV, “that which was lacking”).

3. chreia (χρεία, 5532) is rendered “want” in Phil. 2:25, KJV (RV, need). See BUSINESS.

B. Verbs.

1. hustereo (ὕστερέω, 5302) signifies “to be in want,” Luke 15:14; 2 Cor. 11:9 (1st occurrence); Phil. 4:12, RV (KJV “to suffer need”); in John 2:3, KJV, “wanted” (RV, “failed”). See BEHIND, B, No. 1.

2. leipo (λείπω, 3007), “to leave,” is rendered “to be wanting” in Titus 1:5 and 3:13, and in the KJV in Jas. 1:4. See LACK, C, No. 3.

WANTONNESS, WANTON, WANTONLY

A. Nouns.

1. aselgeia (ἀσέλγεια, 766), “lasciviousness, licentiousness,” is rendered “wantonness” in 2 Pet. 2:18, KJV; see LASCIVIOUSNESS.

2. strenos (στρηνος, 4764), “insolent luxury,” is rendered “wantonness” in Rev. 18:3, RV (marg., “luxury”; KJV, “delicacies,” not a sufficiently strong rendering).¶

B. Verbs.

1. streniao (στρηνιάω, 4763), akin to A, No. 2, “to run riot,” is rendered “waxed wanton” in Rev. 18:7, RV, and “lived wantonly” in v. 8. See DELICATELY, Note (1). The root of the verb is seen in the Latin strenuus.¶

2. katastreniao (καταστρηνιάω, 2691), an intensive form of No. 1, “to wax wanton against,” occurs in 1 Tim. 5:11.¶

WAR (Verb and Noun)

A. Verbs.

1. polemeo (πολεμέω, 4170) (Eng., “polemics”), “to fight, to make war,” is used (a) literally, Rev. 12:7 (twice), RV; 13:4; 17:14; 19:11; (b) metaphorically, Rev. 2:16, RV; (C) hyperbolically, Jas. 4:2. See FIGHT, B, Note (1).¶

2. strateuo (στρατεύομαι, 4754), used in the middle voice, “to make war” (from stratos, “an encamped army”), is translated “to war” in 2 Cor. 10:3; metaphorically, of spiritual “conflict,” 1 Tim. 1:18; 2 Tim. 2:3, KJV; Jas. 4:1; 1 Pet. 2:11. See SOLDIER, B.

3. antistrateuomai (ἀντιστρατεύομαι, 497), not found in the active voice antistrateuo, “to make war against” (anti), occurs in Rom. 7:23.¶

Note: For “men of war,” Luke 23:11, KJV, see SOLDIER, No. 2.

B. Noun.

polemos (πόλεμος, 4171), “war” (akin to A, No. 1), is so translated in the RV, for KJV, “battle,” 1 Cor. 14:8; Rev. 9:7, 9; 16:14; 20:8; for KJV, “fight,” Heb. 11:34; KJV and RV in Jas. 4:1, hyperbolically of private “quarrels”; elsewhere, literally, e.g., Matt. 24:6; Rev. 11:7. See BATTLE.

WARD

1. phulake (φυλακή, 5438), “a guard,” is used of the place where persons are kept under guard (akin to phulax, “a keeper”), and translated “ward” in Acts 12:10. See CAGE, HOLD (Noun), IMPRISONMENT, PRISON, WATCH.

2. teresis (τήρησις, 5084) primarily denotes “a watching” (tereo, “to watch”); hence “imprisonment, ward,” Acts 4:3 (KJV, “hold”); 5:18, RV, “(public) ward” [KJV, “(common) prison”]. See HOLD (Noun), KEEPING, B, PRISON.

Note: For “were kept in ward,” Gal. 3:23, see GUARD, B, No. 3, KEEP, No. 6.

WARE OF

phulasso (φυλάσσω, 5442) denotes “to guard, watch”; in 2 Tim. 4:15, “of (whom) be thou ware” (middle voice): see BEWARE, No. 3.

Note: For sunoida, translated “were ware” in Acts 14:6, KJV (RV, “became aware of it”), see KNOW, A, No. 6.

WARFARE

strateia, or -tia (στρατία, 4756), primarily “a host or army,” came to denote “a warfare,” and is used of spiritual “conflict” in 2 Cor. 10:4; 1 Tim. 1:15.¶

Note: For the verb “to go a warfare,” 1 Cor. 9:7, KJV, see SOLDIER, B, No. 1.

WARM (Verb)

thermaino (θερμαίνω, 2328), “to warm, heat” (Eng. “thermal,” etc.), when used in the middle voice, signifies “to warm oneself,” Mark 14:54, 67; John 18:18 (twice), 25; Jas. 2:16.¶

WARN

1. noutheteo (νουθετέω, 3560), “to put in mind, warn,” is translated “to warn” in the KJV, in the passages mentioned under ADMONISH, B, No. 1 (which see); the RV always translates this word by the verb “to admonish.”

2. hupodeiknumi (ὑποδείκνυμι, 5263), primarily, “to show secretly” (hupo, “under,” deiknumi, “to show”), hence, generally, “to teach, make known,” is translated “to warn” in Matt. 3:7; Luke 3:7; 12:5, RV (KJV, “forewarn”). See FOREWARN, Note, SHEW.

3. chrematizo (χρηματίζω, 5537), for which see ADMONISH, B, No. 3, is translated “to warn” in Matt. 2:12, 22; Acts 10:22; Heb. 8:5, RV (KJV, “admonished”); 11:7; 12:25, RV (KJV, “spake”).

WAS, WAST, WERE, WERT

Note: When not part of another verb, or phrase, these translate eimi, “to be,” e.g., Matt. 1:18, or the following: (a) ginomai, “to become,” e.g., Matt. 8:26; (b) huparcho, “to exist,” especially when referring to an already existing condition, e.g., Luke 8:41; Acts 5:4 (2nd part); 16:3; 27:12; Rom. 4:19, KJV, “when he was” (RV, “he being”); (c) echo, “to have,” e.g., Acts 12:15; (d) apecho, “to be away, to be distant,” e.g., Luke 7:6; 24:13; (e) mello, “to be about to,” e.g., Luke 19:4; Acts 21:27, 37, KJV (RV, “was about to”); (f) sumbaino, “to come to pass, happen,” e.g., Acts 21:35; (g) in Gal. 4:28, the preposition kata, “according to,” is rendered “was,” in the phrase “as Isaac was,” lit., “like Isaac”; as Isaac’s birth came by divine interposition, so does the spiritual birth of every believer.

WASH

1. nipto (νίπτω, 3538) is chiefly used of “washing part of the body,” John 13:5-6, 8 (twice, figuratively in 2nd clause), 12, 14 (twice); in 1 Tim. 5:10, including the figurative sense; in the middle voice, to wash oneself, Matt. 6:17; 15:2; Mark 7:3; John 9:7, 11, 15; 13:10.¶ For the corresponding noun see BASON.

2. aponipto (ἀπονίπτω, 633), “to wash off,” is used in the middle voice, in Matt. 27:24.¶

3. louo (λούω, 3068) signifies “to bathe, to wash the body,” (a) active voice, Acts 9:37; 16:33; (b) passive voice, John 13:10, RV, “bathed” (KJV, “washed”); Heb. 10:22, lit., “having been washed as to the body,” metaphorical of the effect of the Word of God upon the activities of the believer; (c) middle voice, 2 Pet. 2:22. Some inferior mss. have it instead of luo, “to loose,” in Rev. 1:5 (see RV).¶

4. apolouo (ἀπολούω, 628), “to wash off or away,” is used in the middle voice, metaphorically, “to wash oneself,” in Acts 22:16, where the command to Saul of Tarsus to “wash away” his sins indicates that by his public confession, he would testify to the removal of his sins, and to the complete change from his past life; this “washing away” was not in itself the actual remission of his sins, which had taken place at his conversion; the middle voice implies his own particular interest in the act (as with the preceding verb “baptize,” lit., “baptize thyself,” i.e., “get thyself baptized”); the aorist tenses mark the decisiveness of the acts; in 1 Cor. 6:11, lit., “ye washed yourselves clean”; here the middle voice (rendered in the Passive in KJV and RV, which do not distinguish between this and the next two passives; see RV marg.) again indicates that the converts at Corinth, by their obedience to the faith, voluntarily gave testimony to the complete spiritual change divinely wrought in them.¶ In the Sept., Job 9:30.¶

5. pluno (πλύνω, 4150) is used of “washing inanimate objects,” e.g., “nets,” Luke 5:2 (some texts have apopluno); of “garments,” figuratively, Rev. 7:14; 22:14 (in the best texts; the KJV translates those which have the verb poieo, “to do,” followed by tas entolas autou, “His commandments”).¶

6. rhantizo (ῥαντίζω, 4472), “to sprinkle,” is used in the middle voice in Mark 7:4, in some ancient texts, of the acts of the Pharisees in their assiduous attention to the cleansing of themselves after coming from the market place (some texts have baptizo here). See SPRINKLE.

7. brecho (βρέχω, 1026), “to wet,” is translated “to wash” in Luke 7:38, 44, KJV; the RV, “to wet” and “hath wetted,” gives the correct rendering. See RAIN, B.

8. baptizo (βαπτίζω, 907) is rendered “washed” in Luke 11:38. See BAPTIZE.

Note: With regard to Nos. 1, 3, 5, the Sept. of Lev. 15:11 contains all three with their distinguishing characteristics, No. 1 being used of the hands, No. 3 of the whole body, No. 5 of the garments.

WASHING

1. baptismos (βαπτισμός, 909) denotes “the act of washing, ablution,” with special reference to purification, Mark 7:4 (in some texts, v. 8); Heb. 6:2, “baptisms”; 9:10, “washings.” See BAPTISM.¶

2. loutron (λουτρόν, 3067), “a bath, a laver” (akin to louo, see above), is used metaphorically of the Word of God, as the instrument of spiritual cleansing, Eph. 5:26; in Titus 3:5, of “the washing of regeneration” (see REGENERATION).¶ In the Sept., Song of Sol. 4:2; 6:6.¶

WASTE (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

apoleia (ἀπώλεια, 684), “destruction,” is translated “waste” in Matt. 26:8; Mark 14:4. See DESTRUCTION, B, II, No. 1.

B. Verbs.

1. diaskorpizo (διασκορπίζω, 1287), “to scatter abroad,” is used metaphorically of “squandering property,” Luke 15:13; 16:1. See DISPERSE, SCATTER.

2. portheo (πορθέω, 4199), “to ravage,” is rendered “wasted” in Gal. 1:13, KJV; see DESTROY, Note, HAVOC.

3. lumaino (λυμαίνομαι, 3075), “to outrage, maltreat,” is used in the middle voice in Acts 8:3, of Saul’s treatment of the church, RV, “laid waste” (KJV, “made havoc of”).¶

WATCH (Noun and Verb), WATCHERS, WATCHFUL, WATCHINGS

A. Nouns.

1. phulake (φυλακή, 5438) is used (a) with the meaning “a watch,” actively, “a guarding,” Luke 2:8, lit., “(keeping, phulasso) watches”; (b) of “the time during which guard was kept by night, a watch of the night,” Matt. 14:25; 24:43; Mark 6:48; Luke 12:38. See CAGE, HOLD, IMPRISONMENT, PRISON.

Note: Among the Jews the night was divided into three “watches” (see, e.g., Exod. 14:24; Judg. 7:19), and this continued on through Roman times. The Romans divided the night into four “watches”; this was recognized among the Jews (see Mark 13:35).

2. koustodia (κουστωδία, 2892), from Lat., custodia (cf. Eng., “custody”), is rendered “watch” in Matt. 27:65, 66 and 28:11, KJV: see GUARD.¶

3. agrupnia (ἀγρυπνία, 70), “sleeplessness” (akin to B, No. 4), is rendered “watchings” in 2 Cor. 6:5; 11:27.¶

B. Verbs.

1. gregoreo (γρηγορεύω, 1127), “to watch,” is used (a) of “keeping awake,” e.g., Matt. 24:43; 26:38, 40, 41; (b) of “spiritual alertness,” e.g., Acts 20:31; 1 Cor. 16:13; Col. 4:2; 1 Thess. 5:6, 10 (for which see WAKE); 1 Pet. 5:8, RV, “be watchful” (KJV, “be vigilant”); Rev. 3:2, 3; 16:15.

2. tereo (τηρέω, 5083), “to keep,” is rendered “to watch,” of those who kept guard at the cross, Matt. 27:36, 54; 28:4, RV, “watchers” (KJV, “keepers”), lit., “the watching ones.” See HOLD, No. 8, KEEP, OBSERVE, PRESERVE, RESERVE.

3. paratereo (παρατηρέω, 3906), “to observe,” especially with sinister intent (para, “near,” and No. 2), is rendered “to watch” in Mark 3:2; Luke 6:7; 14:1; 20:20; Acts 9:24. See OBSERVE.

4. agrupneo (ἀγρυπνέω, 69), “to be sleepless” (from agreuo, “to chase,” and hupnos, “sleep”), is used metaphorically, “to be watchful,” in Mark 13:33; Luke 21:36; Eph. 6:18; Heb. 13:17. The word expresses not mere wakefulness, but the “watchfulness” of those who are intent upon a thing.¶

5. nepho (νήφω, 3525), “to abstain from wine,” is used metaphorically of moral “alertness,” and translated “to watch,” in the KJV of 2 Tim. 4:5. See SOBER.

WATER (Noun and Verb), WATERING, WATERLESS

A. Noun.

hudor (ὕδωρ, 5204), whence Eng. prefix, “hydro-,” is used (a) of the natural element, frequently in the Gospels; in the plural especially in the Apocalypse; elsewhere, e.g., Heb. 9:19; Jas. 3:12; in 1 John 5:6, that Christ “came by water and blood,” may refer either (1) to the elements that flowed from His side on the cross after His death, or, in view of the order of the words and the prepositions here used, (2) to His baptism in Jordan and His death on the cross. As to (1), the “water” would symbolize the moral and practical cleansing effected by the removal of defilement by our taking heed to the Word of God in heart, life and habit; cf. Lev. 14, as to the cleansing of the leper. As to (2), Jesus the Son of God came on His mission by, or through, “water” and blood, namely, at His baptism, when He publicly entered upon His mission and was declared to be the Son of God by the witness of the Father, and at the cross, when He publicly closed His witness; the apostle’s statement thus counteracts the doctrine of the Gnostics that the divine Logos united Himself with the Man Jesus at His baptism, and left him at Gethsemane. On the contrary, He who was baptized and He who was crucified was the Son of God throughout in His combined deity and humanity.

The word “water” is used symbolically in John 3:5, either (1) of the Word of God, as in 1 Pet. 1:23 (cf. the symbolic use in Eph. 5:26), or, in view of the preposition ek, “out of,” (2) of the truth conveyed by baptism, this being the expression, not the medium, the symbol, not the cause, of the believer’s identification with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. So the New Birth is, in one sense, the setting aside of all that the believer was according to the flesh, for it is evident that there must be an entirely new beginning. Some regard the kai, “and,” in John 3:5, as epexegetic, = “even,” in which case the “water” would be emblematic of the Spirit, as in John 7:38 (cf. 4:10, 14), but not in 1 John 5:8. where the Spirit and the “water” are distinguished. “The water of life,” Rev. 21:6 and 22:1, 17, is emblematic of the maintenance of spiritual life in perpetuity. In Rev. 17:1 “the waters” are symbolic of nations, peoples, etc.

Note: For potamos, rendered “waters” in 2 Cor. 11:26, see RIVER.

B. Verb.

potizo (ποτίζω, 4222), “to give to drink,” is used (a) naturally in Luke 13:15, “watering,” with reference to animals; (b) figuratively, with reference to spiritual ministry to converts, 1 Cor. 3:6-8. See DRINK, B, No. 3.

Notes: (1) For hudropoteo, “to drink water,” 1 Tim. 5:23, see DRINK, B, No. 5. (2)

For the adjective anudros, “waterless” (RV), “without water,” see DRY, No. 2.

WATERPOT

hudria (ὕδριά, 5201) occurs in John 2:6, 7; 4:28.¶

WAVE

1. kuma (κῦμα, 2949), from kuo, “to be pregnant, to swell,” is used (a) literally in the plural, Matt. 8:24; 14:24; Mark 4:37 (Acts 27:41, in some mss.); (b) figuratively, Jude 13.¶

2. salos (σάλος, 4535) denotes “a tossing,” especially the rolling swell of the sea, Luke 21:25, KJV, “waves” (RV, “billows”).¶

3. kludon (κλύδων, 2830), “a billow,” is translated “wave” in Jas. 1:6, KJV (RV, “surge”); in Luke 8:24 it is translated “raging (of the water).” See RAGE, B.¶

WAVER, WAVERING

A. Adjective.

aklines (ἀκλινής, 186), “without bending” (a, negative, klino, “to bend”), occurs in Heb. 10:23, KJV, “without wavering,” RV, “that it waver not.”¶

B. Verb.

diakrino (διακρίνω, 1252) is rendered “to waver” in Rom. 4:20, RV (KJV, “staggered”); in Jas. 1:6 (twice). See </jump>DOUBT, No. 3</jump>.

WAX

1. prokopto (προκόπτω, 4298), for which see ADVANCE, is rendered “to wax” in 2 Tim. 3:13.

2. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become,” is translated “waxed” in Luke 13:19, KJV (RV, “became”); in Heb. 11:34, KJV and RV, “waxed”: see COME, No. 12, etc.

Note: This verb forms part of the translation of certain tenses of other verbs; see, e.g., BOLD, A, No. 2, COLD, C, CONFIDENT, B, No. 1, CORRUPT, A, No. 2, GROSS, OLD, D, No. 2, STRONG, B, No. 2, WANTON, B, Nos. 1 and 2, WEARY, No. 2, WROTH, No. 1.

WAY

1. hodos (ὁδός, 3598) denotes (a) “a natural path, road, way,” frequent in the Synoptic Gospels; elsewhere, e.g., Acts 8:26; 1 Thess. 3:11; Jas. 2:25; Rev. 16:12; (b) “a traveler’s way” (see JOURNEY); (C) metaphorically, of “a course of conduct,” or “way of thinking,” e.g., of righteousness, Matt. 21:32; 2 Pet. 2:21; of God, Matt. 22:16, and parallels, i.e., the “way” instructed and approved by God; so Acts 18:26 and Heb. 3:10, “My ways” (cf. Rev. 15:3); of the Lord, Acts 18:25; “that leadeth to destruction,” Matt. 7:13; “... unto life,” 7:14; of peace, Luke 1:79; Rom. 3:17; of Paul’s “ways” in Christ, 1 Cor. 4:17 (plural); “more excellent” (of love), 1 Cor. 12:31; of truth, 2 Pet. 2:2; of the right “way,” 2:15; of Balaam (id.), of Cain, Jude 11; of a “way” consisting in what is from God, e.g., of life, Acts 2:28 (plural); of salvation, Acts 16:17; personified, of Christ as the means of access to the Father, John 14:6; of the course followed and characterized by the followers of Christ, Acts 9:2; 19:9, 23; 24:22. See HIGHWAY.

Note: In Luke 5:19 and 19:4 the noun is not expressed in the original, but is understood.

2. parodos (πασίλισσα, 938), “a passing or passage,” is used with en, “in,” 1 Cor. 16:7, “by the way” (lit, “in passing”).¶

3. tropos (τρόπος, 5158), “a turning, a manner,” is translated “way” in Rom. 3:2, “(every) way”; Phil. 1:18, “(in every) way.” See CONVERSATION, MANNER, MEANS.

Notes: (1) In Jas. 1:11, KJV, poreia, “a journey, a going,” is rendered “ways” (RV, “goings”). (2) In Heb. 12:17, topos, “a place,” is rendered in KJV marg., “way (to change his mind).” (3) For the KJV rendering of makran “a good (or great) way off,” Matt. 8:30; Luke 15:20, see FAR, B, No. 1. (4) In Luke 14:32, porro is rendered “a great way off.” (5) In Heb. 5:2, KJV, planao, middle voice, “to wander,” is rendered “(them) that are out of the way,” RV, “(the) erring.” (6) In Col. 2:14 and 2 Thess. 2:7, ek mesou, is translated “out of the way”; see MIDST, Note (1) (e). (7) For “two ways” in Mark 11:4, KJV, see STREET. (8) In John 10:1, the adverb allachothēn, “from some other place” (from allos, “another”), is translated “some other way.” (9) In 2 Pet. 3:1, the KJV translates en “by way of” (“by,” RV). (10) In Gal. 2:5, the renderings “by,” KJV, “in the way of,” RV, serve to express the dative case of hupotage, subjection. (11), For propempe, “to bring on one’s way,” Acts 15:3; 21:5, and the KJV of 2 Cor. 1:16 (RV, “to be set forward on my journey”), see BRING, No. 25. (12) Aperchomai, “to go away,” is rendered “to go one’s way,” e.g., Matt. 13:25; 20:4; Mark 11:4; 12:12; Luke 19:32; John 11:46; Acts 9:17; Jas. 1:24; see GO, No. 14. (13) In Luke 8:14, KJV, poreuomai, “to go on one’s way” (RV), is rendered “go forth”; in 13:33, KJV, “walk” (RV, “go on my way”); in Matt. 24:1, KJV, it is rendered “departed” (RV, “was going on his way”): see DEPART, No. 8. (14), In Acts 24:3, pante is rendered “in all ways” (KJV, “always”).¶ (15), In Rom. 3:12, KJV, ekklino, “to turn aside” (RV), is rendered “are gone out of the way.” (16), See also ESCAPE, B, LASCIVIOUS.

WE

Note: When this is not part of the translation of a verb or phrase, it stands for some case of hemeis, the plural of ego, “I”; this separate use of the pronoun is always emphatic. For “we ourselves,” see OURSELVES.

WEAK, WEAKENED, WEAKER, WEAKNESS

A. Adjectives.

1. asthenes (ἀσθενής, 772), lit., “strengthless” (see IMPOTENT), is translated “weak,” (a) of physical “weakness,” Matt. 26:41; Mark 14:38; 1 Cor. 1:27; 4:10; 11:30 (a judgment upon spiritual laxity in a church); 2 Cor. 10:10; 1 Pet. 3:7 (comparative degree); (b) in the spiritual sense, said of the rudiments of Jewish religion, in their inability to justify anyone, Gal. 4:9; of the Law, Heb. 7:18; in Rom. 5:6, RV, “weak” (KJV, “without strength”), of the inability of man to accomplish his salvation; (c) morally or ethically, 1 Cor. 8:7, 10; 9:22; (d) rhetorically, of God’s actions according to the human estimate, 1 Cor. 1:25, “weakness,” lit., “the weak things of God.” See FEEBLE, SICK.

2. adunatos (ἀδύνατος, 102), lit., “not powerful,” is translated “weak” in Rom. 15:1, of the infirmities of those whose scruples arise through lack of faith (see 14:22, 23), in the same sense as No. 1 (c); the change in the adjective (cf. 14:1) is due to the contrast with dunatoi, the “strong,” who have not been specifically mentioned as such in ch. 14. See IMPOSSIBLE.

B. Verb.

astheneo (ἀσθενέω, 770), “to lack strength,” is used in much the same way as A, No. 1, and translated “being ... weak” in Rom. 4:19, KJV (RV, “being weakened”); 8:3; 14:1, 2 (in some texts, 1 Cor. 8:9); 2 Cor. 11:21, 29 (twice); 12:10; 13:3, 4, 9. See DISEASED, IMPOTENT, SICK.

C. Noun.

astheneia (ἀσθένεια, 769), for which see INFIRMITY, is rendered “weakness,” of the body, 1 Cor. 2:3; 15:43; 2 Cor. 11:30, RV; 12:5 (plural, RV), 9, 10, RV; Heb. 11:34; in 2 Cor. 13:4, “He was crucified through weakness” is said in respect of the physical sufferings to which Christ voluntarily submitted in giving Himself up to the death of the cross.

WEALTH

euporia (εὐπορία, 2142), primarily “facility” (eu, “well,” poros, “a passage”), hence “plenty, wealth,” occurs in Acts 19:25.¶ Cf. euporeo, “to be well provided for, to prosper,” Acts 11:29.¶

Note: In 1 Cor. 10:24, the KJV, “wealth,” RV, “good,” is, lit., “the (thing) of the other.”

WEAPONS

hoplon (ὅπλον, 3696), always in the plur., is translated “weapons” in John 18:3 and 2 Cor. 10:4, the latter metaphorically of those used in spiritual warfare. See ARMOR, INSTRUMENTS.

WEAR, WEARING

A. Verbs.

1. phoreo (φορέω, 5409), a frequentative form of phero, “to bear,” and denoting “repeated or habitual action,” is chiefly used of clothing, weapons, etc., of soft raiment, Matt. 11:8; fine clothing, Jas. 2:3; the crown of thorns, John 19:5. See BEAR, No. 7.

2. endidusko (ἐνδιδύσκω, 1737), “to put on,” is used in the active voice in Mark 15:17 (in good mss.; some have No. 3); in Luke 8:27 (middle voice), in some texts; the best have No. 3. For Luke 16:19, see CLOTHE, No. 3.¶

3. enduo (ἐνδύω, 1746) is rendered “to wear” in Luke 8:27 (middle voice; see No. 2). See CLOTHE, No. 2, PUT, No. 26.

4. klino (κλίνω, 2827), “to bend, decline,” is used of a day, “wearing” away, Luke 9:12 (in 24:29, is far spent). See BOW, No. 4, FLIGHT, B, LAY, No. 6, SPEND.

5. hupopiazō (ὑπωπιάζω, 5299) is translated “wear (me) out” in Luke 18:5, RV (KJV, “weary”). For this and the somewhat different application in 1 Cor. 9:27, see BUFFET, No. 2.¶

B. Noun.

perithesis (περίθesis, 4025), “a putting around or on” (peri, “around,” tithemi, “to put”), is used in 1 Pet. 3:3 of “wearing” jewels of gold (RV).¶

For WEARINESS, 2 Cor. 11:27, RV, see LABOR, No. 1

WEARY

1. kopiao (κοπιάω, 2872), “to grow weary, be beaten out” (kopos, “a beating, toil”), is used of the Lord in John 4:6 (used in His own word “labor” in Matt. 11:28), in Rev. 2:3, RV. See LABOR, TOIL.

2. kamno (κάμνω, 2577), “to be weary,” is rendered “to wax weary” in Heb. 12:3, RV. See FAINT, No. 3, SICK.

3. ekkakeo or enkakeo (ἐκκακέω, 1573), for which see FAINT, No. 2, is rendered “to be weary” in Gal. 6:9; 2 Thess. 3:13.

Note: For hupopiazō, rendered “to weary” in Luke 18:5, KJV, see WEAR, A, No. 5.

WEATHER

1. eudia (εὐδία, 2105), akin to eudios, “calm,” denotes “fair weather,” Matt. 16:2.¶

2. cheimon (χειμών, 5494), “winter,” also “a winter storm,” is translated “foul weather” in Matt. 16:3. See TEMPEST, WINTER.

For WEDDING see MARRIAGE

WEEK

sabbaton (σάββατον, 4521) is used (a) in the plural in the phrase “the first day of the week,” Matt. 28:1; Mark 16:2, 9; Luke 24:1; John 20:1, 19; Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2. For this idiomatic use of the word see ONE, A, (5); (b) in the singular, Luke 18:12, “twice in the week,” lit., “twice of the sabbath,” i.e., twice in the days after the sabbath. See SABBATH.

WEEP, WEeping

A. Verbs.

1. klaio (κλαίω, 2799) is used of “any loud expression of grief,” especially in mourning for the dead, Matt. 2:18; Mark 5:38, 39; 16:10; Luke 7:13; 8:52 (twice); John 11:31, 33 (twice); 20:11 (twice), 13, 15; Acts 9:39; otherwise, e.g., in exhortations, Luke 23:28; Rom. 12:15; Jas. 4:9; 5:1; negatively, “weep not,” Luke 7:13; 8:52; 23:28; Rev. 5:5 (cf. Acts 21:13); in 18:9, RV, “shall weep” (KJV, “bewail”). See BEWAIL.

2. dakruo (δακρύω, 1145), “to shed tears” (dakruon, “a tear”), is used only of the Lord Jesus, John 18:35.¶

Note: Other synonymom verbs are threneo, “to mourn,” of formal lamentation: see BEWAIL, Note (1); alalazo, “to wail”; stenazo, “to groan” (oduromai, “to lament audibly,” is not used in NT; see the noun odurmos, “mourning”).

B. Noun.

klauthmos (κλαυθμός, 2805), akin to A, No. 1, denotes “weeping, crying,” Matt. 2:18; 8:12; 13:42, 50, RV (KJV, “wailing”); 22:13; 24:51; 25:30; Luke 13:28; Acts 20:37.¶

WEIGH, WEIGHT, WEIGHTY, WEIGHTIER

A. Verbs.

1. bareo (βάρεω, 916), “to weigh down,” is so rendered in 2 Cor. 1:8, RV; see BURDEN, B, No. 1.

2. histemi (ἵστημι, 2476), “to cause to stand,” is used in Matt. 26:15, RV, “they weighed (unto)” (of pieces of silver), KJV, metaphorically, “covenanted (with).”

B. Nouns.

1. baros (βάρος, 922), akin to A, is rendered “weight” in 2 Cor. 4:17. See BURDEN, A, No. 1.

2. onkos (ὄγκος, 3591) denotes “a bulk or mass”; hence, metaphorically, “an encumbrance, weight,” Heb. 12:1.¶

C. Adjective.

barus (βαρύς, 926), “heavy” (akin to A and B, No. 1), is rendered “weighty” in 2 Cor. 10:10, of Paul’s letters. The comparative degree is used in the neuter plural in Matt. 23:23, “(the) weightier matters (of the Law).” See GRIEVOUS, HEAVY.

WELCOME

1. apodechomai (ἀποδέχομαι, 588), “to receive gladly,” is rendered “to welcome” in the RV of Luke 8:40; 9:11. See RECEIVE.

2. hupolambano (ὑπολαμβάνω, 5274), “to take up, to entertain,” is rendered “to welcome” in 3 John 8, RV, of a hearty “welcome” to servants of God. See RECEIVE.

WELL (Noun)

phrear (φρέαρ, 5421), “a pit,” is translated a “well” in John 4:11, 12. See PIT.

Note: For pege, translated “well” in John 4:6 (twice), 14; 2 Pet. 2:17, see FOUNTAIN.

WELL (Adverb)

1. kalos (καλῶς, 2573), “finely” (akin to kalos, “good, fair”), is usually translated “well,” indicating what is done rightly, in the Epistles it is most frequent in 1 Tim. (3:4, 12, 13; 5:17); twice it is used as an exclamation of approval, Mark 12:32; Rom. 11:20; the comparative degree kallion, “very well,” occurs in Acts 25:10. See GOOD, C, No. 1.

Note: The neuter form of the adjective kalos, with the article and the present participle of poieo, “to do,” is translated “well-doing” in Gal. 6:9.

2. eu (εὖ, 2095), primarily the neuter of an old word, eus, “noble, good,” is used (a) with verbs, e.g., Mark 14:7, “do (poieo) ... good”; Acts 15:29 (prasso); Eph. 6:3 (ginomai, “to be”); (b) in replies, “good,” “well done,” Matt. 25:21, 23; in Luke 19:17, eu ge (in the best texts). The word is the opposite of kakos, “evilly.” See GOOD, C, No. 2.¶

Notes: (1) In 2 Tim. 1:18, beltion, the neuter form of what is used as the comparative degree of agathos, “good,” is used adverbially and translated “very well.”¶ (2) For John 2:10, “have well drunk” (RV, “freely”), see DRINK, B, No. 2. (3) Hos, “as,” with kai, “also (and),” is rendered “as well as” in Acts 10:47 (kathos in some mss.) and 1 Cor. 9:5. (4) In Heb. 4:2 kathaper, “even as,” with kai, is translated “as well as”: see EVEN, No. 8.

WELL (do), WELL-DOING

A. Verbs.

1. agathopoieo (ἀγαθοποιέω, 15), “to do good” (agathos, “good,” poieo, “to do”), is used (a) of such activity in general, 1 Pet. 2:15, “well-doing”; v. 20, “do well”; 3:6, 17; 3 John 11, “doeth good”; (b) of “acting for another’s benefit,” Mark 3:4; Luke 6:9, 33, 35.¶

2. kalopoieo (καλοποιέω, 2569), “to do well, excellently, act honorably” (kalos, “good,” poieo, “to do”), occurs in 2 Thess. 3:13.¶ The two parts of the word occur separately in Rom. 7:21; 2 Cor. 13:7; Gal. 6:9; Jas. 4:17.

Notes: (1) The distinction between Nos. 1 and 2 follows that between agathos and kalos (see GOOD). (2) In John 11:12, KJV, sozo (passive voice, “to be saved”), is rendered “he shall do well” (RV, “he will recover”).

B. Noun.

agathopoiia (ἀγαθοποιΐα, 16), “well-doing” (akin to A, No. 1), occurs in 1 Pet. 4:19.¶

C. Adjective.

agathopoios (ἀγαθοποιός, 17), “doing good, beneficent,” is translated “them that do well” in 1 Pet. 2:14, lit., “well-doing (ones).”¶

For WELL-BELOVED see BELOVED

WELL-NIGH

Note: This forms part of the translation of sumpleroo, “to fulfill,” in Luke 9:51, “were wellnigh” come (see COME, No. 36), and pleroo, “to fulfill,” in Acts 7:23, “was well-nigh ...,” lit., “a time (of forty years) was fulfilled (to him)” (see FULFILL, A, No. 1).

WELL PLEASED

A. Noun.

eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107), “good pleasure,” occurs in the genitive case in Luke 2:14, lit., “(men) of good pleasure” (so RV marg.), RV, “(men) in whom He is well pleased” (the genitive is objective); the KJV, “good will (toward men),” follows the inferior texts which have the nominative. See DESIRE, PLEASURE, SEEM, WELLPLEASING, WILL.

B. Verb.

eudokeo (εὐδοκέω, 2106), “to be well pleased”: see PLEASE, A, No. 3, WILLING, B, No. 3.

WELL-PLEASING

A. Adjective.

euarestos (εὐάρεστος, 2101) is used in Rom. 12:1, 2, translated “acceptable (RV marg., “well-pleasing”); in the following the RV has “well-pleasing,” Rom. 14:18; 2 Cor. 5:9; Eph. 5:10; in Phil. 4:18 and Col. 3:20 (RV and KJV); in Titus 2:9, RV, “well-pleasing” (KJV, “please ... well”); in Heb. 13:21, RV and KJV. See ACCEPTABLE.¶

B. Verb.

euaresteo (εὐαρεστέω, 2100), akin to A, is rendered “to be well-pleasing” in Heb. 11:5, 6, RV (KJV, “please”); in Heb. 13:16, “is well pleased.”¶

C. Noun.

eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107), lit., “good pleasure,” is rendered “well-pleasing” in Matt. 11:26 and Luke 10:21. See DESIRE, PLEASURE, SEEM, WELL PLEASED, WILL.

For WENT see GO

WEST

dusme (δυσμή, 1424), “the quarter of the sun-setting” (dusis, “a sinking, setting”; duno, “to sink”), hence, “the west,” occurs in Matt. 8:11; 24:27; Luke 12:54 (some regard this as the sunset); 13:29; Rev. 21:13.¶

For WET, Luke 7:38, 44, RV, see WASH, No. 7

ketos (κῆτος, 2785) denotes “a huge fish, a sea monster,” Matt. 12:40.¶ In the Sept., Gen. 1:21; Job 3:8; 9:13; 26:12; Jonah 1:17 (twice); 2:1, 10.¶

WHAT

Notes: (1) Most frequently this is a translation of some form of the relative pronoun hos or the interrogative tis. (2) Other words are (a) hoios, “of what kind,” e.g., 2 Cor. 10:11, RV (KJV, “such as”); 1 Thess. 1:5, “what manner of men”; 2 Tim. 3:11 (twice), lit., “what sorts of things,” “what sorts of persecutions”; (b) poios, “what sort of,” e.g., Matt. 21:23, 24, 27; 24:42, 43; Luke 5:19; 6:32-34; 20:2, 8; 24:19; John 12:33, “what manner of”; so in 18:32; 21:19; Rom. 3:27; 1 Cor. 15:35; in Jas. 4:14, “what”; 1 Pet. 2:20 and Rev. 3:3 (ditto); 1 Pet. 1:11, “what manner of”; (c) hopoios, “what sort of,” 1 Cor. 3:13; “what manner of,” 1 Thess. 1:9; (d) hosos, “how great,” Mark 6:30 (twice), RV, “whatsoever”; Acts 15:12; Rom. 3:19, “what things soever”; Jude 10 (1st part), “what soever things,” RV; (2nd part) “what”; (e) posos, “how great, how much,” 2 Cor. 7:11, “what (earnest care),” RV (posos here stands for the repeated words in the Eng. versions, the adjective not being repeated in the original); (f) hostis, “what (things),” Phil. 3:7; (g) in Matt. 26:40, houtos, “thus, so,” is used as an exclamatory expression, translated “What” (in a word immediately addressed by the Lord to Peter), lit., “So”; (h) for potapos, rendered “what” in Mark 13:1 (2nd part), KJV, see MANNER; (i) in 1 Cor. 6:16, 19, KJV, the particle e, “or” (RV), is rendered “What?”; in 1 Cor. 14:36, KJV and RV, “what?” (j) in 1 Cor. 11:22, gar, “in truth, indeed,” has its exclamatory use “What?” (3) In John 5:19 “but what” translates a phrase, lit., “if not anything.” (4) In Matt. 8:33 “what” is, lit., “the things” (neuter plural of the article).

WHATSOEVER

Note: For this see Notes on words under WHAT. Frequently by the addition of the particle an, or the conjunction ean, “if,” the phrase has the more general idea of “whatsoever,” e.g., with hos, Matt. 10:11; with hosos, Matt. 17:12; with hostis, neuter form, Luke 10:35.

For WHEAT see CORN

For WHEEL, Jas. 3:6, RV, see COURSE, A, No. 4

WHEREFORE

Note: This represents (1) some phrases introduced by the preposition dia, “on account of,” dia touto, “on account of this,” e.g., Matt. 12:31; Rom. 5:12; Eph. 1:15; 3 John 10; dia hen (the accusative feminine of hos, “who”), “on account of which” (aitia, “a cause,” being understood), e.g., Acts 10:21 (with aitia, expressed, Titus 1:13; Heb. 2:11); dia ti “on account of what?” (sometimes as one word, diati) e.g., Luke 19:23; Rom. 9:32; 2 Cor. 11:11; Rev. 17:7; (2) dio = dia ho (the neuter of the relative pronoun hos), “on account of which (thing),” e.g., Matt. 27:8; Acts 15:19; 20:31; 24:26; 25:26; 27:25, 34; Rom. 1:24; 15:7; 1 Cor. 12:3; 2 Cor. 2:8; 5:9; 6:17; Eph. 2:11; 3:13; 4:8, 25; 5:14; Phil. 2:9; 1 Thess. 5:11; Philem. 8; Heb. 3:7, 10; 10:5; 11:16; 12:12, 28; 13:12; Jas. 1:21; 4:6; 1 Pet. 1:13; 2 Pet. 1:10, 12; 3:14; (3) dioper, “for which very reason” (a strengthened form of the preceding), 1 Cor. 8:13; 10:14 (14:13 in some mss.); ¶ (4) hothen (which denotes “whence,” when used of direction or source, e.g., Matt. 12:44), used of cause and denoting “wherefore” in Heb. 2:17; 3:1; 7:25; 8:3; (5) ti, “what, why,” John 9:27; Acts 22:30; Gal. 3:19, KJV (RV, “what”); (6) heneka with *tin*os (the genitive case of ti), “because of what,” Acts 19:32; (7) charin with hou, the genitive case, neuter of hos, “for the sake of what,” Luke 7:47; (8) eis, “unto,” with ti, “what,” Matt. 14:31; with ho, “which” (the accusative neuter of hos), 2 Thess. 1:11, KJV (RV, “to which end”); (9) ara,

† Indicates that the word referred to (preposition, conjunction, or particle) is not dealt with in this volume.

“so,” 2 Cor. 7:12, KJV (RV, “so”); with ge, “at least,” Matt. 7:20, KJV (RV, “therefore”); (10) hina, “in order that,” with ti, “what,” Matt. 9:4; (11) toigaroun, “therefore,” rendered “wherefore” in Heb. 12:1, KJV; (12), in Matt. 26:50, epi, “unto,” with ho, as in No. (8) above, KJV, “wherefore (art thou come)?” RV, “(do that) for which (thou art come)”;

(13) oun, a particle expressing sequence or consequence, e.g., Matt. 24:26; Acts 6:3; (14) hoste, “so that,” “wherefore,” e.g., Rom. 7:12, 13; 1 Cor. 10:12; 11:27, 33; 14:22, 39; 2 Cor. 5:16; Gal. 3:24; 4:7; Phil. 4:1; 1 Thess. 4:18; 1 Pet. 4:19.

WHICH

Notes: (1) This is the translation of (a) the article with nouns, adjectives, numerals, participles, etc., e.g., “that which,” etc.; (b) the relative pronoun hos, “who,” in one of its forms (a frequent use); (c) hostis, “whoever,” differing from hos by referring to a subject in general, as one of a class, e.g., Rom. 2:15; Gal. 4:24 (twice); 5:19; Rev. 2:24; 20:4; (d) the interrogative pronoun tis, “who? which?,” e.g., Matt. 6:27; John 8:46; (e) hoios, “of what kind,” e.g., Phil. 1:30; (f) poios, the interrogative of (e), e.g., John 10:32; (g) hosos, “whatsoever,” etc.; plural, how many, translated “which” in Acts 9:39. (2) In Acts 8:26, KJV, haute (the feminine of houtos, “this”), “the same” (RV), is translated “which.” (3) In the triple title of God in Rev. 1:4, 8; 4:8, “which” is the translation, firstly, of the article with the present participle of eimi, to be, lit., “the (One) being,” secondly, of the article with the imperfect tense of eimi (impossible of lit. translation, the title not being subject to grammatical change), thirdly, of the article with the present participle of erchomai, to come, lit., “the coming (One)”;

in 11:17 and 16:5 the wording of the KJV and RV differs; in 11:17 the KJV follows the inferior mss. by adding “and art to come” (RV omits); in 16:5, the KJV, “and shalt be,” represents kai (“and”) followed by the article and the future participle of eimi, “to be,” lit., “and the (One) about to be”; the RV substitutes the superior reading “Thou Holy One,” lit., “the holy (One)”:

see HOLY, B, No. 2. (4) In Phil. 2:21, KJV, “the things of Jesus Christ” (RV, is rendered “the things which are Jesus Christ’s.”

WHILE, WHILES, WHILST

Notes: (1) See LITTLE, B, No. 1. (2) In Matt. 13:21, proskairos estin, lit., “is for a season,” is rendered “dureth (RV, endureth) for a while.” (3) Chronos, “time,” is rendered “while” in Luke 18:4; John 7:33; 12:35 (1st part); 1 Cor. 16:7; kairos, “a season,” “a while,” Luke 8:13; in Acts 19:22, RV, “while” (KJV, “season”); for the different meanings of these words see SEASON. (4) In Acts 18:18, KJV, “a good while,” is, lit., “sufficient days,” RV, “many days.” (5) In Acts 28:6, KJV, epi polu, lit., “upon much,” is rendered “a great while” (RV, “long”). (6) For Mark 1:35 see DAY, B. (7) In Mark 15:44 palai, “long ago,” is rendered “any while.” (8) In Acts 27:33 and Heb. 3:13 achri (or achris) followed by hou, the genitive case of the relative pronoun hos, lit., “until which,” is rendered “while”; cf. en ho, in Mark 2:19; Luke 5:34; John 5:7; en to, in Luke 1:21, RV, “while”; in Heb. 3:15, “while it is said,” is, lit., “in the being said” (en, with the article and the pres. infin., passive of lego); so, e.g., in Matt. 13:25 (9) In Heb. 10:33, AV., “whilst ye were made,” partly translating the present participle of theatrizomai, “to become a gazing-stock,” RV, “being made”; in the 2nd part, ginomai, “to become,” is translated “whilst ye became,” KJV (RV, “becoming”).¶ (10) The conjunction heos, “until,” etc., has the meaning “while” in Matt. 14:22; Mark 6:45; 14:32; in some texts, John 9:4; 12:35, 36; with hotou, “whatever” (an oblique case, neuter, of hostis, “whoever”), “whiles,” Matt. 5:25. (11) In Acts 20:11 hikanos, “sufficient,” is rendered “a long while.” (12) Hos, as, “while” in Luke 24:32 (twice); John 12:35, 36; Acts 1:10; 10:17. (13) Hotan, “when,” is rendered “while” in 1 Cor. 3:4, KJV (RV, “when”). (14) Hote, “when,” is rendered “while” in John 17:12; Heb. 9:17. (15) In John 4:31 metaxu, “between,” used with en to, “in the,” is rendered “meanwhile”; in Rom. 2:15 metaxu is itself rendered “the mean while” (RV, “between”). (16) In Acts 18:18, RV, hikanos is rendered “many” (KJV, “good”). (17) In 1 Pet. 1:6, RV, oligon, “a little,” is rendered “for a little while” (KJV, “for a season”).

WHISPERER, WHISPERING

1. psithuristes (ψιθυριστής, 5588), “a whisperer,” occurs in an evil sense in Rom. 1:29.¶

2. psithurismos (ψιθυρισμός, 5587), “a whispering,” is used of “secret slander” in 2 Cor. 12:20.¶ In the Sept., Eccl. 10:11, of “a murmured enchantment.”¶

Note: Synonymous with No. 1 is katalalos, “a backbiter” (Rom. 1:30¶), the distinction being that this denotes one guilty of open calumny, psithuristes, one who does it clandestinely.

For WHIT see EVERY WHIT and NOTHING, No. 2

WHITE (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjective.

leukos (λευκός, 3022) is used of (a) clothing (sometimes in the sense of “bright”), Matt. 17:2; 28:3; Mark 9:3; 16:5; Luke 9:29; John 20:12; Acts 1:10; symbolically, Rev. 3:4, 5, 18; 4:4; 6:11; 7:9, 13; 19:14 (2nd part); (b) hair, Matt. 5:36; Christ’s head and hair (in a vision; cf. Dan. 7:9), Rev. 1:14 (twice); ripened grain, John 4:35; a stone, Rev. 2:17, an expression of the Lord’s special delight in the overcomer, the new name on it being indicative of a secret communication of love and joy; a horse (in a vision), 6:2; 19:11-14 (1st part); a cloud, 14:14; the throne of God, 20:11.¶

Note: Lampros, “bright, clear,” is rendered “white” in Rev. 15:6, KJV, of “white (linen)” (RV, “bright,” following those mss. which have lithon “stone”); in 19:8 (RV, “bright”). See BRIGHT, CLEAR, GOODLY, Note, GORGEOUS.

B. Verbs.

1. leukaino (λευκαίνω, 3021), “to whiten, make white” (akin to A), is used in Mark 9:3; figuratively in Rev. 7:14.¶

2. koniao (κονιάω, 2867), from konia, “dust, lime,” denotes “to whiten, whitewash,” of tombs, Matt. 23:27; figuratively of a hypocrite, Acts 23:3.¶ In the Sept., Deut. 27:2, 4; Prov. 21:9.¶

For WHITHER, WHITHERSOEVER, see †, p. 1.

WHO, WHOM, WHOSE

Notes: These are usually the translations of forms of the relative pronoun hos, or of the interrogative pronoun tis; otherwise of hostis, “whoever,” usually of a more general subject than hos, e.g., Mark 15:7; Luke 23:19; Gal. 2:4; hosos, “as many as,” Heb. 2:15; in Acts 13:7, KJV, houtos, “this (man),” is translated “who,” RV, “the same.”

WHOLE (made), WHOLLY, WHOLESOME

A. Adjectives.

1. holos (ὅλος, 3650), for which see ALL, A, No. 3, and ALTOGETHER, signifies “whole,” (a) with a noun, e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; Mark 8:36; 15:1, 16, 33; Luke 11:36 (1st part), though holon may here be used adverbially with photeinon, “wholly light” [as in the 2nd part, RV, “wholly (full of light)"]; John 11:50; 1 Cor. 12:17 (1st part); 1 John 2:2; 5:19; (b) absolutely, as a noun, e.g., Matt. 13:33; 1 Cor. 12:17 (2nd part).

2. pas (πᾶς, 3956), for which see ALL, A, No. 1, is sometimes translated “the whole” when used with the article, e.g., Matt. 8:32, 34; Rom. 8:22.

3. hapas (ἅπας, 537), for which see ALL, A, No. 2, is rendered “the whole,” e.g., in Luke 19:37; 23:1.

4. holokleros (ὁλόκληρος, 3648), from No. 1 and kleros, “a lot,” is rendered “whole” in 1 Thess. 5:23: see ENTIRE

5. hugies (ὕγις, 5199) (cf. Eng., “hygiene”) is used especially in the Gospels of making sick folk “whole,” Matt. 12:13; 15:31; Mark 3:5; 5:34; Luke 6:10; John 5:4, 6, 9, 11, 14, 15; 7:23; also Acts 4:10; of “sound (speech),” Titus 2:8. See SOUND.¶

6. holoteles (ὁλοτελής, 3651), “wholly,” 1 Thess. 5:23, is lit., “whole-complete” (A, No. 1, and telos, “an end”), i.e., “through and through”; the apostle’s desire is that the sanctification of the believer may extend to every part of his being. The word is similar in meaning to No. 4; holokleros draws attention to the person as a “whole,” holoteles, to the several parts which constitute him.¶

Note: In 1 Tim. 4:15, the sentence freely rendered “give thyself wholly to them” is, lit., “be in these (things).”

B. Verbs.

1. hugiaino (ὕγιαίνω, 5198), “to be in good health,” akin to A, No. 5, is rendered “they that are whole” in Luke 5:31; “whole” in 7:10 (present participle); “wholesome” in 1 Tim. 6:3, KJV (RV, “sound”; marg., “healthful”). See HEALTH, SOUND.

2. sozo (σώζω, 4982), “to save,” is sometimes rendered “to make whole,” and, in the passive voice, “to be made whole,” or “to be whole,” e.g., Matt. 9:21, 22 (twice), and parallel passages; Acts 4:9. See HEAL, SAVE.

3. iaomai (ἰάομαι, 2390), “to heal,” is rendered “to make whole,” Matt. 15:28; Acts 9:34, KJV (RV, “healeth”). See HEAL

4. ischuo (ισχύω, 2480), “to be strong,” is rendered “they that are whole” in Matt. 9:12 and Mark 2:17. See ABLE, B, No. 4.

5. diosozo (διασώζω, 1295), “to save thoroughly” (dia), is used in the passive voice and rendered “were made whole” in Matt. 14:36, RV (KJV, “were made perfectly whole”). See ESCAPE, HEAL, SAVE.

For WHORE, WHOREMONGER see FORNICATION, HARLOT
WHOSO, WHOSOEVER

Note: The same pronouns as those under WHO are used for the above, often with the addition of the particle an and a change of construction when a generalization is expressed. Some texts in Mark 15:6 have hosper, a strengthened form of hos, KJV, “whomsoever.” For sentences introduced by the conjunction ei or ean, “if,” see †, p. 1.

For WHY see †, p. 1

WICKED

1. poneros (πονηρός, 4190), for which see BAD, No. 2, EVIL, A and B, No. 2, is translated “wicked” in the KJV and RV in Matt. 13:49; 18:32; 25:26; Luke 19:22; Acts 18:14; 1 Cor. 5:13; in the following the RV substitutes “evil” for KJV, “wicked”: Matt. 12:45 (twice); 13:19; 16:4; Luke 11:26; Col. 1:21; 2 Thess. 3:2; and in the following, where Satan is mentioned as “the (or that) evil one”: Matt. 13:38; Eph. 6:16; 1 John 2:13, 14; 3:12 (1st part); 5:18; in v. 19 for KV, “wickedness”; he is so called also in KJV and RV in John 17:15; 2 Thess. 3:3; KJV only in Luke 11:4; in 3 John 10, KJV, the word is translated “malicious,” RV, “wicked.”

2. athesmos (ἄθεσμος, 113), “lawless” (a, negative, thesmos, “law, custom”), “wicked,” occurs in 2 Pet. 2:7; 3:17.¶ An instance of the use of the word is found in the papyri, where a father breaks off his daughter’s engagement because he learnt that her fiancé was giving himself over to lawless deeds (Moulton and Milligan, Vocab.).

Notes: (1) In Matt. 21:41, KJV, kakos (for which see BAD, No. 1, EVIL, A, No. 1), is translated “wicked” (RV, “miserable”). (2) In Acts 2:23 and 2 Thess. 2:8, KJV, anomos, “lawless” (RV), is translated “wicked.”

WICKEDNESS

1. poneria (πονηρία, 4189), akin to poneros (see above, No. 1), is always rendered “wickedness” save in Acts 3:26: see INQUIRY, No. 4.

2. kakia (κακία, 2549), “evil,” is rendered “wickedness” in Acts 8:22; RV in Jas. 1:21, KJV, “naughtiness.” See EVIL, B, No. 1, MALICE.

Notes: (1) For the KJV of 1 John 5:19 see WICKED, No. 1. (2) In Acts 25:5, KJV, the word atopos (RV, “amiss”) is incorrectly rendered “wickedness.”

For WIDE see BROAD

WIDOW

chera (χήρα, 5503), Matt. 28:13 (in some texts); Mark 12:40, 42, 43; Luke 2:37; 4:25, 26, lit., “a woman a widow”; 7:12; 18:3, 5; 20:47; 21:2, 3; Acts 6:1; 9:39, 41; 1 Tim. 5:3 (twice), 4, 5, 11, 16 (twice); Jas. 1:27; 1 Tim. 5:9 refers to elderly “widows” (not an ecclesiastical “order”), recognized, for relief or maintenance by the church (cf. vv. 3, 16), as those who had fulfilled the conditions mentioned; where relief could be ministered by those who had relatives that were “widows” (a likely circumstance in large families), the church was not to be responsible; there is an intimation of the tendency to shelve individual responsibility at the expense of church funds. In Rev. 18:7, it is used figuratively of a city forsaken.¶

WIFE, WIVES

1. gune (γυνή, 1135) denotes (1) “a woman, married or unmarried” (see WOMAN); (2) “a wife,” e.g., Matt. 1:20; 1 Cor. 7:3, 4; in 1 Tim. 3:11, RV, “women,” the reference may be to the “wives” of deacons, as the KJV takes it.

2. gunaikeios (γυναικεῖος, 1134), an adjective denoting “womanly, female,” is used as a noun in 1 Pet. 3:7, KJV, “wife,” RV, “woman.”¶

Note: In John 19:25 the article stands idiomatically for “the wife (of)””; in Matt. 1:6, the article is rendered “her that had been the wife (of).”

WIFE’S MOTHER

penthera (πενθερά, 3994) denotes “a mother-in-law,” Matt. 8:14; 10:35; Mark 1:30; Luke 4:38; 12:53 (twice).¶

WILD

agrios (ἄγριος, 66) denotes (a) “of or in fields” (agros, “a field”), hence, “not domestic,” said of honey, Matt. 3:4; Mark 1:6; (b) “savage, fierce,” Jude 13, RV, metaphorically, “wild (waves),” KJV, “raging.”¶ It is used in the papyri of a malignant wound.

Note: In Rev. 6:8 the RV renders therion (plural) “wild beasts” (KJV, “beasts”).

WILDERNESS

1. eremia (ἐρημία, 2047), “an uninhabited place,” is translated “wilderness” in the KJV of Matt. 15:33 and Mark 8:4 (RV, “a desert place”); RV and KJV, “wilderness” in 2 Cor. 11:26. See DESERT, A. (In the Sept., Isa. 60:20; Ezek. 35:4, 9.¶)

2. eremos (ἐρημος, 2048), an adjective signifying “desolate, deserted, lonely,” is used as a noun, and rendered “wilderness” 32 times in the KJV; in Matt. 24:26 and John 6:31, RV, “wilderness” (KJV, “desert”). For the RV, “deserts” in Luke 5:16 and 8:29 see DESERT, B.

WILES

methodia, or —eia (μεθοδεία, 3180) denotes “craft, deceit” (meta, “after,” hodos, “a way”), “a cunning device, a wile,” and is translated “wiles (of error)” in Eph. 4:14, RV [KV paraphrases it, “they lie in wait (to deceive)”], lit., “(with a view to) the craft (singular) of deceit”; in 6:11, “the wiles (plural) (of the Devil.)”¶

WILFULLY, WILLFULLY

A. Adverb.

hekousios (ἐκούσιως, 1596) denotes “voluntarily, willingly,” Heb. 10:26, (of sinning) “willfully”; in 1 Pet. 5:2, “willingly” (of exercising oversight over the flock of God).

B. Verb.

thelo (θέλω, 2309), “to will,” used in the present participle in 2 Pet. 3:5, is rendered “willfully (forget)” in the RV, KJV, “willingly (are ignorant of),” lit., “this escapes them (i.e., their notice) willing (i.e. of their own will).” See WILL, C, No. 1, WILLING, B, No. 1.

WILL, WOULD

A. Nouns.

1. thelema (θέλημα, 2307) signifies (a) objectively, “that which is willed, of the will of God,” e.g., Matt. 18:14; Mark 3:35, the fulfilling being a sign of spiritual relationship to the Lord, John 4:34; 5:30; 6:39, 40; Acts 13:22, plural, “my desires”; Rom. 2:18; 12:2, lit., “the will of God, the good and perfect and acceptable”; here the repeated article is probably resumptive, the adjectives describing the will, as in the Eng. versions; Gal. 1:4; Eph. 1:9; 5:17, “of the Lord”; Col. 1:9; 4:12; 1 Thess. 4:3; 5:18, where it means “the gracious design,” rather than “the determined resolve”; 2 Tim. 2:26, which should read “which have been taken captive by him” [(autou), i.e., by the Devil; the RV, “by the Lord’s servant” is an interpretation; it does not correspond to the Greek] unto His (ekeinou) will” (i.e., “God’s will”; the different pronoun refers back to the subject of the sentence, viz., God); Heb. 10:10; Rev. 4:11, RV, “because of Thy will”; of human will, e.g., 1 Cor. 7:37; (b) subjectively, the “will” being spoken of as the emotion of being desirous, rather than as the thing “willed”; of the “will” of God, e.g., Rom. 1:10; 1 Cor. 1:1; 2 Cor. 1:1; 8:5; Eph. 1:1, 5, 11; Col. 1:1; 2 Tim. 1:1; Heb. 10:7, 9, 36; 1 John 2:17; 5:14; of human “will,” e.g., John 1:13; Eph. 2:3, “the desires of the flesh”; 1 Pet. 4:3 (in some texts); 2 Pet. 1:21. See DESIRE, A, No. 5, PLEASURE, Note (1).

2. thelesis (θέλησις, 2308) denotes “a willing, a wishing” [similar to No. 1 (b)], Heb. 2:4.¶

3. boulema (βούλημα, 1013), “a deliberate design, that which is purposed,” Rom. 9:19; 1 Pet. 4:3 (in the best texts). See PURPOSE, A, No. 1.

4. eudokia (εὐδοκία, 2107) (eu, “well,” dokeo, “to think”) is rendered “good will” in Luke 2:14, KJV (see WELL PLEASED); Phil. 1:15: see DESIRE, PLEASURE, SEEM, WELL-PLEASED.

5. eunoia (εὐνοία, 2133), “good will” (eu, “well,” nous, “the mind”), occurs in Eph. 6:7 (in some texts, 1 Cor. 7:3).¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 13:36, KJV, boule, “counsel” (RV), is translated “will.” (2) In Rev. 17:17, KJV, gnome, “an opinion,” RV, “mind,” is translated “will.” (3) For “will-worship,” Col. 2:23, see WORSHIP, B, No. 2.

B. Adjectives.

1. hekon (ἐκὼν, 1635), “of free will, willingly,” occurs in Rom. 8:20, RV, “of its own will” (KJV, “willingly”); 1 Cor. 9:17, RV, “of my own will” (KJV, “willingly”).¶ In the Sept., Exod. 21:13; Job 36:19.¶

2. akon (ἄκων, 210), a, negative, and No. 1, “unwillingly,” occurs in 1 Cor. 9:17, RV, “not of mine own will” (KJV, “against my will”).¶ In the Sept., Job 14:17.¶

C. Verbs.

When “will” is not part of the translation of the future tense of verbs, it represents one of the following:

1. thelo (θέλω, 2309), for the force of which see DESIRE, B, No. 6, usually expresses “desire” or “design”; it is most frequently translated by “will” or “would”; see especially Rom. 7:15, 16, 18-21. In 1 Tim. 2:4, RV, “willeth” signifies the gracious “desire” of God for all men to be saved; not all are “willing” to accept His condition, depriving themselves either by the selfestablished criterion of their perverted reason, or because of their self-indulgent preference for sin. In John 6:21, the KJV renders the verb “willingly” (RV, “they were willing”); in 2 Pet. 3:5, KJV, the present participle is translated “willingly” (RV, “wilfully”).

The following are RV renderings for the KJV, “will”: Matt. 16:24, 25, “would”; “wouldest,” 19:21 and 20:21; “would,” 20:26, 27; Mark 8:34, 35; 10:43, 44; “would fain,” Luke 13:31; “would,” John 6:67; “willeth,” 7:17; in 8:44, “it is your will (to do)”; “wouldest,” Rom. 13:3; “would,” 1 Cor. 14:35 and 1 Pet. 3:10.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), for the force of which see DESIRE, B, No. 7, usually expresses the deliberate exercise of volition more strongly than No. 1, and is rendered as follows in the RV, where the KJV has “will”: Matt. 11:27 and Luke 10:22, “willeth”; Jas. 4:4, “would”; in Jas. 3:4, RV, “willeth” (KJV, “listeth”). In Jas. 1:18 the perfect participle is translated “of His own will,” lit. “having willed.”

3. mello (μέλλω, 3195), “to be about to,” is translated “will” in Matt. 2:13 and John 7:35 (twice); “wilt,” John 14:22; “will,” Acts 17:31; “wouldest,” 23:20; “will,” 27:10 and Rev. 3:16. See ABOUT, B.

WILLING (Adjective and Verb)

A. Adjectives.

1. prothumos (πρόθυμος, 4289) is rendered “willing” in Matt. 26:41; Mark 14:38, RV. See READY, No. 2.

2. hekousios (ἐκούσιον, 1595**), “willing,” is used with kata in Philem. 14, lit., “according to willing,” RV, “of free will” (KJV, “willingly”).¶

B. Verbs.

1. thelo (θέλω, 2309) is rendered “ye were willing” in John 5:35. See WILL, C, No. 1.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014) is rendered “(if) Thou be willing” in Luke 22:42; in 2 Pet. 3:9, KJV (RV, wishing). See WILL, C, No. 2.

3. eudokeo (εὐδοκέω, 2106), “to be well pleased, to think it good,” is rendered “we are willing” in 2 Cor. 5:8; in 1 Thess. 2:8, KJV, “we were willing” (RV, “we were well pleased”). See PLEASE, PLEASURE.

Notes: (1) In 2 Cor. 8:3, KJV, authairetos, “of one’s own accord” (RV), is rendered “willing of themselves”; in v. 17, “of his own accord.” See ACCORD.¶ (2) For “willing to communicate,” 1 Tim. 6:18, see COMMUNICATE, C.

For WILLING MIND see READINESS

WILLINGLY

Notes: (1) For hekon see WILL, B, No. 1. (2) For hekousios, see WILLFULLY (3) For Philem. 14 see WILLING, A, No. 2. (4) For 2 Pet. 3:5 see WILL, C, No. 1.

For WIN see POSSESS, A, No. 2

WIND (Noun)

1. anemos (ἄνεμος, 417), besides its literal meaning, is used metaphorically in Eph. 4:14, of variable teaching. In Matt. 24:31 and Mark 13:27 the four “winds” stand for the four cardinal points of the compass; so in Rev. 7:1, “the four winds of the earth” (cf. Jer. 49:36; Dan. 7:2); the contexts indicate that these are connected with the execution of divine judgments. Deissmann (Bible Studies) and Moulton and Milligan (Vocab.) illustrate the phrase from the papyri.

2. pnoe (πνοή, 4157), “a blowing, blast” (akin to pneo, “to blow”), is used of the rushing wind at Pentecost, Acts 2:2. See BREATH.

3. pneuma (πνεῦμα, 4151) is translated “wind” in John 3:8 (RV, marg., “the Spirit breatheth,” the probable meaning); in Heb. 1:7 the RV has “winds” for KJV, “spirits.” See SPIRIT.

Notes: (1) For pneo, “to blow” (“wind” in Acts 27:40), see BLOW, No. 1. (2) For anemizo, Jas. 1:6, “driven by the wind,” see DRIVE, No. 5.¶

WIND (Verb)

1. deo (δέω, 1210), “to bind,” is translated “wound (it in linen clothes),” John 19:40, KJV, of the body of Christ (RV, “bound”). See BIND, No. 1, TIE.

2. sustello (συστέλλω, 4958) is translated “wound ... up” in Acts 5:6 (RV, “wrapped ... round”). See SHORTEN, No. 2, WRAP.

3. eneileo (ἐνείλεω, 1750), “to roll in, wind in,” is used in Mark 15:46, of “winding” the cloth around the Lord’s body, RV, “wound” (KJV, “wrapped”).¶

WINDOW

thuris (θυρίς, 2376), a diminutive of thura, “a door,” occurs in Acts 20:9; 2 Cor. 11:33.¶

WINE

1. oinos (οἶνος, 3631) is the general word for “wine.” The mention of the bursting of the wineskins, Matt. 9:17; Mark 2:22; Luke 5:37, implies fermentation. See also Eph.

5:18 (cf. John 2:10; 1 Tim. 3:8; Titus 2:3). In Matt. 27:34, the RV has “wine” (KJV, “vinegar,” translating the inferior reading oxos).

The drinking of “wine” could be a stumbling block and the apostle enjoins abstinence in this respect, as in others, so as to avoid giving an occasion of stumbling to a brother, Rom. 14:21. Contrast 1 Tim. 5:23, which has an entirely different connection. The word is used metaphorically (a) of the evils ministered to the nations by religious Babylon, 14:8; 17:2; 18:3; (b) of the contents of the cup of divine wrath upon the nations and Babylon, Rev. 14:10; 16:19; 19:15.

2. gleukos (γλεῦκος, 1098) denotes sweet “new wine,” or must, Acts 2:13, where the accusation shows that it was intoxicant and must have been undergoing fermentation some time.¶ In the Sept., Job 32:19.¶

Note: In instituting the Lord’s Supper He speaks of the contents of the cup as the “fruit of the vine.” So Mark 14:25.

For GIVEN TO WINE see BRAWLER, No. 1

WINEBIBBER

oinopotes (οἰνοπότης, 3630), “a wine drinker” (oinos, and potes, “a drinker”), is used in Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:34.¶ In the Sept., Prov. 23:20.¶

For WINEBIBBINGS see EXCESS, Note (2)

WINEPRESS, WINE-VAT

1. lenos (ληνός, 3025) denotes “a trough or vat,” used especially for the treading of grapes, Matt. 21:33. Not infrequently they were dug out in the soil or excavated in a rock, as in the rock vats in Palestine today. In Rev. 14:19, 20 (twice) and 19:15 (where oinos is added, lit.. “the winepress of the wine”) the word is used metaphorically with reference to the execution of divine judgment upon the gathered foes of the Jews at the close of this age preliminary to the establishment of the millennial kingdom.¶

2. hupolenion (ὑπολήνιον, 5276) was “a vessel” or “trough” beneath the press itself (hupo, “beneath,” and No. 1), for receiving the juice, Mark 12:1, RV, “a pit for the winepress.”¶ In the Sept., Isa. 16:10; Joel 3:13; Hag. 2:16; Zech. 14:10.¶

For WINESKINS see SKIN

WING

pterux (πτέρυξ, 4420) is used of birds, Matt. 23:37; Luke 13:34; symbolically in Rev. 12:14, RV, “the two wings of the great eagle” (KJV, “two wings of a great eagle”), suggesting the definiteness of the action, the “wings” indicating rapidity and protection, an allusion, perhaps, to Exod. 19:4 and Deut. 32:11, 12; of the “living creatures” in a vision, Rev. 4:8; 9:9.¶ Cf. pterugion, “a pinnacle.”

For WINK AT see OVERLOOK

WINTER (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

cheimon (χειμών, 5494) denotes “winter,” in Matt. 24:20; Mark 13:18; John 10:22; 2 Tim. 4:21. See TEMPEST.

B. Verb.

paracheimazo (παραχειμάζω, 3914) denotes “to winter at a place” (para, at, and A), Acts 27:12 (2nd part); 28:11; 1 Cor. 16:6; Titus 3:12.¶

Note: In Acts 27:12 (1st part) paracheimasia, “a wintering,” is rendered “(to) winter in.”¶

WIPE

1. apomasso (ἀπομάσσομαι, 631), “to wipe off, wipe clean” (apo, “from,” masso, “to touch, handle”), is used in the middle voice, of “wiping” dust from the feet, Luke 10:11.¶

2. ekmasso (ἐκμάσσω, 1591), “to wipe out” (ek), “wipe dry,” is used of “wiping” tears from Christ’s feet, Luke 7:38, 44; John 11:2; 12:3; of Christ’s “wiping” the disciples’ feet, John 13:5.¶

3. exaleipho (ἐξαλείφω, 1813), “to wipe out or away” (ek, or ex, “out,” aleipho, “to anoint”), is used metaphorically of “wiping” away tears from the eyes, Rev. 7:17; 21:4. See BLOT OUT.

WISDOM

1. sophia (σοφία, 4678) is used with reference to (a) God, Rom. 11:33; 1 Cor. 1:21, 24; 2:7; Eph. 3:10; Rev. 7:12; (b) Christ, Matt. 13:54; Mark 6:2; Luke 2:40, 52; 1 Cor. 1:30; Col. 2:3; Rev. 5:12; (c) “wisdom” personified, Matt. 11:19; Luke 7:35; 11:49; (d) human “wisdom” (1) in spiritual things, Luke 21:15; Acts 6:3, 10; 7:10; 1 Cor. 2:6 (1st part); 12:8; Eph. 1:8, 17; Col. 1:9, RV, “(spiritual) wisdom,” 28; 3:16; 4:5; Jas. 1:5; 3:13, 17; 2 Pet. 3:15; Rev. 13:18; 17:9; (2) in the natural sphere, Matt. 12:42; Luke 11:31; Acts 7:22; 1 Cor. 1:17, 19, 20, 21 (twice), 22; 2:1, 4, 5, 6 (2nd part), 13; 3:19; 2 Cor. 1:12; Col. 2:23; (3) in its most debased form, Jas. 3:15, “earthly, sensual, devilish” (marg., “demoniacal”).¶

2. phronesis (φρόνησις, 5428), “understanding, prudence,” i.e., a right use of phren, “the mind,” is translated “wisdom” in Luke 1:17. See PRUDENCE.

Note: “While sophia is the insight into the true nature of things, phronesis is the ability to discern modes of action with a view to their results; while sophia is theoretical, phronesis is practical” (Lightfoot). Sunesis, “understanding, intelligence,” is the critical faculty; this and phronesis are particular applications of sophia.

WISE, WISER, WISELY

A. Adjectives.

1. sophos (σοφός, 4680) is used of (a) God, Rom. 16:27; in 1 Tim. 1:17 and Jude 25 sophos is absent, in the best mss. (see the RV), the comparative degree, sophoteros, occurs in 1 Cor. 1:25, where “foolishness” is simply in the human estimate; (b) spiritual teachers in Israel, Matt. 23:34; (c) believers endowed with spiritual and practical wisdom, Rom. 16:19; 1 Cor. 3:10; 6:5; Eph. 5:15; Jas. 3:13; (d) Jewish teachers in the time of Christ, Matt. 11:25; Luke 10:21; (e) the naturally learned, Rom. 1:14, 22; 1 Cor. 1:19, 20, 26, 27; 3:15-20.¶

2. phronimos (φρόνιμος, 5429), “prudent, sensible, practically wise,” Matt. 7:24; 10:16; 24:45; 25:2, 4, 8, 9; Luke 12:42; 16:8 (comparative degree, phronimoteros); 1

Cor. 10:15; in an evil sense, “wise (in your own conceits),” lit., “wise (in yourselves),” i.e., “judged by the standard of your self-complacency,” Rom. 11:25; 12:16; ironically, 1 Cor. 4:10; 2 Cor. 11:19.¶

B. Noun.

magos (μάγος, 3097) denotes “a Magian,” one of a sacred caste, originally Median, who apparently conformed to the Persian religion while retaining their old beliefs; it is used in the plural, Matt. 2:1, 7, 16 (twice), “wise men.” See also SORCERER.

C. Verbs.

1. sophizo (σοφίζω, 4679) is rendered “to make wise” in 2 Tim. 3:15: see DEvised.

2. sunieimi or sunio (συνίημι, 4920), “to perceive, understand,” is used negatively in 2 Cor. 10:12, KJV, “are not wise” (RV, “are without understanding”). See UNDERSTAND.

D. Adverb.

phronimos (φρονίμως, 5430), “wisely” (akin to A, No. 2), occurs in Luke 16:8.¶

WISE (IN NO)

1. ou me, a double negative, expressing an emphatic negation, “by no means,” is rendered “in no wise” in Matt. 10:42; Luke 18:17; John 6:37; Acts 13:41; Rev. 21:27.

2. pantos (πάντως, 3843), “altogether, by all means,” is used with the negative ou (“not”) in Rom. 3:9, stating a complete denial, rendered “No, in no wise.” See ALL, B, 3, ALTOGETHER, B, 1.

3. panteles (παντελής, 3838), the neuter of panteles, is used with the negative me, and with eis to, “unto the,” in Luke 13:11, and translated “in no wise,” lit., “not to the uttermost”: see UTTERMOST, No. 1.

For WISE (ON THIS) see THUS

WISH

1. euchomai (εὐχομαι, 2172) is rendered “to wish” in Acts 27:29 (RV marg., “prayed”); so Rom. 9:3; in 2 Cor. 13:9 and 3 John 2, RV, “pray”: see PRAY.

2. boulomai (βούλομαι, 1014), in Mark 15:15, RV, is translated “wishing” (KJV, “willing”); so 2 Pet. 3:9; in Acts 25:22, RV, “could wish” (KJV, “would”). See WILL, C, No. 2.

3. thelo (θέλω, 2309), in 1 Cor. 16:7, RV, is translated “wish” (KJV, “will”); Gal. 4:20, “I could wish” (KJV, “I desire”). See WILL, C, No. 1.

WIST

oida (Perf. of εἶδω, 1492), “to know,” in the pluperfect tense (with imperfect meaning) is rendered “wist” (the past tense of the verb “to wit”: cf. WOT) in Mark 9:6; 14:40; Luke 2:49; John 5:13; Acts 12:9; 23:5. See KNOW, No. 2.

WIT (TO)

A. Adverb.

hos (ὥς, 5613), a relative adverb signifying “as,” or “how,” is used in 2 Cor. 5:19 to introduce the statement “that God was ...,” and rendered “to wit,” lit., “how.”

B. Verb.

gnorizo (γνωρίζω, 1107), “to know, to make known,” is rendered “we do (you) to wit” in 2 Cor. 8:1, KJV, RV, “we make known (to you).” See KNOW, No. 8.

Note: In Rom. 8:23 the italicized words “to wit” are added to specify the particular meaning of “adoption” there mentioned.

For WITCHCRAFT see SORCERY

WITHAL

hama (ἅμα, 260), at the same time, is rendered “withal” in Acts 24:26, RV (KJV, “also”); 1 Tim. 5:13 (with kai, “also”); Philem. 22.

Notes: (1) In Eph. 6:16, RV, the phrase en pasin (en, “in,” and the dative plural of pas, “all”) is rightly rendered “withal” (KJV, “above all”); the shield of faith is to accompany the use of all the other parts of the spiritual equipment. (2) In 1 Cor. 12:7 sumphero is rendered “profit withal.” See EXPEDIENT, PROFIT, B, No. 1. (3) In Acts 25:27, kai, “also,” is rendered “withal.”

WITHDRAW

1. hupostello (ὑποστέλλω, 5288) is translated “withdraw” in Gal. 2:12: see DRAW, B, No. 4.

2. apospao (ἀποσπάω, 645), in the passive voice, is translated “was withdrawn” in Luke 22:41, KJV: see PART (Verb), No. 3.

3. anachoreo (ἀναχωρέω, 402) is translated “to withdraw” in the RV of Matt. 2:22 and John 6:15; RV and KJV in Matt. 12:15 and Mark 3:7. See DEPART, No. 10.

4. hupochoreo (ὑποχωρέω, 5298), “to retire,” is translated “withdrew Himself” in Luke 5:16; elsewhere in 9:10, RV, “withdrew apart” (KJV, “went aside”). See GO, No. 16.¶

5. stello (στέλλω, 4724), “to bring together, gather up” (used of furling sails), hence, in the middle voice, signifies “to shrink from a person or thing,” 2 Thess. 3:6, “withdraw”; elsewhere, 2 Cor. 8:20, “avoiding.” See AVOID.¶ Cf. No. 1.

Note: In 1 Tim. 6:5, some texts have aphistemi, rendered “withdraw thyself,” KJV.

WITHER (away)

xeraino (ξηραίνω, 3583), “to dry up, parch, wither,” is translated “to wither,” (a) of plants, Matt. 13:6; 21:19, 20; Mark 4:6; 11:20, RV (KJV, “dried up”), 21; Luke 8:6; John 15:6; Jas. 1:11; 1 Pet. 1:24; (b) of members of the body, Mark 3:1, and, in some texts, 3. See DRY, B, OVERRIPE, PINE AWAY, RIPE.

Notes: (1) For the adjective xeros, “dry, withered,” see DRY, A, No. 1. (2) For “whose fruit withereth,” Jude 12, KJV, see AUTUMN.

WITHHOLD

koluo (κωλύω, 2967), “to hinder, restrain,” is translated “withhold (not)” in Luke 6:29, RV, KJV, “forbid (not) to take.” See FORBID, HINDER, KEEP, Note (7), SUFFER, WITHSTAND.

Note: For “withholdeth” in 2 Thess. 2:6 see RESTRAIN.

WITHIN

Note: This is a translation of (a) entos: see INSIDE, No. 1; in Luke 17:21 the RV marg., “in the midst of,” is to be preferred; the kingdom of God was not in the hearts of the Pharisees; (b) en, “of thinking or saying within oneself,” e.g., Luke 7:39, 49 (marg., “among”); locally, e.g., Luke 19:44; (c) esotheren, 2 Cor. 7:5; Rev. 4:8; 5:1; “from within,” Mark 7:21, 23; Luke 11:7; “within,” Matt. 23:25; Luke 11:40, RV, “inside”; in Matt. 23:27, 28, RV, “inwardly”; (d) eso, John 20:26; Acts 5:23; 1 Cor. 5:12 (i.e., “within” the church); (e) pros, to, or with, in Mark 14:4, KJV, “within” (RV, “among”); (f) dia, “through,” rendered “within (three days)” in Mark 14:58, KJV (RV, “in,” looking through the time to the event, and in keeping with the metaphor of building); (g) esoteros, Heb. 6:19, the comparative degree of eso, used with the article translated “that within,” lit., “the inner (part of the veil),” i.e., “inside”: see INNER, No. 2; (h) in Luke 11:41, RV, eneimi, “to be in,” is rendered “are within” (KJV, “ye have”).

WITHOUT

Notes: (1) This is a translation of (a) exo, “outside,” e.g., Matt. 12:46, 47; “(them that are) without,” 1 Cor. 5:12, 13; Col. 4:5; 1 Thess. 4:12 (the unregenerate); Heb. 13:11-13; (b) exotheren, “from without,” or “without,” e.g., Mark 7:15, 18; Luke 11:40; 2 Cor. 7:5; 1 Tim. 3:7; as a preposition, Rev. 11:2; (c) choris, “apart from,” frequently used as a preposition, especially in Hebrews [4:15; 7:7, 20, 21; 9:7, 18, 22, 28; 11:6; in 11:40, RV, “apart from” (KJV, “without”); 12:8, 14]; (d) aneu, like choris, but rarer, Matt. 10:29; Mark 13:2; 1 Pet. 3:1; 4:9;¶ (e) ater, Luke 22:6, marg., “without (tumult)”; v. 35;¶ (f) ektos, “out of, outside,” 1 Cor. 6:18: see OTHER, OUT, OUTSIDE; (g) parektos, “besides, in addition,” 2 Cor. 11:28, “(those things that are) without,” RV, marg., “(the things which) I omit,” or “(the things that come) out of course.” (2) In Acts 5:26, ou, “not,” meta, “with,” is rendered “without (violence).” (3) In Acts 25:17, KJV, “without (any delay)” represents poieo, “to make,” and medemian, “no,” RV, “I made no (delay).” (4) For “without ceasing,” Acts 12:5, KJV, see EARNESTLY, C, No. 1. (5) In many nouns the negative prefix a forms part of the word and is translated “without.”

WITHSTAND

1. koluo (κωλύω, 2967), “to hinder,” is rendered “withstand” in Acts 11:17. See FORBID, HINDER. 2. anthistemi (κωλύω, 436), “to set against,” is translated “to withstand” in Acts 13:8 (middle voice); in the intransitive 2nd aorist, active voice, Eph. 6:13; 2 Tim. 3:8 (1st part; middle voice in 2nd part); 4:15. See RESIST.

WITNESS (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. martus or martur (μάρτυς, 3144) (whence Eng., “martyr,” one who bears “witness” by his death) denotes “one who can or does aver what he has seen or heard or knows”; it is used (a) of God, Rom. 1:9; 2 Cor. 1:23; Phil. 1:8; 1 Thess. 2:5, 10 (2nd part); (b) of Christ, Rev. 1:5; 3:14; (c) of those who “witness” for Christ by their death, Acts 22:20; Rev. 2:13; Rev. 17:6; (d) of the interpreters of God’s counsels, yet to “witness” in Jerusalem in the times of the Antichrist, Rev. 11:3; (e) in a forensic sense, Matt. 18:16; 26:65; Mark 14:63; Acts 6:13; 7:58; 2 Cor. 13:1; 1 Tim. 5:19; Heb. 10:28; (f) in a historical sense, Luke 11:48; 24:48; Acts 1:8, 22; 2:32; 3:15; 5:32; 10:39, 41; 13:31; 22:15; 26:16; 1 Thess. 2:10 (1st part); 1 Tim. 6:12; 2 Tim. 2:2; Heb. 12:1, “(a cloud) of witnesses,” here of those mentioned in ch. 11, those whose lives and actions testified to the worth and effect of faith, and whose faith received “witness” in Scripture; 1 Pet. 5:1.¶

2. marturia (μαρτυρία, 3141), “testimony, a bearing witness,” is translated “witness” in Mark 14:55, 56, 59; Luke 22:71; John 1:7, 19 (RV); 3:11, 32 and 33 (RV); 5:31, 32, 34 (RV), 36; RV in 8:13, 14, 17; 19:35; 21:24; KJV in Titus 1:13; KJV and RV in 1 John 5:9 (thrice), 10a; RV in 10b, 11; 3 John 12: see TESTIMONY, No. 2.

3. marturion (μαρτύριον, 3142), “testimony or witness as borne, a declaration of facts,” is translated “witness” in Matt. 24:14, KJV; Acts 4:33; 7:44 (KJV); Jas. 5:3 (KJV); see TESTIMONY, No. 1.

4. pseudomartus or -tur (ψευδής, 5571) and ψευδής, 3144) denotes “a false witness,” Matt. 26:60; 1 Cor. 15:15.¶

5. pseudomarturia (ψευδομαρτυρία, 5577), “false witness,” occurs in Matt. 15:19; 26:59.¶

B. Verbs.

1. martureo (μαρτυρέω, 3140) denotes (I) “to be a martus” (see A, No. 1), or “to bear witness to,” sometimes rendered “to testify” (see TESTIFY, No. 1); it is used of the witness (a) of God the Father to Christ, John 5:32, 37; 8:18 (2nd part); 1 John 5:9, 10; to others, Acts 13:22; 15:8; Heb. 11:2, 4 (twice), 5, 39; (b) of Christ, John 3:11, 32; 4:44; 5:31; 7:7; 8:13, 14, 18 (1st part); 13:21; 18:37; Acts 14:3; 1 Tim. 6:13; Rev. 22:18, 20; of the Holy Spirit, to Christ, John 15:26; Heb. 10:15; 1 John 5:7, 8, RV, which rightly omits the latter part of v. 7 (it was a marginal gloss which crept into the original text: see THREE); it finds no support in Scripture; (c) of the Scriptures, to Christ, John 5:39; Heb. 7:8, 17; (d) of the works of Christ, to Himself, and of the circumstances connected with His death, John 5:36; 10:25; 1 John 5:8; (e) of prophets and apostles, to the righteousness of God, Rom. 3:21; to Christ, John 1:7, 8, 15, 32, 34; 3:26; 5:33, RV; 15:27; 19:35; 21:24; Acts 10:43; 23:11; 1 Cor. 15:15; 1 John 1:2; 4:14; Rev. 1:2; to doctrine, Acts 26:22 (in some texts, so KJV; see No. 2); to the Word of God, Rev. 1:2; (f) of others, concerning Christ, Luke 4:22; John 4:39; 12:17; (g) of believers to one another, John 3:28; 2 Cor. 8:3; Gal. 4:15; Col. 4:13; 1 Thess. 2:11 (in some texts: see No. 2); 3 John 3, 6, 12 (2nd part); (h) of the apostle Paul concerning Israel, Rom. 10:2; (i) of an angel, to the churches, Rev. 22:16; (j) of unbelievers, concerning themselves, Matt. 23:31; concerning Christ, John 18:23; concerning others, John 2:25; Acts 22:5; 26:5; (II), “to give a good report, to approve of,” Acts 6:3; 10:22; 16:2; 22:12; 1 Tim. 5:10; 3 John 12 (1st part); some would put Luke 4:22 here.¶

2. marturomai (μαρτύρομαι, 3143), strictly meaning “to summon as a witness,” signifies “to affirm solemnly, adjure,” and is used in the middle voice only, rendered “to testify” in Acts 20:26, RV (KJV, “I take ... to record”); 26:22, RV, in the best texts [see No. 1 (e)]; Gal. 5:3; Eph. 4:17; 1 Thess. 2:11, in the best texts [see No. 1 (g)].¶

3. summartureo (συνμαρτυρέω, 4828) denotes “to bear witness with” (sun), Rom. 2:15; 8:16; 9:1.¶

4. sunepimartureo (συνεπιμαρτυρέω, 4901) denotes “to join in bearing witness with others,” Heb. 2:4.¶

5. katamartureo (καταμαρτυρέω, 2649) denotes “to witness against” (kata), Matt. 26:62; 27:13; Mark 14:60 (in some mss., 15:4, for kategoreo, “to accuse,” RV).¶

6. pseudomartureo (ψευδομαρτυρέω, 5576), “to bear false witness” (pseudes, “false”), occurs in Matt. 19:18; Mark 10:19; 14:56, 57; Luke 18:20; in some texts, Rom. 13:9.¶

C. Adjective.

amarturos (ἀμαρτυρος, 267) denotes “without witness” (a, negative, and martus), Acts 14:17.¶

WOE

ouai (οὐαί, 3759), an interjection, is used (a) in denunciation, Matt. 11:21; 18:7 (twice); eight times in ch. 23; 24:19; 26:24; Mark 13:17; 14:21; Luke 6:24, 25 (twice), 26; 10:13; six times in ch. 11; 17:1; 21:23; 22:22; 1 Cor. 9:16; Jude 11; Rev. 8:13 (thrice); 12:12; as a noun, Rev. 9:12 (twice); 11:14 (twice); (b) in grief, “alas,” Rev. 18:10, 16, 19 (twice in each).¶

lukos (λύκος, 3074) occurs in Matt. 10:16; Luke 10:3; John 10:12 (twice); metaphorically, Matt. 7:15; Acts 20:29.¶

WOMAN

1. gune (γυνή, 1135), for which see also WIFE, is used of a “woman” unmarried or married, e.g., Matt. 11:11; 14:21; Luke 4:26, of a “widow”; Rom. 7:2; in the vocative case, used in addressing a “woman,” it is a term not of reproof or severity, but of endearment or respect, Matt. 15:28; John 2:4, where the Lord’s words to His mother at the wedding in Cana, are neither rebuff nor rebuke. The question is, lit., “What to Me and to thee?” and the word “woman,” the term of endearment, follows this. The meaning is “There is no obligation on Me or you, but love will supply the need.” She confides in Him, He responds to her faith. There was lovingkindness in both hearts. His next words about “His hour” suit this; they were not unfamiliar to her. Cana is in the path to Calvary; Calvary was not yet, but it made the beginning of signs possible. See also 4:21; 19:26.

In Gal. 4:4 the phrase “born of a woman” is in accordance with the subject there, viz., the real humanity of the Lord Jesus; this the words attest. They declare the method of His incarnation and “suggest the means whereby that humanity was made free from the taint of sin consequent upon the Fall, viz., that He was not born through the natural process of ordinary generation, but was conceived by the power of the Holy Spirit ... To have written ‘born of a virgin’ would have carried the argument in a wrong direction ... Since that man is born of woman is a universal fact, the statement would be superfluous if the Lord Jesus were no more than man” (Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 184f.).

2. gunaikarion (γυναικάριον, 1133), a diminutive of No. 1, a “little woman,” is used contemptuously in 2 Tim. 3:6, “a silly woman.”¶

3. presbuteros (πρεσβύτερος, 4245), “elder, older,” in the feminine plural, denotes “elder women” in 1 Tim. 5:2. See ELDER, A, No. 1.

4. presbutis (πρεσβύτις, 4247), the feminine of presbutes, “aged,” is used in the plural and translated “aged women” in Titus 2:3.¶

5. theleia (θῆλυς, 2338**), the feminine of the adjective thelus, denotes “female,” and is used as a noun, Rom. 1:26, 27. See FEMALE.

WOMB

1. koilia (κοιλία, 2836) denotes “the womb,” Matt. 19:12; Luke 1:15, 41, 42, 44; 2:21; 11:27; 23:29; John 3:4; Acts 3:2; 14:8; Gal. 1:15. See BELLY, No. 1.

2. gaster (γαστήρ, 1064), is rendered “womb” in Luke 1:31. See BELLY, No. 2.

3. metra (μήτρα, 3388), the matrix (akin to meter “a mother”), occurs in Luke 2:23; Rom. 4:19.¶

WONDER (Noun and Verb)

A. Nouns.

1. teras (τέρας, 5059), “something strange,” causing the beholder to marvel, is always used in the plural, always rendered “wonders,” and generally follows semeia, “signs”; the opposite order occurs in Acts 2:22, 43; 6:8, RV; 7:36; in Acts 2:19 “wonders” occurs alone. A sign is intended to appeal to the understanding, a “wonder” appeals to the imagination, a power (dunamis) indicates its source as supernatural. “Wonders” are manifested as divine operations in thirteen occurrences (9 times in Acts); three times they are ascribed to the work of Satan through human agents, Matt. 24:24; Mark 13:22 and 2 Thess. 2:9.

2. thambos (θάμβος, 2285), “amazement,” is rendered “wonder” in Acts 3:10. See AMAZE, A, No. 2.

Notes: (1) For thauma, “a wonder” (rendered “admiration” in Rev. 17:6, KJV), see MARVEL. (2) In Rev. 12:1, 3 and 13:13 semeion, “a sign,” is translated in the KJV, “wonder(s),” RV, “sign(s).” (3) In Acts 3:11 ekthambos (ek, intensive, and No. 2) is translated “greatly wondering.”¶ (4) For pseudos, 2 Thess. 2:9, “lying wonders,” see FALSE, B. Cf. AMAZE, B, Nos. 3 and 4.

B. Verb.

Note: For thaumazo, see MARVEL; for existemi, Acts 8:13, KJV, see AMAZE, B, No. 1.

WONDERFUL (THING, WORK)

Notes: (1) In Matt. 7:22, KJV, dunamis (in the plural) is rendered “wonderful works” (RV, “mighty works,” marg., “powers”). See POWER. (2) In Acts 2:11, KJV, the adjective megaleios, “magnificent,” in the neuter plural with the article, is rendered “the wonderful works” (RV, “the mighty works”).¶ (3) In Matt. 21:15, the neuter plural of the adjective thaumasios, “wonderful,” is used as a noun, “wonderful things,” lit., “wonders.”

WONT

etho (ἐθω, 1486), “to be accustomed,” is used in the pluperfect tense (with imperfect meaning), eiotha, rendered “was wont” in Matt. 27:15; Mark 10:1. See CUSTOM, B, No. 2, MANNER, A, Note (1).

Notes: (1) In Mark 15:8, “he was wont to do,” RV, represents the imperfect tense of poieo, “to do” (KJV, “he had ever done”). (2) In Luke 22:39, KJV, ethos, “a custom,” preceded by kata and the article, lit., “according to the (i.e., His) custom,” is translated “as He was wont” (RV, “as His custom was”): see CUSTOM, A, No. 1. (3) In Acts 16:13 the KJV, “was wont,” translates the texts which have the passive voice of nomizo with its meaning “to hold by custom”; the RV, “we supposed,” translates the texts which have the imperfect tense, active, with the meaning “to consider, suppose.”

WOOD

1. xulon (ξύλον, 3586) denotes “timber, wood for any use” 1 Cor. 3:12; Rev. 18:12 (twice). See STAFF, STOCKS, TREE.

2. hule (ὕλη, 5208) denotes “a wood, a forest,” Jas. 3:5 (KJV, “matter,” marg., “wood”).¶ See MATTER, Note (3).

WOOL

erion (ἐρίον, 2053) occurs in Heb. 9:19; Rev. 1:14.¶

WORD

1. logos (λόγος, 3056) denotes (I) “the expression of thought”—not the mere name of an object—(a) as embodying a conception or idea, e.g., Luke 7:7; 1 Cor. 14:9, 19; (b) a saying or statement, (1) by God, e.g., John 15:25; Rom. 9:9; 9:28, RV, “word” (KJV, “work”); Gal. 5:14; Heb. 4:12; (2) by Christ, e.g., Matt. 24:35 (plur.); John 2:22; 4:41; 14:23 (plur.); 15:20. In connection with (1) and (2) the phrase “the word of the Lord,” i.e., the revealed will of God (very frequent in the OT), is used of a direct revelation given by Christ, 1 Thess. 4:15; of the gospel, Acts 8:25; 13:49; 15:35, 36; 16:32; 19:10; 1 Thess. 1:8; 2 Thess. 3:1; in this respect it is the message from the Lord, delivered with His authority and made effective by His power (cf. Acts 10:36); for other instances relating to the gospel see Acts 13:26; 14:3; 15:7; 1 Cor. 1:18, RV; 2 Cor. 2:17; 4:2; 5:19; 6:7; Gal. 6:6; Eph. 1:13; Phil. 2:16; Col. 1:5; Heb. 5:13; sometimes it is used as the sum of God’s utterances, e.g., Mark 7:13; John 10:35; Rev. 1:2, 9; (c) discourse, speech, of instruction, etc., e.g., Acts 2:40; 1 Cor. 2:13; 12:8; 2 Cor. 1:18; 1 Thess. 1:5; 2 Thess. 2:15; Heb. 6:1, RV, marg.; doctrine, e.g., Matt. 13:20; Col. 3:16; 1 Tim. 4:6; 2 Tim. 1:13; Titus 1:9; 1 John 2:7;

(II) “The Personal Word,” a title of the Son of God; this identification is substantiated by the statements of doctrine in John 1:1-18, declaring in verses 1 and 2 (1) His distinct and superfinite Personality, (2) His relation in the Godhead (pros, “with,” not mere company, but the most intimate communion), (3) His deity; in v. 3 His creative power; in v. 14 His incarnation (“became flesh,” expressing His voluntary act; not as KJV, “was made”), the reality and totality of His human nature, and His glory “as of the only begotten from the Father,” RV (marg., “an only begotten from a father”), the absence of the article in each place lending stress to the nature and character of the relationship; His was the shekinah glory in open manifestation; v. 18 consummates the identification: “the only-begotten Son (RV marg., many ancient authorities read “God only begotten,”), which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him,” thus fulfilling the significance of the title “Logos,” the “Word,” the personal manifestation, not of a part of the divine nature, but of the whole deity (see IMAGE).

The title is used also in 1 John 1, “the Word of life” combining the two declarations in John 1:1 and 4 and Rev. 19:13 (for 1 John 5:7 see THREE).

2. rhema (ῥῆμα, 4487) denotes “that which is spoken, what is uttered in speech or writing”; in the singular, “a word,” e.g., Matt. 12:36; 27:14; 2 Cor. 12:4; 13:1; Heb. 12:19; in the plural, speech, discourse, e.g., John 3:34; 8:20; Acts 2:14; 6:11, 13; 11:14; 13:42; 26:25; Rom. 10:18; 2 Pet. 3:2; Jude 17; it is used of the gospel in Rom. 10:8 (twice), 17, RV, “the word of Christ” (i.e., the “word” which preaches Christ); 10:18; 1 Pet. 1:25 (twice); of a statement, command, instruction, e.g., Matt. 26:75; Luke 1:37, RV, “(no) word (from God shall be void of power)”, v. 38; Acts 11:16; Heb. 11:3.

The significance of rhema (as distinct from logos) is exemplified in the injunction to take “the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God,” Eph. 6:17; here the reference is not to the whole Bible as such, but to the individual scripture which the Spirit brings to our remembrance for use in time of need, a prerequisite being the regular storing of the mind with Scripture.

Notes: (1) Epos, “a word,” is used in a phrase in Heb. 7:9, lit., “(as to say) a word,” RV, “(so to) say,” KJV, “(as I may so) say”; logos is reasoned speech, rhema, an utterance, epos, “the articulated expression of a thought” (AbbottSmith). (2) In Rom. 16:18, KJV, chrestologia, “useful discourse” (chrestos, “beneficial”), is rendered “good words” [RV, “smooth ... (speech)”.] (3) For logikos, 1 Pet. 2:2 (RV, “spiritual”), rendered “of the word,” KJV, see MILK. (4) For the verb apangello, rendered “to bring word,” see BRING, No. 36. (5) In Matt. 2:13, KJV, eipon, “to tell” (RV), is rendered “bring ... word.” (6) For “enticing words,” Col. 2:4, see ENTICE and PERSUASIVENESS. (7) For “strifes of words,” 1 Tim. 6:4, KJV, and “strive ... about words,” 2 Tim. 2:14, see STRIFE, STRIVE. (8) For suntomos, Acts 24:4, “a few words,” see FEW, B.¶ For the same phrase see FEW, A, Nos. 1 and 2.

WORK (Noun and Verb), WROUGHT

A. Nouns.

1. ergon (ἔργον, 2041) denotes (I) “work, employment, task,” e.g., Mark 13:34; John 4:34; 17:4; Acts 13:2; Phil. 2:30; 1 Thess. 5:13; in Acts 5:38 with the idea of enterprise; (II), “a deed, act,” (a) of God, e.g., John 6:28, 29; 9:3; 10:37; 14:10; Acts 13:41; Rom. 14:20; Heb. 1:10; 2:7; 3:9; 4:3, 4, 10; Rev. 15:3; (b) of Christ, e.g., Matt. 11:2; especially in John, 5:36; 7:3, 21; 10:25, 32, 33, 38; 14:11, 12; 15:24; Rev. 2:26; (c) of believers, e.g., Matt. 5:16; Mark 14:6; Acts 9:36; Rom. 13:3; Col. 1:10; 1 Thess. 1:3, “work of faith,” here the initial act of faith at conversion (turning to God, v. 9); in 2 Thess. 1:11, “every work of faith,” RV, denotes every activity undertaken for Christ’s sake; 2:17; 1 Tim. 2:10; 5:10; 6:18; 2 Tim. 2:21; 3:17; Titus 2:7, 14; 3:1, 8, 14; Heb. 10:24; 13:21; frequent in James, as the effect of faith [in 1:25, KJV, “(a doer) of the work,” RV, “(a doer) that worketh”]; 1 Pet. 2:12; Rev. 2:2 and in several other places in chs. 2 and 3; 14:13; (d) of unbelievers, e.g., Matt. 23:3, 5; John 7:7; Acts 7:41 (for idols); Rom. 13:12; Eph. 5:11; Col. 1:21; Titus 1:16 (1st part); 1 John 3:12; Jude 15, RV; Rev. 2:6, RV; of those who seek justification by works, e.g., Rom. 9:32; Gal. 3:10; Eph. 2:9; described as the works of the law, e.g., Gal. 2:16; 3:2, 5; dead works, Heb. 6:1; 9:14; (e) of Babylon, Rev. 18:6; (f) of the Devil, John 8:41; 1 John 3:8. See DEED.

2. ergasia (ἐργασία, 2039) denotes “a work” or “business,” also “a working, performance,” Eph. 4:19, where preceded by eis, “to,” it is rendered “to work” (marg., “to make a trade of”). See DILIGENCE, GAIN.

Notes: (1) In Rom. 9:28, KJV, logos, “a word” (RV), is rendered “work.” (2) For pragma, Jas. 3:16, rendered “work” in KJV, the RV has “deed.” (3) For praxis, “a doing,” Matt. 16:27, RV marg., KJV, “works, see DEED. (4) For the KJV, “much work,” Acts 27:16, see DIFFICULTY. (5) For “workfellow,” Rom. 16:21, KJV, see WORKER, No. 2. (6) In Matt. 14:2 and Mark 6:14, KJV, dunameis, “powers,” RV, is translated “mighty works”; in Acts 2:22, RV, “mighty works,” KJV, “miracles.” (7) For “wonderful works” see WONDERFUL, Note (2).

B. Verbs.

1. ergazomai (ἐργάζομαι, 2038) is used (I) intransitively, e.g., Matt. 21:28; John 5:17; 9:4 (2nd part); Rom. 4:4, 5; 1 Cor. 4:12; 9:6; 1 Thess. 2:9; 4:11; 2 Thess. 3:8, 10-12 (for the play upon words in v. 11 see BUSYBODY, A); (II) transitively, (a) “to work something, produce, perform,” e.g., Matt. 26:10, “she hath wrought”; John 6:28, 30; 9:4 (1st part); Acts 10:35; 13:41; Rom. 2:10; 13:10; 1 Cor. 16:10; 2 Cor. 7:10a, in the best texts, some have No. 2; Gal. 6:10, RV, “let us work”; Eph. 4:28; Heb. 11:33; 2 John 8; (b) “to earn by working, work for,” John 6:27, RV, “work” (KJV, “labor”). See COMMIT, DO, LABOR, MINISTER, TRADE.

2. katergazomai (κατεργάζομαι, 2716), an emphatic form of No. 1, signifies “to work out, achieve, effect by toil,” rendered “to work” (past tense, “wrought”) in Rom. 1:27; 2:9, RV; 4:15 (the Law brings men under condemnation and so renders them subject to divine wrath); 5:3; 7:8, 13; 15:18; 2 Cor. 4:17; 5:5; 7:10 (see No. 1), 11; 12:12; Phil. 2:12, where “your own salvation” refers especially to freedom from strife and vainglory; Jas. 1:3, 20; 1 Pet. 4:3. See DO, No. 5.

3. energeo (ἐνεργέω, 1754), lit., “to work in” (en, and A, No. 1), “to be active, operative,” is used of (a) God, 1 Cor. 12:6; Gal. 2:8; 3:5; Eph. 1:11, 20; 3:20; Phil. 2:13a; Col. 1:29; (b) the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. 12:11; (c) the Word of God, 1 Thess. 2:13 (middle voice; KJV, ‘effectually worketh’); (d) supernatural power, undefined, Matt. 14:2; Mark 6:14; (e) faith, as the energizer of love, Gal. 5:6; (f) the example of patience in suffering, 2 Cor. 1:6; (g) death (physical) and life (spiritual), 2 Cor. 4:12; (h) sinful passions, Rom. 7:5; (i) the spirit of the Evil One, Eph. 2:2; (j) the mystery of iniquity, 2 Thess. 2:7.”*

To these may be added (k) the active response of believers to the inworking of God, Phil. 2:13b, RV, “to work (for),” KJV, “to do (of)”; (1) the supplication of the righteous, Jas. 5:16, RV, “in its working” (KJV, “effectual fervent”).

4. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to do,” is rendered “to work” in Matt. 20:12, KJV (RV, “spent”); Acts 15:12, “had wrought”; 19:11; 21:19; Heb. 13:21; Rev. 16:14; 19:20; 21:27, KJV (RV, “maketh”; marg., “doeth”). See DO.

5. sunergeo (συνεργέω, 4903), “to work with or together” (sun), occurs in Mark 16:20; Rom. 8:28, “work together”; 1 Cor. 16:16, “helpeth with”; 2 Cor. 6:1, “workers together,” present participle, “working together”; the “with Him” represents nothing in the Greek; Jas. 2:22, “wrought with.” See HELP.¶

6. ginomai (γίνομαι, 1096), “to become, take place,” is rendered “wrought” in Mark 6:2; Acts 5:12, “were ... wrought.”

WORKER, WORKFELLOW, FELLOW WORKERS, WORKMAN

1. ergates (ἐργάτης, 2040) is translated “workers” in Luke 13:27 (“of iniquity”); 2 Cor. 11:13 (“deceitful”); Phil. 3:2 (“evil”); “workman,” Matt. 10:10, KJV (RV, “laborer”); “workman,” 2 Tim. 2:15; “workmen,” Acts 19:25. See LABORER.

2. sunergos (συνεργός, 4904) denotes “a worker with,” and is rendered “workfellow” in Rom. 16:21, KJV, RV, “fellow worker”; in Col. 4:11, “fellow workers” (see RV). See the RV, “God’s fellow workers,” in 1 Cor. 3:9. See COMPANION, HELPER, LABORER, Note.

Note: For “workers at home,” Titus 2:5, see HOME, B.

WORKING

1. energeia (ἐνέργεια, 1753) (Eng., “energy”) is used (1) of the “power” of God, (a) in the resurrection of Christ, Eph. 1:19; Col. 2:12, RV, “working” (KJV, “operation”); (b) in the call and enduement of Paul, Eph. 3:7; Col. 1:29; (c) in His retributive dealings in sending “a working of error” (KJV, “strong delusion”) upon those under the rule of the Man of Sin who receive not the love of the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness, 2 Thess. 2:11; (2) of the “power” of Christ (a) generally, Phil. 3:21; (b) in the church, individually, Eph. 4:16; (3) of the power of Satan in energizing the Man of Sin in his “parousia,” 2 Thess. 2:9, “Coming.”¶

2. energema (ἐνέργημα, 1755), “what is wrought,” the effect produced by No. 1, occurs in 1 Cor. 12:6, RV, “workings” (KJV, “operations”); v. 10.¶

For WORKMANSHIP see MADE, B

WORLD

1. kosmos (κόσμος, 2889), primarily “order, arrangement, ornament, adornment” (1 Pet. 3:3, see ADORN, B), is used to denote (a) the “earth,” e.g., Matt. 13:35; John 21:25; Acts 17:24; Rom. 1:20 (probably here the universe: it had this meaning among the Greeks, owing to the order observable in it); 1 Tim. 6:7; Heb. 4:3; 9:26; (b) the “earth” in contrast with Heaven, 1 John 3:17 (perhaps also Rom. 4:13); (c) by metonymy, the

* From Notes on Galatians, by Hogg and Vine, pp. 114, 115.

“human race, mankind,” e.g., Matt. 5:14; John 1:9 [here “that cometh (RV, ‘coming’) into the world” is said of Christ, not of “every man”; by His coming into the world He was the light for all men]; v. 10; 3:16, 17 (thrice), 19; 4:42, and frequently in Rom., 1 Cor. and 1 John; (d) “Gentiles” as distinguished from Jews, e.g., Rom. 11:12, 15, where the meaning is that all who will may be reconciled (cf. 2 Cor. 5:19); (e) the “present condition of human affairs,” in alienation from and opposition to God, e.g., John 7:7; 8:23; 14:30; 1 Cor. 2:12; Gal. 4:3; 6:14; Col. 2:8; Jas. 1:27; 1 John 4:5 (thrice); 5:19; (f) the “sum of temporal possessions,” Matt. 16:26; 1 Cor. 7:31 (1st part); (g) metaphorically, of the “tongue” as “a world (of iniquity),” Jas. 3:6, expressive of magnitude and variety.

2. aion (αἰών, 165), “an age, a period of time,” marked in the NT usage by spiritual or moral characteristics, is sometimes translated “world”; the RV marg. always has “age.” The following are details concerning the world in this respect; its cares, Matt. 13:22; its sons, Luke 16:8; 20:34; its rulers, 1 Cor. 2:6, 8; its wisdom, 1 Cor. 1:20; 2:6; 3:18; its fashion, Rom. 12:2; its character, Gal. 1:4; its god, 2 Cor. 4:4. The phrase “the end of the world” should be rendered “the end of the age,” in most places (see END, A, No. 2); in 1 Cor. 10:11, KJV, “the ends (tele) of the world,” RV, “the ends of the ages,” probably signifies the fulfillment of the divine purposes concerning the ages in regard to the church [this would come under END, A, No. 1, (c)]. In Heb. 11:3 [lit., “the ages (have been prepared)”] the word indicates all that the successive periods contain; cf. 1:2.

Aion is always to be distinguished from kosmos, even where the two seem to express the same idea, e.g., 1 Cor. 3:18, aion, v. 19, kosmos; the two are used together in Eph. 2:2, lit., “the age of this world.” For a list of phrases containing aion, with their respective meanings, see EVER, B.

3. oikoumene (οἰκουμένη, 3625), “the inhabited earth” (see EARTH, No. 2), is used (a) of the whole inhabited world, Matt. 24:14; Luke 4:5; 21:26; Rom. 10:18; Heb. 1:6; Rev. 3:10; 16:14; by metonymy, of its inhabitants, Acts 17:31; Rev. 12:9; (b) of the Roman Empire, the world as viewed by the writer or speaker, Luke 2:1; Acts 11:28; 24:5; by metonymy, of its inhabitants, Acts 17:6; 19:27; (c) the inhabited world in a coming age, Heb. 2:5.¶

Notes: (1) In Rev. 13:3, KJV, ge, “the earth” (RV), is translated “world.” (2) For phrases containing aionios, e.g., Rom. 16:25; 2 Tim. 1:9; Titus 1:2, see ETERNAL, No. 2.

WORLDLY

kosmikos (κοσμικός, 2886), “pertaining to this world,” is used (a) in Heb. 9:1, of the tabernacle, KJV, “worldly,” RV, “of this world” (i.e., made of mundane materials, adapted to this visible world, local and transitory); (b) in Titus 2:12, ethically, of “worldly lusts,” or desires.¶

For WORLD RULERS, Eph. 6:12, RV, see RULER, No. 3

WORM

1. skolex (σκώληξ, 4663), “a worm which preys upon dead bodies,” is used metaphorically by the Lord in Mark 9:48; in some mss. vv. 44, 46, cf. Isa. 66:24. The statement signifies the exclusion of the hope of restoration, the punishment being eternal.¶

2. skolekobrotos (σκοληκόβρωτος, 4662) denotes “devored by worms” (skolex, and bibrosko, “to eat”), Acts 12:23.¶

WORMWOOD

apsinthos (ἄψινθος, 894) (Eng., “absinthe”), a plant both bitter and deleterious, and growing in desolate places, figuratively suggestive of “calamity” (Lam. 3:15) and injustice (Amos 5:7), is used in Rev. 8:11 (twice; in the 1st part as a proper name).¶

WORSE

A. Adjectives.

1. cheiron (χείρων, 5501), used as the comparative degree of kakos, “evil,” describes (a) the condition of certain men, Matt. 12:45; Luke 11:26; 2 Pet. 2:20; (b) evil men themselves and seducers, 2 Tim. 3:13; (c) indolent men who refuse to provide for their own households, and are worse than unbelievers, 1 Tim. 5:8, RV; (d) a rent in a garment, Matt. 9:16; Mark 2:21; (e) an error, Matt. 27:64; (f) a person suffering from a malady, Mark 5:26; (g) a possible physical affliction, John 5:14; (h) a punishment, Heb. 10:29, “sorcer.” See SORE.¶

2. elasson or elaton (ἐλάσσων, 1640) is said of wine in John 2:10. See LESS.

3. hesson or hetton (ἥττον, 2276), “less, inferior,” used in the neuter, after epi, “for,” is translated “worse” in 1 Cor. 11:17; in 2 Cor. 12:15 the neuter, used adverbially, is translated “the less.”¶

B. Verbs.

1. hustereo (ὑστερέω, 5302) is rendered “are we the worse” in 1 Cor. 8:8. See BEHIND, B, No. 1, COME, No. 39, DESTITUTE, FAIL, Note (2), LACK, WANT.

2. proeCHO (προέρχομαι, 4281), “to hold before, promote,” is rendered “are we better” in Rom. 3:9, KJV (passive voice); RV, “are we in worse case.” See BETTER (be), Note (1).¶

WORSHIP (Verb and Noun), WORSHIPING

A. Verbs.

1. proskuneo (προσκυνέω, 4352), “to make obeisance, do reverence to” (from pros, “towards,” and kuneo, “to kiss”), is the most frequent word rendered “to worship.” It is used of an act of homage or reverence (a) to God, e.g., Matt. 4:10; John 4:21-24; 1 Cor. 14:25; Rev. 4:10; 5:14; 7:11; 11:16; 19:10 (2nd part) and 22:9; (b) to Christ, e.g., Matt. 2:2, 8, 11; 8:2; 9:18; 14:33; 15:25; 20:20; 28:9, 17; John 9:38; Heb. 1:6, in a quotation from the Sept. of Deut. 32:43, referring to Christ’s second advent; (c) to a man, Matt. 18:26; (d) to the Dragon, by men, Rev. 13:4; (e) to the Beast, his human instrument, Rev. 13:4, 8, 12; 14:9, 11; (f) the image of the Beast, 13:15; 14:11; 16:2; (g) to demons, Rev. 9:20; (h) to idols, Acts 7:43.

Note: As to Matt. 18:26, this is mentioned as follows, in the “List of readings and renderings preferred by the American Committee” (see RV Classes of Passages, IV): “At the word ‘worship’ in Matt. 2:2, etc., add the marginal note ‘The Greek word denotes an act of reverence, whether paid to man (see chap. 18:26) or to God (see chap. 4:10).’” The Note to John 9:38 in the American Standard Version in this connection is most unsound; it implies that Christ was a creature. J. N. Darby renders the verb “do homage” [see the Revised Preface to the Second Edition (1871), of his New Translation].

2. sebomai (σέβομαι, 4576), “to revere,” stressing the feeling of awe or devotion, is used of “worship” (a) to God, Matt. 15:9; Mark 7:7; Acts 16:14; 18:7, 13; (b) to a goddess, Acts 19:27. See DEVOUT, No. 3.

3. sebazomai (σεβάζομαι, 4573), akin to No. 2, “to honor religiously,” is used in Rom. 1:25.¶

4. latreuo (λατρεύω, 3000), “to serve, to render religious service or homage,” is translated “to worship” in Phil. 3:3, “(who) worship (by the Spirit of God),” RV, KJV, “(which) worship (God in the spirit);” the RV renders it “to serve” (for KJV, “to worship”) in Acts 7:42; 24:14; KJV and RV, “(the) worshipers” in Heb. 10:2, present participle, lit., “(the ones) worshiping.” See SERVE.

5. eusebeo (εὐσεβέω, 2151), “to act piously towards,” is translated “ye worship” in Acts 17:23. See PIETY (TO SHOW).

Notes: (1) The worship of God is nowhere defined in Scripture. A consideration of the above verbs shows that it is not confined to praise; broadly it may be regarded as the direct acknowledgement to God, of His nature, attributes, ways and claims, whether by the outgoing of the heart in praise and thanksgiving or by deed done in such acknowledgment. (2) In Acts 17:25 therapeuo, “to serve, do service to” (so RV), is rendered “is worshiped.” See CURE, HEAL.

B. Nouns.

1. sebasma (σέβασμα, 4574) denotes “an object of worship” (akin to A, No. 3); Acts 17:23 (see DEVOTION); in 2 Thess. 2:4, “that is worshiped”; every object of “worship,” whether the true God or pagan idols, will come under the ban of the Man of Sin.¶

2. ethelothreskeia (or -ia) (ἐθελοθηρησκεία, 1479), “will-worship” (ethelo, “to will,” threskeia, “worship”), occurs in Col. 2:23, voluntarily adopted “worship,” whether unbidden or forbidden, not that which is imposed by others, but which one affects.¶

3. threskeia (θηρησκεία, 2356), for which see RELIGION, is translated “worshipping” in Col. 2:18.

Note: In Luke 14:10, KJV, doxa, “glory” (RV), is translated “worship.”

WORSHIPER

1. proskunetes (προσκυνητής, 4353), akin to proskuneo (see WORSHIP, A, No. 1), occurs in John 4:23.¶

2. neokoros (νεωκόρος, 3511) is translated “worshiper” in Acts 19:35 KJV: see TEMPLE KEEPER.¶

3. theosebes (θεοσεβής, 2318) denotes “reverencing God” (theos, “God,” sebomai, see WORSHIP, A, No. 2), and is rendered “a worshiper of God” in John 9:35.¶ Cf. theosebeia, “godliness,” 1 Tim. 2:10.¶

Note: For Heb. 10:2, see WORSHIP, A, No. 4.

WORTHY, WORTHILY

A. Adjectives.

1. axios (ἄξιος, 514), “of weight, worth, worthy,” is said of persons and their deeds: (a) in a good sense, e.g., Matt. 10:10, 11, 13 (twice), 37 (twice), 38; 22:8; Luke 7:4; 10:7; 15:19, 21; John 1:27; Acts 13:25; 1 Tim. 5:18; 6:1; Heb. 11:38; Rev. 3:4; 4:11; 5:2, 4, 9, 12; (b) in a bad sense, Luke 12:48; 23:15; Acts 23:29; 25:11, 25; 26:31; Rom. 1:32; Rev. 16:6. See MEET, REWARD.

2. hikanos (ἱκανός, 2425), “sufficient,” is translated “worthy” in this sense in Matt. 3:11 (marg., “sufficient”); so 8:8; Mark 1:7; Luke 3:16; 7:6. See ABILITY, C, No. 2, etc.

3. enochos (ἐνοχος, 1777), “held in, bound by,” is translated “worthy (of death)” in Matt. 26:66 and Mark 14:64, RV (marg., “liable to”; KJV, “guilty”). See DANGER.

Notes: (1) In Jas. 2:7, KJV, kalos, “good, fair,” is translated “worthy” (RV, “honorable”). (2) For the KJV of Eph. 4:1; Col. 1:10; 1 Thess. 2:12, see C, below.

B. Verbs.

1. axioo (ἀξιόω, 515), “to think or count worthy,” is used (1) of the estimation formed by God (a) favorably, 2 Thess. 1:11, “may count (you) worthy (of your calling),” suggestive of grace (it does not say “may make you worthy”); Heb. 3:3, “of more glory,” of Christ in comparison with Moses; (b) unfavorably, 10:29, “of how much sorer punishment”; (2) by a centurion (negatively) concerning himself, Luke 7:7; (3) by a church, regarding its elders, 1 Tim. 5:17, where “honor” stands probably for “honorarium,” i.e., “material support.” See also DESIRE, B, No. 1 (Acts 28:22), THINK (Acts 15:38).¶

2. kataxioo (καταξιώω, 2661), a strengthened form of No. 1, occurs in Luke 20:35; 21:36, in some texts; Acts 5:41; 2 Thess. 1:5.¶ See ACCOUNT, A, No. 5.

C. Adverb.

axios (ἀξίως, 516), “worthily,” so translated in the RV [with one exception, see (c)], for KJV, “worthy” and other renderings, (a) “worthily of God,” 1 Thess. 2:12, of the Christian walk as it should be; 3 John 6, RV, of assisting servants of God in a way which reflects God’s character and thoughts; (b) “worthily of the Lord,” Col. 1:10; of the calling of believers, Eph. 4:1, in regard to their “walk” or manner of life; (c) “worthy of the gospel of Christ,” Phil. 1:27, of a manner of life in accordance with what the gospel declares; (d) “worthily of the saints,” RV, of receiving a fellow believer, Rom. 16:2, in such a manner as befits those who bear the name of “saints.”¶ Deissmann (Bible Studies, pp. 248ff.) shows from various inscriptions that the phrase “worthily of the god” was very popular at Pergamum.

For WORTHY DEEDS, Acts 24:2, KJV, see CORRECTION

WOT

Note: This form, the 1st person singular and the plural of the present tense of an AngloSaxon verb witan, “to see” or “to know” (for the past tense cf. WIST), is a rendering of (1) oida, “to know,” in Acts 3:17; 7:40; Rom. 11:2 (see KNOW, No. 2); (2) gnorizo, “to come to know,” in Phil. 1:22 (see KNOW, No. 8).

WOULD

Notes: (1) This is often a translation of various inflections of a Greek verb. When it represents a separate word, it is always emphatic, and is a translation of one or other of the verbs mentioned under WILL. (2) Ophelon (the 2nd aorist tense of opheilo, “to owe”) expresses a wish, “I would that,” either impracticable, 1 Cor. 4:8, RV (KJV, “would to God”); or possible, 2 Cor. 11:1; Gal. 5:12; Rev. 3:15. (3) Euchomai, “to pray,” with the particle an, expressing a strong desire with a remote possibility of fulfillment, is used in Acts 26:29, “I would (to God, that).”

WOUND (Noun and Verb)

A. Noun.

trauma (τραῦμα, 5134), “a wound,” occurs in Luke 10:34.¶

Note: Plege, “a blow, a stroke,” is used in Luke 10:30 with epitithemi “to lay on,” lit., “laid on blows,” RV, “beat” (KJV, “wounded”). In Rev. 13:3, 12, plege is used with the genitive case of thanatos, “death,” lit., “stroke of death,” RV, “death stroke” (KJV, “deadly wound”); the rendering “wound” does not accurately give the meaning; in v. 14, with the genitive of machaira, “a sword,” KJV, “wound” (RV, “stroke”).

B. Verb.

traumaizo (τραυματίζω, 5135), “to wound” (from A), occurs in Luke 20:12 and Acts 19:16.¶

Note: In Rev. 13:3, KJV, sphazo, “to slay,” is translated “wounded,” RV, “smitten” (KJV and RV marg., “slain”).

For WOUND (wrapped) see WIND (Verb)

WOVEN

huphantos (ὑφαντός, 5307), from huphaino, “to weave” (found in good mss. in Luke 12:27), is used of Christ’s garment, John 19:23.¶

WRANGLINGS

diaparatribe (παράδιατριβή, 3859v), found in 1 Tim. 6:5, denotes “constant strife,” “obstinate contests” (Ellicott), “mutual irritations” (Field), KJV, “perverse disputings” (marg., “gallings one of another”), RV “wranglings.” Some texts have paradiatribe. The preposition dia- is used intensively, indicating thoroughness, completeness.¶ The simple word paratribe (not found in the NT), denotes “hostility, enmity.” See DISPUTE, No. 3.

WRAP

1. eneileo (ἐνείλεω, 1750), “to roll in, wind in,” occurs in Mark 15:46; see WIND (Verb), No. 3.¶

2. entulisso (ἐντυλίσσω, 1794), “to roll in,” occurs in Matt. 27:59; Luke 23:53; John 20:7: see ROLL, No. 5.¶

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

3. sustello (συστέλλω, 4958), “to wrap” or “wind up,” Acts 5:6; see WIND, No. 2, 1 Cor. 7:29, see SHORTEN, No. 2.¶

WRATH

1. orge (ὀργή, 3709): see ANGER and Notes (1) and (2).

2. thumos (θυμός, 2372), “hot anger, passion,” for which see ANGER, Notes (1) and (2), is translated “wrath” in Luke 4:28; Acts 19:28; Rom. 2:8, RV; Gal. 5:20; Eph. 4:31; Col. 3:8; Heb. 11:27; Rev. 12:12; 14:8, 10, 19; 15:1, 7; 16:1; 18:3; “wraths” in 2 Cor. 12:20; “fierceness” in Rev. 16:19; 19:15 (followed by No. 1).¶

3. parorgismos (παροργισμός, 3950) occurs in Eph. 4:26: see ANGER, A, Note (2).¶

Note: For the verb parorgizo, “to provoke to wrath,” Eph. 6:4, KJV, see ANGER, B, No. 2.

WREST

strebloo (στρεβλόω, 4761), “to twist, to torture” (from streble, “a winch” or “instrument of torture,” and akin to strepheo, “to turn”), is used metaphorically in 2 Pet. 3:16, of “wresting” the Scriptures on the part of the ignorant and unsteadfast.¶ In the Sept., 2 Sam. 22:27.¶

WRESTLE, WRESTLING

pale (πάλη, 3823), “a wrestling” (akin to pallo, “to sway, vibrate”), is used figuratively in Eph. 6:12, of the spiritual conflict engaged in by believers, RV, “(our) wrestling,” KJV, “(we) wrestle.”¶

WRETCHED

talaiporos (ταλαίπωρος, 5005), “distressed, miserable, wretched,” is used in Rom. 7:24 and Rev. 3:17.¶ Cf. talaiporia, “misery,” and talaiporeo (see AFFLICT).

WRINKLE

rhutis (ῥυτίς, 4512), from an obsolete verb rhuo, signifying “to draw together,” occurs in Eph. 5:27, describing the flawlessness of the complete church, as the result of the love of Christ in giving Himself up for it, with the purpose of presenting it to Himself hereafter.¶

WRITE, WROTE, WRITTEN

A. Verbs.

1. grapho (γράφω, 1125) is used (a) of “forming letters” on a surface or writing material, John 8:6; Gal. 6:11, where the apostle speaks of his having “written” with large letters in his own hand, which not improbably means that at this point he took the pen from his amanuensis and finished the epistle himself; this is not negated by the fact that the verb is in the aorist or past definite tense, lit., “I wrote,” for in Greek idiom the writer of a letter put himself beside the reader and spoke of it as having been “written” in the past; in Eng. we should say “I am writing,” taking our point of view from the time at which we are doing it; cf. Philem. 19 (this Ep. is undoubtedly a holograph), where again the equivalent English translation is in the present tense (see also Acts 15:23; Rom. 15:15); possibly the apostle, in Galatians, was referring to his having “written” the body of the epistle but the former alternative seems the more likely; in 2 Thess. 3:17 he says that the closing salutation is written by his own hand and speaks of it as “the token in every epistle” which some understand as a purpose for the future rather than a custom; see, however, 1 Cor. 16:21 and Col. 4:18. The absence of the token from the other epistles of Paul can be explained differently, their authenticity not being dependent upon this; (b) “to commit to writing, to record,” e.g., Luke 1:63; John 19:21, 22; it is used of Scripture as a standing authority, “it is written,” e.g., Mark 1:2; Rom. 1:17 (cf. 2 Cor. 4:13); (c) of “writing directions or giving information,” e.g., Rom. 10:5, “(Moses) writeth,” RV (KJV, “describeth”); 15:15; 2 Cor. 7:12; (d) of “that which contained a record or message,” e.g., Mark 10:4, 5; John 19:19; 21:25; Acts 23:25.

2. epistello (ἐπιστέλλω, 1989) denotes “to send a message by letter, to write word” (stello, “to send”; Eng., “epistle”), Acts 15:20; 21:25 (some mss. have apostello, “to send”); Heb. 13:22.¶

3. prographo (προγράφω, 4270) denotes “to write before,” Rom. 15:4 (in the best texts; some have grapho); Eph. 3:3. See SET (forth).

4. engrapho (ἐγγράφω, 1449) denotes “to write in,” Luke 10:20; 2 Cor. 3:2, 3.¶

5. epigrapho (ἐπιγράφω, 1924) is rendered “to write over or upon” (epi) in Mark 15:26; figuratively, on the heart, Heb. 8:10; 10:16; on the gates of the heavenly Jerusalem, Rev. 21:12. See INSCRIPTION.

Notes: (1) For apographo, Heb. 12:23, KJV, “written,” see ENROLL. (2) In 2 Cor. 3:7 “written” is a translation of en, “in,” with the dative plural of gramma, a letter, lit., “in letters.”

B. Adjective.

graptos (γραπτός, 1123), from A, No. 1, “written,” occurs in Rom. 2:15.¶

WRITING

gramma (γράμμα, 1121), from grapho, “to write,” is rendered “writings” in John 5:47. See LETTER, No. 1.

Notes: (1) For biblion, “writing,” KJV in Matt. 19:7, see BILL, No. 1. (2) In John 19:19, KJV, “the writing (was)” is a translation of the perfect participle, passive voice, of grapho, RV, “(there was) written.”

WRITING TABLET (KJV, WRITING TABLE)

pinakidion (πινακίδιον, 4093) occurs in Luke 1:63, a diminutive of pinakis, “a tablet,” which is a variant reading here.¶

WRONG (Noun and Verb), WRONGDOER, WRONGDOING

A. Nouns.

1. adikia (ἀδικία, 93), a, negative, dike, “right,” is translated “wrong” in 2 Pet. 2:13 (2nd part), 15, RV, “wrongdoing” (KJV, unrighteousness); in 2 Cor. 12:13, it is used ironically. See INIQUITY, UNJUST, UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.

2. adikema (ἀδίκημα, 92) denotes “a misdeed, injury,” in the concrete sense (in contrast to No. 1), Acts 18:14, “a matter of wrong”; 24:20, RV, “wrongdoing” (KJV, “evil doing”). See INIQUITY.

B. Verb.

adikeo (ἀδικέω, 91), “to do wrong,” is used (a) intransitively, to act unrighteously, Acts 25:11, RV, “I am a wrongdoer” (KJV, “... an offender”); 1 Cor. 6:8; 2 Cor. 7:12 (1st part); Col. 3:25 (1st part); cf. Rev. 22:11 (see UNRIGHTEOUSNESS, B); (b) transitively, “to wrong,” Matt. 20:13; Acts 7:24 (passive voice), 26, 27; 25:10; 2 Cor. 7:2, v. 12 (2nd part; passive voice); Gal. 4:12, “ye did (me no) wrong,” anticipating a possible suggestion that his vigorous language was due to some personal grievance; the occasion referred to was that of his first visit; Col. 3:25 (2nd part), lit., “what he did wrong,” which brings consequences both in this life and at the judgment seat of Christ; Philem. 18; 2 Pet. 2:13 (1st part); in the middle or passive voice, “to take or suffer wrong, to suffer (oneself) to be wronged,” 1 Cor. 6:7. See HURT, OFFENDER, UNJUST.

WRONGFULLY

adikos (ἀδίκως, 95), akin to the above, occurs in 1 Pet. 2:19.¶

Note: For “exact wrongfully,” Luke 3:14, RV, see ACCUSE, B, No. 5.

WROTH (be)

1. orgizo (ὀργίζω, 3710), always in the middle or passive voice in the NT, is rendered “was (were) wroth” in Matt. 18:34; 22:7; Rev. 11:18, RV, (KJV, were angry); 12:17, RV, “waxed wroth.” See ANGER, B, No. 1.

2. thumoo (θυμώω, 2373) signifies “to be very angry” (from thumos, “wrath, hot anger”), “to be stirred into passion,” Matt. 2:16, of Herod (passive voice).¶

3. cholao (χολάω, 5520), primarily, “to be melancholy” (chole, “gall”), signifies “to be angry.” John 7:23, RV, “are ye wroth” (KJV, “... angry”).¶

For WROUGHT see WORK

Y

YE, YOU, YOURSELVES, YOUR OWN SELVES

Notes: (1) These are most frequently the translations of various inflections of a verb; sometimes of the article before a nominative used as a vocative, e.g., Rev. 18:20, “ye saints, and ye apostles, and ye prophets” (lit., “the saints, etc.”). When the 2nd person plural pronouns are used separately from a verb, they are usually one or other of the forms of humeis, the plural of su, “thou,” and are frequently emphatic, especially when they are subjects of the verb, an emphasis always to be noticed, e.g., Matt. 5:13, 14, 48; 6:9, 19, 20; Mark 6:31, 37; John 15:27a; Rom. 1:6; 1 Cor. 3:17, 23; Gal. 3:28, 29a; Eph. 1:13a; 2:8; 2:11, 13; Phil. 2:18; Col. 3:4, 7a; 4:1; 1 Thess. 1:6; 2:10, 19, 20; 3:8; 2 Thess. 3:13; Jas. 5:8; 1 Pet. 2:9a; 1 John 2:20, 24 (1st and 3rd occurrences), 27a; 4:4; Jude 17, 20. (2) The addition of autoi, “yourselves,” to the pronoun marks especial emphasis, e.g., Mark 6:31; John 3:28; 1 Cor. 11:13; 1 Thess. 4:9. Sometimes autoi is used without the pronoun, e.g., Luke 11:46, 52; Acts 2:22; 20:34; 1 Thess. 2:1; 3:3; 5:2; 2 Thess. 3:7; Heb. 13:3. (3) The reflexive pronoun “yourselves” represents the various plural forms of the reflexive pronoun heautou (frequently governed by some preposition), e.g., Matt. 3:9; 16:8; 23:31; 25:9; Mark 9:50; Luke 3:8; 12:33, 57; 16:9; 21:30, “of your own selves”; 21:34; Acts 5:35; in Rom. 11:25, “in your own (conceits),” lit., “in (en; some texts have para, ‘among’) yourselves”; so 12:16 (with para); 1 Pet. 4:8; Jude 20, 21; in Eph. 5:19, RV, “one to another” (KJV, and RV marg., “to yourselves”).

Note: In 1 Thess. 5:11, KJV, allelous, “one another” (RV), is rendered “yourselves together.”

YEA, YES

1. nai (ναί, 3483), a particle of affirmation, is used (a) in answer to a question, Matt. 9:28; 11:9; 13:51; 17:25; 21:16; Luke 7:26; John 11:27; 21:15, 16; Acts 5:8; 22:27; Rom. 3:29; (b) in assent to an assertion, Matt. 15:27, RV (KJV, “truth”); Mark 7:28; Rev. 14:13; 16:7, RV (KJV, “even so”); (c) in confirmation of an assertion, Matt. 11:26 and Luke 10:21, RV (KJV, “even so”); Luke 11:51, RV (KJV, “verily”); 12:5; Phil. 4:3 (in the best texts); Philem. 20; (d) in solemn asseveration, Rev. 1:7 (KJV and RV, “even so”); 22:20, RV (KJV, “surely”); (e) in repetition for emphasis, Matt. 5:37; 2 Cor. 1:17; Jas. 5:12; (f) singly in contrast to ou, “nay,” 2 Cor. 1:18, 19 (twice), 20, “(the) yea,” RV.¶

2. alla (ἀλλά, 235), “but,” is translated “yea” in John 16:2; Rom. 3:31, KJV (RV, “nay”); 1 Cor. 4:3; 2 Cor. 7:11 (six times); Gal. 4:17, KJV (RV, “nay”); Phil. 1:18; 2:17; 3:8; Jas. 2:18.

3. kai (καί, 2532), “and, even,” is rendered “yea,” e.g., Luke 2:35; John 16:32; 1 Cor. 2:10; 2 Cor. 8:3; in Acts 7:43, KJV (RV, “and”).

4. men oun (μενοῦνγε, 3304), in some texts menounge, i.e., men-oun-ge, “yea rather,” occurs, e.g., in Luke 11:28; in Rom. 10:18, “yea (KJV, yes) verily”; in Phil. 3:8, RV, “yea verily” (KJV, “yea doubtless”).

Notes: (1) In 1 Cor. 15:15 the RV translates kai by “and” (KJV, “yea”). (2) In Luke 24:22 the RV translates alla kai “moreover” (KJV, “yea ... and”). (3) In 1 Cor. 16:6, KJV, e kai, “or even” (RV), is translated “yea, and.” (4) In 2 Cor. 5:16, KJV, the phrase ei kai (some texts have ei de kai) is translated “yea, though” (RV, “even though”). (5) In Phil. 2:8, RV, the particle de, “but,” is translated “yea” (KJV, “even”).

YEAR

A. Nouns.

---

¶ Indicates that all the NT occurrences of the Greek word under consideration are mentioned under the heading or sub-heading.

1. etos (ἔτος, 2094) is used (a) to mark a point of time at or from which events take place, e.g., Luke 3:1 (dates were frequently reckoned from the time when a monarch began to reign); in Gal. 3:17 the time of the giving of the Law is stated as 430 “years” after the covenant of promise given to Abraham; there is no real discrepancy between this and Ex. 12:40; the apostle is not concerned with the exact duration of the interval, it certainly was not less than 430 “years”; the point of the argument is that the period was very considerable; Gal. 1:18 and 2:1 mark events in Paul’s life; as to the former the point is that three “years” elapsed before he saw any of the apostles; in 2:1 the 14 “years” may date either from his conversion or from his visit to Peter mentioned in 1:18; the latter seems the more natural (for a full discussion of the subject see Notes on Galatians by Hogg and Vine, pp. 55ff.); (b) to mark a space of time, e.g., Matt. 9:20; Luke 12:19; 13:11; John 2:20; Acts 7:6, where the 400 “years” mark not merely the time that Israel was in bondage in Egypt, but the time that they sojourned or were strangers there (the RV puts a comma after the word “evil”); the Genevan Version renders Gen. 15:13 “thy posterity shall inhabit a strange land for 400 years”; Heb. 3:17; Rev. 20:2-7; (c) to date an event from one’s birth, e.g., Mark 5:42; Luke 2:42; 3:23; John 8:57; Acts 4:22; 1 Tim. 5:9; (d) to mark recurring events, Luke 2:41 (with kata, used distributively); 13:7; (e) of an unlimited number, Heb. 1:12.

2. eniautos (ἐνιαυτός, 1763), originally “a cycle of time,” is used (a) of a particular time marked by an event, e.g., Luke 4:19; John 11:49, 51; 18:13; Gal. 4:10; Rev. 9:15; (b) to mark a space of time, Acts 11:26; 18:11; Jas. 4:13; 5:17; (c) of that which takes place every year, Heb. 9:7; with kata [cf. (d) above], Heb. 9:25; 10:1, 3.¶

3. dietia (διετία, 1333) denotes “a space of two years” (dis, “twice,” and No. 1), Acts 24:27; 28:30.¶

4. trietia (τριετία, 5148) denotes “a space of three years” (treis, “three,” and No. 1) Acts 20:31.¶

Note: In Luke 1:7, 18, hemera, “a day,” is rendered “years.”

B. Adjectives.

1. dietes (διετής, 1332), akin to A, No. 3, denotes “lasting two years, two years old,” Matt. 2:16.¶

2. hekatontaetes (ἑκατονταέτης, 1541) denotes “a hundred years old,” Rom. 4:19.¶

C. Adverb.

perusi (πέρυσι, 4070), “last year, a year ago” (from pera, “beyond”), is used with apo, “from” 2 Cor. 8:10; 9:2.¶

Note: In Heb. 11:24, KJV, ginomai, “to become,” with megas, “great,” is rendered “when he was come to years” (RV, “when he was grown up”).

For YES, see YEA

YESTERDAY

echthes or chthes (χθές, 5504v) occurs in John 4:52; Acts 7:28; Heb. 13:8.¶

YET

Notes: This represents (1) the adverb eti, implying addition or duration, e.g., Matt. 12:40; Rom. 3:7; 5:6, 8; 9:19; in Heb. 12:26, 27, “yet ... more”; (2) alla, but, marking antithesis or transition, e.g., Mark 14:29; 1 Cor. 4:4, 15; 9:2; (3) mentoi, “nevertheless,” John 4:27; 20:5; (4) akmen, “even to this point of time” (the accusative case of akme, “a point”), Matt. 15:16; ¶ (5) ouketi, “no longer,” Mark 15:5, KJV, “yet ... nothing” (RV, “no more ... anything”); 2 Cor. 1:23, KJV, “not as yet”, “yet not,” e.g. Gal. 2:20, KJV; (6) oupo, “not yet,” John 7:39 and 1 Cor. 8:2 (oudepo, in some mss., KJV, “nothing yet”); oudepo, John 19:41, “never yet”; 20:9, “as yet ... not”; (7) mepo, “not yet,” Rom. 9:11; Heb. 9:5;¶ (8) kai, “and, even, also,” “yet” in Luke 3:20; in Gal. 3:4, ei ge kai, KJV, “if ... yet” (RV, “if ... indeed”); (9) ge, a particle meaning “indeed,” “yet,” Luke 11:8; (10) oudeis popote, 19:30, RV, “no man ever yet,” KJV, “yet never man,” lit., “no one at any time (yet)”; (11) the following, in which the RV gives the correct meaning for the KJV, “yet”: ede, “now,” Mark 13:28; pote, “ever,” Eph. 5:29 (KJV, “ever yet”); kai □ de, John 8:16, “yea and” (KJV, “and yet”); ou pleious, Acts 24:11, “not more”; (12) mello, “to be about to,” “are yet,” Rev. 8:13; (13) other combinations with AND, AS, NOR, NOT.

YIELD

1. didomi (δίδωμι, 1325), “to give,” is translated “to yield,” i.e., “to produce,” in Matt. 13:8, RV (KJV, “brought forth”); Mark 4:7, 8. See GIVE.
2. apodidomi (ἀποδίδωμι, 591), “to give up or back,” is translated “to yield” in Heb. 12:11; Rev. 22:2 (in each case, of bearing fruit). See DELIVER, A, No. 3, etc.
3. paristemi or paristano (παρίστημι, 3936), “to present,” is translated “to yield” in Rom. 6:13 (twice), 16, 19 (twice), RV, “to present,” in each place. See COMMEND, etc.
4. poieo (ποιέω, 4160), “to make, to do,” is translated “yield” in Jas. 3:12. See DO.
5. aphiemi (ἀφίημι, 863), “to send away,” is translated “yielded up (His spirit)” in Matt. 27:50 (cf. paratithemi, “I commend,” Luke 23:46, and paradidomi, “He gave up,” John 19:30). See FORGIVE, etc.

6. peitho (πείθω, 3982), “to persuade,” in the passive voice, “to be persuaded,” is translated “do (not) thou yield,” Acts 23:21. See PERSUADE.

Note: In Acts 5:10, KJV, ekpsucho, “to breathe one’s last, expire” (ek, “out,” psuche, “the life”), is translated “yielded up (RV, “gave up”) the ghost.” See GHOST (give up the), No. 2.

YOKE, YOKED

v Variant spellings of forms of other words not listed in Strong’s are indicated with a “v” following the number (for instance, ektromos, a variant of entromos, is 1790v).

A. Nouns.

1. zugos (ζυγός, 2218), “a yoke,” serving to couple two things together, is used (1) metaphorically, (a) of submission to authority, Matt. 11:29, 30, of Christ’s “yoke,” not simply imparted by Him but shared with Him; (b) of bondage, Acts 15:10 and Gal. 5:1, of bondage to the Law as a supposed means of salvation; (c) of bond service to masters, 1 Tim. 6:1; (2) to denote “a balance,” Rev. 6:5. See BALANCE.¶

2. zeugos (ζεύγος, 2201), “a pair of animals,” Luke 14:19. See PAIR.

B. Verb.

heterozugeo (ἐτεροζυγέω, 2086), “to be unequally yoked” (heteros, “another of a different sort,” and A, No. 1), is used metaphorically in 2 Cor. 6:14.¶

YOKEFELLOW

sunzugos or suzugos (σύζυγος, 4805), an adjective denoting “yoked together,” is used as a noun in Phil. 4:3, “a yokefellow, fellow laborer”; probably here it is a proper name, Synzygus, addressed as “true,” or “genuine” (gnesios), i.e., “properly so-called.”

YONDER

ekai (ἐκεῖ, 1563), “there,” is rendered “yonder” in Matt. 26:36; “to yonder place,” 17:20. See THERE, THITHER.

For YOU see YE

YOUNG, YOUNG (children, daughter, man, men, woman, women)

1. neoteros (νέος, 3501), the comparative degree of neos, “new, youthful,” is translated “young” in John 21:18; in the plural, Acts 5:6, “young men” (marg., “younger”); Titus 2:6, KJV, RV, “younger men.” See YOUNGER.

2. neos (νέος, 3501), in the feminine plural, denotes “young women,” Titus 2:4. See NEW, No. 2.

3. neanias (νεανίας, 3494), “a young man,” occurs in Acts 7:58; 20:9; 23:17, 18 (in some texts).¶

4. neaniskos (νεανίσκος, 3495), a diminutive of No. 3, “a youth, a young man,” occurs in Matt. 19:20, 22; Mark 14:51 (1st part; RV omits in 2nd part); 16:5; Luke 7:14; Acts 2:17; 5:10 (i.e., attendants); 23:18 (in the best texts), 22; 1 John 2:13, 14, of the second branch of the spiritual family.¶

5. nossos or neossos (νεοσσός, 3502), “a young bird” (akin to No. 2), is translated “young” in Luke 2:24.¶ Cf. nossia, “a brood,” Luke 13:34, and the noun nossion, used in the neuter plural, nossia, in Matt. 23:37, “chickens”; nossion is the diminutive of nossos.¶

Notes: (1) In Acts 20:12, KJV, pais, a “lad” (RV), is translated “young man.” (2) In Mark 7:25, KJV, thugatrion, a diminutive of thugater, “a daughter,” is rendered “young (RV, ‘little’) daughter.” (3) In Mark 10:13, KJV, paidion, in the neuter plural, is rendered “young (RV, ‘little’) children.” (4) In Acts 7:19, KJV, brephos, in the neuter plural, is rendered “young children,” RV, “babes.” See BABE, No. 1.

YOUNGER

1. neoteros (νέος, 3501), for which see No. 1, above, occurs in Luke 15:12, 13; 22:26; 1 Tim. 5:1 (“younger men”); 5:2, feminine; v. 11, “younger (widows)”]; v. 14, “younger (widows),” RV, marg. and KJV, “younger (women)” (see WIDOW); 1 Pet. 5:5. For Titus 2:6 see YOUNG, No. 1.¶

2. elasson (ἐλάσσων, 1640) is rendered “younger” in Rom. 9:12: see LESS.

YOUR, YOURS

Notes: (1) “Your” is most frequently the translation of humon, lit., “of you,” the genitive plural of su, “thou, you”; it is translated “yours” in 1 Cor. 3:21, 22; in 8:9, “of yours”; 16:18; 2 Cor. 12:14. In the following the dative plural, humin, lit., “to you,” is translated “your”; Luke 16:11, lit., “(who will entrust) to you”; in 21:15 “your adversaries” is, lit., “(those opposed) to you”; in 1 Cor. 6:5 and 15:34, KJV, “(I speak to) your (shame),” RV, “(I say this to move) you (to shame),” is, lit., “(I speak unto a shame) to you.” The accusative plural, humas, preceded by kata, “according to,” is rendered in Acts 18:15 “your own (law),” RV, KJV, “your (law),” lit., “(of the law) according to you,” with emphasis and scorn; in Eph. 1:15 the same construction is used of faith, but kata here means “among,” as in the RV, “(the faith ... which is) among you,” KJV, “your (faith)”; in John 14:26 “He shall ... bring to your remembrance” is, lit., “He shall ... put you in mind of.” (2) The possessive pronoun, humeteros, “your,” is used in Luke 6:20; John 7:6; 8:17; 15:20; Acts 27:34; Rom. 11:31; 1 Cor. 15:31; 16:17; 2 Cor. 8:8; Gal. 6:13; in Luke 16:12, “your own.”¶ (3) In Rom. 16:19, KJV, the phrase to epi humin, lit., “the (matter) over you,” is rendered “on your behalf” (RV, “over you,” following the mss. which omit the neuter article to).

YOUTH

neotes (νεότης, 3503), from neos, “new,” occurs in Mark 10:20; Luke 18:21; Acts 26:4; 1 Tim. 4:12 (in some mss., Matt. 19:20).¶

YOUTHFUL

neoterikos (νεωτερικός, 3512), from neoteros, the comparative degree of neos, “new,” is used especially of qualities, of lusts, 2 Tim. 2:22.¶

ZEAL

zelos (ζήλος, 2205) denotes “zeal” in the following passages: John 2:17, with objective genitive, i.e., “zeal for Thine house”; so in Rom. 10:2, “a zeal for God”; in 2 Cor. 7:7, RV, “(your) zeal (for me),” KJV, “(your) fervent mind (toward me)”]; used absolutely in 7:11; 9:2; Phil. 3:6 (in Col. 4:13 in some texts; the best have ponos, labor, RV). See ENVY, Note, FERVENT, C, Note (2), INDIGNATION, A, Note (3), JEALOUSY.

ZEALOUS

zelotes (ζηλωτής, 2207) is used adjectivally, of “being zealous” (a) “of the Law,” Acts 21:20; (b) “toward God,” lit., “of God,” 22:3, RV, “for God”; (c) “of spiritual gifts,” 1 Cor. 14:12, i.e., for exercise of spiritual gifts (lit., “of spirits,” but not to be interpreted literally); (d) “for (KJV, ‘of’) the traditions of my fathers,” Gal. 1:14, of Paul’s loyalty to Judaism before his conversion; (e) “of good works,” Titus 2:14.

The word is, lit., “a zealot,” i.e., “an uncompromising partisan.” The “Zealots” was a name applied to an extreme section of the Pharisees, bitterly antagonistic to the Romans. Josephus (Antiq. xviii. 1. 1, 6; B.J. ii. 8. 1) refers to them as the “fourth sect of Jewish philosophy” (i.e., in addition to the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes), founded by Judas of Galilee (cf. Acts 5:37). After his rebellion in A.D. 6, the Zealots nursed the fires of revolt, which, bursting out afresh in A.D. 66, led to the destruction of Jerusalem in 70. To this sect Simon, one of the apostles, had belonged, Luke 6:15; Acts 1:13. The equivalent Hebrew and Aramaic term was “Cananaean” (Matt. 10:4); this is not connected with Canaan, as the KJV “Canaanite” would suggest, but is derived from Heb. qanna, “jealous.”¶

B. Verbs.

1. zeloo (ζηλόω, 2206), “to be jealous,” also signifies “to seek or desire eagerly”; in Gal. 4:17, RV, “they zealously seek (you),” in the sense of taking a very warm interest in, so in v. 18, passive voice, “to be zealously sought” (KJV, “to be zealously affected”), i.e., to be the object of warm interest on the part of others; some texts have this verb in Rev. 3:19 (see No. 2). See AFFECT, Note, COVET, DESIRE, ENVY, JEALOUS.

2. zeleuo, a late and rare form of No. 1, is found in the best texts in Rev. 3:19, “be zealous.”¶

Note: For spoudazo, Gal. 2:10, RV, see DILIGENT, B, No. 1.

ADDITIONAL NOTES

ON THE PARTICLE KAI (2532)

(a) The particle kai, “and,” chiefly used for connecting words, clauses and sentences (the copulative or connective use), not infrequently signifies “also.” This is the adjunctive, or amplificatory, use, and it is to be distinguished from the purely copulative significance “and.” A good illustration is provided in Matt. 8:9, in the words of the centurion, “I also am a man under authority.” Other instances are Matt. 5:39, 40; 8:9; 10:18; 18:33; 20:4; Luke 11:49; 12:41, 54, 57; 20:3; John 5:26, “the Son also,” RV; 7:3; 12:10; 14:1, 3, 7, 19; 15:9, 27; 17:24; Acts 11:17; Rom. 1:13; 6:11; 1 Cor. 7:3; 11:25; 15:30; Gal. 6:1; Phil. 4:12, “I know also,” RV, 1 Thess. 3:12. In 1 Cor. 2:13 the kai phrase signifies “which are the very things we speak, with the like power of the Holy Spirit.”

This use includes the meanings “so,” or “just so,” by way of comparison, as in Matt. 6:10, and “so also,” e.g., John 13:33; cf. Rom. 11:16. In Heb. 7:26 the most authentic mss. have kai in the first sentence, which may be rendered “for such a High Priest also became us.” Here it virtually has the meaning “precisely.”

(b) Occasionally kai tends towards an adversative meaning, expressing a contrast, “yet,” almost the equivalent of alla, “but”; see, e.g., Mark 12:12, “yet they feared”; Luke 20:19; John 18:28, “yet they themselves entered not.” Some take it in this sense in Rom. 1:13, where, however, it may be simply parenthetical. Sometimes in the English versions the “yet” has been added in italics, as in 2 Cor. 6:8, 9, 10.

(c) In some passages kai has the meaning “and yet,” e.g., Matt. 3:14, “and yet comest Thou to me?”; 6:26, “and yet (RV ‘and,’ KJV, ‘yet’) your Heavenly Father feedeth them”; Luke 18:7, “and yet He is longsuffering”; John 3:19, “and yet men loved the darkness”; 4:20, “and yet we say”; 6:49, “and yet they died”; 1 Cor. 5:2, “and yet ye are puffed up”; 1 John 2:9, “and yet hateth his brother.” The same is probably the case in John 7:30, “and yet no man laid hands on Him”, some rule this and similar cases out because of the negative in the sentence following the kai, but that seems hardly tenable.

(d) In some passages it has a temporal significance, “then.” In Luke 7:12 the kai, which is untranslated in the English versions, provides the meaning “then, behold, there was carried out”; so Acts 1:10, “then, behold, two men stood.” This use is perhaps due to the influence of the Septuagint, reflecting the Hebrew idiom, especially when idou “behold” follows the kai.

(e) There is also the inferential use before a question, e.g., Mark 10:26, “then who can be saved?” RV. This is commonly expressed by the English “and,” as in Luke 10:29; John 9:36.

(f) Occasionally it has almost the sense of hoti, “that,” e.g., Matt. 26:15 (first part); Mark 14:40 (last part); Luke 5:12, 17, where, if the kai had been translated, the clause might be rendered “that, behold, a man ...,” lit., “and behold ...”; so v. 17; see also 9:51, where kai, “that,” comes before “He steadfastly set”; in 12:15, “take heed that ye keep.” What is said under (d), regarding the influence of the Septuagint, is applicable also to this significance.

(g) Sometimes it has the consecutive meaning of “and so”: e.g., Matt. 5:15, “and so it shineth”; Phil. 4:7, “and so the peace ...”; Heb. 3:19, “and so we see.”

(h) The epexegetic or explanatory use. This may be represented by the expressions “namely,” “again,” “and indeed,” “that is to say”; it is usually translated by “and.” In such cases not merely an addition is in view. In Matt. 21:5, “and upon a colt” means “that is to say, upon a colt.” In John 1:16 the clause “and grace for grace” is explanatory of the “fullness.” In John 12:48, “and receiveth not My sayings,” is not simply an addition to “that rejecteth Me,” it explains what the rejection involves, as the preceding verse shows. In Mark 14:1, “and the unleavened bread” is perhaps an instance, since the Passover feast is so defined in Luke 22:1. In Acts 23:6 the meaning is “the hope, namely, the resurrection of the dead.” In Rom. 1:5 “grace and apostleship” may signify “grace expressed in apostleship.” In Eph. 1:1 “and the faithful” does not mark a distinct class of believers, it defines “the saints”; but in this case it goes a little further than what is merely epexegetical, it adds a more distinctive epithet than the preceding and may be taken as meaning “yes indeed.”

For the suggestion as to the epexegetic use of kai in John 3:5, “water, even the Spirit,” see WATER.

In regard to Titus 3:5, “the renewing of the Holy Ghost” is coordinate with “the washing of regeneration,” and some would regard it as precisely explanatory of that phrase, taking the kai as signifying “namely.” Certainly the “renewing” is not an additional and separate impartation of the Holy Spirit; but the scope of the renewal is surely not limited to regeneration; the second clause goes further than what is merely epexegetic of the first. Just so in Rom. 12:2, “the renewing of your mind” is not a single act, accomplished once and for all, as in regeneration. See under RENEW, B. The Holy Ghost, as having been “shed on us,” continues to act in renewing us, in order to maintain by His power the enjoyment of the relationship into which He has brought us. “The man is cleansed in connection with the new order of things; but the Holy Ghost is a source of an entirely new life, entirely new thoughts; not only of a new moral being, but of the communication of all that in which this new being develops itself ... He ever communicates more and more of the things of this new world into which He has brought us ... ‘the renewing of the Holy Ghost’ embraces all this ... so that it is not only that we are born of Him, but that He works in us, communicating to us all that is ours in Christ” (J. N. Darby). Both the washing and the renewing are His work.

(i) The ascensive use. This is somewhat similar to the epexegetic significance. It represents, however, an advance in thought upon what precedes and has the meaning “even.” The context alone can determine the occurrences of this use. The following are some instances. In Matt. 5:46, 47, the phrases “even the publicans” and “even the Gentiles” represent an extension of thought in regard to the manner of reciprocity exhibited by those referred to, in comparison with those who, like the Pharisees, were considered superior to them. In Mark 1:27, “even the unclean spirits” represents an advance in the minds of the people concerning Christ’s miraculous power, in comparison with the authority exercised by the Lord in less remarkable ways. So in Luke 10:17. In Acts 10:45, the kai, rendered “also,” in the phrase “on the Gentiles also,” seems necessary to be regarded in the same way, in view of the amazement manifested by those of the circumcision, and thus the rendering will be “even on the Gentiles was poured out the gift”; cf. 11:1.

In Rom. 13:5, the clause “but also for conscience sake” should probably be taken in this sense. In Gal. 2:13, the phrase “even Barnabas” represents an advance of thought in comparison with the waywardness of others; as much as to say, “the Apostle’s closest associate, from whom something different might be expected, was surprisingly carried away.” In Phil. 4:16 there are three occurrences of kai, the first ascensive, “even”; the second (untranslated) meaning “both,” before the word “once”; the third meaning “and.” In 1 Thess. 1:5, in the clause “and in the Holy Ghost,” the kai rendered “and,” is ascensive, conveying an extension of thought beyond “power”; that is to say, “power indeed, but the power of the Holy Spirit.” In 1 Pet. 4:14 “the Spirit of God” is “the Spirit of glory.” Here there is an advance in idea from the abstract to the personal. The phrase “the Spirit of God” does more than define “the Spirit of glory”; it is explanatory but ascensive also.

When preceded or followed by the conjunction ei, “if,” the phrase signifies “even if,” or “if even,” e.g., Mark 14:29; Phil. 2:17; 1 Pet. 3:1.

ON THE PARTICLE DE (1161)

The particle de has two chief uses, (a) continuative or copulative, signifying “and,” or “in the next place,” (b) adversative, signifying “but,” or “on the other hand.” The first of these, (a), is well illustrated in the genealogy in Matt. 1:2-16, the line being simply reckoned from Abraham to Christ. So in 2 Cor. 6:15, 16, where the de anticipates a negative more precisely than would be the case if kai had been used. In 1 Cor. 15:35; Heb. 12:6, e.g., the de “and (scourgeth)” is purely copulative.

(b) The adversative use distinguishes a word or clause from that which precedes. This is exemplified, for instance, in Matt. 5:22, 28, 32, 34, 39, 44, in each of which the ego, “I,” stands out with pronounced stress by way of contrast. This use is very common. In Matt. 23:4 the first de is copulative, “Yea, they bind heavy burdens” (RV), the second is adversative, “but they themselves will not ...”

In John 3:1, RV, it may not at first sight seem clear whether the de, “Now,” is copulative, introducing an illustration of Christ’s absolute knowledge, or adversative, signifying “But.” In the former case the significance would be that, however fair the exterior might be, as exemplified in Nicodemus, he needs to be born again. In the latter case it introduces a contrast, in regard to Nicodemus, to what has just been stated, that “Jesus did not trust Himself” (2:24) to those mentioned in v. 23. And, inasmuch as He certainly did afford to Nicodemus the opportunity of learning the truths of the New Birth and the kingdom of God, as a result of which he became a disciple (“secret” though he was), he may be introduced in the apostle’s narrative as an exception to those who believed simply through seeing the signs accomplished by the Lord (2:23).

In Rom. 3:22, in the clause “even the righteousness,” the de serves to annex not only an explanation, defining “a righteousness of God” (v. 21, RV), but an extension of the thought; so in 9:30, “even the righteousness which is of faith.”

In 1 Cor. 2:6, in the clause “yet a wisdom,” an exception (not an addition) is made to what precedes; some would regard this as belonging to (a) it seems, however, clearly adversative. In 4:7 the first de is copulative, “and what hast thou ... ?”; the second is adversative, “but if thou didst receive ...”

In 1 Thess. 5:21 “many ancient authorities insert ‘but’” (see RV marg.), so translating de, between the two injunctions “despise not prophesyings” and “prove all things,” and this is almost certainly the correct reading. In any case the injunctions are probably thus contrastingly to be connected.

In 2 Pet. 1:5-7, after the first de, which has the meaning “yea,” the six which follow, in the phrases giving virtues to be supplied, suggest the thought “but there is something further to be done.” These are not merely connective, as expressed by the English “and,” but adversative, as indicating a contrast to the possible idea that to add virtue to our faith is sufficient for the moral purpose in view.

De, in combination with the negatives ou and me (oude and mede, usually “but not,” “and not,” “neither,” “nor,”), sometimes has the force of “even,” e.g., oude in Matt. 6:29, “even Solomon ... was not arrayed ...”; Mark 6:31, lit., “(they had) not even leisure to eat”; Luke 7:9, lit., “not even in Israel have I found such faith”; John 7:5, “For even His brethren did not believe on Him”; Acts 4:32, lit., “not even one of them”; 1 Cor. 5:1, “not even among the Gentiles”; mede, in Mark 2:2, “not even about the door”; 1 Cor. 5:11, lit., “with such a one not even to eat.”

ON THE PREPOSITIONS ANTI (473) AND HUPER (5228)

The basic idea of anti is “facing.” This may be a matter of opposition, unfriendliness or antagonism, or of agreement. These meanings are exemplified in compounds of the preposition with verbs, and in nouns. The following are instances: antiparerchomai in Luke 10:31, 32, where the verb is rendered “passed by on the other side,” i.e., of the road, but facing the wounded man; antiballo in Luke 24:17, where the anti suggests that the two disciples, in exchanging words (see RV marg.), turned to face one another, indicating the earnest nature of their conversation. The idea of antagonism is seen in antidikos, “an adversary,” Matt. 5:25, antichristos, “antichrist,” 1 John 4:3, etc.

There is no instance of the uncompounded preposition signifying “against.” Arising from the basic significance, however, there are several other meanings attaching to the separate use of the preposition. In the majority of the occurrences in the NT, the idea is that of “in the place of,” “instead of,” or of exchange; e.g., Matt. 5:38, “an eye for (anti) an eye”; Rom. 12:17, “evil for evil”; so 1 Thess. 5:15; 1 Pet. 3:9, and, in the same verse, “reviling for reviling.” The ideas of substitution and exchange are combined, e.g., in Luke 11:11, “for a fish ... a serpent”; Heb. 12:16, “for one mess of meat.. his own birthright.” So in Matt. 17:27, “a shekel (stater) ... for thee and Me,” where the phrase is condensed; that is to say, the exchange is that of the coin for the tax demanded from Christ and Peter, rather than for the persons themselves. So in 1 Cor. 11:15, where the hair is a substitute for the covering.

Of special doctrinal importance are Matt. 20:28; Mark 10:45, “to give His life a ransom (lutron) for (anti) many.” Here the substitutionary significance, “instead of,” is clear, as also with the compound antilutron in 1 Tim. 2:6, “who gave Himself a ransom (antitutron) for (huper) all”; here the use of huper, “on behalf of,” is noticeable. Christ gave Himself as a ransom (of a substitutionary character), not instead of all men, but on behalf of all. The actual substitution, as in the passages in Matthew and Mark, is expressed by the anti, instead of, “many.” The unrepentant man should not be told that Christ was his substitute, for in that case the exchange would hold good for him and though unregenerate he would not be in the place of death, a condition in which, however, he exists while unconverted. Accordingly the “many” are those who, through faith, are delivered from that condition. The substitutionary meaning is exemplified in Jas. 4:15, where the KJV and RV render the anti “for that” (RV, marg., “instead of”).

In Heb. 12:2, “for (anti) the joy that was set before Him endured the cross,” neither the thought of exchange nor that of substitution is conveyed; here the basic idea of facing is present. The cross and the joy faced each other in the mind of Christ and He chose the one with the other in view.

In John 1:16 the phrase “grace for grace” is used. The idea of “following upon” has been suggested, as wave follows wave. Is not the meaning that the grace we receive corresponds to the grace inherent in Christ, out of whose fullness we receive it?

The primary meaning of huper is “over,” “above.” Hence, metaphorically, with the accusative case, it is used of superiority, e.g., Matt. 10:24, “above his master” (or teacher); or of measure in excess, in the sense of beyond, e.g., 1 Cor. 4:6, “beyond the things that are written”; or “than,” after a comparative, e.g., Luke 16:8; Heb. 4:12; or “more than,” after a verb, e.g., Matt. 10:37. With the genitive it means “on behalf of, in the interests of,” e.g., of prayer, Matt. 5:44; of giving up one’s life, and especially of Christ’s so doing for man’s redemption, e.g. John 10:15; 1 Tim. 2:6, “on behalf of all” (see under Anti); 2 Thess. 2:1, “in the interest of (i.e., ‘with a view to correcting your thoughts about’) the Coming.” The difficult passage, 1 Cor. 15:29, possibly comes here. With an alteration of the punctuation (feasible from the ms. point of view), the reference may be to baptism as taught elsewhere in the NT, and the verse may read thus: “Else what shall they do which are being baptized? (i.e., what purpose can they serve?); (it is) in the interest of the dead, if the dead are not raised at all. Why then are they baptized in the interest of them?” That is to say, they fulfill the ordinance in the interest of a Christ who is dead and in joint witness with (and therefore, in the interest of) believers who never will be raised, whereas an essential element in baptism is its testimony to the resurrection of Christ and of the believer.

In some passages huper may be used in the substitutionary sense, e.g., John 10:11, 15; Rom. 8:32; but it cannot be so taken in the majority of instances. Cf. 2 Cor. 5:15, in regard to which, while it might be said that Christ died in place of us, it cannot be said that Christ rose again in the place of us.

ON THE PREPOSITIONS APO (575) AND EK (1537).

The primary meaning of apo is “off”; this is illustrated in such compounds as apokalupto, “to take the veil off, to reveal”; apokopto, “to cut off”; hence there are different shades of meaning, the chief of which is “from” or “away from,” e.g., Matt. 5:29, 30; 9:22; Luke 24:31, lit., “He became invisible from them”; Rom. 9:3.

The primary meaning of ek is “out of,” e.g., Matt. 3:17, “a voice out of the heavens” (RV); 2 Cor. 9:7, lit., “out of necessity.” Omitting such significances of ek as “origin, source, cause, occasion,” etc., our consideration will here be confined to a certain similarity between apo and ek. Since apo and ek are both frequently to be translated by “from” they often approximate closely in meaning. The distinction is largely seen in this, that apo suggests a starting point from without, ek from within; this meaning is often involved in apo, but apo does not give prominence to the “within-ness,” as ek usually does. For instance, apo is used in Matt. 3:16, where the RV rightly reads “Jesus ... went up straightway from the water”; in Mark 1:10 ek is used, “coming up out of the water”; ek (which stands in contrast to eis in v. 9) stresses more emphatically than apo the fact of His having been baptized in the water. In all instances where these prepositions appear to be used alternately this distinction is to be observed.

The literal meaning “out of” cannot be attached to ek in a considerable number of passages. In several instances ek obviously has the significance of “away from”; and where either meaning seems possible, the context, or some other passage, affords guidance. The following are examples in which ek does not mean “out of the midst of” or “out from within,” but has much the same significance as apo: John 17:15, “that Thou shouldest keep them from the evil one”; 1 Cor. 9:19, “though I was free from all men”; 2 Cor. 1:10, “who delivered us from so great a death” (KJV); 2 Pet. 2:21, “to turn back from the holy commandment”; Rev. 15:2, “them that had come victorious from the beast, and from his image, and from the number of his name” (ek in each case).

Concerning the use of ek, in 1 Thess. 1:10, “Jesus, which delivereth (the present tense, as in the RV, is important) us from the wrath to come” [or, more closely to the original, “our Deliverer (cf. the same phrase in Rom. 11:26) from the coming wrath”], the passage makes clear that the wrath signifies the calamities to be visited by God upon men when the present period of grace is closed. As to whether the ek here denotes “out of the midst of” or “preservation from,” this is determined by the statement in 5:9, that “God appointed us not unto wrath, but unto the obtaining of salvation”; the context there shows that the salvation is from the wrath just referred to. Accordingly the ek signifies “preservation from” in the same sense as apo, and not “out from the midst of.”

ON THE PREPOSITION EN (1772)

En, “in,” is the most common preposition. It has several meanings, e.g., “of place” (e.g., Heb. 1:3, lit., “on the right hand,” i.e., in that position), and time, e.g., in 1 Thess. 2:19; 3:13; 1 John 2:28, in each of which the phrase “at His coming” (inadequately so rendered, and lit., “in His Parousia”) combines place and time; the noun, while denoting a period, also signifies a presence involving accompanying circumstances, e.g., 1 Thess. 4:15.

Further consideration must here be confined to the instrumental use, often rendered “with” (though en in itself does not mean “with”), e.g., Matt. 5:13, “wherewith” (lit., ‘in what,’ i.e., by what means) shall it be salted”; 7:2, “with what measure ye mete.” Sometimes the instrumental is associated with the locative significance (which indeed attaches to most of its uses), e.g., Luke 22:49, “shall we smite with the sword?” the smiting being viewed as located in the sword; so in Matt. 26:52, “shall perish with the sword”; cf. Rev. 2:16; 6:8; 13:10. In Matt. 12:24, “by (marg., ‘in’) Beelzebub,” indicates that the casting out is located in Beelzebub. Cf. Luke 1:51, “with His arm.” In Heb. 11:37, the statement “they were slain with the sword” is lit., “they died by (en) slaughter of the sword.” There is a noticeable change in Rom. 12:21, from hupo, “by,” to en, “with,” in this instrumental and locative sense; the lit. rendering is “be not overcome by (hupo) evil, but overcome evil with (en) good,” en expressing both means and circumstances. A very important instance of the instrumental en is in Rom. 3:25, where the RV, “faith, by His blood,” corrects the KJV, “faith in His blood,” and the commas which the RV inserts are necessary. Thus the statement reads “whom God set forth to be a propitiation, through faith, by His blood.” Christ is a propitiation, by means of His blood, i.e., His expiatory death. Faith is exercised in the living God, not in the blood, which provides the basis of faith.
